In East Germany, the Communist government announced it will review all "trials, arrests and court sentences" to "remove any excessive severity"... and correct errors. ~~Diplomatic sources in West Germany interpret this to be another move in the Soviet peace offensive.~~

Now, for a recorded report from ~~Tokyo~~ SEOUL, and an estimate of what President Rhee of Korea is trying to accomplish, here is George Herman, the chief of the Far Eastern staff:

(runs 5;25 ending ON CUE

"THIS IS GEORGE HERMAN IN SEOUL."

That was George Herman, recording from Korea.

South Korea's President, Syngman Rhee, is confronted with a situation other small nations have experienced, throughout all of history. And he could well argue, as did Victor Hugo almost a hundred years ago: "There is no such thing as a little country. The greatness of a people is no more determined by their number than the greatness of a man is determined by his height."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Thursday, June 11, 1953
7:45-8:00 P.M.

MURROW: Now, for a recorded report from Seoul and an estimate of what President Rhee of Korea is trying to accomplish, here is George Herman, the chief of the Far Eastern staff.

HERMAN: What is happening in Korea just now, whether you like it or not, is a triumph of pure skill and virtuosity in statesmanship. With no significant potential, with no allies, with none of the material forces which are generally reckoned with in world pressure politics, Syhgman Rhee has had the colossal gall to tell two great world forces, Communism and Democracy, to stop and to see what his Government wants done to his country; and by pure manipulation of certain codes of conduct to which the United States and the United Nations are pledged, he threatens to forestall an effective armistice which he considers damaging to his country. It's an exercise in solo statesmanship which is infinitely embarrassing to one segment of the world - namely, our own; infinitely puzzling to another - namely, Communists, who like to consider Rhee merely an American puppet; and considerably heartening to still others, such as the small nations of Asia, who also fear being swamped in Big-Power politics.

There can be absolutely no doubt that Rhee is conducting this forceful campaign with sincere conviction. In 1949, considerably before the Korean war, Rhee told me, "My country cannot forever endure its body cut off in two; we are bleeding to death at the 38th parallel." Now, it's doubtful that he believes he can now force the U.N. to push on to the Yalu, but he is striving for some more pleasing solution, for as much better a peace as he can possibly get. In addition, he has always cherished the hope and the belief that his people alone, armed by the wealth of America, can unify Korea by force. Rhee wanted to do that in 1949, and there's little doubt that he would like to try it again now. There's also no doubt that he strongly disbelieves both the good faith and the ability of the United States to live up to its promises to strive for the unification of Korea. He points continually to the example of what American policy has accomplished in China, and he says he doesn't want to be anotherChiang Kai-shek. That's one of the main points continually made in the current demonstration thruout Korea and it's a moral the Korean people can easily understand and appreciate.

To accomplish his aims for his impoverished country, Rhee has called upon his only weapon - his there understanding of democratic processes and shibboleth, gained from years of earnest study at American colleges. He's currently fighting a battle for control of his radio stations that illustrates this point. The Army's Psychological Warfare Section, which built the stations and gave them to the Koreans for purposes of improving internal morale, has tried to keep off the air certain Korean broadcasts which they consider opposed to the U.N.'s cause - namely, the obtaining of an armistice. The Rhee Government says that this is unjustifiable censorship, since the stations are now Korean stations. Psychological Warfare says, "yes, but who gave you those stations and for what purpose?" And then the Koreans retort, "yes, but whom did you give them to? If you gave them to us so that independent Korea could rebuild her facilities, then independent Korea can use them as she wishes. Or did you by chance give them to us just as instruments for making us puppets of the United States Government policy?" And the answer which the United States must make before the watching world is a foregone conclusion.

Another thing that Rhee fully understands is the free press and radio. His Government has organized demonstrations calculated to be reported all over the world. The demonstrations, right down to the last weepy little girl are clearly highly planned and organized. But that's not to say that these plans are forced on an unwilling people. The Koreans I have seen demonstrating seem to do so with all good will and even with enthusiasm. They may have been organized like any parade anywhere, but they certainly were not coerced, as far as I could see.

The job that Rhee has set himself calls for the most delicate handling. He must continually issue statements encouraging his people, and just as continually he must issue other statements curbing their emotions when they threaten to exceed what he thinks is necessary. And all the time he must estimate public reaction in America, to make sure that he has not alienated our affections. He's playing it all by ear. Even our highest diplomatic officials here say they don't know what Rhee will do next. Chiefly, he's using time to good advantage, trying before the armistice to influence our opinion to an appreciation of his point of view. And there lies the whole tragedy of the Korean situation. What we want is ~~xxxxxxx~~ abhorrent to him; what he wants, meaning as it does more war for our soldiers, is abhorrent to us. From an abstract point of view there's no ~~right~~ right/to this conflict ~~in~~ of/views. There's only the Korean side and the American side, hanging on opposite ends of the scale; and to push the pointer as far in his direction as he can, without upsetting the whole delicate balance, is the sole aim and end of Syngman Rhee's extraordinary display of techniques.

This is George Herman in Seoul.

MURROW: That was George Herman recording from Korea. This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today.

-30-

Ediphone trans./E. Scheiner

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

South Korean President Rhee said today his troops will fight alone if necessary to drive the Chinese Communists out of Korea. In a reply to the latest message he received from President Eisenhower, a reply which has not yet been received by any of our top officials in Washington, Rhee said: He regrets that his views differ from those of our Administration. But he feels this is "unavoidable because a truce on the present terms simply means death to us." We'll hear a summary of Rhee's position in a broadcast from Korea in a few minutes. Rhee's acting Prime Minister today told reporters: "we cannot and will not accept any part of the armistice terms." The prime minister indicated that ROK troops, who now hold two-thirds of the front, may refuse to withdraw the scheduled one and a quarter miles to establish a truce buffer zone. Today, the Chinese Communists broke the main South Korean line in the east and were stopped, after a heavy attack in the center, by the American Third Division. Right now reports from the front indicate that some of the heaviest fighting and artillery firing of the last two years is in progress on the two fronts. The enemy is believed to be using from eight to ten thousand troops.

In Philadelphia today, the South Korean ambassador charged that the United Nations has threatened to embargo military supplies and food to South Korea unless the Koreans agree to the truce terms. Dr. Yang says the U.N. is using threats to force his government to accept.

The State Department says that India has given us "a preliminary favorable reply" to an invitation to serve on the Korean truce commission. The Department refused to explain what "a preliminary favorable reply" means.

Senator Knowland suggests that at the proposed Bermuda conference we should demand that Britain and France announce their support of our insistence that Korea be unified. Knowland said that until we get a peace treaty in Korea, until we unify that country "we are not going to sit down with Malenkov" at a Big Four Conference.

And from the president of the United Nations General Assembly, Lester Pearson of Canada, today came a warning that America will find few followers among our allies "to support the defeat of Communism as such in Asia." Mr. Pearson says there is no dispute on the necessity to resist Communist aggression. But he says many of our allies will not go along with the theory, held by some, that the appearance of Communist governments in Asia should be prevented by all steps "short of war" or "at the risk of war."

The President visited North and South Dakota today. At the Garrison dam he said the federal, state and local governments must share in the development of natural resources. But he doesn't want to see too much power over natural resources concentrated in Washington. At Mt. Rushmore, in South Dakota he said the future of the Republican party depends on advancing a program to serve the interests and needs of all citizens.

The President said he feels his Administration has made a good beginning. And he will do all that he can to prevent the government from being caught "in the fatal crossfire of a Congress and an executive warring on each other."

In Washington today, the House Foreign affairs committee tentatively agreed to withhold more than one billiln dollars in military aid from six European nations, unless they ratify the European defense community.

Defense Secretary Wilson told a Senate committee that the nation would be disappointed if it knew the "exact state" of the air force when the Eisenhower Administration took office. He said: "The Congress and the people would be disappointed if they really knew the facts after all the money that had been spent for the air force."

Senator Knowland, who took over yesterday as acting floor leader for the Republicans, today told reporters he has doubts whether Congress will approve the President's request for a six months extension of the excess profits tax. He also doubts that Congress will act, before adjournment, on amendments to the Taft-Hartley law and a proposal to broaden social security coverage.

Senator McCarthy charged today that Democratic Senator Lehman of New York committed "a rather gross abuse" of the Senate's free mailing privileges. He says Lehman tried to mail up to 100-thousand pieces of literature entitled "Creeping McCarthysism." Senator Lehman said he was mailing not more than 20 thousand copies of the letter. And he charged that McCarthy was trying to intimidate him. The New Yorker said: "I have lived too long and served the people too long to be uncertain about the sincerity of my position." Later he charged that last year the Post Office Department tried to collect money from Senator McCarthy for mailing a commercial advertisement for a McCarthy book.

A Senate committee today heard George S. Wuchinich of New York shout that he has been a spy for the United States government. He read the committee the citation for the Distinguished Service Cross he won in the last war for parachuting behind the enemy's lines in the Balkans. But he refused to tell the committee whether he is a Communist now or was when he worked for our wartime intelligence agency.

In East Germany, the Communist government announced it will review all "trials, arrests and court sentences" to "remove any excessive severity" and correct errors.

Now, for a recorded report from Seoul and an estimate of what President Rhee of Korea is trying to acceomplish, here is George Herman, the chief of the Far Eastern staff:

HERMAN: What is happening in Korea just now, whether you like it or not, is a triumph of pure skill and virtuosity in statesmanship. With no significant potential, with no Allies, with none of the material forces which are generally reckoned with in world pressure politics, Syngman Rhee has had the colossal gall to tell two great world forces, Communism and Democracy, to stop and to see what his Government wants done to his country; and by pure manipulation of certain codes of conduct to which the United States and the United Nations are pledged, he threaten to forestall an effective armistice which he considers damaging to his country. It's an exercise in solo statesmanship which is infinitely embarrassing to one segment of the world - namely, our own; infinitely puzzling to another - namely, Communists, who like to consider Rhee merely an American puppet; and considerably heartening to still others, such as the small nations of Asia, who also fear being swamped in Big-power politics. There can be absolutely no doubt that Rhee is conducting this forceful campaign with sincere conviction. In 1949, considerably before the Korean war, Rhee told me, "My country cannot forever endure its body cut off in two; we are bleeding to death at the 38th parallel." Now, it's doubtful that he believes he can now force the U.N. to push on to the Yalu, but he is striving for some more pleasing solution, for as much better a peace as he can possibly get. In addition, he has always cherished the hope and the belief that his people alone, armed by the wealth of America, can unify Korea by force. Rhee wanted to do that in 1949, and there's little doubt that he would like to try it again now. There's also no doubt that he strongly disbelieves both the good faith and the ability of the United States to live up to its promises to strive for the unification of Korea. He points continually to the example of what American policy has accomplished in China, and he says he doesn't want to be another Chiang Kai-shek. That's one of the main points continually made in the current demonstration throughout Korea and it's a moral the Korean people can easily understand and appreciate.

To accomplish his aims for his impoverished country, Rhee has called upon his only weapon - his thorough understanding of democratic processes and shibboleth, gained from years of earnest study at American colleges. He's currently fighting a battle for control of his radio stations that illustrates this point. The Army's psychological Warfare Section, which built the stations and gave them to the Koreans for purposes of improving internal morale, has tried to keep off the air certain Korean broadcasts which they consider opposed to the U.N.'s cause - namely, the obtaining of an armistice. The Rhee Government says that this is unjustifiable censorship, since the stations are now Korean stations. Psychological Warfare says "yes, but who gave you those stations and for what purpose?" And then the Koreans retort, "yes, but whom did you give them to? If you gave them to us so that independent Korea could rebuilt her facilities, then independent Korea can use them as she wishes. Or did you by chance give them to us just as instruments for making us puppets of the United States Government policy?" And the answer which the United States must make before the watching world is a foregone conclusion. Another thing that Rhee fully understands is the free press and radio. His Government has organized demonstrations calculated to be reported all over the world. The demonstrations, right down to the last weepy little girl are clearly highly planned and organized. But that's not to say that these plans are forced on an unwilling people. The Koreans I have seen demonstrating seem to do so with all good will and even with enthusiasm. They may have been organized like any parade anywhere, but they certainly were not coerced, as far as I could see. The job that Rhee has set himself calls for the most delicate handling. He must continually issue statements encouraging his people, and just as continually he must issue other statements curbing their emotions when they threaten to exceed what he thinks is necessary. And all the time he must estimate public reaction in America, to make sure that he has not alienated our affections. He's playing it all by ear. Even our highest diplimatic officials here say they don't know what Rhee will do next. Chiefly, he's using time to good advantage, trying before the armistice to influence our opinion to an appreciation of his point of view. And there lies the whole tragedy of the Korean situation. What we want is abhorrent to him; what he wants, meaning as it does more war for our soldiers, is abhorrent to us. From an abstract point of view there's no right to this conflict of views. There's only the Korean side and the American side, hanging on opposite ends of the scale; and to push the pointer as far in his direction as he can, without upsetting the whole delicate balance, is the sole aim and end of Syngman Rhee's extraordinary display of techniques.

This is George Herman in Seoul.

MURROW: That was George Herman recording from Korea. This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. Now, here's Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: South Korea's President, Syngman Rhee, is confronted with a situation other small nations have experienced throughout all of history. And he could well argue, as did Victor Hugo almost a hundred years ago: "There is no such thing as a little country. The greatness of a people is no more determined by their number than the greatness of a man is determined by his height."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday, June 12, 1953

This is the news:

The President today told India's Prime Minister Nehru he hopes the prisoner-of-war agreement reached in Korea "will speedily lead to an armistice and just peace in Korea and to a relaxing of world tensions." The President wrote in reply to a message from Nehru which said in part that "the United States, under the leadership of the President has played a wise and generous part in these negotiations." Mr. Nehru too, expressed his hopes for a peace "not only in the Far East but elsewhere."

Earlier in the day the White House denied Korean reports that the President had received another message from President Rhee of South Korea. The White House has not yet received Rhee's answer to the President's suggestion of a mutual defense pact with South Korea.

Today Rhee conferred with Admiral Radford, who is to be the new chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, for the second time in three days. And while allied and Communist staff officers worked out the details of the truce agreement, South Koreans demonstrated against the armistice for a fourth day..They called for "unification or death".. a "March North.." and shouted "give us unification." The North Korean radio says the signing of a truce agreement is anticipated "momentarily." BUT Pyongyang ALSO says the fighting may delay the signing because, the enemy radio says, "Communist forces are advancing southward on the central and western front..to adjust their lines." General Taylor, the 8th army commander, who visited the front today, told reporters the enemy's attacks mean "they are trying to re-establish their military reputation and impress negotiators with their remaining potential." Today, for the third straight day, waves of Chinese Communist troops attacked the American Third Division. They're trying to take Outpost Harry, but our commanders say: "This is one outpost we cannot afford to lose." We're told that allied soldiers have inflicted 15-hundred casualties on the enemy in the past three days. But the Communists still hold three hills in the main line being defended by Rok forces.

In Washington, the State Department has bruskely denied a charge by the South Korean ambassador that UNITED NATIONS threats of an economic and military embargo are being used to get South Korean consent to the truce terms. The State Department says: "Any implication that the United States uses famine and human suffering for political purposes is false and those who make such statements know it is false."

The Senate Agriculture Committee voted unanimously today to give Pakistan one million tons of government-owned (WHEAT), to help avoid [redacted] a famine. ~~The cost of the wheat, plus transportation charges, is estimated at 100 million dollars.~~

The Senators insist that the wheat be distributed without charge, [redacted].. They feel that any charge by the Pakistan government would breed "hate and ill will" for the United States.

The Senate Foreign Relations committee has approved a five billion dollar foreign aid bill after cutting only 156-million from the President's request.

In Pittsburgh today, United States Steel and the C.I.O. Steel workers agreed on a new contract that calls for an immediate eight and a half cents wage increase for 400-thousand workers. Four other big steel companies quickly signed similar contracts which also eliminate pay differentials that favor northern workers over southern steel workers. The union has long sought such an agreement. Its believed that today's agreements will result in an increase in the price of steel ranging from $3.50 to four dollars a ton. A union sources calls the U.S. steel negotiaions "the shortest and sweetest ever." And a U.S. steel official compliments the union on "its statesmanlike conduct."

The Army said today that it is closing down five more training camps . And it will declare two permanent forts.. Crockett in Texas and Adams in Rhode Island.. to be surplus by July of next year. This move is expected to save 11-million dollars the first year and 30 million a year thereafter. The camps to be closed are: Breckenridge in Kentucky... Roberts and San Luis Obispo in California..Rucker in Alabama. AND Atterbury in Indiana .

The American Retail Federation told a House committee today that it is withdrawing its "historic" stand against the excess profits tax..to support the President's request for an extension of the tax.

And Commerce Secretary Weeks says unless businessmen support the Administration's "sound money" program, the result may be inflation and mounting debts which will hit businessmen hard.

T. Lamar Caudle, the former head of the Justice Department's tax division, told Congress today that the settlement of a case in which Republican Senator Langer of North Dakota intervened was "unorthodox and unfair" to the government.

Postmaster General Summerfield today called for a "full report" on charges that Senator McCarthy abused his free-mailing privileges last year. A spokesman said Mr. Summerfield was not aware until yesterday that such charges were pending in his department.

Attorney General Brownell said today that police salaries in many localities are a scandal. He called for public support to correct this condition.

[redacted]

[redacted] The Moscow radio says that the secretary of the Ukrainian Communist Party central committee has been fired for failing to follow "the [redacted] Lenin-Stalinist national policy" of the party. The broadcast also condemned the leadership of the whole party in the Ukraine...which has long been the center of a seperatist feeling.

Friday, June 12, 1953

[redacted]

The first hundred days of the new Russian Administration has established a pattern. It may only be temporary, but so far it has been consistent. It is the policy of easing the tension and reducing the obvious threat. This is demonstrated not only by the fact that their propaganda has become less bellecose. The communists have moved to the very edge of a truce in Korea. They have made gestures in Austria...The restablishment of airmail and telephone service between the two zones and in general they have become better neighbors to the other occupying powers. The communists have released civilian prisoners held in North Korea and have granted exit visas to the Russian wives of ~~Amari~~ two American citizens, but as usual it is in Germany where the new Russian policy is most clearly exposed. Today the East German Prime Minister said "the unity of Germany is the decisive question". He practically threw over-board the so-called "free German youth" - about two million strong, which has been one of the principal instrumemts of Communist indoctrination in schools, homes and factories. Hundreds of teachers in East Germany who have been fired will be re-instated. The communists have eased the boundry restrictions in Berlin. All sentences against persons charged with crimes against the State will be reviewed.

Today, this country, Britain and France ask the Russians to submit their own draft of a peace treaty for Austria, (but it is clear that the Russians arn't going to deal on Austria alone) - that is merely a small chip in the big game to determine the future of Germany. The Russians, by their actions, are making their strong bid to prevent Chancellor Adenauer from tying a divided Germany to the west. Their inducement is one that is dear to the heart of all Germans - the prospect of a unified Germany. According to recent announcements the communists in east Germany have decided to halt the murderous class warfare that has characterized their administration there for the last eight months. Their repressive measures have seriously reduced their agricultural production, condemned millions to near starvation, and caused some two hundred thousand Germans to flee to the West during the first five months of this year. However, it is not likely that this economic chaos has driven the communists to change their course in east Germany. They have abandoned the military government in their zone of Germany. Clearly the Russians are laying the ground, taking the necessary preliminary steps before making a proposal that they had hinted at before - a neutralized, disarmed, but unified Germany under four-power control.

The acceptance of such a proposal by the western powers would, of course, mean the collapse of the European defense community, of the Schumann plan, and all other plans for European integration. It would mean the destruction of the pivot of our political and military policy in western Europe.

It would appear, that in its first hundred days, the new Russian administration has undertaken a consistent program, touching Korea, Germany and Austria - (three of the most sensitive flash-points in the world.) Soviet policy, in the year preceeding Stalin's death, was jerky and inconsistent - perhaps because Stalin was already senile and sick. His younger successors have apparantely worked out a more coherent and pradtical policy, and so far they have stuck to it. It is a policy calculated to lull the western world into false security and to give time for old divisions and suspicions to develop, amongst the western allies. Their ultimate policy, which they have announced in completely clear terms, is to divide this country from its allies. This alliance was forged in the shadow of the Russian threat. They apparantely reckon, that if the threat is submerged or removed, the alliance will become un-stuck. This situation would seem to require that we, as leaders of the west, must meet this Russian tactic, with a positive program of our own. These gentle gestures of the Russians may not impress us very much, but they will impress a lot of Europeans.

This reporter will be spending the next few weeks in Europe, perhaps doing an occasional broadcast, but mostly listening and loafing. During my absence from this microphone, two old friends and fellow laborers - Charles Collingwood and Larry LeSueur will be reporting to you every night at this time. We have worked so long together, that I hope it will not be regarded as presumptious of me, to commend them to you.

As I mentioned a moment ago, I am taking leave of this ~~show~~ program tonight, and will shortly be off on vacation. Foremost on the list of unfinished business is a considerable stack of mail still to be answered. ~~In this,~~ I ~~ask your indulgence.~~ For ~~at~~ the moment, I feel as Sydney Smith did when he remarked:"Correspondences are like clothes, before the invention of suspenders - it's impossible to keep them up." I hope to have a new pair of suspenders in the fall!

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, JUNE 12, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President today told India's Prime Minister Nehru he hopes the prisoner of war agreement reached in Korea "will speedily lead to an armistice and just peace in Korea and to a relaxing of world tensions." The President wrote in reply to a message from Nehru which said in part that "the United States, under the leadership of the President has played a wise and generous part in these negotiations." Mr. Nehru too, expressed his hopes for a peace "not only in the Far East but elsewhere."

Earlier in the day the White House denied Korean reports that the President had received another message from President Rhee of South Korea. The White House has not yet received Rhee's answer to the President's suggestion of a mutual defense pact with South Korea.

Today Rhee conferred with Admiral Radford, who is to be the new chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, for the second time in three days. And while allied and Communist staff officers worked out the details of the truce agreement, South Koreans demonstrated against the armistice for a fourth day, they called for "unification or death" a "March North" and shouted "give us unification." The North Korean radio says the signing of a truce agreement is anticipated "momentarily." But Pyongyang also says the fighting may delay the signing because, the enemy radio says, "Communist forces are advancing southward on the central and western front to adjust their lines." General Taylor, the 8th army commander, who visited the front today, told reporters the enemy's attacks mean "they are trying to re-establish their military reputation and impress negotiators with their remaining potential." Today, for the third straight day, waves of Chinese Communist troops attacked the American Third Division. They're trying to take Outpost Harry but our commanders say: "This is one outpost we cannot afford to lose." We're told that allied soldiers have inflicted 15-hundred casualties on the enemy in the past three days. But the Communists still hold three hills in the main line being defended by ROK forces.

In Washington, the State Department has brusquely denied a charge by the South Korean ambassador that United Nations threats of an economic and military embargo are being used to get South Korean consent to the truce terms. The State Department says: "Any implication that the United States uses famine and human suffering for political purposes is false and those who make such statements know it is false."

The Senate Agriculture Committee voted unanimously today to give Pakistan one million tons of government-owned wheat to help avoid a famine. The Senators insist that the wheat be distributed without charge. They feel that any charge by the Pakistan government would breed "hate and ill will" for the United States.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has approved a five billion dollar foreign aid bill after cutting only 156-million from the President's request.

In Pittsburgh today, United States Steel and the C.I.O. Steel workers agreed on a new contract that calls for an immediate eight and a half cents wage increase for 400-thousand workers. Four other big steel companies quickly signed similar contracts which also eliminate pay differentials that favor northern workers over southern steel workers. The union has long sought such an agreement. Its believed that today's agreements will result in an increase in the price of steel ranging from $3.50 to four dollars a ton. A union sources calls the U.S. Steel negotiations "the shortest and sweetest ever." And a U.S. steel official compliments the union on "its statesmanlike conduct."

The Army said today that it is closing down five more training camps. And it will declare two permanent forts. Crockett in Texas and Adams in Rhode Island to be surplus by July of next year. This move is expected to save 11-million dollars the first year and 30 million a year thereafter. The camps to be closed are: Breckenridge in Kentucky, Roberts and San Luis Obispo in California, Rucker in Alabama and Atterbury in Indiana.

The American Retail Federation told a House committee today that it is withdrawing its "historic" stand against the excess profits tax, to support the President's request for an extension of the tax.

And Commerce Secretary Weeks says unless businessmen support the Administration's "sound money" program, the result may be inflation and mounting debts which will hit businessmen hard.

T. Lamar Caudle, the former head of the Justice Department's tax division, told Congress today that the settlement of a case in which Republican Senator Langer of North Dakota intervened was "unorthodox and unfair" to the government.

Postmaster General Summerfield today called for a "full report" on charges that Senator McCarthy abused his free-mailing privileges last year. A spokesman said Mr. Summerfield was not aware until yesterday that such charges were pending in his department.

Attorney General Brownell said today that police salaries in many localities are a scandal. He called for public support to correct this condition.

The Moscow radio says that the secretary of the Ukrainian Communist Party central committee has been fired for failing to follow "the Lenin-Stalinist national policy" of the party. The broadcast also condemned the leadership of the whole party in the Ukraine which has long been the center of a separatist feeling.

The first hundred days of the new Russian Administration has established a pattern. It may only be temporary, but so far it has been consistent. It is the policy of easing the tension and reducing the obvious threat. This is demonstrated not only by the fact that their propaganda has become less bellecose. The Communists have moved to the very edge of a truce in Korea. They have made gestures in Austria. The restablishment of airmail and telephone service between the two zones and in general they have become better neighbors to the other occupying powers. The Communists have released civilian prisoners held in North Korea and have granted exit visas to the Russian wives of two American citizens, but as usual it is in Germany where the new Russian policy is most clearly exposed. Today the East German Prime Minister said "the unity of Germany is the decisive question." He practically threw overboard the so-called "free German youth" - about two million strong, which has been one of the principal instruments of Communist indoctrination in schools, homes and factories. Hundreds of teachers in East Germany who have been fired will be re-instated. The communists have eased the boundary restrictions in Berlin. All sentences against persons charged with crimes against the State will be reviewed.

Today, this country, Britain and France asked the Russians to submit their own draft of a peace treaty for Austria, but it is clear that the Russians aren't going to deal on Austria alone - that is merely a small chip in the big game to determine the future of Germany. The Russians, by their actions, are making their strong bid to prevent Chancellor Adenauer from tying a divided Germany to the west. Their inducement is one that is dear to the heart of all Germans - the prospect of a unified Germany. According to recent announcements the Communists in East Germany have decided to halt the murderous class warfare that has characterized their administration there for the last eight months. Their repressive measures have seriously reduced their agricultural production, condemned millions to near starvation, and caused some two hundred thousand Germans to flee to the West during the first five months of this year. However, it is not likely that this economic chaos has driven the Dommunists to change their course in East Germany. They have abandoned the military government in their zone of Germany. Clearly the Russians are laying the ground, taking the necessary preliminary steps before making a proposal that they had hinted at before - a neutralized, disarmed, but unified Germany under four-power control. The acceptance of such a proposal by the western powers would, of course, mean the collapse of the European Defense Community, of the Schumann plan, and all other plans for European integration. It would mean the destruction of the pivot of our political and military policy in Western Europe.

It would appear that in its first hundred days, the new Russian Administration has undertaken a consistent program touching Korea, Germany and Austria (three of the most sensitive flash-points in the world.) Soviet policy, in the year preceding Stalin's death was jerky and inconsistent - perhaps because Stalin was already senile and sick. His younger successors have apparently worked out a more coherent and practical policy and so far they have stuck to it. It is a policy calculated to lull the western world into false security and to give time for old divisions and suspcions to develop amongst the western allies. Their ultimate policy, which they have announced in completely clear terms, is to divide this country from its allies. This alliance was forged in the shadow of the Russian threat. They apparently reckon that if the threat is submerged or removed, the alliance will come un-stuck. This situation would seem to require that we, as leaders of the west, must meet this Russian tactic with a positive program of our own. These gentle gestures of the Russians may not impress us very much, but they will impress a lot of Europeans.

This reporter will be spending the next few weeks in Europe, perhaps doing an occasional broadcast, but mostly listening and loafing. During my absence from this microphone, two old friends and fellow laborers - Charles Collingwood and Larry LeSueur will be reporting to you every night at this time. We have worked so long together that I hope it will not be regarded as presumptious of me to commend them to you.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. Now, here is Bob Dixon.

MURROW: As I mentioned a moment ago, I am taking leave of this program tonight and will shortly be off on vacation. Foremost on the list of unfinished business is a considerable stack of mail still to be answered. For the moment, I feel as Sydney Smith did when he remarked: "Correspondences are like clothes before the invention of suspenders - it's impossible to keep them up." I hope to have a new pair of suspenders in the fall!

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday 14 Sept 1953 - Lesueur 7/45

Good evening everyone, here's what happened today:

Democratic Senator Douglas of Illinois tonight told a party rally in Chicago that the Eisenhower Administration is running the country with biased millionaries and big businessmen. Douglas said: "These men.. in no sense evil men..should be kept on tap. not on top." He said they have embarked on what he called "a giveaway, throwaway, sellaway program which would strip the people of their basic resources and leave them helpless before the forces of big business." Senator Douglas spoke after the representatives at the democratic rally rejected a plan for a mid-term convention in 1954..and avoided any action on Southern demands to kill the so-called party "loyalty pledge."

Former President Truman told reporters in Chicago:"Adlai Stevenson is the leading Democrat of the United States, I recognize him as head of the party." And Mr. Truman said: "I still believe my decision on Korea was right, and the future will show it."

In Korea today the Communists are reported to have moved 320 allied troops to Kaesong..for shipment to the neutral zone on Sunday. These are the troops who the Communists say do not want to go home. Today we moved a batch of Chinese..who do not want to return to Communism. They balked at being turned over to the Indian troops in the neutral zone. //

The United Nations General Assembly opens here in New York tomorrow, and the Communists are expected to renew their ~~plan~~ Proposal for a roundtable conference on Korea..the plan that was defeated at the Assembly's recent special session. Both the Chinese Communists and the North Koreans have made it clear they are not satisfied with the plans for a two-sided conference adopted by the U.N. They want the 16 nations that fought in Korea, plus North Korea and Communist China, and also five neutral nations to ~~attend~~ enlarge the conference. We have rejected the plan..The French call it "unacceptable". the British are studying it.

The Chinese Communist radio today hinted that a negotiated truce is possible in Indo-China. But the State Department calls this "typical of the type of propaganda that pours out of Peiping every day." The Department says, there is no sign that the Communist-led rebels in Indo-China, may be willing to agree to an armistice, similar to that in Korea.

The State Department said today, that together with the British and the French, we will study Italy's proposal, for a plebiscite to determine the future of Trieste. Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia (opposes) a plebiscite because, he says, 70 per cent of the territory's people are Italians..due to Mussolini' policy of driving out the Slovenes.

Communist Poland today put on trial, the Catholic bishop of Kielce. He's charged with operating a spy ring with the help of the United States, and the Vatican in the Secrecy ~~and secrets~~ of the confessional. Three priests and a nun are accused with Bishop Cowsmarek ~~Kaczmarek~~. The Vatican newspaper calls the trial "legal blackmail",

In this country, the President today told the National Institute of Municipal Law officers, that his Administration opposes "excessive centralization of power in the federal government." And Denis M. Hurley, New York corporation counsel, told the Institute, meeting in Washington, that the government has failed to provide adequate civil defense, highway construction, slum clearance and low-cost housing.

The American Retail Federation said today, that men in uniform should pay the same prices, at post exchange stores, as civilians pay. And the Federation would have "no objection" to a pay raise for servicemen, if that's necessary.

Here in New York, Senator McCarthy says, an American woman who works for the United Nations, has admitted that she was a Communist, 13 years ago. She has agreed to give the F.B.I. the names of all Communists she knows.

The Stock Market went down again today..values dropping one billion dollars. Some brokers, say the recent selling has undermined confidence of speculators.

The New York Yankees today clinched the American League pennant when they beat the Cleveland Indians eight to five. Its an unprecedented fifth pennant in a row. The Brooklyn Dodgers clinched the National League pennant two days ago.

For Edward R. Murrow this has been a busy summer. After the Coronation, Mr. Murrow returned to New York..then flew back to England.. then came home to make a trip to the west coast. He is now in Germany. Tonight, he recorded this report for you.

runs 7 min..cue "This is ERM recording from Berlin good night and good luck)

And this is Larry Le Sueur in New York. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news But first a word from Bob Dixon.

The Yankees have won their fifth straight pennant...something that's never happened before, in all the years of baseball. But in the dressing room, from the manager down, no one seemed very elated about it - except for shortstop Willie Miranda. He told sports writers: "Excited - you bet I am. I never dreamed this could happen to me. Well, That's understandable ~~It never happened to me before.~~"

Becau In July, Miranda was with the St. Louis Browns and - they're trailing the league in 8th place!

This is LL saying goodnite!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Monday, September 14, 1953
7:45-8:00 p.m.

LESUEUR: For Edward R. Murrow this has been a busy summer. After the coronation Mr. Murrow returned to New York, then flew back to England, then came home to make a trip to the west coast. He is now in Germany. Tonight he recorded this report for you.

MURROW: This is Berlin! ... at the end of the corridor, one hundred miles deep in Russian-held territory. Here you can walk and ride and look behind the Iron Curtain. This is a window where we can look into the Communist world and where they can look at us. In the western sector there are a few American, British, and French troops. They couldn't hold this city for more than a few hours if the Russians should decide to move. They are part of the window for if it is broken then the third World War has started. I have known this city since nineteen-thirty; was here last during the airlift; saw it when Hitler came to power, when he moved into Austria; saw it one night from a Lancaster bomber when six hundred of them unloaded fourteen thousand pounds apiece on this city as it writhed in smoke and fire far below. In the days just after the war there were bodies in the canals and in the lakes, broken tanks and guns, and the remains of houses choked the streets. In the last seven years millions of words have been written, trying to describe what's left of this city. This reporter has written a few from time to time and always with a sense of futility and it is so tonight, so let's try to compare it with two years ago.

Now, the shops are full of goods. People are wearing better clothes and better shoes. One or two streets blaze with lights at night. The ballet and the opera are flourishing. There is even television for a few hours at night. In the western sector the people on the street have a calm cast of countenance. No more strain in their faces, perhaps less than you see on the faces of New Yorkers who are getting ulcers hurrying on their way to to something that is of no importance. The western sector of this city is very steady, but there are huge piles of coal to be seen, a reserve against a new blockade, for the Russians can tighten the noose again whenever they choose. Yesterday the bells of the remaining churches rang out over the city and the sound bounced off the wreckage of homes and synagogues and banks and office buildings and finally wandered off across the brick dust desert that used to be a great city. Occasionally the sun bored its way through a black cloud and lit up a ruin like a huge searchlight on an abandonded Hollywood set. At night, American, British, and French jeeps prowl the sector frontier and the West German police, some of them with police dogs, wander through the dark streets and a couple of blocks away the Communists are doing the same thing while music drifts up out of cellar cabarets. And when the wind is blowing that brick dust cuts keenly at the eyes and fills the nostrils.

In the dim light you cansee small shrubs growing on mounds of rubble where humans used to live. They look like trees on a mountain top. A few blocks away there are bright lights and automobiles and well-dressed Germans. Only ten years and a war separate the bright lights and the rubble. The rebuilding in the west zone, aswell as the east, has been enormous in these last two years. On both sides of the line people are better dressed. In the Communist sector yesterday people strolled at apparent ease along the streets or they worked in their little gardens in the suburbs. There were no obvious signs of tension on either side of the line. This city is waiting for the Russian reaction to two tremendous events, - the revolution, without a leader, of June 17, and the decisive victory of Chancellor Adenauer in the national election. The Russians must be considering what they should do in view of these two momentous events. When they decide the first indications of the new policy must be felt here in Berlin.

This is the eye and the ear of the west, deep inside Communist territory. People, ideas, and information flow easily across the frontier and there is a belief, widely held here, as to what the Russians are going to do. It is this. They are going to play for a period of what Mr. Harding once called "normalcy." They will ease the tension in the west, reduce the terror in the satellite countries, and wait to see what turns up. Whether that estimate is correct or not, the Berliners in the west appear well content to stand steady and wait. They have been doing that for a long time. And that is one of the most remarkable facts about this city. There are men and women here, writing and broadcasting some of the most effective anti-Communist propaganda in the world. They know that if a war comes they and their families will be dead in a matter of hours for this place is not defensible, but they don't flinch and they don't become hysterical. They know that here in Berlin this contest is not one of invective and accusation, but, rather, one of example. What the western sector does in the way of food, information, reconstruction, and personal freedom may well bemore important than what it says to the Communist sector. Here, the contest between freedom and Communism is divided by half the width of a street. The Iron Curtain is merely a dingy, bomb-pocked door within spitting distance of people who walk in freedom down themiddle of the street. This is a city without a country. Even Hitler said it was not, and never would be, an artistic city and in that at least he was right, but, for six years it has built a history of restrained and reasoned resistance to Communism,has become a magnet that has attracted hundreds of thousands to leave their homes and make the desperate gamble for freedom, leaving all but hope behind. There is an example here that even great nations, in all their security and luxury, might follow.

This city of Berlin may be a good place to assess what's happening in the so-called Cold War. Most of my colleagues, who have contributed so much to these reports over the years, are here with me: Alex Kendrick from Vienna, Howard Smith from London, Dick Hottelet from Bonn, and Dave Schoenbrun from Paris. They're all here. And for the rest of this week, at this time, we shall try to discuss the balance sheet as seen from this relatively quiet island.

This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin. Goodnight and good luck!

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (WITH LARRY LESEUER)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY - SEPTEMBER 14, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

LESEUER: Good evening everyone, here's what happened today:

Democratic Senator Douglas of Illinois tonight told a party rally in Chicago that the Eisenhower Administration is running the country with biased millionaires and big businessmen. Douglas said: "These men in no sense evil men, should be kept on tap, not on top." He said they have mebarked on what he called "a giveaway, throwaway, sellaway program which would strip the people of their basic resources and leave them helpless before the forces of big business." Senator Douglas spoke after the representatives at the democratic rally rejected a plan for a mid-term convention in 1954, and avoided any action on Southern demands to kill the so-called party "loyalty pledge."

Former President Truman told reporters in Chicago: "Adlai Stevenson is the leading Democrat of the United States, I recognize him as head of the party." And Mr. Truman said: "I still believe my decision on Korea was right, and the future will show it."

In Korea today the Communists are reported to have moved 320 allied troops to Kaesong for shipment to the neutral zone on Sunday. These are the troops who the Communists say do not want to go home. Today we moved a batch of Chinese who do not want to return to Communism. They balked at being turned over to the Indian troops in the neutral zone.

The United Nations General Assembly opens here in New York tomorrow and the Communists are expected to renew their proposal for a roundtable conference on Korea - the plan that was defeated at the Assembly's recent special session. Both the Chinese Communists and the North Koreans have made it clear they are not satisfied with the plans for a two-sided conference adopted by the U.N. They want the 16 nations that fought in Korea, plus North Korea and Communist China and also five neutral nations to enlarge the conference. We have rejected the plan. The French call it "unacceptable" - the British are studying it.

The Chinese Communist radio today hinted that a negotiated truce is possible in Indo-China. But the State Department calls this "typical of the type of propaganda that pour out of Peiping every day." The Department says there is no sign that the Communist-led rebels in Indo-China may be willing to agree to an armistice similar to that in Korea.

The State Department said today that together with the British and the French we will study Italy's proposal for a plebiscite to determine the future of Trieste. Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia opposes a plebiscite because, he says, 70 percent of the territory's people are Italians due to Mussolini's policy of driving out the Slovenes.

Communist Poland today put on trial the Catholic bishop of Kielce. He's charged with operating a spy ring with the help of the United States, and the Vatican in the secrecy of the confessional. Three priests and a nun are accused with Bishop Kaozmarek. The Vatican newspaper calls the trial "legal blackmail."

In this country, the President today told the National Institute of Municipal Law officers that his Administration opposes "excessive centralization of power in the federal government." And Denis M. Hurley, New York corporation counsel told the Institute, meeting in Washington, that the government has failed to provide adequate civil defense, highway construction, slum clearance and low-cost housing.

The American Retail Federation said today that men in uniform should pay t e same prices at post exchange stores as civilians pay. And the Federation would have "no objection" to a pay raise for servicemen if that's necessary.

Here in New York, Senator McCarthy says an American woman who works for the United Nations has admitted that she was a Communist 13 years ago. She has agreed to give the FBI the names of all Communists she knows.

The Stock Market went down again today - values dropping one billion dollars. Some brokers say the recent selling has undermined confidence of speculators.

The New York Yankees today clinched the American League pennant when they beat the Cleveland Indians eight to five. Its an unprecedented fifth pennant in a row. The Brooklyn Dodgers clinched the National League pennant two days ago.

For Edward R. Murrow this has been a busy summer. After the Coronation, Mr. Murrow returned to New York then flew back to England, then came home to make a trip to the west coast. He is now in Germany. Tonight, he recorded this report for you:

MURROW: This is Berlin! . . at the end of the corridor, one hundred miles deep in Russian-held territory. Here you can walk and ride and look behind the Iron Curtain. This is a window where we can look into the Communist world and where they can look at us. In the western sector there are a few American, British, and French troops. They couldn't hold this city for more than a few hours if the Russians should decide to move. They are part of the window for if it is broken then the third World War has started. I have known this city since nineteen-thirty; was here last during the airlift; saw it when Hitler came to power, when he moved into Austria; saw it one night from a Lancaster bomber when six hundred of them unloaded fourteen thousand pounds apiece on this city as it writhed in smoke and fire far below. In the days just after the war there were bodies in the canals and in the lakes, broken tanks and guns, and the remains of houses choked the streets. In the last seven years millions of words have been written, trying to describe what's left of this city. This reporter has written a few from time to time and always with a sense of futility and it is so tonight, so let's try to compare it with two years ago.

Now, the shops are full of goods. People are wearing better clothes and better shoes. One or two streets blaze with lights at night. The ballet and the opera are flourishing. There is even television for a few hours at night. In the western sector the people on the street have a calm cast of countenance. No more strain in their faces, perhaps less than you see on the faces of New Yorkers who are getting ulcers hurrying on their way to something that is of no importance. The western sector of this city is very steady, but there are huge piles of coal to be seen, a reserve against a new blockade, for the Russians can tighten the noose again whenever they choose. Yesterday the bells of the remaining churches rang out over the city and the sound bounced off the wreckage of homes and synagogues and banks and office buildings and finally wandered off across the brick dust desert that used to be a great city. Occasionally the sun bored its way through a black cloud and lit up a ruin like a huge searchlight on an abandoned Hollywood set. At night, American, British, and French jeeps prowl the sector frontier and the West German police, some of them with police dogs, wander through the dark streets and a couple of blocks away the Communists are doing the same thing while music drifts up out of cellar cabarets. And when the wind is blowing that brick dust cuts keenly at the eyes and fills the nostrils.

In the dim light you can see small shrubs growing on mounds of rubble where humans used to live. They look like trees on a mountain top. A few blocks away there are bright lights and automobiles and well-dressed Germans. Only ten years and a war separate the bright lights and the rubble. The rebuilding in the west zone, as well as the east, has been enormous in these last two years. On both sides of the line people are better dressed. In the Communist sector yesterday people strolled at apparent ease along the streets or they worked in their little gardens in the suburbs. There were no obvious signs of tension on either side of the line. This city is waiting for the Russian reaction to two tremendous events, - the revolution, without a leader, of June 17, and the decisive victory of Chancellor Adenauer in the national election. The Russians must be considering what they should do in view of these two momentous events. When they decide the first indications of the new policy must be felt here in Berlin. This is the eye and the ear of the west, deep inside Communist territory. People, ideas and information flow easily across the frontier and there is a belief, widely held here, as to what the Russians are going to do. It is this. They are going to play for a period of what Mr. Harding once called "normalcy." They will ease the tension in the west, reduce the terror in the satellite countries, and wait to see what turns up. Whether that estimate is correct or not, the Berliners in the west appear well content to stand steady and wait. They have been doing that for a long time. And that is one of the most remarkable facts about this city. There are men and women here writing and broadcasting some of the most effective anti-Communist propaganda in the world. They know that if a war comes they and their families will be dead in a matter of hours for this place is not defensible, but they don't flinch and they don't become hysterical. They know that here in Berlin this contest is not one of invective and accusation, but, rather, one of example. What the western sector does in the way of food, information, reconstruction, and personal freedom may well be more important than what it says to the Communist sector. Here, the contest between freedom and Communism is divided by half the width of a street. The Iron Curtain is merely a dingy, bomb-pocked door within spitting distance of people who walk in freedom down the middle of the street. This is a city without a country. Even Hitler said it was not, and never would be, an artistic city and in that at least he was right, but for six years it has built a history of restrained and reasoned resistance to Communism, has become a magnet that has attracted hundreds of thousands to leave their homes and make the desperate gamble for freedom, leaving all but hope behind. There is an example here that even great nations, in all their security and luxury, might follow.

This city of Berlin may be a good place to assess what's happening in the so-called Cold War. Most of my colleagues, who have contributed so much to these reports over the years, are here with me: Alex Kendrick from Vienna, Howard Smith from London, Dick Hottelet from Bonn, and Dave Schoenbrun from Paris. They're all here. And for the rest of this week, at this time, we shall try to discuss the balance sheet as seen from this relatively quiet island.

This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin. Goodnight and good luck!

And this is Larry LeSeuer in New York. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news. But first a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: Commercial

LESEUER: The Yankees have won their fifth straight pennant...something that's never happened before in all the years of baseball. But in the dressing room, from the manager down, no one seemed very elated about it - except for shortstop Willie Miranda. He told sports writers: "Excited - you bet I am. I never dreamed this could happen to me. Well, that's understandable," because in July, Miranda was with the St. Louis Browns - and they're trailing the league in 8th place!

This is Larry Leseuer saying goodnight!

Tuesday - Sept 15, 1953 - Lescum 7/45P

Good evening everyone: Here's what happened today:

The United Nations General Assembly has elected Madame Pandit of India, to be its new President. Madame Pandit, the first woman to head the world organization, received 37 votes to 22 for her only opposition from Thailand.

Andrie Vishinsky brought forth his customary demand that Communist China be seated at the United Nations immediately. But the Assembly approved an American counter-proposal to put off any consideration of U.N. membership for Red China for the rest of this year. Secretary of State Dulles told the delegates: " Communist China has not shown sincere evidence and intent to end aggression and make peace in Korea. And its continued action in other parts of Asia is not re-assuring."

In Korea tonight our delegates meet with the Communists who have an answer to our demand for information on the whereabouts of 3-thousnad United Nations soldiers including 944 Americans. Today the neutral Indians turned over to the enemy nine North Koreans who once said they did not want to return home and then changed their minds. And we told the Communists that we would not turn over to them the Polish interpreter who recently sought political sanctuary with the allies. We say the Polish charge, that we kidnapped him is "completely false."

General Taylor, the 8th army commander, today asked his troops, to help rebuild South Korea. The General was obviously aware of Congressional criticism of any plan to use American soldiers as labor troops. He told his men: we have helped rebuild Korea in the past and should continue to lend the South Koreans our technical experts and equipment. He encouraged soldiers to make cash contributions to rehabilitation work. He said any men who want to help rebuild South Korea may do so..on a voluntary basis.

And Red China's Mao Tze Tung has broadcast to the world his happiness over the now concluded negotiations with Russia. Peiping Radio quotes the Chinese leader as saying it provides for "an unprecedented economic program.. extremely significant in the industrialization of China." He offered no details.

In Indo-China today French forces made progress in their drive to destroy communist-led rebels south of Hanoi. And Senator Knowland, the majority leader, told reporters in Saigon: the United States will support only those nations of Asia who make a serious effort to defend themselves against Communism."

(3)

In Washington, Secretary of Commerce Weeks said: the time is past when we can continue to support international handouts, and global boondoggling. Weeks said the Marshal plan, for economic aid abroad, definitely helped check the advance of Communism. But now, he feels, "we are about to take the crutches away from the patient and we ought to sell him a cane to walk with." Treasury Secretary Humphrey, who also addressed a group studying world trade, said our government must question its right and ability to continue to use the taxpayers money to finance competitive enterprises abroad. He said: our scale of taxes is already too high. We must bring revenue and expenditures into balance. ~~Both [illegible] members indicated that more and more private investments and bank loans must replace American grants, to promote trade and provide economic help for foreign countries.~~

White House Secretary Hagerty said in Denver today that Adlai Stevenson's Chicago speech last night was "sound and [illegible] fury signifying nothing." Stevenson had charged that the Republicans are making hollow political gestures abroad and threatening the Communists while cutting down on foreign aid and national defense. Tonight, Stevenson makes what's called a non-political report on his recent world tour..it will be heard over many of these stations at 10;30 p.m. eastern time. At today's session of the Democratic party rally in Chicago, three former secretaries of agriculture, ~~Andersonn~~ Brannon, Anderson and Wickard, charged that the Eisenhower ~~[illegible]~~ administration has broken its promises to farmers. And Michigan's Governor Williams said: "Republican promises are golden, but Republican performance is brass." ~~James Patton, the president of the National Farmers Union, told a panel discussion that the farmer is suffering a depression now.~~

~~The executive committee of the Democratic National Committee today gave a vote of confidence and a 25 thousand dollar a year salary to Steven Mitchell, the party chairman.~~

~~There were mm reports in Chicago and Wall Street that Secretary of Agriculture Benson is going to resign. In Salt Lake City, Benson said: "I have no intention of resigning".~~

~~mm~~ Former Labor Secretary Durkin.. who resigned last week.. said today, that the President personally "agreed with" him that 19 proposed amendments to the Taft-Hartley law should be submitted to Congress. Later, says Durkin, a White House spokesman told him ~~this amendment~~ that the Administration would not be able to go along with the 19 amendments.

~~In Washington, the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers~~

~~today considered a resolution asking Congress to approve an "adequate" civil defense program. The Institute represents officers from 800 major cities.~~

~~Assistant Army Secretary Mitchell said today that "We have reached a world situation where the citizen army of the United States must be prepared to fight on much shorter notice than ever before, or, in my perhaps no notice at all." He said a strong and ready reserve is one of the foundati ns of our security".~~

The House un-American activities committee today heard James McNamara testify that he attended 10 to 20 Communist metings during the late 1930's. McNAMARA resigned last week as a government labor mediator in Cincinnati. Committee members asked, if he had been a party member. McNamara said: "Yes.. if one can belong to a church and not believe what it TEACHES, then I was a member of the Communist party."

Here in New York today the Stock Market pulled itself up sharply from yesterday's low and for the first time in 16 years in New York Democratic voters, in a primary election, ARE CHOOSING a candidate for mayor: the incumbent Mayor Impelliterri or Borough President Wagner, son of the former Senator Wagner.

In Egypt, the Naguib government says it has uncovered a plot of Egyptian traitors..working in league with UNIDENTIFIED [redacted] "foreign imperialiasts" to overthrow the regime.

The Warsaw radio says Catholic Bishop ~~Kaczmarek~~ Kashmarek has "confessed" to working as a spy for former American Ambassador Arthur Bliss Lane.

[redacted]

And the French government says Premier Daniel will go to Washington soon for talks with our top officials.

[redacted]

Tonight, Edward R. Murrow recorded for you another report on conditions in Germany. Here it is:

(runs 5;55

return cut: Good night and good luck)

And Thus Larry LeSueur - Ill be back in a moment with a footnote to the news - Cue

But first Bob Dixon

Senator Willis Robertson of Virginia today summed up what he considers the typical Congressional junket. He said:"The party arrives at the airport and is rushed off for an Embassy briefing - a lot of hot air. Then the visitors are briefed by the foreign government - more hot air. Finally, they are honored at a banquet - still more hot air. After getting some surface impressions, the Congressmen return home and report their findings - and that's a lot of hot air too."//

This is LL saying goodnite!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

E. R. MURROW

Tuesday, September 15, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

LeSUEUR: ... Tonight Edward R. Murrow recorded for you another report on conditions in Germany, here it is:

MURROW: This is Berlin. Tonight I'm going to talk with an old friend and fellow reporter, Richard C. Hottelet. He first came to Germany sixteen years ago. He speaks perfect German. He even spent four months in a Nazi prison. And in my view his judgment, his knowledge of Germany, is not excelled by any American reporter in Germany today. Tonight is a chance to ask him some questions, and I hope I will ask him the kind of questions you would ask if you were here.

Dick, the first one is a very simple one: Have the Germans become good Democrats?

HOTTELET: That covers an awful lot of territory, Ed. I think to answer it briefly I'd say that the Germans have taken a very great step, a very solid step, forward toward becoming good Democrats. The proof of this particular pudding is in the eating and the eating is still some time away.

MURROW: Then you would suggest that the victory of Chancellor Adenauer was one for Democratic processesses rather than merely a perspnal victory for the old chancellor.

HOTTELET: I think there's no doubt about that at all, because although the personality of the old chancellor certainly dominated the election, and he had no competitor on the national scene in any of the other parties, including in his strongest opposition, the Social Democratic Party, even so his personality has in the last few years of his administration come to symbolize adherents to the democratic system and respect for the processesses which we in our country and the British in their old democracy have built up as standards for democratic behavior.

MURROW: And in the course of your wandering about Germany of which you do a great deal, what would you say that the general overall attitude towards America and Americans.

HOTTELET: I would say that the United States has never been as popular and as solidly popular in Germany as it is today.

MURROW: Why is that? Is it just a gratitude?

HOTTELET: No, no, no, I don't think gratitude figures in this (unintelligible) element in national interest really, it doesn't cut much ice, I think they see that the presence of American troops here in Germany since the war has contributed very notably to the stability and the peace which has followed this war in mark contrast tothe turmoil and disorder and gradual disillusion which followed the first world war underthe Weimar Republic. Then, too, they have seen in the last two years expressions of opinion by American statesmen, including President Eisenhower when he was SHAPE commander, and President Truman, and now of course Secretary of State, expressions of American opinion so warmly in favor of German policy as ... are not to be matched, you know, public utterances by French and British statesmen.

MURROW: Well, Dick, we have been discussing here a little bit German policy, German attitudes, and the relationship between Germany and the United States, it seems to me that you have agreed that no one can predict the future either of German politics or of German youth, or any other youth ...

HOTTELET: That's right.

MURROW: ... for that matter ...

HOTTELET: Yes.

MURROW: In view of all this uncertainty, what in your view should our policy be in relation to Germany?

agree that no one can predict the future either of German politics or of German youth or any other youth.....

HOTTELET: That's right.

MURROW: ..... for that matter.

HOTTELET: Yes.

MURROW: But in view of all this uncertainty what in your view should our policy be in relation to Germany?

HOTTELET: I think the challenge to us and to all the western statesmen now is to see that the enormous vitality, the dynamic reconstruction, which we see around here us in Berlin .....

MURROW: We certainly do!

HOTTELET: ..... and dramatically in Western Germany, that this is geared to a western community, that Germany is not left adrift as an isolated power. I think American responsibility lies in the direction of not building up Germany as a single national State, you know, a single pillar, let's say, of American policy in Europe, but of using all our influence to see that those gifts, which ... the good gifts, which the Germans have shown that they can develop in these last eight years, are brought to the service of the western community and I think specifically that we ought to support, as we have, indeed, been supporting, the European defense community which would bring the function of defense into common basis; that we ought, by all means, to support the creation of a European political community and that we ought to make quite sure ... quite certain, quite plain, to the Germans and to all the others involved that the United States is committed to the preservation of democratic ... democracy in Europe in the ... in the framework of these communal community interests.

MURROW: Well, in other words, you would suggest that we should not regard Adenauer's victory in the last election as something that is permanent and lasting or reassuring, but merely as a promising first step?

HOTTELET: I think so. Yes, indeed. A very important first step but it ... I mean, as any election it's the expression of progress made.

It is not in itself an historical trend.

MURROW: But, by and large, what happens in Germany and what happens to our policy may well be determined by what the Russians do, is that not so?

HOTTELET: Well, they're only about a mile away from us here in Berlin, Ed, and there's no telling, really, what they're going to do. Certainly, how they react k especially to the latest diplomatic moves and how they themselves are forced into action by their internal stresses and their ... and their domestic requirements will have a very great bearing on how Germany developes in the next two years and how the United States will approach European problems as a whole.

MURROW: Well, thanks very much, Dick Hottelet.

For the last few minutes I have been sitting here in Berlin talking with our chief German correspondent, Richard C. Hottelet.

This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin.

Goodnight and good luck!

Ed.trans. P. Olszewski
A.A.Cardiff

(30)

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (WITH LARRY LESEUER)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY - SEPTEMBER 15, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

LESEUER: Good evening everyone: Here's what happened today:

The United Nations General Assembly has elected Madame Pandit of India to be its new President. Madame Pandit, the first woman to head the world organization, received 37 votes to 22, for her only opposition from Thailand.

Andrie Vishinsky brought forth his customary demand that Communist China be seated at the United Nations immediately. But the Assembly approved an American counter-proposal to put off any consideration of U.N. membership for Red China for the rest of this year. Secretary of State Dulles told the delegates: "Communist China has not shown sincere evidence and intent to end aggression and make peace in Korea. And its continued action in other parts of Asia is not re-assuring."

In Korea tonight our delegates meet with the Communists who have an answer to our demand for information on the whereabouts of 3-thousand United Nations soldiers - including 944 Americans. Today the neutral Indians turned over to the enemy nine North Koreans who once said they did not want to return home and then changed their minds. And we told the Communists that we would not turn over to them the Polish interpreter who recently sought political sanctuary with the allies. We say the Polish charge that we kidnapped him is "completely false."

General Taylor, the 8th army commander, today asked his troops, to help rebuild South Korea. The General was obviously aware of Congressional criticism of any plan to use American soldiers as labor troops. He told his men: we have helped rebuild Korea in the past and should continue to lend the South Koreans our technical experts and oqùipment. He encouraged soldiers to make cash contributions to rehabilitation work. He said any men who want to help rebuild South Korea may do so - on a voluntary basis.

And Red China's Mao Tze Tung has broadcast to the world his happiness over the now concluded negotiations with Russia. Peiping Radio quotes the Chinese leader as saying it provides for "an unprecedented economic program extremely significant in the industrialization of China." He offered no details.

In Indo-China today French forces made progress in their drive to destroy Communist-led rebels south of Hanoi. And Senator Knowland, the majority leader, told reporters in Saigon: the United States will support only those nations of Asia who make a serious effort to defend themselves against Communism."

In Washington, Secretary of Commerce Weeks said: the time is past when we can continue to support international handouts and global boondoggling. Weeks said the Marshal plan, for economic aid abroad, definitely helped check the advance of Communism. But now, he feels, "we are about to take the crutches away from the patient and we ought to sell him a cane to walk with." Treasury Secretary Humphrey who also addressed a group studying world trade said our government must question its right and ability to continue to use the taxpayers money to finance competitive enterprises abroad. He said: our scale of taxes is already too high. We must bring revenue and expenditures into balance.

White House Secretary Hagerty said in Denver today that Adlai Stevenson's Chicago speech last night was "sound and fury signifying nothing." Stevenson had charged that the Republicans are making hollow political gestures abroad and threatening the Communists while cutting down on foreign aid and national defense. Tonight, Stevenson makes what's called a non-political report on his recent world tour; it will be heard over many of these stations at 10:30 p.m. eastern time. At today's session of the Democratic party rally in Chicago, three former secretaries of agriculture, Brannon, Anderson and Wickard charged that the Eisenhower administration has broken its promises to farmers. And Michigan's Governor Williams said: "Republican promises are golden but Republican performance is brass."

Former Labor Secretary Durkin, who resigned last week, said today that the President personally "agreed with" him that 19 proposed amendments to the Taft-

Hartley law should be submitted to Congress. Later, says Durkin, a White House spokesman told him that the Administration would not be able to go along with the 19 amendments.

The House un-American activities committee today heard James McNamara testify that he attended 10 to 20 Communist meetings during the late 1930's. McNamara resigned last week as a government labor mediator in Cincinnati. Committee members asked if he had been a party member. McNamara said: "Yes, if one can belong to a church and not believe what it teaches, then I was a member of the Communist party."

Here in New York today the Stock Market pulled itself up sharply from yesterday's low and for the first time in 16 years in New York Democratic voters, in a primary election, are choosing a candidate for mayor: the incumbent Mayor Impelliterri or Borough Presidnet Wagner, son of the former Senator Wagner.

In Egypt, the Naguib government says it has uncovered a plot of Egyptian traitors working in league with unidentified "foreign imperialists" to overthrow the regime.

The Warsaw radio says Catholic Bishop Kaczmarck has "confessed" to working as a spy for former American Ambassador Arthur Bliss Lane.

And the French government says Premier Laniel will go to Washington soon for talks with our top officials.

Tonight, Edward R. Murrow recorded for you another report on conditions in Germany. Here it is:

MURROW: This is Berlin. Tonight I'm going to talk with an old friend and fellow reporter, Richard C. Hottelet. He first came to Germany sixteen years ago. He speaks perfect German. He even spent four months in a Nazi prison. And in my view his judgment, his knowledge of Germany, is not excelled by any American reporter in Germany today. Tonight is a chance to ask him some questions, and I hope I will ask him the kind of questions you would ask if you were here.

Dick, the first one is a very simple one: Have the Germans become good Democrats?

HOTTELET: That covers an awful lot of territory, Ed., I think to answer it briefly I'd say that the Germans have taken a very great step, a very solid step, forward toward becoming good Democrats. The proof of this particular pudding is in the eating and the eating is still some time away.

MURROW: Then you would suggest that the victory of Chancellor Adenauer was one for Democratic processes rather than merely a personal victory for the old chancellor.

HOTTELET: I think there's no doubt about that at all, because although the personality of the old chancellor certainly dominated the election, and he had no competitor on the national scene in any of the other parties, including in his strongest opposition, the Social Democratic Party, even so his personality has in the last few years of his administration come to symbolize adherents to the democratic system and respect for the processes which we in our country and the British in their old democracy have built up as standards for democratic behavior.

MURROW: And in the course of your wandering about Germany of which you do a great deal, what would you say that the general overall attitude towards America and Americans.

HOTTELET: I would say that the United States has never been as popular and as solidly popular in Germany as it is today.

MURROW: Why is that? Is it just a gratitude?

HOTTELET: No, No, no, I don't think gratitude figures in this really, it doesn't cut much ice. I think they see that the presence of American troops here in Germany since the war has contributed very notably to the stability and the peace which has followed this war in mark contrast to the turmoil and disorder and gradual disillusion which followed the first world war under the Weimar Republic. Then, too, they have seen in the last two years expressions of opinion by American statesmen, including President Eisenhower when he was SHAPE commander, and President Truman, and now of course Secretary of State, expressions of American opinion so warmly in favor of German policy as...are not to be matched, you know, public utterances by French and British statesmen.

MURROW: Well, Dick, we have been discussing here a little bit German policy, German attitudes, and the relationship between Germany and the United States, it seems to me that you have agreed that no one can predict the future either of German politics or of German youth, or any other youth.

HOTTELET: That's right.

MURROW: ...for that matter...

HOTTELET: Yes

MURROW: In view of all this uncertainty, what in your view should our policy be in relation to Germany?

HOTTELET: I think the challenge to us and to all the western statesmen now is to see that the enormous vitality, the dynamic reconstruction, which we see around here us in Berlin...

MURROW: We certainly do!

HOTTELET: ...and dramatically in Western Germany, that this is geared to a western community, that Germany is not left adrift as an isolated power. I think American responsibility lies in the direction of not building up Germany as a single national State, you know, a single pillar, let's say, of American policy in Europe, but of using all our influence to see that those gifts, which... the good gifts, which the Germans have shown that they can develop in these last eight years, are brought to the service of the western community and I think specifically that we ought to support, as we have, indeed, been supporting, the European political community and that we ought to make quite sure...quite certain, quite plain, to the Germans and to all the others involved that the United States is committed to the preservation of democratic...democracy in Europe in the... in the framework of these communal community interests.

MURROW: Well, in other words, you would suggest that we should not regard Adenauer's victory in the last election as something that is permanent and lasting or reassuring, but merely as a promising first step?

HOTTELET: I think so. Yes, indeed. A very important first step but it...I mean, as any election it's the expression of progress made. It is not in itself an historical trend.

MURROW: But, by and large, what happens in Germany and what happens to our policy may well be determined by what the Russians do, is that not so?

HOTTELET: Well, they're only about a mile away from us here in Berlin, Ed, and there's no telling, really, what they're going to do. Certainly, how they react especially to the latest diplomatic moves and how they themselves are forced into action by their internal stresses and their...and their domestic requirements will have a very great bearing on how Germany developes in the next two years and how the United States will approach European problems as a whole.

MURROW: Well, thanks very much, Dick Hottelet.

For the last few minutes I have been sitting here in Berlin talking with our chief German correspondent, Richard C. Hottelet.

This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin.

Goodnight and good luck!

LESEUER: And this is Larry Leseuer. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news, but first Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESEUER: Senator Willis Robertson of Virginia today summed up what he considers the typical Congressional junket. He said: "The party arrives at the airport and is rushed off for an Embassy briefing - a lot of hot air. Then the visitors are briefed by the foreign government - more hot air. Finally, they are honored at a banquet - still more hot air. After getting some surface impressions the Congressmen return home and report their findings - and that's alot of hot air too."

This is Larry Leseuer saying goodnight!

Wednesday 16 Sept. 1953 ha Sunn 7/45 p

Good evening everyone; here's what happened today:

Air Force Secretary Talbott announces that production will be cancelled on an estimated 6-thousand jet and other aircraft engines. He estimates this will mean a savings of some 400 to 500 million dollars. And both Talbott and Defense Secretary Wilson say the cancelled engines are all spares or extras. this will not affect the production of a single plane... The two men explained the engines are no longer needed because jet engines now last much longer between overhauls and the rate of attrition has fallen off.. (we are not losing as many because the Korean war is over) A reporter asked Wilson if he expected renewed Democratic criticism because of this decision. The Defense Secretary replied: "Let me quote former President Truman on that. He said if you can't stand the heat, you better stay out of the kitchen and let someone else do the cooking."

Treasury Secretary Humphrey today told the National Press Club in Washington that Wilson will "do a grand job if you just give him a little time." Humphrey also said that Russia's progress with the hyrdogen bomb makes defense stakes "too high to take any chance of being only second best."

Humphrey says the Administration aims at a brand new model defense program, giving us the most defense at the least possible cost. And he sees nothing, today, to change the recommendation that a scheduled 10 per cent income tax cut, and the end of the excess profits tax, go into effect, on January first--as planned.

~~The President said today that he will meet in Washington sometime this fall with French Premier Laniel and Foreign Minister Bidault. Mr. Eisenhower will end his Colorado vacation and fly back to the Washington on Saturday.~~

Secretary of Agriculture Benson visited the President AT DENVER today and later told reporters: the Democratic charges that the Administration is breaking its campaign pledges to the farmers, is "ridiculous." He said: "Anyone who knows the President, knows he is not going to break any campaign pledges. and neither is the secretary of agriculture."

There was no comment at the summer White House on Adlai Stevenson's suggestion, that we seize the initiative in the cold war, by offering Russia a non-aggression pact, and the chance of AGREEMENT on disarmament. And as the Democrats moved out of Chicago, at the end of their party rally, National Chairman Mitchell said, the meeting produced better understandings and gave the party greater confidence for the next elections. Then the Republicans started moving in..for their party meeting. And Victor A. Johnson, director of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, told reporters: "Let's get the crusade back on the road."

~~At the United Nations, Soviet Delegate of Malik, asked to comment on Stevenson's speech said, we are always ready to talk. There are many lies in the Stevenson speech!"~~

American Delegate Lodge told the UNITED NATIONS Assembly we are seriously concerned over what he called the tendency of the U.N. to interfere in internal affairs of member nations. He wants this to be considered by the conference [redacted]d to be called in 1955 to consider U.N charter revisions. And Lodge accused the Russians of hypocrisy in their United Nations speeches calling for peace in Korea.

Today the enemy in Korea served notice that Communist planes would start using a new airfield on Sunday.. a field only 30 miles from [redacted] Seoul. The Communists say their flyers might "accidently" fly over the forbidden demilitarized territory. The enemy negotiators, so far, have ignored an allied demand for information on the whereabouts of 34-hundred allied troops. ~~And as we transferred some 2 thousand North Korean prisoners~~

~~who do not want to go home, they staged a violent anti Communist demonstration. They yelled at Communist observers, "Kill them, Kill the Chinese."~~

Premier Pen Nouth of Cambodia, who last week offered to be neutral in the war against Communist-led rebels in Indo China, said today that Cambodia wants independence. plus military aid from the United States and France, if she is to continue to fight the guerrillas.

In Switzerland today the wife and three children of missing British diplomat Donald McLean disappeared from their home in Geneva. Police speculate that Mrs. McClean and her family may have gone behind the Iron Curtain where some authorities believe Mc Clean and ANOTHER BRITISH DIPLOMAT, Guy Burgess, went when they disappeared in 1951. Mrs. McClean sent a telegram to her mother saying: "Safe and well, don't worry." It was dispatched from a TOWN 60 miles from Geneva.

In Washington, Federal Judge Holtzoff sentenced Henry "The Dutchman" Grunewald to 90 days in jail as a federal parole violator.. Because A PROBATION OFFICER SAID he was thrown out of a Washington hotel in "a drunken condition" and because he registered under a false name in a Newark, New jersey hotel.

Here in New York, Mayor Impelleteri ~~apparently is preparing to run as an independent candidate in the November general election. He was~~ ~~[illegible]~~ WAS soundly defeated in yesterday's Democratic primary by Robert ~~Wagner~~ Wagner, Junior, son of the late Senator from New York.

And near the Albany, New York, airport, 25 passengers and a crew of three were killed when their American airlines plane crashed, exploded and burned after striking two radio towers.

From Germany tonight, Edward R. Murrow recorded for you another ~~[illegible]~~ interview with an old C.B.S. Radio colleague. Here is Mr. Murrow:

This is LL. I'll be back in a minute ~~etc.~~ in a footnote to the news - But first Bob Dixon -

~~While it's undoubtedly true that it's nice to have a child around the home~~, any PARENT will testify that a little boy or girl is quite a responsibility.

and the government's Children's Bureau proves that today--with statistics--

~~accidents are the major cause of the death of children~~: That more children are being killed by accidents than die of all infectious diseases of childhood put together. Those of us who have children appreciate the Bureau's conclusion: "A child is a constant worry from the time he or she is born."

CBS RADIO DIVISION

E. R. MURROW

Wednesday, September 16, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... This is Berlin. Again tonight we're taking advantage of the fact that most of our European correspondents are here in Berlin, and we're going to put some questions to Alex Kendrick, who is based in Vienna. Alex is an old middle-European hand, he's spent considerable time in the Soviet Union and has comedown here from Vienna.

Alex, this is the first time you've been in Berlin for some time, isn't it?

KENDRICK: Yes, but I would say I've come up here from Vienna, Ed.

MURROW: Alright, alright, we won't argue about that. Nowthat you are up here, what do you think of it?

KENDRICK: Well, I haven't seen it literally for eighteen years, but I think now that the ruins are impressive, I think that the people that we've met during the course of this week show a spirit which I frankly never associated or at least didn't associate previously with the German people.

MURROW: Well, what do you mean by that? Could you be a little more explicit.

KENDRICK: Well, I think that the war and what has happened to Germany during the war has really taught a lesson - I don't want to put it that brutally, but that's the way it is - and I'm convinced, I think, on the basis of these few days that what is happening here whichever way it turns out is at least something well worth watching and well worth applauding from the sidelines.

MURROW: Then you feel that as a result of defeat and all these mountains of rubble and so forth that the German mind, or at least the German attitude towards war, has changed?

KENDRICK: Well, I've been told here by experts that there is no such thing as the German mind, and their standard of criticism was based on the fact that only the Germans would employ such a term. But I think I agree, Ed, that you can't condemn an entire race or entire nation, but my feeling was that there was something that you could call a 'German mind' and that perhaps after two disastrous wars this German mind has learned a little more than it knew previously andthat perhaps we don't have to reckon with that sort of thing once again - I mean things like the Reichstag fire that was touched off to help Hitler, things like the concentration camps, things like the attacks on other countries, and the whole period of aggression that we knew before the war.

MURROW: Well, Alex, you said in Vienna - and you're now in Berlin - those are certainly the two best listening posts, the nearest tothe Iron Curtain, this one being a hundred miles inside it, and the speculation here - as you know - is almost exclusively on what's happening behind the Iron Curtain, not only in Russia but even in East Germany - the experts here do not appear to know exactly who is running this show in East Germany and what would be your guess as to what's happening behind the Iron Curtain now.

KENDRICK: Well, Ed, I try to disassociate what's happening in East Germany from what's happening in the older satellites like Czechoslovakia and Hungary, because really I don't think the two situations are analogous, I think that the East German story is part of the whole German story and what the Russians are doing in East Germany has a specific bearing on what is happening in West Germany or what they'retrying to bring about in West Germany, but I think that with Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania and the familiar Iron Curtain countries as we call them it's a little bit different, they've had Communist regimes in powerfor several years now and the governments have more or less consolidated -- some people don't know who's running things in Moscow either, but on thebasis of the recent changes in the Moscow government, in the Kremlin setup, on the basis of the very definite consumer goods campaign that has been launched from the Kremlin, on the basis,I think, of tremendous internal easing of tension I think it's pretty safe to guess who is running the show in Moscow and I would guess Georgi Malenkov.

MURROW: I would like to put you another question: What should American policy be and what special problems confront us in this area.

KENDRICK: Well, we don't know how this thing is going to apply to international affairs yet because there hasn't been a fair test. We've tried to get a meeting with the Russians; they have sort of jockeyed around from place to place, they haven't quite come across, they've tried to put up their own terms for meetings, we've come back with our own terms and I don't think until there is an actual physical meeting between fairly high level people on both sides are we going to find out whether they really intend to relax international tension. However, in anticipation of a possibility of such relaxation I don't see how we can avoid sooner or later coming to a meeting with them.

MURROW: But, in the meanwhile, what should we do - I mean isn't it true that if the Russians relax the tension, if they reduce the pressure in Western Europe that this will cause an increasing number of people to say there really isn't any danger from the Russians therefore EDC and everything else that our policy has attempted to achieve is not necessary.

KENDRICK: Well, Ed, I think it's cost? that already, I think it has had that effect, a great many people in Europe are saying that there is no need for EDC and they are sort of coasting along on this new policy that the Russians seem to be putting out of relaxation.

MURROW: Well, then until we have a meeting (sic) or rather until the Russians decide whetherthey will meet or whether they won't, we continue in this period of indecision and uncertainty.

KENDRICK: Well, I don't know, Ed, I think that somebody has to make a break and say that 'yes' we're going to have such and such a meeting on such and such a day at such and such a place and it hasn't happened yet - both sides have been sort of fencing about the agenda and about the place and about who shall advance - somebody has to make that break; and if the Russians don't make the break and perhaps they won't, I frankly think we ought to make it.

MURROW: Right. Thank you very much, Alex Kendrick. For the last few minutes, I have been sitting here in Berlin, where most of our European correspondents are gathered, talking with Alex Kendrick who is based in Vienna. This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin. Good Night and Good Luck.

LESUEUR: And this is Larry LeSueur. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news. But, first, Bob Dixon.

ANNOUNCER: (C O M M E R C I A L) That's my word for today - and here's Larry LeSueur with his footnote to today's news.

LeSUEUR: Any parent will testify that a little boy or girl is quite a responsibility; and the government's Children's Bureau proves that today with statistics, that more children are being killed by accidents than die of all infectious diseases of childhood put together. Those of us who have children appreciate the bureau's conclusion: A child is a constant worry from the time he or she is born. This is Larry LeSueur saying, Good Night!

ANNOUNCER: (C O M M E R C I A L) ... Listen to Murrow - tomorrow.

THIS IS THE CBS ... RADIO NETWORK.

Ed. trans. P. O.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (WITH LARRY LESUEUR)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY - SEPTEMBER 16, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 P.M. EST

LESUEUR: Good evening everyone; here's what happened today:

Air Force Secretary Talbott announces that production will be cancelled on an estimated 6-thousand jet and other aircraft engines. He estimates this will mean a savings of some 400 to 500 million dollars. And both Talbott and Defense Secretary Wilson say the cancelled engines are all spares or extras..this will not affect the production of a single plane. The two men explained the engines are no longer needed because jet engines now last much longer between overhauls and the rate of attrition has fallen off...we are not losing as many because the Korean war is over. A reporter asked Wilson if he expected renewed Democratic criticism because of this decision. The Defense Secretary replied: "Let me quote former President Truman on that. He said "if you can't stand the heat, you better stay out of the kitchen and let someone else do the cooking."

Treasury Secretary Humphrey today told the National Press Club in Washington that Wilson will "do a grand job if you just give him a little time." Humphrey also said that Russia's progress with the hydrogen bomb makes defense states "too high to take any chance of being only second best."

Humphrey says the Administration aims at a brand new model defense program giving us the most defense at the least possible cost. And he sees nothing, today, to change the recommendation that a scheduled 10 percent income tax cut and the end of the excess profits tax go into effect on January first - as planned.

Secretary of Agricultrue Benson visited the President at Denver today and later told reporters: the Democratic charges that the Administration is breaking its campaign pledges to the farmers is "ridiculous." He said: "Anyone who knows the President knows he is not going to break any campaign pledges and neither is the secretary of agriculture."

There was no comment at the summer White House on Adlai Stevenson's suggestion that we seize the initiative in the cold war by offering Russia a non-aggression pact and the chance of agreement on disarmament. And as the Democrats moved out of Chicago at the end of their party rally, National Chairman Mitchell said the meeting produced better understandings and gave the party greater confidence for the next elections. Then the Republicans started moving in - for their party meeting. And Victor A. Johnson, director of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, told reporters: "Let's get the crusade back on the road."

American Delegate Lodge told the United Nations Assembly we are seriously concerned over what he called the tendency of the U.N. to interfere in internal affairs of member nations. He wants this to be considered by the conference to be called in 1955 to consider U.N. charter revisions. And Lodge accused the Russians of hypocrisy in their United Nations speeches calling for peace in Korea.

Today the enemy in Korea served notice that Communist planes would start using a new airfield on Sunday - a field only 30 miles from Seoul. The Communists say their flyers might "accidentally" fly over the forbidden demilitarized territory. The enemy negotiators, so far, have ignored an allied demand for information on the whereabouts of 34-hundred allied troops.

Premier Pen Nouth of Cambodia, who last week offered to be neutral in the war against Communist-led rebels in Indo China, said today that Cambodia wants independence - plus military aid from the United States and France if she is to continue to fight the guerrillas.

In Switzerland today the wife and three children of missing British diplomat Donald McLean disappeared from their home in Geneva. Police speculate that Mrs. McClean and her family may have gone behind the Iron Curtain where some authorities believe McClean and another British diplomat, Guy Burgess, went when they disappeared in 1951. Mrs. McClean sent a telegram to her mother saying: "Safe and well don't worry." It was dispatched from a town 60 miles from Geneva.

In Washington, Federal Judge Holtzoff sentenced Henry "The Dutchman" Grunewald to 90 days in jail as a federal parole violator because a probation officer said he was thrown out of a Washington hotel in "a drunken condition" and because he registered under a false name in a Newark, New Jersey hotel.

Here in New York, Mayor Impelleteri was soundly defeated in yesterday's Democratic primary by Robert Wagner, Junior, son of the late Senator from New York.

And near the Albany, New York, airport, 25 passengers and a crew of three were killed when their American airlines plane crashed, exploded and burned after striking two radio towers.

From Germany tonight, Edward R. Murrow recorded for you another interview with an old CBS Radio colleague. Here is Mr. Murrow:

MURROW: This is Berlin. Again tonight we're taking advantage of the fact that most of our European correspondents are here in Berlin, and we're going to put some questions to Alex Kendrick, who is based in Vienna. Alex is an old middle-European hand, he's spent considerable time in the Soviet Union and has come down here from Vienna.

Alex, this is the first time you've been in Berlin for some time, isn't it?

KENDRICK: Yes, but I would say I've come up here from Vienna, Ed.

MURROW: Alright, alright, we won't argue about that. Now that you are up here, what do you think of it?

KENDRICK: Well, I haven't seen it literally for eighteen years, but I think now that the ruins are impressive, I think that the people that we've met during the course of this week show a spirit which I frankly never associated or at least didn't associate previously with the German people.

MURROW: Well, what do you mean by that? Could you be a little more explicit.

KENDRICK: Well, I think that the war and what has happened to Germany during the war has really taught a lesson - I don't want to put it that brutally, but that's the way it is - and I'm convinced, I think, on the basis of these few days that what is happening here whichever way it turns out is at least something well worth watching and well worth applauding from the sidelines.

MURROW: Then you feel that as a result of defeat and all these mountains of rubble and so forth that the German mind, or at least the German attitude towards war, has changed?

KENDRICK: Well, I've been told here by experts that there is no such thing as the German mind, and their standard of criticism was based on the fact that only the Germans would employ such a term. But I think I agree, Ed, that you can't condemn an entire race or entire nation, but my feeling was that there was something that you could call a "german mind" and that perhaps after two disastrous wars this German mind has learned a little more than it knew previously and that perhaps we don't have to reckon with that sort of thing once again - I mean things like the Reichstag fire that was touched off to help Hitler, things like the concentration camps, things like the attacks on other countries, and the whole period of aggression that we knew before the war.

MURROW: Well, Alex, you said in Vienna - and you're now in Berlin - those are certainly the two best listening posts, the nearest to the Iron Curtain, this one being a hundred miles inside it, and the speculation here - as you know - is almost exclusively on what's happening behind the Iron Curtain, not only in Russia but even in East Germany - the experts here do not appear to know exactly who is running this show in East Germany and what would be your guess as to what's happening behind the Iron Curtain now.

KENDRICK: Well, Ed, I try to disassociate what's happening in East Germany from what's happening in the older satellites like Czechoslovakia and Hungary, because really I don't think the two situations are analogous, I think that the East German story is part of the whole German story and what the Russians are doing in East Germany has a specific bearing on what is happening in West Germany or what they're trying to bring about in West Germany, but I think that with Czechoslovakia, Hungary,Roumania and the familiar Iron Curtain countries as we call them it's a little bit different, they've had Communist regimes in power for several years now and the governments have more or less consolidated - some people don't know who's running things in Moscow either, but on the basis of the recent changes in the Moscow government, in the Kremlin setup, on the basis of the very definite consumer goods campaign that has been launched from the Kremlin, on the basis, I think, of tremendous internal easing of tension I think it's pretty safe to guess who is running the show in Moscow and I would guess Georgi Malenkov.

MURROW: I would like to put you another question: What should American policy be and what special problems confront us in this area.

KENDRICK: Well, we don't know how this thing is going to apply to international affairs yet because there hasn't been a fair test. We've tried to get a meeting with the Russians; they have sort of jockeyed around from place to place, they haven't quite come across, they've tried to put up their own terms for meetings, we've come back with our own terms and I don't think until there is an actual physical meeting between fairly high level people on both sides are we going to find out whether they really intend to relax international tension. However, in anticipation of a possibility of such relaxation I don't see how we can avoid sooner or later coming to a meeting with them.

MURROW: But, in the meanwhile, what should we do - I mean isn't it true that if the Russians relax the tension, if they reduce the pressure in Western Europe that this will cause an increasing number of people to say there really isn't any danger from the Russians therefore EDC and everything else that our policy has attempted to achieve is not necessary.

KENDRICK: Well, Ed, I think it's caused that already; I think it has had that effect, a great many people in Europe are saying that there is no need for EDC and they are sort of coasting along on this new policy that the Russians seem to be putting out of relaxation.

MURROW: Well, then until we have a meeting or rather until the Russians decide whether they will meet or whether they won't, we continue in this period of indecision and uncertainty.

KENDRICK: Well, I don't know, Ed, I think that somebody has to make a break and say that 'yes' we're going to have such and such a meeting on such and such a day at such and such a place and it hasn't happened yet - both sides have been sort of fencing about the agenda and about the place and about who shall advance - somebody has to make that break; and if the Russians don't make the break and perhaps they won't, I frankly think we ought to make it.

MURROW: Right. Thank you very much, Alex Kendrick. For the last few minutes, I have been sitting here in Berlin, where most of our European correspondents are gathered, talking with Alex Kendrick who is based in Vienna. This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin. Good Night and Good Luck.

LESUEUR: And this is Larry LeSueur. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news. But, first, Bob Dixon.

DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: Any parent will testify that a little boy or girl is quite a responsibility; and the government's Children's Bureau proves that today with statistics, that more children are being killed by accidents than die of all infectious diseases of childhood put together. Those of us who have children appreciate the bureau's conclusion: A child is a constant worry from the time he or she is born. This is Larry LeSueur saying good night!

Tuesday - Sept 17, 1953 - Lesueur 7/45P

Good evening everyone; here's what happened today:

Secretary of State Dulles told the United Nations [redacted] he wonders whether the Communists really want to comply with the Korean armistice. In a speech to the General Assembly, Mr. Dulles said the enemy is using delaying tactics on accepting our suggestion for a date and place for the Korean conference. In his policy statement, the Secretary said that it is up to the Soviet Union to remove the roadblocks in the way of a peaceful settlement in Korea, Indo-China and Germany. Mere words are not enough. The Communists must do more to change their policies. The Secretary said we are not reassured by Moscow's talk about the co-existence of Capitalism and Communism. We note that the Russians refused western offers to negotiate such problems as Germany, Austria and disarmament. We want action. And the Secretary said Southeast Asia "affords the Soviet leaders a chance to give substance to their peaceful words." As Mr. Dulles put it: "If the Soviet leaders are honest they must recognize that if there is to be a new world climate, they must contribute more to it than they have yet contributed. For our part, the United States will try to avoid any word or deed which might needlessly aggravate the present world crisis. We are ready to explore all possible means to bring about world peace "before scientific discoveries wipe life off the surface of this planet."

Another Republican, Senator Ferguson of Michigan, chairman of the Senate policy committee, said in Chicago today that we should not now negotiate with the Russians. He feels that to do so now would give the Soviets a propaganda tool. He said: "We would be meeting them on their own time and it would come to nothing." Senator Ferguson charges that Adlai Stevenson's recent speech calling for new talks with Moscow is "the same old Truman-Acheson policy". shows a "softness towards Communism." Ferguson says Stevenson is guilty of "appeasement."

In India today, Prime Minister Nehru told his parliament that American foreign policy is not mature. In an obvious reference to Secretary Dulles' recent American Legion speech, Nehru said: "A strong policy these days apparently means going about looking ferocious and telling everybody we will punish them if they don't behave as we like." Nehru said: "That may be good at a public meeting but it represents great immaturity." The Indian leader also said that the United States and the Latin American countries who voted against giving India a seat at the Korean political conference flouted the will of nearly all the European and Asian countries. "Somehow," he said, "people don't realize that the countries of Asia do not propose to be ignored or bypassed, and certainly not sat upon." ~~Nehru deplored what he called the narrow approach to foreign affairs of some countries which consider everything in terms of black and white, with an element of dogmatic fervor. He spoke of "that bigoted, almost religious approach of 'either you are for us or against us.'"~~

Vice President Nixon told reporters in Washington today that his 72-day trip around the Far East is designed to show that part of the world that the Administration's policy is to give equal emphasis to the Far East, Southeast Asia and Europe.

In Korea today anti-Communist Chinese [redacted] prisoners again demonstrated against the Red propaganda agents sent to neutral camps to sell the prisoners on returning home. And the Indian guards appealed to their government for reinforcements to handle the angry anti-Communists. India will send another 600 troops to Korea aboard 20 planes. General Mark Clark today promised Americans who may have decided to remain in the enemy camp that they will be given a fair break..the full protection of their American legal rights. He pledged to these men "our sympathies for the hardships they have suffered and our understanding of the pressures to which they have been subjected.

The Soviet news agency, Tass, reported tonight that several new types of atomic bombs have been successfully tested by the Russians in recent weeks. The Tass story says the tests "fully confirmed the calculations and conjectures of scientists and designers."

~~Our own government disclosed tonight for the first time a list of the 139 American cities it rates as "probable targets" of an atomic attack. The list includes three new "critical target areas": Binghamton, New York, and the Wilkes Barre - Hazelton area of Pennsylvania.~~

Democratic Senator Russell of Georgia says we now have more atomic bombs than we have planes and pilots to deliver them, if necessary. Russell is comcerned over the Administration's cuts in air force funds.

In St. Louis today, A.F. of L. President Meany charged that President Eisenhower "is not strong enough to stand up for his point of view." Meany said: "The National Association of Manufacturers is in a position of great influence in the government. They seem to think they can run the Administration."

And in Washington the mother of Jean Kerr, a former research aide to Senator McCarthy, announced that Miss Keer will marry the Senator, in Washington a week from Tuesday. //

Tonight Edward R. Murrow recorded for you another report from Germany. Here it is:

and That's all — I'll be back in a moment with a footnote on them — But first

Bob Dixon

footnote

Federal Judge John J. Parker, tonight told a citizenship conference in Washington that we must never forget that freedom of speech extends even to Communists and Fascists "whose teachings are hostile to our institutions." Judge Parker, who has been mentioned as a possible successor to the late Chief Justice Vinson, said "that unless speech is free for everybody, it is free for nobody. He said the only "safe limitations on this constitutional freedom are those forbidding slander, obscenity and incitement to crime.

~~And [illegible] footnote~~

This is all saying goodnite

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Thursday, Sep. 17, 1953
7:45-8:00 P.M.

LESUEUR: ... Tonite Edward R. Murrow recorded for you another report from Germany. Here it is:

MURROW: THIS IS BERLIN.

Tonite we continue this rather unique opportunity to talk with our colleagues who are gathered here in Berlin. Tonite it's Howard K. Smith, the chief of our European news staff. He knows both England and the Continent. He wrote a book called "The Last Train from Berlin" - and his beat is literally all over Europe, and he's been wandering about there for the last six weeks.

Howard, it seems to me that Germany, including Berlin, is as prosperous, has as much food and goods in the shops as in London. It seems to me also that this Germany is a sort of dynamo, producing more and more goods all the time. And the first question I'd like to put to you is this: How worried are the British about this whole revival of German strength and industry?

SMITH: Well, that's very hard to answer, Ed. The British have a marvelous ability to disregard questions that are unpleasant. They did that in the Munich period, and now -- with some justification, I think -- they're doing it again. The German question's very hard for all of us, and they do tend to act as tho they are not worried. Now, to some degree that may be genuine, because the prosperity here in Germany about which so much is talked is really not strictly a German feature. Now, in the past few weeks I've traveled over most of Western Europe, from Greece and Rome up to Denmark, and I find that prosperity is a quality of all Europe this summer. In England things have never been quite as good as they are now. Meat is the only thing still rationed, and this year there has been an embarrassing superabundance of that. So, in fact, I think perhaps incomes are better distributed in Britain and, in fact, Britain is just as prosperous, if not a little more prosperous than Germany is. Another thing which people who are comparing Britain and Germany tend to forget about and a thing that is a great solace to the British whenever a threat arises in any quarter, or potential threat, is the existence of this intangible thing, the links of Commonwealth. When you compare Britain with any power on the Continent, you mustn't just compare the island of England, Wales and Scotland. In any pinch, Britain can almost certainly count on the increments of power from her Commonwealth. So, perhaps, to some degree the British calm about the German question -- a great deal more calm than the French are -- is in fact justified.

MURROW: 'Course, it is true, isn't it, Howard, that the British have a habit of not worrying or thinking about things until the eleventh hour? I think someone once said that the British never think until the eleventh hour, and then they discover that the exercise is rather interesting. So perhaps that's what they're doing about the prospect of German competition in trade. But let's go on to something else. And this, I realize, is a rather difficult question to answer, but: Are the British convinced that the Germans have changed ~~and changed~~ and changed permanently and, perhaps, for the better?

SMITH: Well, I think the British feel that there has been some improvement here. And I was talking to some British people during the elections in Germany -- I was in Western Germany during the recent elections -- and they seemed rather impressed by the way the election campaign ran. Now, in 1949, I was told, the election campaign was dominated by demagoguery. Every democratic party was trying to compete with the Neo-Nazis in nationalism. In this election the note of nationalism wasn't heard at all. In the 1949 election it would have been political suicide to have talked about Germany's war record. In this election campaign I heard Adenauer and the Socialists, too, frequently mention things that had been done in the war. "We must not forget," I heard Adenauer say on one occasion, "that the world hated us - and with some reason." Now, that shows more confidence on the part of the democratic parties, and it very much impressed the British observers whom I saw.

MURROW: Then you feel that this was not a victory just for Adenauer, personally, but that it indicated some real strengthening of democratic processes in Germany?

SMITH: That was my impression, and that was theirs. Now, I would like to emphasize that this is all relative. I think democracy in Germany is still a shallow thing, a thing of shallow roots. But, nonetheless, relatively speaking, it's a vast improvement when you compare Germany today, eight years after World War II, with Germany in 1926, eight years after World War I.

MURROW: Well, Howard, this is a question that many people in America find difficult to answer and you may find it somewhat difficult, too. But the question is this: Why is it that so many people in Western Europe, completely non-Communist individuals, regard the United States as being quite as much a threat to the peace of the world as the Soviet Union?

SMITH: Well, the word you hear on almost everybody's lips when you ask them about that is "inflexibility". Since this so-called Russian peace offensive began, people over here have the impression that we're almost embarrassed every time some gesture is made; that we don't quite know what to do, so we're going to play safe and react by talking tough. And they don't feel that we're exploring all the avenues that might lead to a settlement. Whether that's true or not, that is certainly what people believe, those people I've talked to - and there've been a great many.

MURROW: Is this a feeling that we are both inflexible and inclined, in the public view, to be a little more belligerent than is required by the circumstances?

SMITH: I think that's the case - and such things as voting against India in the United Nations recently. I think most of the European countries were in favor of India being a part of it, because India had discovered the general framework of compromise that brought about the Korean truce. They thought it would be a good thing, therefore, to have India in the talks, and there was great disappointment when we not only voted against India's participation but in fact organized opposition to it.

MURROW: Well, for the last few minutes I have been sitting here in Berlin talking with our chief European correspondent, Howard K. Smith. This is Ed Murrow, recording from Berlin.

Good Night and Good Luck!

-30-

Ediphone trans./E. Scheiner

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (WITH LARRY LESUEUR)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

LESUEUR: Good evening everyone; here's what happened today:

Secretary of State Dulles told the United Nations he wonders whether the Communists really want to comply with the Korean armistice. In a speech to the General Assembly, Mr. Dulles said the enemy is using delaying tactics on accepting our suggestion for a date and place for the Korean conference. In his policy statement, the Secretary said that it is up to the Soviet Union to remove the roadblocks in the way of a peaceful settlement in Korea, Indo-China and Germany. Mere words are not enough. The Communists must do more to change their policies. The Secretary said we are not reassured by Moscow's talk about the co-existence of Capitalism and Communism. We note that the Russians refused western offers to negotiate such problems as Germany, Austria and disarmament. We want action. And the Secretary said Southeast Asia "affords the Soviet leaders a chance to give substance to their peaceful words." As Mr. Dulles put it: "If the Soviet leaders are honest they must recognize that if there is to be a new world climate, they must contribute more to it than they have yet contributed. For our part, the United States will try to avoid any word or deed which might needlessly aggravate the present world crisis. We are ready to explore all possible means to bring about world peace "before scientific discoveries wipe life off the surface of this planet."

Another Republican, Senator Ferguson of Michigan, chairman of the Senate policy committee, said in Chicago today that we should not now negotiate with the Russians. He feels that to do so now would give the Soviets a propaganda tool. He said: "We would be meeting them on their own time and it would come to nothing." Senator Ferguson charges that Adlai Stevenson's recent speech calling for new talks with Moscow is "the same old Truman-Acheson policy" shows a "softness towards Communism." Ferguson says Stevenson is guilty of "appeasement."

In India today, Prime Minister Nehru told his parliament that American foreign policy is not mature. In an obvious reference to Secretary Dulles' recent American Legion speech, Nehru said: "A strong policy these days apparently means going about looking ferocious and telling everybody we will punish them if they don't behave as we like." Nehru said: "That may be good at a public meeting but it represents great immaturity. The Indian leader also said that the United States and the Latin American countries who voted against giving India a seat at the Korean political conference flouted the will of nearly all the European and Asian countries. "Somehow," he said, "people don't realize that the countries of Asia do not propose to be ignored or bypassed, and certainly not "sat upon."

Vice President Nixon told reporters in Washington today that his 72-day trip around the Far East is designed to show that part of the world that the Administration's policy is to give equal emphasis to the Far East, Southeast Asia and Europe.

In Korea today anti-Communist Chinese prisoners again demonstrated against the Red propaganda agents sent to neutral camps to sell the prisoners on returning home. And the Indian guards appealed to their government for reinforcements to handle the angry anti-Communists. India will send another 600 troops to Korea aboard 20 planes. General Mark Clark today promised Americans who may have decided to remain in the enemy camp that they will be given a fair break...the full protection of their American legal rights. He pledged to these men "our sumpathies for the hardships they have suffered and our understanding of the pressures to which they have been subjected.

The Soviet news agency, Tass, reported tonight that several new types of atomic bombs have been successfully tested by the Russians in recent weeks. The Tass story says the tests "fully confirmed the calculations and conjectures of scientists and designers."

Democratic Senator Russell of Georgia says we now have more atomic bombs than we have planes and pilots to deliver them if necessary. Russell is concerned over the Administration's cuts in air force funds.

In St. Louis today, A.F.L. President Meany charged that President Eisenhower "is not strong enough to stand up for his point of view. Meany said: "The National Association of Manufacturers is in a position of great influence in the government. They seem to think they can run the Administration."

And in Washington the mother of Jean Kerr, a former research aide to Senator McCarthy, announced that Miss Keer will marry the Senator in Washington a week from Tuesday.

Tonight Edward R. Murrow recorded for you another report from Germany. Here it is:

MURROW: This is Berlin!

Tonight we continue this rather unique opportunity to talk with our colleagues who are gathered here in Berlin. Tonight it's Howard K. Smith, the chief of our European news staff. He knows both England and the Continent. He wrote a book called "The Last Train from Berlin" - and his beat is literally all over Europe, and he's been wandering about there for the last six weeks.

Howard, it seems to be that Germany, including Berlin, is as prosperous, has as much food and goods in the shops as in London. It seems to me also that this Germany is a sort of dynamo, producing more and more goods all the time. And the first question I'd like to put to you is this: How worried are the British about this whole revival of German strength and industry?

SMITH: Well, that's very hard to answer, Ed. The British have a marvelous ability to disregard questions that are unpleasant. They did that in the Munich period, and now - with some justification, I think - they're doing it again. The German question's very hard for all of us, and they do tend to act as though they are not worried. Now, to some degree that may be genuine, because the prosperity here in Germany about which so much is talked is really not strictly a German feature. Now, in the past few weeks I've traveled over most of Western Europe, from Greece and Rome up to Denmark, and I find that prosperity is a quality of all Europe this summer. In England things have never been quite as good as they are now. Meat is the only thing still rationed, and this year there has been an embarrassing superabundance of that. So, in fact, I think perhaps incomes are better distributed in Britain and, in fact, Britain is just as prosperous, if not a little more prosperous than Germany is. Another thing which people who are comparing Britain and Germany tend to forget about and a thing that is a great solace to the British whenever a threat arises in any quarter, or potential threat, is the existence of this intangible thing, the links of Commonwealth. When you compare Britain with any power on the Continent, you mustn't just compare the island of England, Wales and Scotland. In any pinch, Britain can almost certainly count on the increments of power from her Commonwealth. So, perhaps, to some degree the British calm about the German question - a great deal more calm than the French are - is in fact justified.

MURROW: 'Course, it is true, isn't it, Howard, that the British have a habit of not worrying or thinking about things until the eleventh hour? I think someone once said that the British never think until the eleventh hour, and then they discover that the exercise is rather interesting. So perhaps that's what they're doing about the prospect of German competition in trade. But let's go on to something else. And this, I realize, is a rather difficult question to answer, but: Are the British convinced that the Germans have changed and changed permanently and, perhaps, for the better?

SMITH: Well, I think the British feel that there has been some improvement here. And I was talking to some British people during the elections in Germany - I was in Western Germany during the recent elections - and they seemed rather impressed by the way the election campaign ran. Now, in 1949, I was told, the election campaign was dominated by demagoguery. Every democratic party was trying to compete with the Neo-Nazis in nationalism. In this election the note of nationalism wasn't heard at all. In the 1949 election it would have been political suicide to have talked about Germany's war record. In this election campaign I heard Adenauer and the Socialists, too, frequently mention things that had been done in the war. "We must not forget," I heard Adenauer say on one occasion, "that the world hated us - and with some reason." Now, that shows more confidence on the part of the democratic parties, and it very much impressed the British observers whom I saw.

MURROW: Then you feel that this was not a victory just for Adenauer, personally, but that it indicated some real strengthening of democratic processes in Germany?

SMITH: That was my impression, and that was theirs. Now, I would like to emphasize that this is all relative. I think democracy in Germany is still a shallow thing, a thing of shallow roots. But, nonetheless, relatively speaking, it's a vast improvement when you compare Germany today, eight years after World War II, with Germany in 1926, eight years after World War I.

MURROW: Well, Howard, this is a question that many people in America find difficult to answer and you may find it somewhat difficult, too. But the question is this: Why is it that so many people in Western Europe, completely non-Communist individuals, regard the United States as being quite as much a threat to the peace of the world as the Soviet Union?

SMITH: Well, the word you hear on almost everybody's lips when you ask them about that is "inflexibility." Since this so-called Russian peace offensive began, people over here have the impression that we're almost embarrassed every time some gesture is made; that we don't quite know what to do, so we're going to play safe and react by talking tough. And they don't feel that we're exploring all the avenues that might lead to a settlement. Whether that's true or not, that is certainly what people believe, those people I've talked to - and there've been a great many.

MURROW: Is this a feeling that we are both inflexible and inclined, in the public view, to be a little more belligerent than is required by the circumstances?

SMITH: I think that's the case - and such things as voting against India in the United Nations recently. I think most of the European countries were in favor of India being a part of it, because India had discovered the general framework of compromise that brought about the Korean truce. They thought it would be a good thing, therefore, to have India in the talks, and there was great disappointment when we not only voted against India's participation but in fact organized opposition to it.

MURROW: Well, for the last few minutes I have been sitting here in Berlin talking with our chief European correspondent, Howard K. Smith. This is Ed Murrow, recording from Berlin.

Good Night and Good Luck!

LESUEUR: And this is Larry Leseuer. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the day's news. But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: Federal Judge John J. Parker tonight told a citizenship conference in Washington that we must never forget that freedom of speech extends even to Communists and Fascists "whose teachings are hostile to our institutions." Judge Parker, who has been mentioned as a possible successor to the late Chief Justice Vinson, said "that unless speech is free for everybody, it is free for nobody. He said the only "safe limitations on this constitutional freedom are those forbidding slander, obscenity and incitement to crime.

This is Larry Lesueur, saying goodnight.

Lesueur Friday Sept 18, 1953 - 7:45 p

Good evening everyone. Here's what happened today:

The United States, and its allies in Korea, have again told the Communists: we are opposed to bringing neutrals into the Korean political conferemce. The United States, speaking for all the allies, says "There is nothing further to add." The U.N. has made its decision on the composition of the conference. And we continue to await the Communist reply to our proposal for a date and a place. ~~[illegible] Secretary Richard G. Casey urged the Assembly to stand firm on its previous decision to bar neutral nations.~~

A Communist correspondent in Korea says that ten "allied" war prisoners will be released by the Communists later tonight. He did not indicate their nationality. But he told American reporters these ten have changed their minds about staying with the enemy. And he said the only other allied prisoners still held in North Korea are "a handful which won't go back." ~~The Communist correspondent, Wilfred Burchett, said he has made an "exhaustive search" and is convinced that Captain James Van Fleet, Junior, son of the former commander of the 8th army, is not a prisoner.~~

At the United Nations today, the French delegation walked out during an attack by Pakistan's foreign minister on the French policy in North Africa. And a member of the delegation of Communist Poland left his delegation for freedom. Dr. Marek Korowicz, the first alternate on the Polish delegation, has sought sanctuary in this country through officials of Radio Free Europe. Doctor Korowicz told reporters: "Life in Poland was a nightmare. I am very happy to be in the free world. For the first time in seven years I have been able to say what I truly think." The doctor told reporters:"I want to join the free Poles abroad, to work with them, for the liberation of my homeland and all peoples oppressed by Soviet Communism." Korowicz has no family in Communist Poland.

In Chicago today, Republican leaders from 21 midwestern states heard a message read from the President, expressing confidence that the meeting would bring important benefits to the party and to the nation. Then the delegates heard the meeting's keynoter, Senator Ferguson of Michigan. Say "as long as the radical eggheads control the Democratic party, as they do now, this country cannot survive another Democratic administration

Another speaker--Postmaster General Summerfield--attacked the Democrats [redacted] as "Communist coddlers." And he called President Eisenhower a man of [redacted] destiny who has brought a cleaner and clearer atomospehere to Washington. [redacted] Summerfield said the President is "out greatest natural resource..our [redacted] greatest deterrent to World War Three." [redacted]

In New Hampshire, Republican Senator Bridges said today that thanks to the Administration's policies " the honest dollar has come into its own. He predicted "a new era of prosperity in New England and throughout the nation" [redacted]

In Washington, Republican leaders made it known that Warren L. Stephenson, who figured in a Congressional investigation of influence peddling, has been removed from all connections with the party in the District of Columbia. [redacted] Stephenson, who has acknowledged he sought [redacted] a four per cent fee from a manufacturer, has been removed from the districts's Republican committee and its finance committee, and has been replaced as secretary of the Republican Club of the District.

Commerce Secretary Weeks tonight announced the resignation of Assistant Commerce Secretary Craig R. Shaeffer. Mr. Shaeffer had jurisdiction over the National Bureau of Standards when Dr. Allen Astin, its director, was dismissed last March. Many scientists protested and Dr. Astin was finally reinstated. Schaffer's resignation said "I find it necessary to leave my official post". Weeks thanked him for a "substantial contribution" to the commerce department.

5.

Here in New York today, Senator McCarthy had an attorney thrown out of a hearing on communism. The Senator accused Attorney Abraham Unger of filibustering instead of answering accusations that he was once a party functionary... defined as "a dedicated person and professional revolutionary." The Senator said: "I will not allow a Communist lawyer to use this room as a transmission belt."

In Germany today the Western allies again offered to lift their restrictions on free travel throughout all Germany--if the Communists lift their restrictions. And now for a recorded report from Berlin, here is Edward R. Murrow.

(runs 7;20)

And This is LL. I'll be back in a moment with a pause to the news. But first Bob Dixon

footnote

When Secretary of State Dulles was informed today that [redacted] POLAND'S Alternate UN, Delegate Dr Korowicz ~~is seeking~~ political asylum in this country , Mr. Dulles said it reminded him of a passage in his U.N. speech yesterday. [redacted] Then Mr. Dulles ~~said~~ referred to the Soviet Satellites and: "Repressive measures inevitably lead to resentment and bitterness, and perhaps something more. That does not come about through artificial stimulation, but because the Creator endowed all human beings with a spark of [redacted] spiritual life."

~~And~~ Thus-as LL Sang my Soul-mate

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Friday, Sep. 18, 1953
7:45-8:00 P.M.

LESUEUR: .... And now for a recorded report from Berlin, here is Edward R. Murrow.

MURROW: THIS IS BERLIN.

Again tonite I take advantage of the opportunity of the presence of most of my European colleagues in Berlin to sit and ask them questions, because they're experts in the various areas in which they work. Tonite it's Dave Schoenbrun, who is based on Paris.

And, Dave, I would like to put to you a very simple question, one which reads in this fashion: Have the French decided that the Germans are reliable allies and friends?

SCHOENBRUN: That's a simple question?

MURROW: Yes.

SCHOENBRUN: No, Ed, they have not decided that the Germans are reliable allies and friends, but they've decided that they must take the risk that they might be. And, as you know, there's a very important difference between those two decisions. The French feel that they have no alternative now but to go ahead with the policy of trusting the Germans - for reasons I think xxxx fairly simple. Tremendous pressure from the United States, for one thing, plus a knowledge by the French themselves that they no longer can solve their own problems in their own way within a narrow national limit. And so they've got to risk the future - living in that united Europe with Germany.

MURROW: Well, does that mean that the French have decided that the Germans are really reliable or that they need them in order to help defend themselves against the Russians?

SCHOENBRUN: They've decided that they need them both to defend themselves against the Russians and to try to build a better European community in which the Germans one day may become reliable. Let me make it clear, the French have no guarantees and feel there are no guarantees that German democracy is now solid and permanent. They've seen the Weimar Republic come and go, they've seen the Germans follow false leaders; there's no guarantee that they won't do it again. Dr. Adenauer, who is highly respected in France, is not a very young man; his career can't go on forever; nobody knows who will take his place. Therefore, the French do not believe the Germans are reliable. They think they can be made so by removing the causes of Germany's false leadership and narrow national egotism.

MURROW: Yes, well, I suppose, of course, there is no guarantee of reliability either in so far as it affects France or Germany, or the United States for that matter, is there?

SCHOENBRUN: Yes, I think there is. For example, the British, to name old friends of yours, are people who've had a fairly good record of reliability thru the century. They've had their bad moments, but you could always count on the British when things got tough. We Americans don't have such a bad record either. The inconstancy of German and of French administrations is something too well known to the Germans and the French themselves to trust them very long.

MURROW: Yes. But, of course, one must always have regard for the fact that Adenauer now presides over the most reliable majority to be found in any parliamentary government in all of Western Europe.

SCHOENBRUN: Well, if that's what you were trying to get me to say, the answer is yes. Reluctantly, I must admit this is the only stable government in Europe. But may I say, Ed, that altho I live in a country, France, which suffers lamentably from instability, I am not one who believes that stability in itself is a virtue.

MURROW: Well now, David, I would like to ask you one final question, which I must put in blunt fashion because it is one that is put in this way very often in America. The French had the original idea for the European Defense Community, for a European Army. By and large, the French refuse to work and they refuse to pay taxes and they refuse to implement some of the magnificent ideas that their statesmen advance. The Germans are a dynamo, as we know. They're hard-working, inventive and industrious. If the French continue merely to talk unity, a European Defense Community, if they continue to accept American aid without translating it into very concrete action, then the question arises: Are the French worth helping? This is put in a blunt fashion, and I know you may be sensitive on this because you live and work in Paris, but it is a question that is asked at home and I feel obliged to put it to you.

SCHOENBRUN: Well, I'm glad you did, Ed. And, as you know, really I'm not sensitive about it. I live and work in Paris, but I'm still an American and an American observer. My answer to your question is very simply this: The French would no longer be worthy of our support, but we would nonetheless still be compelled to support them. Because support is not given on the basis of worthiness. We aren't rewarding France by our support. We are taking care of ourselves - at least, I think and hope we are. We Americans have alliances because it furthers the best interests of the United States, not because it furthers the interests of France. If I could do without France, believe me I would do so, willingly and gladly. I've lost patience with them, as many other people have, but I feel, from watching this picture very closely, that it is not in the best interests of the United States to give in to impatience. We simply cannot do without France, unless we're willing to drop our entire European policy, our entire concept of security, and go back to what they call the peripheral policy of ... another form of isolationism. For example, Ed, the Germans are hard-working, they're dynamic. Fine! That's great! But can we build a German army to defend Europe without the consent of the French? Don't you remember ...

MURROW: Now, wait a minute. There is another question involved here, which I think has been lost sight of very largely in America. When we say "can we build a German army", the answer to that is no. The only people who can build a German army are the Germans.

SCHOENBRUN: Let me put it this way: Can we count on supporting the Germans as our main ally, instead of the French, because the French aren't trustworthy? Again my answer is no. The main lines of communication of the Western world run thru France. The defense of Europe is also the defense of the Mediterranean. General Eisenhower, General Gruenther, the present Supreme Commander, every military man I know, say that we cannot have a proper defense of Europe on the ground, without vital air bases in North Africa. It happens to be French territory. So, whether we like the French or are patient or impatient with them doesn't affect the main question. We cannot do without the participation of the French in NATO, we cannot do without our bases in France, we cannot try to help a renaissant Germany unless the French permit us to do that. They have ways of sabotaging it if they want to. Therefore, I say if we believe in global security, based upon the American and Allied presence inside Europe, on the Continent, as an answer to Russian expansion, we've got to do it with the French and we've got to be patient with them. I know it's a trying thing - but there it is. If, however, you say it's not worth it, then I'll say okay, fine. But then scrap your whole policy; say so honestly; go back to isolationism, if that's the choice of the American people and American leaders. It's an alternative, sure! But you can't have it both ways. You cannot have a European unity policy, defense in Europe, based on Germany, to the exclusion of France. It just isn't possible.

MURROW: I've been sitting here in Berlin, a relatively peaceful island, talking with my colleague from Paris, David Schoenbrun.

This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin.

Good Night and Good Luck!

-30-

Ediphone trans./E. Scheiner

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (WITH LARRY LESUEUR)
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

LESUEUR: Good evening everyone. Here's what happened today:

The United States and its allies in Korea have again told the Communists: we are opposed to bringing neutrals into the Korean political conference. The United States, speaking for all the allies, says "There is nothing further to add." The U.N. has made its decision on the composition of the conference. And we continue to await the Communist reply to our proposal for a date and a place.

A Communist correspondent in Korea says that ten "allied" war prisoners will be released by the Communists later tonight. He did not indicate their nationality. But he told American reporters these ten have changed their minds about staying with the enemy. And he said the only other allied prisoners still held in North Korea are "a handful which won't go back."

At the United Nations today, the French delegation walked out during an attack by Pakistan's foreign minister on the French policy in North Africa. And a member of the delegation of Communist Poland left his delegation for freedom. Dr. Marek Korowicz, the first alternate on the Polish delegation, has sought sanctuary in this country through officials of Radio Free Europe. Doctor Korowicz told reporters: "Life in Poland was anightmare. I am very happy to be in the free world. For the first time in seven years I have been able to say what I truly think." The doctor told reporters: "I want to join the free Poles abroad to work with them for the liberation of my homeland and all peoples oppressed by Soviet Communism." Korowicz has no family in Communist Poland.

In Chicago today, Republican leaders from 21 midwestern states heard a message read from the President expressing confidence that the meeting would bring important benefits to the party and to the nation. Then the delegates heard the meeting's keynoter. Senator Ferguson of Michigan says "as long as the radical eggheads control the Democratic party, as they do now, this country cannot survive another Democratic administration". Another speaker, Postmaster

General Summerfield, attacked the Democrats as "Communist coddlers." And he called President Eisenhower a man of destiny who has brought a cleaner and clearer atmosphere to Washington. Summerfield said the President is "our greatest natural resource - our greatest deterrent to World War Three."

In New Hampshire, Republican Senator Bridges said today that thanks to the Administration's policies "the honest dollar has come into its own. He predicted "a new era of prosperity in New England and throughout the nation."

In Washington, Republican leaders made it known that Warren L. Stephenson, who figured in a Congressional investigation of influence peddling, has been removed from all connections with the party in the District of Columbia. Stephenson, who has acknowledged he soughtafour percent fee from a manufacturer, has been removed from the district's Republican committee and its finance committee, and has been replaced as secretary of the Republican Club of the District.

Commerce Secretary Weeks tonight announced the resignation of Assistant Commerce Secretary Craig R. Shaeffer. Mr. Shaeffer had jurisdiction over the National Bureau of Standards when Dr. Allen Astin, its director, was dismissed last March. Many scientists protested and Dr. Astin was finally reinstated. Schaeffer's resignation said: "I find it necessary to leave my official post". Weeks thanked him for a "substantial contribution" to the commerce department.

Here in New York today, Senator McCarthy had an attorney thrown out of a hearing on Communism. The Senator accused Attorney Abraham Unger of "filibustering" instead of answering accusations that he was once a party functionary defined as "a dedicsted person and professional revolutionary." The Senator said: "I will not allow a Communist lawyer to use this room as a transmission belt."

In Germany today the Western allies again offered to lift their restrictions on free travel throughout all Germany - if the Communists lift their restrictions.

And now for a recorded report from Berlin, here is Edward R. Murrow.

MURROW: THIS IS BERLIN.

Again tonite I take advantage of the opportunity of the presence of most of my European colleagues in Berlin to sit and ask them questions, because they're experts in the various areas in which they work. Tonight it's Dave Schoonbrun who is based on Paris.

And Dave, I would like to put to you a very simple question, one which reads in this fashion: Have the French decided that the Germans are reliable allies and friends?

SCHOENBRUN: That's a simple question?

MURROW: Yes.

SCHOENBRUN: No, Ed, they have not decided that the Germans are reliable allies and friends, but they've decided that they must take the risk that they might be. And, as you know, there's a very important difference between those two decisions. The French feel that they have no alternative now but to go ahead with the policy of trusting the Germans - for reasons I think fairly simple. Tremendous pressure from the United States, for one thing, plus a knowledge by the French themselves that they no longer can solve their own problems in their own way within a narrow national limit. And so they've got to risk the future - living in that united Europe with Germany.

MURROW: Well, does that mean that the French have decided that the Germans are really reliable or that they need them in order to help defend themselves against the Russians?

SCHOENBRUN: They've decided that they need them both to defend themselves against the Russians and to try to build a better European community in which the Germans one day may become reliable. Let me make it clear, the French have no guarantees and feel there are no guarantees that German democracy is now solid and permanent. They've seen the Weimar Republic come and go, they've seen the Germans follow false leaders; there's no guarantee that they won't do it again. Dr. Adenauer, who is highly respected in France, is not a very young man; his career can't go on forever;

nobody knows who will take his place. Therefore, the French do not believe the Germans are reliable. They think they can be made os by removing the causses of Germany's false leadership and narrow national egotism.

MURROW: Yes, well, I suppose, of course, there is no guarantee of reliability either in so far as it affects France or Germany or the United States for that matter, is there?

SCHOENBRUN: Yes, I think there is. For example, the British, to name old friends of yours, are people who've had a fairly good record of reliability through the century. They've had their bad moments, but you could always count on the British when things got tough. We Americans don't have such a bad record either. The inconstancy of German and of French administrations is something too well known to the Germans and the French themselves to trust them very long.

MURROW: Yes. But of course, one must always have regard for the fact that Adenauer now presides over the most reliable majority to be found in any parliamentary government in all of Western Europe.

SCHOENBRUN: Well, if that's what you were trying to get me to say, the answer is yes. Reluctantly, I must admit this is the only stable government in Europe. But may I say, Ed, that although I live in a country, France, which suffers lamentably from instability, I am not one who believes that stability in itself is a virtue.

MURROW: Well now, David, I would like to ask you one final question, which I must put in blunt fashion because it is one that is put in this way very often in America. The French had the original idea for the European Defense Community, for a European Army. By and large, the French refuse to work and they refuse to pay taxes and they refuse to implement some of the magnificent ideas that their statesmen advance. The Germans are a dynamo, as we know. They're hard-working inventive and industrious. If the French continue merely to talk unity, a European Defense Community, if they continue to accept American aid without translating it into very concrete action, then the question arises: Are the French worth helping? This is put in a blunt fashion, and I know you may be sensitive on this because you live and work in Paris, but it is a question that is asked at home and I feel obliged to put it to you.

SCHOENBRUN: Well, I'm glad you did, Ed. And, as you know, really I'm not sensitive about it. I live and work in Paris, but I'm still an American and an American observer. My answer to your question is very simply this: The French would no longer be worthy of our support, but we would nonetheless still be compelled to support them. Because support is not given on the basis of worthiness. We aren't rewarding France by our support. We are taking care of ourselves - at least, I think and hope we are. We Americans have alliances because it furthers the best interests of the United States, not because it furthers the interests of France. If I could do without France, believe me I would do so, willingly and gladly. I've lost patience with them, as many other people have, but I feel, from watching this picture very closely, that it is not in the best interests of the United States to give in to impatience. We simply cannot do without France, unless we're willing to drop our entire European policy, our entire concept of security, and go back to what they call the peripheral policy of another form of isolationism. For example, Ed, the Germans are hard-working, they're dynamic. Fine! That's great! But can we build a German army to defend Europe without the consent of the French? Don't you remember...

MURROW: Now, wait a minute. There is another question involved here, which I think has been lost sight of very largely in America. When we say "can we build a German army," the answer to that is no. The only people who can build a German army are the Germans.

SCHOENBRUN: Let me put it this way: Can we count on supporting the Germans as our main ally, instead of the French, because the French aren't trustworthy? Again my answer is no. The main lines of communication of the Western world run through France. The defense of Europe is also the defense of the Mediterranean. General Eisenhower, General Gruenther, the present Supreme Commander, every military man I know, say that we cannot have a proper defense of Europe on the ground, without vital air bases in North Africa. It happens to be French territory. So, whether we like the French or are patient or impatient with them doesn't affect the main question. We cannot do without the participation of the French in NATO, we cannot do without our basesin France, we cannot try to help a renaissant Germany unless the French permit us to do that. They have ways of sabotaging it if they want to. Therefore, I say if we believe in global security, based upon the American and Allied presence inside Europe, on the Continent, as an answer to Russian expansion, we've got to do it with the French and we've got to be patient with them. I know it's a trying think - but there it is. If, however, you say it's not worth it, then I'll say okay, fine. But then scrap your whole policy; say so honestly; go back to isolationism, if that's the choice of the American people and American leaders. It's an alternative, sure! But you can't have it both ways. You cannot have a European unity policy, defense in Europe, based on Germany, to the exclusion of France. It just isn't possible.

MURROW: I've been sitting here in Berlin, a relatively peaceful island, talking with my colleague from Paris, David Schoenbrun.

This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin.

Good Night and Good Luck!

LESUEUR: And this is Larry Lesueur. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news. But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: When Secretary of State Dulles was informed today that Poland's alternate U.N. Delegate, Dr. Korowicz is seeking political asylum in this country, Mr. Dulles said it reminded him of a passage in his U.N. speech yesterday. Mr. Dulles then referred to the Soviet satellites and said: "Repressive measures inevitably lead to resentment and bitterness and perhaps something more. That does not come about through artificial stimulation, but because the Creator endowed all human beings with a spark of spiritual life."

This is Larry Lesueur saying goodnight.

monday,

21 Sept 1953 - 7/45 - Lesueur -

Good evening everyone. Here's what happened today:

The President told New England Republicans there is no sacrifice too hard for us to bear, in defense of our freedom. Speaking in Boston, Mr. Eisenhower said: "We know enemies of freedom to be equipped with the most terrible weapons of destruction. We know that we can meet them with only one answer. There is no sacrifice..no labor, no tax, no service.. too hard for us to bear, to support a logical and necessary defense of our freedom." The President told the party members that under his Administration so far, there has been true bi-partisanship in international affairs..the Korean fighting has been ended... we have given the world, testimony of our allegiance, to the cause of free peoples everywhere. Mr. Eisenhower also said, his Administration has lifted "stifling artificial controls" from our economy. used the government's authority to steady farm prices... and reduced government expenditures by billions. He said the Republican party, is a "magnificent means, through which countless thousands of devoted citizens can co-operate in conquering problems, that beset free men everywhere."

In St. Louis, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor reported, that the record of the 83rd Congress to date ~~confirms the~~

~~[illegible]~~ion

proves that "the basic policies of our government are being overhauled, to meet the desires of Big Business. And A.F of L. President Meany, in the keynote address to the union's convention, charged that under the Eisenhower administration "human values have very definitely been submerged to the material welfare of the greedy few." ~~Meany said he recently received, together with a letter mailed from the White House, a pmapmhelt prepared by the National Association of Manufacturers, praising the Administration's policies. He said he's sure the N.A.M. can afford a three cent stamp but maybe he added-- "they feel they ha e taken over Washington to such an extent they are now an official part of the government."~~

The American Bankers Association is holding its convention in Washington. And today Housing Administrator Cole, told the bankers that new home construction has dropped off. And unless the flow of private mortgage credit is sustained, COLE SAID: "direct government action may be necessary." Cole said the Administration is concerned by a sharp drop in applications for federal mortgage insurance.. a possible sign of further decline in the start of new housing. Another speaker, Philadelphia

Banker Casimir A. Sienkiewicz said: "We're in for some minor business drops." He said he guessed the Federal Reserve index on industrial production will go down from five to ten per cent.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen announce [redacted] they'll demand a 37-and-a-half-cents an hour wage increase from every railroad in the country. Present [redacted] contracts for the union's 215-thousand members expire on October first.

At the United Nations today, Andrie Vishinsky [redacted] again demanded an immediate and unconditional prohibition on the manufacture of atomic and hydrogen bombs... [redacted]

Again Vishinsky demanded: a one-third cut in armaments for the Big Five powers.. a disarmament conference.. the elimination of American bases on foreign soil. A spokesman for the American delegation said, of the Vishinsky speech "It was a rambling rehash of what we've heard many times before." Vishinsky also again demanded [redacted] that neutrals be admitted to the Korean political conference. And he accused Secretary of State Dulles of being "intolerant" in opposing the seating of India at [redacted] That conference.

In Korea today, a North Korean jet pilot flew a Russian Mig to our airbase at Kimpo, near Seoul. The Air Force has released few details. But we're told the pilot was a member of "a North Korean unit".. he made a perfect landing.. we'll give him asylum.. reporters are not permitted to see him or his plane. Some pilots and South Korean reporters say the plane was the latest type Mig... the Mig 17. Presumably the pilot sought the 100-thousand dollars, The Far Eastern Commander has offered for the first Mig delivered to us intact. Yes, he'll get it. Now we expect the Communists to protest the incident. Today they told us they "never captured" most of the three thousand allied troops we have reason to believe are still in their hands. (if they are not dead.) We called the enemy reply: "totally unsatisfactory and unacceptable." We insist the Communists had these men in custody at one time.. and we want to know what's happened to them.

In Europe today, the French accepted a West German proposal to confer on outstanding European problems. It will be a major attempt to end disagreements between the two countries.

And in East Germany, Communist Boss Ulbricht has told the workers of East Germany: work harder, produce more, and in many industries you must take less pay. To back up their demands the Communists placed

TIME FOR ONE MORE NEWS ITEM.

~~COLO BOSTON~~

~~WASHINGTON, SEPT. 21. (UP)~~--CHAIRMAN ~~EUGENE D. MILLIKIN (R-COLO.)~~ MILLIKAN OF THE SENATE FINANCE COMMITTEE SAID TONIGHT HE HAS "NO REASON TO BELIEVE" PRESIDENT EISENHOWER'S REFERENCE TO HIGH TAXES WILL FORESTALL TAX CUTS SCHEDULED FOR JANUARY.//

MR. EISENHOWER had SAID IN BOSTON THAT NO SACRIFICE, INCLUDING HIGH TAXES, IS TOO GREAT TO DEFEND THIS COUNTRY'S FREEDOM.

MILLIKIN SAID HE DOES NOT BELIEVE THE STATEMENT MEANS ANY CHANGE IN PRESENT PLANS WHICH WILL PERMIT THE EXCESS PROFITS TAX TO DIE AND A 10 PERCENT INDIVIDUAL INCOME TAX REDUCTION TO GO INTO EFFECT IN JANUARY.

SEN. JOHN SHERMAN COOPER (R-KY.) SAID THAT "IF THE PRESIDENT AND THOSE WHO ARE DIRECTING THE NATIONAL DEFENSE DETERMINE THAT THE NEW WEAPONS THAT RUSSIA HAS DEVELOPED DEMAND ADDITIONAL MILITARY EXPENDITURES, CONGRESS HAS GOT TO PROVIDE THEM."

REP. CLARE E. HOFFMAN (R-MICH.) AID "IT'S ALL RIGHT TO BE HELPFUL TO OTHER PEOPLE." BUT HE SAID THE UNITED STATES SHOULD "NOT BE MISLED" INTO AN ATTEMPT TO SUPPORT THE ENTIRE FREE WORLD AND "DESTROY OURSELVES"

eight of their officials on trial. They're charged with letting coal production flop. The Council of Europe, meeting in Strasburg, today heard British Laborite Denis Healey charged that the United States is "using merciless pressure" on her European allies to bring the European army into being.

Ambassador to Italy Clare Booth Luce said today her job would be much easier.. and Italy's future brighter.. "if some answer could be found to Italy's problem of overpopulation." In a U. S. News and world report interview Mrs. Luce said the liberalization of American trade, with other countries would also help Italy's economy.

In Washington today, Senator McCarthy told reporters, his committee has been checking reports that a man NOW in a non-Communist European country, claims to be Lavrenty Beria, the former chief of Russia's Secret police. This man is supposed to have escaped from Russia TO SEEK Sanctuary in this country. McCarthy says he's interested to know, if this is all true. No comment from the State Department. X and (this is LL.. I'll be back etc with a footnote to the News - Bud

And Now, here is a report from West Berlin Germany recorded tonight by Edrward R. Murrow: //

But just a word from Bob Dixon

The President today presented an award to a farmer who had successfully turned his eroded pasture land Back to fertility again. President Eisenhower said - "This award is intended to teach people to leave land in better condition than when they got it. and he added How much more important it is to leave the principles of sound government, or human dignity and freedom which we inherited from our forebears, better than when we found it."

This is LL saying goodnite!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

LARRY LE SUEUR

Monday, September 21, 1953
7:45-8:00 p.m.

LE SUEUR: ..... And, now, here's a report from West Germany recorded tonight by Edward R. Murrow.

MURROW: This is Berlin! For nine years in London, before, during and after the war, my partner, Janet Murrow, was with me. She has not been in Berlin since before the war, but she spent the last ten days here and I have asked her tonight to give you her impressions of Berlin after a few days of looking at it. Janet!

MRS. MURROW: Berlin is a city of contrasts. Material poverty and wealth of spirit live here. There are many unemployed. People are huddled together in too few rooms. The other day, when walking down the street with a friend, we were approached by a little old lady dressed in nondescript black. My friend gave her some money and I remarked that earlier in the day I had refused a woman who had asked me for money. She replied: "Oh, I always give them something, even fifty fennigs." They're so poor and there aren't many ways in which they can earn money, but the wealth of spirit, that is another thing again. Berliners are proud of the struggle which they are making for existence. They've proud of the rebuilding they've done. The uprisings of June 17 have given those who love freedom cause to straighten their shoulders and lift their heads.

As Ed has said, this is my first sight of Berlin since the war. During the World War 11 we lived in London and I do know what it's like to be bombed and I know that ... the damage that a bomb can do, but I didn't know that the kind of bombs we had at that time could make a city so unrecognizable. Block after block in the center of Berlin has been flattened. If you were dropped into the middle of the city without a guide you'd think yourself lost, wandering in a nightmare. Acres of rubble stretch before you. When the wind blows sandy brick dust fills your eyes. The strange things which always happen in a bombing happens here, too, - a chimney left standing where once a house surrounded it, the shell of a house gaping open to the sky, the side of a house torn off to expose fireplace, weatherbeaten tapestry, or some other indication of life now gone. Apparently no part of the city escaped damage. Residential Dahlem, with its big residences also has its skeletons to mark its suffering. It's surprising that so many people lived through this devastation of a city, but they did and they've made their homes wherever there were roofs to cover them. Often you see a large apartment house where all the walls had been destroyed except in the center of the building and there the apartments are being lived in. At the windows there are spotless white curtains and window boxes filled with bright red geraniums. The Germans love flowers and now they add almost the only spot of color in a drab life. Often, if it weren't for the window boxes, you'd never guess that anyone lived in some of the damaged buildings.

Yesterday, when I went to the center where food is being given out to the East Berliners, I noticed that in that place there was very little difference between the dress of easterners and westerners. There is no longer any attempt at a color scheme; a purple sweater may be worn with a blue and orange dress. The shoes are old and worn. Children's clothes are often knitted from odd scraps of wool. It is a long time now that the Berliners have been poor. In the afternoon, along the Kurfuerstendamm where there are quite a few handsome new shops, by the way, the cafes are full of people. There's money enough for a cup of coffee and perhaps a cake, but we're told that Berlin's night clubs have only one busy night. That's Saturday night. One of the things which Berliners, young and old, and especially the women, mind is not being able to get out of the city. They suffer terribly from claustrophobia and I've been told that nervous breakdowns among the women are not uncommon. It is, indeed, a city of marked contrasts. There are people who have roofs over their heads and refugees who haven't even that; people who are poor and people, like us Americans, for instance, who, through circumstances, are not. There are people who are listless and numbed by their experiences and ps those who work long hours and industriously that their families may live. There are the old who remember so much and the twenty-year-olds, one of whom said to me: "You were here in the thirties? Those were the good times." And there are the schoolboys with their eager faces and their healthy bodies, playing soccer among the ruins in a space leveled by the bombing. It is all something to have seen, the varied strength of people in the face of tremendous difficulties.

MURROW: That was Janet Murrow recording from Berlin. Goodnight and good luck!

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (WITH LARRY LESUEUR)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

LESUEUR: Good evening everyone. Here's what happened today:

The President told New England Republicans there is no sacrifice too hard for us to bear in defense of our freedom. Speaking in Boston, Mr. Eisenhower said: "We know enemies of freedom to be equipped with the most terrible weapons of destruction. We know that we can meet them with only one answer. There is no sacrifice, no labor, no tax, no service too hard for us to bear to support a logical and necessary defense of our freedom." The President told the party members that under his Administration so far there has been true bi-partisanship in international affairs - the Korean fighting has been ended - we have given the world testimony of our allegiance to the cause of free peoples everywhere. Mr. Eisenhower also said his Administration has lifted "stifling artificial controls" from our economy - used the government's authority to steady farm prices and reduced government expenditures by billions. He said the Republican party is a "magnificent means through which countless thousands of devoted citizens can co-operate in conquering problems that beset free men everywhere."

In St. Louis, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor reported that the record of the 83rd Congress to date proves that "the basic policies of our government are being overhauled to meet the desires of Big Business. And AFL President Meany, in the keynote address to the union's convention, charged that under the Eisenhower administration "human values have very definitely been submerged to the material welfare of the greedy few."

The American Bankers Association is holding its convention in Washington. And today Housing Administrator Cole told the bankers that new home construction has dropped off. And unless the flow of private mortgage credit is sustained Cole said: "direct government action may be necessary." Cole said the Administration is concerned by a sharp drop in applications for federal mortgage insurance - a possible sign of further decline in the start of new housing. Another speaker, Philadelphia Banker Casimir A. Sienkiewicz said: "We're in for some minor business drops." He said he guessed the Federal Reserve index on industrial production will go down from five to ten percent.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen announce they'll demand a 37-and-a half cents an hour wage increase from every railroad in the country. Present contracts for the union's 215-thousand members expire on October first.

At the United Nations today, Andrie Vishinsky again demanded an immediate and unconditional prohibition on the manufacture of atomic and hydrogen bombs. Again Vishinsky demanded: a one-third cut in armaments for the Big Five powers, a disarmament conference - the elimination of American bases on foreign soil. A spokesman for the American delegation said of the Vishinsky speech: "It was a rambling rehash of what we've heard many times before." Vishinsky also again demanded that neutrals be admitted to the Korean political conference. And he accused Sec etary of State Dulles of being "intolerant" in opposing the seating of India at that conference.

In Korea today a North Korean jet pilot flew a Russian Mig to our airbase at Kimpo, near Seoul. The Air Force has released few details. But we're told the pilot was a member of "a North Korean unit" - he made a perfect landing - we'll give him asylum - reporters are not permitted to see him or his plane. Some pilots and South Korean reporters say the plane was the latest type Mig - the Mig 17. Presumably the pilot sought the 100-thousand dollars, the Far Eastern commander has offered for the first Mig delivered to us intact. If so, he'll get it. Now we expect the Communists to protest the incident. Today they told us they "never captured" most of the three thousand allied troops we have reason to believe are still in their hands - if they are not dead. We called the enemy reply: "totally unsatisfactory and unacceptable." We insist the Communists had these men in custody at one time and we want to know what's happened to them.

In Europe today, the French accepted a West German proposal to confer on outstanding European problems. It will be a major attempt to end disagreements between the two countries.

And in East Germany, Communist Boss Ulbricht has told the workers of East Germany: work harder, produce more, and in many industries you must take less pay. To back up their demands the Communists placed eight of their officials on trial. They're charged with letting coal production flop. The Council of Europe, meeting in Strasburg, today heard British Laborite Denis Healey charge that the United States is "using merciless pressure" on her European allies to bring the European army into being.

Ambassador to Italy Clare Booth Luce said today her job would be much easier - and Italy's future brighter - "if some answer could be found to Italy's problem of overpopulation." In a "U.S. News and world report interview Mrs. Luce said the liberalization of American trade with other countries would also help Italy's economy.

In Washington today, Senator McCarthy told reporters his committee has been checking reports that a man now in a non-Communist European country, claims to be Lavrenty Beria, the former chief of Russia's secret police. This man is supposed to have escaped from Russia to seek sanctuary in this country. McCarthy says he's interested to know if this is all true. No comment from the State Department.

Chairman Millikan of the Senate Finance Committee said tonight he has "no reason to believe" President Eisenhower's reference to high taxes will forestall tax cuts scheduled for January.

Mr. Eisenhower had said in Boston that no sacrifice, including high taxes, is too great to defend this country's freedom.

Millikin said he does not believe the statement means any change in present plans which will permit the excess profits tax to die and a 10 percent individual income tax reduction to go into effect in January.

Senator John Sherman Cooper said that "if the President and those who are directing the national defense determine that the new weapons that Russia has developed demand additional military expenditures, Congress has got to provide them."

Representative Clare E. Hoffman said "it's all right to be helpful to other people." But he said the United States should "not be misled" into an attempt to support the entire free world and "destroy ourselves"

And now, here is a report from Berlin recorded tonight by Edward R. Murrow:

MURROW: This is Berlin! For nine years in London, before, during and after the war, my partner, Janet Murrow, was with me. She has not been in Berlin since before the war, but she spent the last ten days here and I have asked her tonight to give you her impressions of Berlin after a few days of looking at it. Janet!

MRS. MURROW: Berlin is a city of contrasts. Material poverty and wealth of spirit live here. There are many unemployed. People are huddled together in too few rooms. The other day, when walking down the street with a friend, we were approached by a little old lady dressed in nondescript black. My friend gave her some money and I remarked that earlier in the day I had refused a woman who had asked me for money. She replied: "Oh, I always give them something, even fifty fennigs." They're so poor and there aren't many ways in which they can earn money, but the wealth of spirit, that is another thing again. Berliners are proud of the struggle which they are making for existence. They're proud of the rebuilding they've done. The uprisings of June 17 have given those who love freedom cause to straighten their shoulders and lift their heads.

As Ed has said, this is my first sight of Berlin since the war. During World War II we lived in London and I do know what it's like to be bombed and I know that the damage a bomb can do, but I didn't know that the kind of bombs we had at that time could make a city so unrecognizable. Block after block in the center of Berlin has been flattened. If you were dropped into the middle of the city without a guide you'd think yourself lost, wandering in a nightmare.

Acres of rubble stretch before you. When the wind blows sandy brick dust fills your eyes. The strange things which always happen in a bombing happens here too - a chimney left standing where once a house surrounded it, the shell of a house gaping open to the sky, the side of a house torn off to expose fireplace, weatherbeaten tapestry, or some other indication of life now gone. Apparently no part of the city escaped damage. Residential Dahlen with its big residences also has its skeletons to mark its suffering. It's surprising that so many people lived through this devastation of a city, but they did and they've made their homes wherever there were roofs to cover them. Often you see a large apartment house where all the walls had been destroyed except in the center of the building and there the apartments are being lived in. At the windows there are spotless white curtains and window boxes filled with bright red geraniums. The Germans love flowers and now they add almost the only spot of color in a drab life. Often, if it weren't for the window boxes, you'd never guess that anyone lived in some of the damaged buildings.

Yesterday, when I went to the center where food is being given out to the East Berliners, I noticed that in that place there was very little difference between the dress of easterners and westerners. There is no longer any attempt at a color scheme; a purple sweater may be worn with a blue and orange dress. The shoes are old and worn. Children's clothes are often knitted from odd scraps of wool. It is a long time now that the Berliners have been poor. In the afternoon, along the Kurfuerstendamm where there are quite a few handsome new shops, by the way, the cafes are full of people. There's money enough for a cup of coffee and perhaps a cake, but we're told that Berlin's night clubs have only one busy night. That's Saturday night. One of the things which Berliners, young and old, and especially the women, mind is not being able to get out of the city. They suffer terribly from claustrophobia and I've been told that nervous breakdowns among the women are not uncommon. It is, indeed, a city of marked contrasts. There are people who have roofs over their heads and refugees who haven't even that; people who are poor and people, like us Americans, for instance, who, through circumstances, are not. There are people who are listless and numbed by their experiences and those who work long hours and industriously that their families may live. There are the old who remember so much and the twenty-year-olds, one of whom said to me: "You were here in the thirties? Those were the good times." And there are the schoolboys with their eager faces and their healthy bodies, playing soccer among the ruins in a space leveled by the bombing. It is all something to have seen, the varied strength of people in the face of tremendous difficulties.

MURROW: That was Janet Murrow recording from Berlin.

Goodnight and good luck!

LESUEUR: And this is Larry Lesueur. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news, but first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: The President today presented an award to a farmer who had successfully turned his eroded pasture land back to fertility again. President Eisenhower said: "This award is intended to teach people to leave land in better condition than when they go it and he added, how much more important it is to leave the principles of sound government, or human dignity and freedom which we inherited from our forebears better than when we found it."

This is Larry Lesueur saying goodnight!

Tuesday - Sept 22, 1953 Lesson 7/41

Good evening everyone. Here's what happened today:

The White House says, ~~that~~ the President has not made any decision, on suggestions or detailed recommendations, for changing the Taft-Hartley law.

The White House announcement was made, after former Labor Secretary Durkin, told the A.F. of L. convention in St. Louis that the President personally broke his word to Durkin on proposed changes in the law. Durkin said, that in August the President promised to support a set of amendments. ... then, three weeks later, said he couldn't go along with the changes. [redacted] Durkin noted, in his address, that he still has the warmest personal feelings of friendship for Mr. Eisenhower.

The Federation today voted to expel its 60-thousand member Longshoremen's Union. Despite a last minute plea by Joseph P. Ryan, president of the Longshoremen, the convention charged that his union has permitted "gangsters, racketeers and thugs" to become ~~attached to the union~~ associated with it. and so destroyed its integrity, effectiveness and trade union character.

~~One of the speakers to address the convention today, Democratic Senator Symington of Missouri charged that we are falling [illegible] behind Russia's build-up of air power because of cuts the Administration has made in air force funds. Symington said "If we are not going to have enough airpower for our security, let us decide tell us about it."~~

For the President, back in Washington, this was a busy day. He told a 17-man commission appointed to work out tariff recommendations, that our economic health, and that of the free world, depends to a large extent on our success in finding an "acceptable" way to promote world trade. He urged the commission members [redacted] TO follow one guiding principle: "What is best, in the national security."

The White House announced that Adlai Stevenson has accepted an invitation to lunch with the President on October first. And the President asked the American people to send winter clothing to the people of East Germany. West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer has requested Mr. Eisenhower's help in clothing the people of the communist-controlled part of his country ~~of Germany~~. The President said he is sure our people will "gladly and liberally" respond..through private relief agencies. The Federal government had sponsored the relief food campaign for East Germans.

Mr. Eisenhower told the American Bankers convention in Washington that they must seek sound policies for "all Americans--not just one class, group or segment, but for all." [redacted]d a tremendous [redacted] help in selling and distributing government savings bonds.

And Secretary of Agriculture Benson told the bankers that our farm policy should drift away from what he called "centralization of power and undue dependence on government." He said bankers can help strengthen the rural economy.

[redacted] Treasury Secretary Humphrey told the bankers that the scheduled ten per cent income tax cut "will" take place at the end of the year. He also said [redacted] the Administration will not request a renewal of the excess profits tax which expires at the end of the year. Humphrey also emphasized the need of caution in cutting federal taxes and defense expenditures. He said "There is a real possibility of an atomic Pearl Harbor hanging directly over our heads." [redacted] the "hope" of cutting taxes and spending but "the [redacted] for caution [redacted]d planning and assurance that such cuts are justified is paramount."

Humphrey said Russia's possession of the hydrogen bomb is a "great and really important" reason why it's difficult to cut expenditures radically.

[redacted]

At the United Nations today, both a committee and the General Assembly defeated Russia's move to reopen debate on who should attend the Korean political conference. And Ambassador Lodge, in a surprise move, suggested that the communist demand to permit neutrals to attend, should be solved at the Korean conference itself after it gets underway. [redacted]

That North Korean flyer who yesterday brought his Russian Mig into an American airbase near Seoul said today the Communists have been flying jets and other planes into Korea..since the armistice was signed. This is a violation of the armistice terms. [redacted]

The Communists made it known today, that they have 23 Americans prisoners who do not want to go home. And a Red reporter says he is certain American "explainers" will have little success trying to convince these men to return to their homes.

In the Soviet Union today, there was a new purge in the Republic of Georgia, the birthplace of the late premier Stalin and former Police Chief Beria. Both the prime minister and the secretary of the Georgian communist central committee were replaced. The premier had only held the job for five months.

A Polish military court in Warsaw, today sentenced the Catholic Bishop of Kielce to 12 years in prison. Three other Catholic priests received sentences from eight years up on charges of spying for the Vatican and the United States.

~~There was no news in Washington today on stories that Lavrenti Beria might be hiding in a neutral nation.~~

Federal Judge Harold Medina who heard the nine months trial of the top American Communist leaders today dismissed a 34 month trial of the government's anti-trust action against 17 leading investment banking firms. Judge

Medina said he found no combination, conspiracy and agreement as the government had charged existed in the securities market.

Edward R. Murrow is now somewhere over the Atlantic flying home. Here's a report he recorded FOR YOU from Berlin just before he took off:

(this is LL. I'll e back in a moment with a footnote to the news - (Cue) But first a word from

Bob Dixon.

AND A FINAL WORD FROM EAST BERLIN-

NX155

~~[illegible] COMMUNISTS~~

~~BERLIN, SEPT. 26 -- (UP) -- EAST GERMANY'S~~ The RED REGIME there CLAIMED TONIGHT TO HAVE CRUSHED AN "AMERICAN ESPIONAGE CENTER."

A commie GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCEMENT SAID SEVERAL MEMBERS OF THE ALLEGED American ~~ESPIONAGE~~ spy NETWORK WERE ARRESTED.

~~EARLIER THE REDS SAID A PURGE HAS BEGUN AMONG THE 5,000,000-MEMBER SOVIET ZONE TRADE UNION IN AN APPARENT EFFORT TO OUST ANTI-COMMUNISTS AND STRIKE LEADERS.~~

~~(PICKUP 2ND PGH: THE GOVERNING BOARD, ETC)~~

CS343P

The North Korean pilot who flew to freedom in Korea, seemed surprised when he heard ~~he would get~~ he'd was going to get a one hundred thousand dollar reward. ...~~And~~ But the only time he was at a loss for words, was when reporters asked him what he was going to do with the money.. He said he'd rather NOT answer that question.. But he was eager to explain about the snapshot he tore-up when he first landed...He said it wasn't a picture of his ~~XXXX~~ girl-friend-- Just a photograph of North Korean Premier KIM IL SUNG..

And this is Larry LeSueur saying GOODNITE.

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Tuesday, Sep. 22, 1953
7:45-8:00 P.M.

LESUEUR: Edward R. Murrow is now somewhere over the Atlantic, flying home. Here is a report he recorded for you from Berlin just before he took off.

MURROW: THIS IS BERLIN.

For the last six or seven days, most of the CBS correspondents in Europe have been gathered here in Berlin. And tonite I'm going to take this opportunity to talk with all of them and to put to each one a single question. We have here tonite Howard K. Smith, the chief of our European organization; Richard K. Hottelet, who covers Germany; David Schoenbrun, who is based on Paris; and Alexander Kendrick, who makes his headquarters in Vienna. We're all sitting here in Berlin tonite - and we're going to address ourselves to a single question, one that should concern all Americans, wherever they live. The question is: How does America look from the outside? Not how does it look to you four fellows, but how does it appear to the people with whom you work and live.

And let's start, as we should in all propriety, with our European chief, Howard K. Smith.

SMITH: Well, Ed, the so-called feeling of anti-Americanism, which certainly exists in some degree in Europe and which always has, has taken on a change lately, I think. Before, there used to be loads of rebellion against America because of American leadership, and now the tendency is to rebel in favor of some American leadership. And I think that most people think rather poorly of us right now because they don't feel we're giving the West a lead.

MURROW: That is, we're not dominating them, but we're not even trying to lead them. Is that it?

SMITH: That's it, yes. For example, in Great Britain, where I work, they felt that we should have had some more concrete and conceptive approach to the Churchill proposal - have an immediate meeting, without an agenda and without too much publicity, of the Big Four, not to reach an agreement but to find out what was on one another's minds. And the very strong reaction against that in America gave the impression that we didn't have any ideas, but we didn't like theirs.

MURROW: And that we were even reluctant to argue with the Russians, is that it?

SMITH: Yes.

MURROW: Well now, let's see what Dick Hottelet, who lives and works in Germany, has to say about this.

HOTTELET: Well, the United States appear, I think, in the average German's mind as a benevolent giant. He has probably more to thank the United States for in the last six or seven years than any other Western European nation, because the main sources of friction which have disturbed relations between France and the United States and Britain and the United States don't apply to Germany. Germany has no colonial empire which is falling apart; Germany is not involved in any way in the United Nations; it's not involved in Korea directly, it's a spectator on the outside; and, since it's working (?) its way home (?), is preoccupied with its own problems. In the solution of its own problems it has had enormous suppert, both materially -- thru the military presence of American troops -- and also in ~~the~~ ~~xxxxxxxx~~ terms of political expression, from the United States.

MURROW: Now, let's ask David Schoenbrun, who makes his headquarters in Paris, how America looks from the outside, as viewed thru French eyes. David!

SCHOENBRUN: Well, that would depend, Ed, on which French eyes are doing the viewing. For example, to a French importer America looks like a country that makes the most wonderful things - fountain pens that sell for twenty cents, that could flood the French market and make him a lot of profit.

To a French exporter America looks like a country that won't let them sell goods, because we raise trade barriers against them. To a French fashion designer Americans look very much like a rather unimaginative country; the dresses are mass-produced. But to a French shopgirl the American woman is the most glamorous, best-(?)dressed woman in the world because she gets nice dresses very cheaply. So you get very mixed opinions -- jealousy, envy, admiration -- which is, I think, rather typical of the civilized, mature and whole approach that you can expect from the French.

MURROW: Well now, Alex Kendrick lives and works in Vienna - and the Viennese, traditionally, don't take anything very seriously. How do they view the United States, Alex?

KENDRICK: Well, let me say that Vienna is not Austria, Ed. Austria is mostly a mountainous country, with some Alps in it, and of course the Austrian symbolism is a symbolism of mountains. And they see the present situation as two mountains - the United States and the Soviet Union. One of those mountains is thawing out, the ice is melting. The other mountain stands there immutable and frozen.

MURROW: All right. Go ahead and identify your mountains. Let's don't be obscure about this.

KENDRICK: All right.

MURROW: The Russian mountain is thawing out.

KENDRICK: That's right.

MURROW: All right.

KENDRICK: The American mountain is standing there in its icy grandeur and the Russian mountain is thawing out. Well, now the Austrian gimmick on this is that when a thaw starts, it sometimes starts a landslide; and they are afraid, literally, as the Russian mountain thaws out, of a landslide from Russia without anybody to do anything about it. We are standing there, offering a wonderful place for skiing - but you don't grow much on ice.

MURROW: Well, let me see if I can sum this up, as I understand the comments that you have all made. It seems to me that what you're saying is that American policy, to a considerable extent, is misunderstood, not wholly appreciated in Western Europe; but that basically what you're saying is that for the last five or six years American policy has been, to a large extent, dominated by what the Russians have done. That is, they have acted and then we have reacted. But now we're in a period where we're not quite sure what future Russian policy is going to be, althe it appears to be one that leads towards relaxing tension, an easement of the tension in western Europe, and that the result of that is that our policy is unclear, because we now find ourselves in a new position, where we cannot estimate with any degree of accuracy what the Russians are going to do, and therefore the Europeans cannot estimate with any degree of accuracy what we are likely to do. Is that ...

HOTTELET: Yes, that's ...

MURROW: ... roughly right?

HOTTELET: Unpredictable. Benevolent, perhaps, but unpredictable.

MURROW: Right! Well, thank you very much!

This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin.

Good Night and Good Luck!

-30-

Ediphone trans./E. Scheiner

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (WITH LARRY LESUEUR)
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

LESUEUR: Good evening everyone. Here's what happened today:

The White House says the President has not made any decision on suggestions or detailed recommendations for changing the Taft-Hartley law. The White House announcement was made after former Labor Secretary Durkin told the AFL convention in St. Louis that the President personally broke his word to Durkin on proposed changes in the law. Durkin said that in August the President promised to support a set of amendments then, three weeks later said he couldn't go along with the changes. Durkin noted in his address that he still has the warmest personal feelings of friendship for Mr. Eisenhower.

The Federation today voted to expel its 60-thousand member Longshoremen's Union. Despite a last minute plea by Joseph P. Ryan, president of the Longshoremen, the convention charged that his union has permitted "gangsters, racketeers and thugs" to become associated with it and so destroyed its integrity, effectiveness and trade union character.

For the President, back in Washington, this was a busy day. He told a 17-man commission appointed to work out tariff recommendations, that our economic health and that of the free world depends to a large extent on our success in finding an "acceptable" way to promote world trade. He urged the commission members to follow one guiding principle: "What is best in the national security."

The White House announced that Adlai Stevenson has accepted an invitation to lunch with the President on October first. And the President asked the American people to send winter clothing to the people of East Germany. West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer has requested Mr. Eisenhower's help in clothing the people of the communist-controlled part of his country. The President said he is sure our people will "gladly and liberally" respond through private relief agencies. The Federal government has sponsored the relief food campaign for East Germans.

Mr. Eisenhower told the American Bankers convention in Washington that they must seek sound policies for "all Americans - not just one class, group or segment, but for all."

And Secretary of Agriculture Benson told the bankers that our farm policy should drift away from what he called "centralization of power and undue dependence on government." He said bankers can help strengthen the rural economy.

Treasury Secretary Humphrey told the bankers that the scheduled ten percent income tax cut will take place at the end of the year. He also said the Administration will not request a renewal of the excess profits tax which expires at the end of the year. Humphrey also emphasized the need of caution in cutting federal taxes and defense expenditures. He said "There is a real possibility of an atomic Pearl Harbor hanging directly over our heads." Humphrey said Russia's possession of the hydrogen bomb is a "great and really important" reason why its's difficult to cut expenditures radically.

At the United Nations today, both a committee and the General Assembly defeated Russia's move to reopen debate on who should attend the Korean political conference. And Ambassador Lodge, in a surprise move, suggested that the communist demand to permit neutrals to attend, should be solved at the Korean conference itself after it gers underway.

That North Korean flyer who yesterday brought his Russian Mig into an American airbase near Seoul said today the Communists have been flying jets and other planes into Korea since the armistice was signed. This is a violation of the armistice terms.

The Communists made it known today that they have 23 American prisoners who do not want to go home. And a Red reporter says he is certain American "explainers" will have little success trying to convince these men to return to their homes.

In the Soviet Union today, there was a new purge in the Republic of Georgia, birthplace of the late premier Stalin and former Police Chief Beria. Both the prime minister and the secretary of the Georgian communist central committee were replaced. The premier had held the job for only five months.

A Polish military court in Warsaw today sentenced the Catholic Bishop of Kielce to 12 years in prison. Three other Catholic priests received sentences from eight years up on charges of spying for the Vatican and the United States.

Federal Judge Harold Medina who heard the nine months trial of the top American Communist leaders today dismissed a 34 month trial of the government's anti-trust action against 17 leading investment banking firms. Judge Medina said he found no combination, conspiracy and agreement as the government had charged existed in the securities market.

And a final word from East Berlin: The red regime there claimed tonight to have crushed an "American espionage center." A Communist government announcement said several members of the alleged American spy network were arrested.

Edward R. Murrow is now somewhere over the Atlantic, flying home. Here is a report he recorded for you from Berlin just before he took off.

MURROW: This is Berlin!

For the last six or seven days, most of the CBS correspondents in Europe have been gathered here in Berlin. And tonight I'm going to take this opportunity to talk with all of them and to put to each one a single question. We have here tonight Howard K. Smith, the chief of our European organization; Richard K. Hottelet, who covers Germany; David Schoenbrun, who is based on Paris; and Alexander Kendrick, who makes his headquarters in Vienna. We're all sitting here in Berlin tonight - and we're going to address ourselves to a single question, one that should concern all Americans, wherever they live. The question is: How does America look from the outside? Not how does it look to you four fellows, but how does it appear to the people with whom you work and live.

And let's start, as we should in all propriety, with out European chief, Howard K. Smith.

SMITH: Well, Ed, the so-called feeling of anti-Americanism, which certainly exists in some degree in Europe and which always has, has taken on a change lately, I think. Before, there used to be loads of rebellion against America because of American leadership, and now the tendency is to rebel in favor of some American leadership. And I think that most people think rather poorly of us right now because they don't feel we're giving the West a lead.

MURROW: That is, we're not dominating them, but we're not even trying to lead them, is that it?

SMITH: That's it, yes. For example, in Great Britian, where I work, they felt that we should have had some more concrete and conceptive approach to the Churchill proposal - have an immediate meeting, without an agenda and without too much publicity, of the Big Four, not to reach an agreement but to find out what was on one another's minds. And the very strong reaction against that in America gave the impression that we didn't have any ideas, but we didn't like theirs.

MURROW: And that we were even reluctant to argue with the Russians, is that it?

SMITH: Yes s

MURROW: Well now, let's see what Dick Hottelet, who lives and works in Germany, has to say about this.

HOTTELET: Well, the United States appear, I think, in the average German's mind as a benevolent giant. He has probably more to thank the United States for in the last six or seven years than any other Western European nation, because the main sources of friction which have disturbed relations between France and the United States and Britain and the United States don't apply to Germany. Germany has no colonial empire which is falling apart; Germany is not involved in any way in the United Nations; it's not involved in Korea directly, it's a spectator on the outside; and since it's working its way home, is preoccupied with its own problems. In the solution of its own problems it has had enormous support, both materially - through the military presence of American troops - and also in terms of political expression, from the United States.

MURROW: Now, let's ask David Schoenbrun, who makes his headquarters in Paris, how America looks from the outside, as viewed through French eyes. David!

SCHOENBRUN: Well, that would depend, Ed, on which French eyes are doing the viewing. For example, to a French importer America looks like a country that makes the most wonderful things - fountain pens that sell for twenty cents, that coulf flood the French market and make him a lot of profit. To a French exporter America looks like a country that won't let them sell goods, because we raise trade barriers against them. To a French fashion designer Americans look very much like a rather unimaginative country; the dresses are mass-produced. But to a French shopgirl the American woman is the most glamorous, best-dressed woman in the world because she gets nice dresses very cheaply. So you get very mixed opinions - jealousy, envy, admiration - which is, I think, rather typical of the civilized, mature and whole approach that you can expect from the French.

MURROW: Well now, Alex Kendrick lives and works in Vienna - and the Viennese, traditionally, don't take anything very seriously. How do they view the United States, Alex?

KENDRICK: Well, let me say that Vienna is not Austria, Ed. Austria is mostly a mountainous country, with some Alps in it, and of course the Austrian symbolism is a symbolism of mountains. And they see the present situation as two mountains - the United States and the Soviet Union. One of those mountains is thawing out, the ice is melting. The other mountain stands there immutable and frozen.

MURROW: All right. Go ahead and identify your mountains. Let's don't be obscure about this.

KENDRICK: All right.

MURROW: The Russian mountain is thawing out.

KENDRICK: That's right.

MURROW: All right.

KENDRICK: The American mountain is standing there in its icy grandeur and the Russian mountain is thawing out. Well, now the Austrian gimmick on this is that when a thaw starts, it sometimes starts a landslide; and they are afraid, literally, as the Russian mountain thaws out, of a landslide from Russia without anybody to do anything about it. We are standing there, offering a wonderful place for skiing - but you don't grow much on ice.

MURROW: Well, let me see if I can sum this up, as I understand the comments that you have all made. It seems to me that what you're saying is that American policy, to a considerable extent is misunderstood, not wholly appreciated in Western Europe; but that basically what you're saying is that for the last five or six years American policy has been, to a large extent, dominated by what the Russians have done. That is, they have acted and then we have reacted. But now we're in a period where we're not quite sure what future Russian policy is going to be, although it appears to be one that leads towards relaxing tension, an easement of the tension in Western Europe, and that the result of that is that our policy is unclear, because we now find ourselves in a new position, where we cannot estimate with any degree of accuracy what the Russians are going to do, and therefore the Europeans cannot estimate with any degree of accuracy what we are likely to do. Is that...

HOTTELET: Yes, that's...

MURROW: ...roughly right?

HOTTELET: Unpredictable. Benevolent, perhaps, but unpredictable.

MURROW: Right! Well, thank you very much!

This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin.

Good Night and Good Luck!

LESUEUR: And this is Larry Lesueur. I'll be back in a moment with the footnote to the news, but first Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: The North Korean pilot who flew to freedom in Korea, seemed surprised when he heard he was going to get a one hundred thousand dollar reward. But the only time he was at a loss for words, was when reporters asked him what he was going to do with the money - he said he'd rather not answer that question. But he was eager to explain about the snapshot he tore up when he first landed. He said it wasn't a picture of his girl-friend, just a photograph of North Korean Premier KIM IL SUNG...

Wed Sept. 23, 1953

This is the news:

The President said today that the Taft-Hartley law is "essentially sound".. its enactment was "a substantial contribution" to BETTER labor-management realations. But Mr. Eisenhower feels it has a number of defects and, when a present study is completed, he will ask Congress for changes in January. These views were made known to the American Federation of Labor convention by Vice President Nixon. Mr. Nixon then addressed himself to the firing of former Labor Secretary Durkin. Contrary to Durkin's statement that the President broke his word on changes in the labor law, Mr. Nixon said: There may have been a misunderstanding between the two men, but he does not believe that anyone can claim the President broke his word in this case. Later, Mr. Nixon shook hands with former cabinet member Durkin.. and Durkin said he stands on his speech of yesterday.. that after a three WEEK period the President said he "could not go along" on labor law changes.

The Government announced today that the cost of living has gone up again.. for the sixth straight month. Living costs are now at an all-time high.. 13 per cent above what they had been when the Korean war started. The latest fractional increase was due primarily to an increase in rents and transportation costs. The Bureau of Labor Statistics indicates that the end of federal rent controls last July was a major factor in the rent increase. The new index means that more than a million railroad workers will get a three cents an hour wage increase.

The President had another busy day. He told members of the United States committee for the United Nations: "With all its defects and with all the failures we can chalk up against it, the United Nations still represents the best organized hope to substitute the conference table for the battlefield." And he told the President's Committee on the Physically Handicapped: of all the committee's operating in his name "none engaged the interest of my heart more than this one." The President said no military man could escape deep concern for men disabled in the war. Mr. Eisenhower accepted the resignation of Emmet J. Hughes, an administrative assistant and speech writer, and told him: "I value your judgement and your knowledge of people, their ideals and aspirations and the whole world we live in." Hughes will return to Life Magazine. He told the President he was resigning because of "compelling personal reasons." Tomorrow, the president meets with the National Security Council and his air force advisors..to discuss our defenses against possible atomic or hydrogen bomb attack. In London today, OUR Civil Defense Chief Peterson SAID [redacted] after a European tour THAT he's failed to find a single country that is ready to meet an atomic attack. He said:"Except for the scientists and a handful of other people, the whole world is hiding from the terrible implications of atomic weapons."

The American Bankers Association, meeting in Washington, today unanimously approved a resolution calling on the United States to "open its markets increasingly to foreign goods." [redacted]

The meeting ended with the election as president of Everett D. Reese, of Newark, OHIO.

The A.D.A... Americans for Democratic Action.. prints a statement in its monthly magazine saying "the President has acted as though Congress were the government and he its employe." The magazine says [redacted] the President's campaign promises are seldom referred to, and policy questions are determined by the Congress with little regard to the Administration.

In Korea today, General Anderson, commander of the 5th air force, says we have had "two recent indications" that the Communists moved jet planes into Korea after the armistice. This is a violation of the truce terms. We detected both moves by radar.

Tonight, the Communists turn over to neutral Indian troops, the 23 Americans, and other allied troops, they say do not want to return to their homes.

Major General Dean returned to California today, and told a large welcoming crowd: " I want you to get it out of your heads that I am a hero. I'm not. I'm just a dog-faced soldier."

And we have now formally notified the enemy in Korea that they can raise the question of "neutral" nations participating in the Korean political conference, when that conference gets underway.

India's Prime Minister Nehru wants neutrals to attend. He told his parliament: "It does not seem proper that problems intimately affecting Asia, should be disposed of largely by ignoring Asia."

And the State Department says the sentencing of a Polish Bishop to 12 years in prison on treason charges is a "mockery of justice."

Edward R. Murrow: September 23, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Flying back from ten days in Berlin should provide time enough to reach sound and perhaps sensational conclusions. (But it didn't turn out that way.) The competition in show cases, East against West - a hundred miles inside Soviet-held territory - remains inconclusive. The recovery in the West is remarkable, the re-building impressive -(the food is better than it is in London.) The citizen in West Berlin is relaxed - there are some signs of a return of the old German arrogance -(the West Berliners are cocky.) On Sunday I watched a hundred thousand of them at the Olympic Stadium - a police demonstration. There were only two thousand police there, with another sixteen thousand on duty. They marched and they looked like an army - their close order drill, the manual of arms, were executed with Prussian precision -(which means perfection.) But the crowd was uncertain; the applause was not thunderous; it was restrained, perhaps by memories; but it was a relaxed, good-natured crowd.

In the eastern sector the story is rather different. Over there in the Communist world there has been much re-building. The methods are more primitive than in the West, but it is being done. There is less food in the shops in the east. The clothing is of inferior quality, but the people are better dressed than they were a couple of years ago.

The Communists are making concessions to people who work - more food and clothing, and a little more attention to living conditions.

But these contrasts and comparisons are partial and rather futile. The difference between the east and west in Berlin cannot be told with charts or statistics. You must be there and feel it. For example, the so-called "People's Police", (German communists in Russian-type uniforms,) now travel in pairs - never alone as they did before the spontaneous and leaderless uprising of June 17th. In the west the traffic cops direct traffic, after a fashion. In the east the traffic cop has another cop standing on the corner watching him. The real difference between east and west can be summed up in one word - silence. In the east people don't talk. In the most expensive restaurant over there, where you can get caviar, vodka, champagne and fine food, the talk is in whispers. There is even silence in the bar where people are drinking. When the orchestra plays, they walk to the dance floor without expression, as though fearing that the tune to which they are to dance may tomorrow be declared decadent and capitalistic. There is a sullen, explosive quality about the atmosphere in the eastern sector.

Even though small concessions are being made to the workers, you do not find in the faces of the workers, the reflection of any feeling that this is the "workers' paradise."

Much of the time I spent in the eastern sector was in company with two men who have seen much of war and terror, and whose courage has not been questioned. ~~And~~ We were engaged in the technically illegal business of taking pictures. It is not likely that anything serious would have happened, had we been caught, but it's the uncertainty, the unpredictability that rasps the nerves - that and the silence.

Dr. Peter Zenkl, one-time Lord Mayor of Prague, and after the war deputy Prime Minister of Czechoslovakia, once told me that six months of house arrest under the communists, was a worse experience than the six years he spent in Nazi concentration camps. I now understand a little better what he meant.

Progress on both sides of the sector line has been impressive. The Germans work harder than most people. But neither side has won in this contest of show cases - maybe neither side ever will. But that leaderless revolt in June, when unarmed Germans beat on Russian tanks with their bare fists, and when the Russian troops showed remarkable restraint and discipline, and when the Russians moved thirty thousand troops into the area with precision - these events should cause us to take a long, hard look at our foreign policy. We are pledged to liberate those east Germans and the other satellite nations, by peaceful means. No one has said just how that is to be done. * There are some brave and desperate men over there in the east. Some of those who led in June are dead; but there are others who will try again. The question that confronts us can be simply put: If the time comes when the East German Radio, or Prague, or Warsaw announces that men who seek freedom are fighting for their lives, they will also be asking what we propose to do to help them.

It seems to me that if we are not prepared to play the final card - of force in this contest - which would mean touching off another World War - then we had best stop telling those now behind the Iron Curtain that somehow, sometime, peacefully, we are going to liberate them. Or we should tell them in considerable and reasonable detail how this is to be done. It is a terrible thing to penetrate that silence with a promise, and then fail to perform when the promise is called. It would perhaps be better to remain silent on Merely Report Facts - than to promise more than we are capable of or willing to perform.

We have made bold promises to liberate those unfortunate enough to be living behind the Iron Curtain. But we have not said how this end is to be achieved. For the time being, it might be wise to keep in mind a warning by the Roman Horace that:"Too many promises always lessen confidence." It might be better if we followed Washington's advice:"Be careful to keep your promise ...undertake not what you can not perform."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (WITH LARRY LESUEUR)
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY SEPTEMBER 23, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President said today that the Taft-Hartley law is "essentially sound" - its enactment was "a substantial contribution" to better labor-management relations. But Mr. Eisenhower feels it has a number of defects and, when a present study is completed, he will ask Congress for changes in January. These views were made known to the American Federation of Labor convention by Vice President Nixon. Mr. Nixon then addressed himself to the firing of former Labor Secretary Durkin. Contrary to Durkin's statement that the President broke his word on changes in the labor law, Mr. Nixon said: "There may have been a misunderstanding between the two men, but he does not believe that anyone can claim the President broke his word in this case. Later, Mr. Nixon shook hands with former cabinet member Durkin, and Durkin said he stands on his speech of yesterday - that after a three-week period the President said he "could not go along" on labor law changes.

The Government announced today that the cost of living has gone up again - for the sixth straight month. Living costs are now at an all-time high - 13 percent above what they had been when the Korean war started. The latest fractional increase was due primarily to an increase in rents and transportation costs. The Bureau of Labor Statistics indicates that the end of federal rent controls last July was a major factor in the rent increase. The new index means that more than a million railroad workers will get a three cents an hour wage increase.

The President had another busy day. He told members of the United States committee for the United Nations: "With all its defects and with all the failures we can chalk up against it, the United Nations still represents the best organized hope to substitute the conference table for the battlefield."

And he told the President's Committee on the Physically Handicapped: of all the committee's operating in his name "none engaged the interest of my heart more than this one." The President said no military man could escape deep concern for men disabled in the war. Mr. Eisenhower accepted the resignation of Emmet J. Hughes, an administrative assistant and speech writer, and told him: "I value your judgement and your knowledge of people, their ideals and aspirations and the whole world we live in." Hughes will return to Life Magazine. He told the President he was resigning because of "compelling personal reasons." Tomorrow, the president meets with the National Security Council and his air force advisors - to discuss our defenses against possible atomic or hydrogen bomb attack. In London today, our Civil Defense Chief Peterson said after a European tour that he's failed to find a single country that is ready to meet an atomic attack. He said: "Except for the scientists and a handful of other people the whole world is hiding from the terrible implications of atomic weapons."

The American Bankers Association, meeting in Washington, today unanimously spproved a resolution calling on the United States to "open its markets increasingly to foreign goods."

The meeting ended with the election as president of Everett D. Reese, of Newark, Ohio.

The ADA, Americans for Democratic Action, prints a statement in its monthly magazin saying "the President has acted as though Congress were the government and he its employee." The magazine says the President's campaign promises are seldom referred to, and policy questions are determined by the Congress with little regard to the Administration.

In Korea today, General Anderson, commander of the 5th air force, says we have had "two recent indications" that the Communists moved jet planes into Korea after the armistice. This is a violation of the truce terms. We detected both moves by radar.

Tonight the Communists turn over to neutral Indian troops the 23 Americans, and other allied troops, they say do not want to return to their homes.

Major General Dean returned to California today and told a large welcoming crowd: "I want you to get it out of your heads that I am a hero. I'm not. I'm just a dog-faced soldier."

And we have now formally notified the enemy in Korea that they can raise the question of "neutral" nations participating in the Korean political conference when that conference gets underway.

India's Prime Minister Nehru wants neutrals to attend. He told his parliament: "It does not seem proper that problems intimately affecting Asia should be disposed of largely by ignoring Asia."

And the State Department says the sentencing of a Polish Bishop to 12 years in prison on treason charges is a "mockery of justice."

Flying back from ten days in Berlin should provide time enough to reach sound and perhaps sensational conclusions. But it didn't turn out that way. The competition in show cases, East against West - a hundred miles inside Soviet-held territory - remains inconclusive. The recovery in the West is remarkable, the re-building impressive - the food id better than it is in London. The citizen in West Berlin is relaxed - there are some signs of a return of the old German arrogance - the West Berliners are cocky. On Sunday I watched a hundred thousand of them at the Olympic Stadium - a police demonstration. There were only two thousand police there, with another sixteen thousand on duty. They marched and they looked like an army - their close order drill, the manual of arms, were executed with Prussian precision - which means perfection. But the crowd was uncertain; the applause was not thunderous; it was restrained, perhaps by memories; but it was a relaxed, good-natured crowd.

In the eastern sector the story is rather different. Over there in the Communist world there has been much re-building. The methods are more primitive than in the West, but it is being done. There is less food in the shops in the east. The clothing is of inferior quality, but the people are better dressed than they were a couple of years ago.

The Communists are making concessions to people who work - more food and clothing, and a little more attention to living conditions.

But these contrasts and comparisons are partial and rather futile. The difference between the east and west in Berlin cannot be told with charts or statistics. You must be there and feel it. For example, the so-called "People's Police," German communists in Russian-type uniforms now travel in pairs - never alone as they did before the spontaneous and leaderless uprising of June 17th. In the west the traffic cops direct traffic, after a fashion. In the east the traffic cop has another cop standing on the corner watching him. The real difference between east and west can be summed up in one word - silence. In the east people don't talk. In the most expensive restaurant over there, where you can get caviar, vodka, champagne and fine food, the talk is in whispers. There is even silence in the bar where people are drinking. When the orchestra plays, they walk to the dance floor without expression, as though fearing that the tune to which they are to dance may tomorrow be declared decadent and capitalistic. There is a sullen, explosive quality about the atmosphere in the eastern sector. Even though small concessions are being made to the workers you do not find in the faces of the workers the reflection of any feeling that this is the "workers' paradise."

Much of the time I spent in the eastern sector was in company with two men who have seen much of war and terror, and whose courage has not been questioned. We were engaged in the technically illegal business of taking pictures. It is not likely that anything serious would have happened had we been caught, but it's the uncertainty, the unpredictability that rasps the nerves - that and the silence.

Dr. Peter Zenkl, one-time Lord Mayor of Prague, and after the war deputy Prime Minister of Czechoslovakia, once told me that six months of house arrest under the communists was a worse experience than the six years he spent in Nazi concentration camps. I now understand a little better what he meant.

Progress on both sides of the sector line has been impressive. The Germans work harder than most people. But neither side has won in this contest of show cases - maybe neither side ever will. But that leaderless revolt in June, when unarmed Germans beat on Russian tanks with their bare fists, and when the Russian troops showed remarkable restraint and discipline, and when the Russians moved thirty thousand troops into the area with precision - these events should cause us to take a long, hard look at our foreign policy. We are pledged to liberate those east Germans and the other satellite nations, by peaceful means. No one has said just how that is to be done. There are some brave and desperate men over there in the east. Some of those who led in June are dead; but there are others who will try again. The question that confronts us can be simply put: If the time comes when the East German Radio, or Prague, or Warsaw announces that men who seek freedom are fighting for their lives, they will also be asking what we propose to do to help them.

It seems to me that if we are not prepared to play the final card of force in this contest - which would mean touching off another World War - then we had best stop telling those now behind the Iron Curtain that somehow, sometime, peacefully, we are going to liberate them. Or we should tell them in considerable and reasonable detail how this is to be done. It is a terrible thing to penetrate that silence with a promise, and then fail to perform when the promise is called. It would perhaps be better to remain silent or merely repeat facts - than to promise more than we are capable of or willing to perform.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. Now here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We have made bold promises to liberate those unfortunate enough to be living behind the Iron Curtain. But we have not said how this end is to be achieved. For the time being, it might be wise to keep in mind a warning by the Roman Horace that: "Too many promises always lessen confidence." It might be better if we followed Washington's advice: "Be careful to keep your promise undertake not what you cannot perform."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday Sept. 24, 1953

This is the news:

The National Security Council met with the President for three hours today. There was no announcement after the SECRET meeting. But its length indicates that many important problems, concerning our air defenses, were discussed. The secretaries of the armed forces, defense mobilizer, AND special consultants on defense, met with the group.

A former chairman of the atomic energy commission, Gordon Dean, said in New Hampshire today that within a year or two Russia will have the capability "to virtually destroy us if she moves first." Dean says this nation's great problem is: "Can we as a nation, with the nations of the free world, permit the Soviet to reach the position where if it choses it can completely annihilate this country?" He added: "Time and the unwillingness of the free world to stop the clock combined to give Russia this power." He said it's not enough to keep our own arsenal strong. "The task is one for the statesmen of our country and the other countries of the free world."

Democratic Senator Hennings of Missouri said today that regardless of the cost we must increase our atomic and hydrogen bomb programs. He said the program he has in mind would mean "expenditures and sacrifices greater than any we have known."

In different sections of this nation REPORTERS TALKED WITH the stunned parents of 23 Americans prisoners OF WAR who want to remain with the Communists in Korea, [redacted] r[redacted]. These 23 men arrived earlier in the neutral zone.. singing Communist songs.. And the enemy says they have all signed a statement attacking much that is going on in America, and PRAISING world Communism. In Pennsylvania the mother of a 26-year-old corporal said:"Its not true. I want to appeal to him to change his mind." In Ohio another soldiers' mothers aid:"I don't believe it." The MOTHER of a Minnesota boy said: "If I could talk to him for ten minutes I could at least dent that kind of thinking. " SHE explained:"If you accept Communism you turn against God. That's what worries me more than anything." Other mothers spoke the same words."It's impossible. I just can't believe it." One said her boy must be doped.. another felt her son was mentally deranged. And in Monticello, Arkansas, a mother said:"Tell my boy I want him to come home so badly I don't know what to do." She added:"Its the first thing he ever did to make me ashamed."

The Chinese Communists released the names of these 23. Our army censors banned the list until we have had a chance to talk to the men..on Sunday. And General Hamblen, our chief repatriation officer said today of the 15-thousand FORMER Chinese COMMUNISTS who refuse to return to their homes: "If they don't change their minds we will have won the psychological battle of our time."

General Mark Clark today told the Communists their story on the 24-hundred allied prisoners we believe them to be holding, is "totally unacceptable." Again he demanded that they either produce the men or give an honest account of what's happened to them. Clark also withdrew his standing offer of 50-thousand dollars for each enemy Mig delivered to us in Korea. And we have promised to return the Mig recently flown to Seoul by a North Korean..promised to return it to its "rightful owner"...(WHICH may take some time to prove.)

At the United Nations today, British Minister of State Selwyn Lloyd appealed to the Communists to accept the American suggestion to allow the proposed Korean political conference to decide whether "neutrals" should be admitted. Lloyd said he is cautiously optomistic about what he called "a welcome improvement" in Soviet policy since Stalin died.

In Washington, the former Polish United Nations representative.. who sought asylum in this country last week..said today: The Russians aim for world conquest by 1970 or 1980. He said the Russians do not believe that under the present circumstances, war is the best way to achieve their ends. They will soon launch a peace offensive. The Pole said: "The greatest defeat the Soviets could suffer, short of war, would be loss of diplomatic relations with the west." And of Poland he said: no one dares speak the truth.. all life has become a living lie... the Polish delegation to the United Nations is only an extension of the Russian delegation. He was asked about a possible revolt by enslaved Poles. And he said: "Any attempted revolt would be drowned in blood..life in Poland is an inferno."

In St. Louis today, Secretary of State Dulles told the American Federation of Labor it has done more "than any other single body" to picture slave conditions behind the Iron Curtain. He said organizations of free workers can help mightily in the quest for peace... by exposing Communism's talk of a "workers paradise" in Russia as a myth. Mr. Dulles received an enthusiastic ovation in contrast to polite applause given

Vice President Nixon yesterday. Mr. Nixon denied that the President has broken a pledge to support amendments to the Taft-Hartley law.

Chairman Wiley of the Senate Foreign Relations committee said today we must increase our defense spending. But, he predicted, if the Administration tries to raise more money through a national sales tax it will be "thunderingly rejected" by the Congress.

~~Here in New York tonight Rocky Marciano defends his heavyweight championship titel against Roland La Starza. Over many of these stations you will hear now by [illegible] of the fight.~~

Sept.24

SWING

The United States has sent Peiping another note urging the Chinese Communists to attend the Korean peace conference. Ambassador Lodge at the same time has offered a proposal that may help bring them; he has suggested that the conference, if and when it gets going, shall be free to consider inviting any neutrals to it. That's what the Communists really want, though they have insisted on the neutrals being there at the start. Mr. Lodge's concession was strictly limited. He did not go beyond an offer that the conference could consider inviting the neutrals. He did not bind the United States or anyone else to agree to inviting them. (But even consideration has been ruled out before.)

The Chinese may also be made more amenable by the speech at the United Nations by Canada's secretary for external affairs, Lester Pearson. He roundly promised that Canada would oppose interpreting United Nations objectives in Korea as including the unification of the country by force. He said further that Canada would not support any military action in Korea that was not United Nations action. That clearly was a pledge not to back up ~~anything military~~ Singman Rhee ~~might undertake~~ if he should independently of the United Nations.

This is the first formal statement of its kind to have been made publicly by any of the UN states that have [redacted] troops in Korea. It has been understood that they all would refuse to be drawn into independent military action initiated by the Republic of Korea. The United States is known to be just as firmly of this view as the rest of them. But it has not been said publicly and authoritatively before.

Mr. Pearson also spoke of the hope of reaching a settlement of the Korean question. If there is good faith and good will on both sides, he said, a settlement should be possible. If the communist side, or any one else, by obstruction or inadmissable demands, makes a peaceful settlement impossible, he thought the responsibility will have been made clear, and the United Nations at least would have done its duty. Obstruction or inadmissable claims "by any one else" was language also clearly meant for Mr. Rhee, and to be linked with the promise not to support any military action he might start.

Mr. Rhee was the origin of the difficulty over the invitations to neutrals to a Korean conference. To get him to agree to the armistice at all, Mr. Dulles had to promise that India would not be invited. It was an expensive promise for the United States to make. It affronted the Indians and it was one reason why the British Labor Party this week adopted a frankly anti-American plank in its foreign policy declaration. Without the promise to Mr. Rhee, however, an armistice might never have been possible. Many critics of American policy have not been fair enough to recognize this to be a fact. But now that Mr. Rhee has been allowed to wield this much power he is not to be allowed to cast a further shadow on American and UN influence in Asia. Mr. Pearson's statement, while made in the name of Canada, was voicing a policy in which all the governments with troops in Korea concur.

Whether this clarity about the peaceful intent of the United Nations in Korea will bring the Chinese to the peace table remains to be seen. The majority in the United Nations certainly hopes so. It wants a settlement, and if a conference is impossible it wants the fault to be that of the communists. But that does not mean that many in the United Nations believe that a conference, if held, will result in more than public shadow-boxing, with the Communists trying to score points, and not trying to make peace. Actually the most to be expected from such a conference, and the least to be expected from it, are both answered by the same word--nothing. The most to be wished for is the unification of Korea peacefully achieved as the result of genuinely free elections, and accompanied by the withdrawal of all non-Korean troops. That plainly is not to be had by negotiations now. Unification by Mr. Rhee's independent military action also is ruled out; that is, unless Mr. Rhee is intent on national suicide. For he would find himself in a war he could not win, fighting the Chinese without United States and United Nations support.

If held, a peace conference most likely will end in the continuence for a long time to come of a divided and occupied Korea. -5-

We and the other UN states with troops in Korea have decided to keep them there if no settlement is reached. So Korea would be like Germany after the last war, a divided and occupied country, waiting for the time when unification might be possible by negotiation. In Germany, after seven years, the time still has not come, though some wishful Europeans think it now may be close at hand. In Korea the wait might also be long; that is, unless the good faith and good will which Mr. Pierson mentioned, do come unexpectedly into existance.

(at my speed.. 5 minutes 40 seconds)

It would seem that there is no quick or easy answer in bringing about a united Korea. But history shows that the problems of peace can be more difficult than the winning of wars. What we need most is to prepare ourselves for the long haul. For as Thomas Fuller and S.G. Champion once remarked: "When hope breaks, let patience hold...often nothing is so full of victory as patience."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The National Security Council met with the President for three hours today. There was no announcement after the secret meeting. But its length indicates that many important problems, concerning our air defenses, were discussed. The secretaries of the armed forces, defense mobilizers, and special consultants on defense met with the group.

A former chairman of the atomic energy commission, Gordon Dean, said in New Hampshire today that within a year or two Russia will have the capability "to virtually destroy us if she moves first." Dean says this nation's great problem is: "Can we as a nation, with the nations of the free world, permit the Soviet to reach the position where if it choses it can completely annihilate this country?" He added: "Time and the unwillingness of the free world to stop the clock combined to give Russia this power." He said it's not enough to keep our own arsenal strong. "The task is one for the statesmen of our country and the other countries of the free world."

Democratic Senator Hennings of Missouri said today that regardless of the cost we must increase our atomic and hydrogen bomb programs. He said the program he has in mind would mean "expenditures and sacrifices greater than any we have known."

In different sections of this nation reporters talked with the stunned parents of 23 American prisoners of war who want to remain with the Communists in Korea. These 23 men arrived earlier in the neutral zone singing Communist songs. And the enemy says they have all signed a statement attacking much that is going on in America and praising world Communism. In Pennsylvania the mother of a 26-year old corporal said: "Its not true. I want to appeal to him to change his mind." In Ohio another soldier's mother said: "I don't believe it." The mother of a Minnesota boy said: "If I could talk to him for ten minutes I could at least dent that kind of thinking." She explained: "If you accept Communism you turn against God. That's what worries me more than anything." Other mothers spoke the same words. "It's impossible. I just can't believe it." One said her boy must be doped - another felt her son was mentally deranged. And in Monticello, Arkansas, a mother said: "Tell my boy I want him to come home so badly I don't know what to do." She added: "It's the first thing he ever did to make me ashamed."

The Chinese Communists released the names of these 23. Our army censors banned the list until we have had a chance to talk to the men on Sunday. And General Hamblen, our chief repatriation officer said today of the 15-thousand former Chinese Communists who refuse to return to their homes: "If they don't change their minds we will have won the psychological battle of our time."

General Mark Clark today told the Communists their story on the 24-hundred allied prisoners we believe them to be holding, is "totally unacceptable." Again he demanded that they either produce the men or give an honest account of what's happened to them. Clark also withdrew his standing offer of 50-thousand dollars for each enemy Mig delivered to us in Korea. And we have promised to return the Mig recently flown to Seoul by a North Korean - promised to return it to it's "rightful owner" which may take some time to prove.

At the United Nations today, British Minister of State Selwyn Lloyd appealed to the Communists to accept the American suggestion to allow the proposed Korean political conference to decide whether "neutrals" should be admitted. Lloyd said he is cautiously optimistic about what he called "a welcome improvement" in Soviet policy since Stalin died.

In Washington, the former Polish United Nations representative who sought asylum in this country last week said today: The Russians aim for world conquest by 1970 or 1980. He said the Russians do not believe that under the present circumstances war is the best way to achieve their ends. They will soon launch a peace offensive. The Pole said: "The greatest defeat the Soviets could suffer, short of war, would be loss of diplomatic relations with the west." And of Poland he said: no one dares speak the truth. All life has become a living lie. The Polish delegation to the United Nations is only an extension of the Russian delegation. He was asked about a possible revolt by enslaved Poles. And he said: "Any attempted revolt would be drowned in blood - life in Poland is an inferno."

In St. Louis today, Secretary of State Dulles told the American Federation of Labor it has done more "than any other single body" to picture slave conditions behind the Iron Curtain. He said organizations of free workers can help mightily in the quest for peace by exposing Communism's talk of a "workers paradise" in Russia as a myth. Mr. Dulles received an enthusiastic ovation in contrast to polite applause given Vice President Nixon yesterday. Mr. Nixon denied that the President has broken apledge to support amendments to the Taft-Hartley law.

Chairman Wiley of the Senate Foreign Relations committee said today we must increase our defense spending. But, he predicted, if the Administration tries to raise more money through a national sales tax it will be "thunderingly rejected" by the Congress.

The United States has sent Peiping another note urging the Chinese Communists to attend the Korean peace conference. Ambassador Lodge at the same time has offered a proposal that may help bring them; he has suggested that the conference, if and when it gets going, shall be free to consider inviting any neutrals to it. That's what the Communists really want, though they have insisted on the neutrals being there at the start. Mr. Lodge's concession was strictly limited. He did not go beyond an offer that the conference could consider inviting the neutrals. He did not bind the United States or anyone else to agree to inviting them. But even consideration has been ruled out before.

The Chinese may also be made more amenable by the speech at the United Nations by Canada's secretary for external affairs, Lester Pearson. He roundly promised that Canada would oppose interpreting United Nations objectives in Korea as including the unification of the country by force. He said further that Canada would not support any military action in Korea that was not United Nations action. That clearly was a pledge not to back up Singman Rhee independently of the United Nations.

This is the first formal statement of its kind to have been made publicly by any of the UN states that have troops in Korea. It has been understood that they all would refuse to be drawn into independent military action initiated by the Republic of Korea. The United States is known to be just as firmly of this view as the rest of them. But it has not been said publicly and authoritatively before.

Mr. Pearson also spoke of the hope of reaching a settlement of the Korean question. If there is good faith and good will on both sides, he said, a settlement should be possible. If the communist side, or anyone else, by obstruction or inadmissable demands, makes a peaceful settlement impossible, he thought the responsibility will have been made clear, and the United Nations at least would have done its duty. Obstruction or inadmissable claims "by anyone else" was language also clearly meant for Mr. Rhee, and to be linked with the promise not to support any military action he might start.

Mr. Rhee was the origin of the difficulty over the invitation to neutrals to a Korean conference. To get him to agree to the armistice at all, Mr. Dulles had to promise that India would not be invited. It was an expensive promise for the United States to make; it affronted the Indians and it was one reason why the British Labor Party this week adopted a frankly anti-American plank in its foreign policy declaration. Without the promise to Mr. Rhee, however, an armistice might never have been possible. Many critics of American policy have not been fair enough to recognize this to be a fact. But now that Mr. Rhee has been allowed to wield this much power he is not to be allowed to cast a further shadow on American and UN influence in Asia. Mr. Pearson's statement, while made in the name of Canada, was voicing a policy in which all the governments with troops in Korea concur.

Whether this clarity about the peaceful intent of the United Nations in Korea will bring the Chinese to the peace table remains to be seen. The majority in the United Nations certainly hopes so. It wants a settlement, and if a conference is impossible it wants the fault to be that of the Communists. But that does not mean that many in the United Nations believe that a conference, if held, will result in more than public shadow-boxing, with the Communists trying to score points, and not trying to make peace. Actually the most to be expected from such a conference, and the least to be expected from it, are both answered by the same word - nothing. The most to be wished for is the unification of Korea peacefully achieved as the result of genuinely free elections, and accompanied by the withdrawal of all non-Korean troops. That plainly is not to be had by negotiations now. Unification by Mr. Rhee's independent military action also is ruled out; that is, unless Mr. Rhee is intent on national suicide. For he would find himself in a war he could not win, fighting the Chinese without United States and United Nations support.

If held, a peace conference most likely will end in the continuance for a long time to come of a divided and occupied Korea. We and the other UN states with troops in Korea have decided to keep them there if no settlement is reached. So Korea would be like Germany after the last war, a divided and occupied country, waiting for the time when unification might be possible by negotiation. In Germany, after seven years, the time still has not come, though some wishful Europeans think it now may be close at hand. In Korea the wait might also be long; that is, unless the good faith and good will which Mr. Pierson mentioned, do come unexpectedly into existence.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that there is no quick or easy answer in bringing about a unitee Korea. But history shows that the problems of peace can be more difficult than the winning of wars. What we need most is to prepare ourselves for the long haul. For as Thomas Fuller and S.G. Champion once remarked: "When hope breaks, let patience hold - often nothing is so full of victory as patience."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday, Sept. 25, 1953

This is the news:

France today proposed the possibility of a system of "guarantees" against changing existing boundaries in Europe. Deputy Foreign Minister Maurice Schuman told the United Nations, that if Russia decided the European defense community is not aimed at Moscow..is purely defensive..the French would be willing to cooperate in working out new guarantees. Schuman also proposed that the Communists and France try to settle the (EIGHT) year old war in Indo-China, through diplomatic negotiations.: either at the Korean political conference, or immediately after it. The French foreign office says this is not a change in policy. They point out that our Secretary of State Dulles recently said that an agreement in Korea could lead to an agreement in Indo-China. (Mr. Dulles opposes a discussion of Indo-China at the Korean conference.)

In Korea today the neutral five-nation (Repatriation ~~Reparations~~ Commission) has postponed from Saturday until next Thursday the start of questioning of prisoners of war who do not want to return home. The Communists apparently insist that the 22-thousand of their men captured by the allies should be forced to listen to explanations of why they should return home. The Communists want to question each man individually. And they want to be able to repeat their questioning or interviewing during the 90-day period allowed for this operation. The United Nations, on the other hand, wants the enemy prisoners questioned in groups of 25..not individually. We feel this would lessen chances of intimidation. We say the men who have made up their minds not to go home should not be forced to listen to explanations. And they should decide if they want to be questioned more than once.

Republican Senator Potter of Michigan said today he plans to go to Korea early next year to investigate war ATROCITIES and find out what happened to the 3-thousand American prisoners who are missing. Potter said he hopes for the same kind of co-operation a Congressional committee received in its investigation of the Katyn massacre of Polish soldiers in World War Two.

Here in New York, two former employes of the United Nations refused to tell the Jenner committee whether they had Communist connections. Frank C. Bancroft and Mrs. Julia Older Bazer were both fired from the U.N. after they refused to answer questions asked by a Senate committee. Bancroft was granted 12-thousand dollars by a U.N. appeals tribunal. Mrs. Bazer was awarded 27-thousand dollars.

A White House spokesmen said today that a "complete and thorough ANALYSIS" (13) being made of segregation of Negro and white patients in Veterans Hospitals. The objective is to end such segregation.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson conferred at the White House and then told reporters all steps are being taken to speed plans for distributing (abroad) 250-million dollars worth of American farm surpluses. The President now has authority, under law, to sell these surpluses.

The Senate-House committee on Internal Revenue today inspected the working of the Internal Revenue Bureau. Chairman Millikan , Colorado Republican, says "the picture is very satisfactory."

Oveta Culp Hobby, the secretary of Health, education and welfare, said today that we must make a "concerted effort" to halt an alarming rise in juvenile delinquency in America.

The American Federation of Labor, ending its St. Louis convention, re-elected all its officers..including President Meany. And the federation chartered a new union to replace the International Longshoremen's Association. The A.F. of L. also approved a "no raiding" pact with the C.I.O. And the convention went on record saying the recent resignation of Labor Secretary Durkin was justified because of the failure of President Eisenhower "to keep his agreement" with Durkin.

In London today, the leaders of the British Labor Party approved a resolution condemning what it called "the harm done to Anglo-American relations by political with-hunting in the United States."

And British Test Pilot Mike Lithgow set a new world speed record of 737 miles an hour in a Supermarine Swift Jet fighter over the Libyan desert. This is roughly ten miles an hour faster than another British jet pilot flew in a different type jet earlier this month.

In West Germany today, European military officials watched the Germans demonstrate how their booming industries can provide supplies for a future European army. The Germans showed all types of equipment from portable tents to trucks big enough to transport heavy artillery. There were no weapons on display because the allied still ban the production of guns and planes in West Germany.

The Treasury Department today announced that it will lower the rate of interest it pays on new savings notes. This is the Administration's first cut in interest rates on the money it borrows. Since February the government has been raising the rates.

Edward R. Murrow: September 25, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

It appears to this reporter the divided and worried world in which we live is in an unusual state of balance or stalemate. During most of the post-war period it has been a case of the Russians acting, and the West reacting. Now it would appear that both sides are in a huddle, while the ball is in the middle of the field. (The initiative belongs to whichever side is willing to seize it.) The truce in Korea was the recognition by both sides of a stalemate there. Chancellor Adenauer's victory in Germany was, in a sense, a triumph for American policy; but it produced a political stalemate, so far as any real prospect for the unification of Germany is concerned. The presence of allied troops in Berlin is the recognition of a military stalemate in Western Europe. The Russians haven't reacted to Adenauer's victory; we haven't reacted in any obvious fashion to the fact that the Russians now possess the whole family of destructive bombs, and are capable of delivering them.

Our efforts to create a European army and a European defense community have, for the time being at least, bogged down in French fear, and political instability.

So far as Asia is concerned we are told today by a spokesman for the American Delegation at the U.N. that our government has not yet decided on what proposals we will make at the Korean Peace Conference, if indeed it is ever held. We are considering a lot of possible courses, but no decisions have been taken. And we have not yet started serious talks with other allied governments as to what we should do, what we should propose, when the Conference convenes, if it does. And then there is THAT dispatch today from Panmunjom, saying that the neutral commission which is in charge of prisoners who refuse to go home is also deadlocked. ~~The question seems to be whether the men on both sides who don't want to go home shall be interviewed, or persuaded, singly or in groups.~~ ~~AMX~~ An Indian member of the commission says this delay may be indefinite.

Wherever you look there is an obvious reluctance to move. It is clear that the United Nations, through debate, cannot break the log jam. The smaller nations may be persuaded, cajoled, bribed or intimidated into voting one way or another on a given issue; but the stalemate is not to be broken by votes at the United Nations, any more than French fears of German resurgence are to be eliminated by words. Recent history cannot be so quickly forgotten.

It may even be possible that we have reached, or are approaching a stalemate or deadlock in the area of destructive weapons. No one can speak with certainty about that until we are told officially more than we have been told about relative strength and rates of production here at home and in the Soviet Union.

In Western Europe the impression is growing that the Soviet Union does not purpose to make war now, at least not against Western Europe. This belief makes more difficult the achievement of our goal of uniting and re-arming Western Europe. The Russians are confronted with serious unrest in some of the satellite countries; the problem of how hard and how far they can press in Asia, and with the problem of firmly establishing a new administration. They are also confronted with a problem that every dictatorship has had to face - the reliability and effectiveness of the army, and who is to control it. The recent changes in the Russian command indicate that the so-called political generals, the staunch Party men, are in the ascendancy. This could mean military recklessness, as was the case with Hitler's political generals; but no one can be sure.

In the realm of diplomacy and international debate the Russians are repeating themselves, and to a considerable extent so are we. Each side appears to be waiting for the other to make a move.

If it is permissible to employ boxing language to such a serious subject, it would seem that during the past few months both the Russian and American governments have decided to rely upon counter-punching, each waiting for the other to [redacted] lead. In our corner there is much advice in many languages. We aren't sure what's happening in the Russian corner, because we do not know enough about relations between the Soviet Union and China, or how serious the discontent in the satellite nations may be.

This stalemate, this waiting for the other side to lead, may go on for a long time. The balance may become so delicate that neither great Power will choose or dare to move. In that case the explosion might be triggered by a small nation to which one or the other of the great Powers is deeply committed. On the other hand it is possible, though there is little historical precedent for it, that both sides might decide to make sufficient concessions to lift, for a time at least this terrible tension and fear of mutual destruction. The next move may not be climactic or decisive, but it will be of great importance because it will have been preceded by such a considerable period of inaction and indecision on both sides.

It [redacted] In the struggle for power between the East and the West, each is waiting for the other to make the next move. And while we wait, most of the world sits in a tense vacum. I can't help thinking of something the German Goethe once wrote:" There is nothing in the world more pitiable than an irresolute man, oscillating between two feelings, who would willingly unite the two, and who does not perceive that nothing can unite them."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

France today proposed the possibility of a system of "guarantees" against changing existing boundaries in Europe. Deputy Foreign Minister "Maurice Schuman told the United Nations that if Russia decided the European defense community is not aimed at Moscow is purely defensive, the French would be willing to cooperate in working out new guarantees. Schuman also proposed that the Communists and France try to settle the eight-year old war in Indo-China through diplomatic negotiations: either at the Korean political conference or immediately after it. The French foreign office says this is not a change in policy. They point out that our Secretary of State Dulles recently said that an agreement in Korea could lead to an agreement in Indo-China. (Mr. Dulles opposes adiscussion of Indo-China at the Korean conference.)

In Korea today the neutral five-nation repatriation Commission has postponed from Saturday until next Thursday the start of questioning of prisoners of war who do not want to return home. The Communists apparently insist that the 22-thousand of their men captured by the allies should be forced to listen to explanations of why they should return home. The Communists want to question each man individually. And they want to be able to repeat their questioning or interviewing during the 90-day period allowed for this operation. The United Nations, on the other hand, wants the enemy prisoners questioned in groups of 25 - not individually. We feel this would lessen chances of intimidation. We say the men who have made up their minds not to go home should not be forced to listen to explanations. And they should decide if they want to be questioned more than once.

Republican Senator Potter of Michigan said today he plans to go to Korea early next year to investigate war atrocities and find out what happened to the 3-thousand American prisoners who are missing. Potter said he hopes for the same kind of cooperation a Congressional committee received in its investigation of the Katyn massacre of Polish soldiers in World War Two.

Here in New York two former employees of the United Nations refused to tell the Jenner committee whether they had Communist connections. Frank C. Bancroft and Mrs. Julia Older Bazer were both fired from the U.N. after they refused to answer questions asked by a Senate committee. Bancroft was granted 12-thousand dollars by a U.N. appeals tribunal. Mrs. Bazer was awarded 27-thousand dollars.

A White House spokesmen said today that a "complete and thorough analysis" is being made of segregation of Negro and white patients in Veterans Hospitals. The objective is to end such segregation.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson conferred at the White House and then told reporters all steps are being taken to speed plans for distributing abroad 250-million dollars worth of American farm surpluses. The President now has authority, under law, to sell these surpluses.

The Senate-House committee on Internal Revenue today inspected the working of the Internal Revenue Bureau. Chairman Millikan, Colorado Republican, says "the picture is very satisfactory."

Oveta Culp Hobby, the secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, said today that we must make a "concerted effort" to halt an alarming rise in juvenile delinquency in America.

The American Federation of Labor, ending its St. Louis convention, re-elected all its officers including President Meany. And the federation chartered a new union to replace the International Longshoremen's Association. The AFL also approved a "no raiding" pact with the CIO. And the convention went on record saying the recent resignation of Labor Secretary Durkin was justified because of the failure of President Eisenhower "to keep his agreement" with Durkin.

In London today, the leaders of the British Labor Party approved a resolution condemning what is called "the harm done to Anglo-American relations by political witch-hunting in the United States."

And British Test Pilot Mike Lithgow set a new world speed record of 737 miles an hour in a Supermarine Swift Jet fighter over the Libyan desert. This is roughly ten miles an hour faster than another British jet pilot flew in a different type jet earlier this month.

In West Germany today, European military officials watched the Germans demonstrate how their booming industries can provide supplies for a future European army. The Germans showed all types of equipment from portable tents to trucks big enough to transport heavy artillery. There were no weapons on display because the allied still ban the production of guns and planes in West Germany.

The Treasury Department today announced that it will lower the rate of interest it pays on new savings notes. This is the Administration's first cut in interest rates on the money it borrows. Since February the government has been raising the rates.

It appears to this reporter the divided and worried world in which we live is in an unusual state of balance or stalemate. During most of the post-war period it has been a case of the Russians acting, and the West reacting. Now it would appear that both sides are in a huddle, while the ball is in the middle of the field. The initiative belongs to whichever side is willing to seize it. The truce in Korea was the recognition by both sides of a stalemate there. Chancellor Adenauer's victory in Germany was, in a sense, a triumph for American policy; but it produced a political stalemate so far as any real prospect for the unification of Germany is concerned. The presence of allied troops in Berlin is the recognition of a military stalemate in Western Europe. The Russians haven't reacted to Adenauer's victory; we haven't reacted in any obvious fashion to the fact that the Russians now possess the while family of destructive bombs, and are capable of delivering them.

Our efforts to create a European army and a European defense community have, for the time being at least, bogged down in French fear and political instability.

So far as Asia is concerned we are told today by a spokesman for the American Delegation at the U.N. that our government has not yet decided on what proposals we will make at the Korean Peace Conference, if indeed it is ever held. We are considering a lot of possible courses, but no decisions have been taken. And we have not yet started serious talks with other allied governments as to what we should do, what we should propose, when the Conference convenes, if it does. And then there is that dispatch today from Panmunjom, saying that the neutral commission which is in charge of prisoners who refuse to go home is also deadlocked. An Indian member of the commission says this delay may be indefinite.

Wherever you look there is an obvious reluctance to move. It is clear that the United Nations, through debate, cannot break the log jam. The smaller nations may be persuaded, cajoled, bribed or intimidated into voting one way or another on agiven issue; but the stalemate is not to be broken by votes at the United Nations, any more than French fears of German resurgence are to be eliminated by words. Recent history cannot be so quickly forgotten.

It may even be possible that we have reached, or are approaching a stalemate or deadlock in the area of destructive weapons. No one can speak with certainty about that until we are told officially more than we have been told about relative strength and rates of production here at home and in the Soviet Union.

In Western Europe the impression is growing that the Soviet Union does not purpose to make war now, at least not against Western Europe. This belief makes more difficult the achievement of our goal of uniting and re-arming Western Europe. The Russians are confronted with serious unrest in some of the satellite countries; the problem of how hard and how far they can press in Asia, and with the problem of firmly establishing a new administration. They are also confronted with a problem that every dictatorship has had to face - the reliability and effectiveness of the army, and who is to control it. The recent changes in the Russian command indicate that the so-called political generals, the staunch Party men, are in the ascendancy. This could mean military recklessness, as was the case with Hitler's political generals; but no one can be sure.

In the realm of diplomacy and international debate the Russians are repeating themselves, and to a considerable extent so are we. Each side appears to be waiting for the other to make a move.

If it is permissible to employ boxing language to such a serious subject, it would seem that during the past few months both the Russian and American governments have decided to rely upon counter-punching, each waiting for the other to lead. In our corner there is much advice in many languages. We aren't sure what's happening in the Russian corner, because we do not know enough about relations between the Soviet Union and China, or how serious the discontent in the satellite nations may be.

This stalemate, this waiting for the other side to lead, may go on for a long time. The balance may become so delicate that neither great Power will choose or dare to move. In that case the explosion might be triggered by a small nation to which one or the other of the great Powers is deeply committed. On the other hand it is possible, though there is little historical precedent for it, that both sides might decide to make sufficient concessions to lift, for a time at least this terrible tension and fear of mutual destruction. The next move may not be climactic or decisive, but it will be of great importance because it will have have been preceded by such a considerable period of inaction and indecision on both sides.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. Now, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: In the struggle for power between the East and the West, each is waiting for the other to make the next move. And while we wait, most of the world sits in atense vacum, I can't help thinking of something the German Goethe once wrote: "There is nothing in the world more pitiable than an irresolute man, oscillating between two feelings, who would willingly unite the two, and who does not perceive that nothing can unite them."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday, Sept 28, 1953

This is the news:

The State Department says the government has not ruled out a meeting of the big four heads of state. But it cannot see how such a meeting can "accomplish results different from those" being sought through lower level conferences.

The statement was made after Prime Minister Churchill's office issued a statement, saying he still believes that his May proposal for a heads-of-state meeting, is a good idea. Mr. Churchill is now sunning himself on the French Riviera. Some Laborites, now holding their convention, have demanded that he turn over the direction of Britain's foreign affairs to someone else. They charge Churchill's deputies have over-ruled his plan for a Big Four meeting. But the statement from No. 10 Downing street says that is not so; the prime minister has "in no way changed his mind."

Soon after the British statement was released, our own state department issued its unethusiastic comment. And then, at the United Nations, India's Krishna Menon announced that later his country will ask the General Assembly to urge the Big Four to confer. He said no settlement of world tensions is possible except by agreement among the great powers. He says this might not bring any positive results. But India feels the effort would be worthwhile. Krishna Menon added: "I don't see why anyone should be frightened by such a meeting. At best we may have a generation of peace." He also proposed a United Nations appeal to the Big Powers to renounce the use of the atomic and hydrogen bomb... and he urged APPROVAL [redacted] OF all 14 nations now seeking admission to the U.N. [redacted]

In Korea, the allies charged today that the five nation neutral repatriation commission has sent 22-thousand anti-Communist prisoners a message slanted "toward unduly influencing them." The allies say the message, sent to Chinese and North Koreans who do not want to go home, is "clearly of Communist origin" and actually uses "maximum exertion on the prisoners." But a spokesman for the Commission says it has not "indulged in propaganda for any side." The commission consists of representatives from India, Sewden, Switzerland and Communist Poland and Czechoslovakia. Among other things, the commission's statement told the prisoners they will be required "absolutely, by necessity" to listen to "explanations" from men representing their countries. We oppose any forced attendance at such explanations. The Communists have demanded it.

In Washington, the State Department says we have not reached any final decision on a plan for the future of Korea. We are (EXPLORING) various proposals. The statement was made in response to questions about a report that South Korean President Rhee has attacked a plan for neutralizing Korea.

Japanese Prime Minister Yoshida is soon to visit Washington, to ask for more American help to speed Japan's rearmament, against potential Communist aggression. One of Yoshida's respresentatives is said to be starting for Washington by plane tomorrow--with a plan drawn up by leaders of the two top Japanese political parties.

In Indo-China today, the rebel radio rejected French suggesstions, that an attempt be made to negotiate a peace in the Indo-Chinese war. The enemy radio said: "All utopian hope for an illusory peace, must be ruled out."

In Egypt today government officials said that Great Britain has agreed to withdraw her troops from the Suez Canal zone area within 18 months. But a British official says a final settlement, of the long feud over British occupation of Suez is still a long way off.

The Warsaw radio says the Polish government has relieved Stephan Cardinal Wy sinski of his post, and sent him to a monastery. The Cardinal was the Catholic archbisop of Warsaw. A communique accuses him of anti-state activities.

Britain's Labor Party, meeting in Margate, England, today rejected a leftwing resolution that said in part "Our dependence on the United States commits us to a vested interest in the cold war." The leader of the left-wingers, Aneurin Bevan, took no part in the debate.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Wilson called on the President and then told reporters: We must realistically face the problem presented by the fact that Russia is "making lots of progress" in production of hydrogen and atomic bombs. He said we must face the reality that very shortly, if not at the moment, the Russians "will be able to make bombs of any size also."

The Air Force says its plans to expand production of the Boeing B-52 jet bomber... and the North American F100 supersonic jet fighter. Air Force Secretary Talbott did not disclose the number of new planes that will be ordered.

Attorney General Brownell acknowledged today that he held a secret conference yesterday with California's Governor Warren in Sacremento. He refused to say whether he has recommened to the President that the Governor be appointed to the Supreme Court.

The McCarthy committee today heard two [redacted] fugitives from Russia and a former American Communist testify that an army report for intelligence officers is loaded with Communist propaganda. The Army says this document.. called "Psychological and cultural traits in Soviet Siberia" is not enemy propaganda.. was intended merely to give intelligence officers a picture of the Russian people--for use in the event of war. [redacted]

Here in New York today, it was announced that [redacted] Allie Reynolds will pitch the Wednesday world series opener for the Yankees..with Carl Erskine pitching for the Dodgers.

We now have what is called a "defensive agreement" between this country and Spain. It is not an alliance or a treaty, although it might as well be. We receive the right to use a certain number of naval and air bases; the Spaniards receive 226 million dollars in military and economic aid, (with the possibility of more to come.) Spain, by implication at least, gives up the neutrality that saw her safely through two World Wars. We give up ideological objections to a dictatorship. We acquire both air and naval bases that would be of perhaps decisive importance if the Russians should decide to overrun Western Europe. The Spanish Government of General Franco acquires at least the first instalment of the money required to modernize an antiquated military machine, and to stabilize an economy that consists of a thin crust of prosperity over vast misery and poverty.

This agreement is to run for ten years, with the possibility of an extension for another ten years. The negotiations for this deal were begun under the Truman Administration and consummated under the Eisenhower Administration. It's going to be difficult for either Party to make any political capital out of this deal.

This is an example of a situation where geography and military considerations outweigh political and moral objections. What we have done is to take out a military insurance policy against the possibility of Western Europe being overrun by the Russian forces. We acquire useful air bases, fair harbors for American and British warships, and added protection against the closing of the Mediterranean, which would mean the loss - in the event of war with Russia - of Turkey, Yugoslavia, Greece, the Middle East and Suez.

The agreement is not specific. For example, it says: "The time and manner of wartime utilization of said areas and facilities will be as mutually agreed upon." This ambiguity is perhaps not very important, because in the event of war Franco's government has nowhere to go except with the West, and we have little choice but to defend the naval and air bases that will have been constructed - constructed not only at financial but at some political and moral cost.

In 1946 this country and the Assembly of the United Nations decided that, "in origin, nature, structure and general conduct the Franco regime is a Fascist regime, patterned on and established largely as a result of aid received from Hitler's Nazi Germany and Mussolini's Fascist Italy." The New York Times concludes today: "That regime has not changed in any way since 1946, and the condemnation which is a moral as well as a political one, still stands."

If there ever existed any real possibility of the overthrow of the Franco dictatorship from the inside, this ~~action~~ agreement reduces that possibility. We have set aside political and ideological differences in favor of military considerations; but we have acquired what our military men believe to be a defensible toe-hold on the Continent, if the Russians decide to move. It is unlikely that in the face of modern weapons we could ever again undertake a landing on open beaches, as we did in Normandy, if we XXXXXX XXXX and our allies were again to be thrown off the Continent.

There have been some critical comments in the French and British press concerning this agreement, but in general our allies have accepted the move as being dictated by sound military consideration. The French are trying to put a good face on it, but any mention of the Pyrenees as a defensive line means to them the possibility that XXXXXXXXXXX metropolitan France would already have been covered by the tide of the Red Army.

We must expect the Russians to make great play with this agreement. They have contended that the Western Powers are fascist in intent and policy, and they will now proceed to use this agreement with Franco to to support their argument.

We now find ourselves in virtual alliance with a country, largely created by and patterned after two totalitarian nations, against whom we fought a considerable war - Germany and Italy. We also find ourselves in virtual alliance with communist Yugoslavia, patterned after the Russia which was our ally in the late war. + which is now the enemy. -

Military necessity, and the imperatives of grand strategy, are powerful arguments; but if war doesn't come - or even if it does - our posture along the Mediterranean, with one foot planted in Spain and the other in Yugoslavia, may appear somewhat awkward in the light of our published protestations.

Our agreement for the use of military bases in Spain - should the situation warrant it - is foremost a matter of expediency. Thoreau once remarked that "choosing the course which offers the slightest obstacles to the feet is often a downhill one." But as Junius pointed out:"When once a man is determined to believe, the very absurdity of the doctrine does but confirm him in his belief."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The State Department says the government has not ruled out a meeting of the big four heads of state. But it cannot see how such a meeting can "accomplish results different from those" being sought through lower level conferences. The statement was made after Prime Minister Churchill's office issued a statement saying he still believes that his May proposal for a heads-of-state meeting is a good idea. Mr. Churchill is now sunning himself on the French Riviera.

Some Laborites now holding their convention have demanded that he turn over the diroction of Britain's foreign affairs to someone else. They charge Churchill's deputies have over-ruled his plan for a Big Four meeting. But the statement from No. 10 Downing street says that is not so; the prime minister has "in no way changed his mind."

Soon after the British statement was released, our own state department issued its unenthusiastic comment. And then, at the United Nations, India's Krishna Menon announced that later his country will ask the General Assembly to urge the Big Four to confer. He said no settlement of world tensions is possible except by agreement among the great powers. He says this might not bring any positive results. But India feels the effort would be worthwhile. Krishna Menon added: "I don't see why anyone should be frightened by such a meeting. At best we may have a generation of peace." He also proposed a United Nations appeal to the Big Powers to renounce the use of the atomic and hydrogen bomb, and he urged approval of all 14 nations now seeking admission to the U.N.

In Korea, the allies charged today that the five nation neutral repatriation commission has sent 22-thousand anti-Communist prisoners a message slanted "toward unduly influencing them." The allies say the message, sent to Chinese and North Koreans who do not want to go home, is "clearly of Communist origin" and actually uses "maximum exertion on the prisoners." But a spokesman for the Commission says it has not "indulged in propaganda for any side." The commission consists of representatives from India, Sweden, Switzerland and Communist Poland and Czechoslovakia. Among other things, the commission's statement told the prisoners they will be required "absolutely, by necessity" to listen to "explanations" from men representing their countries. We oppose any forced attendance at such explanations. The Communists have demanded it.

In Washington, the State Department says we have not reached any final decision on a plan for the future of Korea. We are exploring various proposals. The statement was made in response to questions about a report that South Korean President Rhee has attacked a plan for neutralizing Korea.

Japanese Prime Minister Yoshida is soon to visit Washington to ask for more American help to speed Japan's rearmament against potential Communist aggression. One of Yoshida's representatives is said to be starting for Washington by plane tomorrow - with a plan drawn up by leaders of the two top Japanese political parties.

In Indo-China today, the rebel radio rejected French suggestions that an attempt be made to negotiate a peace in the Indo-Chinese war. The enemy radio said: "All utopian hope for an illusory peace must be ruled out."

In Egypt today government officials said that Great Britain has agreed to withdraw her troops from the Suez Canal zone area within 18 months. But a British official says a final settlement of the long feud over British occupation of Suez is still a long way off.

The Warsaw radio says the Polish government has relieved Stephen Cardinal Wysinski of his post and sent him to amonastery. The Cardinal was the Catholic archbishop of Warsaw. A communique accuses him of "anti-state" activities.

Britain's Labor Party, meeting in Margate, England, today rejected a left-wing resolution that said in part "Our dependence on the United States commits us to a vested interest in the cold war." The leader of the left-wingers, Aneurin Bevan, took no part in the debate.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Wilson called on the President and then told reporters: We must realistically face the problem presented by the fact that Russia is "making lots of progress" in production of hydrogen and atomic bombs. He said we must face the reality that very shortly, if not at the moment, the Russians "will be able to make bombs of any size also."

The Air Force says it plans to expand production of the Boeing B-52 jet bomber and the North American F100 Supersonic jet fighter. Air Force Secretary Talbott did not disclose the number of new planes that will be ordered.

Attorney General Brownell acknowledged today that he held a secret conference yesterday with California's Governor Warren in Sacramento. He refused to say whether he has recommended to the President that the Governor be appointed to the Supreme Court.

The McCarthy committee today heard two fugitives from Russia and a former American Communist testify that an army report for intelligence officers is "loaded with Communist propaganda." The Army says this document called "Psychological and cultural traits in Soviet Siberia" is not enemy propaganda was intended merely to give intelligence officers a picture of the Russian people for use in the event of war.

Here in New York today it was announced that Allie Reynolds will pitch the Wednesday world series opener for the Yankees with Carl Erskine pitching for the Dodgers.

We now have what is called a "defensive agreement" between this country and Spain. It is not an alliance or a treaty, although it might as well be. We receive the right to use a certain number of naval and air bases; the Spaniards receive 226 million dollars in military and economic aid, with the possibility of more to come. Spain, by implication at least, gives up the neutrality that saw her safely through two World Wars. We give up ideological objections to a dictatorship. We acquire both air and naval bases that would be of perhaps decisive importance if the Russians should decide to overrun Western Europe. The Spanish Government of General Franco acquires at least the first installment of the money required to modernize an antiquated military machine, and to stabilize an economy that consists of a thin crust of prosperity over vast misery and poverty.

This agreement is to run for ten years, with the possibility of an extension for another ten years. The negotiations for this deal were begun under the Truman Administration and consummated under the Eisenhower Administration. It's going to be difficult for either Party to make any political capital out of this deal.

This is an example of a situation where geography and military considerations outweigh political and moral objections. What we have done is to take out a military insurance policy against the possibility of Western Europe being overrun by Russian forces. We acquire useful air bases, fair harbors for American and British warships, and added protection against the closing of the Mediterranean, which would mean the loss - in the event of war with Russia - of Turkey, Yugoslavia, Greece, the Middle East and Suez.

The agreement is not specific. For example, it says: "The time and manner of wartime utilization of said areas and facilities will be as mutually agreed upon." This ambiguity is perhaps not very important, because in the event of war Franco's government has nowhere to go except with the West, and we have little choice but to defend the naval and air bases that will have been constructed - constructed not only at financial but at some political and moral cost.

In 1946 this country and the Assembly of the United Nations decided that, "in origin, nature, structure and general conduct the Franco regime is a Fascist regime, patterned on and established largely as a result of aid received from Hitler's Nazi Germany and Mussolini's Fascist Italy." The New York Times concludes today: "That regime has not changed in any way since 1946, and the condemnation which is a moral as well as a political one, still stands."

If there ever existed any real possibility of the overthrow of the Franco dictatorship from the inside, this agreement reduces that possibility. We have set aside political and ideological differences in favor of military considerations; but we have acquired what our military men believe to be a defensible toe-hold on the Continent, if the Russians decide to move. It is unlikely that in the face of modern weapons we could ever again undertake a landing on open beaches, as we did in Normandy, if we and our allies were again to be thrown off the Continent.

There have been some critical comments in the French and British press concerning this agreement, but in general our allies have accepted the move as being dectated by sound military consideration. The French are trying to put a good face on it, but any mention of the Pyrenees as a defensive line means to them the possibility that metropolitan France would already have been covered by the tide of the Red Army.

We must expect the Russians to make great play with this agreement. They have contended that the Western Powers are fascist in intent and policy, and they will now proceed to use this agreement with Franco to support this argument.

We now find ourselves in virtual alliance with a country largely created by and patterned after two totalitarian nations against whom we fought a considerable war - Germany and Italy. We also find ourselves in virtual alliance with Communist Yugoslavia, patterned after the Russia which was our ally in the late war and which is now the enemy.

Military necessity and the imperatives of grand strategy are powerful arguments; but if war doesn't come - or even if it does - our posture along the Mediterranean, with one foot planted in Spain and the other in Yugoslavia, may appear somewhat awkward in the light of our published protestations.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Our agreement for the use of military bases in Spain - should the situation warrant it - is foremost a matter of expediency. Thoreau once remarked that "choosing the course which offers the slightest obstacles to the feet is often a downhill one." But as Junius pointed out: "When once a man is determined to believe, the very absurdity of the doctrine does but confirm him in his belief."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday Sept. 29, 1953

This is the news:

The State Department says the Russians have apparently killed all hope for a Big Four meeting on Germany and Austria. The Department says Moscow's reply to our invitation to such a conference is "evasive and dilatory."

[I'd like to discuss the Russian notes in a few minutes.]

In (KOREA) today there's been another delay in the "explanations" we and the enemy will make, to prisoners who do not want to go home. Each side is demanding that the other side build better physical accomodations--"explanations centers"--they are being called. Both have agreed to improve their present facilities. The allies say they cannot do the job properly by tomorrow--when the explaining was supposed to begin.

In Berlin today Mayor Ernst Reuter died after a heart attack. He was 64 years old. Chancellor Adenauer calls his sudden death a "great loss for the German cause." And President Eisenhower said: "Liberty-loving people everywhere will mourn Reuter's death.

2 Here is a note from Dick Hottelet on Prof. Reuters death

Mayor Ernst Reuter of Berlin was a living example of what sheer courage and keen intelligence can do in the fight against Communist aggression. He knew Soviet Imperialism from the inside; Stalin had said of him: "Young Reuter has a clear and brilliant mind, but he is a little too independent." He was Secretary General of the German Communist Party more than thirty years ago until his independence drove him out in disgust. Under Hitler he went into concentration camps and exile as a Social Democrat. Reuter chose to come back in 1946 from a comfortable life to the cold and poverty of Berlin - A shell of a city with the highest suicide rate in the world. In 1948 he became Lord Mayor and helped win the battle of Berlin against blockade, pressure and subversion. He inspired his people - he inspired the Western allies, and he roused the frantic hatred of the Russians and their German Communist satellites. He knew the Soviet leaders better than they did themselves, knew how hollow and bewildered and desperate they were, and he faced them with all the inner confidence and superiority of a man who knows that freedom will win in the end. Reuter was more than a wise man. He was in a very personal sense a brave man. He knew that Moscow wanted few things as much as to be rid of him. Yet he roamed Berlin alone and ~~when he left~~ Berlin, on numberless trips to gain support for his city, he drove the hundred miles through the Soviet zone. Why? "Because," he said "we have a right to do so and it would be fatal to let the Russians see that they can frighten us from doing anything we are entitled to do." Even as a world figure, Reuter never stopped being a common man. He hated stuffed shirts, as much as dictators and took pleasure in deflating them. He felt deeply, but never lost his balance. With all his contempt for Communism he had only sympathy for the people of Russia, and though he defied Soviet power, and wanted to come to grips with it, he had no liking for bluff or empty gestures. Berlin has lost its good spirit. Germany has lost ~~xxx~~ a great statesman. The world has lost a fighter in the cause of Freedom. The best way to honor his memory is to follow his example.

4

The Vatican City newspaper says today that Poland's Stefan Cardinal Wyszinski is now under arrest... after Polish police arrested him in Warsaw, and made a detailed search of his home. The Polish Government in exile--in London--says the Cardinal's arrest is part of a Communist plot to stir up a revolt in Poland, which could be "crushed in a blood bath." And the leaders of the American Roman Catholic hierarchy say the Cardinal's arrest is "an infamous blow against a heroic and helpless people."

In Iran, Premier Zahedi's new government has told the people, that the nationalized oil industry is in the red for more than 87-million dollars. The government says foreign experts will be needed to get the oil industry operating again.

In Washington today high administration sources told reporters that California's governor Warren will be the next chief justice of the United States. These sources say the President has made his decision..and may announce the appointment within 24 hours. Today the President picked former Republican Senator John A. Danaher of Connecticut, to be a judge of the United States circuit court of appeals for the district of Columbia. He'll succeed the late Judge Proctor. Danaher, who must be confirmed by the Senate, served in the Senate from 1938 to 1944.

5

Defense Secretary Wilson told reporters today, there is "every reason to believe" that we lead the Russians in all military fields. Wilson said the Air Force may reach 120 wings, twelve months ahead of schedule. He cautioned against Americans "becoming panicky" because of Soviet military might. He also cautioned against "complaceny."

Civil Defense Chief Peterson, back from a European tour, said today that Russia "has enough atomic bombs to drop one or more on every major American city, at the same time." Peterson said we could have from eight to 22 million casualties in this country from one Russian attack.

The Justice Department says that since the first of the year 578 undesireable aliens have been deported. Forty two were classified as subversive..the rest were criminal, immoral or narcotic addicts.

Senator Mc Carthy of Wisconsin today married Jean Kerr, who was formerly on his office staff, in Washington's St. Mathews Roman Catholic Cathedral. The President and Mrs. Eisenhower did not attend.. sent their regrets..but high government officials from Vice President Nixon down did attend. And thousands of persons greeted the couple outside the cathedral.

Here in New York, the American League Club owners today voted unanimously to approve the transfer of the St. Louis Browns franchise to Baltimore. And New York's Mayor Impelliteri. (defeated two to one in the recent Democratic primary). announced that he'll run for re-election as an independent.

Swing Sept. 29

Todays -

The Soviet note is a reply to the Western note, which proposed a conference of the four powers on Germany and Austria, to be held in Lugano on October 15. It ignores that proposal, makes no mention of Lugano or the date, nor offers any other time or place. What it does is to propose two conferences, one of five powers, including Communist China, to deal with world tensions, particularly in Asia and the Pacific, and a four-power conference to deal with Germany. Austria is dismissed with a shrug, as something to be taken up through ordinary diplomatic channels.

The note does not make clear whether the proposed conference on Germany can be held, if a conference of the five powers is rejected. That, of course, is a deliberately intended unclarity. For this note is no quick step into the conference room. It is a familiar maneuver in the cold war. That is said simply to describe it. For despite loud assurances from some super-optimists, that a fresh wind is blowing behind the Iron Curtain--a wind of pacific and benevolent intentions--the Kremlin continues to wage the cold war, and to do it with its Familiar Tactics.

The German conference, which really is the big issue at stake, is pushed into second place. It is outranked by a conference which the Chinese are to attend. Then it is shackled by conditions which the Western Powers cannot accept. That part of the note that deals with the German question proposes first of all a German peace conference and the establishment of a provisional German government in which the East German communists would participate. ~~Obviously such a conference could not make a German peace, and it should be held with the participation of the East German communists only communists can.~~ The Kremlin wants this done BEFORE German elections are arranged, at least it mentions the two steps first. The German elections which are put thirds are also to be prepared and controlled by this provosional government, that is to say, with the communists participating.

These proposals are unacceptable, as the Kremlin knew they would be when it made them. They have been refused in previous western notes. They are significant now because, for one thing, they suggest that the Kremlin may have decided not to permit the unification of Germany unless the communists are given a role they cannot possibly win in a free election. And since this is the first time the Kremlin has formally demanded that the Communists have a part in preparing and controlling the election, it looks like a veto on a free election.

ever being held in East Germany. Only if the Communists have a hand in preparing and conducting the election, can they hope to save something from the flood of votes that is sure to overhelm them if the election is free. The Western Powers, it will be recalled,, wanted the elections prepared for and supervised by a United Nations commission.

All this is so forbidding, as to overshadow any skill the Kremlin may have thought to show in the note. It probably hoped to be effective in introducing Asian questions into a European situation. It proposed that the FIVE power conference should deal with three regions, Korea, Southeast Asia and the Pacific. This is the first time the Kremlin has specified Southeast Asia and the Pacific as regions where a big-power conference might reach an understanding. Mention of Southeast Asia is of acute interest to France, for the French desperately want peace there, and not a few Frenchmen do not want to see Germany armed or united. Here is a note ostensibly dealing with the German question that ends up with putting an Asian conference first, and a German conference second. That clearly is intended to make the French stop and think.

The reference to the Pacific also is attracting comment, but the meaning of it is obscure. London and Paris observers think it may refer to the security pact in the Pacific, made by the United States with ~~the~~ Australia and New Zeeland ~~[illegible]~~ ~~[illegible]~~ (Britain and France were ~~being~~ excluded.) The Kremlin knows that the British have been especially unhappy at being left out. And this may be a sly way of exploiting their ~~British~~ resentment.

A official comment on ~~[illegible]~~ in Washington on the note calls it "evasive" and "dilatory". But it ~~[illegible]~~ was stressed that the note was still being studied. ~~Ambassador~~ Bohlen is in Washington, which ~~is fortunate, and the [illegible]~~ useful, questions raised by the note ~~will be laid before President Eisenhower. Then there will~~ come the normal ~~be~~ consultations with Britain ~~and France~~ and no doubt West Germany ~~over the next step.~~ come the normal consultations ~~over the next step with Britain and~~ France and no doubt West Germany. ~~But the next step also cannot be expect to arrive at the conference room.~~

The Great Powers are still a long way from the conference room.

The cause of freedom everywhere will feel the loss of Ernst Reuter - Mayor of Berlin. Few men in public life ever exhibited more courage, determination or tolerance. Thomas Moore once wrote:"Shall I ask the brave soldier who fights by my side in the cause of mankind if our creeds agree ? Shall I give up the friend I have valued and tried, if he kneel not before the same altar as me ?" As one who knew Mayor Reuter, I think these lines are appropriate.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

TUESDAY - SEPTEMBER 29, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The State Department says the Russians have apparently killed all hope for a Big Four meeting on Germany and Austria. The Department says Moscow's reply to our invitation to such a conference is "evasive and dilatory." I'd like to discuss the Russian note in a few minutes.

In Korea today there's been another delay in the "explanations" we and the enemy will make to prisoners who do not want to go home. Each side is demanding that the other side build better physical accomodations--"explanations centers"--they are being called. Both have agreed to improve their present facilities. The allies say they cannot do the job properly by tomorrow--when the explaining was supposed to begin.

In Berlin today Mayor Ernst Reuter died after a heart attack. He was 64 years old. Chancellor Adenauer calls his sudden death a "great loss for the German cause." And President Eisenhower said: "Liberty loving people everywhere will mourn Reuter's death."

Here is a note from Dick Hottelet on Mayor Reuter's death:

Mayor Ernst Reuter of Berlin was a living example of what sheer courage and keen intelligence can do in the fight against Communist aggression. He knew Soviet imperialism from the inside; Stalin had said of him: "Young Reuter has a clear and brilliant mind, but he is a little too independent." He was Secretary General of the German Communist Party more than thirty years ago, until his independence drove him out in disgust. Under Hitler, he went into concentration camps and exile as a Social Democrat. Reuter chose to come back in 1946 from a comfortable life to the cold and poverty of Berlin - a shell of a city with the highest suicide rate in the world. In 1948, he became Lord Mayor and helped win the battle of Berlin against blockade, pressure and subversion. He inspired his people - he inspired the Western allies, and he roused the frantic hatred of the Russians and their German Communist satellites. He knew the Soviet leaders better than they did themselves, knew how hollow and bewildered and desperate they were, and he faced them with all the inner confidence and superiority of a man who knows that freedom will win in the end. Reuter was more than a wise man. He was in a very personal sense a brave man. He knew that Moscow wanted few things as much as to be rid of him. Yet he roamed Berlin alone and when he left Berlin, on numberless trips to gain support for his city, he drove the hundred miles through the Soviet zone. Why? "Because" he said "we have a right to do so and it would be fatal to let the Russians see that they can frighten us from doing anything we are entitled to do." Even as a world figure, Reuter never stopped being a common man. He hated stuffed shirts, as much as dictators, and took pleasure in deflating them. He felt deeply, but never lost his balance. With all his contempt for Communism, he had only sympathy for the people of Russia. And though he defied Soviet power and wanted to come to grips with it, he had no liking for bluff or empty gestures. Berlin has lost its good spirit. Germany has lost a great statesman. The world has lost a fighter in the cause of Freedom. The best way to honor his memory is to follow his example.

The Vatican City newspaper says today that Poland's Stefan Cardinal Wicsinski is now under arrest...after Polish police arrested him in Warsaw and made a detailed search of his home. The Polish Government in exile--in London--says the Cardinal's arrest is part of a Communist plot to stir up a revolt in Poland, which could be "crushed in a blood bath." And the leaders of the American Roman Catholic hierarchy say the Cardinal's arrest is "an infamous blow against a heroic and helpless people."

In Iran, Premier Zahedi's new government has told the people that the nationalized oil industry is in the red for more than $87,000,000. The government says foreign experts will be needed to get the oil industry operating again.

In Washington today high administration sources told reporters that California's Governor Warren will be the next Chief Justice of the United States. These sources say the President has made his decision...and may announce the appointment within 24 hours. Today the President picked former Republican Senator John A. Danaher of Connecticut to be a judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. He'll succeed the late Judge Proctor. Danaher, who must be confirmed by the Senate, served in the Senate from 1938 to 1944.

Defense Secretary Wilson told reporters today there is "every reason to believe" that we lead the Russians in all military fields. Wilson said the Air Force may reach 120 wings twelve months ahead of schedule. He cautioned against Americans "becoming panicky" because of Soviet military might. He also cautioned against "complacency."

Civil Defense Chief Peterson, back from a European tour, said today that Russia "has enough atomic bombs to drop one or more on every major American city at the same time." Peterson said we could have from eight to twenty-two million casualties in this country from one Russian attack.

The Justice Department says that since the first of the year, 578 undesirable aliens have been deported. Forty-two were classified as subversive...the rest were criminal, immoral or narcotic addicts.

Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin today married Jean Kerr, who was formerly on his office staff, in Washington's St. Mathews Roman Catholic Cathedral. The President and Mrs. Eisenhower did not attend...sent their regrets...but high government officials from Vice President Nixon down did attend. And thousands of persons greeted the couple outside the cathedral.

Here in New York, the American League Club owners today voted unanimously to approve the transfer of the St. Louis Browns franchise to Baltimore. And New York's Mayor Impellitieri (defeated two to one in the recent Democratic primary) announced that he'll run for re-election as an Independent.

Today's Soviet note is a reply to the Western note which proposed a conference of the four powers on Germany and Austria, to be held in Lugano on October 15. It ignores that proposal, makes no mention of Lugano or the date, nor offers any other time or place. What it does is to propose two conferences, one of five powers, including Communist China, to deal with world tensions, particularly in Asia and the Pacific, and a four-power conference to deal with Germany. Austria is dismissed with a shrug as something to be taken up through ordinary diplomatic channels.

The note does not make clear whether the proposed conference on Germany can be held, if a conference of the five powers is rejected. That, of course, is a deliberately intended unclarity. For this note is no quick step into the conference room. It is a familiar maneuver in the cold war. (That is said simply to describe it.) For despite loud assurances from some super-optimists that a fresh wind is blowing behind the Iron Curtain--a wind of pacific and benevolent intentions--the Kremlin continues to wage the cold war, and to do it with its familiar tactics.

The German conference, which really is the big issue at stake, is pushed into second place. It is outranked by a conference which the Chinese are to attend. Then it is shackled by conditions which the Western Powers cannot accept. That part of the note that deals with the German question proposes first of all a German peace conference and the establishment of a provisional German government, in which the East German Communists would participate. The Kremlin wants this done BEFORE German elections are arranged, at least it mentions the two steps first. The German elections, which are put third, are also to be prepared and controlled by this provisional government, that is to say, with the Communists participating.

These proposals are unacceptable, as the Kremlin knew they would be when it made them. They have been refused in previous western notes. They are significant now, because, for one thing, they suggest that the Kremlin may have decided not to permit the unification of Germany unless the Communists are given a role they cannot possibly win in a free election. And since this is the first time the Kremlin has formally demanded that the Communists have a part in preparing and controlling the election, it looks like a veto on a free election ever being held in East Germany. Only if the Communists have a hand in preparing and conducting the election can they hope to save something from the flood of votes that is sure to overwhelm them if the election is free. The Western Powers, it will be recalled, wanted the elections prepared for and supervised by a United Nations commission.

All this is so forbidding as to overshadow any skill the Kremlin may have thought to show in the note. It probably hoped to be effective in introducing Asian questions into a European situation. It proposed that the FIVE power conference should deal with three regions, Korea, Southeast Asia and the Pacific. This is the first time the Kremlin has specified Southeast Asia and the Pacific as regions where a big-power conference might reach an understanding. Mention of Southeast Asia is of acute interest to France, for the French desperately want peace there, and not a few Frenchmen do not want to see Germany armed or united. Here is a note ostensibly dealing with the German question, that ends up with putting an Asian conference first and a German conference second. That clearly is intended to make the French stop and think.

The reference to the Pacific also is attracting comment, but the meaning of it is obscure. London and Paris observers think it may refer to the security pact in the Pacific, made by the United States with Australia and New Zealand (Britain and France were excluded.) The Kremlin knows that the British have been especially unhappy at being left out. And this may be a sly way of exploiting their resentment.

Official comment in Washington on the note calls it "evasive" and "dilatory". But it was stressed that the note was still being studied. The great powers are still a long way from the conference room.

The cause of freedom everywhere will feel the loss of Ernst Reuter - Mayor of Berlin. Few men in public life ever exhibited more courage, determination or tolerance. Thomas Moore once wrote: "Shall I ask the brave soldier who fights by my side in the cause of mankind if our creeds agree? Shall I give up the friend I have valued and tried, if he kneel not before the same altar as me?" As one who knew Mayor Reuter, I think these lines are appropriate.

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday, September 30, 1953

This is the news:

The President said today that Russia's possession of the hydrogen bomb is a physical fact of the utmost importance to the world. He told reporters: it is now more important than ever that we find out if Russia will honestly try to reach agreements on peace with the free world. The President said the only thing worse than winning an atomic war would be losing it. He is studying the situation. And as soon as he evaluates the Soviet threat he will give ALL OF us a frank statement on what must be done. Mr. Eisenhower assured the world that this country is not pugnacious.. AND we have not lost confidence in the USEFULNESS OF THE conference table [redacted] to achieve peace.

The President had a number of things to tell reporters today. He announced the appointment of California's Governor Earl Warren to be chief justice of the United States..succeeding the late Fred Vinson. The President described Warren as a man of integrity and honesty.. a man possessed of a middle of the road philosophy... experienced in the law and the operations of government. Mr. Eisenhower predicted that Warren would be a great chief justice. The governor, who is expected to take up his new job in Washington on Monday, wired the President his "humble acceptance" of the appointment...which must be confirmed by the Senate. And Adlai Stevenson called it "an excellent appointment" and told reporters he has the utmost respect and personal regard for Governor Warren.

Reporters asked the President about former Labor Secretary Durkin's charge that Mr. Eisenhower had backed out of an agreement to amend the Taft-Hartley law. The President--showing more anger than at any news conference in the White House..told the reporters: He has never knowingly broken an agreement with any associate. And he said that if anybody in the room has evidence to the contrary he wanted to hear it then and there. None of the reporters spoke. Mr. Eisenhower told them that the truth is that no agreement on proposed changes in the law had been reached with Martin Durkin.

The President also made it clear that he does not propose to ask Congress for a federal sales tax. He was not definite on the possibilities of a tax at the manufacturers level.(.which could be passed on the consumers..). The President said he thinks our agreement with Spain for the use of Spanish bases will be of great benefit to the American people... AND He denounced the forced retirement of the Catholic Cardinal in Warsaw as a source of deep resentment to the American people..,

The government today announced an agreement with [redacted] FRANCE TO permit a greater French effort to end the war in Indo-China. We'll give the French 385-millions in arms.. in addition to 400-millions already approved by the Congress. That MEANS [redacted] we'll be paying more than 70 per cent of the Financial cost of the Indo-China [redacted] war. France promises "to make a determined effort to break up and destroy the regaular enemy forces" in Indo-China. As a first step some 9-thousand crack French troops now stationed in Germany.. colonials from Morocco and [redacted] Algiers...will be sent to Asia. The French say this will not hurt their participation in the North Atlantic army. The foreign ministry also promises not to negotiate a settlement of the war without the participation of the United States.

In Korea today, allied officers charged that the five-nation neutral repatriation commission HAS [redacted] "sold out" the 22-thousand anti-Communist prisoners of war. The commission has voted unanimously to require every prisoner to be questioned by the enemy, even if the prisoner does not want to face such questioning. The rules also call for the men to be interviewed individually.. even against their will. And they may be forced to attend more than one "questioning" or "explanation" period. We opposed all of these rules. And allied officers say the commission has given the enemy everything he wanted...and that the principle of "voluntary repatriation" has been "murdered" by the new rules. But the Indian chairman of the commission says: "There is no appeal."

The Army said today that it must reject proposals to send to Korea the parents of the 23 Americans who do not want to return home from enemy hands. The army says this would not be "practical nor advisable." Among other things the men are not under our control..but in the hands of the neutral repatriation commission.

~~In Tokyo today, General Weyland, the commander of the Far East air force, said the communists air power in the Orient now outnumbers our tactical airpower two to one.~~

The United Nations political committee has refused to reconsider the Assembly's decision banning neutral nations from participating in the Korean political conference. The vote came after Andrei Vishinsky warned "there is no possibility of hoping the conference will take place" if the issue is not debated again.

The British today denied Communist China's charges that British bombers and a motor launch recently attacked a Peiping gunboat. The Communists made this charge in rejecting a British protest that the Chinese attack resulted in the "wanton" death of seven Britons.

IN Margate, England, tonight, Left Wing Laborite Aneurin Bevan told his party followers that the United States is rebuilding in Europe "the same evil forces" that led to World War Two. And Bevan charged that the Churchill government is "a weak, demoralized collection of defeatists" who are identifying themselves with the same type in the United States.

In Washington today the Federal Communications Commission authorized an eight per cent increase in interstate long distance telehpne rates. They go into effect at midnight and ~~[illegible]~~ will mean a 66-million dollar a year revenue increase for the Bell System telephone companies.

~~Harvard University's President Nathan M. Puzey said today, "There is an almost desperate urgency for fresh and convincing religious leadership to counteract a widespread lack of religious knowledge and faith."~~

In Hamilton, Massachusetts ~~[illegible]~~ Mrs. George S. Patton, widow of the world war two general, was killed when she was thrown from her horse. Mrs. Patton, who was 67, apparently landed on her head.

6

Here in New York, the International Longshoremen's Union says it has been unable to reach agreement on a new contract. The old one expires at midnight and Union Vice President Connally says a strike is on.. and will shut down every port from Portland, Maine to Hampton Roads, Virginia, by midnight. The strike is expected to cost a million and a half dollars a day. Earlier, President Eisenhower told reporters in Washington that the injunction provision of the Taft-Hartlwy law might be invoked in this dispute. [redacted] Union leaders have said they would postpone the strike for an 80-day cooling-off period if an injunction is issued.

Up at the Yankee Stadium, the Yankees beat the Dogers, nine to five, in the opener of the World Series.

old friend and favorite Baseball reporter — Red Barber.

① What happened?

②. - Wasn't a pitiless battle x

③. - Outstanding play.

④. - What about pitchers telling the tale in a word series x

⑤ - Rose Attention

6 - ~~Hodges~~

What gave you most personal satisfaction

The Yankees are now one up on the Dodgers as another Wprld Series gets under way. But there are ~~six~~ more games to go. And as the Roman Seneca once said:"So long an interval has room for many a hope." Another Roman, Ovid, probably expressed Brooklyn feelings tonite when he remarked:"I had hoped for better things." But the Greek The-ok-ri-tus once said:"Only the dead are hopeless"...and to paraphrase Manager Dressen "The Dodgers is not dead yet."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Wednesday, Sep. 30, 1953
7:45-8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... Up at the Yankee Stadium today, the Yankees beat the Dodgers 9 to 5 in the opener of the World Series. And I've asked a very old friend and my favorite baseball reporter, Walter "Red" Barber, to tell you what happened.

Red, what happened?

BARBER: Well, the Yankees got the most runs, first of all, Ed, and I think that the bulk of it happened right in the very first inning, when Carl Erskine, who is a very fine competitor, very able, but, like any pitcher, need his control, didn't have it. And he was wild in the first inning, and after walking Collins, Bauer tripled and one run was in; and then, with two men out, he failed to throw a strike to either Mantle or Woodling, had the bases loaded; apparently Carl was determined he wasn't going to walk Billy Martin and he didn't, because Martin slammed one to left center for a triple and the Yankees were ahead 4-0. And the Dodgers, I think, spent their strength trying to get even and then the Yankees went on and won it.

MURROW: Well, Red, this has been predicted as something of a pitchers' battle, but it wasn't. But let's go on to something else. How much influence do you think was exerted today by this psychological block of the Yankees being the Yankees and the champions and the Dodgers being up against them and not quite sure?

BARBER: I would say that Brooklyn faces the hardest assignment that a ball club has ever faced in the history of baseball, Ed. I had a very interesting assignment today. I've been a broadcaster for twenty-four years and have always been up in a broadcasting booth. Today I was sitting with my wife down in the stands and just found a brand-new world. And I could hear people talking around me before the game began, and some of the Brooklyn fans were saying -- and they reflected something that's very important -- they were saying: "Gee, it sure is tough for the Dodgers to have to open over here at the Stadium." Here is this great, triple-decked mammoth stadium, and as far as you could see up against the blue sky, one Yankee championship flag after another. I finally got tired of trying to count them. And, gracious, they won the last four straight and five straight pennants. And when you're up against something like that it's ... Well, imagine you're a golfer and you're gonna have to play Ben Hogan!

MURROW: No, I'd rather not imagine that. (laughter)

BARBER: No, those things are very, very important. The Dodgers have got to prove something that they've never been able to do. In reverse, Brooklyn has never won a World Series and they're now going into their seventh. And it must have been upsetting to be there at the Stadium, to have their ace, a twenty-game winner, a fellow that they all admire, believe in, to have him go wild there in the first inning and the Yankees make off with a 4-0 lead, and especially the way Reynolds was going thru the first five.

MURROW: Well, Red, what was the outstanding play of today's game?

BARBER: Well, the outstanding fielding play, I though, was Duke ~~Sxm~~ Snyder's catch in the fifth inning, on the fly ball to deep center field hit by Joe Collins. Duke is a tremendous outfielder. Of course, in Brooklyn we've been able to see him do that all season long.

MURROW: Well, Red, tomorrow it will be Roe and Lopat, is that right?

BARBER: That's right. Two crafty left-handers. The ball players call them "the junkmen" because they don't throw fast balls so much; they throw screw balls and sliders and all sorts of variations, curves and slow curves.

MURROW: Well, then, Roe will not be throwing something that the Yankees are unfamiliar with. They've seen this sort of pitching before?

BARBER: I don't know how much they hit against it, but they've certainly seen Lopat pitch pretty much in the same style.

MURROW: Well, Red, one final question - and I hope you'll take a little time with this. The first time in twenty-four years that you sat in the stands and watched a ball game - what incident gave you the most personal satisfaction, in terms of personalities on that playing field?

BARBER: Well, Ed, I had a growing feeling when Gil Hodges came up, his first time in the second inning, and hit a soft fly ball to left field. And then he stood, in the fourth inning, second at bat and took a called third strike. And I thought to myself, here is one of the nicest men I know, one of the most talented athletes; he didn't get a hit in the World Series last year; he's now gone all for twenty-four; it's a record, it's a record in complete frustration. And I thought that if Hodges doesn't get a base hit, this thing is going to be something, because he had to really fight himself back this year; he opened in a slump. And he's a tremendous man. And when he suddenly hit the ball for his home-run -- you recall that came in the sixth inning -- and Gil never looked. He knew it was gone. And when he started with a very comfortable trot to first base, I just felt good about it.

MURROW: Well, you watched him so long and I've heard you say so often on the air that the man never complained and always took it just as it came, and it must have given you ...

BARBER: I never knew a batter that had as much trouble as he's had in the past year, and he's never made a complaint. He doesn't argue with umpires; he just goes ahead and plays and finally it comes right.

MURROW: Thank you very much indeed, Red Barber. And I hope you'll be back with us again tomorrow nite.

BARBER: Right, Ed.

MURROW: This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today.

-30-

Ediphone trans./ES

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

WEDNESDAY - SEPTEMBER 30, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President said today that Russia's possession of the hydrogen bomb is a physical fact of the utmost importance to the world. He told reporters it is now more important than ever that we find out if Russia will honestly try to reach agreements on peace with the free world. The President said the only thing worse than winning an atomic war would be losing it. He is studying the situation. And as soon as he evaluates the Soviet threat he will give all of us a frank statement on what must be done. Mr. Eisenhower assured the world that this country is not pugnacious...And we have not lost confidence in the usefulness of the conference table to achieve peace.

The President had a number of things to tell reporters today. He announced the appointment of California's Governor Earl Warren to be Chief Justice of the United States...succeeding the late Fred Vinson. The President described Warren as a man of integrity and honesty...a man possessed of a middle of the road philosophy...experienced in the law and the operations of government. Mr. Eisenhower predicted that Warren would be a great Chief Justice. The Governor, who is expected to take up his new job in Washington on Monday, wired the President his "humble acceptance" of the appointment...which must be confirmed by the Senate. And Adlai Stevenson called it "an excellent appointment" and told reporters he has the utmost respect and personal regard for Governor Warren.

Reporters asked the President about former Labor Secretary Durkin's charge that Mr. Eisenhower had backed out of an agreement to amend the Taft-Hartley Law. The President--showing more anger than at any news conference in the White House... told the reporters he has never knowingly broken an agreement with any associate. And he said that if anybody in the room has evidence to the contrary he wanted to hear it then and there. None of the reporters spoke. Mr. Eisenhower told them that the truth is that no agreement on proposed changes in the law had been reached with Martin Durkin.

The President also made it clear that he does not propose to ask Congress for a federal sales tax. He was not definite on the possibilities of a tax at the manufacturers level (which could be passed on to the consumers). The President said he thinks our agreement with Spain for the use of Spanish bases will be of great benefit to the American people - and he denounced the forced retirement of the Catholic Cardinal in Warsaw as a source of deep resentment to the American people.

The government today announced an agreement with the French to permit a greater French effort to end the war in Indo-China. We'll give the French 385-millions in arms...in addition to 400-millions already approved by the Congress. That will mean we'll be paying more than 70 per cent of the financial cost of the Indo-China war. France promises "to make a determined effort to break up and destroy the regular enemy forces" in Indo-China. As a first step some 9-thousand crack French troops now stationed in Germany...colonials from Morocco and Algiers...will be sent to Asia. The French say this will not hurt their participation in the North Atlantic army. The foreign ministry also promises not to negotiate a settlement of the war without the participation of the United States.

In Korea today, allied officers charged that the five nation neutral repatriation commission has "sold out" the 22-thousand anti-Communist prisoners of war. The commission has voted unanimously to require every prisoner to be questioned by the enemy, even if the prisoner does not want to face such questioning. The rules also call for the men to be interviewed individually...even against their will. And they may be forced to attend more than one "questioning" or "explanation" period. We opposed all of these rules. And allied officers say the commission has given the enemy everything he wanted...and that the principle of "voluntary repatriation" has been "murdered" by the new rules. But the Indian chairman of the commission says: "There is no appeal."

The Army said today that it must reject proposals to send to Korea the parents of the twenty-three Americans who do not want to return home from enemy hands. The army says this would not be "practical nor advisable." Among other things the men are not under our control...but in the hands of the neutral repatriation commission.

The United Nations political committee has refused to reconsider the Assembly's decision banning neutral nations from participating in the Korean political conference. The vote came after Andrei Vishinsky warned "there is no possibility of hoping the conference will take place" if the issue is not debated again.

The British today denied Communist China's charges that British bombers and a motor launch recently attacked a Peiping gunboat. The Communists made this charge in rejecting a British protest that the Chinese attack resulted in the "wanton" death of seven Britons.

In Margate, England, tonight, left wing Laborite Aneurin Bevan told his party followers that the United States is rebuilding in Europe "the same evil forces" that led to World War II. And Bevan charged that the Churchill government is "a weak, demoralized collection of defeatists" who are identifying themselves with the same type in the United States.

In Washington today the Federal Communications Commission authorized an eight per cent increase in interstate long distance telephone rates. They go into effect at midnight and will mean a 66-million dollar a year revenue increase for the Bell System telephone companies. In Hamilton, Massachusetts, Mrs. George S. Patton, widow of the World War II general, was killed when she was thrown from her horse. Mrs. Pattom, who was 67, apparently landed on her head.

Here in New York, the International Longshoremen's Union says it has been unable to reach agreement on a new contract. The old one expires at midnight and Union Vice President Connally says a strike is on...and will shut down every port from Portland, Maine to Hampton Roads, Virginia, by midnight. The strike is expected to cost a million and a half dollars a day. Earlier, President Eisenhower told reporters in Washington that the injunction provision of the Taft-Hartley Law might be invoked in this dispute. Union leaders have said they would postpone the strike for an eighty-day cooling-off period if an injunction is issued.

Up at the Yankee Stadium, the Yankees beat the Dodgers, 9 to 5, in the opener of the World Series. And I've asked a very old friend and my favorite baseball reporter, Walter "Red" Barber, to tell you what happened.

Red, what happened?

BARBER: Well, the Yankees got the most runs, first of all, Ed, and I think that the bulk of it happened right in the very first inning, when Carl Erskine, who is a very fine competitor, very able, but like any pitcher, needs his control, didn't have it. And he was wild in the first inning, and after walking Collins, Bauer tripped and one run was in; and then, with two men out, he failed to throw a strike to either Mantle or Woodling, had the bases loaded; apparently Carl was determined he wasn't going to walk Billy Martin and he didn't, because Martin slammed one to left center for a triple and the Yankees were ahead 4-0. And the Dodgers, I think, spent their strength trying to get even and then the Yankees went on and won it.

MURROW: Well, Red, this has been predicted as something of a pitchers' battle, but it wasn't. But let's go on to something else. How much influence do you think was exerted today by this psychological block of the Yankees being the Yankees and the champions and the Dodgers being up against them and not quite sure?

BARBER: I would say that Brooklyn faces the hardest assignment that a ball club has ever faced in the history of baseball, Ed. I had a very interesting assignment today. I've been a broadcaster for twenty-four years and have always been up in a broadcasting booth. Today I was sitting with my wife down in the stands and just found a brand-new world. And I could hear people talking around me before the game began, and some of the Brooklyn fans were saying -- and they reflected something that's very important -- they were saying: "Gee, it sure is tough for the Dodgers to have to open over here at the Stadium." Here is this great, triple-decked mammoth stadium, and as far as you could see up against the blue sky, one Yankee championship flag after another. I finally got tired of trying to count them. And, gracious, they won the last four straight and five straight pennants. And when you're up against something like that it's ... well, imagine you're a golfer and you're gonna have to play Ben Hogan!

MURROW: No, I'd rather not imagine that. (laughter)

BARBER: No, those things are very, very important. The Dodgers have got to prove something that they've never been able to do. In reverse, Brooklyn has never won a World Series and they're now going into their seventh. And it must have been upsetting to be there at the Stadium, to have their ace, a twenty-game winner, a fellow that they all admire, believe in, to have him go wild there in the first inning and the Yankees make off with a 4-0 lead, and especially the way Reynolds was going through the first five.

MURROW: Well, Red, what was the outstanding play of today's game?

BARBER: Well, the outstanding fielding play, I thought, was Duke Snyder's catch in the fifth inning, on the fly ball to deep center field hit by Joe Collins. Duke is a tremendous outfielder. Of course, in Brooklyn we've been able to see him do that all season long.

MURROW: Well, Red, tomorrow it will be Roe and Lopat, is that right?

BARBER: That's right. Two crafty left-handers. The ball players call them "the junkmen", because they don't throw fast balls so much; they throw screw balls and sliders and all sorts of variations, curves and slow curves.

MURROW: Well, then, Roe will not be throwing something that the Yankees are unfamiliar with. They've seen this sort of pitching before?

BARBER: I don't know how much they hit against it, but they've certainly seen Lopat pitch pretty much in the same style.

MURROW: Well, Red, one final question - and I hope you'll take a little time with this. The first time in twenty-four years that you sat in the stands and watched a ball game - what incident gave you the most personal satisfaction, in terms of personalities on that playing field?

BARBER: Well, Ed, I had a growing feeling when Gil Hodges came up, his first time in the second inning, and hit a soft fly ball to left field. And then he stood, in the fourth inning, second at bat and took a called third strike. And I thought to myself, here is one of the nicest men I know, one of the most talented athletes; he didn't get a hit in the World Series last year; he's now gone all for twenty-four; it's a record, it's a record in complete frustration. And I thought that if Hodges doesn't get a base hit, this thing is going to be something, because he had to really fight himself back this year; he opened in a slump. And he's a tremendous man. And when he suddenly hit the ball for his home-run -- you recall that came in the sixth inning -- and Gil never looked. He knew it was gone. And when he started with a very comfortable trot to first base, I just felt good about it.

MURROW: Well, you watched him so long and I've heard you say so often on the air that the man never complained and alwaystook it just as it came, and it must have given you...

BARBER: I never knew a batter that had as much trouble as he's had in the past year, and he's never made a complaint. He doesn't argue with umpires; he just goes ahead and plays and finally it comes right.

MURROW: Thank you very much indeed, Red Barber. And I hope you'll be back with us again tomorrow night.

BARBER: Right, Ed!

MURROW: This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today...

The Yankees are now one up on the Dodgers, as another World Series gets underway. But there are more games to go. And as the Roman Seneca once said: "So long an interval has room for many a hope." Another Roman, Ovid, probably expressed Brooklyn feelings tonight when he remarked: "I had hoped for better things." But the Greek Theokritus once said:"Only the dead are hopeless"...and to paraphrase Manager Dressen "The Dodgers is not dead yet."

Good night and good luck!

Thursday, October 1, 1953

This is the news:

Adlai Stevenson says the President is "very much interested" in the idea of a non-aggression pct with Russia...to help relieve tension in Europe. Stevenson called on the President today..spent a half hour with him and Secretary of State Dulles...then attended a stag luncheon at the White House, at which 16 other government leaders were present.. Then he conferred with the President for another 15 minutes. Stevenson later told reporters: The President is giving close study to the possibilities of an East-West non-aggression agreement, along with other plans to end the cold war. Stevenson explained that "if Russia was unwilling to accept the proposal it would be rather apparent that her peaceful professions are not as sincere as they might seem." He said the President agrees with him, that our offer of a non-aggression pact would put the Russians on the spot. And Stevenson feels that at the very least such a proposal would clarify Russia's intentions, if the Kremlin rejected them.

The President today used the Taft-Hartley act to HURRY an end to the strike of East coast Longshoremen, that began last midnight. This was the first time the President has used the law. He set up a board of inquiry that is to report back to him on Monday. He then could ask a federal court for an 80-day cooling off period. The strike leaders promise to get their men back to work IF AND WHEN AN INJUNCTION IS ISSUED.

The President today also promised to give due consideration to the Republic of Panama's request for the return of lands granted to us in the past BUT that are no longer needed for Panama Canal purposes. And he named Seldin Chapin, former ambassador to the Netherlands, to be envoy to Panama. H. Freeman Mathews, deputy undersecretary of state, will BE the new ambassador to the Netherlands.

Mr. Eisenhower also saw two A.F. of L. officials..Richard J. Gray of the Building and Construction Trades and Maurice Hutcheson of the Carpenters. They sought the President's support for Taft-Hartley law changes which would free construction industry workers from some of the law's restrictions. Both men said the President told them he's reached no definite conclusions on Taft-Hartley law changes.

Secretary of State Dulles today signed a mutual defense treaty with South Korea. He said THAT an essential requirement for world peace and security "is the maintenance of our strength." The document had been negotiated with South Korean President Rhee when Mr. Dulles recently visited Korea. U[redacted]

[redacted] Korea.

Mr. Dulles said today that if the Communists should make an unprovoked [redacted] attack on South Korea in violation of the present armistice we would react "immediately and automatically."

In Korea today, 500 [redacted] anti-Communist North Koreans rioted [redacted]s when they saw [redacted]t Polish and Czech COMMUNIST medical inspectors inside their stockades. The neutral Indian troops, in charge of the prisoners, called IT [redacted] a mass breakout attempt. They were forced to fire at the prisoners.. killed one and wounded at least five. The Indians say some of their soldiers were injured. Diplomats at the United Nations were surprised by this news because only last Monday India's delegate said Indian guards in Korea were not armed. There was no progress today on the matter of "explanations" to troops who do not want to go home. And neither side seems to be in any hurry to question These [redacted] men.

The French announced today that their battalion that has fought with the allies in Korea will be transferred within the next few weeks to Indo-China.

The British Labor Party today rejected leftist demands for the withdrawal of American military forces from Britain. But the party did attack the recent American military alliance with Spain. A foreign policy resolution said: "The Labor Party believes that close co-operation with the United States is vital to Britain and the Commonwealth as a whole." And former Prime Minister Atlee appealed for an end to the British-American wrangling. He reminded the Labor delegates that Russia started the cold war, and said he believes that as time goes on it will be found impossible to keep the peoples of Eastern Europe under the IRON grip of the Kremlin. Atlee also said: "We deplore the witch-hunting campaign in the United States. We should also guard against making hysterical outbursts against the United States."

The Vatican today imposed the penalty of excommunication on all Catholics in Poland who "sacriligiously raised their hands" against Stefan Cardinal Wisinski. Excommunication cuts Catholics off from their church, and deprives them of its sacrements.

And today Dr. Korowitz, the Polish diplomat seeking asylum in this country, broadcast a message to Poland, telling his former students at [redacted] Krakow university to listen to their teachers in a "critical mood." KOROWITZ said that in most cases the professors do not believe what they teach..they are forced to say what they say..to conform to the Communist line.

In Egypt today a special three-man court sentenced [redacted] a former premier, under King Farouk, to die on the gallows for treason and conspiracy with an UNIDENTIFIED foreign state.

In Washington today Commerce Secretary Weeks predicted that the nation will enter 1954 "at a good level of business and employment." He said despite some weaknesses in the eceonomy the country's economic foundations are secure and many fields of business activitity are well ahead of last year. Reporters asked Weeks if he favors a general excise tax on manufacturers. He said he thought the Treasury [redacted] will take a good look at the situation and come up with something a little different, more orderly and more beneficial to business in general than the current excise taxes.

At the Yankee Stadium today the score: Yankees 4...Dodgers 2. That gives the Yankees two games.

Red Barber

What happened. —

Whats the Story? — Lopat

What was highlight of game. — Stengle —

What about tomorrow. — Is Bridges done. —

The Yankees are now two games up on the Dodgers. And Brooklyn has an uphill fight on its hands, if it hopes to win the 1953 Series. Manager Dressen undoubtedly will have much to say to his team before tomorrow's game. He might quote Thomas Shelton's conclusion:"That nothing is lost that comes at last." Or H.W. Beechers's remark:"It is defeat that turns bone to flint, gristle to muscle; it is defeat that makes men invincible."

Goodnite and Good Luck!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Mr. Murrow

Thursday, October 1, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... At the Yankee Stadium today, the score, Yankees 4, Dodgers 2. That gives the Yankees two games, and that gives us our old friend and favorite baseball reporter, Red Barber, to tell us what happened, Red!

BARBER: Well, I think what happened, Ed, is that two fine professional squads got going and two old professional pitchers, both of them pitching very well, pitched until something broke it up and that something was Mickey Mantle's home-run in the eight inning. That in a nugget (indistinct is, Ed.

MURROW: Well, Red, you were telling me earlier what you regarded as perhaps the story behind the day's game, would you tell us that again?

BARBER: Well, as I was sitting with my wife in a box back of first base, right over my left were some gentlemen that I kept turning around and watching as the game went along because I got the feeling that they were having as much to do with the ball game as the Yankees themselves - they were Scout Tom Greenwade and all he contributed to the afternoon was that he signed Mantle to his first Yankee contract for $1100, and then there was Bill Skiff and also Johnny Noon and Paul Kritchel, all of them in the Yankee family.

MURROW: Well, what did they have to do with the Yankee game, Red?

BARBER: Well, they had been following the Dodgers for the last five or six weeks, and, Ed, maybe a lot of fans don't realize it but this baseball is a very complicated business with a great deal of planning - you just don't put two teams on the field and start at one o'clock. For example on the last western trip the Dodgers made everywherethe Dodgers played, Bill Skiff and Johnny Noon came very quietly into the ball park and sat and watched the game very quietly, but then, they were looking forsomething - they were looking to see what the Dodger hitters hit, what they didn't hit, how the opposing pitchers pitched, and so as they say in baseball they 'wrote the book' on the ball club. And in the person of Lopat this afternoon, the Yankees had a pitcher who had control, knew how to pitch, was able to read that book and ... what's the word you fellows use, implement it? (laughter)

MURROW: That's good enough ... then Lopat read the book and pitched them roughly where he was supposed to, is that right?

BARBER: He certainly did. And the Dodgers had an equally good book on the Yankees; they had been following the Yankees. And I know Andy Hye and Red Cardon had been ... and Preacher Roe was able to implement that book for six innings andI think that Roe began to tire in the seventh as I sit here looking at my score book; when Roe was in trouble in the first inning and was wild, his three put-outs were fly-balls to the outfield ... and then in the next five innings there was only one fly-ball hit to the outfield and that was a soft fly hit by Mantle in the sixth inning - so Roe when he had his stuff and was able to read the book, was getting the Yankees to hit breaking stuff on the ground to the infield but then in the seventh the Yankees began hitting the ball in the air the first fellow to do it was Martin, who hit it into the stands; and in the eight inning, it's rather interesting, that the three putouts were all fly-balls and then there was a single and Mantle's home-run, which was quite a fly - some twenty feet on back where Robinson couldn't get it.

MURROW: Well, Red, what was the real highlight ofthe game today?

BARBER: You mean just as a person ... just sentimentally?

MURROW: Yes, certainly, and I mean ... and personally in terms of (indistinct)

BARBER: Well, aside from the play of the ball game and the players and all, I think that my heart lifted the most in the ninth inning when Williams had pinch-hit a single for the Dodgers (indistinct) Peewee Reese very calmly took a base on balls and the Dodgers had the tying runs on and the mighty Duke Snider was coming to the plate and out ofthe Yankee dugout

- for the only time of the day - treads Mr. Casey Stengel up to the mound, and Stengel walked out there and he called Berra, his catcher, and he and Berra and Lopat stood there for a moment and, of course, Stengel was doing two things - one, he was just saying ... I imagine he said to Lopat or something "Well, now, Eddie, wait a minute, maybe you've forgotten - Snider never hits you on Thursday ..."(laughter) something likethat to sort of break the tension (laughter) andthen when he talked to Berra and to Lopat he undoubtedly was going back to that book about how they wanted to pitch Snider and so then Stengel walked away and my mind went back to this Spring - a lot of the writers had asked him about how to win five straight pennants, this, that and theother and after they'd left he said to he said, "Well, ..." he said "I'll tell you - I'm gonna manage the ballclub to suit myself this year ... nobody can help me because nobody has ever won it ..." and I was thinking about that as he went back in the dugout and sonn the game was over and he went to the club house.

MURROW: Well, this was a casewhere Stengel at least didn't have any book, did he, because no one had written this one for him.

BARBER: Not for five ... for five ...

MURROW: Well, Red, let me ask you one final question: What about tomorrow and ... to quote Mr.Dressen "Are Brooklyn done?"

BARBER: No, no, the Dodgers aren't done. Of course, the record book shows that no team has ever lost the first two games in a Series and then come on to win it. I guess the closest parallel to get ...? in trouble would be the '25 Series when Washington was ahead threegames to one over Pittsburgh and then the Pirates won the last three to pull that one out and it broke Walter Johnson's heart ... (indistinct) game ... But, it'll be Raschi for the Yankees and I'd say the Yankees will be tryingto put the ribbon on it just asquick as they can ...? great finishes if you haven't heard, Ed.

MURROW: Yes, I've heard that (laughter) ... and Raschi is of the school ... and for the Dodgers the little gamecock right-hander, Erskine, who was wild in the first inning yesterday, andhe's going to come back and on those rather small shoulders he carries a heavy burden.

MURROW: Thank you very much indeed, Walter Red Barber. I've been sitting here talking with Red Barber for a few minutes about the ballgame today. This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today. Now, here is Bob Dixon.

ANNOUNCER: (C O M M E R C I A L) ... That's my word for today, and here's Mr. Murrow with his word for today.

MURROW: TheYankees are now two games up on the Dodgers; and Brooklyn has an uphill fight on its hands if it hopes to win the 1953 Series. Manager Dressen undoubtedly will have much to say to his team before tomorrow's game. He might quote Thomas Shelton's conclusion, that "nothing is lost that comes at last." Or, H. W. Beecher's remark "It is defeat that turns bone to flint; gristle to muscle. It is defeat that makes men invincible." Good Night and Good Luck!

ANNOUNCER: (C O M M E R C I A L) ... Listen to Murrow ...tomorrow. THIS IS THE CBS ... RADIO NETWORK.

Ed. trans.P.O.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

THURSDAY - OCTOBER 1, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Adlai Stevenson says the President is "very much interested" in the idea of a non-aggression pact with Russia...to help relieve tension in Europe. Stevenson called on the President today...spent a half hour with him and Secretary of State Dulles... then attended a stag luncheon at the White House, at which sixteen other government leaders were present... Then he conferred with the President for another fifteen minutes. Stevenson later told reporters: The President is giving close study to the possibilities of an East-West non-aggression agreement, along with other plans to end the cold war. Stevenson explained that "if Russia was unwilling to accept the proposal it would be rather apparent that her peaceful professions are not as sincere as they might seem." He said the President agrees with him that our offer of a non-aggression pact would put the Russians on the spot. And Stevenson feels that at the very least such a proposal would clarify Russia's intentions if the Kremlin rejected them.

The President today used the Taft-Hartley Act to hurry an end to the strike of east coast longshoremen that began last midnight. This was the first time the President has used the law. He set up a board of inquiry that is to report back to him on Monday. He then could ask a Federal Court for an eighty-day cooling off period. The strike leaders promise to get their men back to work if an when an injunction is issued.

The President today also promised to give due consideration to the Republic of Panama's request for the return of lands granted to us in the past, but that are no longer needed for Panama Canal purposes. And he named Seldin Chapin, former Ambassador to the Netherlands, to be envoy to Panama. H. Freeman Mathews, deputy Undersecretary of State, will be the new Ambassador to the Netherlands.

Mr. Eisenhower also saw two A.F. of L. officials...Richard J. Gray of the Building and Construction Trades and Maurice Hutcheson of the Carpenters. They sought the President's support for Taft-Hartley Law changes which would free construction industry workers from some of the law's restrictions. Both men said the President told them he's reached no definite conclusions on Taft-Hartley Law changes.

Secretary of State Dulles today signed a mutual defense treaty with South Korea. He said that an essential requirement for world peace and security "is the maintenance of our strength." The document had been negotiated with South Korean President Rhee when Mr. Dulles recently visited Korea. Mr. Dulles said today that if the Communists should make an unprovoked attack on South Korea in violation of the present armistice, we would react "immediately and automatically."

In Korea today, five hundred anti-Communist North Koreans rioted when they saw Polish and Czech Communist medical inspectors inside their stockades. The neutral Indian troops, in charge of the prisoners, called it a mass breakout attempt. They were forced to fire at the prisoners...killed one and wounded at least five. The Indians say some of their soldiers were injured. Diplomats at the United Nations were surprised by this news, because only last Monday India's delegate said Indian guards in Korea were not armed. There was no progress today on the matter of "explanations" to troops who do not want to go home. And neither side seems to be in any hurry to question these men.

The French announced today that their battalion that has fought with the allies in Korea will be transferred within the next few weeks to Indo-China.

The British Labor Party today rejected leftist demands for the withdrawal of American military forces from Britain. But the party did attack the recent American military alliance with Spain. A foreign policy resolution said: "The Labor Party believes that close co-operation with the United States is vital to Britain and the Commonwealth as a whole." And former Prime Minister Atlee appealed for an end to the British-American wrangling. He reminded the Labor delegates that Russia started the cold war and said he believes that as time goes on it will be found impossible to keep the peoples of Eastern Europe under the iron grip of the Kremlin. Atlee also said: "We deplore the witch-hunting campaign in the United States. We should also guard against making hysterical outbursts against the United States."

The Vatican today imposed the penalty of excommunication on all Catholics in Poland who "sacriligiously raised their hands" against Stefan Cardinal Wicsinski. Excommunication cuts Catholics off from their church and deprives them of its sacraments.

And today Dr. Korowitz, the Polish diplomat seeking asylum in this country, broadcast a message to Poland, telling his former students at Krakow University to listen to their teachers in a "critical mood." Korowitz said that in most cases the professors do not believe what they teach...they are forced to say what they say... to conform to the Communist line.

In Egypt today a special three man court sentenced a former Premier, under King Farouk, to die on the gallows for treason and conspiracy with an unidentified foreign state.

In Washington today Commerce Secretary Weeks predicted that the nation will enter 1954 "at a good level of business and employment." He said despite some weaknesses in the economy, the country's economic foundations are secure and many fields of business activity are well ahead of last year. Reporters asked Weeks if he favors a general excise tax on manufacturers. He said he thought the Treasury will take a good look at the situation and come up with something a little different, more orderly and more beneficial to business in general, than the current excise taxes.

At the Yankee Stadium today the score: Yankees 4..Dodgers 2. That gives the Yankees two games, and that gives us our old friend and favorite baseball reporter, Red Barber, to tell us what happened: Red!

BARBER: Well, I think what happened, Ed, is that two fine professional squads got going and two old professional pitchers, both of them pitching very well, pitched until something broke it up and that something was Mickey Mantle's homerun in the eighth inning. That's it in a nugget, Ed.

MURROW: Well, Red, you were telling me earlier what you regarded as perhaps the story behind the day's game, would you tell us that again?

BARBER: Well, as I was sitting with my wife in a box back of first base, right over my left were some gentlemen that I kept turning around and watching as the game went along because I got the feeling that they were having as much to do with the ball game as the Yankees themselves - they were Scout Tom Greenwade and all he contributed to the afternoon was that he signed Mantle to his first Yankee contract for $1100, and then there was Bill Skiff and also Johnny Noon and Paul Kritchel, all of them in the Yankee family.

MURROW: Well, what did they have to do with the game, Red?

BARBER: Well, they had been following the Dodgers for the last five or six weeks, and, Ed, maybe a lot of fans don't realize it but this baseball is a very complicated business with a great deal of planning - you just don't put two teams on the field and start at one o'clock. For example on the last western trip the Dodgers made everywhere the Dodgers played, Bill Skiff and Johnny Noon came very quietly into the ball park and sat and watched the game very quietly, but then, they were looking for something - they were looking to see what the Dodger hitters hit, what they didn't hit, how the opposing pitchers pitched, and so as they say in basebell they 'wrote the book' on the ball club. And in the person of Lopat this afternoon, the Yankees had a pitcher who had control, knew how to pitch, was able to read that book and - what's the word you fellows use, implement it?

MURROW: That's good enough - then Lopat read the book and pitched them roughly where he was supposed to, isthat right?

BARBER: He certainly did. And the Dodgers had an equally good book on the Yankees; they had been following the Yankees. And I know Andy Hye and Red Cardon had been and Preacher Roe was able to implement that book for six innings and I think that Roe began to tire in the seventh as I sit here looking at my score book; when Roe was in trouble in the first inning and was wild, his three put-outs were fly-balls to the outfield - and then in the next five innings there was only one fly-ball hit to the outfield and that was a soft fly hit by Mantle in the sixth inning - so Roe when he had his stuff and was able to read the book, was getting the Yankees to hit breaking stuff on the ground to the infield but then in the seventh the Yankees began hitting the ball in the air the first fellow to do it was Martin, who hit it into the stands; and in the eighth inning, it's rather interesting, that the three putouts were all fly-balls and then there was a single and Mantle's home-run, which was quite a fly - some twenty feet on back where Robinson couldn't get it.

MURROW: Well, Red, what was the real highlight of the game today?

BARBER: You mean just as a person - just sentimentally?

MURROW: Yes, certainly.

BARBER: Well, aside from the play of the ball game and the players and all, I think that my heart lifted the most in the ninth inning when Williams had pinch-hit a single for the Dodgers (indistinct) Peewee Reese very calmly took a base on balls and the Dodgers had the tying runs on and the mighty Duke Snider was coming to the plate and out of the Yankee dugout - for the only time of the day - treads Mr. Casey Stengel up to the mound, and Stengel walked out there and he called Berra, his catcher, and he and Berra and Lopat stood there for amoment and, of course, Stengel was doing two things - one, he was just saying - I imagine he said to Lopat or something "Well, now, Eddie, wait a minute, maybe you've forgotten - Snider never hits you on Thursday" something like that to sort of break the tension and then when he talked to Berra and to Lopat he undoubtedly was going back to that book about how they wanted to pitch Snider and so then Stengel walked away and my mind went back to this Spring - a lot of the writers had asked him about how to win five straight pennants, this, that and the other and after they'd left he said "Well," he said, "I'll tell you - I'm gonna manage the ballclub to suit myself this year, nobody can help me because nobody has ever won it"; and I was thinking about that as he went back in the dugout and soon the game was over and he went to the club house.

MURROW: Well, this was a casewhere Stengel at least didn't have any book, did he, because no one had written this one for him.

BARBER: Not for five...for five...

MURROW: Well, Red, let me ask you one final question: What about tomorrow and - to quote Mr. Dressen "Are Brooklyn done?"

BARBER: No, no, the Dodgers aren't done. Of course, the record book shows that no team has ever lost the first two games in a Series and then come on to win it. I guess the closest parallel to get? in trouble would be the '25 Series when Washington was ahead three games to one over Pittsburgh and then the Pirates won the last three to pull that one out and it broke Walter Johnson's heart (indistinct) game - but, it'll be Raschi for the Yankees and I'd say the Yankees will be trying to put the ribbon on it just as quick as they can? great finishes if you haven't heard, Ed.

MURROW: Yes, I've heard that - and Raschi is of the school - and for the Dodgers the little gamecock right-hander, Erskine, who was wild in the first inning yesterday, and he's going to come back and on those rather small shoulders he carries a heavy burden.

MURROW: Thank you very much indeed, Walter Red Barber. I've been sitting here talking with Red Barber for a few minutes about the b allgame today. This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The Yabkees are now two games up on the Dodgers; and Brooklyn has an uphill fight on its hands if it hopes to win the 1953 Series. Manager Dressen undoubtedly will have much to say to his team before tomorrow's game. He might quote Thomas Shelton's conclusion, that "nothing is lost that comes at last." Or, H.W. Beecher's remark "It is defeat that turns bone to flint; gristle to muscle. It is defeat that makes men invincible." Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday, October 2, 1953

This is the news:

Undersecretary of State Smith said today, we will not refuse to negotiate any "reasonable compromise" with the Russians./ But we are skeptical of their peace gestures./ Smith acknowledged that the Russians have made a few gestures directed at convincing us of "their alleged good intentions."/ But, he said, when we closely inspected the Soviet's PROPOSALS, we discovered they all have one thing in common: "The Soviets make no sacrifice, and they pay no price, (HOWEVER) small."/ General Smith said we must and will, have peace as soon as the Soviet Union" suits its actions to words."/ And he pointed out that despite Soviet, claims of reducing its expenditures on armaments, we have strong indications that they are actually increasing their armamemnts production./ And we believe they are spending twice as much money on atomic weapons this year, as they did last year. As for Korea, Undersecretary Smith says we are going to hold the Chinese and North Korean communists to the armistice terms that call for a political conference of "both sides".. with no neutral nations represented.

In Korea today, Chinese Communist prisoners who do not want to go home, made a mass attempt to break out of their compounds in the neutral zone area. Indian guards killed two and wounded five others.. (in the second such incident in two days.) The Indian chairman of the neutral nation commission says the camp violence was the result of "well organized groups" formed before the prisoners were turned over to India by the allies. He said "the prisoners seemed to be misinformed by some interested party"..an obvious reference to the allies. And the allied officer in charge of prisoner matters, today informed the neutral Commission that we are FORMALLY protesting the commission's rules on handling the "explanations" to the men who do not want to go home. We say the commission's rules "include almost all of the proposals submitted by the communists" and practically none of ours. The Indian chairman of the commission says the prisoners will be told about the rules in a day or so.

In India, Prime Minister Nehru said today that Asia is in no mood "to tie itself to somebody else's coat-tails." He said neither India nor any other nation could honestly claim to be the leader of Asia. Nehru says the KEYSTONE of India's policy is firm resistance to being pushed around by anybody. And he advised the West to abandon the idea that "if you're not with us, you're against us."

In Washington today, government officials confirmed that the Administration is investigating the possibility of the United States and its allies offering the Russians a non-aggression pact. They said this treaty is one of many alternatives the government is studying.

The British cabinet met in secret today. And the foreign office announced that Minister of State Lloyd has been called back from United Nations headquarters in New York to consult with foreign secretary Eden.

[redacted]

At the United Nations, Henry Ford the second, an alternate delegate, said that no nation can "go it alone" politically or economically. He said he was encouraged by Russia's decision to contribute to the U.N's program of technical aid to backward countries. Ford said the United States will live up to its pledge to make available 60 cents for every 40 cents contributed by other countries participating in the program.

The Polish interpreter who recently fled from a Communist inspection team in Korea said today that there can be no liberation of countries now dominated by Russia--without war. The Voice of America broadcast much of what the Pole had to say about conditions in his homeland but it did not send overseas a reference to Poland expecting the United States to go to war to liberate Poland.

The Defense Department says it is considering an army proposal to level-off the number of volunteers and draftees taken into the armed services. This might stabilize the monthly draft calls at about 34-thousand men a month. The induction rate has been running at about 23-thousand men a month...but has gone as high as 46-thousand.

Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams said today that the cost of living has "almost been brought to a standstill". And Adams said: "most of our people refuse to believe that Russia has or soon will have practically every military secret and weapon advantage that we own." He said: "If ever there was a race of optomists we certainly are it."

The American Federation of Labor's official newspaper said today that Vice President Nixon is "a brash young man" who tried to sell "soft political soap" in his recent speech to the A.F. of L. convention.

In an editorial called "Death of a salesman" the [redacted] newspaper charges that Mr. Nixon "inadvertently" admitted that President Eisenhower had broken an agreement with former Labor Secretary Durkin. Both Nixon and the President have denied this.

Here in the East, the ports from Maine to Virginia, remained quiet as striking longshoremen waited for a Presidential Board of Inquiry to start investigating the dispute tomorrow.

[redacted]

In California, Governor Earl Warren held his last newsconference at Sacremento before flying to Washington..to become chief justice of the United States. The governor told the reporters:"As long as the affairs of government arekept before the people, we are in no grave danger. But if it ever comes to the point where public officers can and do keep affairs concealed from the light [redacted] of day..then we are in danger. He said open meetings between [redacted] reporters and public officials are "the greatest security against secrecy in government which is developing into one of the evils of our times."

In New Jersey, Federal Judge Philip Forman ordered the General Electric Company to give to the public its rights to existing patents on incandescent lamps and their parts. The order was made to enforce a 1949 ~~[illegible]~~ conviction of General Electric on charges of monopolizing the incandescent lamp industry in the United States. A vice president of General Electric said the company will have no statement until it has seen the decision.

At Ebbets Field today the score: Dodgers 3.... Yankees... 2

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Friday, October 2, 1953
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: ..... Well, at Ebbets Field today the score: the Dodgers 3, the Yankees 2. And, again, "Red" Barber has been good enough to come along and talk with us about the game.

Red, what was the real story of today's game?

BARBER: Ed, there are so many stories that we could sit here all night and not nail them all down, but the big, bright, shining story, when you look at it, of course, is the little right-hander, Carl Erskine. When you think about it, I doubt that any pitcher ever carried the load of responsibility that Erskine carried on his shoulders when he went out to the mound at one o'clock this afternoon. He had been a discredited pitcher, wild, and hit hard in just the one inning he worked, the opening game, and the Dodgers went on to a defeat. The newspapers this morning had buried the Dodgers. When I went through the borough at noon it was very quiet as though they believed it was that way and Erskine knew that he held the key this afternoon to be returning to respect ofa fine ball club, to bringing the borough back to life. In fact, everybody connected with the National League was very depressed at noon today. I talked with a lot of club presidents and managers and you could just see the story that was in their mind. Here was a great ball club, the Dodgers, that had beaten them during the summer and yet was going no place against the Yankees and under that load Erskine went out and he really did a job. He not only broke a record, beating Emke (?)'s World Series total of strike-outs, thirteen, back in twenty-nine; he struck out fourteen. Dramatic highlight when he fanned the great pinch-hitter Mize in the ninth inning and Carl just ... he was just magnificent, Ed. I never saw him any better, never saw his fast ball any faster and his curve any sharperand his change of pace, sometimes it seems that over-hand change must have dropped two feet. I know it did on the third strike that Mize swung.

MURROW: Well, what about Campanella and the homer, Red?

BARBER: Well, there again is the big single dramatic impetus, but, before I go on to Campanella let me say this, Ed, that just as a person ... and I'm taking in this Series just as a person sitting in the stands and having a great time of it, but as a person I rejoiced to see Erskine win this game for this reason. He is as fine, as clean-thinking, as intelligent ... I don't know of anybody who is a finer man than ... and you know the old phrase, the nice guys finish last?

MURROW: Uh-huh!

BARBER: Well, there's a nice guy that finished on top and for Campanella. He's another nice guy, and, of course, he's had a terrible time with the bruised right hand. Oh, and by the way, Ed, how does a guy have the Edward R. Murrow luck?

MURROW: What do you mean, Red?

BARBER: Well, you got a brand-new TV show on CBS tonight. Ten-thirty, isn't it? "Person-to-Person."

MURROW: That's right!

BARBER: And you got a guy named Campanella as your guest?

MURROW: Yes!

BARBER: You didn't talk to Roy about this, did you?

MURROW: No! We didn't ... didn't write a script on this one, Red.

BARBER: Well, if you had you couldn't have written it as wonderfully, Ed. Anyhow, Roy has had the agonies (?), the pained (?) hand. He had the greatest years that a catcher had and he's had the most ignominious World Series up until the eighth inning today. In fact, he even froze on a wild pitch in the second inning and let Berra get down to second base. I never saw him do that before, but he made it all well in the eighth inning.

MURROW: Well, now, you were telling me something earlier, that you were not really watching Campanella or the ball game so much as Mrs. Campanella.

BARBER: Well, it's a funny thing, Ed. In that eighth inning when Roy strode up to the plate, I happened to notice from my seat that Mrs. Campanella was sitting down about four rows just in front of me and just in front of an open aisle and I had a clear shot at her and I thought to myself: "I'm going to watch Mrs. Campanella," and it was an odd thing. Mrs. Campanella did not see her husband come up to the plate. She did not see Raschi deliver that ball. For some reason, I don't know why, and I didn't want to go up and ask her, she was a very happy person at the end of the game, but she was looking, before Roy ever got into batter's box, she was looking steadily at the spot in the lower left-field stands that his ball dropped in and she never took her eye off that spot until after the ball was caught by a spectator up there. Now, there's always been a controversy about whether Babe Ruth did or did not call his famous home run shut in thirty-two against Charlie Rube (?), but there is no controversy about this. Mrs. Campanella from the time Roy started toward the plate kept looking steadily at the spot in the left-field stands and she kept looking there until the ball dropped.

MURROW: How do you account for that? (laughter)

BARBER: (unintelligible-interruption)

MURROW: (both speaking-unintelligible) .....something happened in a ball game that he cannot explain.

BARBER: Ed, how do you account for the fact that here on this night of nights you've got Roy as a guest on your first show at ten-thirty?

MURROW: Well, Red, you were also saying something about Jackie Robinson.

BARBER: Yes! Ed, Erskine, of course, is the knight-in-shining-armor and Campanella is the big dramatic hero that came down with the punch, but when you look at the ball game Robinson is an important key. I won't say he's the important key, but it was Jack who suddenly doubled in the fifth inning when the Dodgers were running behind and made Raschi balk. It set up a situation that ~~MMX~~ Cox could squeeze him in for one run to get Erskine even again. It was Robinson with two men out and two strikes on him that singled to get in Brooklyn second run in the sixth inning. Now, take Robinson out of the ball game and with those dramatics otherwise there would have been (one word unintelligible).

MURROW: Well, thank you very much, Red Barber. Would you hazard that we will be here, talking about a World Series game again on Monday?

BARBER: I wouldn't have last night, but I will tonight.

MURROW: Thank you very much, indeed, Red Barber.

This is Ed Murrow.

Ed.trans.-A.A.Car diff (30)

Barber.

Erskine —

what was real story of the game.?

Campbell

Robinson

The heroes of today's game WAS the Brooklyn battery - Carl Erskine, the pitcher and Roy Campanella, his catcher. Campanella's winning homer was struck with a badly damaged hand. But it was probably as Dreyden said: "You often grow hard and stiffen with adversity." Tonite, if you have nothing better to do, perhaps you'd like to meet ROY AND the Campanella family in their home on my new CBS-Television series Person to Person - 10:30 New York Time.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Undersecretary of State Smith said today we will not refuse to negotiate any "reasonable compromise" with the Russians. But we are skeptical of their peace gestures. Smith acknowledged that the Russians have made a few gestures directed at convincing us of "their alleged good intentions." But, he said, when we closely inspected the Soviet's proposals, we discovered they all have one thing in common: "The Soviets make no sacrifice and they pay no price, however small." General Smith said we must and will have peace as soon as the Soviet Union "suits its actions to words." And he pointed out that despite Soviet claims of reducing its expenditures on armaments, we have strong indications that they are actually increasing their armaments production. And we believe they are spending twice as much money on atomic weapons this year as they did last year. As for Korea, Undersecretary Smith says we are going to hold the Chinese and North Korean communists to the armistice terms that call for a political conference of "both sides" with no neutral nations represented.

In Korea today Chinese Communist prisoners who do not want to go home made a mass attempt to break out of their compounds in the neutral zone area. Indian guards killed two and wounded five others in the second such incident in two days. The Indian chairman of the neutral nation commission says the camp violence was the result of "well organized groups" formed before the prisoners were turned over to India by the allies. He said "the prisoners seemed to be misinformed by some interested party" - an obvious reference to the allies. And the allied officer in charge of prisoner matters, today informed the neutral Commission that we are formally protesting the commission's rules on handling the "explanations" to the men who do not want to go home. We say the commission's rules "include almost all of the proposals submitted by the communists" and practically none of ours. The Indian chairman of the commission says the prisoners will be told about the rules in a day or so.

In India, Prime Minister Nehru said today that Asia is in no mood "to tie itself to somebody else's coat-tails." He said neither India nor any other nation could honestly claim to be the leader of Asia. Nehru says the keystone of India's policy is firm resistance to being pushed around by anybody. And he advised the West to abandon the idea that "if you're not with us, you're against us."

In Washington today government officials confirmed that the Administration is investigating the possibility of the United States and its allies offering the Russians a non-aggression pact. They said this treaty is one of many alternatives the government is studying.

The British cabinet met in secret today. And the foreign office announced that Minister of State Lloyd has been called back from United Nations headquarters in New York to consult with foreign secretary Eden.

At the United Nations, Henry Ford the second, an alternate delegate, said that no nation can "go it alone" politically or economically. He said he was encouraged by Russia's decision to contribute to the U.N.'s program of technical aid to backward countries. Ford said the United States will live up to its pledge to make available 60 cents for every 40 cents contributed by other countries participating in the program.

The Polish interpreter who recently fled from a Communist inspection team in Korea said today that there can be no liberation of countries now dominated by Russia - without war. The Voice of America broadcast much of what the Pole had to say about conditions in his homeland but it did not send overseas a reference to Poland expecting the United States to go to war to liberate Poland.

The Defense Department says it is considering an army proposal to level-off the number of volunteers and draftees taken into the armed services. This might stabilize the monthly draft calls at about 34-thousand men a month. The induction rate has been running at about 23-thousand men a month, but has gone as high as 46-thousand.

Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams said today that the cost of living has "almost been brought to a standstill." And Adams said: "most of our people refuse to believe that Russia has or soon will have practically every military secret and weapon advantage that we own." He said: "If ever there was a race of optimists we certainly are it."

The American Federation of Labor's official newspaper said today that Vice President Nixon is "a brash young man" who tried to sell "soft political soap" in his recent speech to the AFL convention.

In an editorial called "Death of a salesman" the newspaper charges that Mr. Nixon "inadvertently" admitted that President Eisenhower has broken an agreement with former Labor Secretary Durkin. Both Nixon and the President have denied this.

Here in the East, the ports from Maine to Virginia, remained quiet as striking longshoremen waited for a Presidential Board of Inquiry to start investigating the dispute tomorrow.

In California, Governor Earl Warren held his last news conference at Sacremento before flying to Washington to become chief justice of the United States. The governor told the reporters: "As long as the affairs of government are kept before the people, we are in no grave danger. But if it ever comes to the point where public officers can and do keep affairs concealed from the light of day, then we are in danger. He said open meetings between reporters andpublic officials are "the greatest security against secrecy in government which is developing into one of the evils of our times."

At Ebbets Field today the score: Dodgers 3 - Yankees 2. And, again, "Red" Barber has been good enough to come along and talk with us about the game. Red, what was the real story of today's game?

BARBER: Ed, there are so many stories that we could sit here all night and not nail them all down, but the big, bright, shining story, when you look at it, of course, is the little right-hander, Carl Erskine. When you think about it, I doubt that any pitcher ever carried the load of responsibility that Erskine carried on his shoulders when he went out to the mound at one o'clock this afternoon. He had been a discredited pitcher, wild, and hit hard in just the one inning he worked, the opening game, and the Dodgers went on to a defeat. The newspapers this morning had buried the Dodgers. When I went through the borough at noon it was very quiet as though they believed it was to respect of a fine ball club, to bringing the borough back to life. In fact, everybody connected with the National League was very depressed at noon today. I talked with a lot of club presidents and managers and you could just see the story that was in their mind. Here was a great ball club, the Dodgers, that had beaten them during the summer and yet was going no place against the Yankees and under that load Erskine went out and he really did a job. He not only broke a record, beating Emke's World Series total of strike-outs, thirteen, back in twenty-nine; he struck out fourteen. Dramatic highlight when he fanned the great pinch-hitter Mize in the ninth inning and Carl just - he was just magnificent, Ed. I never saw him any better, never saw his fast ball any faster and his curve any sharper and his change of pace, sometimes it seems that overhand change must have dropped two feet. I know it did on the third strike that Mize swung.

MURROW: Well, what about Campanella and the homer, Red?

BARBER: Well, there again is the big single dramatic impetus, but, before I go on to Campanella let me say this, Ed, that just as a person - and I'm taking in this Series just as a person sitting in the stands and having a great time of it, but as a person I rejoiced to see Erskine win this game for this reason. He is as fine, as cleaning-thinking, as intelligent - I don't know of anybody who is a finer man than - and you know the old phrase, the nice guys finish last?

MUR OW: Uh-huh!

BARBER: Well, there's a nice guy that finished on top and for Campanella. He's another nice guy, and, of course, he's had a terrible time with the bruised right hand. Oh, and by the way, Ed, how does a guy have the Edward R. Murrow luck?

MURROW: What do you mean, Red?

BARBER: Well, you got a brand-new TV show on CBS ronight. Ten-thirty, isn't is? "Person-to-Person."

MURROW: Tha's right!

BARBER: And you got a guy named Campanella as your guest?

MURROW: Yes!

BARBER: You didn't talk to Roy about this, did you?

MURROW: No! We didn't - didn't write a script on t is one, Red.

BARBER: Well, if you had you couldn't have written it as wonderfully, Ed. Anyhow, Roy has had the agonies, the pained hand. He had the greatest years that a catcher ever had and he's had the most ignomonious World Series up until the eighth inning today. In fact, he even froze on a wild pitch in the second inning and let Berra get down to second base. I never saw him do that before, but he made it all well in the eighth inning.

MURROW: Well, now, you were telling me s mething earlier, that you were not really watching Campanella or the ball game so much as Mrs. Campanella.

BARBER: Well, it's a funny thing, Ed. In that eighth inning when Roy stroke up to the plate, I happened to notice from my seat that Mrs. Campanella was sitting down about four rows just in front of me and just in front of an open aisle and I had a clear shot at her and I thought to myself: "I'm going to watch Mrs. Campanella," and it was an odd thing. Mrs. Campanella did not see her husband come up to the plate. She did not see Raschi deliver that ball. For some reason, I don't know why, and I didn't want to go up and ask her, she was a very happy person at the end of the game, but she was looking, before Roy ever got into batter's box, she was looking steadily at the spot in the lower left-field stands that his ball dropped in and she never took her eye off that spot until after the ball was caught by a spectator up there. Now, there's always been a controversy about whether Babe Ruth did or did not call his famous home run shut in thirty-two against Charlie Rube, but there is no controversy about this. Mrs. Campanella from the time Roy started toward the plate kept looking steadily at the spot in the left-field stands and she kept looking there until the ball dropped.

MURROW: How do you account for that?

BARBER: (unintelligible-interruption)

MUR OW: (both speaking-unintelligible) - something happened in a ball game that he cannot explain.

BARBER: Ed, how do you account for the fact that here on this night of nights you've got Roy as a guest on your first show at ten-thirty:

MURROW: Well, Red, you were also saying about Jackie Robinson.

BARBER: Yes! Ed, Erskine, of course, is the knight-in-shining-armour and Campanella is the big dramatic hero that came down with the punch, but when you look at the ball game Robinson is an important key. I won't say he's the important key, but it was Jack who suddenly doubled in the fifth inning when the Dodgers were running behind and made Raschi balk. It set up a situation that Cox could squeeze him in for one run to get Erskine even again. It was Robinson with two men out and two strikes on him that singled to get in Brooklyn second run in the sixth inning. Now, take Robinson out of the ball game and with those dramatics otherwise there would have been (one word unintelligible.)

MURROW: Well, thank you very much, Red Barber, would you hazard that we will be here, talkin about a World Series game again on Monday?

BARBER: I wouldn't have last night, but I will tonight.

MURROW: Thank you very much, indeed, Red Barber. This is Ed Murrow. I'll back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The heroes of today's game was the Brooklyn battery - Carl Erskine, the pitcher and Roy Campanella, his catcher. Campanella's winning homer was struck with a badly damaged hand. But it was probably as Dreyden said: "You often grow hard and stiffen with adversity." Tonight, if you have nothing better to do, perhaps you'd like to meet Roy and the Campanella family in their home on my new CBS-Television series "Person to Person" - 10:30 New York time.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday Oct 5, 1953

This is the news:

The Yankees won the world series today beating the Dodgers four to three. We'll hear Red Barber tell us some of the highlights in a few minutes/

Earl Warren, the former governor of California, today took the oath as the 14th chief justice of the United States./ The President was in the Supreme Court room when Chief Justice Warren promised to uphold the Constiution and administer justice to rich and poor alike.

Republican Senator Knowland, just back from a round-the-world tour, told reporters in Washington today he opposes any offer of a non-aggression pact to Russia--unless the Russians agree to permit free elections in all their satellite nations./ Only last week Adlai Stevenson said after a visit with the President that Mr. Eisenhower was "interested" in the [redacted] a non-aggression pact proposal./ But Senator Knowland says if we entered into such a pact with the Russians "it would make permanent the condition of [redacted] people in those nations who are suffering from Soviet tyranny. This would not be peace with honor but another Yalta or Munich." Senator Knowland also was critical of India./ He said the Indians [redacted] have pursued "a policy of yeilding to the Chinese Communists before any Korean peace conference has been held." He said:"India is handicapping peace as it handicapped the war in Korea."

And in Bombay, the newspaper "Times of India" accused the United States of attempting to delay or sabotage the processing of prisoners who do not want to return to Communist China and North Korea.

General Mark Clark entered the prisoner controversey today with a letter to the neutral nations reperations commission. He said the allies "will not condone the use of forece or coercion" against the 22-thousand enemy prisoners who do not want to return home. He said the commission appears to be operating on the assumption that these men "actually desire repatriation." And he insisted they be given "freedom of choice."

handicapped the war in Korea."

And in Bombay, the newspaper "Times of India" accused the United States of attempting to delay or sabotage the processing of prisoners who do not want to return to Communist China and North Korea.

In Korea, General Mark Clark has told the Neutral-nations Repatriation Commission that it's operating on the assumption that the 22-thousand Communist prisoners in their hands "actually desire repatriation." General Clark emphasized that the prisoners must have "freedom of choice" on whether to return home.

~~In Washington, South Korea's foreign minister called on the president and then said: If the Korean political conference fails to get started, it will be the responsibility of the Communists."~~

At the United Nations today, Turkey--with the support of the United States--beat out Poland for a seat on the Security Council. (It took eight secret ballots.) The other new Council members, as of the first of the year, will be Brazil and New Zealand.

The President today ordered the Justice Department to seek a federal court injunction, to end the five-day-old Atlantic Coast waterfront strike. The President acted after a special board of inquiry said that an early settlement of the walkout is "exceedingly unlikely."

Here in New York, Federal Judge Weinfeld is considering the government's application. He could reach some decision tonight. Leaders of the striking Longshoremen say if the injunction is served on them tonight, the men will return to their jobs tomorrow.

The White House says the President will spend about two hours in Mexico on a visit to the Rio Grande border when he dedicates Falcon Dam [redacted] two weeks from today. And Mr. Eisenhower gave final instructions to Vice President Nixon who starts a tour of the Far East tonight. The President also told a White House visitor--Arthur Connell, the new commander of the American Legion--that his best golf score since he returned from Europe 16 months ago was a 78 for 18 holes

In Kentucky, William Schnitzler, secretary-treasurer of the A.F. of L., accused the press of a "great cover-up" for what he called "the Republican mess in Washington." [redacted]

And in Indiana, General Bradley said today that the world needs the late Ernie Pyle as greatly today as it did in World War Two. In a ceremony dedicating a plaque to the memory of the late war correspondent, General [redacted] Bradley said:" I know that if he were here he would still be worrying about our soldiers, sailors and airmen; still be sensing the tragedy of war and still be carrying more than his share of front line anguish, of loneliness, of destruction, of death." General Bradley added :"Much of this is still with us in the world today and it still must be seen--written about--and remembered if we are able to eliminate it."

Democratic Senator Jackson of Washington state said today that the Republicans are mistaken if they think they must cut taxes to please the people. He said people are worried about the state of national defense and are ready to continue paying high taxes to build up our defenses. And Republican Chairman Cole of the Congressional atomic energy committee says he's "ready to surrender" the principle of a balanced budget to build up our defenses.

At the Yankee Stadium today, the Yankees took their fourth game and the world series from the Dodgers.

Barber. — Comment on this. —
— Some occasion —

(4) —
— what kind of ones. —
— Venus — Cordgers?

Star — goat? — money. — Strength.

Turning Point.

The Dodgers have now lost their second World Series in a row. But the President of the Dodgers, Walter O'Malley told newsmen:"We got beat and have no alibis but wait 'till next year." This reminds me of something Sam Walter Foss once said:"On the 32nd day of the 13th month of the 8th day of the week, on the 25th hour and the 61st minute, we'll find all things we seek."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Monday, October 5, 1953
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: ..... At the Yankee Stadium today the Yankees took their fourth game and the World Series from the Dodgers and here to comment on this rather sombre occasion is our old friend and colleague, "Red" Barber.

Red, why don't you tell us briefly what happened today?

BARBER: Well, it's hard to say briefly, Ed, unless you just wanted to give the score and congratulate the Yankees' Manager, Casey Stengel, and his players for an unprecedented triumph. Baseball has never seen a team win five successive pennants and five successive World Series and Stengel, of course, ... well, it's just a fantastic record. He's just won everything since he's been up at the Stadium. He's won the pennants and the championships. He's just the winning manager up there.

MURROW: Of course, no one has ever seen a team come up seven times to a World Series and fail to win, has it?

BARBER: No, that's the sad story of the bitter continuing frustration of Brooklyn so the records went in today in the World Series book, more for the Yankees' triumphs and for the Dodgers continued defeats, and, actually, I just came back from the Stadium and in both clubs' dressingrooms it leaves you all sort of torn to pieces. It's a hard thing to report. You see one group of athletes, and very deservedly, happy and rejoicing and yet just a few feet away in another clubhouse, pretty much left alone, other athletes completely dejected. In other words, the Brooklyn Club went out, did the very best that it could. Casey Stengel put his finger on it when he said to Manager Dressin: "This is the best National League team that we've beaten since I've been the Manager of the Yankees," but yet that team wasn't good enough.

MURROW: Well, Red, you've seen a lot of World Series. What kind of Series was this, would you say?

BARBER: This was a Series in which the pitchers had to pretty much throw-and-duck, by-and-large, Ed, because this was the Series that set records for the most hits, the most home runs. They were hitting the ball. Both clubs had power and both clubs used it. I think that last year's World Series was a much more closely (?) played Series with more dramatic tension and suspense and more brilliant fielding catchers. It went down to seven games and was ... practically every game was up for grabs all the way through.

MURROW: Well, Red, what would you say was the turning point in this Series, the crucial game and the crucial play?

BARBER: Well, there were ... there were two turning points, Ed. The Yankees won the first two games, as you recall, and Erskine was the turning point as the Brooklyn tide began to come back in and then the Dodgers won with the free-hitting attack in the fourth game to get it even at two and two, and then the Brooklyn momentum was stopped cold and I think that the Series went on to its ultimate decision, beginning in the second inning, yesterday at Ebbets Field. That was the inning in which Woodling threw Hodges out at home plate. Had Hodges scored ... that was a perfect throw that Woodling made ... had Hodges scored the Dodgers would have gone ahead 2-1, would be on their way to undoubtedly a big inning and very probably McDonald would have had to come out. Stengel and his pitching coach, Jim Turner, were concerned and had the Yankee bullpen going, and then in the third inning, with two out, when Hodges made the error and then the Yankees got the bases loaded and Meyer came on and Mantle hit the grandslam home run, there, in my opinion, is where the momentum changed and, of course, the Dodgers, who are (one word unintelligible) today, they were despemate, they could hold nothing back, and Erskine had to go to the mound a day short of rest. He was not the same fellow that he was in game three and it's a big difference when you're leading three games to two and I think, if I may be permitted my own personal feeling, that the Series turned in the second inning on Woodling's throw and was accelerated towards its decision in the third inning on Hodges' error yesterday.

MURROW: Yes! Red, who is the star of this Series?

BARBER: Oh, the star when you add it all up is little Billy Martin. He started on his first dead bat and he finished it on his last one. Of course, he tied and set records, most hits, twelve, and he's an amazing little feller, very competent and, as Stengel said after the ball game, he said: "Show me something he can't do. I can't find it," and you recall, against Erskine in the first inning of the first game with three men on, one run in, one out, - triple-? trouble, and the Yankees then had four runs and so you might say that Martin set it in motion. He kept it in motion and he just finally called them all home.

MURROW: Another question, Red. Who is the goat or was there one?

BARBER: No, I don't think you could put your finger and say that anybody was a ... was a goat, although there was one feller who was on his way toward being one a long time this afternoon. It was an amazing thing when Ford, on the ball that Berra hit in the second inning over at the Stadium, got tanglefoot (unintelligible) or something. Nobody will know exactly what it was, but at any rate he's suddenly standing at third base and here comes the runner from second, right over there on him, and he's got to start home and he's thrown out. Well, Berra must have hit that ball four hundred feet and two hundred feet high. In other words, Ford could have crawled home and suddenly when Furillo hit the ball in the ninth inning for that dramatic tie suddenly you said -- gee whiz, what a difference it would have made if Ford had scored. In fact, I was sitting right in front of Babe Herman, Babe and Mrs. Herman, the old Dodger outfielder.....

MURROW: Well, I suppose he was pulling for the Dodgers, wasn't he?

BARBER: Well, last winter Babe went to work as a scout for the Yankees out on the Pacific coast and he told Mrs. Barber and me before the very first game, and my wife asked him ... she said: "You'll be pulling for Brooklyn?" and Babe said: "No, I'm pulling for the Yankees because, Mrs. Barber, when money comes in sentiment goes out." (laughter) At any rate, Mrs. Herman turned to Babe after Ford got hung up there and she said: "Well, I'm glad that wasn't you, Babe, because they'd been writing about you again for another thirty years."

MURROW: Well, Red, speaking about money and sentiment, how much money will this Series mean to the players?

BARBER: Well, nobody knows exactly because the number of players' shares has not been announced by the Commissioner's office, but, it's estimated that the Yankees will be around eight thousand, the Dodgers six thousand, or a little less. And, Ed, before we go on let me say this, that ... congratulations to Manager Stengel and to the Yankees; congratulations to Manager Dressen and the Dodgers. They gave it all they had and that's all anybody can do. But there's one other thing to keep in mind and that is the tremendous organization of the Yankees. Topping and Webb and Weiss (?), to keep a ball club up, to keep the playing personnel coming and going, and I think that's something that should not be overlooked when we're thinking about this unprecedented five for five.

MURROW: And Stengel will be back, running the Yankees again next year, will he?

(?-indistinct-laughter)

BARBER: Yes, Ed, he said there's nothing out in California nearly as interesting as this.

MURROW: Well, thank you very much, indeed, Red Barber.

During the Series, "Red" Barber has been good enough to come along and chat with us each evening about the day's proceedings in the World Series.

This is Ed Murrow.

Ed. trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Yankees won the world series today beating the Dodgers four to three. We'll hear Red Barber tell us some of the highlights in a few minutes.

Earl Warren, the former governor of California, today took the oath as the 14th chief justice of the United States. The President was in the Supreme Court room when Chief Justice Warren promised to uphold the Constitution and administer justice to rich and poor alike.

Republican Senator Knowland, just back from a round-the-world tour, told reporters in Washington today he opposes any offer of a non-aggression pact to Russia - unless the Russians agree to permit free elections in all their satellite nations. Only last week Adlai Stevenson said after a visit with the President that Mr. Eisenhower was "interested" in the non-aggression pact proposal. But Senator Knowland says if we entered into such a pact with the Russians "it would make permanent the condition of people in those nations who are suffering from Soviet tyranny. This would not be peace with honor but another Yalta or Munich." Senator Knowland also was critical of India. He said the Indians have pursued "a policy of yielding to the Chinese Communists before any Korean peace conference has been held." He said: "India ishandicapping peace as it handicapped the war in Korea."

And in Bombay, the newspaper "Times of India" accused the United States of attempting to delay or sabotage the processing of prisoners who do not want to return to Communist China and North Korea.

General Mark Clark entered the prisoner controversy today with a letter to the neutral nations reparations commission. He said the allies "will not condone the use of force or coercion" against the 22-thousand enemy prisoners who do not want to return home. He said the commission appears to be operating on the assumption that these men "actually desire repatriation." And he insisted they be given "freedom of choice."

At the United Nations today Turkey with the support of the United States beat out Poland for a seat on the Security Council. It took eight secret ballots. The other new Council members, as of the first of the year, will be Brazil and New Zealand.

The President today ordered the Justice Department to seek a federal court injunction to end the five-day-old Atlantic Coast waterfront strike. The President acted after a special board of inquiry said that an early settlement of the walkout is "exceedingly unlikely."

Here in New York, Federal Judge Weinfeld is considering the government's application. He could reach some decision tonight. Leaders of the striking Longshoremen say if the unjunction is served on them tonight, the men will return to their jobs tomorrow.

The White House says the President will spend about two hours in Mexico on a visit to the Rio Grande border when he dedicates Falcon Dam two weeks from today. And Mr. Eisenhower gave final instructions to Vice President Nixon who starts a tour of the Far East tonight. The President also told a White House visitor - Arthur Connell, the new commander of the American Legion that his best golf score since he returned from Europe 16 months ago was a 78 for 18 holes.

In Kentucky, William Schnitzler, secretary-treasurer of the AFL accused the press of a "great cover-up" for what he called "the Republican mess in Washington."

And in Indiana, General Bradley said today that the world needs the late Ernie Pyle as greatly today as it did in World War Two. In a ceremony dedicating a plaque to the memory of the late war correspondent, General Bradley said: "I know that if he were here he would still be worrying about our soldiers, sailors and airmen; still be sensing the tragedy of war and still be carrying more than his share of front line anguish, of loneliness, of destruction, of death." General

Bradley added: "Much of this is still with us in the world today and it still must be seen, written about and remembered if we are able to eliminate it."

Democratic Senator Jackson of Washington state said today that the Republicans are mistaken if they think they must cut taxes to please the people. He said people are worried about the state of national defense and are ready to continue paying high taxes to build up our defenses. And Republican Chairman Cole of the Congressional atomic energy committee says he's "ready to surrender" the principle of a balanced budget to build up our defenses.

At the Yankee Stadium today, the Yankees took their fourth game and the world series from the Dodgers, and here to comment on this rather sombre occasion is our old friend and colleague, "Red" Barber. Red, why don't you tell us briefly what happened today?

BARBER: Well, it's hard to say briefly, Ed, unless you just wanted to give the score and congratulate the Yankees' Manager, Casey Stengel, and his players for an unprecedented triumph. Baseball has never seen a team win five successive pennants and five successive World Series and Stengel, of course - well, it's just a fantastic record. He's just won everything since he's been up at the Stadium. He's won the pennants and the championships. He's just the winning manager up there.

MURROW: Of course, no one has ever seen a team come up seven times to a World Series and fail to win, has it?

BARBER: No, that's the sad story of the bitter continuing frustration of Brooklyn so the records went in today in the World Series book, more for the Yankees' triumphs and for the Dodgers continued defeats, and, actually, I just came back from the Stadium and in both clubs' dressingrooms it leaves you all sort of torn to pieces. It's a hard thing to report. You see one group of athletes, and very deservedly, happy and rejoicing and yet just a few feet away in another clubhouse, pretty much left alone, other athletes completely dejected. In other words, the Brooklyn Club went out, did the very best that it could. Casey Stengel put his finger on it when he said to Manager Dressen: "This is the best National League team that we've beaten since I've been the Manager of the Yankees," but yet that team wasn't good enough.

MURROW: Well, Red, you've seen a lot of World Series. What kind of Series was this, would you say?

BARBER: This was a Series in which the pitchers had to pretty much throw-and-duck, by-and-large, Ed, because this was the Series that set records for the most hits, the most home runs. They were hitting the ball. Both clubs had power and both clubs used it. I think that last year's World Series was a much more closely played Series with more dramatic tension and suspense and more brilliant fielding catchers. It went down to seven games and was - practically every game was up for grabs all the way through.

MURROW: Well, Red, what would you say was the turning point in this Series, the crucial game and the crucial play?

BARBER: Well, there were - there were two turning points, Ed. The Yankees won the first two games, as you recall, and Erskine was the turning point as the Brooklyn tide began to come back in and then the Dodgers won with the free-hitting attack in the fourth game to get it even at two and two, and then the Brooklyn momentum was stopped cold and I think that the Series went on to its ultimate decision, beginning in the second inning, yesterday at Ebbets Field. That was the inning in which Woodling threw Hodges out at home plate. Had Hodges scored - that was a perfect throw that Woodling made - had Hodges scored the Dodgers would have gone ahead 2-1, would be on their way to undoubtedly a big inning and very probably McDonald would have had to come out. Stengel and his pitching coach, Jim Turner, were concerned and had the Yankee bullpen going, and then in the third inning, with two out, when Hodges made the error and then the Yankees got the bases loaded and Meyer came on and Mantle hit the grandslam home run, there, in my opinion, is where the momentum changed and, of course, the Dodgers, whwer desperate, they could hold nothing back, and Erskine had to go to the mound a day short of rest. He was not the same fellow that he was in game three and it's a big difference when you're leading three games to two and I think, if I may be permitted my own personal feeling, that the Series turned in the second inning on Woodling's throw and was accelerated towards its decision in the third inning on Hodges' error yesterday.

MURROW: Yes! Red, who is the star of this Series?

BARBER: Oh, the star when you add it all up is little Billy Martin. He started on his first dead bat and he finished it on his last one. Of course, he tied and set records, most hits, twelve, and he's an amazing little feller, very competent and, as Stengel said after the ball game, he said: "Show me something he can't do. I can't find it," and you recall, against Erskine in the first inning of the first game with three men on, one run in, one out, and the Yankees then had four runs and so you might say that Martin set it in motion. He kept it in motion and he just finally called them all home.

MURROW: Another question, Red. Who is the goat or was there one?

BARBER: No, I don't think you could put your finger and say that anybody was a - was a goat, although there was one feller who was on his way toward being one a long time this afternoon. It was an amazing thing when Ford, on the ball that Berra hit in the second inning over at the Stadium, got tanglefoot or something. Nobody will know exactly what it was, but at any rate he's suddenly standing at third base and here comes the runner from second, right over there on him, and he's got to start home and he's thrown out. Well, Berra must have hit that ball four hundred feet and two hundred feet high. In other words, Ford could have crawled home and suddenly when Furillo hit the ball in the ninth inning for that dramatic tie suddenly you said - gee whiz, what a difference it would have made if Ford had scored. In fact, I was sitting right in front of Babe Herman, Babe and Mrs. Herman, the old Dodger outfielder -

MURROW: Well, I suppose he was pulling for the Dodgers, wasn't he?

BARBER: Well, last winter Babe went to work as a scout for the Yankees out on the Pacific coast and he told Mrs. Barber and me before the very first game, and my wife asked him; she said: "You'll be pulling for Brooklyn? and Babe said: "No, I'm pulling for the Yankees because, Mrs. Barber, when money comes in sentiment goes out." At any rate, Mrs. Herman turned to Babe after Ford got hung up there and she said: "Well, I'm glad that wasn't you, Babe, because they'd been writing about you again for another thirty years."

MURROW: Well, Red, speaking about money and sentiment, how much money will this Series mean to the players?

BARBER: Well, nobody knows exactly because the number of players' shares has not been announced by the Commissioner's office, but, it's estimated that the Yankees will be around eight thousand, the Dodgers six thousand, or a little less. And, Ed, before we go on let me say this, that congratulations to Manager Stengel and to the Yankees; congratulations to Manager Dressen and the Dodgers. They gave it all they had and that's all anybody can do. But there's one other thing to keep in mind and that is the tremendous organization of the Yankees. Topping and I think that's something that should not be overlooked when we're thinking about this unprecedented five for five.

MURROW: And Stengel will be back, running the Yankees again next year, will he?

BARBER: Yes, Ed, he said there's nothing out in California nearly as interesting as this.

MURROW: Well, thank you very much, indeed, Red Barber. During the Series, "Red" Barber has been good enough to come along and chat with us each evening about the day's proceedings in the World Series.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The Dodgers have not lost their second World Series in a row. But the President of the Dodgers, Walter O'Malley told newsmen: "We got beat and have no alibis but wait 'till next year." This reminds me of something Sam Walter Foss once said: "On the 32nd day of the 13th month of the 8th day of the week, on the 25th hour and the 61st minute, we'll find all things we seek." - Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday, Oct 6, 1953

This is the news:

The President said today, that unless the Russians join us in putting atomic energy to constructive uses, the world risks Hydrogen bomb suicide "with the erasure of cities, windrows of unidentifiable dead, mass destruction, and the possible doom of every nation and society." The President spoke of the atomic and hydrogen bombs for the third time in two weeks..at an Atlantic City meeting of the United Church Women of the National Council of Churches of Christ. He said that because Russia is dedicated to domination of the free world we are forced to concentrate on building stores of armamemnts..to deter attack. Mr. Eisenhower said that we and our allies must "build, maintain and pay for" a military might "assuring us reasonable safety from attack."

In Washington today Defense Secretary Wilson estimated that it will be three years before the Russians can deliver a hydrogen bomb attack on the United States. He thinks it would be "stretching it a bit" to say that Russia now has hydrogen bombs and the airplanes to deliver them. And he feels "the Russians are certainly not going to deliver one bomb with one plane and have nothing to back it up." Wilson says he thinks the Russians are "three to four years back of us " in developing atomic weapons."

Over the week-end Chairman Cole of the Congressional atomic energy committee said he believes the Russians already have enough "deliverable" H-bombs to put us in real danger. And yet Val Peterson, the civilian defense chief, says he "assumes" that "no one has the hydrogen bomb yet."

Secretary of State Dulles said today that we AND our European allies are considering offering Russia formal guarantees against the rebirth of German militarism. [I'd like to discuss this suggestion in a few minutes.] The Secretary also told reporters we are not entirely happy about all actions being taken in Korea by the neutral nations Repatriation commission.

The Commission has now agreed not to attempt to force Communist prisoners who do not want to go home, to listen to Communist propagandists against their will. And today, the senior Indian officer in Korea, told reporters that his troops would not try to halt a mass break-out attempt of the anti-Communist prisoners..should one occur. He said this would lead to a "terrible slaughter." The Indian officer said his troops are not concerned with South Korean threats because the INDIANS have both the allied armies and the Communist forces "at Indian disposal."

In Philadelphia tonight, Attorney General Brownell said he wants the government to withdraw as quickly as possible from the many businesses into which it was drawn by the WARTIME seizure of enemy properties in this country. Brownell is going to ask Congress to simplify the public sale of such enemy properties. RANGING from the manufacture of safety pins to synthetic rubber plants.

The attorney general also announced today that seven more alleged Communist officials have been arrested on charges of conspiring to advocate the violent overthrow of the government. The arrests were made in Cleveland, Lorain and Steubenville Ohio and Newark, New Jersey. All seven persons arrested today are said to have been party officials in the Midwest.

Postmaster General Summerfield says his department must eventually start a huge building program. In some cities, he says, increased mail volume is now being handled on the sidewalks "because of inadequate facilities."

Along the East coast today, many striking longshoremen returned to work, after a federal court issued a 10-day anti-strike injunction..under the Taft-Hartley act. But at some places along the New York and Brooklyn PIERS ~~docks~~ dock-hands failed to show up.

In Italy, the Chamber of Deputies unanimously approved a resolution demanding the return of all of the disputed territory of Trieste. Premier Pella told the Chamber that if the Trieste problem is solved, the Italian ratification of the European army pact would be "greatly facilitated.

And in London, the Colonial office announced that Britain is sending military and naval forces to British Guiana because of Communist "intrigues" there. The Colonial office says the forces are being sent "with the utmost dispatch".. in order to "preserve the peace and safety of all classes."

Secretary Dulles, in telling his press conference that the government is considering giving assurances to the Soviet Union against a German aggression, emphasized that he does not have in mind any sweeping treaty proposal, and would not consider underwriting the Kremlin's hold on its satellites in Eastern Europe. He was asked if any guarantee would be offered of Soviet boundaries. On that he was noncommital. He said many possible combinations of ideas are being discussed with Great Britain, France and West Germany, but he would not go into details.

Senator Knowland, Republican leader in the Senate, went on record yesterday as opposed to any non-aggression pact whatever with the Soviet Union, before free elections are permitted in the satellite countries. That, in effect, would rule out a non-aggression pact altogether. Mr.Knowland, however, said he was speaking only for himself. Mr.Dulles pointed out that he also is on record for the self-determination of the Eastern European satellites. But he refrained from ~~enforcing~~ saying that free elections ~~being~~ should be made a pre-condition of a non-aggression pact.

He pointed out that actually the Western Powers and the Soviet Union already have a mutual pact of non-aggression in the charter of the United Nations. But Germany is not a member of the UN and hence is not bound by the charter. Germany's rearmament may be near with Germany's inclusion in a Western European federation. Mr. Dulles called that a special situation, which is why a special assurance to the Kremlin is being discussed. Sir Winston Churchill has suggested a new Locarno--a treaty to assure the Soviet Union against German attack, with the West pledged to help the Russians in that event, and to assure France of Russian help if she is attacked by Germany. But how to write a treaty that would not in effect guarantee Soviet and satellite frontiers obviously is a problem.

Germany's present frontiers were fixed at Potsdam, not finally but subject to review at the peace conference with Germany. At Potsdam the Western Powers promised to support the Soviet-German frontier in a final peace conference. Now the idea most in favor is a guarantee of Germany's frontiers not only with the Soviet Union but with Poland and Czechoslovakia. This would be meant to rule out a German war for lost territories in the East.

But this does not include any guarantee of Soviet frontiers elsewhere in Eastern Europe. It is not a delayed acquiescence to the Soviet seizure of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

This question of recognizing the Soviet borders was a burning issue early in World War Two. It has not burned out. And it is appropriate at this time to add a hitherto unwritten paragraph to the history of how the United States once before balked the Kremlin from winning recognition of its Baltic seizure. It was done by Franklin D.Roosevelt. His stubborn refusal to sanction the British doing it prevented it being part of the treaty of alliance signed by Britain and the Soviet Union in 1942.

Sir Winston Churchill, in his history of the war does not point up this particular story. What has not been fully recorded is the fact that Ambassador Winant came to Washington in March 1942 for the express purpose of getting Mr. Roosevelt's consent to the inclusion of this recognition in the treaty between Britain & Russia then being drafted. Mr. Winant had had a hand in getting the treaty discussions started. The Russians at the time were already pressing for a second front, and faced the danger of a collapse on their own front against Germany. Mr. Winant thought he had a strong case. The proposed treaty was going to bolster up the coalition with Russia, and reduce the danger of a separate peace between Stalin and Hitler.

True, Great Britain was pledged to the United States not to enter any secret agreement for territorial revision during the course of the war. But while Mr. Winant was in Washington Mr.Churchill cabled President Roosevelt a strong plea for an exception in this case. He includes it in his history. The increasing gravity of the war, he said, had led him to feel that the principle of the Atlantic Charter ought not to be construed so as to deny Russia the frontier she occupied when Germany attacked her. He conceded that what he called "a severe process of liquidating hostile elements in the Baltic states" had been used by the Russians when they took the regions. But he begged Mr.Roosevelt to give Britain a free hand to sign the treaty which Stalin wanted.

Ambassador Winant was given plenty of time to present his case to the President. He was taken by the Pres. on a two-hour motor ride. To Mr. Winant's dismay Mr. Roosevelt said no. He told his ambassador the American people would never tolerate the recognition in this way of the Baltic seizures. Mr.Winant argued that refusal might wreck the treaty negotiations with unforeseeable consequences. Mr.Roosevelt would not budge.

All that Sir Winston Churchill has to say on this, in his history of the war, is this laconic sentence: "The President and the State Department held to their position, and now, as will be seen, we eventually arrived at a better conclusion." He means that the Anglo-Soviet alliance was concluded without mention of frontiers. So history had been made on that unrecorded motor ride. A principle had prevailed over expediency. Though Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania were not rescued, they were not irrevocably abandoned, not even to get an important treaty with the Kremlin. The doctrine of non-recognition of an seizure of territory is at best only a negative force. But what President Roosevelt refused to do in regard to the Baltic states in 1942 President Eisenhower is not likely to do today.

We were talking of the problems of international diplomacy and that delicate linw at which principle ends and expediency begins. History has proven that Publilius Syrus was right when he said:"You may often make excuses for another, but never for yourself." For as the Greek philosopher Fe-drus concluded:"Everyone is bound to bear patiently the results of his own example."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday
October 7, 1981

This is the news:

The body of six-year-old Bobby Greenlease, Junior, has been found in St. Joseph, Missouri. And the F.B.I. says he was kidnapped 9 DAYS AGO by Carl Austin Hall, a 37-year-old paroled convict, and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady, a woman with a long list of arrests. Both have been charged with extortion.. using the mails to send ransom notes and threats to the Greenlease family in Kansas City. The F.B.I. also reveals that the family turned over 600-thousand DOLLARS to Hall, to ransom their child. About half of the money has been recovered. Earlier, The F.B.I. in Washington said Hall had admitted killing the boy. A later announcement said he has not confessed. [redacted] Here's the story as the police and F.B.I. told it today. Hall convinced the Heady woman that Bobby Greenlease was really his son.. that he'd been adopted by the Greenleases, who refused to let him see the boy. Mrs. Heady is the woman who went to the Catholic school in Kansas City, pretended she was Bobby's aunt, said the mother was sick, and took the boy away with her. Mrs. Heady says she did not know what happened to the boy until she FOUND OUT TODAY THAT [redacted] he was dead. Her story is that she met Hall, after she left the school, and turned the youngster over to him. Hall says he turned the boy AND A REVOLVER, over to one Thomas John Marsh, another former convict. Hall says Marsh took the boy to Mrs. Heady's home in St. Joseph. Hall says THAT A DAY OR SO later he found the youngster dead OF A BULLET WOUND -- in Mrs. Heady's house. He became frantic..didn't know what to do.. finally buried the boy in the back yard..pretended to cover the ground with flowers. Hall also admits that by mail and phone he asked for the 600-thousand dollar ransom. It was delivered..the culmination of two years of Hall's planning. Then Hall says a strange woman robbed him of 300-thousand and finally the police found the rest when, acting on a TAXI DRIVER'S tip about a free spender, they arrested him in a St. Louis hotel. Hall has been out of the Missouri State penitentiary on parole since last April. He had been sentenced on a robbery charge. Now Hall and Mrs. Heady have been charged with extortion.. face maximum penalties of 20 years in prison and a 5-thousand fine or both. The police are searching for the Thomas John Marsh whom KIDNAPPER Hall accuses of having killed six year old Bobby Greenlease.

In Washington today Senator Kefauver called on the President to take "immediate steps" to clear up the confusion created by recent statements by government officials on Russia's possession of the Hydrogen bomb. [redacted] 7'D

3

like to examine some of the reasons for the confusion in a few minutes.

At the United Nations today, informed sources said that India had complained to the U.N. and the United States, against South Korean threats to attack Indian troops in Korea. (who are in charge of prisoners in the neutral area.) And these same sources say the United States has assured India and the U.N., that we will try to prevent any unexpected military action against the Indians by South Korean troops. Today, the Chinese Communists said any such action by the South Koreans would have serious consequences. And the American representative, General Bryan, said we understand our responsibilities and will discharge them. The Communists demanded that the time for "explaining" things to the prisoners of war who do not want to go home, should be extended. We refuse such an extension.

Pakistan today asked the United Nations for a roundtable conference of all French and Moroccan political parties, to settle Morocco's claims for independence.

The British today prepared to send their second largest aircraft carrier, the Implacable, to British Guiana..with reinforcements to protect the colony against "Communist intrigues." Three other warships, with troops, are already on the way.

In East Berlin today Communist Leader Wilhelm Pieck was re-elected for another four year term as president of East Germany. He pledged to keep working for "unity of our fatherland." ~~And on this fourth anniversary of the communist government in East Germany, my colleague Richard C. Hottelet cables that the Kremlin today made it clear that it will not loten its position in Germany and is determined to support the Ulbricht regime there.~~ But for President Pieck there were difficulties. A "premature" fireworks display drowned out most of his big speech, and East Germans who were herded into Marx-Engels Square to hear it, managed to pile their placards of Pieck in corners and leave the area long before the speech was over.

Much talk has been heard in Washington about a new policy of confiding to the American people the facts about the atomic danger. The name given the policy was "Operation Candor." Yesterday four key men in the Administration talked about the danger. They were the President himself, Secretary of State Dulles, Defense Secretary Wilson and Civil Defense Administrator Val Petersen. All men who have access to the whole book. One thing is sure, these four simultaneous pronouncements were not part of Operation Candor. For while they were candid, they did not fit together into anything recognizable as a national policy. No one trying to piece them together would think [redacted] he knew more than he had known before about the atomic danger and how to meet it.

Civil Defense Administrator Petersen said he believed atomic war was inevitable. He also said he was speaking for himself in voicing that view. One must be thankful for that. He said he doubted whether mankind would be sensible enough, soon enough, to escape the disaster of atomic war. He may be right. But saying so ~~does~~ ~~not further~~ does not further national policy, and does not help national policy.

Secretary Wilson was confronted at a press conference, with a report made by Defense Mobilizer Arthur Fleming to the effect that the Russians now have the hydrogen bomb, and can drop it on any American target they choose. Mr. Wilson asserted that in his opinion it would be three years before the Russians would have both the bomb and the planes to deliver it--planes, that is, that can fly from Russian bases, to American targets and return. Mr.Wilson sounded as though he were trying to allay or avert alarm. He spoke of America's long geographical isolation, which had kept this country from being accustomed to the danger of attack. The French and Germans, he remarked, lived for generations facing each other, and both had possessed armies all that time. "I don't think we should be too panicky" he said.

At the same time President Eisenhower was candidly telling church women in Atlantic City that there are only two alternatives, one being cooperation for peace and prosperity, the other an arms race ending in sudden and mass destruction, the erasure of cities and the possible doom of every nation and society. The physical security of American homes, he said, had almost totally disappeared before the long-range bomber and the destructive power of a single bomb.

Secretary Dulles yesterday was not talking so much of the atomic danger itself, as he was of the necessity of testing Soviet sincerity in the search for peace by negotiation. But this was a sequel to his statement to the United Nations and the AFL that mankind now has the power to destroy itself, and must learn how to control that power.

Representative W.Sterling Cole, chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy said he had given up the hope for a balanced budget, because of the necessity for spending ten billion dollars, on additional defense of this continent. But Secretary Wilson said yesterday he was not upsetting his defense program, not to spend any ten billions, or even two billions. All he would admit to be desirable was an additional spending half a billion, or a little more.

The question in a New York Times head-line today reads: "Candor or Confusion?" Obviously little is being done to help administration leaders to say the same things, with the same emphasis, agree to the same basic facts and lead up to the same conclusions in their public utterances. ~~President Eisenhower has around him men credited with good intuitions about psychological warfare. Such telents might be used on the home front in working out a campaign that will convince Americans about the nature of the atomic danger and the wisest way to deal with it.~~

~~It is a widely accept truism that in the atomic age the only~~

~~total security is in total disarmament. It is just as widely accepted that this is not now attainable, even though it should remain the utlimate objective. But something is attainable, and the people are entitled to hear what it is.~~ But if one man in authority says the Russians can wipe out our cities, and another says they cannot, at least not yet, and we must get used to the idea, even if they can, and still another throws up his hands and says the atomic war is bound to come anyhow, some people will be frightened but many may not believe there is any real danger. And that itself would be be a very real danger.

President Eisenhower is reported to have dropped a plan to take national leaders along with him, on a series of television appearances in Operation Candor. Instead he is said to have decided on making a number of pronouncements himself, of which yesterday's was the first. Yesterday he was eloquent about the need for a strong America, strong in spiritual values as well as weapons. He pleaded the necessity of a stockpile of atomic weapons, but he also stressed his commitment to the long, tortuous road to peace. That was sound enough doctrine. But the speech did not reconcile the dissimilarities of the statements of Mr. Wilson, Mr. Petersen and Mr.

Cole. If the President is going to conduct Operation Candor, it ~~had~~ might best be left to him. But if the others feel obliged to chime in, they should ~~im~~ say what clearly represents a concerted judgment based on the appraisal of the same facts.

That is not said to suggest that any set of men must agree on the mathematical estimate of danger, or ~~know on what~~ guess the same day when the Russians will be able to push ~~through~~ seventy percent of their bombers through our continental air defenses. Such things are intangibles. But a national policy must not be intangible, and if the public is to accept it and implement it, the leaders had better find out what it is, and then talk about it as though they knew.

-6

It is apparent that our foreign policy - much like an army - requires leadership and one set briefing, if the troops are to follow intelligently. Candor is helpful. It is not always easy to follow Oscar Wilde's advice that "Whenever one has anything unpleasant to say, one should always be quite candid." But as Montaigne insisted:"One should not be ashamed to say what one is not ashamed to think."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The body of six year old Bobby Greenlease, Junior, has been found in St. Joseph, Missouri. And the FBI says he was kidnapped nine days ago by Carl Austin Hall, a 37-year-old paroled convict, and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady, a woman with a long list of arrests. Both have been charged with extortion using the mails to send ransom notes and threats to the Greenlease family in Kansas City. The FBI also reveals that the family turned over 600-thousand dollars to Hall to ransom their child. About half of the money has been recovered. Earlier, the FBI in Washington said Hall had admitted killing the boy. A later announcement said he has not confessed. Here's the story as the police and FBI told it today. Hall convinced the Heady woman that Bobby Greenlease was really his son - that he's been adopted by the Greenleases who refused to let him see the boy. Mrs. Heady is the woman who went to the Catholic school in Kansas City, pretended she was Bobby's aunt, said the mother was sick and took the boy away with her. Mrs. Heady says she did not know what happened to the boy until she found out today that he was dead. Her story is that she met Hall, after she left the school, and turned the youngster over to him. Hall says he turned the boy and a revolver over to one Thomas John Marsh, another former convict. Hall says that a day or so later he found the youngster dead of a bullet wound in Mrs. Heady's house. He became frantic - didn't know what to do - finally buried the boy in the back yard - pretended to cover the ground with flowers. Hall also admits that by mail and phone he asked for the 600-thousand dollar ransom. It was delivered - the culmination of two years of Hall's planning. Then Hall says a strange woman robbed him of 300-thousand and finally the police found the rest when, acting on a taxi driver's tip about a free spender, they arrested him in a St. Louis hotel. Hall has been out of the Missouri State penitentiary on parole since last April. He had been sentenced on a robbery charge. Now Hall and Mrs. Heady have been charged with extortion - face maximum penalties of 20 years in prison and a 5-thousand fine or both. The police are searching for the Thomas John Marsh whom kidnapper Hall accuses of having killed six year old Bobby Greenlease.

In Washington today Senator Kefauver called on the President to take "immediate steps" to clear up the confusion created by recent statements by government officials on Russia's possession of the Hydrogen bomb. I'd like to examine some of the reasons for the confusion in a few minutes.

At the United Nations today, informed sources said that India had complained to the U.N. and the United States against South Korean threats to attack Indian troops in Korea - who are in charge of prisoners in the neutral area. And these same sources say the United States has assured India and the U.N. that we will try to prevent any unexpected military action against the Indians by South Korean troops. Today, the Chinese Communists said any such action by the South Koreans would have serious consequences. And the American representative, General Bryan, said we understand our responsibilities and will discharge them. The Communists demanded that the time for "explaining" things to the prisoners of war who do not want to go home should be extended. We refuse such an extension.

Pakistan today asked the United Nations for a roundtable conference of all French and Moroccan political parties to settle Morocco's claims for independence.

The British today prepared to send their second largest aircraft carrier, the Implacable, to British Guiana - with reinforcements to protect the colony against "Communist intrigues." Three other warships, with troops, are already on the way.

In East Berlin today Communist Leader Wilhelm Pieck was re-elected for another four year term as president of East Germany. He pledged to keep working for "unity of our fatherland." But for President Pieck there were difficulties. a "premature" fireworks display drowned out most of his big speech and East Germans who were herded into Marx-Engels Square to hear it, managed to pile their placards of Pieck in corners and leave the area long before the speech was over.

Much talk has been heard in Washington about a new policy of confiding to the American people the facts about the atomic danger. The name given the policy was "Operation Candor." Yesterday four key men in the Administration talked about the danger. They were the President himself, Secretary of State Dulles, Defense Secretary Wilson and Civil Defense Administrator Val Petersen. All men who have acess to the whole book. One thing is sure, these four simultaneous pronouncements were not part of Operation Candor. For while they were candid they did not fit together into anything recognizable as a national policy. No one trying to piece them together would think he knew more than he had known before about the atomic danger and how to meet it.

Civil Defense Administrator Petersen said he believed atomic war was inevitable. He also said he was speaking for himself in voicing that view. One must be thankful for that. He said he doubted whether mankind would be sensible enough, soon enough, to escape the disaster of atomic war. He may be right. But saying so is not national policy and does not help national policy.

Secretary Wilson was confronted at a press conference with a report made by Defense Mobilizer Arthur Fleming to the effect that the Russians now have the hydrogen bomb and can drop it on any American target they choose. Mr. Wilson asserted that in his opinion it would be three years before the Russians would have both the bomb and the planes to deliver it - planes, that is, that can fly from Russian bases to American targets and return. Mr. Wilson sounded as though he were trying to allay or avert alarm. He spoke of America's long geographical isolation which had kept this country from being accustomed to the danger of attack. The French and Germans, he remarked, lived for generations facing each other, and both had possessed armies all that time."I don't think we should be too panicky" he said.

At the same time President Eisenhower was candidly telling church woman in Atlantic City that there are only two alternatives, one being cooperation for peace and prosperity, the other an arms race ending in sudden and mass destruction, the erasure of cities and the possible doom of every nation and society. The physical security of American homes, he said, had almost totally disappeared before the long-range bomber and the destructive power of a single bomb,

Secretary Dulles yesterday was not talking so much of the atomic danger itself, as he was of the necessity of testing Soviet sincerity in the search for peace by negotiation. But this was a sequel to his statement to the United Nations and the AFL that mankind now has the power to destroy itself and must learn how to control that power.

Representative W. Sterling Cole, chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy said he had given up the hope for a balanced budget, because of the necessity for spending ten billion dollars on additional defense of this continent. But Secretary Wilson said yesterday he was not upsetting his defense program, not to spend any ten billions, or even two billions. All he would admit to be desirable was spending an additional half a billion or a little more.

The question in a New York Times head-line today reads: "Candor or Confusion?" Obviously little is being done to help administration leaders to say the same things with the same emphasis, agree to the same basic facts and lead up to the same conclusions in their public utterances. But if one man in authority says the Russians can wipe out our cities and another says they cannot, at least not yet, and we must get used to the idea, even if they can, and still another throws up his hands and says the atomic war is bound to come anyhow, some people will be frightened but many may not believe there is any real danger. And that itself would be a very real danger.

President Eisenhower is reported to have dropped a plan to take national leaders along with him on a series of television appearances in Operation Candor. Instead he is said to have decided on making a number of pronouncements himself, of which yesterday's was the first. Yesterday he was eloquent about the need for a strong America, strong in spiritual values as well as weapons. He pleaded the necessity of a stockpile of atomic weapons, but he also stressed his commitment to the long, tortuous road to peace. That was sound enough doctrine. But the speech did not reconcile the dissimilarities of the statements of Mr. Wilson, Mr. Petersen and Mr. Cole. If the President is going to conduct Operation Candor, it might best be left to him. But if the others feel obliged to chime in, they should say what clearly represents a concerted judgment based on the appraisal of the same facts.

That is not said to suggest that any set of men must agree on the mathematical estimate of danger, or guess the same day when the Russians will be able to push seventy percent of their bombers through our continental air defenses. Such things are intangibles. But a national policy must not be intangible, and if the public is to accept it and implement it, the leaders had better find out what it is, and then talk about it as though they knew.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It is apparent that our foreign policy - much like an army - requires leadership and one set briefing if the troops are to follow intelligently. Candor is helpful. It is not always easy to follow Oscar Wilde's advice that "Whenever one has anything unpleasant to say one should always be quite candid." But as Montaigne insisted: "One should not be ashamed to say what one is not ashamed to think."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Thursday - October 8, 1953

This is the news:

The President said today that Russia now has the capability of atomic attack on us, and this capability will increase wih the passage of time. At a White House news conference, the President took note of recent conflicting statements by Administration leaders on Russia's atomic and hydrogen bomb capabilities. He then read a statement containing these "facts;"

[redacted].

This past August we learned, through intelligence channels, that The RUSSIANS [redacted] tested an atomic device "in which some part" of the explosive force was derived from what is known as the hydrogen bomb. We know too that the Russians now possess a stockpile of atomic weapons of conventional types. And the President says we must conclude that their August explosion was produced by a weapon, or the forerunner of a weapon, of power "far in excess" of the conventional type. As for our atomic position, Mr. Eisenhower does not intend to disclose our strength. But he Does [redacted] say we have a number of atomic weapons. Our strength is large, and increasing steadily. The President hopes we will never again be [redacted] engaged in war. And he told the reporters he has asked all members of the Administration not to comment on Russia's "nuclear possibilities" unless they first check with the atomic energy commission.

Mr. Eisenhower today announced the appointment of a new secretary of labor, to replace the resigned Martin Durkin. The new secretary will be James P. Mitchell, a 52-year-old resident of Spring Lake, New Jersey. Mitchell served during W.W.TWO as head of the war department's personnel division; he was formerly in charge of personnel at Macys department store, and was later vice president in charge of labor relations at Bloomingdales, another New York department store. Recently he has been assistant army secretary for manpower. The President says he is a man of extraordinary ability, great character, and long experience in labor relations.

Al Hayes, the president of the A.F of L. Machinists calls the appointment "incredible". (the same word the late Senator Taft used to describe the appointment of Durkin, a Democrat.) Mitchell is a registered Republican. There is no comment from A.F. of L. President Meany. But C.I.O. President Reuther says Mitchell has labor's good will, and will be given every cooperation as long as "he strives to carry out the purposes for which the Department of Labor was established."

The State Department today sent the Chinese and North Korean Communists a fourth message, asking when they'll be ready to start the Korean political conference. We say an early reply is "imperative." And in Korea tonight we have been asked to tell the United Nations REPATRIATION Commission, why we are "delaying" the construction of a center where prisoners of war can be talked to by the Communists. And the Pentagon says that most of the 7,955 AMERICANS missing in action in Korea "must eventually be presumed dead." The latest death figure for Korea was 25- thousand 604. If all the missing men are dead the figure would rise to 33, 600.

The United States and Great Britain announced today that they are turning over Zone A in Trieste..including the port city of Trieste..to Italy. We will withdraw the 7-thousand allied troops there now, as soon as practicable. The State Department says we believe this will contribute to the "stabilization of a situation which has disturbed Italo-Yugoslav relations in recent years." (I'd like to examine this development in a few minutes.)

British Foreign Secretary Eden told a Conservative Party really in Margate, England, that the West plans a new approach to Russia for world-peace based on guarantees agains aggression. He said:"I think something [redacted] can be worked out." Eden also offered the Russians Big Four talks at "any level." And he said Britain's first foreign policy aim is to maintain the unity and strength of the western [redacted] alliance.

In St. Louis tonight, former President Truman said the economic policies of the Eisenhower Administration follow the thinking of "men who have neither faith nor vision." He said the policies are being laid down by those whom he describes as "penny pinching minds..exponents of a little America."

In Kansas City [redacted] police and the F.B.I. indicate they have doubts over whether a third person was involved in the kidnap-murder of Bobby Greenlease, Junior. The F.B.I. is withholding a nation wide search for [redacted] Thomas Marsh whom arrested kidnapper Carl Austin Hall accuses of murdering the boy. The F.B.I. says their are "inconsistencies" in Hall's story.

Swing Oct 8

The decision of the United States and Great Britain--France concurring-- to turn over Trieste city and the rest of Zone A [redacted] to Italy [redacted] may mean the beginning of the end of the longdrawn controversy between Italy and Jugoslavia.

The first reaction from Jugoslavia is distinctly unfavorable. But mild rejoicing was reported from Rome. ~~Reuter reports from Rome that~~ The Italian government will accept the occupation of Trieste and anticipates an early and triumphant entry of Italian troops into the city. Well-informed diplomats in Washington say they believe that negotiations now ~~are~~ seem be possible.

They think that Marshall Tito wants to negotiate. They recognize that both sides have dug themselves in, and asked for everything. The proposed settlement, giving Zone A to Italy leaves Jugoslavia Zone

B. ~~And~~ so both sides ~~are~~ are sure to be somewhat dissatisfied. In Belgrade Vice-Premier Eduard ~~Edward~~ Kardelj said:"We cannot leave to the mercy of Italians tens of thousand of Solvenes living in Trieste." He added that Jugoslavia is not ready to agree to the decision and will take all measures at its disposal under the United Nations Charter. But mention of the charter is reasuring, certainly more so than speculation that Tito might move troops up to Trieste to protect the Slavs in the city.

~~Young~~ ~~[illegible]~~ ord Jugoslavs paraded the streets of Belgrade tonight shouting:"We and windows were broken in the United States, British and Italian embassies will give up our lives but not Trieste." But since Trieste is not historically or racially a Slavic city this show of patriotism will not necessarily tie Tito's hands if he chooses to negotiate.

Trieste has long been one of Europe's chronic trouble breeders.

The decision of the United States and Great Britain--France concurring--to get out of Zone A of the Trieste Free Territory and turn it over to Italy for administration may bring in sight the end of dispute that a few weeks ago had Italy and Jugoslavia close to the use of troops in the disputed contested region. Trieste has been one of Europe's chronic trouble-breeders. It contains the ingredients of the worst kind of trouble. The formula recipe was is some six parts of national prestige, three parts of traditional racial rivalry, one part of economic viability. and That is a pretty deadly recipe formula. Without any outside interference Trieste has offered all the trouble that could be ~~riddled out~~ surmounted. But there was has been outside interference.

¶ Here was territory that had been for long was Austrian, with the Italians clamoring for liberation. It became Italian after World War One, and then was both boosted and battered by Mussolini. It was occupied by the Nazis in World War Two, and when the Nazis collapsed was teken over by Tito's partisans and held for eighty days till it was occupied by British and American troops. The city of Trieste was mostly Italian, the hinterland around it mostly Slavic. The city lived more from trade with Austria and Jugoslavia than with Italy. ¶ The Americans and British occupied and governed Trieste itself as Zone A. Tito kept the hinterland as Zone B.

Tito wanted both zones. He was in the Kremlin camp, and Stalin tried to get it for him with no success. Tito thought he didn't try hard enough which was one reason (happens to be) of many for his desertion to the West.

¶ But It was before his desertion that the psychological warfare practitioners in the State Department thought up a maneuver that turned out to be a highly expensive piece of (outside) meddling. Before the 1948 election they told the Italian people it was American and British policy to give all the Trieste territory to Italy, that is, both Zone A and Zone B. They did this to assure the election of Alcide De Gasperi's Christian Democrats. It was good election strategy. DeGasperi won. But by the time he tried to cash in on the promise Tito had come over to the West and DeGasperi was told curtly to negotiate directly with him.

¶ It is to the wholly unmerited credit of the United States that the Italian people did not believe we had just been playing politics in promising them both zones of the Trieste territory. They could not imagine our doing anything so sordid as to promise something simply to win an election. And even though Tito appeared in the Western Club as a kind of new-member-on-probation they could not see how that changed the value of a promise. Trieste became the dearest aspiration of all Italians.

¶ At the time of the first NATO meeting in Rome (two years ago) Italy was being lifted up to the full dignity of equality in the Western Alliance, and for an ex-enemy and recent fascist this meant something. But the Italian people were utterly blind to any benefits to them from NATO. All they asked while the Rome meeting was going on was what date it would set for Italy to get Trieste.

¶ A whole sequence of threatening moves resulted from the pledge to Italy. They came to a head a few weeks ago when Italy appeared to be on the verge of mobilizing on the Jugoslav border. Now it is fondly believed Premier Pella can relax. He had skillfully used the Trieste issue to bolster up his weak political position at home. He had let it be known that if he did not get something tangible in Trieste he would resign. A general election in which he joined hands with all but the extreme communists in the name of nationalism might easily bring him victory and put Italy definitely into the neutralist camp. That would have been the end of NATO, of European federation and the Defense Community. It may be that this threat--or say, this possibility--that decided Washington and London to act. What they have done will not delight anyobdy. But it is hoped it will end by untying a bundle of tensions.

In international diplomacy, a promise or pledge can be at the same time ~~both~~ a useful and a dangerous thing. It is probably true, as Sam Slick once said that "mankind lives on promises." But it is equally true as Charles Spurgeon and Owen Feltham remarked that:"Promises don't fill the belly...promises may get friends, but it is performance that nurses and keeps them."

Goodnite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President said today that Russia now has the capability of atomic attack on us, and this capability will increase with the passage of time. At a White House news conference, the President took note of recent conflicting statements by Administration leaders on Russia's atomic and hydrogen bomb capabilities. He then read a statement containing these "facts;" This past August we learned, through intelligence channels, that the Russians tested an atomic device "in which some part" of the explosive force was derived from what isknown as the hydrogen bomb. We know too that the Russians now possess a stockpile of atomic weapons of conventional types. And the President says we must conclude that their August explosion was produced by a weapon, or the forerunner of a weapon, of power "far in excess" of the conventional type. As for our atomic position: Mr. Eisenhower does not intend to disclose our strength. But he does say we have a number of atomic weapons. Our strength is large and increasing steadily. The President hopes we will never again be engaged in war. And he told the reporters he has asked all members of the Administration not to comment on Russia's "nuclear possibilities" unless they first check with the atomic energy commission.

Mr. Eisenhower today announced the appointment of a new secretary of labor to replace the resigned Martin Durkin. The new secretary will be James P. Mitchell, a 52-year-old resident of Spring Lake, New Jersey. Mitchell served during World War Two as head of the war department's personnel division; he was formerly in charge of personnel at Macy's department store, and was later vice president in charge of labor relations at Bloomingdales, another New York department store. Recently he has been assistant army secretary for manpower. The president says he is a man of extraordinary ability, great character and long experience in labor relations.

Al Hayes, the president of the AFL Machinists calls the appointment

"incredible" - the same word the late Senator Taft used to describe the appointment of Durkin, a Democrat. Mitchell is a registered Republican. There is no comment from AFL President Meany. But CIO President Reuther says Mitchell has labor's good will and will be given every cooperation as long as "he strives to carry out the purposes for which the Department of Labor was established."

The State Department today sent the Chinese and North Korean Communists a fourth message asking when they'll be ready to start the Korean political conference. We say an early reply is "imperative." And in Korea tonight we have been asked to tell the United Nations Repatriation Commission why we are "delaying" the construction of a center where prisoners of war can be talked to by the Communists. And the Pentagon says that most of the 7,955 Americans missing in action in Korea "must eventually be presumed dead." The latest death figure for Korea was 25-thousand 604. If all the missing men are dead the figure would rise to 33,600.

The United States and Great Britain announced today that they are turning over Zone A in Trieste including the port city of Trieste to Italy. We will withdraw the 7-thousand allied troops there now as soon as practicable. The State Department says we believe this will contribute to the "stabilization of a situation which has disturbed Ital-Yugoslav relations in recent years." I'd like to examine this development in a few minutes.

British Foreign Secretary Eden told a Conservative Party rally in Margate, England, that the West plans a new approach to Russia for world peace based on guarantees against aggression. He said: "I think something can be worked out." Eden also offered the Russians Big Four talks at "any level." And he said Britain's first foreign policy aim is to maintain the unity and strength of the western alliance.

In St. Louis tonight, former President Truman said the economic policies of the Eisenhower Administration follow the thinking of "men who have neither faith nor vision." He said the policies are being laid down by those whom he describes as "penny pinching minds - exponents of a little America."

In Kansas City, police and the FBI indicate they have doubts over whether a third person was involved in the kidnap-murder of Bobby Greenlease, Junior. The FBI is withholding a nation wide search for Thomas Marsh whom arrested kidnapper Carl Austin Hall accuses of murdering the boy. The FBI says there are "inconsistenci in Hall's story.

The decision of the United States and Great Britain - France concurring - to turn over Trieste city and the rest of Zone A to Italy may mean the beginning of the end of the longdrawn controversy between Italy and Yugoslavia. The first reaction from Yugoslavia is distinctly unfavorable. But world rejoicing was reported from Rome. The Italian government will accept the occupation of Trieste and anticipates an early and triumphant entry of Italian troops into the city. Well-informed diplomats in Washington say they believe that negotiations now will be possible. They think that Marshall Tito wants to negotiate. They recognize that both sides have dug themselves in, and asked for everything. The proposed settlement, giving Zone A to Italy leaves Yugoslavia Zone B so both sides are sure to be somewhat dissatisfied.

In Belgrade Vice-Premier Eduard Kardelj said: "We cannot leave to the mercy of Italians tens of thousands of Solvenes living in Trieste." He added that Yugoslavia is not ready to agree to the decision and will take all measures at its disposal under the United Nations Charter. But mention of the charter is reasuring, certainly more so than speculation that Tito might move troops up to Trieste to protect the Slavs in the city. Yugoslavs paraded the streets of Belgrade tonight shouting: "We will give up our lives but not Trieste," and windows were broken in the United States, British and Italian embassies. But since Trieste is not historically or racially a Slavic city this show of patriotism will not necessarily tie Tito's hands if he chooses to negotiate.

Trieste has long been one of Europe's chronic trouble breeders. It contains the ingredients of the worst kind of trouble. The recipe is some six parts of national prestige, three parts of traditional racial rivalry, one part of economic viability. That is a pretty deadly formula. Without any outside interference Trieste has offered all the trouble that could be surmounted. But there has been outside interference.

Here was territory that for long was Austrian, with the Italians clamoring for liberation. It became Italian after World War One, and then was both boosted and battered by Mussolini. It was occupied by the Nazis in World War Two, and when the Nazis collapsed was taken over by Tito's partisans and held for eighty days till it was occupied by British and American troops. The city of Trieste was mostly Italian, the hinterland around it mostly Slavic. The city lived more from trade with Austria and Yugoslavia than with Italy.

The Americans and British occupied and governed Trieste itself as Zone A. Tito kept the hinterland as Zone B.

Tito wanted both zones. He was in the Kremlin camp, and Stalin tried to get it for him with no success. Tito thought he didn't try hard enough which happens to be one reason of many for his desertion to the West.

But it was before his desertion that the psychological warfare practitioners in the State Department thought up a maneuver that turned out to be a highly expensive piece of outside meddling. Before the 1948 election they told the Italian people it was American and British policy to give all the Trieste territory to Italy, that is, both Zone A and Zone B. They did this to assure the election of Alcide De Gasperi's Christian Democrats. It was good election strategy. DeGasperi won. But by the time he tried to cash in on the promise Tito had come over to the West and DeGasperi was told Curtly to negotiate directly with him.

It is to the wholly unmerited credit of the United States that the Italian people did not believe we had just been playing politics in promising them both zones of the Trieste territory. They could not imagine our doing anything so sordid as to promise something simply to win an election. And even though Tito appeared in the Western Club as a kind of new-member-on-probation they could not see how that changed the value of a promise. Trieste became the dearest aspiration of all Italians.

At the time of the first NATO meeting in Rome two years ago Italy was being lifted up to the full dignity of equality in the Western Alliance, and for an ex-enemy and recent fascist this meant something. But the Italian people were utterly blind to any benefits to them from NATO. All they asked while the Rome meeting was going on was what date it would set for Italy to get Trieste.

A whole sequence of threatening moves resulted from the pledge to Italy. They came to a head a few weeks ago when Italy appeared to be on the verge of mobilizing on the Yugoslav border. Now it is fondly believed Premier Pella can relax. He had skillfully used the Trieste issue to bolster up his weak political position at home. He had let it be known that if he did not get something tangible in Trieste he would resign. A general election in which he joined hands with all but the extreme communists in the name of nationalism might easily bring him victory and put Italy definitely into the neutralist camp. That would have been the end of NATO, of European federation and the Defense Community. It may be that this threat - or say, this possibility that decided Washington and London to act. What they have done will not delight anybody. But it is hoped it will end by untying a bundle of tensions.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: In International diplomacy a promise or pledge can be at the same time a useful and a dangerous thing. It is probably true, as Sam Slick once said that "mankind lives on promises." But it is equally true as Charles Spurgeon and Owen Feltham remarked that: "Promises don't fill the belly - promises may get friends but it is performance that nurses and keeps them."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday, October 9, 1953

This is the news:

We have again warned the South Korean government, that it must do nothing, which would disrupt the peaceful repatriation of war prisoners. [This applies to possible attacks against Indian troops handling the exchange...or any effort on the part of South Koreans to inspire another mass outbreak of anti-communist prisoners.] (There are 22-thousand 6-hundred Chinese and North Koreans who have refused to return home. They are now waiting to hear Communist arguments, on why they should change their minds.)

India's Prime Minister Nehru told newsmen that these prisoners must be given 90-days in which to be questioned, otherwise the peace will be endangered. Nehru also described the South Korean government as "utterly irresponsible." In our note to the South Koreans, they were told that we intend to carry out our responsibility to maintain security. We urged: "moderation...forebearance...patience and restraint."

The South Korean Foreign Minister, here in New York, said that his government is prepared to excercise "moderation". But insists that the 22-thousand 6-hundred Chinese and North Korean prisoners, be given a real "freedom of choice."

Early tonite, the State Department made known that it approves Britain's action in removing from office the Prime Minister of British Guiana - along with five members of his cabinet. The British accused all six of "supporting communist fronts, even seeking to undermine Boy Scout troops." Our statement on British Guiana says in part:"We are gratified by Britain's firm action...we would be gravely concerned if British Guiana fell victim to the international communist conspiracy." There have been no demonstrations in the country so far, even though a state of emergency has been posted. The people were told that if they cause no disturbances, the long-awaited cricket match with Trinidad will go on as scheduled. The first reaction from Moscow is a newspaper editorial saying that "Britain is trying to supress a national liberation movement."

Also in the field of international diplomacy, Yugoslavia tonite has sent a strong note of protest to Britain and the United States. The Yugoslavs want both countries to give up their plan to turn over to Italy administration of the allied zone of Trieste...including the port itself. Yugoslavia said this was an "unjust and dangerous act"...a violation of the Italian peace treaty...and gives "Italian expansionism a bridgehead on the Yugoslav shore of the Adriatic." The Yugoslav note warns that if the decision is not reversed, "appropriate means will have to be taken to protect Yugoslav interests in the Trieste area." [Troops on horesback managed to control today's protest demonstrations. in Thieste -

On Formosa, Generalissimo Chiang sent a message to his people on the eve of their Independence Day celebration. He said "Russia and her puppets in China are heading for disaster. And (promised) that one day his nationalist armies will invade the mainland.

Konrad Adenauer was formally elected Chancellor of West Germany for another four years. And shortly after THE ceremony, he said he looks upon the future with optimism. He hopes for easier times with the French, on the Saar issue. And feels that a "fresh wind will blow through the recent European calm."

In Washington, the President told a group of International legislators today that:"free government can not exist in any one nation alone, if it is surrounded by dictators." He said he is convinced that "free men can govern themselves...and that there can be no future for civilization unless the conference table supplants the battleground, when disputes arise."

Assistant Secretary of State, Walter Robertson, said in New York that The United States will probably provide a billion dollars, for the reconstruction of Korea in the next 2 or 3 years.(This would be in addition to the 15-billion dollars we have already spent in the defense of that country.)

Vice President Nixon, now in Honolulu, told a group of editors: His goodwill trip to Asia is designed to counteract "neutralism there." Mr. Nixon said we want to convince free oriental nations that "standing firm with the United States, is the way to peace."

The Agriculture Department reported today that this year's crop production will be the third largest we've ever had.

James P. Mitchell, former Assistant Secretary of the Army, was sworn in today as our new Secretary of Labor. And after posing for pictures with the President, Mr. Eisenhower pulled him away, saying: "Now I'm going to take you to your first cabinet meeting." ~~He attended.~~

Next Tuesday, the President and Mrs. Eisenhower will drive to Hershey, Pennsylvania to attend a hundred dollar a plate supper honoring the President on his 63rd Birthday.

OPT

And that tropical storm which hit portions of the Florida coast, now appears to be heading out over the Atlantic - with the worst apparently over.

Edward R. Murrow: October 9, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

I have here a page-and-a-half mimeographed document. It is Special Regulation Number 1 - 101 - 10. It is from the Department of the Army, by order of the Secretary of the Army, and General Ridgway, Chief of Staff. Its subject is "letters and gifts to military personnel." The first paragraph says that mail call is a very special event in the Army, respected as such by all commands, under all conditions. The Army recognizes the importance of personal mail in maintaining morale and public understanding, in times of emergency, and in routine peacetime duty. In other words, mail from home or friends is a good thing.

Then we come to the second paragraph which says it is a known fact that "subversive elements have employed personal correspondence channels for propaganda purposes, and for the accumulation of information which may be interpreted into intelligence of value, to an enemy or potential enemy." The Special Regulation says that through such channels Intelligence information may be accumulated with respect to the meteorological study, strength, state of training, equipment, morale and so forth. The Army doesn't want any exchange of personal communication between persons not previously known to each other. Agencies or commands of the Army Establishment will not assist or participate in the development of any exchange of correspondence between military personnel and others, whose purpose and identity is unknown to the military recipient of such correspondence. The Army will actively discourage soldiers from participating in pen pal clubs, chain letters, round robins, or other "blind" correspondence. It will also discourage correspondence with people who send gifts to soldiers, when the soldier doesn't know the sender personally, or the reason for the gift. Letters, cards or other messages acknowledging such gifts should be brief, "preferably showing only the signature of the recipient, and containing no additional information concerning the individual, his family, friends or his unit."

In paragraph 4, the Department of the Army recognizes that the provisions of these regulations impose difficulties on well-meaning persons and organizations, seeking the names and addresses of army personnel, in order to establish an innocent and morale-lifting interchange of correspondence with military personnel who are unknown to those making the request. But the Army must be governed by the requirements of security, and by the knowledge that subversive interests often hide behind the facade of good appearance.

Paragraph 5 of this regulation says that it shall receive the widest possible dissemination throughout the Army, for the information and guidance of all agencies, commands and individuals. Press releases will be made locally in order that the necessity for this action will be "fully understood by the public." XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX

This has been our effort to provide a little of what is called dissemination for this Special Regulation. To this reporter it raises a number of interesting questions. For example, that phrase: "information of value to an enemy, or a potential enemy" seems a little bit vague. Any nation can be a potential enemy. ALSO, Under this regulation, a girl in Wichita knits a sweater, encloses a picture and a note, and the package finally reaches some G.I. in Iceland. He is allowed to send her his signature but that's about all. Very unsatisfactory for the girl and the soldier. Then there is raised the question of how many American soldiers have been subverted by correspondence with individuals who are unknown to them. On this subject the regulation is silent. Soldiers in war or in peace don't have much fun or much freedom, but they grow up pretty fast. The chances are that any hardworking enemy agent could get more information out of the press or radio than he or she could by corresponding with some soldier he or she had never met. If the Army can't indoctrinate the troops with a sense of security and mission, that certainly can't be accomplished by reducing the flow of mail incoming and outgoing. But this is the Army way of doing things. It may be that at some time a dictatorship in peace or in war has issued a similar regulation regarding correspondence by the members of its armed forces. But we have not been able to find an instance where a nation at peace, preparing mightily to defend the rights and freedom of the individual, has issued such an order.

This reporter has known too many American soldiers to believe, one, that they are so puny in belief and conviction as to require this sort of protection; or, two, that it can be enforced in peacetime. The title of this Special Regulation again is: "Letters and Gifts to Military Personnel". It is my opinion that it is a gift to those in friendly and hostile countries who contend that we restrict our freedom while preparing to defend it. The Army may have a case for this regulation, but if it has the case has not been made.

Throughout all of history, efforts have been made to try and control the workings of the human mind. But whether it be speeches, indirect pressures, or letters, Ralph Waldo Emerson was right when he said:"An invasion of armies can be resisted, but an invasion of ideas can not." P.W. Bridgman summed it up by concluding:"There is no adequate defense, except stupidity, against the impact of a new idea."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

We have again warned the South Korean government that it must do nothing which would disrupt the peaceful repatriation of war prisoners. This applies to possible attacks against Indian troops handling the exchange - or any effort on the part of South Koreans to inspire another mass outbreak of anti-communist prisoners. There are 22-thousand 6-hundred Chinese and North Koreans who have refused to return home. They are now waiting to hear Communist arguments on why they should change their minds.

India's Prime Minister Nehru told newsmen that these prisoners must be given 90 days in which to be questioned, otherwise the peace will be endangered. Nehru also described the South Korean government as "utterly irresponsible." In our note to the South Koreans, they were told that we intend to carry out our responsibility to maintain security. We urged: "moderation - forebearance - patience and restraint."

The South Korean Foreign Minister, here in New York, said that his government is prepared to excercise "moderation." But insists that the 22 thousand 6-hundred Chinese and North Korean prisoners be given a real "freedom of choice."

Early tonight, the State Department made known that it approves Britain's action in removing from office the Prime Minister of British Guiana - along with five members of his cabinet. The British accused all six of "supporting communist fronts, even seeking to undermine Boy Scout troops." Our statement on British Guiana says in part: "We are gratified by Britain's firm action - we would be gravely concerned if British Guiana fell victim to the international Communist conspiracy." There have been no demonstrations in the country so far, even though a state of emergency has been posted. The people were told that if they cause no disturbances, the long-awaited cricket match with Trinidad will go on as scheduled. The first reaction from Moscow is a newspaper editorial saying that "Britain is trying to supress a national liberation movement."

Also in the field of international diplomacy, Yugoslavia tonight has sent a strong note of protest to Britain and the United States. The Yugoslavs want both countries to give up their plan to turn over to Italy administration of the allied zone of Trieste - including the port itself. Yugoslavia said this was an "unjustand dangerous act" a violation of the Italian peace treaty and gives "Italian expansionism a bridgehead on the Yugoslav shore of the Adriatic." The Yugoslav note warns that if the decision is not reversed, "appropriate means will have to be taken to protect Yugoslav interests in the Trieste area." Troops on horseback managed to control today's protest demonstrations in Trieste.

On Formosa, Generalissimo Chiang sent a message to his people on the eve of their Independence Day celebration. He said "Russia and her puppets in China are heading for disaster and promised that one day his nationalist armies will invade the mainland.

Konrad Adenauer was formally elected Chancellor of West Germany for another four years. And shortly after the ceremony, he said he looks upon the future with optimism. He hopes for easier times with the French on the Saar issue. And feels that a "fresh win will blow through the recent European calm."

In Washington, the President told a group of international legislators today that "free government cannot exist in any one nation alone if it is surrounded by dictators." He said he is convinced that "free men can g vern themselves and that there can be no future for civilization unless the conference table supplants the battleground when disputes arise."

Assistant Secretary of State, Walter Robertson, said in New York that the United States will probably provide a billion dollars for the reconstruction of Korea in the next 2 or 3 years. (This would be in addition to the 15-billion dollars we have already spent in the defense of that country.)

Vice President Nixon, now in Honolulu, told a group of editors: His goodwill trip to Asia is designed to counteract "neutralism there."

Mr. Nixon said we want to convince free oriental nationa that "standing firm with the United States is the way to peace."

The Agriculture Department reported today that this year's crop production will be the third largest we've ever had.

James P. Mitchell, former Assistant Secretary of the Army, was sworn in today as our new Secretary of Labor. And after posing for pictures with the President, Mr. Eisenhower pulled him away, saying: "Now I'm going to take you to your first cabinet meeting."

Next Tuesday, the President and Mrs. Eisenhower will drive to Hershey, Pennsylvania to attend a hundred dollar a plate supper honoring the President on his 63rd Birthday.

And that tropical storm which hit portions of the Florida coast now appears to be heading out over the Atlantic - with the worst apparently over.

I have here a page-and-a-half mimeographed document. It is Special Regulation Number 1 - 101 - 10. It is from the Department of the Army, by order of the Secretary of the Army, and General Ridgway, Chief of Staff. Its subject is "letters and gifts to military personnel." The first paragraph says that mail call is a very special event in the Army, respected as such by all commands under all conditio The Army recognizes the importance of personal mail in maintaining morale and public understanding in times of emergency and in routine peacetime duty. In other words, mail from home or friends is a good thing.

Then we come to the second paragraph which says it is a known fact that "subversive elements have employed personal correspondence channels for propaganda purposes, and for the accumulation of information which may be interpreted into intelligence of value to an enemy or potential enemy." The Special Regulation says that through such channels Intelligence information may be accumulated with respect to the meteorological study, strength, state of training, equipment, morale and so forth. The Army doesn't want any exchange of personal communication between persons not previously known to each other. Agencies or commands of the Army Establishment will not assist or participate in the development of any exchange of correspondence between military personnel and others whose purpose and identity is unknown to the military recipient of such correspondence. The Army will actively discourage soldiers from participating in pen pal clubs, c ain letters, round robins or other "blind" correspondence. It will also discourage correspondence with people who send gifts to soldiers, when the soldier doesn't know the sender personally, or the reason for the gift. Letters, cards or other messages acknowledging such gifts should be brief, "perferably showing only the signature of the recipient and containing no additional information concerning the individual, his family, friends or his unit."

In Paragraph 4, the Department of the Armu recognizes that the provisions of these regulations impose difficulties on well-meaning persons and organizations seeking the names and addresses of army personnel, in order to establish an innocent and morale-lifting interchange of correspondence with military personnel who are unknown to those making the request. But the Army must be governed by the requirements of security, and by th e knowledge that subversive interests often hide behind the facade of good appearance.

Paragraph 5 of this regulation says that it shall receive the widest possible dissemination throughout the Army, for the information and guidance of all agencies, commands and individuals. Press releases will be made locally in order that the necessity for this action will be "fully understood by the public."

This has been our effort to provide a little of what is called dissemination for this Special Regulation. To this reporter it raises a number of interesting questions. For example, that phrase: "information of value to an enemy, or a potential enemy" seems a little bit vague. Any nation can be a potential. Also, under this regulation, a girl in Wichita knits a sweater, encloses a picture and a note, and the package finally reaches some G.I. in Iceland. He is allowed to send her sig signature but that's about all. Very unsatisfactory for the girl and the soldier. Then there is raised the question of how many American soldiers have been subverted by correspondence with individuals who are unknown to them. On this subject the regulation is silent. Soldiers in war or in peace don't have much fun or much freedom, but they grow up pretty fast. The chances are that any hardworking enemy agent could get more information out of the press or radio than he or she could by corresponding with some soldier he or she had never met. If the Army can't indoctrinate the troops with a sense of security and mission, that certainly can't be accomplished by reducing the flow of mail incoming and outgoing.

But this is the Army way of doing things. It may be that at some time a dictatorship in peace or in war has issued a similar regulation regarding correspondence by the members of its armed forces. But we have not been able to find an instance where a nation at peace, preparing mightily to defend the rights and freedom of the individual, has issued such an order.

This reporter has known too many American soldiers to believe, one, that they are so puny in belief and conviction as to require this sort of protection; or, two, that it can be enforced in peacetime. The title of this Special Regulation again is: "Letters and Gifts to Military Personnel." It is my opinion that it is a gift to those in friendly and hostile countries who contend that we restrict our freedom while preparing to defend it. The Army may have a case for this regulation, but if it has the case has not been made.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Throughout all of history, efforts have been made to try and control the workings of the human mind. But whether it be speeches, indirect pressures, or letters, Ralph Waldo Emerson was right when he said: "An invasion of armies can be resisted, but an invasion of ideas cannot." P.W. Bridgmen summed it up by concluding: "There is no adequate defense, except stupidity, against the impact of a new idea."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday 10/12/53

This is the news:

The United States today offered to meet the Communists in Korea at Panmunjom two weeks from today. After consultation with the other allied nations that fought in Korea we told the enemy we would discuss the time and place of the proposed political conference. But we will not discuss the Communists' attempt to (HAVE) neutral nations join the conference. We are also willing to confer, at Panmunjom, on the composition of a political conference scheduled to follow the Korean conference. At the White House today the President told Madame Pandit of India that we'll do all we can to make the work of the neutral nations commission in Korea an easier task. The President expressed appreciation for India's role on this commission. And as the Communists announced their willingness to start "explaining" later this week to prisoners who do not want to return home, we protested that the enemy has violated the armistice agreement by building up his air forces in North Korea. In Seoul, a South Korean spokesman had a sharp answer for Indian Prime Minister Nehru's statement that the South Korean government is "utterly irresponsible". The spokesman said this is "the mouthing of a satellite of the Kremlin."

Both the Kremlin and Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia today protested the Anglo-American decision to turn the Administration of Trieste's Zone A over to the Italians. The Russians, in a formal note, say this is a grave violation of the Italian peace treaty. And, they say, "it may evoke new difficulties in this area of Europe." Marshal Tito in somewhat similar protests to Washington, London and the United Nations says a threat to the peace now exists in Trieste. He says the Anglo-American decision "is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security." Tito wants direct talks with the United States, Great Britain and Italy. #

A spokesman for the Italian foreign ministry says this is just a stall.. but Italy is willing if the Allies first give her control of Zone A.

In Belgrade today, Yugoslav mobs burned British Library papers and slugged William B. King, the director of the United States Information Service. And in Rome Italian and allied officials express the belief that Marshal Tito is bluffing.. that "the storm will die down." But the Yugoslav ambassador who spent 50-minutes with Secretary of State Dulles today called the situation in Trieste "really grave."

The United States today announced an agreement with the Greek government whereby the Greeks give us permission to use an undisclosed number of Greek air and naval bases. The Greeks say this will strengthen the North Atlantic alliance.

In British Guaiana today a general strike was called by the lefist cabinet ministers who were recently ousted by the British. The major effects of the strike in sugar factories was hard to judge because today was a holiday.. Pan American Day. [I'd like to examine the situation in British Guiana in a few minutes.]

In Ohio, Democratic Governor Lausche has named a successor to the late Republican Senator Taft. The new junior Senator from Ohio will be Cleveland's Democratic Mayor Thomas A. Burke. This means a Senate composed of 48 Democrats.. 47 Republicans.. and Independent Senator Morse. Morse has said he would not vote to upset the Republican control of the Senate. And Governor Lausche's announcement today says he anticipates that Senator Burke will "take no action affecting the organization of the Senate"... and that he'll "consistently have in mind the interest and welfare of all the people."

~~Assistant Defense Secretary Hannah says most Americans apparently are unaware of a new law which became effective a few months ago. It~~

~~provides an eight year service obligation for all youths. Boys who enlist for four years must serve an additional four years in the reserves. Those who are drafted for two years must serve six years in the Reserves. Hannah told U.S. News and World Report that our eligible military manpower is "pretty much depleted" since the outbreak of the Korean war.~~

The F.B.I. says that Carl Austin Hall has now confessed that he and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady planned the murder of six-year-old Bobby Greenlease even before the Boy was kidnapped. Hall admits he fired a bullet into the boy's head.

Here in New York, Governor Dewey has asked acting Lieutenant Governor Wicks to resign because of Wicks' [redacted] prison visits to Extortionist Joey Faye. But Wicks has refused, saying he'll submit his resignation AS MAJORITY LEADER to a special session of the state legislature next month.. to let his Republican colleagues pass on his "fitness."

The news from British Guiana has been presented as an instance of the British being in trouble. And so they are. It is trouble when a colonial constitution has to be suspended, and a promise of greater freedom revised. It is trouble when troops have to be rushed across the Atlantic. The British Conservative Government is in trouble in having to justify such drastic action to Labor opposition in Parliament. But the crisis in British Guiana is one which people in this country would do well to study for the sake of their own interests and future. We are not involved in the trouble first-hand, so this is an occasion when we might manage to learn from the experience of others.

It will not be enough for Americans simply to applaud what the British have done. They have snuffed out a regime associated with international communism. The British government says that the objective of the regime was to turn British Guiana into a totalitarian state, subordinate to Moscow, and a dangerous platform for extending communist influence in the Western Hemisphere. Most Americans will assume that these charges have substance, and be thankful and relieved that this was happening in a British colony, where the British government could move in and save the day. But conditions that produced the crisis in British Guiana are not unique to that territory or to British holdings in this hemisphere. The menace of communism in Central and South America is widespread, it is not new and it is not negligible. And generally speaking there is no sure and safe way to suppress it. If communism is to be kept from spreading it is not enough to suspend constitutions and rush in troops. That is putting out a fire, not preventing it.

The British should be asked if they did enough, and did it in time, to reduce the fire hazard in Guiana. And then we should ask ourselves if we are doing enough, where we have the opportunity, to reduce similar fire hazards. The most arresting passage in the official British statement about the crisis was in these words: "The Governor (Sir Alfred Savage) is announcing that he will hasten to carry out the recommendations of the International Bank report, which has been available in the territory for some time and which is to be published shortly. The Bank's recommendation, to set up a British Guiana Credit Corporation which will provide credits for agriculture, industry, fisheries and rural and urban housing, will be carried out as soon as possible. In this and other ways it is hoped that the social and economic progress of the colony will be resumed."

¶ So the report of the Bank had been available for some time, and it took the present crisis to force action on it. If the action had been taken before the crisis, it might not have prevented the fire. But it would make the suspension of the constitution and the use of troops more justifiable in the eyes of most Central and South Americans.

One of the strongest propaganda weapons of the communists in Latin America is the over-concentration of wealth, the abject poverty of the masses and the failure of wealthy nations to help (enough to) raise the general standard of living. This is true in the British colonies, and still more so in most Latin-American countries. Business interests are generally tied up with reactionary or totalitarian elements. American diplomacy, for its part, has not learned how to deal with extreme rightist regimes and at the same time give legitimate encouragement to democratic movements in the same countries. Where the masses cannot draw inspiration from the great democracies they are bound to look elsewhere. And that is the chief reason communism is a danger in Latin America.

This is by no means a hopeless problem. The American attitude toward Latin America, both of government and business, has profoundly in the past generation. So has the British attitude. But the change has not been great or swift. In British Guiana the regime that now has had to be swept out was the first to be elected under the new constitution. In the election last April the PPP--the People's Progressive Party-- under its leader, young Cheddi Jagan, an East Indian dentist, who got his training and his wife in Chicago, captured twenty of twentysix seats in the Assembly. This astonished the British, but they had not made the colony prosperous, even in the most modest terms. Then they watched the new regime foster a strike in the sugar industry, help spread it to the essential services, undermine the loyalty of the police, and tie the country openly to the various Communist front organizations widely used in Latin America. The new government was not openly Communist, but that is not the way the Communists work in the Western Hemisphere.

But what the British did was not fire prevention. We might now resolve to do things better. While we cannot grant aid to Latin America over a long period, as our Assistant Secretary of State for Latin-American Affairs, said only last week, there is much we can do. We can receive more Latin American trade, encourage private enterprsise to invest more in Latin America in a way to convince that our investment

our neighbors [redacted] is to their advantage, and not to exploit them. Help can be given at the government level, to build roads and public utilities. And technical aid under Point Four can be continued. Even so, this much cannot work wonders in short order. [redacted] It is meager enough insurance against communism. But it is more than we are doing. It may be too little, but it [redacted] had better not be done too late.

The threat of international communism is still very real. And what happened in British Guinea could also happen much closer to home. In the case of Latin America, we would do well to remember Don Quixote's remark that "the man who is prepared has his battle half fought." For as Xerxes said before the battle of Thermopylae:" It is they who have the will to act who most often win the prizes."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday Oct 13, 1953

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles is flying to London tomorrow night for a week-end conference with the British and French foreign ministers. They're expected to discuss the situation in the Far East, particularly Korea... the question of non-aggression guarantees to Russia.. and the trouble in Trieste.

Today the Yugoslav foreign minister spent an hour with Mr. Dulles and then told reporters his government will [redacted] "resist with all means" the British-American decision to give Trieste's Zone A to Italy. He said acceptance of this move would destroy Yugoslavia's independence and "set an extremely dangerous precedent." And the Russians today asked for a prompt United Nations Security Council meeting on Trieste. They want to set up an international administration for the area and name a governor. In Belgrade today, for a sixth day, tens of thousands of persons demonstrated against the Anglo-American decision. Some of these demonstrators attacked both the American and British information services offices for three hours. They wrecked the British reading room. And the Yugoslav government says it may have to close down both offices because of "provocative" news bulletins being issued by the offices. Last night seven Yugoslav employes of the American office were attacked in Belgrade. #

In Korea the United Nations command has announced that it has completed the construction of an "explanation center." where the Communists can question the Chinese and North Korean prisoners who do not want to return home. Allied officers, expecting the explanations to begin tomorrow, predict trouble and violence from those prisoners when the explaining begins. Assistant Defense Secretary Hanna says our troops in Korea are now digging a new defense line across the peninsula: fortifications, bunkers, observation posts and artillery positions. And a high South Korean source says that our State Department has sent President Syngman Rhee a message expressing "deep concern" over recent Korean threats to drive away the Indian troops now on duty in the neutral zone.

In British Guiana today, British troops and police raided the headquarters of a Leftist party. Apparently they were looking for documents to support the British charge that the (PARTY) had been plotting to set up a Communist state. The strike in the sugar industry spread with most observers estimating the [redacted] strike, called by the Leftists, would halt at least half of the sugar industry in a few days.

In Washington today, Defense Secretary Wilson told reporters that the current investigation at the army's secret radar laboratories at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey "looks like it might be worse than just a security leak." Senator Mc Carthy has said that his committee, also investigating at Fort Monmouth, has uncovered a trail of "extremely dangerous espionage." Secretary Wilson said the true story will not be known until all the facts are in. He said the army is running its own investigation and has every confidence that the situation will be cleaned up. Army Secretary Stevens says any civilian employe of the army who refuses to answer questions from the McCarthy committee will be "summarily suspended." And one witness told the committee today that a "sizeable number" of top secret signal corps documents are missing. Senator McCarthy says if these documents got into the hands of an enemy they could be extremely dangerous to this country.

At Selfridge Air Force Base in Michigan a three-man board of air force colonels today recommended the discharge from the service of Lt. Mil Radulovich. The Board found that the 26-year-old lieutenant is a security risk because he maintained what the board described as "too close and continuing a relationship" with his father and sister. [redacted] The father is said to have been a reader of radical publications..the sister is said to have participated on a Communist picket line. The board made it clear that Lieutenant Radulovich's own loyalty was not questioned. And the lieutenant who has said he should not be held responsible for the activities of his sister or father, said of today's decision:"I thought I would be retained. It isn't right. It can't be right." He's the father of two small children and is studying meteorology at the University of Michigan.

The President is in Hershey, Pennsylvania, tonight attending a 63rd birthday party...with 30-thousand Pennsylvania Republican guests. The President and Mrs. Eisenhower drove to Hershey from Washington.

In Cambridge today, Dr. Nathan [redacted] Marsh Pusey became the 24th president of Harvard University. He pledged to uphold the university's tradition of freedom, courage and intelligence.

At this moment, with the Trieste crisis rattling the windows of Europe, it is well to look back just a year, to be reminded of the All-Union Communist Party Congress in Moscow, and the truly remarkable blueprint produced for it of Soviet planning, in the realm of both foreign and domestic policy. The draughtsman of the famous blueprint was Joseph Stalin. His death followed shortly afterwards, and his memory has since suffered from a degree of studied neglect in his own country. But nothing has happened to out-date the blueprint. And its publication remains one of the important events in the history of Soviet relations with the West. For seldom does one party to a conflict, so outspokenly reveal its intentions and strategy, as did Stalin in the fifty-page statement published in "Bolshevik", on October second, nineteen fiftytwo.

It will be recalled that he forecast a number of developments. One was a great drive to build up trade between the Iron Curtain countries and the West. Another was antagonisms within the Western alliance, which he said would shatter its unity and indeed end in war, not war with the Soviet Union, but between members of the Western alliance.

It takes only a glance at the world today to see that the Stalin blueprint deserved the fullest attention. Not that there is war between members of the Western alliance. But there certainly is a grave dread of it because of Tito's threat to march into Trieste the moment the Italian army goes in to occupy it.

Nor is the Western Alliance "falling apart." But the past year has seen a rising dislike of American policy in the countries of our Allies. For a time during the year the French were adamant against the American policy of arming Western Germany and were balking at ratifying the Defense Community treaty. They have somewhat modified their objections, but only because the United States increased its contribution to the cost of the war in Indochina, and because of the sweeping Adenauer victory in West Germany. For the French saw that they may have to choose between a Germany armed as part of a European federation, and a Germany with an independent nationalist army. Sir Winston Churchill Reminded the French of that Alternative Last Saturday. For all the outward show of accord, the Western Alliance has never felt such severe strains and stresses as now.

In the news today is another item that bears out a portion of the Stalin blueprint. Vice Premier Paul Reynaud said in address last night that the present restrictions of the West on trade with the East often are ineffective and that lifting them altogether--that is, lifting the ban on strategic goods--would not make a great deal of difference. He forecast a most beneficial relaxation of Soviet restrictions if the West eased its own restrictions.

The pressure for trade by the West with the East has grown apace as Stalin foresaw. In this country, however, the demand for a full blockade of the Communist countries has been repeatedly heard in Congress, the ban to be on non-strategic as well as strategic goods. Its advocates argued that there is little difference in value to the Soviet Union between the two categories, since what helps the USSR economically in any way makes it that much more capable of fighting a war. But that is saying what Monsieur Reynaud was saying, which is, that the banning of strategic exports doesn't matter so much, only it's saying it the other way around.

This kind of American talk has made our associates all the more concerned to have more trade with the East. For Americans were holding out no promise that the American market would make up for what the allies were expected to sacrifice. American aid was to stop, and American tariffs were not being drastically reduced.

So Western trade with the East seems certain to increase,

~~[redacted]~~

~~for~~ since our Western allies have to live by trade. To its credit, the Eisenhower administration has not frowned on an increase in ~~[redacted]~~ non-strategic goods. But as trade with the East grows, the solidarity of the West in its concerted opposition to Soviet domineering inevitably weakens. And that too is what Stalin foresaw.

Since Stalin draughted the blueprint the hydrogen bomb has been added to the design. This has attracted sensational attention in this country and set off no end of sensational statements. But most of them have been so self-centered as to miss perhaps the biggest immediate consequence of H-bomb. It is not whether it can be delivered on American targets this year or next or the year after. It is what Europeans think about it. For it CAN be delivered on any European target from now on whenever the Russians can load it on a bomber. Nobody ~~[redacted]~~ can prevent it, as Europe well knows.

Obviously the H-bomb can cause destruction that no European cares to conemplate. The full effect of it on European thinking has not yet developed. If, as Chairman W.Sterling Cole of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy asserts, the hydrogen bomb may be easier to make than once thought, and the Soviet Union may soon enough have not a hundred but a thousand of them, the Western Alliance can only be held together (in one way, that is) by proof, beyond challenge, that the Soviet Union, and only the Soviet Union, is frustrating the very wisest efforts to produce peace and cooperation of which world statesmanship is capable.

It ~~is true, as~~ History proves, that a country must trade if it is to survive. The implications of further restricting trade between the East and West are obvious. There are those who would probably agree with Disraeli that "Free trade is not a principle but an expedient." But there are others who understand what Pope meant when he said:"What war could ravish, commerce could bestow; he often returns a friend who came a foe."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles is flying to London tomorrow night for a week-end conference with the British and French foreign minister They're expected to discuss the situation in the Far East, particularly Korea - the question of non-aggression guarantees to Russia and the trouble in Trieste.

Today the Yugoslav foreign minister spent an hour with Mr. Dulles and then told reporters his government will "resist with all means" the British-American decision to give Trieste's Zone A to Italy. He said acceptance of this move would destroy Yugoslavia's independence and "set an extremely dangerous precedent." And the Russians today asked for a prompt United Nations Security Council meeting on Trieste. They want to set up an international administratic for the area and name a governor. In Belgrade today, for a sixth day, tens of thousands of persons demonstrated against the Anglo-American decision. Some of these demonstrators attacked both the American and British information services offices for three hours. They wrecked the British reading room. And the Yugoslav government says it may have to close down both offices because of "provocative" news bulletins being issued by the offices. Last night seven Yugoslav employees of the American office were attacked in Belgrade.

In Korea the United Nations command has announced that it has completed the construction of an "explanation center" where the Communists can question the Chinese and North Korean prisoners who do not want to return home. Allied officers, expecting the explanations to begin tomorrow, predict trouble and violence from those prisoners when the explaining begins. Assistant Defense Secretary Hanna says our troops in Korea are now digging a new defense line across the peninsula: fortifications, bunkers, observation posts and artillery positions. And a high South Korean source says that our State Department has sent President Syngman Rhee a message expressing "deep concern" over recent Korean threats to drive away the Indian troops now on duty in the neutral zone.

In British Guiana today, British troops and police raided the headquarters of a Leftist party. Apparently they were looking for documents to support the British charge that the party had been plotting to set up a Communist state. The strike in the sugar industry spread with most observers estimating the strike, called by the Leftists would halt at least half of the sugar industry in a few days.

In Washington today, Defense Secretary Wilson told reporters that the current investigation at the army's secret radar laboratories at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey "looks like it might be worse than just a security leak." Senator McCarthy has said that his committee, also investigating at Fort Monmouth, has uncovered a trail of "extremely dangerous espionage." Secretary Wilson said the true story will not be known until all the facts are in. He said the army is running its own investigation and has every confidence that the situation will be cleaned up. Army Secretary Stevens says any civilian employee of the army who refuses to answer questions from the McCarthy committee will be "summarily suspended." And one witness told the committee today that a "sizeable number" of top secret signal corps documents are missing. Senator McCarthy says if these documents got into the hands of an enemy they could be extremely dangerous to this country.

At Selfridge Air Force Base in Michigan a three man board of air force colonels today recommended the discharge from the service of Lt. Mil Radulovich. The Board found that the 26-year-old lieutenant is a security risk because he maintained what the board described as "too close and continuing a relationship" with his father and sister. The father is said to have been a reader of radical publications - the sister is said to have participated on a Communist picket line. The board made it clear that Lieutenant Radulovich's own loyalty was not questioned. And the lieutenant who has said he should not be held responsible for the activities of his sister or father said of today's decision: "I thought I would be retained. It isn't right. It can't be right." He's the father of two small children and is studying meteorology at the University of Michigan.

The President is in Hershey, Pennsylvania, tonight attending a 63rd birthday party with 30-thousand Pennsylvania Republican guests. The President and Mrs. Eisenhower drove to Hershey from Washington.

In Cambridge today, Dr. Nathan Marsh Pusey became the 24th president of Harvard University. He pledged to uphold the university's tradition of freedom, courage and intelligence.

At this moment, with the Trieste crisis rattling the windows of Europe, it is well to look back just a year, to be reminded of the All-Union Communist Party Congress in Moscow and the truly remarkable blueprint produced for it of Soviet planning in the realm of both foreign and domestic policy. The draughtsman of the famous blueprint was Joseph Stalin. His death followed shortly afterwards and his memory has since suffered from a degree of studied neglect in his own country. But nothing has happened to out-date the blueprint. And its publication remains one of the important events in the history of Soviet relations with the West. For seldom does one party to a conflict so outspokenly reveal its intentions and strategy as did Stalin in the fifty-page statement published in "Bolshevik" on October second, nineteen fifty two.

It will be recalled that he forecast a number of developments. One was a great drive to build up trade between the Iron Curtain countries and the West. Another was antagonisms within the Western alliance which he said would shatter its unity and indeed end in war, not war with the Soviet Union but between members of the Western Alliance.

It takes only a glance at the world today to see that the Stalin blueprint deserved the fullest attention. Not that there is war between members of the Western alliance. But there certainly is a grave dread of it because of Tito's threat to march into Trieste the moment the Italian army goes in to occupy it.

Nor is the Western Alliance "falling apart." But the past year has seen a rising dislike of American policy in the countries of our Allies. For a time during the year the French were adamant against the American policy of arming Western Germany and were balking at ratifying the Defense Community treaty. They have somewhat modified their objections, but only because the United States increased its contribution to the cost of the war in Indochina, and because of the sweeping Adenauer victory in West Germany. For the French saw that they may have to choose between a Germany armed as part of a European federation, and a Germany with an independent nationalist army. Sir Winston Churchill reminded the French of that alternative last Saturday. For all the outward show of accord, the Western Alliance has never felt such severe strains and stresses as now.

In the news today is another item that bears out a portion of the Stalin blueprint. Vice Premier Paul Reynaud said in address last night that the present restrictions of the West on trade with the East often are ineffective and that lifting them altogether - that is, lifting the ban on strategic goods - would not make a great deal of difference. He forecast a most beneficial relaxation of Soviet restrictions if the West eased its own restrictions.

The pressure for trade by the West with the East has grown apace, as Stalin foresaw. In this country, however, the demand for a full blockade of the Communist countries has been repeatedly heard in Congress, the ban to be on non-strategic as well as strategic goods. Its advocates argued that there is little difference in value to the Soviet Union between the two categories, since what helps the USSR economically in any way makes it that much more capable of fighting a war. But that is saying what Monsieur Reynaud was saying which is, that the banning of strategic exports doesn't matter so much, only it is saying it the other way around.

This kind of American talk has made our associates all the more concerned to have more trade with the East. For Americans were holding out no promise that the American market would make up for what the allies were expected to sacrifice. American aid was to stop, and American tariffs were not being drastically reduced.

So Western trade with the East seems certain to increase, since our Western allies have to live by trade. To its credit, the Eisenhower administration has not frowned on an increase in non-strategic goods. But as trade with the East grows, the solidarity of the West in its concerted opposition to Soviet domineering inevitably weakens. And that too is what Stalin foresaw.

Since Stalin draughted the blueprint the hydrogen bomb has been added to the design. This has attracted sensational attention in this country and set off no end of sensational statements. But most of them have been so self-centered as to miss perhaps the biggest immediate consequence of H-bomb. It is not whether it can be delivered on American targets this year or next or the year after. It is what Europeans think about it. For it CAN be delivered on any European target from now on whenever the Russians can load it on a bomber. Nobody can prevent it, as Europe well knows.

Obviously the H-bomb can cause destruction that no European cares to contemplate. The full effect of it on European thinking has not yet developed. If, as Chairman W. Sterling Cole of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy asserts the hydrogen bomb may be easier to make than once thought and the Soviet Union may soon enough have not a hundred but a thousand of them the Western Alliance can only be held together in one way. That is by proof beyond challenge that the Soviet Union, and only the Soviet Union, is frustrating the very wisest efforts to produce peace and cooperation of which world statesmanship is capable.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: History proves, that a country must trade if it is to survive. The implications of further restricting trade between the East and West are obvious. There are those who would probably agree with Disraeli that "Free trade is not a principle but an expedient." But there are others who understand what Pope meant when he said: "What war could ravish, commerce could bestow; he often returns a friend who came a foe."

Good Night and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles is flying to London tomorrow night for a week-end conference with the British and French foreign minister. They're expected to discuss the situation in the Far East, particularly Korea - the question of non-aggression guarantees to Russia and the trouble in Trieste.

Today the Yugoslav foreign minister spent an hour with Mr. Dulles and then told reporters his government will "resist with all means" the British-American decision to give Trieste's Zone A to Italy. He said acceptance of thismove would destroy Yugoslavia's independence and "set an extremely dangerous precedent." And the Russians today asked for a prompt United Nations Security Council meeting on Trieste. They want to set up an international administratic for the area and name a governor. In Belgrade today, for a sixth day, tens of thousands of persons demonstrated against the Anglo-American decision. Some of these demonstrators attacked both the American and British information services offices for three hours. They wrecked the British reading room. And the Yugoslav government says it may have to close down both offices because of "provocative" news bulletins being issued by the offices. Last night seven Yugoslav employees of the American Office were attacked in Belgrade.

In Korea the United Nations command has announced that it has completed the construction of an "explanation center" where the Communists can question the Chinese and North Korean prisoners who do not want to return home. Allied officers, expecting the explanations to begin tomorrow, predict trouble and violence from those prisoners

when the explaining begins. Assistant Defense Secretary Hanna says our troops in Korea are now digging a new defense line across the peninsula; fortifications, bunkers, observation posts and artillery positions. And a high South Korean source says that our State Department has sent President Syngman Rhee a message expressing "deep concern" over recent Korean threats to drive away the Indian troops now on duty in the neutral zone.

In British Guina today, British troops and police raided the headquarters of a Leftist party. Apparently they were looking for documents to support the British charge that the party had been plotting to set up aCommunist state. The strike in the sugar industry spread with most observers estimating the strike, called by the Leftists would halt at least half of the sugar industry in a few days.

In Washington today, Defense Secretary Wilson told reporters that the current investigation at the Army's secret radar laboratories at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey "looks like it might be worse than just a security leak". Senator McCarthy has said that his committee, also investigating at Fort Monmouth, hasuncovered a trail of "extremely dangerous espionage." Secretary Wilson said the true story will not be known until all the facts are in. He said the Army is running its own investigation and has every confidence that the situation will be cleaned up. Army Secretary Stevens says any civilian employee of the Army who refuses to answer questions from the McCarthy committee will be "summarily suspended." And one witness told the committee today that a "sizeable number" of top secret signal corps documents are missing. Senator McCarthy says if these documents got into the hands of an enemy they could be extremely dangerous to this country.

At Selfridge Air Force Base in Michigan a three man board of air force colonels today recommended the discharge from the service of Lt. Mil Radulovich. The Board found that the 26-year-old lieutenant is a security risk because he maintained what the board described as "too close and continuing a relationship" with his father and sister. The father is said to have been a reader of radical publications - the sister is said to have participated on a Communist picket line. The board made it clear that Lieutenant Radulovich's own loyalty was not questioned. And the lieutenant who has said he should not be held responsible for the activities of his sister or father said of today's decision: "I thought I wuld be retained. It isn't right. It can't be right." He's the father of two small children and is studying meteorology at the University of Michigan.

The President is in Hershey, Pennsylvania, tonight attending a 63rd birthday party with 30-thousand Pennsylvania Republican guests. The President and Mrs. Eisenhower drove to Hershey from Washington.

In Cambridge today, Dr. Nathan Marsh Pusey became the 24th president of Harvard University. He pledged to uphold the university's tradition of freedom, courage and intelligence.

At this moment, with the Trieste crisis rattling the windows of Europe, it is well to look back just a year, to be reminded of the All-Union Communist Party Congress in Moscow and the truly remarkable blueprint produced for it of Soviet planning in the realm of both foreign and domestic policy. The draughtsman of the famous blueprint was Joseph Stalin. His death followed shortly afterwards and his memory has since suffered from a degree of studied neglect in his own country. But nothing hashappened to out-date the blueprint. And its publication remains one of the important events in the history of Soviet relations with the West. For seldom does one party to a conflict so outspokenly reveal its intentions and strategy as did Stalin in the fifty-page statement published in "Bolshevik" on October second, nineteen fifty two.

It will be recalled that he forecase a number of developments. One was a greatdrive to build up trade between the Iron Curtain countries and the West. Another was antagonisms within the Western alliance which he said would shatter its unity and indeed end in war, not war with the Soviet Union but between members of the Western Alliance.

It takes only a glance at the world today to see that the Stalin blueprint deserved the fullest attention. Not that there is war between members of the Western Alliance, but there certainly is a grave dread of it because of Tito's threat to march into Trieste the moment the Italian army goes in to occupy it.

Nor is the Western Alliance "falling apart." But the past year has seen a rising dislike of American policy in the countries of our Allies. For a time during the year the French were adamant against the American policy of arming Western Germany and were balking at ratifying the Defense Community treaty. They have somewhat modified their objections, but only because the United States increased its contribution to the cost of the war in Indochina, and because of the sweeping Adenauer victory in West Germany. For the French saw that they may have to choose between a Germany armed as part of a European federation, and a Germany with an independent nationalist army. Sir Winston Churchill reminded the French of that alternative last Saturday. For all the outward show of accord, the Western Alliance has never felt such severe strains and stresses as now.

In the news today is another item that bears out a portion of the Stalin blueprint. Vice Premier Paul Reynaud said in address last night that the present restrictions of the West on trade with the East often are ineffective and that lifting them altogether - that is, lifting the ban on strategic goods - would not make a great deal of difference. He forecast a most beneficial relaxation of Soviet restrictions if the West eased its own restrictions.

The pressure for trade by the West with the East has grown apace, as Stalin foresaw. In this country, however, the demand for a full blockade of the Communist countries has been repeatedly heard in Congress, the ban to be on non-strategic as well asstrategic goods. Its advocatesargued that there is little difference in value to the Soviet Union between the two categories, since what helps the USSR economically in any way makes it that much more capable of fighting a war. But that is saying what Monsieur Reynaud was saying which is, that the banning of strategic exports doesn't matter so much, only it is saying it the other way around.

This kind of American talk hasmade our associates all the more concerned to have more trade with the East. For Americans were holding out no promise that the American market would make up for what the allies were expected to sacrifice. American aid was to stop, and American tariffs were not being drastically reduced.

So Western trade with the East seems certain to increase, since our Western allies have to live by trade. To its credit, the Eisenhower administration has not frowned on an increase in non-strategic goods. But as trade with the Eastgrows, the solidarity of the West in its concerted opposition to Soviet domineering inevitably weakens. And that too is what Stalin foresaw.

Since Stalin draughted the blueprint the hydrogen bomb has been added to the design. This has attracted sensational attention in this country and set off no end of sensational statements. But most of them have been so self-centered as to miss perhaps the biggest immediate consequence of H-bomb. It is not whether it can be delivered on American targets this year or next or the year after. It is what European think about it. For it CAN be delivered on any European target from now on whenever the Russians can load it on a bomber. Nobody can prevent it, as Europe well knows.

Obviously the H-bomb can cause destruction that no European cares to contemplate. The full effect of it on European thinking has no yet developed. If, as Chairman W. Sterling Cole of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy asserts the hydrogen bomb may be easier to make than once thought and the Soviet Union may soon enough have not a hundred but a thousand of them;the Western Alliance can only be held together in one way. That is by proof beyond challenge that the Soviet Union, and only the Soviet Union, is frustrating the very wisest efforts to produce peace and cooperation of which world statesmanship is capable.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: History proves, that a country must trade if it is to survive. The implications of further restricting trade between the East and West are obvious. There are those who would probably agree with Disraeli that "Free trade is not a principle but an expedient." But there are others who understand what Pope meant when he said: "What war could ravish, commerce could bestow; he often returns a friend who came a foe."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday, Oct 14 1953

This is the news:

Diplomatic sources at the United Nations have told reporters that the United States would be willing to accept neutral nations at the Korean political conference..."if necessary." These sources say: America will not consider an invitation to neutrals as the first order of business at the conference. But we would accept such nations later if we were convinced this would help reach an agreement with the enemy. And an American spokesman at the U.N. says we have never ruled out the possibility of developments at the conference which would make it desireable to have additional participants. In Korea, just about now, the Communists were to start questioning the first thousand of the 22-thousand Communist prisoners who do not want to go home. When the prisoners heard, last night, that the "explaining" was to begin ..they shouted defiance.. and waved flaming torches in their neutral-zone stockades. - Tonite they Refused to attend the meetings

In Trieste today pro-Yugoslavs started a demonstration supporting Marshal Tito's protest against the anglo-American decision to let the Italians administer Zone A. And later 200 pro-Italian youths raided a Yugoslav economic office in Trieste smashing much of the furniture.

Yugoslavia's vice premier has made it clear that his country does not welcome Russia's effort to have the United Nations Security Council consider the Trieste problem.

In Washington today, the President gave agency heads permission to fire government employes, who refuse to testify before congressional committes for fear of incriminating themselves. And Attorney General Brownell says next year the Administration will ask Congress for a law permitting the attorney general to grant immunity from prosecution, in some cases, to force witnesses to testify.

Senator McCarthy says that a scientist, who was a friend of atom spy Julius Rosenberg, has told his committee that he took 43 secret documents from Army signal Corps files some years ago. The scientist, whose name has not been made public, is said to have explained that he took the documents home "for study." He was recently suspended from the signal corps laboratory at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey. Senator McCarthy also says that some secret documents missing from Signal corps files have turned up in East Berlin. ~~He says he has "incriminating [illegible]~~

~~more documents dealing with radar have been found in East Berlin.~~

The President tonight leaves Washington by train ~~on~~ for a tour of some midwestern states. Republican leaders hope he can mend political fences.

There was no comment from the White House [redacted] on yesterday's election of a Democrat in a Wisconsin congressional district that has never before elected a Democratic congressman. The defeated Republican, State Senator Padrutt, told reporters that he interprets the results to mean that the farmer and laboring man "does not like the present Administration policies." He campaigned "four square behind the President." The Democratic national committee finds the election of Democrat Lester Johnson [redacted] highly encouraging.. says it shows a rebellion against the Republican farm policy. The Republican National Chairman, Leonard Hall, acknowledges that "the results are not good." He thinks the Republican defeat was due to complacency.. that the defeated candidate should have told the voters that the farm price drop is due to policies of the Truman administration. ~~Hall says the "rural people are caught in a price squeeze that is not their doing or the doing of the Eisenhower administration."~~

The President today appointed Samuel M. Brownell, a brother of attorney general Brownell, to be the new Commissioner of education. He's a Republican, native of Nebraska, who has been president of the New Haven, Connecticut, State Teachers College since 1947. Samuel Brownell has also been a professor of educational administration at Yale since 1938.

A Senate armed services subcommittee reports that our air power and collective security arrangements have advanced to a point that "no aggressor nation can start something and go unpunished." The Senators, who are confident of our power, say :"It is time to quit wringing our hands and talking in tones of despair."

Australia's Prime Minister Menzies says Britain has exploded an atomic weapon in northwest Australia. This was Britain's second test of an atomic weapon.

In British Guiana, the British West Indies Airways refused to carry the RECENTLY ousted Leftist premier to London where he wanted to complain to the British government over the firing of his pro-red regime.

Assistant Secretary of State Cabot says the government of Guatemala is "openly playing the Communist game " and so cannot expect cooperation from us.

And in Brooklyn Dodger Manager Charlie Dressen announced he will not manage the team next year because the owners refuse to give him a contract for more than one year. Walter O'Malley, the Dodger president, says he'll be glad to re-hire Dressen. ONLY on a one year basis.

A remark bearing on the Trieste crisis was made by Defense Secretary Charles E.Wilson that received no more than mention in the morning papers. It was about the delivery of American arms to Jugoslavia. "I don't know" said the Secretary,"whether we are still making arms deliveries (to that country). That question hasn't come up." Later a department spokesman said there had been no instructions to stop deliveries.

Since Marshall Tito has been threatening to march into Trieste, one might suppose that the Defense Department at Washington would at least have thought about suspending the delivery of American arms that conceiveably might be used by one ally - Jugoslavia to shoot at another ally, Italy, not betray an ~~turned on the American occupation troops there in Trieste~~. But Mr. Wilson's remark need ~~[illegible]~~ oversight. It may be a measurement of the Jugoslav danger. For if anybody in Washington had thought Tito would go to war over Trieste the delivery of arms would have been cancelled in a jiffy and Mr. Wilson would have known all about it.

The Jugoslavs are thoroughly angry over being confronted with a fait-accompli in the Trieste dispute. They insist they were not consulted, and it is a risk not to consult a hot-tempered man or a hot-tempered people. But Tito has only three choices, he can go to war, he can slink back to Moscow or he can make the best of an undesired compromise. Actually he is not so much concerned about keeping the Italians out of Trieste as he is in having a guarantee that this is the end of Italian expansion, particularly down the Dalmation Coast. This guarantee is one he appears to be on the point of receiving. If so, he no doubt will ask for more. He can be expected to demand either a condominium or the internationalization of the city of Trieste, both impossible for Italy to accept. So the outlook is that the storm over Trieste will not blow itself out for some time, but that it will pass in time.

Washington and London evidently were not much afraid that their Trieste decision would drive Tito back to Moscow, though that must have seemed more likely than war. The Kremlin did quite swiftly take sides with Tito. It was making frantic beckonings as to a prodigal son. But Tito must feel quite sure that no fatted calf would be killed for him if he returned from his exile in the non-communist world.

The Tito story, in conjunction with the recent Singman Rhee story, should awaken other and greater misgivings. We live in a world that almost overnight can add a dimension to its already stupendous dangers. The hydrogen bomb did just that. And it is no exaggeration to say that the Tito and Singman Rhee stories also do it. For here are friends we are arming, who ~~which~~ having our arms defy our advice and ~~flaunt~~ resist our control.

This is a time when two great powers are locked in a titanic struggle of power, and the one assurance against world war is that neither power will resort to it because in the total war that would result, as President Eisenhower has said, the only tragedy greater than winning the war would be to lose it. But the United States by itself cannot ~~bear the arms and employ~~ man the weapons that give maximum assurance that war is going to be prevented. ~~The~~ Our alies also have to be armed. This ~~can~~ introduces stresses into the Alliance, as in the case of arming Germany, but the danger is still greater. It gives arms and license to ambitious or headtsrong men who no longer can be safely restrained by force. The peace of the world, and the security of this country, down to its hundredth city, are placed in the hazardous keeping of such men.

Singman Rhee said he would fight on alone in Korea if the United States did not give certain guarantees. He held Korea's national suicide over us as a threat, and he had to be taken seriously for he might be as fanatical as he sounded.

He got his guarantee. It went far beyond our inherent national interests, for we had once decided against committing American forces to the permanent guarantee of Korea. But otherwise there would have been no armistice. The choice before Washington was harsh and limited.

Now Tito appears about to get a guarantee that took saber-rattling to obtain. And while his conduct has not been as great a danger as Rhee's, it is a warning that the maintenance of peace is out of the hands of Washington, and of the Kremlin as well. This is not said to pass judgment on Rhee or Tito, but only to register the rising peril of what is called the armament race. The powder keg is no longer under the joint control of Washington and Moscow. Others can light the fuse that will blow it up. We are less and less masters of our own safety. Others are in position to play our hand.

The authorities agree that the only total guarantee of total security is total disarmament. The United States government knows this and with the support of its allies it has proposed it, stating that to be effective, it must be under fool-proof international guarantees and world-wide inspection. with enforcement of world law on disarmament. Only the Soviet Union scorns the proposal, no doubt because total and controlled disarmament would mean the end of Soviet domination based on the Red Army and the perpetuation of the Iron Curtain.

Early achievement of total disarmament looks to be impossible. That is, the human family cannot be made totally safe for the time being. But that does not make it unrealistic to talk about it. Certainly we should convince the world and ourselves that the ultimate objective of Western policy is this total security. Everything we do in this field should have two purposes: to assure such limited security as existing armed power makes possible, and to bring nearer the time and condition when the whole way to security can be taken.

Total war could mean total destruction for much of mankind. And yet, the race for armed power goes on. C.C. Colton once remarked wisely that:"To know the pains of power, we must go to those who have it; to know its pleasures, we must go to those who are seeking it; for the pains of power are real, its pleasures imaginary." Perhaps Saint Cyprian put it more simply:"The power that makes men terrible is a terror first to its ~~possessor~~ (possessor)."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Thursday Oct, 15, 1953

This is the news:

The President tonight will appeal to the nation's farmers to be patient, until his Administration can submit to Congress a bi-partisan farm program. The program should be ready early next year. In a speech he is making later this evening to the Future Farmers of America in Kansas City, Mr Eisenhower says the Administration is now ready "to start hammering out a solidly-based program for the future." The President promises to retain farm price supports in the new program... perhaps in a "radically revised" form. He says the Administration will continue to aid the drought stricken states, as long as necessary. And he says the basic farm problem is over production. ITS effects have been hidden until recently, by "rampant inflation" of the war and post war years. Earlier, in Willard, Ohio, the President told a trainside crowd he's confident we can "bring about a situation in which we can have peace." And at Defiance, Ohio, he proposed that "every young person, regardless of his means, or lacks of means" should go to college for two years..at public expense if necessary.

And Secretary of Agriculture Benson--also speaking at Kansas City-- says the long term prospects for agriculture are bright, despite the current drop in farm prices and income. He says government farm programs are going to be geared "to more realistic production."

At the United Nations today, Ambassador Lodge charged that the Russians have brought the Trieste problem before the Security Council "to make as much trouble as possible." Lodge said we are making an honest attempt to "reach stability in this vexed part of Europe" by withdrawing American and British troops from Zone A and turning the administration over to the Italians. Lodge pointed out that the Russians have been charging that the presence of [redacted] these troops in Trieste was a threat to peace. And now that we plan to withdraw them, the Russians still say this is a threat to peace. Lodge asked: "What kind of shennanigans is this?" But Andrie Vishinsky told the Council that Russia will never accept a solution of the Trieste problem that is reached without Russian participation. In Rome, Premier Pella has told the American, British and French ambassadors that the west cannot back down.. that their troops must be withdrawn soon or the Italian government will fall and the nation may be forced to change her foreign policy.

Secretary of State Dulles is now in London prepared for tomorrow's conference with the British and French foreign ministers...on Trieste, among other things,

Today, Britain's prime minister Sir Winston Churchill was awarded the Nobel prize for literature. Sir Winston, who has written 27 books in the past 55 years, told reporters he is very proud to receive this "international honor". And he said he still thinks Rudyard Kilping and George Bernard Shaw..past prize winners.. were better writers than he is. The prime minister was honored for his "mastery in historical and biographical writing and the brilliant art of oratory with which he has stepped forth as a defender of high human values."

In East Germany today, it was officially announced that two Communist Lord Mayors and 11 union leaders have been fired by the Communists to make East Germany more secure against another revolt.

In Korea, the Communists have now had their first chance to explain to prisoners of war why they should return to Communist China. The enemy "explainers" didn't do so good. Of the 500 men they talked to only 10 changed their minds..decided to go home. The other 98 per cent, for the most part, delayed the whole "explaining" period for seven hours.

Many shouted insults at the embarrassed Communist explainers; some were forced to listen to the explanations for at least a minute after being brought to the questioning-place, kicking and screaming. When a Communist asked one prisoner "Do you ever think of your family?" the prisoner replied: "Yes. They were all killed by Communists." Another prisoner was asked: "Do you want to go home?" And he replied: "Yes, we'll land on the beaches of the Chinese mainland and kill all of you." Under the rules of the neutral nations commission these men who refused to return home may be questioned by the enemy again. There is still no indication when American officers will start questioning the 23 Americans who are supposed to want to stay with the enemy.

In Indo-China the French have started a land, sea and air attack that they call the most important ground operation of the Indo-China war. The French and Vietnamese forces are trying to destroy the enemy's big war depot and paralyze enemy divisions that threaten an attack on the Red River delta.

Here in New York today, Senator McCarthy said that Julius Rosenberg, the executed atomic spy, headed a radar spy ring at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, headquarters for the army signal corps. The Senator said he has evidence that the ring continued after Rosenberg's electrocution and he wants to question David Greenglass, now in prison in Pennsylvania because of his activities in the Rosenberg case.

Federal Judge Weinfeld has extended a temporary injunction against a strike by New York longshoremen for ten days.

And the Stock Exchange made its greatest gains in nearly 18 months. Brokers say it may have been due to favorable earnings reports and dividend declarations.

Edward R. Murrow: October 15, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

It's always interesting to watch a politician when he acts, rather than talks. This is particularly true when the action takes place ~~in~~ with full public exposure. That's what has happened to New York's Governor Thomas E. Dewey. The background, briefly, is this. A Labor leader named Joseph S. Fay was residing in Sing Sing prison. This was due to the fact that he had been convicted in 1945, on a charge of extortion, trying to collect 368 thousand dollars from a subsidiary of the New York City Water System. Fay was due to remain in Sing Sing from seven-and-a-half to fifteen years. Convict Fay's "visiting list" was published. It contained the name of State Senator Arthur H. Wicks, who is the Republican majority leader in the State Senate, and also acting (LIEUTENANT) Governor. Mr. Wicks said he had visited Fay six or seven times in recent years. He said he had gone to Sing Sing to promote labor peace in his district, by obtaining Fay's aid in blocking threatened strikes on major public projects. According to Wicks, Fay was still a power in labor circles. And Senator Wicks resented any implication of wrong-doing on his part.

Governor Dewey was not satisfied with his majority leader's explanation. In the course of a four-hour conversation the Governor asked Senator Wicks to resign. The Senator refused; said he would submit his resignation to the Republican-controlled State Senate at its next session. And the Senate could decide about his fitness. Governor Dewey called a special session of the State legislature for November 17, and put the Wicks case on the agenda. Senator Wicks announced that he would take to the television and radio next Sunday, in order to explain his side of the case. And there the matter stands.

This reporter pretends to no inside knowledge regarding any undisclosed facts in this case, (which began with an investigation into harness racing in the State of New York.) However, Governor Dewey's actions are on the record. He learned of repeated visits by his own majority leader to a man convicted of extortion. He was not satisfied with Senator Wicks' explanation; asked him to resign, and when Wicks refused he summoned the legislature. The Governor might have finessed this one, might have found the explanation satisfactory and ridden out the storm. Senator Wicks is an oldtime professional politician, the leader of Dewey's own Party in the State Senate. Among professional politicians of both Parties there is a strong tendency and tradition to stand by, to defend the Party henchmen, even when their conduct has been questionable and damaging to the Party. (We have seen many instances of this practise in recent years.) Governor Dewey, who is no novice in the traditions or the practises of politics, chose the other route. He faces the prospect of a bitter battle inside his own Party. He risks his personal political future, and his Party's control of this State. When he became aware of a situation which, in his opinion, obviously involved abuse of privilege, and continuing relationship between a senior member of his own Party and a convict, he did not hesitate to take hold of the nettle. # The Governor is no amateur in politics, but Senator Wicks and some of the men supporting him are skilled politicians too. The Senator, by virtue of his long service, and his position as the Party's leader in the Senate, may well have access to information of the kind that only becomes public, when the Party in power engages in civil warfare.

This can turn out to be a very nasty fight in the course of which a number of reputations will be damaged - a row which may bring considerable pleasure to the Democrats. # Governor Dewey will either emerge from it with increased stature, as one once described by President Eisenhower as "having his greatest service to his country before him;" or he will come out of this Party fracas with his stature and prestige diminished. | Whatever the result, it is, in this reporter's opinion, both encouraging and unusual to find a politician who, having discovered what he believes to be an abuse of power and public trust, does not hesitate to lay on the line his personal political fortune, and to a considerable extent that of his Party. To be as vigilant in trying to maintain legal and ethical conduct in one's own Party as well as in the Opposition, has become almost a novelty.

I do not pretend to know who is right in this Republican family fight. The evidence isn't all in by any means. But if Wicks should be exonerated by his colleagues, and Dewey proved wrong, the Governor's action may be regarded as politically foolish, but it cannot be held to have been lacking in that rather rare commodity called courage or integrity.

An Englishman named Benjamin Haydon once said:"The great difficulty in life is first to win a reputation; the next to keep it." This is particularly true in the field of politics. And New York's Governor Dewey is undoubtedly aware of this. Yet, it would seem that in pressing his investigation, the Governor also believes, as Emerson did, that "a little integrity is better than any career."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President tonight will appeal to the nation's farmers to be patient, until his Administration can submit to Congress a bi-partisan farm program. The program should be ready early next year. In a speech he is making later this evening to the Future Farmers of America in Kansas City, Mr. Eisenhower says the Administration is now ready "to start hammering out a solidly-based program for the future." The President promises to retain farm price supports in the new program - perhaps in a "radically revised" form. He says the Administration will continue to aid the drought stricken states as long as necessary. And he says the basic farm problem is over production. Its effects have been hidden until recently by "rampant inflation" of the war and postwar years. Earlier, in Willard, Ohio, the President told a trainside crowd he's confident we can "bring about a situation in which we can have peace." And at Defiance, Ohio, he proposed that "every young person regardless of his means or lack of means" should go to college for two years at public expense if necessary.

And Secretary of Agriculture Benson also speaking at Kansas City says the long term prospects for agriculture are bright, despite the current drop in farm prices and income. He says government farm programs are going to be geared "to more realistic production."

At the United Nations today, Ambassador Lodge charged that the Russians have brought the Trieste problem before the Security Council "to make as much trouble as possible." Lodge said we are making an honest attempt to "reach stability in this vexed part of Europe" by withdrawing American and British troops from Zone A and turning the Administration over to the Italians. Lodge pointed out that the Russians have been charging that the presence of these troops in Trieste was a threat to peace. And now that we plan to withdraw them, the Russians still say this is a threat to peace. Lodge asked: "What kind of shennanigans is this?" But Andrie Vishinsky told the Council that Russia will never accept a solution of the Trieste problem that is reached without Russian participation. In Rome, Premier Pella has told the American, British and French ambassadors that the west cannot back down - that their troops must be withdrawn soon or the Italian government will fall and the nation may be forced to change her foreign policy.

Secretary of State Dulles is not in London prepared for tomorrow's conference with the British and French foreign ministers on Trieste, among other things.

Today, Britain's prime minister Sir Winston Churchill was awarded the Nobel prize for literature. Sir Winston, who has written 27 books in the past 55 years, told reporters he is very proud to receive this "international honor." And he said he still thinks Rudyard Kipling and George Bernard Shaw - past prize winners - were better writers than he is. The prime minister was honored for his "mastery in historical and biographical writing and the brilliant art of oratory with which he has stepped forth as a defender of high human values."

In East Germany today, it was officially announced that two Communist Lord Mayors and 11 union leaders have been fired by the Communists to make East Germany more secure against another revolt.

In Korea the Communists have now had their first chance to explain to prisoners of war why they should return to Communist China. The enemy "explainers" didn't do so good. Of the 500 men they talked to only 10 changed their minds - decided to go home. The other 98 percent, for the most part, delayed the whole "explaining" period for seven hours. Many shouted insults at the embarrassed Communist explainers; some were forced to listen to the explanations for at least a minute after being brought to the questioning place, kicking and screaming. When a Communist asked one prisoner "Do you ever think of your family?" the prisoner replied: "Yes. They were all killed by Communists." Another prisoner was asked:

"Do you want to go home?" And he replied: "Yes, we'll land on the beaches of the Chinese mainland and kill all of you." Under the rules of the neutral nations commission these men who refused to return home may be questioned by the enemy again. There is still no indication when American officers will start questioning the 23 Americans who are supposed to want to stay with the enemy.

In Indo-China the French have started a land, sea and air attack, that they call the most important ground operation of the Indo-China war. The French and Vietnamese forces are trying to destroy the enemy's big war depot and paralyze enemy divisions that threaten an attack on the Red River delta.

Here in New York today, Senator McCarthy said that Julius Rosenberg, the executed atomic spy, headed a radar spy ring at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, headquarters for the army signal corps. The Senator said he has evidence that the ring continued after Rosenberg's electrocution and he wants to question David Greenglass, now in prison in Pennsylvania because of his activities in the Rosenberg case.

Federal Judge Weinfeld has extended a temporary injunction against a strike by New York longshoremen for ten days.

And the Stock Exchange made its greatest gains in nearly 18 months. Brokers say it may have been due to favorably earnings reports and dividend declarations.

It's always interesting to watch a politician when he acts rather than talks. This is particularly true when the action takes place with full public exposure. That's what has happened to New York's Governor Thomas E. Dewey. The background, briefly, is this. A Labor leader named Joseph S. Fay was residing in Sing Sing prison. This was due to the fact that he had been convicted in 1945 on a charge of extortion, trying to collect 368 thousand dollars from a subsidiary of the New York City Water System. Fay was due to remain in Sing Sing from seven-and-a-half to fifteen years. Convict Fay's "visiting list" was published. It contained the name of State Senator Arthur H. Wicks, who is the Republican majority leader in the State Senate, and also acting Lieutenant Governor. Mr. Wicks said he had visited Fay six or seven times in recent years. He said he had gone to Sing Sing to promote labor peace in his district, by obtaining Fay's aid in blocking threatened strikes on major public projects. According to Wicks, Fay was still a power in labor circles. And Senator Wicks resented any implication of wrongdoing on his part.

Governor Dewey was not satisfied with his majority leader's explanation. In the course of a four-hour conversation the Governor asked Senator Wicks to resign. The Senator refused; said he would submit his resignation to the Republican-controlled State Senate at its next session. And the Senate could decide about his fitness. Governor Dewey called a special session of the State legislature for November 17, and put the Wicks case on the agenda. Senator Wicks announced that he would take to the television and radio next Sunday, in order to explain his side of the case. And there the matter stands.

This reporter pretends to no inside knowledge regarding any undisclosed facts in this case, which began with an investigation into harness racing in the State of New York. However, Governor Dewey's actions are on the record. He learned of repeated visits by his own majority leader to a man convicted of extortion. He was not satisfied with Senator Wicks' explanation; asked him to resign, and when Wicks refused he summoned the legislature. The Governor might have finessed this one, might have found the explanation satisfactory and ridden out the storm. Senator Wicks is an oldtime professional politician, the leader of Dewey's own Party in the State Senate. Among professional politicians of both Parties there is a strong tendency and tradition to stand by, to defend the Party henchmen even when their conduct has been questionable and damaging to the Party. We have seen many instances of this practice in recent years. Governor Dewey, who is no novice in the traditions or the practices of politics, chose the other route. He faces the prospect of a bitter battle inside his own Party. He risks his personal political future, and his Party's control of this State. When he became aware of a situation which, in his opinion, obviously involved abuse of privilege and continuing relationship between a senior member of his own Party and a convict, he did not hesitate to take hold of the nettle. The Governor is no amateur in politics, but Senator Wicks and some of the men supporting him are skilled politicians too. The Senator, by virtue of his long service and his position as the Party's leader in the Senate, may well have access to information of the kind that only becomes public when the Party in power engages in civil warfare.

This can turn out to be a very nasty fight in the course of which a number of reputations will be damaged - a row which may bring considerable pleasure to the Democrats. Governor Dewey will either emerge from it with increased stature as one once described by President Eisenhower as "having his greatest service to his country before him;" or he will come out of this Party fracas with his stature and prestige diminished. Whatever the result, it is in this reporter's opinion both encouraging and unusual to find a politician who, having discovered what he believes to be an abuse of power and public trust, does not hesitate to lay on the line his personal political fortune, and to a considerable extent that of his Party. To be as vigilant in trying to maintain legal and ethical conduct in one's own Party as well as in the Opposition, has become almost a novelty.

I do not pretend to know who is right in this Republican family fight. The evidence isn't all in by any means. But if Wicks should be exonerated by his colleagues, and Dewey proved wrong, the Governor's action may be regarded as politically foolish, but it cannot be held to have been lacking in that rather rare commodity called courage or integrity.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: An Englishman named Benjamin Haydon once said: "The great difficulty in life is first to win a reputation; the next to keep it." This is particularly true in the field of politics. And New York's Governor Dewey is undoubtedly aware of this. Yet, it would seem that in pressing his investigation, the Governor also believes, as Emerson did, that "a little integrity is better than any career."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday Oct. 16 1953

This is the news:

The Foreign Ministers of Britain, France and this country, held the first of three scheduled meetings in London today. It lasted more than five hours. A thirty-five word communique said only that among the items discussed were: Russia's invitation for talks on a non-aggression pact... the problem of Trieste...and the situation on the Israel-Jordan border. The talks will continue tomorrow.

It was made known, however, that West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer does not feel that this is the time for the western powers to discuss non-aggression treaties with Russia. He contends that such a move would slow up the re-armament of Western Germany.

As for Trieste, it's understood that the three Foreign Ministers are determined to stand firm on the decision to turn over Zone A of Trieste to Italy...despite Yugoslav objections. But the Ministers want the 74-hundred British and American now on occupation duty there to remain until tempers cool. The original plan was to move them out the end of next month.

One of Marshal Tito's highest aides said today that Yugoslavia will "never yeild to Italy's imperialistic aims on Trieste." He said:"We have learned that any yielding must later be paid in blood. It is our duty to defend our country."

It was also apparent that the Foreign Ministers are very much concerned about the recent flareup along the border separating Israel from Syria. The British Foreign Office has already filed a formal protest with the Israeli government, as a result of the killing of 56 Arabs in Jordan on Wednesday. The British note says this was "apparently a calculated attack... a grave violation of the armistice...and an act endangering peace." There has been no formal reply to the note as yet.

But Syria has asked the UN Security Council to investigate Israel's plan to divert the waters of the Jordan River. Syria maintains that this is also a violation of the armistice...and a matter of the "greatest urgency."

In view of these developments, President Eisenhower announced that he is sending Eric Johnston to the Near East as his personal representative with the rank of Ambassador. (Johnston is President of the Motion Picture Association of America.) The President said that Johnston would look into plans for developing the Jordan Valley because "this is a sensitive and important area of the free world."

Mr. Eisenhower visited his home town of Abilene, Kansas today, for the first time since moving into the White House. He walked through his boyhood home, toured the Eisenhower Museum, got a kiss on the cheek from his high school sweetheart, and then lunched with some old friends.

The Deputy Secretary of Defense, Roger Kyes, told the Women's Press Club in Washington: After visiting American military bases he has "growing confidence, determination and optimism, regarding the security of Western Europe." Mr. Kyes said, however, that we must re-assess our defense plans, for we can no longer afford the luxury of the status quo in strategic planning. Outmoded procedures and weapons must go.

In Indiapapolis, Senator Kennedy of Massachussetts told an American Legion gathering:" Our present program of air force expansion is inadequate. Our efforts must not be judged in comparison with what we have done in the past, but rather by what the Soviets are doing today."

In Korea, the second day of Communist efforts to re-convert prisoners of war to Communism almost ended in a free-for-all when thousands of North Koreans demonstrated in protest. Neutral Indian guards who had planned to bring in 5-hundred men for questioning decided to drop the project when it became apparent that there might be violence and the prospect of another mass break out from the prisoner compounds. Tonite, instead of North Koreans, Chinese prisoners will be brought up for interviews.

Attorney General Brownell announced late today that a Justice Department check shows that Senator Mc Carthy did not violate any election laws in the handling of his finances. No irregularities were found in the case of former Senator Benton of Conneticut either. Brownell said that Mc Carthy's income tax returns are still being studied.

Here in New York, The Mc Carthy Committee which has been looking into a possible radar spy ring at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, said it has questioned a witness who is "prepared to tell all." Mc Carthy said the witness has been given protective custody because he fears for his life. But that he can furnish information linking the spy plot with Julius Rosenberg who went to the electric chair for revealing atomic secrets.

In Boston, 27 have been killed and ~~50~~ (40) others injured in an [redacted] explosion aboard the aircraft carrier Leyte which has been undergoing repairs.

And Charlie Dressen, who led the Brooklyn Dodgers to 2 National League Pennants, has left the organization in a dispute over the length of a new contract. He will become manager and part owner of the Oakland team in the Pacific Coast League.

This reporter trusts he will not be in contempt of the Supreme Court of the United States if he says something on the question whether baseball is a business or a sport. He is speaking in connection with the fate of Mr. Charles Dressen as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers. The high court has the reserve clause of baseball under review and [redacted] is to define the "legal nature" of baseball. Nothing will be said here to influence the [redacted] court. This is to be only [redacted] a comment on the treatment of Mr. Dressen.

The Dodger management has now announced that the decision not to re-employ Mr. Dressen is final. Two days ago it had been left open to Mr. Dressen to resume his duties as manager at an increase in salary if he would do so for a single year. Since Mr.Dressen had asked for a three, then a two-year contract, and written a strong letter about it, he had not been expected to humble his pride and [redacted] accept [redacted] a single year. But Mr. Walter O'Malley, president of the Brooklyn Club, now says the case is closed, which means that Mr. Dressen cannot come back even on the terms offered him two days ago. So the Brooklyn management has rid itself of the services of the only pilot in the history of the Dodgers to have won two successive pennants.

7804

This reporter is without any [redacted] knowledge about [redacted] reasons for Mr. O'Malley's rejection of Mr. Dressen. Nor has he read the letter Mr. Dressen wrote about the new contract. He is no better posted on the refined subtelties of the case--if there are any--than any other citizen of the world of sport. But he considers it relevant that this has happened just as the Supreme Court is deciding whether organized baseball is business or a sport. For it seems to him undeniable that while baseball unquestionably is a business, it will cease being a business the moment it ceases being a sport.

That is saying that baseball has to live up to certain ethical requirements to be a sport, because [redacted] Americans [redacted] a sport [redacted]s. The concept of fair play is one of them. The dividing line between [redacted] business and a sport may be hard to draw. The dividing line between fair play and something less than fair play also is hard to draw. The American people [redacted] take sport [redacted] seriously [redacted] world are careful judges about what is fair play. Probably they have not made up their minds finally about the Dressen case.

According to Mr. O'Malley, Mr. Dressen was not offered a contract for longer than one year for "business reasons". It is the Dodger policy not to offer such a contract. It might land the Club in a situation where it would be paying two managers at the same time, if the one under contract had to be replaced. That HAS HAPPENED TO THE Dodgers AND THEY do not want it to happen AGAIN. In the case of Mr. Dressen this means that the Dodger management was trying to save itself $40,000, if it wanted to drop him after one year. How great the risk would be of having to pay this $40,000 only time could tell. It would not be an outright loss, only the possibility of such a loss, and not even a probability.

No one can deny that winning two consecutive pennants was worth more to the Brooklyn Club, many times more, than $40,000 And while Mr. Dressen did not do the actual winning, his services were one of the factors. If a third pennant were to be won, the victory would be still more lucrative. It is plain, too, that if Mr. Dressen had been retained as manager, attendance would not have fallen on that account. And if he did no more than keep his team up near the top in the National League race, the resulting attendance would much more than cover the $40,000 risk.

So the line between what is and what is not good business is not easy to draw.

But the business of baseball is more than dollars and risks. The status of Mr. Dressen involves qualities which the American people rate high, like gratitude, and the rewarding of work well done. These are among the elements of fair play, and fair play, as has been said, is one of the elements of American sport. Admittedly, the treatment a baseball manager receives does not move the public as much as the treatment of a player. Mr. Dressen is not a public darling. Not even Casey Stengel could be called that. Mr. Dressen has made mistakes and Dodger fans, who undoubtedly possess in the aggregate more managerial genius than any other body of fans on earth, can tell all about them. It may be that he made more mistakes than he should. His team blew one pennant and lost two world series. But if that is why he was dropped, then he was being punished, not for failure, but only for being a close second to the very best. This reporter would prefer to believe he was dropped over a $40,000 risk, paltry though that might appear to be.

Mr. Dressen is now in a position to paraphrase a celebrated statement Winston Churchill made about his dismissal by the British people. "And so" the prime minister wrote bitterly, "after five years, our enemies were all defeated and the British public chose to relieve me of further responsibility for the conduct of their affairs."

Mr. Dressen failed to defeat one enemy, the Yankees, but he had beaten the rest.

For his part Mr. Churchill in due course was to become Sir Winston and was given the garter. Mr. Dressen undoubtedly feels that he has been given the boot. And even his new status as part owner and manager in Oakland may well seem to him to fall short of a knighthood.

We don't want to get into the controversey between Charlie Dressen and the Brooklyn Dodgers...over the issue of a long-term contract. Perhaps the Dodger management feels as Cicero once did that "The consciousness of having done a splendid action is itself sufficient reward." Perhaps, Mr. Dressen is inclined to go along with Sallust when he said:"For great responsibilities there should be great rewards."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Foreign Ministers of Britain, France and this country held the first of three scheduled meetings in London today. It lasted more than five hours. A thirty-five word communique said only that among the items discussed were: Russia's invitation for talks on a non-aggression pact - the problem of Trieste - and the situation on the Israel-Jordan border. The talks will continue tomorrow.

It was made known, however, that West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer does not feel that this is the time for the western powers to discuss non-aggression treaties with Russia. He contends that such a move would slow up the re-armament of Western Germany.

As for Trieste, it's understood that the three Foreign Ministers are determined to stand firm on the decision to turn over Zone A of Trieste to Italy - despite Yugoslav objections. But the Ministers want the 74-hundred British and Americans now on occupation duty there to remain until tempers cool. The original plan was to move them out the end of next month.

One of Marshal Tito's highest aides said today that Yugoslavia will "never yield to Italy's imperialistic aims on Trieste." He said: "We have learned that any yielding must later be paid in blood. It is our duty to defend our country."

It was also apparent that the Foreign Ministers are very much concerned about the recent flareup along the border separating Israel from Syria. The British Foreign Office has already filed a formal protest with the Israeli government as a result of the killing of 56 arabs in Jordan on Wednesday. The British note says this was "apparently a calculated attack - a grave violation of the armistice - and an act endangering peace." There has been no formal reply to the note as yet.

But Syria has asked the UN Security Council to investigate Israel's plan to divert the waters of the Jordan River. Syria maintains that this is also a violation of the armistice - and a matter of the "greatest urgency."

In view of these developments, President Eisenhower announced that he is sending Eric Johnston to the Near East as his personal representative with the rank of Ambassador. Johnston is President of the Motion Picture Association of America. The President said that Johnston would look into plans for developing the Jordan Valley because "this is a sensitive and important area of the free world."

Mr. Eisenhower visited his home town of Abilene, Kansas today for the first time since moving into the White House. He walked through his boyhood home, toured, the Eisenhower Museum, got a kiss on the cheek from his high school sweetheart and then lunched with some old friends.

The Deputy Secretary of Defense, Roger Kyes, told the Women's Press Club in Washington: After visiting American military bases he has "growing confidence, determination and optimism regarding the security of Western Europe." Mr. Kyes said, however, that we must re-assess our defense plans, for we can no longer afford the luxury of the status quo in strategic planning. Outmoded procedures and weapons must go.

In Indianapolis, Senator Kennedy of Massachusetts told an American Legion gathering: "Our present program of air force expansion is inadequate. Our efforts must not be judged in comparison with what we have done in the past, but rather by what the Soviets are doing today."

In Korea, the second day of Communist efforts to re-convert prisoners of war to Communism almost ended in a free-for-all when thousands of North Koreans demonstrated in protest. Neutral Indian guards who had planned to bring in 5-hundred men for questioning decided to drop the project when it became apparent that there might be violence and the prospect of another mass break out from the prisoner compounds. Tonight, instead of North Koreans, Chinese prisoners will be brought up for interviews.

Attorney General Brownell announced late today that a Justice Department check shows that Senator McCarthy did not violate any election laws in the handling of his finances. No irregularities were found in the case of former Senator Benton of Connecticut either. Brownell said that McCarthy's income tax returns are still being studied.

Here in New York, the McCarthy Committee which has been looking into a possible radar spy ring at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, said it has questioned a witness who is "prepared to tell all." McCarthy said the witness has been given protective custody because he fears for his life. But that he can furnish information linking the spy plot with Julius Rosenberg who went to the electric chair for revealing atomic secrets.

In Boston, 27 have been killed and 40 others injured in an explosion aboard the aircraft carrier Leyte which has been undergoing repairs.

And Charlie Dressen, who led the Brooklyn Dodgers to 2 National League Pennants, has left the organization in a dispute over the length of a new contract. He will become manager and part owner of the Oakland team in the Pacific Coast League.

This reporter trusts he will not be in contempt of the Supreme Court of the United States if he says something on the question whether baseball is a business or a sport. He is speaking in connection with the fate of Mr. Charles Dressen as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers. The high court has the reserve clause of baseball under review and is to define the "legal nature" of baseball. Nothing will be said here to influence the court. This is to be only a comment on the treatment of Mr. Dressen.

The Dodger management has now announced that the decision not to re-employ Mr. Dressen is final. Two days ago it had been left open to Mr. Dressen to resume his duties as manager at an increase in salary if he would do so for a single year. Since Mr. Dressen had asked for a three, then a two-year contract, and written a strong letter about it, he had not been expected to humble his pride and accept a single year. But Mr. Walter O'Malley, president of the Brooklyn Club, now says the case is closed, which means that Mr. Dressen cannot come back even on the terms offered him two days ago. So the Brooklyn management has rid itself of the services of the only pilot in the history of the Dodgers to have won two successive pennants.

This reporter is without any knowledge about any private reasons for Mr. O'Malley's rejection of Mr. Dressen. Nor has he read the letter Mr. Dressen wrote about the new contract. He is no better posted on the refined subtleties of the case - if there are any - than any other citizen of the world of sport. But he considers it relevant that this has happened just as the Supreme Court is deciding whether organized baseball is a business or a sport. For it seems to him undeniable that while baseball unquestionably is a business, it is just as unquestionable that it will cease being a business the moment it ceases being a sport.

That is saying that baseball has to live up to certain ethical requirements to be a sport, because that is the way Americans think about a sport. The concept of fair play is one of them. The dividing line between business and a sport may be hard to draw. The dividing line between fair play and something less than fair play also is hard to draw. The American people take sport seriously and they are careful judges about what is fair play. Probably they have not made up their minds finally about the Dressen case.

According to Mr. O'Malley, Mr. Dressen was not offered a contract for longer than one year for "business reasons." It is the Dodger policy not to offer such a contract. It might land the Club in a situation where it would be paying two managers at the same time, if the one under contract had to be replaced. That has happed to the Dodgers and they do not want it to happen again.

In the case of Mr. Dressen this means that the Dodger management was trying to save itself $40,000 if it wanted to drop him after one year. How great the risk would be of having to pay this $40,000 only time could tell. It would not be an outright loss, only the possibility of such a loss, and not even a probability.

No one can deny that winning two consecutive pennants was worth more to the Brooklyn Club, many times more, than $40,000 and while Mr. Dressen did not do the actual winning, his services were one of the factors. If a third pennant were to be won the victory would be still more lucrative. It is plain, too, that if Mr. Dressen had been retained as manager, attendance would not have fallen on that account and if he did no more than keep his team up near the top in the National League race the resulting attendance would much more than cover the $40,000 risk. So the line between what is and what is not good business is not easy to draw.

But the business of baseball is more than dollars and risks. The status of Mr. Dressen involves qualities which the American people rate high, like gratitude, and the rewarding of work well done. These are among the elements of fair play, and fair play, as has been said, is one of the elements of American sport. Admittedly, the treatment a baseball manager receives does not move the public as much as the treatment of a player. Mr. Dressen is not a public darling. Not even Casey Stengel could be called that. Mr. Dressen has made mistakes and Dodger fans, who undoubtedly possess in the aggregate more managerial genius than any other body of fans on earth, can tell all about them. It may be that he made more mistakes than he should. His team blew one pennant and lost two world series. But if that is why he was dropped, then he was being punished, not for failure, but only for being a close second to the very best. This reporter would prefer to believe he was dropped over a $40,000 risk, paltry though that might appear to be.

Mr. Dressen is now in a position to paraphrase a celebrated statement Winston Churchill made about his dismissal by the British people. "And so," the prime minister wrote bitterly, "after five years, our enemies were all defeated and the British public chose to relieve me of further responsibility for the conduct of their affairs." Mr. Dressen failed to defeat one enemy, the Yankees, but he had beaten the rest.

For his part Mr. Churchill in due course was to become Sir Winston and was given the garter. Mr. Dressen undoubtedly feels that he has been given the boot. And even his new status aspart owner and manager in Oakland may well seem to him to fall short of a knighthood.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We don't want to get into the controversy between Charlie Dressen and the Brooklyn Dodgers over the issue of a longterm contract. Perhaps the Dodger management feels as Cicero once did that "The consciousness of having done a splendid action is itself sufficient reward." Perhaps, Mr. Dressen is inclined to go along with Sallust when he said: "For great responsibilities there should be great rewards."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday, October 19, 1953

This is the news:

The Communists today agreed to meet with an American representative in Korea to arrange for the peace conference. They accepted our date: next Monday. And they're agreeable to discussing the time and place for the PEACE conference. But they insist that the Monday meeting discuss which nations shall attend. The enemy wants to bring in neutral nations..contrary to the United Nations decision. And Chinese Premier Chou en-Lai makes it clear that he believes this question is more important than the time or place of the meeting. An American spokesman says Arthur Dean, the American representative to the peace conference, will meet with the Communists at Panmunjom..on Monday.

For a second day the enemy did not question Chinese or North Korean prisoners who refuse to return to their homes. The Communists TODAY wanted to talk to a thousand North Koreans, [redacted]. The Indians said these men could not be "persuaded" to attend. There is one report that the Czech and Polish members of the neutral nation commission walked out of a commission meeting when the Indian chairman refused to force the North Koreans to attend the "explanation" sessions. And the Swiss government has announced that its representative has been told to "avoid the use of force under all circumstances." The neutral commission has scheduled another meeting for tonight.

In Indo-China, the French high command says its forces have wrecked a Vietminh war depot south of the Red River Delta. The French say they destroyed "tons" of war equipment.

President Eisenhower and Mexican President Adolfo Ruiz Cortinez today dedicated the new Falcon Dam across the Rio Grande river seperating our two countries. Mr. Eisenhower said our people and the citizens of Mexico must ignore the cheap promises of totalitarianism. He said they "set class against class, nation against nation and people against people." Both presidents hailed the five-mile long dam as a mighty link in the friendship of their two peoples.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Wilson hinted that we may decide to put more air power in Europe and pull out some of our ground troops. Wilson told reporters: "It would be a great mistake if the people of our country got into a rut on decisions that have been made in the past." And he said he believes the development of new weapons will enable us to pull out men from Europe "in the long run."

The Commerce Department reports that in the year ending last July first we paid a record sum of seven billion dollars for foreign aid.. nearly two billion more than we paid in the previous year.

The Agriculture Department says that the "cost-price squeeze" on the farmers is "likely to continue in 1954 about the same as in 1953." The Department says the cost of farm production items have eased off slightly this year and some further drop is probable. But the prices farmers receive for their products also may average a little lower next year.

Civil Service Commission Chairman Phillip Young says federal employment will be reduced by about 115-thousand persons in the year ending next June 30th.

Republican Senator Williams of Delaware charges that some 25-thousand federal employes are not paying income taxes..and the government is powerless to collect. Williams says these people file returns. But they use a loophole in the law that prohibits the attachment of federal salaries..and don't pay the taxes due.

The Army says there has been a 30 per cent drop in the rates of desertaion and being absent without leave since commanders were authorized to ship convicted runaways to Korea.

Here in New York today Governor Dewey's counsel, George M. Shapiro, demanded that Robert Wagner, Democratic candidate for Mayor, name the "high national figure" he accuses of having sought a parole for Joseph Faye, now in prison on an extortion charge. Wagner has charged that "one of the most important men in the United States" wrote the state parole board to try to get a parole for Faye. Shapiro demands that Wagner now make the name public. A spokesman for Wagner says Governor Dewey is "passing the buck".. and should release all the names of those who tried to get Faye a parole.

At the United Nations, the Security Council approved an American motion to ask a full report from the United Nations truce supervisor on recent violence between Isreal and neighboring Arab states. The United States, Britain and France called the council into an urgent session and sharply denounced an Isreali attack on a Jordan village. The Jordan government says 66 Arabs were killed. ~~The United States has also notified Isreal that will withhold American financial aid until Isreal stops trying to divert the Jordan River along the Syrian frontier.~~

Yugoslavia today asked the Security Council for a chance to present her views on Trieste. The Council is scheduled to continue debate tomorrow on a Russian proposal to internationalize Trieste. And in Belgrade, the newspaper of Communist leaders warns that Italian occupation of Trieste's Zone A "with or without troops, is the same thing", and is unacceptable to Yugoslavia. For a second day the people of Belgrade waited for their government's reaction to the Western Foreign Ministers proposal for a five power conference on Trieste.

Edward R. Murrow: October 19, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Secretary of State Dulles returned from London today, where he had been meeting with the Foreign Ministers of Britain and France. (He reports to the President the first thing tomorrow morning.) He thought the meeting of the Big Three Foreign Ministers would produce "some results of interest towards peace and security in the future." Mr. Dulles said the London meeting was very cordial; but he wouldn't say whether he thought Russia would accept the Western Powers' invitation to a Big Four meeting at Lugano to discuss the future of Germany and Austria on November 9th.

But the Russians today pretty well took care of any possibility that that meeting might come off. The Russian reply came with unusual speed; and it is significant that they chose to make their answer by way of the Communist East German news agency. The East German news agency did not attribute its remarks to any specific source, but it is inconceivable that such a flat and unequivocal rejection could have been printed without full Russian approval. Normally the Russians wait days or weeks before replying to a Western move. This time they reacted within 24 hours. The Russians say our proposal for a conference avoids the proposals of the Soviet Union. "The Western Powers do not give a single word to the relaxation of tension in the international situation - to the reduction of armaments - to the prohibition of military bases in territories of foreign states - or to the banning of atomic and hydrogen weapons of mass destruction. In short, the Russians want no part of the proposed conference.

It is interesting that they chose an East German mouthpiece for the rejection. They are not interested in any retreat or compromise implicit in any genuine negotiation. Dick Hottelet cables me from Germany tonight that Moscow is trying to entrench itself more solidly in Eastern Germany. They are trying to raise the material standard of living, while at the same time clamping down on the remaining shreds of political and economic freedom. The Communist Party in East Germany is again speaking openly of class warfare. The East German farmers who fled to the West, and who did not return by October 15th, are to have their land confiscated. The Russians obviously intend to hold East Germany for the time being, whatever the cost.

Clearly Moscow does not see in the West's proposal, a vehicle to improve its international position. Today's announcement makes it obvious that the Russians would like a conference tailored to its own interests. They would like to talk about the elimination of military bases on foreign soil. The Russians do not want any treaty or obligation which binds American power and American interests to the Continent of ~~Europe~~ Europe. Moscow's primary objective is to get us out of Europe, thereby paving the way for infiltration similar to what happened in Czechoslovakia in 1948, because they see in this method an opportunity to infiltrate and finally dominate dispirited and disunited national units.

The East German news agency statement today makes it completely clear that the Russians are not interested in security guarantees or a European security system which involves the United States. This should come as no surprise. Seven years ago when James Byrnes was Secretary of State he offered the Russians a fifty-year security guarantee in connection with the occupation of Germany. The Russians weren't interested then, and they aren't now; and their reasons appear to be the same then as now. They want to get us out of Western Europe; and any guarantee of any kind would serve to bind us more closely to that area. So it looks as though there would be a lot of empty hotel rooms around the Lake of Lugano on November 9th, because the Russians aren't coming.

The prospects for fruitful negotiations on the problem of Trieste appear none too bright. The British and ourselves apparently can't go forward and turn over Zone A to the Italians, because Tito says if we pull our troops out and the Italians move in, he'll shoot - the Italians, that is. The Italian Government says if we don't carry out the promise, it will resign, and might pull out of the European Army. We wanted a conference on Trieste, to include Britain, France, Italy and Yugoslavia; but the Yugoslav radio said today that Tito's Government won't participate in any such conference. If its a foregone conclusion that the Italians get Zone A.

And tonight the United Press reports from London that an authoritative diplomatic source" says that Prime Minister Churchill told Secretary of State Dulles in London yesterday that he, Churchill, may go to Moscow alone - if it can be arranged - in order to sit down for a face to face session with Russian Premier Malenkov. Sir Winston is capable of "going it alone", for he would rather have the Nobel Peace Prize, than the one for Literature. * If he does go he can speak, of course, only for Britain, and not the United States; but he knows that full well and so do the Russians.

This matter of international diplomacy can often get extremely complicated. And no one is probably more aware of this than the Secretary of State, Mr. Dulles. But the Greek Scholar Athenaeus once said:"It is troubles that bring men together." For further words of encouragement, Mr. Dulles might turn to these lines by the Roman Seneca:"There is nothing which persevering effort and unceasing and diligent care can not overcome."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Communists today agreed to meet with an American representative in Korea to arrange for the peace conference. They accepted our date: next Monday. And they're agreeable to discussing the time and place for the peace conference. But they insist that the Monday meeting discuss which nations shall attend. The enemy wants to bring in neutral nations - contrary to the United Nations decision. And Chinese Premier Chou en-Lai makes it clear that he believes this question is more important than the time or place of the meeting. An American spokesman says Arthur Dean, the American representative to the peace conference, will meet with the Communists at Panmunjom on Monday.

For a second day the enemy did not question Chinese or North Korean prisoners who refuse to return to their homes. The Communists today wanted to talk to a thousand North Koreans. The Indians said these men could not be "persuaded" to attend. There is one report that the Czech and Polish members of the neutral nation commission walked out of a commission meeting when the Indian chairman refused to force the North Koreans to attend the "explanation" sessions. And the Swiss government has announced that its representative has been told to "avoid the use of force under all circumstances." The neutral commission has scheduled another meeting for tonight.

In Indo-China, the French high command says its forces have wrecked a "Vietminh war depot south of the Red River Delta. The French say they destroyed "tons" of war equipment.

President Eisenhower and Mexican President Adolfo Ruiz Cortinez today dedicated the new Falcon Dam across the Rio Grande River separating our two countries. Mr. Eisenhower said our people and the citizens of Mexico must ignore the cheap promises of totalitarianism. He said they "set class against class, nation against nation, and people against people." Both presidents hailed the five-mile long dam as a mighty link in the friendship of their two peoples.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Wilson hinted that we may decide to put more air power in Europe and pull out some of our ground troops. Wilson told reporters: "It would be a great mistake if the people of our country got into a rut on decisions that have been made in the past." And he said he believes the development of new weapons will enable us to pull out men from Europe "in the long run."

The Commerce Department reports that in the year ending last July first we paid a record sum of seven billion dollars for foreign aid - nearly two billion more than we paid in the previous year.

The Agriculture Department says that the "cost-price squeeze" on the farmers is "likely to continue in 1954 about the same as in 1953." The Department says the cost of farm production items have eased off slightly this year and some further drop is probable. But the prices farmers receive for their products also may average a little lower next year.

Civil Service Commission Chairman Phillip Young says federal employment will be reduced by about 115-thousand persons in the year ending next June 30th.

Republican Senator Williams of Delaware charges that some 25-thousand federal employees are not paying income taxes and the government is powerless to collect. Williams says these people file returns. But they use a loophole in the law that prohibits the attachment of federal salaries and don't pay the taxes due.

The Army says there has been a 30 per cent drop in the rates of desertion and being absent without leave since commanders were authorized to ship convicted runaways to Korea.

Here in New York today Governor Dewey's counsel, George M. Shapiro, demanded that Robert Wagner, Democratic candidate for Mayor, name the "high national figure" he accuses of having sought a parole for Joseph Faye, now in prison on an extortion charge. Wagner has charged that "one of the most important men in the United States" wrote the state parole board to try to get a parole for Faye. Shapiro demands that Wagner now make the name public. A spokesman for Wagner says Governor Dewey is "passing the buck" and should release all the names of those who tried to get Faye a parole.

At the United Nations, the Security Council approved an American motion to ask a full report from the United Nations truce supervisor on recent violence between Israel and neighboring Arab states. The United States, Britain and France called the council into an urgent session and sharply denounced an Israeli attack on a Jordan village. The Jordan government says 66 Arabs were killed.

Yugoslavia today asked the Security Council for a chance to present her views on Trieste. The Council is scheduled to continue debate tomorrow on a Russian proposal to internationalize Trieste. And in Belgrade, the newspaper of Communist leaders warns that Italian occupation of Trieste's Zone A "with or without troops, is the same thing" and is unacceptable to Yugoslavia. For a second day the people of Belgrade waited for their government's reaction to the Western Foreign Ministers proposal for a five power conference on Trieste.

Secretary of State Dulles returned from London today, where he had been meeting with the Foreign Ministers of Britain and France. He reports to the President the first thing tomorrow morning. He thought the meeting of the Big Three Foreign Ministers would produce "some results of interest towards peace and security in the future." Mr. Dulles said the London meeting was very cordial; but he wouldn't say whether he thought Russia would accept the Western Powers' invitation to a Big Four meeting at Lugano to discuss the future of Germany and Austria on November 9th.

But the Russians today pretty well took care of any possibility that that meeting might come off. The Russian reply came with unusual speed; and it is significant that they chose to make their answer by way of the Communist East German news agency. The East German news agency did not attribute its remarks to any specific source, but it is inconceivable that such a flat and unequivocal rejection could have been printed without full Russian approval. Normally the Russians wait days or weeks before replying to a Western move. This time they reacted within 24 hours. The Russians say our proposal for a conference avoids the proposals of the Soviet Union. "The Western Powers do not give a single word to the relaxation of tension in the international situation - to the reduction of armaments - to the prohibition of military bases in territories of foreign states - or to the banning of atomic and hydrogen weapons of mass destruction. In short, the Russians want no part of the proposed conference.

It is interesting that they chose an East German mouth-piece for the rejection. They are not interested in any retreat or compromise implicit in any genuine negotiation. Dick Hottelet cables me from Germany tonight that Moscow is trying to entrench itself more solidly in Eastern Germany. They are trying to raise the material standard of living, while at the same time clamping down on the remaining shreds of political and economic freedom. The Communist Party in East Germany is again speaking openly of class warfare. The East German farmers who fled to the West, and who did not return by October 15th, are to have their land confiscated. The Russians obviously intend to hold East Germany for the time being, whatever the cost.

Clearly Moscow does not see in the West's proposal a vehicle to improve its international position. Today's announcement makes it obvious that the Russians would like a conference tailored to its own interests. They would like to talk about the elimination of military bases on foreign soil. The Russians do not want any treaty or boligation which binds American power and American interests to the Continent of Europe. Moscow's primary objective is to get us out of Europe, thereby paving the way for infiltration similar to what happened in Czechoslovakia in 1948, because they see in this method an opportunity to infiltrate and finally cominate dispirited and disunited national units.

The East German news agency statement today makes it completely clear that the Russians are not interested in security guarantees or a European security system which involves the United States. This should come as no surprise. Seven years ago when James Brynes was Secretary of State he offered the Russians a fifty-year security guarantee in connection with the occupation of Germany. The Russians weren't interested then, and they aren't now; and their reasons appear to be the same then as now. They want to get us out of Western Europe; and any guarantee of any kind would serve to bind us more closely to that area. So it looks as though there would be a lot of empty hotel rooms around the Lake of Lugano on November 9th, because the Russians aren't coming.

The prospects for fruitful negotiations on the problem of Trieste appear none too bright. The British and ourselves apparently can't go forward and turn over Zone A to the Italians, because Tito says if we pull our troops out and the Italians move in, he'll shoot - the Italians, that is. The Italian Government says if we don't carry out the promise, it will resign and might pull out of the European Army. We wanted a conference on Trieste to include Britain, France, Italy and Yugoslavia; but the Yugoslav radio said today that Tito's Government won't participate in any such conference. It's a foregone conclusion that the Italians get Zone Z.

And tonight the United Press reports that London that an authoritative diplomatic source says that Prime Minister Churchill told Secretary of State Dulles in London yesterday that he, Churchill, may go to Moscow alone - if it can be arranged - in order to sit down for a face to face session with Russian Premier Malenkov. Sir Winston is capable of "going it alone," for he would rather have the Nobel Peace Prize than the one for Literature. If he does go he can speak, of course, only for Britain and not the United States, but he knows that full well and so do the Russians.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: This matter of international diplomacy can often get extremely complicated. And no one is probably more aware of this than the Secretary of State, Mr. Dulles. But the Greek Scholar Athenaeus once said: "It is troubles that bring men together." For further words of encouragement, Mr. Dulles might turn to these lines by the Roman Seneca: "There is nothing which persevering effort and unceasing and diligent care cannot overcome."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday, Oct 20, 1953

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles tonight called on Russia to prove her peaceful intentions by accepting a western proposal to confer on how to unite Germany. In a speech to the Herald-Tribune forum here in New York, Mr. Dulles said he hopes Moscow agrees. But whatever the answer it will be revealing. He feels the Russian reply will show (WHETHER) or not they actually want to make a concrete move towards peace. And the Secretary also said-(apparently in reference to Prime Minister Churchill's call for a heads of state meeting-)that such a meeting would be dangerous. He feels it might "produce the illusion of agreement, without the reality of agreement."

In London today, Sir Winston made it clear he still feels a friendly, informal personal talk AMONG the leading western figures AND SOVIET PREMIER MALENKOV might do good.. could not easily do harm. But he advised the House of Commons:"It is well to remember there is a limit to what can be done by one government." He would not say whether he plans to make a lone personal trip to meet with Malenkov. But Sir Winston appealed to Russia for co-operation. He said he hopes the Kremlin will accept the western plan to discuss Germany. He SAID

[redacted] this would be an invaluable step toward reducing world tension."

Both Foreign Secretary Eden, in London, and Secretary Dulles, here in New York, explained that the recent western decision to give Italy control of Trieste's Zone A was made to settle the argument...in the hope it would pave the way for a "final peaceful solution." And the United Nations Security Council has voted to postpone debate on Trieste until November second.

Earlier in the day, the Secretary announced that we are withholding aid to Isreal because Isreal is defying United Nations plans to maintain peace in the Near East. And the United Nations Security Council decided to make a full inquiry into Isreali-Arab border incidents. I'd like to discuss the situation in this part of the world in a few minutes.

Mr. Dulles told reporters today that we will meet with the Communists at Panmunjom next Monday to make arrangements for a political conference. He said we have no way of preventing them from bringing up their plan to admit neutral nations. But we will stick to the U.N. decision to limit the conference to "two sides."

In Korea tonight, the neutral nations ~~repatriations~~ Repatriation commission announced, that one of the 23 American soldiers who has insisted he wanted to stay with the communists, has changed his mind. We are not told this soldier's name. But we are told that he now wants to come home.

And a Defense Department official in Washington says that anti-Communist prisoners in Korea, who have refused to listen to Communist explainers, will be set free on January 27th.. the deadline for deciding their fate. This official, who will not permit the use of his name, says he does not think the present situation in Korea will lead to a renewal of the war because--he says-- the Chinese Communists do not want war." State Department officials agree, but say they consider the present situation "very serious", because it could lead to a breakdown of the truce agreement. At the moment, the Communist Poland and Czech delegates refuse to attend commission meetings, because the Commission is against forcing prisoners to listen to Communist explainers. And the Swedish member calls the situation "very grave" and says "anything may happen."

difficulties. The Communist Poland and Czech delegates are boycotting the group because it refuses to force prisoners to listen to Communist explanations on why they should go home. The Swedish member says the "situation is grave... anything might happen." And the enemy now charges that we have hampered the "explanations" by planting "agents" among the prisoners who refuse to go home. We are accused of "obstructing" the repatriation of these men. And in South Carolina today, Undersecretary of State Smith said that if the plans for a Korean political conference fall through it will be the enemy's fault.. because "once more the Communist will have blocked a settlement while maintaining the appearance of wanting [illegible]."

Major General Dean, recently released from a Communist prison in Korea, arrived in Washington today and said he feels better than the doctors "thought I should feel." And here in New York, the former 8th army commander, General Mark Clark, received a ticker-tape welcome from thousands of persons and then told them:" I have found the Communists [redacted] the same EVIL foe whether in London, Moscow or Korea, with the same ambition for world domination. There is no decency, no honesty in his make-up."

In San Fransisco tonight Treasury Secretary Humphrey told a Republican finance committee meeting, that a static defense would be the surest formula for defeat." He hinted that the military establishment may trim its appropriations to accent mobility, and the imaginative use of new weapons. But he also said that the future program will be supported by "whatever appropriations logic and necessity demand."

The Commerce Department reports that business activity continued "at a high rate" in the closing weeks of summer, although there was an easing-off from recent record peaks.

In Indianapolis. 79-year-old William L. Hutcheson, former president of the A.F. of L. Carpenters Union died of a heart ailment. He was head of his union for 36 years until he stepped down in favor of his son, Maurice, in 1952. President Eisenhower [redacted] says the nation has lost an outstanding citizen..one of its universally respected leaders.

Edward R. Murrow: October 20, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

The conflict between Israel and its Arab neighbors has never been settled, for peace after the recent war has never been made. Such quiet as has prevailed has been due largely to the increasingly ineffective work of the mixed armistice commission of the U.N.

In a situation where there is no peace, and where the armistice is being inadequately enforced, and above all where local hostilities are deep and racial, it is natural that border incidents should develop that threaten to lead back to war. These keep pushing this dormant conflict onto the front pages of world newspapers. (That is where it is now.) It is there because of a strong rebuke to Israel by the United States Government because of the massacre of Arab civilians in the Jordan frontier village of Kibya. It is there over the failure of the Israel Government to suspend work as ordered on a canal system to divert Jordan River waters for Israel's benefit. It is there over the announcement of Secretary Dulles that payment is being suspended of Israel's share of the Mid-Eastern aid voted by the last U.S. Congress. [The Treasury today withheld a fifteen million dollar check it was sending.] And it is there because the Security Council of the U.N. has agreed to consider the border violence, and the Danish General [redacted] (Voun) Benneke, Chief of Staff of the Truce Supervision Organization in Palestine is on his way to report the facts of the outbreaks.

Wherever there is tension that keeps breaking into violence, each eruption brings a pattern of rabid charges, counter-charges and denials. The massacre in Kibya "shocked" the State Department (to use its own word) for forty-two defenseless persons, including women and children, were killed in a night raid. The attack is not in dispute. What Israeli officials deny is that it was made by their troops. The Arabs charge that 600 Israeli soldiers did take part in it. The Israeli Government says that not an Israeli soldier was absent from barracks. But it does admit that due to slaying of Israeli inhabitants by Arab infiltrators, Israeli villagers on the border were organized and armed to defend themselves. It was after the murder of an Israeli mother and her two children in their sleep in the nearby village of Yahud, they say, that the armed villagers descended on Kibya. Prime Minister Ben Gurion charged that Kibya was a center of murder gangs. These are reported as charges and counter-charges, not as facts.

Justice is not well served by armed reprisals, whether by soldiers under orders, or by armed villagers acting angrily on their own. But Israeli officials say that infiltration by armed Arab marauders has been the main cause of the increasing insecurity in the Holy Land. Raids and counter-raids in the last twenty months have caused, they say, seven hundred Arab casualties, and three hundred Israeli casualties. In this time three thousand so-called Arab infiltrators have been captured in XXXXXXX Israel. At first the infiltrators were not considered a menace, and the police could take care of them. But, the Israelis continue, when the infiltrators resorted to violence, it was assumed that a drive was on to frighten Israelis from the border, so that Israel's defense would be weakened. Then it was, the villagers were organized and armed to act for themselves.

Reporting charges and counter-charges in a highly emotional situation is a thankless task. In this dispute the anger on both sides is white-hot. Each is sure that basically the other is wholly to blame, and each resents the other side even being stated. In such circumstances the facts are hard to ascertain and still harder to weigh. It hardly needs stressing that the problem is not one to be solved simply by repressing violence. Somehow or other, the Israeli and Arabs must find the basis for neighborliness, for the alternative would seem to be mutual annihilation.

One way to lay a groundwork for neighborliness is to plan for the habilitation of displaced Arab refugees. It is ironic, that just now the issue of utilizing the waters of the Jordan should be injected into the conflict. // The State Department is backing a plan for exploiting the Jordan River, sponsored by officials of our own T.V.A. / This has been mapped out regardless of frontiers, the main objective being to permit the re-settlement of two hundred thousand Arab refugees. / Unfortunately this plan has a rival in XXXXXXXX Israel's own Jordan River development scheme, based on the study made by two Americans in 1944 and '45, the so-called Loudermilk-Hayes Report. / Where that scheme would benefit chiefly Israel, the T.V.A. plan would benefit both sides of the Jordan, only one side being in Israel. And to make it acceptable to the Arab countries involved, a technical rectification of Israel's border on the Sea of Galilee would be needed. /

Since Israel is on record as being ready to deal with the water problem by negotiation with its neighbors, this should be where and how peace is to be found. / But at a time when the outlook for peace is in the right use of Jordan River water, this water has become a cause of contention by itself. / That is said simply to emphasize that here is one of the most addled and inflammatory problems in the world. And if the Security Council, or the Three Powers, or the parties directly involved, find how to reduce it to safe dimensions they will earn a big credit for statesmanship. /

The Jordan River has become a center of controversey between Israel and the Arab States. How to make the best use of this natural resource is the main issue. William Scarborough once advised:"Though living near a river, do not waste water." But Henry Van Dyke looked at the problem more realistically when he said:"It is with rivers, as it is with people - the greatest are not always the most agreeable, nor the best to live with."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles tonight called on Russia to prove her peaceful intentions by accepting a western proposal to confer on how to unite Germany. In a speech to the Herald-Tribune forum here in New York, Mr. Dulles said he hopes Moscow agrees. But whatever the answer it will be revealing. He feels the Russian reply will show whether or not they actually want to make a concrete move towards peace. nd the Secretary also said (apparently in reference to Prime Minister Churchill's call for a heads of state meeting) that such a meeting would be dangerous. He feels it might "produce the illusion of agreement, without the reality of agreement."

In London today, Sir Winston made it clear he still feels a friendly, informal personal talk among the leading western figures and Soviet Premier Malenkov might do good - could not easily do harm. But he advised the House of Commons: "It is well to remember there is a limit to what can be done by one government." He would not say whether he plans to make a lone personal trip to meet with Malenkov. But Sir Winston appealed to Russia for cooperation. He said he hopes the Kremlin will accept the western plan to discuss Germany. He said this would be an invaluable step toward reducing world tension."

Both Foreign Secretary Eden, in London, and Secretary Dulles, here in New York, explained that the recent western decision to give Italy control of Trieste's Zone A was made to settle the argument - in the hope it would pave the way for a "final peaceful solution." And the United Nations Security Council has voted to postpone debate on Trieste until November second.

Earlier in the day, the Secretary announced that we are withholding aid to Israel because Israel is defying United Nations plans to maintain peace in the Near East. And the United Nations Security Council decided to make a full inquiry into Israeli-Arab border incidents. I'd like to discuss the situation in this part of the world in a few minutes.

Mr. Dulles told reporters today that we will meet with the Communists at Panmunjom next Monday to make arrangements for a political conference. He said we have no way of preventing them from bringing up their plan to admit neutral nations. But we will stick to the U.N. decision to limit the conference to "two sides."

In Korea tonight, the neutral nations repatriation commission announced that one of the 23 American soldiers who has insisted he wanted to stay with the Communists has changed his mind. We are not told this soldier's name. But we are told that he now wants to come home.

And a Defense Department official in Washington says that anti-Communist prisoners in Korea who have refused to listen to Communist explainers will be set free on January 27th, the deadline for deciding their fate. This official, who will not permit the use of his name, says he does not think the present situation in Korea will lead to a renewal of the war because he says, the Chinese Communists do not want war. State Department officials agree but say they consider the present situation "very serious" because it could lead to a breakdown of the truce agreement. At the moment the Communist Poland and Czech delegates refuse to attend commission meetings because the Commission is against forcing prisoners to listen to Communist explainers. And the Swedish member calls the situation

"very grave" and says "anything may happen."

Major General Dean, recently released from a Communist prison in Korea, arrived in Washington today and said he feels better than the doctors "thought I should feel." And here in New York, the former 8th army commander, General Mark Clark, received a ticker-tape welcome from thousands of persons and then told them: "I have found the Communists the same evil foe whether in London, Moscow or Korea, with the same ambition for world domination. There is no decency, no honesty in his make-up."

In San Francisco tonight Treasury Secretary Humphrey told a Republican finance committee meeting that a static defense would be the surest formula for defeat." He hinted that the military establishment may trim its appropriations to accent mobility and the imaginative use of new weapons. But he also said that the future program will be supported by "whatever appropriations logic and necessity demand."

The Commerce Department reports that business activity continued "at a high rate" in the closing weeks of summer although there was an easing-off from recent record peaks.

In Indianapolis, 79-year-old William L. Hutcheson, former president of the AFL Carpenters Union died of a heart ailment. He was head of his union for 36 years until he stepped down in favor of his son, Maurice, in 1952. President Eisenhower says the nation has lost an outstanding citizen - one of its universally respected leaders.

The conflict between Israel and its Arab neighbors has never been settled, for peace after the recent war has never been made. Such quiet as has prevailed has been due largely to the increasingly ineffective work of the mixed armistice commission of the U.N.

In a situation where there is no peace, and where the armistice is being inadequately enforced, and above all where local hostilities are deep and racila, it is natural that border incidents should develop that threaten to lead back to war. These keep pushing this dormant conflict onto the front pages of world newspapers. That is where it is now. It is there because of a strong rebuke to Israel by the United States Government because of the massacre of Arab civilians in the Jordan frontier village of Kibya. It is there over the failure of the Israel Government to suspend work as ordered on a canal system to divert Jordan River waters for Israel's benefit. It is there over the announcement of Secretary Dulles that payment is being suspended of Israel's share of the Mid-Eastern aid voted by the last U.S. Congress. The Treasury today withheld a fifteen million dollar check it was sending. And it is there because the Security Council of the U.N. has agreed to consider the border violence, and the Danish General Va n Benneke, Chief of Staff of the Truce Supervision Organization in Palestine is on his way to report the facts of the outbreaks.

Wherever there is tension that keeps breaking into violence, each eruption brings a pattern of rabid charges, counter-charges and denials. The massacre in Kibya "shocked" the State Department (to use its own word) for forty-two defenseless persons, including women and children, were killed in a night raid. The attack is not in dispute. What Israeli officials deny is that it was made by their troops. The Arabs charge that 600 Israeli soldiers did take part in it. The Israeli Government says that not an Israeli soldier was absent from barracks. But it does admit that due to slaying of Israeli inhabitants by Arab infiltrators, Israeli villagers on the border were organized and armed to defend themselves. It was after the murder of an Israeli mother and her two children in their sleep in the nearby village of Yahud, they say, that the armed villagers descended on Kobya. Prime Minister Ben Gurion charged that Kibya was a center of murder gangs. These are reported as charges and counter-charges, not as facts.

Justice is not well served by armed reprisals, whether by soldiers under orders, or by armed villagers acting angrily on their own. But Israeli officials say that infiltration by armed Arab marauders has been the main cause of the increasing insecurity in the Holy Land. Raids and counter-raids in the last twenty months have caused, they say, seven hundred Arab casualties and three hundred Israeli casualties. In this time three thousand so-called Arab infiltrators have been captured in Israel. At first the infiltrators were not considered a menace and the police could take care of them. But, the Israelis continue, when the infiltrators resorted to violence, it was assumed that a drive was on to frighten Israelis from the border so that Isreal's defense would be weakened. Then it was the villagers were organized and armed to act for themselves.

Reporting charges and counter-charges in a highly emotional situation is a thankless task. In this dispute the anger on both sides is white-hot. Each is sure that basically the other is wholly to blame, and each resents the other side even being stated. In such circumstances the facts are hard to ascertain and still harder to weigh. It hardly needs stressing that the problem is not one to be solved simply by repressing violence. Somehow or other, the Israeli and Arabs must find the basis for neighborliness, for the alternative would seem to be mutual annihilation.

One way to lay a groundwork for neighborliness is to plan for the habilitation of displaced Arab refugees. It is ironic that just now the issue of utilizing the waters of the Jordan should be injected into the conflict. The State Department is backing a plan for exploiting the Jordan River sponsored by officials of our own TVA. This has been mapped out regardless of frontiers, the main objective being to permit the re-settlement of two hundred thousand Arab refugees Unfortunately this plan has a rival in Israel's own Jordan River development scheme, based on the study made by two Americans in 1944 and 1945, the so-called Loudermilk-Hayes Report. Where that scheme would benefit chiefly Israel, the TVA plan would benefit both sides of the Jordan, only one side being in Israel. And to make it acceptable to the Arab countries involved, a technical rectification of Israel's border on the Sea of Galilee would be needed.

Since Israel is on record as being ready to deal with the water problem by negotiation with its neighbors, this should be where and how peace is to be found. But at a time when the outlook for peace is in the right use of Jordan River water, this water has become a cause of contention by itself. That is said simply to emphasize that here is one of the most addled and inflammatory problems in the world. And if the Security Council, or the Three Powers, or the parties directly involved, find how to reduce it to safe dimensions they will earn a big credit for statesmanship.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The Jordan River has become a center of controversey between Israel and the Arab States. How to make the best use of this natural resource is the main issue. William Scarborough once advised: "Though living near a river, do not waste water." But Henry Van Dyke looked at the problem more realistically when he said: "It is with rivers as it is with people - the greatest are not always the most agreeable nor the best to live with." - Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday, October 21, 1953

This is the news:

The President said today that he will not do any partisan campaigning, to help elect Republicans to Congress next year. He told reporters: he does not intend to make the presidency an agent, to be used in partisan elections. He considers himself president of all the people. He is confident that if his Administration develops a program to benefit all the people, then his party will command the votes of a majority of the people. The President also said at a White House news conference, that he has full confidence in [redacted] Secretary of Agriculture Benson. He said Benson is dedicated to America... striving hard to bring all elements of the agricultural economy into balance. Mr. Eisenhower said with some anger that it is "his" reponsibility to say who should be his principal advisers. And as for the farmers, the President finds them to be taking things more in stride, than many politicians.

Secretary Benson spoke along similar lines, when he told a Chicago audience that some politicans are more "panicky" over the farm situation, than farmers. Benson said "We are not interested in [redacted] pleasing or [redacted] replying, to rabble rousers and demagogues."

At the White House news conference the President said that while the cost of living has continued to go up, it is levelling off to a considerably greater extent than in recent years. He was asked about a statement by Clarence Manion, head of his commission to study federal state relations. Manion had suggested that the government sell the Tennessee Valley Authority to private interests. But the President, who once called T.V.A. "creeping socialism", said the Manion plan would be "a pretty drastic step."

The President ALSO TOLD [redacted] reporters he was glad one of our soldiers in Korea had changed his mind, and decided to return to this country rather than stay with the Communists. Mr. Eisenhower said he sometimes wonders why more of our troops were not converted to Communism while they were prisoners. He had this thought in view of what he called the meager education we sometimes give our citizens concerning their obligations in our form of government.

The soldier who changed his mind.. 23-year-old Private Ed Dickenson of Virginia told reporters in Korea: he decided to come home because he has had enough of Communism. He made the decision a long time ago. He said: "Communism is not my belief. I have other beliefs" but he did not explain them. Dickenson, who had been a prisoner for almost three years said it is "more than likely" that [redacted] some others of the 22 Americans who have chosen Communism may change their mind. The soldier was not "coaxed" to change his mind.. we haven't started [redacted] "explanations" to any of the 22 Americans so far. And in the Cumberland mountains, Mr and Mrs Van Burean Dickenson, the Private's parents, asked reporters to get word to him that "nobody hereabouts thinks hard of him for what he done. No hard feelings on our part."

At the United Nations today, Israel denied an American charge that the Israeli government is diverting Jordan River water from Syria. Secretary of State Dulles said yesterday that because of this, we would withhold economic aid from Israel. The Israeli government says any suggestion that it is "defying the United Nations, would not be legally or factually accurate."

In Iran, Premier Zehedi declared martial law in eight oil centers, to prevent Communist sabotage.

And in London the Churchill government has demanded a vote of confidence [redacted] for its decision to suspend the constitution of British [redacted] Guiana, and rush troops there--because of the threat of a Communist coup.

In Stockholm, the chairman of the Nobel Peace Prize committee has told a reporter that former President Truman is a leading candidate for this year's prize.

In Washington, ~~Chairman Taber of the House Appropriation Committee called on the President and then told reporters: he believes we can provide for adequate defense and balance the budget in 1955.~~

Eliabeth Bentley, the former Communist spy courier, [redacted], told a Senate committee that she passed orders from Moscow to two former Treasury officials in 1943 and 44. She said Nathan Gregory Silverman and Ludwig Ullman tried to help Russia get American plates to print [redacted] more money for occupied Germany. Both men refused to confirm or deny the charge.

Here in New York, a supreme court judge has ruled invalid Mayor Impellitteri's petitions to have his name placed on the November ballot for re-election. This means that the mayor, who was defeated in the recent Democratic primary, is out of the race.

The present Democratic candidate, Robert Wagner, was told today by the state parole board that despite Wagner's charge, there is no record of any highly-placed Republican interceding with the board on behalf of IMPRISONED Labor Boss Joey Faye. Wagner has refused to name the person he describes as being "prominent" in the national administration.

And across the river in New Jersey, Jersey City's former Democratic mayor Frank Hague Eggers announces his support of the republican candidate for governor..Paul L. Troast. Eggers, a nehpew of former mayor Hague, says he is deserting his party, because the democratic nominee is "bossed" by the current mayor of Jersey City, John Kenny. ALSO A DEMOCRAT Kenny had defeated Eggers.

Edward R. Murrow: October 21, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

The United Nations has decided to postpone discussion of the Trieste issue until November 2nd. The British and ourselves, who made the original decision to turn the city of Trieste over to the Italians, are obviously hoping that a cooling off period will give them a chance to figure out what to do next. It's a case where the Italians are shouting "Forward", and the Yugoslavs shouting "Back". Alex Kendrick cables me from Belgrade, that things have cooled down a little there. For the first time in a week three people actually went into the American Reading Room in Belgrade, to read the news bulletins, and were able to leave without being beaten up. The windows of the place were smashed about a week ago. The citizens of Belgrade are again lining up to look at American movies, which had been doing poor business for the last week.

But Kendrick concludes that this quiet isn't so much the calm after the storm, as the dead center of the storm - a deceptive and temporary lull, before the tempest hits again. New signs were plastered on walls all over Belgrade, reading: "We will give up our lives, but we won't give up Trieste" - other signs reading: "No decisions without Yugoslavia."

The real question is, who makes the next move. Nobody seems willing to admit that it's his turn. Technically it's up to us and the British to answer the Yugoslav note requesting a conference on Trieste. But the Italians have already said they won't attend any conference until after they have actually occupied Zone A. The Yugoslavs won't attend a conference which is called merely to confirm the Anglo-American decision. It appears that the Yugoslavs aren't objecting so much to the decision as the manner in which it was made. They insist they were not consulted. A Yugoslav Foreign Office official told Kendrick today"It was a dictate, like the Russians used to give us." Kendrick replied: "You don't really think we're as bad as the Russians, do you?" And the official replied, grimly and without smiling: "That's just what the Russians used to ask us about you Americans."

It seems to this reporter that yesterday's speeches by Secretary of State Dulles and Mr. Eden are a fine example of how not to deal with a small power. Eden said he didn't have any hope of inducing either side to accept the solution by negotiation. Mr. Dulles denied that we sought to impose a decision, and then said: "We concluded to relinquish possession of Zone A to Italy." The Yugoslavs think they should have been included in the "We" that made the decision. They insist upon making this Trieste arrangement a "contract" instead of an Anglo-American "order of the day." There are also sound domestic political reasons for Tito's stand on this issue. The Yugoslavs are Serbs, Croats, Slovenes and Bosnians. The Croats and Slovenes are separated from the rest of Yugoslavia, by religion, culture, tradition and alphabet. They have always been highly independent toward Belgrade, the capital. The Anglo-American decision means that some Slovenes would be under Italian rule. The Slovenes don't like this. And Tito's stand on Trieste has won him support from ~~some~~ Slovene and Croatian elements which he never had before. For the first time in decades the Croatian capital of Zagreb is one hundred percent behind Belgrade. Tito can now not afford to accept a Trieste solution which the Slovenes would dislike.

The search is now on for some face-saving formula, and there are a lot of faces to be saved - ours, the British, the Italians and the Yugoslavs. Maybe it can be done. Maybe the whole area can be demilitarized, with neither the Italians nor the Yugoslavs having troops there. Maybe Trieste could be settled as part of a larger deal in which Italy and Yugoslavia become part of a South European defensive alliance, something which Mr. Dulles mentioned in last night's speech.

But the real lesson to be learned -(and it is late in the day for us to be learning it)- is that small nations will not do what we tell them to do, just because we are big. We as a nation didn't behave that way when we were small. Our psychological warriors promised Trieste to Italy in 1948, because they thought it would help prevent Italy from voting Communist. Probably it did. Later, Tito broke with the Cominform; we began to supply him with arms and economic aid; and the British and ourselves apparently thought we could decide between us, what to do about Trieste. We have decided; but it hasn't come off. Apparently we got ourselves into this mess as a result of forgetting a lesson of history. Neither British nor Americans are prepared to die for Trieste, but some Yugoslavs and Italians are. And so long as that is true, we cannot safely or wisely think, that we can settle the fate of Trieste without the concurrence of the two powers principally concerned.

The problem of Trieste does not lend itself to any quick or easy solution. For here, as in other parts of the world, there is a conflict of interests. And as John Bunyan and Robert Browning once said:"Interest will make a man do that which otherwise he would not do...he will seek his own good at the whole world's cost." (IN THIS SITUATION) we would do well to follow advice by the Roman Horace:"Preserve always an even mind in adverse circumstances."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President said today that he will not do any partisan campaigning to help elect Republicans to Congress next year. He told reporters: he does not intend to make the presidency an agent to be used in partisan elections. He considers himself president of all the people. He is confident that if his Administration develops a program to benefit all the people then his party will command the votes of a majority of the people. The President also said at a White House news conference that he has full confidence in Secretary of Agriculture Benson. He said Benson is dedicated to America striving hard to bring all elements of the agricultural economy into balance. Mr. Eisenhower said with some anger that it is "his" responsibility to say who should be his principal advisers. And as for the farmers the President finds them to be taking things more in stride than many politicians.

Secretary Benson spoke along similar lines when he told a Chicago audience that some politicians are more "panicky" over the farm situation than farmers. Benson said "We are not interested in pleasing or replying to rabble rousers and demagogues."

At the White House news conference the President said that while the cost of living has continued to go up it is levelling off to a considerably greater extent than in recent years. He was asked about a statement by Clarence Manion, head of his commission to study federal state relations. Manion had suggested that the government sell the Tennessee Valley Authority to private interests. But the President, who once called TVA "creeping socialism" said the Manion plan would be "a pretty drastic step." The President also told reporters he was glad one of our soldiers in Korea had changed his mind and decided to return to this country rather than stay with the Communists. Mr. Eisenhower said he sometimes wonders why more of our troops were not converted to Communism while they were prisoners. He had this thought in view of what he called the meager education we sometimes give our citizens concerning their obligations in our form of government.

The soldier who changed his mind - 23-year-old Private Ed Dickenson of Virginia told reporters in Korea: he decided to come home because he has had enough of Communism. He made the decision a long time ago. He said: "Communism is not my belief. I have other beliefs" but he did not explain them. Dickenson, who had been a prisoner for almost three years said it is "more than likely" that some others of the 22 Americans who have chosen Communism may change their mind. The soldier was not "coaxed" to change his mind - we haven't started "explanations" to any of the 22 Americans so far. And in the Cumberland mountains, Mr. & Mrs. Van Burean Dickenson, the Private's parents, asked reporters to get word to him that "nobody hereabouts thinks hard of him for what he done. No hard feelings on our part."

At the United Nations today, Israel denied an American charge that the Israeli government is diverting Jordan River water from Syria. Secretary of State Dulles said yesterday that because of this we would withhold economic aid from Israel. The Israeli government says any suggestion that it is "defying the United Nations would not be legally or factually accurate."

In Iran, Premier Zehedi declared martial law in eight oil centers to prevent Communist sabotage.

And in London the Churchill government has demanded a vote of confidence for its decision to suspend the Constitution of British Guiana and rush troops there - because of the threat of a Communist coup.

In Stockholm, the chairman of the Nobel Peace Prize committee has told a reporter that former President Truman is a leading candidate for this year's prize.

In Washington Elizabeth Bentley, the former Communist spy courier, told a Senate committee that she passed orders from Moscow to two former Treasury officials in 1943 and 44. She said Nathan Gregory Silverman and Ludwig Ullman tried to help Russia get American plates to print more money for occupied Germany. Both men refused to confirm or deny the charge.

Here in New York, a supreme Court judge has ruled invalid Mayor Impelliteri's petitions to have his name placed on the November ballot for re-election. This means that the mayor who was defeated in the recent Democratic primary is out of the race.

The present Democratic candidate, Robert Wagner, was told today by the state parole board that despite Wagner's charge there is no record of any highly-placed Republican interceding with the board on behalf of imprisoned Labor Boss Joey Faye. Wagner has refused to name the person he describes as being "prominent in the national administration."

And across the river in New Jersey, Jersey City's former Democratic mayor Frank Hague Eggers announces his support of the republican candidate for governor - Paul L. Troast. Eggers, a nephew of former Mayor Hague, says he is deserting his party because the democratic nominee is "bossed" by the current mayor of Jersey City, John Kenny. Kenny also a Democrat, had defeated Eggers.

The United Nations has decided to postpone discussion of t e Trieste issue until November 2nd. The British and ourselves who made the original decision to turn the city of Trieste over to the Italians are obviously hoping that a cooling off period will give them a chance to figure out what to do next. It's a case where the Italians are shouting "Forward," and the Yugoslavs shouting "Back." Alex Kendrick cables me from Belgrade that things have cooled down a little there. For the first time in a week three people actually went into the American Reading Room in Belgrade, to read the news bulletins and were able to leave without being beaten up. The windows of the place were smashed about a week ago. The citizens of Belgrade are again lining up to look at American movies, which had been doing poor business for the last week.

But Kendrick concludes that this quiet isn't so much the calm after the storm as the dead center of the storm - a deceptive and temporary lull before the tempest hits again. New signs were plastered on walls all over Belgrade, reading: "We will give up our lives, but we won't give up Trieste"-other signs reading: "No decisions without Yugoslavia."

The real question is who makes the next move. Nobody seems willing to admit that it's his turn. Technically it's up to us and the British to answer the Yugoslav note requesting a conference on Trieste. But the Italians have already said they won't attend any conference until after they have actually occupied Zone A. The Yugoslavs won't attend a conference which is called merely to confirm the Anglo-American decision. It appears that the Yugoslavs aren't objecting so much to the decision as the manner in which it was made. They insist they were not consulted. A Yugoslav Foreign Office official told Kendrick today "It was a dictate, like the Russians used to give us." Kendrick replied: "You don't really think we're as bad as the Russiand, do you?" And the official replied, grimly and without smiling: "That's just what the Russians used to ask us about you Americans."

It seems to this reporter that yesterday's speeches by Secretary of State Dulles and Mr. Eden are a fine example of how not to deal with a small power. Eden said he didn't have any hope of inducing either side to accept the solution by negotiation. Mr. Dulles denied that we sought to impose a decision, and then said: "We concluded to relinquish possession of Zone A to Italy." The Yugoslavs think they should have been included in the "We" that made the decision. They insist upon making this Trieste arrangement a "contract" instead of an Anglo-American "order of the day." There are also sound domestic political reasons for Tito's stand on this issue. The Yugoslavs are Serbs, Croats,,Slovenes and Bosnians. The Croats and Slovenes are separated from the rest of Yugoslavia, by religion, culture, tradition and alphabet. They have always been highly independent toward Belgrade, the capital. The Anglo-American decision means that some Slovenes would be under Italian rule. The Slovenes don't like this. And Tito's stand on Trieste has won him support from Slovene and Croatian elements which he never had before. For the first time in decades the Croatian capital of Zagreb is one hundred percent behind Belgrade. Tito can now not afford to accept a Trieste solution which the Slovenes would dislike.

The search is now on for some face-saving formula, and there are a lot of faces to be saved - ours, the British, the Italians and the Yugoslavs. Maybe it can be done. Maybe the whole area can be demilitarized, with neither the Italians nor the Yugoslavs having troops there. Maybe Trieste could be settled as part of a larger deal in which Italy and Yugoslavia become part of a South European defensive alliance, something which Mr. Dulles mentioned in last night's speech.

But the real lesson to be learned - and it is late in the day for us to be learning it - is that small nations will not do what we tell them to do, just because we are big. We as a nation didn't behave that way when we were small. Our psychological warriors promised Trieste to Italy in 1048, because they thought it would help prevent Italy from voting Communist. Probably it did. Later, Tito broke with the Cominform; we began to supply him with arms and economic aid; and the British and ourselves apparently thought we could decide between us what to do about Trieste. We have decided; but it hasn't come off. Apparently we got ourselves into this mess as a result of forgetting a lesson history. Neither British nor Americans are prepared to die for Trieste, but some Yugoslavs and Italians are. And so long as that is true we cannot safely or wisely think that we can settle the fate of Trieste without the concurrence of the two powers principally concerned.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

MURROW: The problem of Trieste does not lend itself to any quick or easy solution. For here, as in other parts of the world, there is a conflict of interests. And as John Bunyan and Robert Browning once said: "Interest will make a man do that which otherwise he would not do - he will seek hiw own good at the whole world's cost." In this situation, we would dowell to follow advice by the Roman Horace: "Preserve always an even mind in adverse circumstances."

Good Night and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President said today that he will not do any partisan campaigning to help elect Republicans to Congress next year. He told reporters: he does not intend to make the presidency an agent to be used in partisan elections. He considers himself president of all the people. He is confident that if his Administration develops a program to benefit all the people then his party will command the votes of a majority of the people. The President also said at a White House news conference that he has full confidence in Secretary of Agriculture Benson. He said Benson is dedicated to America striving hard to bring all elements of the agricultural economy into balance. Mr. Eisenhower said with some anger that it is "his" responsibility to say who should be his principal advisers. And as for the farmers the President finds them to be taking things more in stride than many politicians.

Secretary Benson spoke along similar lines when he told a Chicago audience that some politicians are more "panicky" over the far situation than farmers. Benson said "We are not interested in pleasing or replying to rabble rousers and demagogues."

At the White House news conference the President said that while the cost of living has continued to go up it is levelling off to a considerably greater extent than in recent years. He was asked about a statement by Clarence Manion, head of his commission to study federal state relations. Manion had suggested that the government sell the Tennessee Valley Authority to private interests. But the President, who once called TVR "creeping socialism" said the Manion plan would be "a pretty drastic step." The President also told reporters he was glad one of our soldiers in Korea had changed his mind and decided to return to this country rather than stay with the Communists. Mr. Eisenhower said he sometimes wonders why more of our troops were not converted to Communism while they were prisoners. He had this thought in view of what he called the meager education we sometimes give our citizens concerning their obligations in our form of government.

The soldier who changed his mind - 23-year-old Private Ed Dickenson of Virginia told reporters in Korea: he decided to come home because he has had enough of Communism. He made the decision a long time ago. He said: "Communism is not my belief. I have other beliefs" but he did not explain them. Dickenson, who had been a prisoner for almost three years said it is "more than likely" that some others of the 22 Americans who have chosen Communism may change their mind. The soldier was not "coaxed" to change his mind - we haven't started "explanations" to any of the 22 Americans so far. And in the Cumberland mountains, Mr. & Mrs. Van Burean Dickenson, the Private's parents, asked reporters to get word to him that "nobody hereabouts thinks hard of him for what he done. No hard feelings on our part."

At the United Nations today, Israel denied an American charge that the Israeli government is diverting Jordan River water from Syria. Secretary of State Dulles said yesterday that because of this we would withhold economic aid from Israel. The Israeli government says any suggestion that it is "defying the United Nations would not be legally or factually accurate."

In Iran, Premier Zehedi declared martial law in eight oil centers to prevent Communist sabotage.

And in London the Churchill government has demanded a vote of confidence for its decision to suspend the Constitution of British Guiana and rush troops there - because of the threat of a Communist coup.

In Stockholm, the chairman of the Nobel Peace Prize committee has told a reporter that former President Truman is a leading candidate for this year's prize.

In Washington Elizabeth Bentley, the former Communist spy courier, told a Senate committee that she passed orders from Moscow to two former Treasury officials in 1943 and 44. She said Nathan Gregory Silverman and Ludwig Ullman tried to help Russia get American plates to print more money for occupied Germany. Both men refused to confirm or deny the charge.

Here in New York, a supreme Court judge has ruled invalid Mayor Impelliteri's petitions to have his name placed on the November ballot for re-election. This means that the mayor who was defeated in the recent Democratic primary is out of the race.

The present Democratic candidate, Robert Wagner, was told today by the state parole board that despite Wagner's charge there is no record of any highly-placed Republican interceding with the board on behalf of imprisoned Labor Boss Joey Faye. Wagner has refused to name the person he describes as being "prominent in the national administration."

And across the river in New Jersey, Jersey City's former Democratic mayor Frank Hague Eggers announces his support of the republican candidate for governor - Paul L. Troast. Eggers, a nephew of former Mayor Hague, says he is deserting his party because the democratic nominee is "bossed" by the current mayor of Jersey City, John Kenny. Kenny also a Democrat, had defeated Eggers.

The United Nations has decided to postpone discussion of the Trieste issue until November 2nd. The British and ourselves who made the original decision to turn the city of Trieste over to the Italians are obviously hoping that a cooling off period will give them a chance to figure out what to do next. It's a case where the Italians are shouting "Forward," and the Yugoslavs shouting "Back." Alex Kendrick cables me from Belgrade that things have cooled down a little there. For the first time in a week three people actually went into the American Reading Room in Belgrade, to read the news bulletins and were able to leave without being beaten up. The windows of the place were smashed about a week ago. The citizens of Belgrade are again lining up to look at American movies, which had been doing poor business for the last week.

But Kendrick concludes that this quiet isn't so much the calm after the storm as the dead center of the storm - a deceptive and temporary lull before the tempest hits again. New signs were plastered on walls all over Belgrade, reading: "We will give up our lives, but we won't give up Trieste" - other signs reading: "No decisions without Yugoslavia."

The real question is who makes the next move. Nobody seems willing to admit that it's his turn. Technically it's up to us and the British to answer the Yugoslav note requesting a conference on Trieste. But the Italians have already said they won't attend any conference until after they have actually occupied Zone A. The Yugoslavs won't attend a conference which is called merely to confirm the Anglo-American decision. It appears that the Yugoslavs aren't objecting so much to the decision as the manner in which it was made. They insist they were not consulted. A Yugoslav Foreign Office official told Kendrick today "It was a dictate, like the Russians used to give us." Kendrick replied: "You don't really think we're as bad as the Russians, do you?" And the official replied, grimly and without smiling: "That's just what the Russians used to ask us about you Americans."

It seems to this reporter that yesterday's speeches by Secretary of State Dulles and Mr. Eden are a fine example of how not to deal with a small power. Eden said he didn't have any hope of inducing either side to accept the solution by negotiation. Mr. Dulles denied that we sought to impose a decision, and then said: "We concluded to relinquish posession of Zone A to Italy." The Yugoslavs think they should have been included in the "We" that made the decision. They insist upon making this Trieste arrangement a "contract" instead of an Anglo-American "order of the day." There are also sound domestic political reasons for Tito's stand on this issue. The Yugoslavs are Serba, Croats, Slovenes and Bosnians. The Croats and Slovenes are separated from the rest of Yugoslavia, by religion, culture, tradition and alphabet. They have always been highly independent toward Belgrade, the capital. The Anglo-American decision means that some Slovenes would be under Italian rule. The Slovenes don't like this. And Tito's stand on Trieste has won him support from Slovene and Croatian elements which he never had before. For the first time in decades the Croatian capital of Zagreb is one hundred percent behind Belgrade. Tito can now not afford to accept a Trieste solution which the Slovenes would dislike.

The search is now on for some face-saving formula, and there are a lot of faces to be saved - ours, the British, the Italians and the Yugoslavs. Maybe it can be done. Maybe the whole area can be demilitarized, with neither the Italians nor the Yugoslavs having troops there. Maybe Trieste could be settled as part of a larger deal in which Italy and Yugoslavia become part of a South European defensive alliance, something which Mr. Dulles mentioned in last night's speech.

But the real lesson to be learned - and it is late in the day for us to be learning it - is that small nations will not do what we tell them to do, just because we are big. We as a nation didn't behave that way when we were small. Our psychological warriors promised Trieste to Italy in 1948, because they thought it would help prevent Italy from voting Communist. Probably it did. Later, Tito broke with the Cominform; we began to supply him with arms and economic aid; and the British and ourselves apparently thought we could decide between us what to do about Trieste. We have decided; but it hasn't come off. Apparently we got ourselves into this mess as a result of forgetting a lesson history. Neither British nor Americans are prepared to die for Trieste, but some Yugoslavs and Italians are. And so long as that is true we cannot safely or wisely think that we can settle the fate of Trieste without the concurrence of the two powers principally concerned.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

MURROW: The problem of Trieste does not lend itself to any quick of easy solution. For here, as in other parts of the world, there is a conflict of interests. And as John Bunyan and Robert Browning once said: "Interest will make a man do that which otherwise he would not do - he will seek his own good at the whole world's cost." In this situation, we would do well to follow advice by the Roman Horace: "Preserve always an even mind in adverse circumstances."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday, Oct 22 1953

This is the news:

The Atomic Energy Committee says we are going to build the world's first major atomic power plant..for peaceful uses. Thomas E. Murray of the Atomic Energy Commission says this will be our answer to the recent Soviet atomic tests. The new industrial power reactor will cost from 20 to 60 millions..take three or four years to build..will be located near one of the present Atomic energy plants in Tennessee, Ohio or Kentucky. Westinghouse will be the principal contractor for the plant — it's expected to produce enough electric energy for a city of 50-thousand.

Army Secretary Stevens says we have now shipped some of our new atomic cannons to Europe. And he expects them to "greatly enhance our defensive capabilities." Stevens says the gun can be used in darkness or any kind of weather, if necessary.

And in Germany, General MC Auliffe, the new 7th army commander, says new emphasis will be placed on atomic warfare training for our troops in Germany.

~~In California today..at Pebble Beach.. cabinet members started giving 169 of the nation's top industrial leaders a confidential report on business in this country. Some of those attending the meeting,~~

Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey told reporters in California today that the Administration can make no promises of any tax deductions next year--except for the individual income taxes and the excess profits tax. Humphrey said the federal budget cannot be balanced, even in fiscal 1955, unless there are "very substantial" cuts in national defense. He said this is due to the fact that 75 per cent of the government's expenditures are FOR [redacted] security.. military, foreign operations and atomic energy.

~~closed to the public and reporters, say that Treasury Secretary Humphrey said the Administration is trying very hard to balance the budget for fiscal 1955, and for tax relief. But Humphrey quickly adds he's going to need.~~

Republican Senator Young of North Dakota said today that the President's decision not to help campaigning congressmen next year will be a help to Republicans in the midwest. Young, who has demanded the resignation of Secretary of Agriculture Benson, said: "If the present Republican Administration has a farm policy, I do not know what it is, nor, I believe, does anyone else." # Republican Chairman Hall called on Mr. Eisenhower today and then told ~~newsmen~~ reporters he's certain the President will support Republican candidates, in some degree, next year. (I'd like to discuss the President's attitude in a few minutes.)

Mr. Eisenhower today received a petition, opposing the admission of Communist China to the United Nations. And he said again he is against admitting RED China, as long as it is engaged in acts of aggression.

There were no developments in the stalled prisoner explanations in Korea today. General Dean, the former 8th army commander, says in Washington that we should be lenient with those American prisoners who temporarily yielded to Communist indoctrination under great pressure.

The French report that they have captured a city formerly held by the enemy in Indo-China--only to find it deserted. [redacted]

And from Paris David Schoenbrun cables that the French have told [redacted] Vietnam Emperor Bao Dai that unless he accepts membership in the [redacted] French Union the French will pull their troops out of Indo-China.

Britain's House of Commons has given the Churchill cabinet a clear-cut vote of confidence for its action in suspending the constitution of British Guiana and DUSTING ITS [redacted] leftist government.

And Prime Minister Churchill, writing in Life Magazine, says Russia's cold war expansion in southeastern Europe might have been blocked if the Allies had carried out a British plan for a big [redacted] World War Two offensive in the Balkans and Italy.

In West Berlin, [redacted], a conservative, Dr. Walther Schreiber has been elected Lord Mayor, succeeding the late Ernst Reuter. All factions in the West Berlin government pledge unity on one issue;; a Common front against Communism.

[redacted] Two German-born bio-chemists today were awarded the nobel peace prize for medicine and physiology. Dr. Fritz Lipman of the Harvard Medical School and Dr. Hans Krebs of Sheffield University in England were HONORED for discoveries concerning the basic life process carried on within human cells.

Major General Bennike, the United Nations truce supervisor in Palestine, arrived in New York today and called the Arab-Isreali dispute "critical." But he does not believe it will develop into a major conflict.

The U.N's budget committee today voted to cut the dues of the United States and raise Russia's dues. Our share was cut from 35 to 33-and-a third per cent of the total cost of the U.N. Russia was raised from 12 to 14 per cent. They say they can't afford it.

David McDonald, the president of the C.I.O. steelworkers, said today that his union will seek a guaranteed annual wage next year, as "insurance against depression."

Army Secretary Slezak says the nation's ammunition program is in "better shape than ever before in our history."

Edward R. Murrow: October 22, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

What President Eisenhower said yesterday at his news conference, about keeping the presidency out of partisan politics, comes close to being a new dogma about the nature of his office. / Twice before yesterday, he had told newsmen that it would be his policy not to interfere with local elections of any kind. Yesterday he went much further. Though he admitted being deeply interested in the complexion of the Senate and House of Representatives, he did not intend, he said, to make the presidency an agency to use in partisan elections. #

He went on to expound this theme. Beginning with the self-evident principle that the President is President of all the people, he said that his work should be to develop a program for the general good, and get it enacted. This then, would be an umbrella, under which the Party could operate. And this, he thought, would be the best thing he could do for his Party.

The President, in taking this stand, may enhance his popularity with those who like him for not making enemies, and not attacking the enemies he already has. # There are some who are not so sure that this always is a virtue, and in certain cases they believe it may be a mistake. But good will and good temper are endearing qualities, particularly in a national leader.

If Mr. Eisenhower manages to stay above the fighting level of party politics, he will be introducing something that hasn't been done in this country since the presidency of James Munroe. # That was in what was known as the "era of good feeling", which came with the relief that the War of 1812 was over, and at a moment when the Federalist Party had virtually ceased to exist. / There is no analogy whatever with this period today. The Democratic Party is very much alive. In fact many Republicans feel, that the Democrats are uncomfortably close in challenging their control of the House in the next election. # And if the two bye-elections to be held next month, in California and New Jersey, should go as did the one last week in Wisconsin, the absolute majority of the Republicans in the House would be down next month to a single vote. # Just a word more about the bye-elections. In New Jersey, a successor is being chosen for Representative Clifford Case, who resigned to become President of the Fund for the Republic. # In the last four elections, this district gave the Republicans an average majority of twenty-three thousand. A change to a Democrat here would be a surprise. # But in California, two stalwart and popular Republicans of similar stature, are competing for the vacancy created when Representative

Norris Poulson was elected Mayor of Los Angeles. There are two Democratic candidates, too, but only one of them is expected to attract many votes. Both Republicans, however, are influential and may split the Republican and Independent vote, and the Democrat could win. If a Republican wins in New Jersey and a Democrat in California, the Republican majority in the House would be only three.

That could well have a bearing on what President Eisenhower may find himself doing. For he will be under terrific pressure to behave like the leader of the Party, even though he also is President of all the people. His Party followers will be able to justify their pressure by quoting history. For the men who have been the most efficient presidents have been the most efficient Party leaders. That goes for Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, Grover Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt. That is not to say that every time they did something as leaders of the Party it worked. Woodrow Wilson probably helped defeat his Party in 1918 in appealing for the election of a Democratic Congress.

President Eisenhower spoke yesterday about people resenting the intrusion of a president in local affairs, and he said he too would resent it. F.D.R.'s celebrated attempt to purge Senator Tidings certainly backfired. But the ~~notice~~ approval a popular national leader has given to a local candidate has helped much more often than it has hurt. President Eisenhower must have thought so on his recent visit to New York, when he wished Republican Candidate Harold Riegelman well in his race for Mayor.

In the last election the President won by a 6,600,000 majority, but the total vote for Republican candidates for Congress was 262,000 less than for Democratic candidates. And many Republicans had to thank Mr. Eisenhower's popularity for ~~their~~ getting as many votes as they did.

The "umbrella" which Mr. Eisenhower now offers as a substitute for himself as a vote-getter somehow is not convincing. # Republicans already are insisting on the leader of the Party leading. # The President has reversed himself under pressure before. In 1949 he said he was not in politics and would not be in politics. In 1952 he said he would not give up his NATO post to take part in a campaign for the nomination. But he was back in the United States ~~XXX~~ by May, left the Army June 2nd, and made his Abilene speech on June 4th. In Politics Few decisions are Final of his administration. That is, he will be showing the umbrella. But he also will be leading the Party. The President, said Mr. Hall, must have a Republican Congress to carry out his program. No one will doubt he said that to the President, too.

Republican Chairman Leonard Hall after calling on the President today, promised newsmen that Mr. Eisenhower would make ~~the~~ television appearances in the Congressional campaign next year, and talk about the accomplishments

It would seem that the President is determined not to get involved in local partisan politics...(despite the fact that his influence at election time could be considerable). Perhaps, Mr. Eisenhower feels as Sir Leslie Stephen did a half century ago when he said:"The only way in which one human being can properly attempt to influence another is encouraging him to think for himself instead of endeavoring to instil ready-made opinions into his head."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Atomic Energy Committee says we are going to build the world's first major atomic power plant for peaceful uses. Thomas E. Murray of the Atomic Energy Commission says this will be our answer to the recent Soviet atomic tests. The new industrial power reactor will cost from 20 to 60 millions - take three or four years to build - will be located near one of the present Atomic energy plants in Tennessee, Ohio or Kentucky. Westinghouse will be the principal contractor for the plant - it's expected to produce enough electric energy for a city of 50-thousand.

Army Secretary Stevens says we have now shipped some of our new atomic cannons to Europe. And he expects them to "greatly enhance our defensive capabilities." Stevens says the gun can be used in darkness or any kind of weather, if necessary.

And in Germany, General McAuliffe, the new 7th army commander, says new emphasis will be placed on atomic warfare training for our troops in Germany.

Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey told reporters in California today that the Administration can make no promises of any tax deductions next year - except for the individual income taxes and the excess profits tax. Humphrey said the federal budget cannot be balanced, even in fiscal 1955, unless there are "very substantial" cuts in national defense. He said this is due to the fact that 75 per cent of the government's expenditures are for security - military foreign operations and atomic energy.

Republican Senator Young of North Dakota said today that the President's decision not to help campaigning congressmen next year will be a help to Republicans in the midwest. Young, who has demanded the resignation of Secretary of Agriculture Benson, said: "If the present Republican Administration has a farm policy, I do not know what it is, nor, I believe, does anyone else." Republican Chairman Hall called on Mr. Eisenhower today and then told reporters he's certain the President will support Republican candidates in some degree next year. I'd like to discuss the President's attitude in a few minutes.

Mr. Eisenhower today received a petition opposing the admission of Communist China to the United Nations. And he said again he is against admitting Red China as long as it is engaged in acts of agression.

There were no developments in the stalled prisoner explanations in Korea today. General Dean, the former 8th army commander, says in Washington that we should be lenient with those American prisoners who temporarily yielded to Communist indoctrination under great pressure.

The French report that they have captured a city formerly held by the enemy in Indo-China - only to find it deserted. And from Paris David Schoenbrun cables that the French have told Vietnam Emperor Bao Dai that unless he accepts membership in the French Union the French will pull their troops out of Indo China.

Britain's House of Commons has given the Churchill cabinet a clear-cut vote of confidence for its action in suspending the constitution of British Guiana and ousting its leftist government.

And Prime Minister Churchill, writing in Life Magazine, says Russia's cold war expansion in southeastern Europe might have been blocked if the Allies had carried out a British plan for a big World War Two offensive in the Balkans and Italy.

In West Berlin, a conservative, Dr. Walther Schreiber has been elected Lord Mayor, succeeding the late Ernst Reuter. All factions in the West Berlin government pledge unity on one issue; a common front against Communism.

Two German-born bio-chemists today were awarded the nobel peace prize for medicine and physiology. Dr. Fritz Lipman of the Harvard Medical School and Dr. Hans Krebs of Sheffield University in England were honored for discoveries concerning the basic life process carried on within human cells.

Major General Bennike, the United Nations truce supervisor in Palestine, arrived in New York today and called the Arab-Israeli dispute "critical." But he does not believe it will develop into a major conflict.

The U.N.'s budget committee today voted to cut the dues of the United States and raise Russia's dues. Our share was cut from 35 to 33 and a third percent of the total cost of the U.N. Russia was raised from 12 to 14 percent. They say they can't afford it.

David McDonald, the president of the CIO steelworkers said today that his union will seek a guaranteed annual wage next year as "insurance against depression." Under Secretary of Army Slezak says the nation's ammunition program is in "better shape than ever before in our history."

What President Eisenhower said yesterday at his news conference about keeping the presidency out of partisan politics comes close to being a new dogma about the nature of his office. Twice before yesterday he had told newsmen that it would be his policy not to interfere with local elections of any kind. Yesterday he went much further. Though he admitted being deeply interested in the complexion of the Senate and House of Representatives, he did not intend, he said, to make the presidency an agency to use in partisan elections.

He went on to expound this theme. Beginning with the self-evident principle that the President is President of all the people, he said that his work should be to develop a program for the general good and get it enacted. This then would be an umbrella under which the Party could operate. And this, he thought, would be the best thing he could do for his Party.

The President, in taking this stand, may enhance his popularity with those who like him for not making enemies and not attacking the enemies he already has. There are some who are not so sure that this always is a virtue, and in certain cases they believe it may be a mistake. But good will and good temper are endearing qualities, particularly in a national leader.

If Mr. Eisenhower manages to stay above the fighting level of party politics, he will be introducing something that hasn't been done in this country since the presidency of James Monroe. That was in what was known as the "era of good feeling," which came with the relief that the War of 1812 was over and at a moment when the Federalist Party had virtually ceased to exist. There is no analogy whatever with this period today. The Democratic Party is very much alive. In fact many Republicans feel that the Democrats are uncomfortably close in challenging their control of the House in the next election. And if the two bye-elections to be held next month in California and New Jersey should go as did the one last week in Wisconsin, the absolute majority of the Republicans in the House would be down next month to a single vote. Just a word more about the bye-elections. In New Jersey a successor is being chosen for Representative Clifford Case, who resigned to become President of the Fund for the Republic. In the last four elections this district gave the Republicans an average majority of twenty-three thousand. A change to a Democrat here would be a surprise. But in California, two stalwart and popular Republicans of similar stature are competing for the vacancy created when Representative Norris Poulson was elected Mayor Los Angeles. There are two Democratic candidates, too, but only one of them is expected to attract many votes. Both Republicans, however, are influential and may split the Republican and Independent vote, and the Democrat could win. If a Republican wins in New Jersey and a Democrat in California, the Republican majority in the House would be only three.

That could well have a bearing on what President Eisenhower may find himself doing. For he will be under terrific pressure to behave like the leader of the Party, even though he also is President of all the people. His Party followers will be able to justify their pressure by quoting history. For the men who have been the most efficient presidents have been the most efficient Party leaders. That goes for Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, Grover Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt. That is not to say that every time they did something as leaders of the Party it worked. Woodrow Wilson probably helped defeat his Party in 1918 in appealing for the election of a Democratic Congress.

President Eisenhower spoke yesterday about people resenting the intrusion of a president in local affairs, and he said he too would resent it. FDR's celebrated attempt to purge Senator Tidings certainly backfired. But the approval a popular national leader has given to a local candidate has helped much more often than it has hurt. President Eisenhower must have thought so on his recent visit to New York, when he wished Republican Candidate Harold Riegelman well in his race for Mayor.

In the last election the President won by a 6,600,000 majority, but the total vote for Republican candidates for Congress was 262,000 less than for Democratic candidates. And many Republicans had to thank Mr. Eisenhower's popularity for getting as many votes as they did.

The "umbrella" which Mr. Eisenhower now offers as a substitute for himself as a vote-getter somehow is not convincing. Republicans already are insisting on the leader of the Party leading. The President has reversed himself under pressure before. In 1949 he said he would not give up his NATO post to take part in a campaign for the nomination. But he was back in the United States by May, left the Army June 2nd, and made his abilene speech on June 4th. In politics few decisions are final.

Republican Chairman Leonard Hall after calling on the President today promised newsmen that Mr. Eisenhower would make television appearances in the Congressional campaign next year, and talk about the accomplishments of his administration. That is, he will be showing the umbrella. But he also will be leading the Party. The President, said Mr. Hall, must have a Republican Congress to carry out his program. No one will doubt he said that to the President, too.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that the President is determined not to get involved in local partisan politics despite the fact that his influence at election time could be considerable. Perhaps, Mr. Eisenhower feels as Sir Leslie Stephen did a half century ago when he said: "The only way in which one human being can properly attempt to influence another is encouraging him to think for himself instead of endeavoring to instil ready-made opinions into his head."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday October 23, 1953

This is the news:

The White House says fourteen hundred and fifty six federal workers have been dismissed, or resigned, for security reasons. This took place in the first four months. (from June through September.) of the new Administration's security program. White House secretary Haggerty says, only five of these persons had been appointed by the Eisenhower Administration.. the others were holdovers from previous administrations. In all, 863 persons were dismissed and 593 resigned. Hagerty says these were all security cases.... (in addition to 145-thousand federal employes who have been dismissed for economy reasons.) Hagerty also says that the 1,456 who have left so far, represent the results of only a quarter of the investigating the government plans to do of its employes.

Defense Secretary Wilson says the government has been "too soft" with security risks on the federal payroll. He says "there will be no more of that." Wilson was asked about the case of Lt. Milo Radulovich, an air force reserve officer, who may be expelled from the service, because the government considers his father and sister security risks. Wilson said "It's possible for individuals to get bad breaks. But the nation's interests come first. A decision on the Rodulavitch Case is expected tomorrow

And Senator Mc Carthy says 20 civilian employes at the signal corps' Fort Monmouth laboratories, have been suspended, as a result of Senate and army investigations of espionage.

Here in New York today, Robert G. Thompson, one of the nation's top Communist leaders, was slugged with a lead pipe, in the Federal House of Detention. Thompson, who has been found guilty of advocating the overthrow of the government by violence, is being held as a fugitive from a prison term on that charge. He was attacked by another prisoner.. a Yugoslav awaiting deportation tonight. There is no explanation for the attack. A prison official says there was no evidence of animosity between the two men. Thompson's "head was split open" and it reported he may require major surgery. The attorney general and the F.B.I. are investigating.

In Los Angeles, Gordon Dean, the former chairman of the atomic energy commission, said today that we should warn Moscow that at the next sign of Soviet aggression we will "destroy her vitals" with atomic bombs. Deans concedes that making a display of force may upset some people, who--he says "will not face a fact if it diminishes a hope."

At Groton, Connecticut, the Navy today permitted reporters to make a limited inspection of its atomic submarine, the Nautilus. The 29-million dollar sub is now more than half completed. Captain Robert Moore, the supervisor of shipbuilding, says it will be capable of staying under water "many, many times longer than any previous submarine."

I'd like to discuss the latest development in our atomic energy program in a few minutes.

Workers at two big North American Aviation Company plants went on strike today, halting production on the new F 100 super jet...the F 86 sabrejet and other planes. Some 32-thousand men struck at Los Angeles and Columbus, Ohio. They are demanding a 23 cents an hour pay increase and have turned down offers of a four per cent general increase.

In Washington, Secretary of Agriculture Benson today urged the National Farmers Union to call off a cattleman's (CARAVAN) due to reach Washington Sunday night. Union president James G. Patton says the cattlemen want to talk to Benson and the President. Benson says such talks cannot be conducted with a large number of people.

Two Republican senators..Mundt of South Dakota and Payne of Maine.. say they expect Congress to extend rigid price supports for basic farm crops next year.

[redacted]

The Italian ambassador conferred with Secretary of State Dulles for 30 minutes today and then told reporters he had been assured that we and the British would not "go back" on the decision to turn over Zone A in Trieste to Italy.

[redacted]

In Italy itself more than 89 persons are known dead and 20 missing in flash floods which swept the toe of the Italian boot.

In London today, 16-hundred troops started moving into the city to break up a wildcat transport strike. The troops are scheduled to start distributing gasoline tomorrow unless the strike is ended. The Labor Party is back of the government's decision to use the troops to end the walkout that has almost crippled London.

In Berlin, the Communists admit that anti-Communists have beaten a Communist official to death in the Soviet zone..near Leipzig.

In Korea tonight the neutral nations repatriation commission meets again and has promised to issue a statement. Presumably it will explain the conflicting view on forcing Chinese and North Korean prisoners to listen to enemy "explanations" on why they should return home. George V. Allen, our ambassador to India, was in Korea today. He conferred with the Indian head of the neutral commission and with President Syngman Rhee.

Edward R. Murrow: October 23, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

A remarkable statement was made by Thomas E. Murray of the Atomic Energy Commission in announcing yesterday, the Commission's decision to build a great atomic reactor plant for peaceful purposes. / It will not be of the type that produces both heat and plutonium fuel. / It will be devoted to power. The remarkable statement was, that if the Soviet Union had revealed that it already was successfully operating such a plant, it would be more dangerous to this country, than their announcement that they have the hydrogen bomb.

This sounds like saying, that a peacetime use of atomic energy in the Soviet Union, would be more dangerous to us, than the most frightful weapon ever imagined. / And that is precisely what Mr. Murray meant. / For he was proclaiming more than the building of a reactor plant. / He was telling this country that it must enter, and win, a race in the peaceful use of atomic power, as well as win the race in atomic weapons. // If the Soviet Union were ahead of us in the peaceful use of atomic energy, he said, it would put off the end of Soviet tyranny. / For the country that can promise most atomic power to other countries, will be the one to get the most of the world's uranium supply, the bulk of which, does not lie either in this country or the Soviet Union. Use of this uranium is essential in both the power and weapon races, and if we do not get what we need we could lose the power race and the weapon race as well. So our survival is involved. To win the power race, this country, said Mr. Murray, must have as much determination as it has to stay ahead in the atomic weapon race.

This is the first time the country has heard of a "power race," and a great many questions now must be explored. It would be unsafe to assume that the Soviet Union is not able scientifically and technically to do what we can do, Mr. Murray said. We must also take into account that it may be able to do even more than we can do economically.

Since the Soviet Union's getting ahead of us in the power race would be more dangerous to us than the hydrogen bomb, then our getting ahead must be equally dangerous to the Soviet Union. Presumably the men in the Kremlin will react by pushing ahead with nuclear power plants of their own. They may be doing so already. When they first proclaimed that they had the atomic bomb they said they were going to use atomic energy for peaceful purposes. That may have been simply propaganda, but we don't know.

Nor do we know how much this power race is to cost. Mr. Murray did not go into the figures for the pilot plant, beyond saying it would be tens of millions of dollars.

If the Soviet Union goes in for a power race it may be able to spend more than this country. A totalitarian country, whose central government budgets for all industry and agriculture, can divert investment and production from one field to another, more easily than a nation of free enterprise. # Suppose their atomic experts told the men in the Kremlin, that the power race might decide the fate of the country - [and they presumably told them that about the atomic weapons race] - the dictators might decide to assign a given percentage of the gross national product to win it. Suppose the ~~XXXXXXXX~~ figure were ten percent. That would mean involving more than seven or eight billion dollars a year. We could not assign anything like ten percent of our gross national product - for it would be between thirty and forty billions a year. We should have trouble raising seven or eight billions to match the Russians, if they could divert that much.

If we are, as Mr. Murray says, entering a race that affects our survival, we should know what we are getting into. That is not said to suggest that we should stay out of the race. Presumably we cannot. It is said to point out, that Mr. Murray only unlocked the door of a vital national subject, but did not fling it open.

Of this we may be sure: a new phase of the atomic era is beginning. It also is clear that the race for power - military and industrial - with the Soviet Union goes further than getting a greater stockpile of bombs or weapons of greater destructiveness. The range of the competition is unlimited.

~~One can feel relief that~~ the new AEC plant will be making electric power and not material for atomic weapons. It is a blessing that this country is embarked on learning how to make electricity with atomic fuel more cheaply than with coal. That is a promise that in time the atomic era can become one of endless possibilities for increasing the wealth of the human family. But until atomic energy is under international control, so that no one can use it destructively, the hope of such developments must remain obscure.

The Bulletin of Atomic Scientists recently pointed to the possibility that the very act of taking private enterprise in on the development of atomic power for peaceful purposes may make it harder for this country to accept international control of atomic energy. That, too, is a possibility that needs careful consideration. For the only known alternative to effective international control is a perpetual insecurity such as mankind has never experienced before.

Atomic Energy, like other scientific advancements, can be used for good or evil. Power alone is not always dangerous, but irresponsible use of it is. At the turn of the century, Elbert Hubbard had some wise words on this subject when he said:"Responsibilities gravitate to the person who can shoulder them and power flows to the man who knows how."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday, October 26, 1953.

This is the news:

The United States charged today that the Russians took part in the questioning and torture of American soldiers in Korea. We told the United Nations that the Russians actually directed Chinese and North Korean attempts to make American airmen confess that they had engaged in germ warfare. Some of this questioning and the attendant torturing took place after the armistice was signed. We have given the U.N. affidavits from some of our men showing that they were "reduced to the level of groveling animals" to force confessions. Dr. Charles Mayo of the American delegation said some men were forced to stand at attention for days..some were forced to crouch in rat-infested holes. Others were punished with kicks and slaps..poorer living conditions..lowered food rations..

Jacob Malik says "this is a lie and slander". He says Russia repudiates the charges.

Corporal Edward Dickenson, the Virginia soldier who recently returned from a Communist prison camp, said in Tokyo today that he at first refused to be repatriated, so he could gather evidence to prove that the Communists are "rotten to the core." Dickenson said he wanted to learn all he could about the Communists "to get revenge for what they did" to his buddies. He says he's going to expose everything about the Communists.

At Panmunjom today American Ambassador Dean met with the enemy to lay plans for the KOREAN political conference. We want an agreement FIRST on a date and place. The Communists--as expected--demanded that neutral nations FIRST be invited to the conference.

And the Indian chairman of the neutral repatriation commission now says that the program to return war prisoners is almost at an end. General Thimaya says: "The situation is very serious." The commission is writing a statement explaining how the trouble came from the enemy's insistence that prisoners be forced to listen to explanations as to why they should return home.

The Russians charged today that the Greeks have created a threat to peace by granting air and naval bases to American forces. Moscow says this is actually "preparing for a new war."

The British announce that they have exploded another atomic weapon in Australia.. the second such explosion this month.

And in London striking gasoline workers have voted to end their week-end walkout that almost tied up the whole city. Six thousand troops had been used to distribute the gasoline.

The Communists in East Germany say that Moscow has released Field Marshal Von Paulus, whose 365-thousand man army surrendered at Stalingrad. The Communists say He's now in East Germany after more than ten years of imprisonment.

In Washington today, Secretary of Agriculture Benson told a group of cattlemen that he has an open mind toward any program to help them. He rejected, at least temporarily, their plea for immediate and direct government price supports for the livestock industry. Benson said the government will do "everything practical and feasible to ease" the drop in prices.

He recalled that in the past the government's effort to boost hog prices had been "a dismal failure" and he spoke of a "fiasco" created by the federal potato-buying program. Benson said it would be a "terrible thing" if the government started a price-support program for cattle and then found that it wouldn't work.

In Oklahoma City, Democratic Senator Symington said Benson "wants to circumvent the will of Congress by cutting to pieces the prices on cattle through his withholding of feed." Symington says the government has sent feed to Bolivia, Pakistan and other countries but refuses to adjust the feed prices for our own farmers.

4

Harold Reigelman, the Republican candidate for mayor of New York, conferred with Secretrary of State Dulles today for 90 minutes. Then he told reporters, with Mr. Dulles' approval, that he is certain that the United States will resume economic aid to Isreal soon. He said "there has been no change in the traditional friendship of the United States for Isreal.

Here in New York today an estimated half million persons turned out to greet Major General William F. Dean. The general paid tribute to the men who fought in Korea and then called up from the crowd at City Hall an army doctor.. Captain William Shadish. The General said he met the captain on a plane coming home.. He heard other soldiers praise the doctor for saving the lives of many imprisoned Americans. Later General Dean conferred with General MacArthur.

Dr. Edward J. McCormick, the president of the American Medical Association, said today that the Veterans Administration is a threat to private enterprise. He attacked the V.A'S program for caring for patients with ailments not connected with their service.

In Washington, the F.B.I. began distributing the serial numbers of about 300-thousand dollars OF MISSING RANSON MONEY in the Greenlease kidnapping case. All the money is in ten and twenty dollar bills. The family paid a total of 600-thousand dollars to the kidnapers of six-year-old Bobby Greenlease. Only half of it was recovered when police arrested Carl Hall.

Civil Defense Administrator Val Peterson says he's going to ask Congress for about 125 million dollars next year to stockpile medical and other supplies.. and for other operations. ~~hundmann~~

Edward R. Murrow: October 26, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Slowly, and at times painfully, we are learning some of the difficulties of running a grand alliance of free nations. For example, Admiral Radford, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, told newsmen in Paris this morning that he was there to "listen and learn from our allies and top commanders about the problems of Western defense." Dave Schoenbrun cables me from Paris that in the course of the day "The Admiral had a real earful from the French Chief of Staff, from Lord Ismay, Secretary-General of NATO, and from our own Ambassador Dillon in Paris." They all told him pretty much the same story: It's imperative to convince our allies that we're standing firm on the physical, as well as the spiritual commitment, involved in European defense; and that we aren't going to withdraw our ground troops from Europe and concentrate on atomic units.

The Commander of SHAPE, General Gruenther is reported to be particularly concerned about the demoralising effect of such stories. They serve to give ammunition to the neutralist forces in Europe, who want an agreement with Russia at almost any price.

The reports from Washington of a revision in American strategy, have caused widespread concern in Europe, particularly in France. Non-communist papers in Paris are beginning to talk about Europeans having been assigned the role of mercenary foot-soldiers and cheap cannon fodder."

The fact that Admiral Radford is a flying Admiral and greatly interested in the Pacific is even being used as an argument to support the contention that our grand strategy in Europe is about to undergo a change. If we are, or are not going to alter the disposition of our forces in Europe, it would seem that a little high level reassurance or explanation might reduce the psychological and political tensions that are obviously increasing.

The Yugoslavs today said they wanted to decrease the tension in Trieste, in the hope that a conference will take place as soon as possible. Alex Kendrick cables me from Belgrade that the French are trying desperately to obtain a Five Power Conference, which would for the time being at least put the Anglo-American decision of October 8th in cold storage. This would permit some border adjustments in both zones. But Kendrick, who is an old hand at covering Yugoslav affairs, says that the whole future foreign policy of Yugoslavia is at stake. The Yugoslav Vice President published twenty-five columns in the official newspaper over the week end. Basically it's a denunciation of the Atlantic Pact.

They claim that it's being used to mask and cover up Italian aspirations. There is increasing talk in responsible quarters in Belgrade about "the resumption of normal relations with the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe." The number three man in Tito's administration has written that Western pressure has thus far prevented this highly significant change in foreign policy. He said XXX he didn't mean that Yugoslavia should favor the Soviet bloc against the West, any more than the West should be favored against the Soviet bloc. He said he meant an independent policy of equal consideration for East and West, and good relations with both. He didn't mention the word "neutrality" or "neutralism", but this was the first overt expression of such sentiments on such a high level.

Kendrick concludes that the Trieste crisis has greatly strengthened the hands of the old line communists in Yugoslavia, that is the men who think that things have changed in Russia since Stalin's death, and who do not want full commitments to the capitalistic West. It is possible that Yugoslavia may emerge with an international policy similar to that of India. That would be a precarious middle of the road between East and West, reviled by both sides and thanked by neither. If this should happen it would raise the question of continued arms aid from the United States. The Yugoslavs are now boasting that they're now making their own tanks, fighter planes and artillery ammunition. Much of this armament development was made possible by American funds, but that point is overlooked. One price we are almost certain to pay for bungling the Trieste issue will be a decrease in the strength of the Yugoslav ties to the West. That is, of course, unless everybody involved in this thing is bluffing. And Kendrick says nobody in Belgrade thinks Tito is bluffing.

Contained in that twenty-five column statement of policy that I mentioned a moment ago was this sentence: "When the Yugoslavs broke with Russia they were left in international isolation, but they didn't care, and went ahead. Now they are ready to repeat the performance if necessary." That's pretty strong talk, but the Yugoslavs have demonstrated both during the late war and in their single-handed defiance of Russia that they are a pretty strong people.

The keep the alliance of the free nations of the world intact requires both patience and understanding. And it is probably true as Jonathan Swift once said:"The strongest friendship yields to pride unless the odds be on our side." ~~We would also do well to be aware of what~~ and Sir Samuel Tuke concluded nearly 3-hundred years ago:"When competition brings us to the test, then we find friendship is self-interest."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The United States charged today that the Russians took part in the questioning and torture of American soldiers in Korea. We told the United Nations that the Russians actually directed Chinese and North Korean attempts to make American airmen confess that they had engaged in germ warfare. Some of this questioning and the attendant torturing took place after the armistice was signed. We have given the U.N. affidavits from some of our men showing that they were "reduced to the level of groveling animals" to force confessions. Dr. Chalres Mayo of the American delegation said some men were forced to stand at attention for days - some were forced to crouch in rat-infested holes. Others were punished with kicks and slaps - poorer living conditions - lowered food rations. Jacob Malik says "this is a lie and slander." He says Russia repudiates the charges.

Corporal Edward Dickenson, the Virginia soldier who recently returned from a Communist prison camp, said in Tokyo today that he at first refused to be repatriated so he could gather evidence to prove that the Communists are "rotten to the core." Dickenson said he wanted to learn all he could about the Communists "to get revenge for what they did" to his buddies. He says he's going to expose everything about the Communists.

At Panmunjom today American Ambassador Dean met with the enemy to lay plans for the Korean political conference. We want an agreement first on a date and place. The Communists - as expected - demanded that neutral nations first be invited to the conference.

And the Indian chairman of the neutral repatriation commission now says that the program to return war prisoners is almost at an end. General Thimaya says: "The situation is very serious." The commission is writing a statement explaining how the trouble came from the enemy's insistence that prisoners be forced to listen to explanations as to why they should return home.

The Russians charged today that the Greeks have created a threat to peace by granting air and naval bases to American forces. Moscow says this is actually "preparing for a new war."

The British announce that they have exploded another atomic weapon in Australia - the second such explosion this month.

And in London striking gasoline workers have voted to end their week-end walkout that almost tied up the whole city. Six thousand troops had been used to distribute the gasoline.

The Communists in East Germany say that Moscow has released Field Marshal Von Paulus whose 365-thousand man army surrendered at Stalingrad. The Communists say he's now in East Germany after more than ten years of imprisonment.

In Washington today, Secretary of Agriculture Benson told a group of cattlemen that he has an open mind toward any program to help them. He rejected, at least temporarily, their plea for immediate and direct government price supports for the livestock industry. Benson said the government will do "everything practical and feasible to ease" the drop in prices.

He recalled that in the past the government's effort to boost hog prices had been "a dismal failure" and he spoke of a "fiasco" created by the federal potato-buying program. Benson said it would be a "terrible thing" if the government started a price-support program for cattle and then found that it wouldn't work.

In Oklahoma City, Democratic Senator Symington said Benson "wants to circumvent the will of Congress by cutting to pieces the prices on cattle through his withholding of feed." Symington says the government has sent feed to Bolivia, Pakistan and other countries but refuses to adjust the feed prices for our own farmers.

Harold Reigelman, the Republican candidate for mayor of New York, conferred with Secretary of State Dulles today for 90 minutes. Then he told reporters, with Mr. Dulles' approval, that he is certain that the United States will resume economic aid to Israel soon. He said "there has been no change in the traditional friendship of the United States for Israel.

Here in New York today an estimated half million persons turned out to greet Major General William F. Dean. The general paid tribute to the men who fought in Korea and then called up from the crowd at City Hall an army doctor - Captain William Shadish. The General said he met the captain on a plane coming home. He heard other soldiers praise the doctor for saving the lives of many imprisoned Americans. Later General Dean conferred with General MacArthur.

Dr. Edward J. McCormick, the president of the American Medical Association, said today that the Veterans Administration is a threat to private enterprise. He attacked the V.A.'s program for caring for patients with ailments not connected with their service.

In Washington, the FBI began distributing the serial numbers of about 300-thousand dollars of missing Ranson money in the Greenlease kidnapping case. All the money is in ten and twenty dollar bills. The family paid a total of 600-thousand dollars to the kidnapers of six-year-old Bobby Greenlease. Only half of it was recovered when police arrested Carl Hall.

Civil Defense Administrator Val Peterson says he's going to ask Congress for about 125 million dollars next year to stockpile medical and other supplies - and for other operations.

Slowly, and at times painfully we are learning some of the difficulties of running a grand alliance of free nations. For example, Admiral Radford, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, told newsmen in Paris this morning that he was there to "listen and learn from our allies and top commanders about the problems of Western Defense." Dave Schoenbrun cables me from Paris that in the course of the day "The Admiral had a real earful from the French Chief of Staff, from Lord Ismay, Secretary-General of NATO, and from our own Ambassador Dillon in Paris." They all told him pretty much the same story: It's imperative to convince our allies that we're standing firm on the physical as well as the spiritual commitment involved in European defense; and that we aren't going to withdraw our ground troops from Europe and concentrate on atomic units.

The Commander of SHAPE, General Gruenther is reported to be particularly concerned about the demoralizing effect of such stories. They serve to give ammunition to the neutralist forces in Europe who want an agreement with Russia at almost any price.

The reports from Washington of a revision in American strategy have caused widespread concern in Europe, particularly in France. Non-communist papers in Paris are beginning to talk about Europeans having been assigned the role of "mercenary foot-soldiers and cheap cannon fodder."

The fact that Admiral Radford is a flying Admiral and greatly interested in the Pacific is even being used as an argument to support the contention that our grand strategy in Europe is about to undergo a change. If we are, or are not going to alter the disposition of our forces in Europe, it would seem that a little high level reassurance or explanation might reduce the psychological and political tnesions that are obviously increasing.

The Yugoslavs today said they wanted to decrease the tension in Trieste, in the hope that a conference will take place as soon as possible. Alex Kendrick cables me from Belgrade that the French are trying desperately to obtain a Five Power Conference, which would for the time being at least put the Anglo-American decision of October 8th in cold storage. This would permit some border adjustments in both zones. But Kendrick, who is an old hand at covering Yugoslav affairs, says that the whole future foreign policy of Yugoslavia is at stake. The Yugoslav Vice President published twenty-five columns in the official newspaper over the weekend. Basically it's a denunciation of the Atlantic Pact. They claim that it's being used to mask and cover up Italian aspirations. There is increasing talk in responsible quarters in Belgrade about "the resumption of normal relations with the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe." The number three man in Tito's administration has written that Western pressure has thus far prevented this highly significant change in foreign policy. He said he didn't mean that Yugoslavia should favor the Soviet bloc against the West, any more than the West should be favored against the Soviet bloc. He said he meant an independent policy of equal consideration for East and West, and good relations with both. He didn't mention the word "neutrality" or "neutralism", but this was the first overt expression of such sentiments on such a high level.

Kendrick concludes that the Trieste crisis has greatly strengthened the hands of the old line communists in Yugoslavia, that is the men who think that things have changed in Russia since Stalin's death, and who do not want full commitments to the capitalistic West. It is possible that Yugoslavia may emerge with an international policy similar to that of India. That would be a precarious middle of the road between East and West, reviled by both sides and thanked by neither. If this should happen it would raise the question of continued arms aid from the United States. The Yugoslavs are now boasting that they're now making their own tanks, fighter planes and artillery ammunition. Much of this armament development was made possible by American funds, but that point is overlooked. One price we are almost certain to pay for bungling the Trieste issue will be a decrease in the strength of the Yugoslav ties to the West. That is, of course, unless everybody involved in this thing is bluffing. And Kendrick says nobody in Belgrade thinks Tito is bluffing.

Contained in that twenty-five column statement of policy that I mentioned a moment ago was this sentence: "When the Yugoslavs broke with Russia they were left in international isolation, but they didn't care, and went ahead. Now they are ready to repeat the performance if necessary." That's pretty strong talk, but the Yugoslavs have demonstrated both during the late war and in their single-handed defiance of Russia that they are a pretty strong people.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: To keep the alliance of the free nations of the world intact requires both patience and understanding. And it is probably true as Jonathan Swift once said: "The strongest friendship yields to pride unless the odds be on our side." Sir Samuel Tuke concluded nearly 3-hundred years ago: "When competition brings us to the test, then we find friendship is self-interest."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday Oct 27, 1953

This is the news:

Secretary of Agriculture Benson has rejected a plea for "immediate" high government price supports on cattle. The Secretary met today with a group representing the "Cattleman's Caravan" that had gone to Washington to ask for government aid. He later told reporters he knows of no "practical" way to run a rigid high price support program on cattle. He said he'd be glad to look at a workable plan, if anyone showed it to him. And he said the visiting cattleman, from 32 states, did not present a plan. The Secretary also indicated that not all of the cattlemen's delegation actually raised cattle.. and he showed reporters a number of telegrams urging him not to submit to "pressure tactics." He said the nation's livestock industry is "overwhelmingly opposed" to rigid supports. But representatives of the 350 cattleman said they were disgusted by what they called "the brush-off." James Patton, president of the Farmers Union said "The fight is just beginning. And if the government does not act I expect to call a conclave that will make this one look like a very small affair." Other members of the "caravan" said they would go home to build a grass roots fire "under Benson."

The Department of Agriculture reports that this year the nation's farmers will wind up with a total net income one billion dollars under their 1952 income. The Department estimates that the farmers' 1953 net income will be seven per cent below last year.

Here in New York City we are in the second day of a milk strike... and almost out of fresh milk. Some 13-thousand AF of L teamsters are striking against 200 milk firms. The teamsters want a 15-dollar a week wage increase. They now make from 82 to 125-dollars a week. Normally, more than 5-million quarts of milk are consumed in this city daily. Today thousands of mothers waited on long lines at milk depots for a final ration for their children. Many are using [redacted] (POWDERED) and evaporated milk. Mayor Impelliteri says "some tangible progress" is being made in strike negotiations.

At the United Nations today, Israel unexpectedly offered to suspend work on its Jordan River hydroelectric project while the Security Council tries to settle a dispute with the Arabs. Syria has complained that the Israeli project diverts water from Syrian farms. The Israelis have offered to co-operate with the council in everyway. Earlier, the United Nations truce supervisor told the council that serious trouble is ahead in Palestine unless the armistice agreements are [redacted] followed strictly.

Secretary of State Dulles today refused to tell reporters how..or on what terms..we would restore economic aid to Isreal. We banned such aid on the charge that Isreal had defied a U.N. ruling to stop building the Jordan hydro-electric project.

The Secretary did tell reporters that there could be a five power conference on Trieste before the United States and Great Britain withdraw their troops from Zone A. Mr. Dulles said the sooner such a conference is held the better it will be for western defenses against Communism in South Europe.

Mr. Dulles also said that we do not contemplate any withdrawal of American forces from Europe. He is glad to repeat this because of rumours to the contrary in Europe. And Defense Secretary Wilson told reporters:"We have no immediate plans for taking troops out of Europe." Wilson said his recent remark that we might be able to take troops out "in the long run" because of the development of new weapons..this remark has been misunderstood

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today:"There are few things I would like better than to have a few quiet and informal talks" with President Eisenhower. He assured the House that the President would receive an enthusiastic welcome whenever he CAME TO visit Britain. And to visitors at Number Ten Downing street Sir Winston.. who'll be 79 at the end of November..said there are many things he would like to do but cannot do "what with work that does not diminish and strength that does not increase." In Hungary, Communist Premier Nagy has told agricultural experts that his country needs bread. He said: "Insufficient bread production is the first and most important problem we face." He said present production "cannot satisfy the needs of the people."

Andrie Vishinsky told United Nations Correspondents here in New York that Russia is agreeable to a meeting of the chiefs of state of the big powers. But, in reference to President Eisenhower's April speech demanding proof of good intentions and sincerity, Vishinsky said: "Those who speak of preliminary tests do not want agreement." Vishinsky made it clear that Moscow still insists on neutrals being represented at the Korean peace conference.

And in Korea today the Communist Chinese and North Koreans INSISTED on the same propgal even though our ambassador, Arthur Dean, pointed out that this is contrary to what they wanted when the Korean armistice was signed. At that time the enemy insisted that the confrence be limited to those who fought in Korea. Again Dean warned the enemy that if a Korean peace conference is not held it will be the fault of the Communists. And Indian sources indicate that there may not be another large-scale exchange of prisoners because of the disagreement on how "explanations" should be conducted to those prisoners who do not want to go home.

In Washington, Senate Republican Leader Knowland says he expects congressional leaders to sit-in with the President and cabinet members for final decisions on the Administration's new legislative program.

Socialist Leader Norman Thomas called on the President today and then told reporters that Mr. Eisenhower told him Socialists should not be excluded from federal civil service jobs.

The President today gave the nation's highest award the Congressional Medal of Honor to seven servicemen who won them on the field of battle in Korea. He expressed the hope that the time will come when such medals will not be needed because there will be peace in the world.

Thirty-five years ago tomorrow Czechoslovakia was proclaimed a free republic. Since then, first under the Germans and now under the Communists the people of Czechoslovakia have had many difficult years. Tonight we asked a [redacted] leader of the free Czechs in this country to record a brief message for you. He is Dr. Peter Zehkle whom I knew before World War Two as Lord Mayor of Praguae... a man I was to see later when American troops liberated him from six years in German concentration camps at Dachau and Buchenwald. After the war Dr. Zenkle became deputy prime minister of his country. Then when the Communists crushed Czechoslvakia's independence he escaped to America. Here is Dr. Zenkle:

(runs 4 minutes
return cue:"In her own family and in the family of free nations.")

That was Dr. Peter Zenkle, former deputy prime minister of Czechoslovakia.

And today, Secretary of State Dulles in a message to the Council of Free Czechoslovakia, said that Czevhoslvakia's traditions "so deeply rooted and so expressive of [redacted] aspirations will survive."

The Secretary said: The development of the concept of European unity holds out assurance to the people of Czevhoslvakia. An assurance that once they are again free to elect their own government they will have the opposrtunity to share in the life and benefits of this community."

This is Ed Murrow..

As Doctor Zenkel pointed out, Czechoslavakia has not lost its will, hope or determination to be free again. Bertolt Brecht, a German poet - and an exile himself - once put it this way:"A man can be free, even within prison walls. Freedom is something spiritual. And whoever once had it, can never lose it. For while the body can be bound with chains, the spirit can never."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Secretary of Agriculture Benson has rejected a plea for "immediate" high government price supports on cattle. The Secretary met today with a group representing the "Cattleman's Caravan" that had gone to Washington to ask for government aid. He later told reporters he knows of no "practical" way to run a rigid high price support program on cattle. He said he'd be glad to look at a workable plan, if anyone showed it to him. And he said the visiting cattleman, from 32 states, did not present a plan. The Secretary also indicated that not all of the cattlemen's delegation actually raised cattle - and he showed reporters a number of telegrams urging him not to submit to "pressure tactics." He said the nation's livestock industry is "overwhelmingly opposed" to rigid supports. But representatives of the 350 cattleman said they were disgusted by what they called "the brush-off." James Patton, president of the Farmers Union said: "The fight is just beginning. And if the government does not act I expect to call a conclave that will make this one look like a very small affair." Other members of the "caravan" said they would go home to build a grass roots fire "under Benson."

The Department of Agriculture reports that this year the nation's farmers will wind up with a total net income one billion dollars under their 1952 income. The Department estimates that the farmers' 1953 net income will be seven percent below last year.

Here in New York City we are in the second day of a milk strike - and almost out of fresh milk. Some 13-thousand AFL teamsters are striking against 200 milk firms. The teamsters want a 15-dollar a week wage increase. They now make from 82 to 125-dollars a week. Normally, more than 5-million quarts of milk are consumed in this city daily. Today thousands of mothers waited on long lines at milk depots for a final ration for their children. Many are using powdered and evaporated milk. Mayor Impelliteri says "some tangible progress" is being made in strike negotiations.

At the United Nations today, Israel unexpectedly offered to suspend work on its Jordan River hydroelectric project while the Security Council tries to settle a dispute with the Arabs. Syria has complained that the Israeli project diverts water from Syrian farms. The Israelis have offered to cooperate with the council in everyway. Earlier, the United Nations truce supervisor told the council that serious trouble is ahead in Palestine unless the armistice agreements are followed strictly.

Secretary of State Dulles today refused to tell reporters how or on what terms we would restore economic aid to Israel. We banned such aid on the charge that Israel had defied a U.N. ruling to stop building the Jordan hydro-electric project.

The Secretary did tell reporters that there could be a five power conference on Trieste before the United States and Great Britain withdraw their troops from Zone A. Mr. Dulles said the sooner such a conference is held the better it will be for western defenses against Communism in South Europe.

Mr. Dulles alsp said that we do not contemplate any withdrawal of American forces from Europe. He is glad to repeat this because of rumors to the contrary in Europe. And Defense Secretary Wilson told reporters: "We have no immediate plans for taking troops out of Europe." Wilson said his recent remark that we might be able to take troops out "in the long run" because of the development of new weapons - this remark has been misunderstood.

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today: "There are few things I would like better than to have a few quiet and informal talks" with President Eisenhower. He assured the House that the President would receive an enthusiastic welcome whenever he came to visit Britain. And to visitors at Number Ten Downing street Sir Winston - who'll be 79 at the end of November - said there are many things he would like to do but cannot do "what with work that does not diminish and strength that does not increase."

In Hungary, Communist Premier Nagy has told agricultural experts that his country needs bread. He said: "Insufficient bread production is the first and most important problem we face." He said present production "cannot satisfy the needs of the people."

Andrei Vishinsky told United Nations Correspondents here in New York that Russia is agreeable to a meeting of the chiefs of state of the big powers. But, in reference to President Eisenhower's April speech demanding proof of good intentions and sincerity, Vishinsky said: "Those who speak of preliminary tests do not want agreement." Vishinsky made it clear that Moscow still insists on neutrals being represented at the Korean peace conference.

And in Korea today the Communist Chinese and North Koreans insisted on the same proposal even though our ambassador, Arthur Dean, pointed out that this is contrary to what they wanted when the Korean armistice was signed. At that time the enemy insisted that the conference be limited to those who fought in Korea. Again Dean warned the enemy that if a Korean peace conference is not held it will be the fault of the Communists. And Indian sources indicate that there may not be another large-scale exchange of prisoners because of the disagreement on how "explanations" should be conducted to those prisoners who do not want to go home.

In Washington, Senate Republican Leader Knowland says he expects congressional leaders to sit in with the President and cabinet members for final decisions on the Administration's new legislative program.

Socialist Leader Norman Thomas called on the President today and then told reporters that Mr. Eisenhower told him Socialists should not be excluded from federal civil service jobs.

The President today gave the nation's highest award the Congressional Medal of Honor to seven servicemen who won them on the field of battle in Korea. He expressed the hope that the time will come when such medals will not be needed because there will be peace in the world.

Thirty-five years ago tomorrow Czechoslovakia was proclaimed a free republic. Since then, first under the Germans and now under the Communists the people of Czechoslovakia have had many difficult years. Tonight we asked a leader of the free Czechs in this country to record a brief message for you. He is Dr. Peter Zenkl whom I knew before World War Two as Lord Mayor of Prague - a man I was to see later when American troops liberated him from six years in German concentration camps at Dachau and Buchenwald. After the war Dr. Zenkl became deputy prime minister of his country. Then when the Communists crushed Czechoslavakia's independence he escaped to America. Here is Dr. Zenkl:

DR. ZENKL: Thirty-five years ago the Republic of Czechoslovakia came into being. It was founded with the help of the Allies but chiefly by the blood and sweat of its own sons and daughters.

The first twenty years of the Republic were happy years. Under the guidance of the first two presidents, Masaryk and Benes, political life showed extraordinary stability. The nation adopted and lived up to a modern constitution. Human rights were safeguarded to all citizens. With a stable economy and currency, industry and agriculture prospered and trade flourished. There was a healthy balance between agriculture and industry. The trademark "Made in Czechoslovakia" had an excellent reputation. Czechoslovak schools were progressive; courts were just. There was great cultural and social progress. In her foreign policy Czechoslovakia strove for peace and upheld scrupulously all treaties. As one of the most loyal members of the League of Nations Czechoslovakia defended the principle of collective security until the very day of Munich which turned this principle into mockery and led directly to World War II.

From 1938 onward fifteen tragic years followed: first the partition of the Republica, then the Nazi occupation and the massacre of the finest Czechoslovak men and women. Then followed the so-called "liberation" by the Red Army which gave the Communists such a head-start that the struggle by democratic means was lost beforehand.

The Communist putsch by force in February 1948 has meant the end to democracy in Czechoslovakia; it has also meant the beginning of a new struggle for the values for which the Czechs and Slovaks have been fighting for a thousand years; for freedom and humanitarian ideals.

Czechoslovak democracy was not defeated because of inner weakness: both times it was conquered by enemies from without: first the Naxis, then Moscow. It took the whole free world almost six years to defeat the Nazis in war. As to Moscow, it has swallowed up 600 million people since 1939.

It should be remembered that it was Czechoslovakia which, though surrounded by dictatorships long before Munich, nevertheless resisted fascism the most. After 1945 she held out against communism at her doomed outpost for three years. Her subjugation was the fault of short-sighted world politics. In 1939 the policy led straight to the attack on Poland and to world war. After the war it led to the present situation: Moscow now has the atom bomb made from the uranium of the Jachymov mines of Czechoslovakia and in Indochina weapons made by the Skoda Works of Pilsen are being used against the French.

Whenever the Czechoslovaks are not masters in their own house, things are not well with the world. Czechoslovakia has been a beacon light to freedom and justice pointing the way to peace; there cannot be peace unless and until the beacon is lighted again and Czechoslovakia celebrates her birthday anniversary in her own family and in the family of free nations.

MURROW: That was Dr. Peter Zenkl, former deputy prime minister of Czechoslovakia. And today, Secretary of State Dulles in a message to the Council of Free Czechoslovakia, said that Czechoslovakia's traditions "so deeply rooted and so expressive of aspirations will survive."

The Secretary said: The development of the concept of European unity holds out assurance to the people of Czechoslovakia. An assurance that once they are again free to elect their own government they will have the opportunity to share in the life and benefits of this community."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: As Doctor Zenkl pointed out, Czechoslovakia has not lost its will, hope or determination to be free again. Bertolt Brecht, a German poet - and an exile himself - once put it this way: "A man can be free even within prison walls. Freedom is something spiritual. And whoever once had it, can never lose it. For while the body can be bound with chains, the spirit can never."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday Oct 28, 1953.

This is the news:

The army today released a report on Communist atrocities in Korea. We're told that six thousand one hundred and thirteen Americans, were among the 30-thousand allied troops, who suffered from enemy atrocities...torture.. mass murders. Army Secretary Stevens says this report--with some sickening photographs to prove the point-- "exposes the enemy for what he is. It describes the cold-blooded program carried on by the Communists." The report tells of five to seven thousand South Koreans SLAUGHTERED at Taejon..of 290 burned alive in a Suchon jail.. of 500 ROK soldiers shot in a massmurder. And it gives detailed case histories of individual Americans, whose bodies were found badly mutilated. The fate of the six thousand Americans is unknown. The army says they were "probably victims of war crime atrocities." The six thousand figure is close to that first suggested in November of 1951 BY Colonel Hanley, then attached to the 8th army staff.

In Korea today, the Indian chairman of the neutral nations repatriation commission, said that three Korean and Chinese prisoners have been killed by fellow prisoners in a prisoner of war camp for anti-Communists

~~death by Indian guards. One apparently committed suicide and another died of starvation. The commission refuses to speculate on why any of the captives were killed.~~

Later tonight, American ambassador Arthur Dean meets again with the Communists in an attempt to set up a Korean peace conference. He will present a "formula" to the enemy.

At the United Nations today nine countries attacked the Communist charge that allied forces used germ warfare in Korea. Most of them expressed their shock at the enemy's charge...and the merciless torture used to extract so-called "confessions" from American flyers. British Minister of State Selwyn Lloyd said he has no doubts that these [redacted] confessions "were a tissue of lies extracted by all the refinements of totalitarian torture." Nationalist China called on the U.N. to seek the punishment of the responsible Communist officers.

In Washington today, the President told reporters it would be hopeless to hold a meeting of the Big Four heads of state without a Russian demonstration of honesty of purpose. The President said there are a hundred things the Russians could do to demonstrate their honesty.. He still thinks any such Big Four meeting must be preceeded by a demonstration of Moscow's good faith. And again Mr. Eisenhower said he would do anything to advance the cause of peace

The President also SAID that he is delighted with the State Department's announcement that we are ending a 34-day ban on sending aid to Isreal. The Department has allocated 26-million dollars to the Israelis. Mr. Eisenhower expressed his pleasure at Isreal's announcement that she will abide by a U.N. ruling in Isreal's dispute with Syris.

At his news conference the President indicated that he may take a hand in next year's congressional elections. [even though a week ago he said he would not use the presidency as a campaign instrument for partisan politics.] Today the President said: he is interested in the Republican organization..interested in keeping Congress under Republican control. He believes in party responsibility and will do his part to obtain it.. [within the bounds of what he thinks is proper for a President of the United States.]

The President announced a new program to "unmask and counter-act hostile attempts" to distort American policies in the rest of the world. He said the new U.S. Information Agency's purpose will be to show others that we are trying to advance the free world's aspirations for freedom, progress and peace.

And Mr. Eisenhower said he believes that cattle prices have now reached bottom and will start to rise. He said that only a renewal of the drought or some other disaster would prompt him to call a special session of Congress...to deal with farm problems. He said a decline in farm and cattle prices has been going on a long time. The situation is being carefully watched. ~~The President also said he would have been willing to meet with protesting cattlemen who were in Washington up to yesterday, but no request for a conference had come to his desk.~~

Here in New York today, Secretary of Agriculture Benson said farmers must "increase efficiency, improve quality and lower costs in their production and marketing" if they are to meet future national needs.

And this big city's milk strike has now gone through a third day..with very little fresh milk for the 12 million persons in the area. Mayor Impelliteri has summoned the deadlocked negotiators to city hall. He says the strike is "a matter of grave public concern."

The government announced today that the cost of living has again reached a new all-time high. Its the fourth straight month that a new record has been set..the seventh month in which the Bureau of Labor Statistics index has gone up. During September rent, clothing and medical expenses went up..for a total INDEX increase of two-tenths of a per cent. The cost of living is now 13 per cent higher than what it was before the Korean war started.

A former top Russian intelligence agent told the Jenner Committee today that 20 to 25 Soviet espionage rings operated in this country in 1941. He thinks more than that are probably operating here now. Colonel Akmedov.. who once headed an intelligence department of the Russian general staff, said he personally saw hundreds of documents on America's technical war secrets that were obtained by American spies. He said he fled from Russia to Turkey in 1943

The President and Mrs. Eisenhower today welcomed King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece. THE PRESIDENT said he hoped they would find as much pleasure "in our home as we did in yours."

It would appear to this reporter that the Administration is beginning to move with considerable dispatch in certain areas of foreign affairs. Three or four days ago the stories started rolling in from Western Europe reflecting apprehension about the possibility of this country reducing its armed forces in Europe. # Mr. Charles, E. Wilson, our Secretary of Defense, made a statement saying he didn't know anything about any such plans, and that earlier comments of his must have been "misunderstood." [It would appear that Mr. Wilson's words are misunderstood with remarkable frequency.] Then yesterday Secretary Dulles reassured our allies that we have no intention of reducing our military commitment in Europe. And today President Eisenhower said there is no plan in existence for reduction of U.S. combat forces anywhere. He pointed out that the Air Force is even expanding overseas.

These reassurances have been welcomed in Europe, particularly in France. # Today in Paris the National Assembly voted 315 to 251 to continue the eight-year-old war against the communists in Indo-China. It was a crucial debate, and the Laniel government won it. The Premier said France was willing to negotiate an end of the war in Indo-China - which is the only active war being fought against the communists at the moment - if Ho-Chi-Minh, the communist leader, would ask for conversations. Laniel said that there was nothing in any Franco-American agreements that would prevent the opening of conversations. The French Government's victory was a real one, and should not be minimized, but it doesn't end the continuing crisis in Indo-Chinese affairs. The French willingness to continue the war is contingent upon the willingness of the associated states of Indo-China to remain within the French Union. The resolution passed by the French Parliament demands that the people of Viet Nam enlist in great numbers so as to permit the gradual replacement of the French forces now in action. There is no guarantee that the recruits will be forthcoming. The French Parliament also made a third condition - general peace negotiations in Asia. But here again there is no assurance that either China or the United States is willing to enter into such negotiations.

The most that has happened is that the danger of a split between France and this country regarding the policy to be pursued in Indo-China has been avoided.

Dave Schoenbrun cables me from Paris that French officials feel they are making quiet but steady progress in their efforts to arrange a conference on Trieste, which might break the current deadlock. Both the French and the Yugoslavs agree that it would be unwise to call a Five Power Conference, until there is reasonable hope that it might bring about a successful compromise. And history is full of examples, that meetings of five powers, or two, or twenty, are more likely to succeed if the ground has been well prepared in advance. The formula that looks most promising for Trieste is this: the city itself will come under Italian sovereignty. The city limits, as now constituted, will be extended into part of what is now Zone A. The port will be under Italian administration, but will have the status of a free port, in order to ensure economic and trade privileges to Yugoslavia, and to Austria. Zone B will come under Yugoslav sovereignty, temporarily, and it will be enlarged by taking over all of Zone A outside of the enlarged city limits of Trieste. Then both sides may agree to allow an equal number of troops, and administrators, necessary for the security and organisation of its zone. This would be an equitable and face-saving compromise for both Italy and Yugoslavia, and might get the British and American governments off the hook, on which they have been wriggling uncomfortably for several weeks.

Tito could present this result as a solid accomplishment. And Italian Premier Pella could make it palatable to his own people. Premier Pella arrives in Paris tomorrow for conversations with the French, and French officials are reasonably confident that this dangerous Trieste crisis may be ended fairly soon. All sides appear to be agreed that every day's delay is dangerous and damaging, and that some sort of compromise must be concluded.

It would seem to this reporter that if our State Department hadn't gone off half cocked, we would not now have Italians and Yugoslavs carrying guns, marching about the edges of this territory. Compromises are better sought against a more placid and less emotional backdrop.

There are those who argue that we must have a firm, hard policy in foreign affairs. But there are others, like William Sumner, who on occasion have felt differently. A half century ago, Sumner said:"If you want war, nourish a doctrine. They are tyrants that get inside a man's own reason and often betray him against himself. Civilized men have done their fiercest fighting for doctrines."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The army today released a report on Communist atrocities in Korea. We're told that six thousand one hundred and thirteen Americans were among the 30-thousand allied troops who suffered from enemy atrocities - torture - mass murders. Army Secretary Stevens says this report with some sickening photographs to prove the point - "exposes the enemy for what he is. It describes the cold-blooded program carried on by the Communists." The report tells of five to seven thousand South Koreans slaughtered at Taejon - of 290 burned alive in a Suchon jail - of 500 ROK soldiers shot in a mass murder. And it gives detailed case histories of individual Americans whose bodies were found badly mutilated. The fate of the six thousand Americans is unknown. The army says they were "probably victims of war crime atrocities." The six thousand figure is close to that first suggested in November of 1951 by Colonel Hanley then attached to the 8th army staff.

In Korea today, the Indian chairman of the neutral nations repatriation commission said that three Korean and Chinese prisoners have been killed by fellow prisoners in a prisoner of war camp for anti-Communists.

Later tonight, American ambassador Arthur Dean meets again with the Communists in an attempt to set up a Korean peace conference. He will present a "formula" to the enemy.

At the United Nations today nine countries attacked the Communist charge that allied forces used germ warfare in Korea. Most of them expressed their shock at the enemy's charge and the merciless torture used to extract so-called "confession from American flyers. British Minister of State Selwyn Lloyd said he has no doubts that these confessions "were a tissue of lies extracted by all the refinements of totalitarian torture." Nationalist China called on the U.N. to seek the punishment of the responsible Communist officers.

In Washington today the President told reporters it would be hopeless to hold a meeting of the Big Four heads of state without a Russian demonstration of honesty of purpose. The President said there are a hundred things the Russians could do to demonstrate their honesty. He still thinks any such Big Four meeting must be preceeded by a demonstration of Moscow's good faith. And again Mr. Eisenhower said he would do anything to advance the cause of peace.

The President also said that he is delighted with the State Department's announcement that we are ending a 34-day ban on sending aid to Israel. The Department has allocated 26-million dollars to the Israelis. Mr. Eisenhower expressed his pleasure at Israel's announcement that she will abide by a U.N. ruling in Israel's dispute with Syria.

At his news conference the President indicated that he may take a hand in next year's congressional elections even though a week ago he said he would not use the presidency as a campaign instrument for partisan politics. Today the President said: he is interested in the Republican organization - interested in keeping Congress under Republican control. He believes in party responsibility and will do his part to obtain it within the bounds of what he thinks is proper for a President of the United States.

The President announced a new program to "unmask and counter-act hostile attempts" to distort American policies in the rest of the world. He said the new U.S. Information Agency's purpose will be to show others that we are trying to advance the free world's aspirations for freedom, progress and peace.

And Mr. Eisenhower said he believes that cattle prices have now reached bottom and will start to rise. He said that only a renewal of the drought or some other disaster would prompt him to call a special session of Congress to deal with farm problems. He said a decline in farm and cattle prices has been going on a long time. The situation is being carefully watched.

Here in New York today, Secretary of Agriculture Benson said farmers must "increase efficiency, improve quality and lower costs in their production and marketing" if they are to meet future national needs.

And this big city's milk strike has now gone through a third day with very little fresh milk for the 12 million persons in the area. Mayor Impelliteri has summoned the deadlocked negotiators to city hall. He says the strike is "a matter of grave public concern."

The government announced today that the cost of living has again reached a new alltime high. Its the fourth straight month that a new record has been set - the seventh month in which the Bureau of Labor Statistics index has gone up. During September rent, clothing and medical expenses went up for a total index increase of two-tenths of a per cent. The cost of living is now 13 percent higher than what it was before the Korean war started.

A former top Russian intelligence agent told the Jenner Committee today that 20 to 25 Soviet espionage rings operated in this country in 1941. He thinks more than that are probably operating here now. Colonel Akmedov, who once headed an intelligence department of the Russian general staff, said he personally saw hundreds of documents on America's technical war sec ets that were obtained by American spies. He said he fled from Russia to Turkey in 1943.

The President and Mrs. Eisenhower today welcomed King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece. The President said he hoped they would find as much pleasure "in our home as we did in yours."

It would appear to this reporter that the Administration is beginning to move with considerable dispatch in certain areas of foreign affairs. Three or four days ago the stroies started rolling in from Western Europe reflecting apprehension about the possibility of this country reducing its armed forces in Europe. Mr. Charles E. Wilson, our Secretary of Defense, made a statement saying he didn't know anything about any such plans, and that earlier comments of his must have been "misunderstood." It would appear that Mr. Wilson's words are misunderstood with remarkable frequency. Then yesterday Secretary Dulles reassured our allies that we have no intention of reducing our military commitment in Europe. And today

President Eisenhower said there is no plan in existence for reduction of U.S. combat forces anywhere. He pointed out that the Air Force is even expanding overseas.

These reassurances have been welcomed in Europe, particularly in France. Today in Paris the National Assembly voted 315 to 251 to continue the eight-year-old war against the communists in Indo-China. It was a crucial debate, and the Laniel government won it. The Premier said France was willing to negotiate an end of the war in Indo-China - which is the only active war being fought against the communists at the moment - if Ho-Chi-Minh, the communist leader, would ask for conversations. Laniel said that there was nothing in any Franco-American agreements that would prevent the opening of conversations. The French Government's victory was a real one, and should not be minimized, but it doesn't end the continuing crisis in Indo-Chinese affairs. The French willingness to continue the war is contingent upon the willingness of the associated states of Indo-China to remain within the French Union. The resolution passed by the French Parliament demands that the people of Viet Nam enlist in grest numbers so as to permit the gradual replacement of the French forces now in action. There is no guarantee that the recruits will be forthcoming. The French Parliament also made a third condition - general peace negotiations in Asia. But here again there is no assurance that either China or the United States is willing to enter into such negotiations.

The most that has happened is that the danger of a split between France and this country regarding the policy to be pursued in Indo-China has been avoided.

Dave Schoenbrun cables me from Paris that French officials feel they are making quiet but steady progress in their efforts to arrange a conference on Trieste which might break the current deadlock. Both the French and the Yugoslavs agree that it would be unwise to call a Five Power Conference until there is reasonable hope that it might bring about a successful compromise. And history is full of examples that meetings of five powers, or two, or twenty are more likely to succeed if the ground has been well prepared in advance. The formula that looks most promising for Trieste is this: the city itself will come under Italian sovereignty. The city limits as now constituted will be extended into part of what is now Zone A. The port will be under Italian administration, but will have the status of a free port in order to insure economic and trade privileges to Yugoslavia, and to Austria. Zone B will come under Yugoslav sovereignty, temporarily, and it will be enlarged by taking over all of Zone A outside of the enlarged city limits of Trieste. Then both sides may agree to allow an equal number of troops and administrators necessary for the security and organization of its zone. This would be an equitable and face-saving compromise for both Italy and Yugoslavia, and might get the British and American governments off the hook on which they have been wriggling uncomfortably for several weeks.

Tito could present this result as a solid accomplishment. And Italian Premier Pella could make it palatable to his own people. Premier Pella arrives in Paris tomorrow for conversations with the French, and French officials are reasonably confident that this dangerous Trieste crisis may be ended fairly soon. All sides appear to be agreed that every day's delay is dangerous and damaging, and that some sort of compromise must be concluded.

It would seem to this reporter that if our State Department hadn't gone off half cocked we would not now have Italians and Yugoslavs carrying guns, marching about the edges of this territory. Compromises are better sought against a more placid and less emotional backdrop.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: There are those who argue that we must have a firm, hard policy in foreign affairs. But there are others, like William Sumner, who on occasion have felt differently. A half century ago, Sumner said: "If you want war, nourish a doctrine. They are tyrants that get inside a man's own reason and often betray him against himself. Civilized men have done their fiercest fighting for doctrines."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday october 29 1953 (1)

This is the news:

The Army's report of atrocities against American soldiers in Korea has been placed before the United Nations General Assembly. The brief announcement, made tonite, does not indicate what action we will ask the UN to take. But our chief delegate, Henry Cabot Lodge, Junior, told newsmen: "Words cannot describe the horror with which I view these exhibits."

Last night, the Army's War Crimes Division released photographs and documented eye-witness stories to substaniate its case that 6-thousand 113 Americans had been tortured to death by the Communists. It estimated that close to 30-thousand persons - UN personnel and South Korean civilians - were killed in the same way by North Koreans and Chinese Communists. Documents & photographs in Pentagon — stench of Buchenwald & Dachau

Well in advance of making it known that we would bring this matter before the UN, a number of Congressmen and Senators called for similar steps. Senator Mansfield (a Democrat from Montana) in a letter to Mr. Lodge urged that "those guilty of these atrocities be brought before a War Crimes Commission and punished as expeditiously as possible."

13

The French Delegate to the UN, ~~Henri Hoppenot,~~ charged earlier today that the Communists tortured American fliers in Korea to get confessions of germ-warfare. He said that Russia, by refusing to allow an impartial inquiry, is showing signs of "cowardice." And for our part, we intend to submit more evidence of Russian complicity in getting these germ-warfare confessions.

A fifth meeting on the Korean Peace Conference is to be held in Panmunjom tonite. We again told the Communists to stop arguing about who is to attend such a conference and first settle on a time and place.

President Eisenhower spoke to the American Forest Congress in Washington. He told delegates: The purpose of the government is to understand the problems of every group in the nation but to never use its resources to favor any one group.

The President's Press Secretary Jim Hagerty [redacted] said today that Mr. Eisenhower favors the election of all

He SAID:

Republican candidates for office. This includes Paul Troast, the Republica candidate for Governor in New Jersey, who once intervened for clemency on behalf of convicted extortionist Joe Fay.

King Paul and Queen Fredrika of Greece TODAY ended their overnite stay at the White House, and began their tour of the United States by visiting Mount Vernon, and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The King told newsmen:"If Eurppe and Western Civilization are to be saved it will be by following the message of unity of purpose given us by the United States."

In Paris, French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault told Parliament, that negotiations are proceeding satisfactorily on efforts to ratify the European Army plan. I'd like to discuss the problems of European defense in a few minutes.

The Agriculture Department reports that retail food prices next year will be about the same as they are now. Food supplies will also be roughly the same.

There are signs tonite that the four-day-old milk strike in and around New York is (APPROACHING AN END) [redacted] to [redacted]. But an industry spokesman says that (THERE WILL BE NO DELIVERIES TOMORROW) [redacted]. No contract has yet been signed with the striking AL of L teamsters union. #

Three aides of Senator Mc Carthy's Investigating sub-committee held a two-hour prison interview today with David Greenglass, the convicted atom spy. After the meeting, one of the aides - David Schine - said that Greenglass has important information on radar espionage. And that he will be called before the Committee to testify as soon as arrangements can be made.

And the House un-American activities committee said today that its going to make a full investigation to "determine the extent of" Communist infiltration in the Navy during World War Two. Chairman Velde says eight witnesses have already been questioned about such matters. He says seven have refused to answer "pertinent questions."

Chairman Langer of the Senate Judiciary Committee said today that he has received several protests against the nomination of Earl Warren to be chief justice of the United States. Langer offered no details on the protests other than to say they were from individuals..not groups. The Langer committee may hold hearings before Congress convenes in January.

And Senator IVES, New York Republican, today was named acting chairman of a Senate labor subcommittee to study amendments to the Taft-Hartley law. This subcommittee was formerly headed by the late Senator Taft.

Gambler Frank Costello was released from a federal prison in Michigan today after serving one year for contempt of Congress. Costello, who said he was going to take a rest, faces an income tax case and a move to deport him. This was the first time he had served time in prison.

Edward R. Murrow: October 29, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

President Eisenhower's curt statement yesterday, that no plan exists to reduce U.S. combat forces abroad, will be more quieting to our Allies in NATO, than if he had said the opposite. But it will not end anxiety on this subject. For our Allies know that the new Joint Chiefs of Staff have been re-assessing the nature of the American military effort, under the spur of the Administration's search for economy. A reduction of forces abroad is no far-fetched concept.

When new ideas are being weighed at the top level in Washington, the public often gets to hear about them through off-the-record talks of high officials, with special groups of correspondents. One idea now being publicized in this way, is that the development of atomic weapons has gone so far, that it might permit a reduction of combat forces generally, which would of course include Europe.

The United States is now paying for two arms programs, one atomic, the other conventional. Both programs are exceedingly costly. If duplication of effort could be avoided, a lot of money would be saved. No wonder Republican leaders are interested. It appears that the new idea is to gear defense to atomic field weapons, and other new XX weapons, and to fight any future war in the field with these, at a great saving in manpower.

Until recently atomic energy has been thought of as being most useful in strategic bombing, where it could wipe out an enemy's cities & defense potential. Atomic power so used can be so destructive that the threat of it is regarded as an effective deterrent to aggression. The possibility of strategic warfare naturally increased when the Soviet Union began making atomic bombs.

But if warfare is to be given a "new look", and atomic field weapons are to replace a large part of the manpower now used, it might be accompanied by a formal restriction of atomic weapons to field use, and a renunciation of it in strategic bombing. That is what some Washington correspondents hear.

This reporter recognizes that there can be a whale of a difference between an idea and a policy. The mention of a self-denying declaration renouncing strategic bombing is not to be taken too seriously as yet. But it is not too early to say two things about it. One is that this is what the Soviet Union has pressed for and we have resisted as being meaningless, that is, a renunciation of strategic bombing. The other is to point out that nothing can be more unrealistic than to expect any belligerent - the Soviet Union or this country, for that matter - if it was losing a great war, and possessed atomic bombs, not to try to avert defeat by using them.

Unless all future major wars can be guaranteed to end in a stalemate, they seem almost certain to end in all-out atomic warfare, as long as atomic weapons exist.

Another idea is reported in Washington. It is what is called the plate-glass window theory of the proper use of American combat forces overseas. It is under this theory that we keep a tiny token force in Berlin, as do the British and French. The substantial Soviet force in Berlin could wipe out these token forces in a few hours. But they don't do it. They know it would mean all-out war with strategic bombing. The proponents of the plate-glass window theory say that all we need to do to keep the peace is to put enough American soldiers in the show window in critical areas for the Kremlin to see them. Talk like this is another reason the Europeans are frightened that we may reduce our combat forces in Europe.

Obviously this idea has nothing to do with the atomic "new look". The plate-glass window theory only works if strategic bombing is left unrestricted. Europeans don't know what to think. If we are going to apply the plate-glass window theory, they are being left to do most of the ground fighting, even though we promised solemnly to bear our full share.

What may have been an important moment in East-West relations seems to have escaped wide notice. Andrei Vishinsky, at a luncheon of U.N. correspondents on Tuesday, stated the Soviet policy on inspection and control of atomic energy. The importance was not what Mr. Vishinsky said but what he did not say. For in stating the Soviet acceptance of strict, complete and effective atomic control on a permanent basis, so as to enforce the unconditional prohibition of atomic weapons, he did not mention the now famous Soviet conditions that have effectively blocked all progress on this issue. One condition is that inspectors be barred from interfering with internal affairs in the U.S.S.R., which could be construed as paralyzing their efforts altogether. The other forbids so-called surprise inspections unless there is reason to suspect a violation. That would make of inspection pretty much of a meaningless formality.

The fact that Mr. Vishinsky did not repeat these conditions to XXXX U.N. correspondents does not prove that Soviet policy has changed. The omission may have been inadvertent, or a trick. But it does suggest the possibility. If the Soviet Union really wants to demonstrate good will in a search for better East-West relations, this would be a way to do it.

This is a big world in which we live. And perhaps because we're seperated from Europe by so many miles, it's sometimes difficult to realize our influence abroad. Progress in big things isn't always swift. But as Thomas Carlyle once said:"The work an unknown good man has done is like a vein of water flowing hidden underground, secretly making the ground green."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Army's report of atrocities against American soldiers in Korea has been placed before the United Nations General Assembly. The brief announcement, made tonight, does not indicate what action we will ask the UN to take. But our chief delegate, Henry Cabot Lodge, Junior, told newsmen: "Words cannot describe the horror with which I view these exhibits."

Last night, the Army's War Crimes Division released photographs and documented eye-witness stories to substantiate its case that 6-thousand 113 Americans had been tortured to death by the Communists. It estimated that close to 30-thousand persons - UN Personnel and South Korean civilians - were killed in the same way by North Koreans and Chinese Communists.

Well in advance of making it known that we would bring this matter before the UN, a number of Congressmen and Senators called for similar steps. Senator Mansfield (a Democrat from Montana) in a letter to Mr. Lodge urged that "those guilty of these atrocities be brought before a War Crimes Commission and punished as expeditiously as possible." The French Delegate to the UN, charged earlier today that the Communists tortured American fliers in Korea to get confessions of germ-warfare. He said that Russia, by refusing to allow an impartial inquiry, is showing signs of "cowardice." And for our part, we intend to submit more evidence of Russian complicity in getting these germ-warfare confessions.

A fifth meeting on the Korean Peace Conference is to be held in Panmunjom tonight. We again told the Communists to stop arguing about who is to attend such a conference and first settle on a time and place. President Eisenhower spoke to the American Forest Congress in Washington. He told delegates: "The purpose of the government is to understand the problems of every group in the nation but to never use its resources to favor any one group.

The President's Press Secretary Jim Hagerty said today that Mr. Eisenhower favors the election of all Republican candidates for office. He said: This includes Paul Troast, the Republican candidate for Governor in New Jersey who once intervened for clemency on behalf of convicted extortionist Joe Fay.

King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece today ended their overnight stay at the White House and began their tour of the United States by visiting Mount Vernon and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The King told newsmen: "If Europe and Western Civilization are to be saved it will be by following the message of unity of purpose given us by the United States."

In Paris, French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault told Parliament that negotiations are proceeding satisfactorily on efforts to ratify the European Army plan. I'd like to discuss the problems of European defense in a few minutes.

The Agriculture Department reports that retail food prices next year will be about the same as they are now. Food supplies will also be roughly the same.

There are signs tonight that the four-day-old milk strike in and around New York is approaching an end. But an industry spokesman says that there will be no deliveries tomorrow. No contract has yet been signed with the striking AFL teamsters union.

Three aides of Senator McCarthy's Investigating sub-committee held a two-hour prison interview today with David Greenglass, the convicted atom spy. After the meeting, one of the aides - David Schine - said that Greenglass has important information on radar espionage. And that he will be called before the Committee to testify as soon as arrangements can be made.

And the House un-American activities committee said today that its going to make a full investigation to "determine the extent of" Communist infiltration in the Navy during World War Two. Chairman Velde says eight witnesses have already been questioned about such matters. He says seven have refused to answer "pertinent questions."

Chairman Langer of the Senate Judiciary Committee said today that he has received several protests against the nomination of Earl Warren to be chief justice of the United States. Langer offered no details on the protests other than to say they were from individuals - not groups. The Langer committee may hold hearings before Congress convenes in January.

And Senator Ives, New York Republican, today was named acting chairman of a Senate labor subcommittee to study amendments to the Taft-Hartley law. This subcommittee was formerly headed by the late Senator Taft.

Gambler Frank Costello was released from a federal prison in Michigan today after serving one year for contempt of Congress. Costello, who said he was going to take a rest, faces an income tax case and a move to deport him. This was the first time he had served time in prison.

President Eisenhower's curt statement yesterday that no plan exists to reduce U.S. combat forces abroad will be more quieting to our Allies in NATO than if he had said the opposite. But it will not end anxiety on this subject. For our Allies know that the new Joint Chiefs of Staff have been re-assessing the nature of the American military effort under the spur of the Administration's search for economy. A reduction of forces abroad is no far-fetched concept.

When new ideas are being weighed at the top level in Washington, the public often gets to hear about them through off-the-record talks of high officials with special groups of correspondents. One idea now being publicized in this way is that the development of atomic weapons has gone so far that it might permit a reduction of combat forces generally, which would of course include Europe.

The United States is now paying for two arms programs, one atomic, the other conventional. Both programs are exceedingly costly. If duplication of effort could be avoided a lot of money would be saved. No wonder Republican leaders are interested. It appears that the new idea is to gear defense to atomic field weapons, and other new weapons, and to fight any future war in the field with these, at a great saving in manpower.

Until recently atomic energy has been thought of as being most useful in strategic bombing, where it could wipe out an enemy's city and defense potential. Atomic power so used can be so destructive that the threat of it is regarded as an effective deterrent to aggression. The possibility of strategic warfare naturally increased when the Soviet Union began making atomic bombs.

But if warfare is to be given a "new look," and atomic field weapons are to replace a large part of the manpower now used, it might be accompanied by a formal restriction of atomic weapons to field use, and a renunciation of it in strategic bombing. That is what some Washington correspondents hear.

This reporter recognizes that there can be a whale of a difference between an idea and a policy. The mention of a self-denying declaration renouncing strategic bombing is not to be taken too seriously as yet. But it is not too early to say two things about it. One is that this is what the Soviet Union has pressed for and we have resisted as being meaningless, that is, a renunciation of strategic bombing. The other is to point out that nothing can be more unrealistic than to expect any belligerent O the Soviet Union or this country, for that matter - if it was losing a great war, and possessed atomic bombs, not to try to avert defeat by using them.

Unless all future major wars can be guaranteed to end in a stalemate, they seem almost certain to end in all-out atomic warfare, as long as atomic weapons exist.

Another idea is reported in Washington. It is what is called the plate-glass window theory of the proper use of American combat forces overseas. It is under this theory that we keep a tiny token force in Berlin, as do the British and French. The substantial Soviet force in Berlin could wipe out these token forces in a few hours. But they don't do it. They know it would mean all-out war with strategic bombing. The proponents of the plate-glass window theory say that all we need to do to keep the peace is to put enough American soldiers in the show window in critical areas for the Kremlin to see them. Talk like this is another reason the Europeans are frightened that we may reduce our combat forces in Europe.

Obviously this idea has nothing to do with the atomic "new look." The plate-glass window theory only works if strategic bombing is left unrestricted. Europeans don't know what to think. If we are going to apply the plate-glass window theory, they are being left to do most of the ground fighting, even though we promised solemnly to bear our full share.

What may have been an important moment in East-West relations seems to have escaped wide notice. Andrei Vishinsky, at a luncheon of UN correspondents on Tuesday, stated the Soviet policy on inspection and control of atomic energy. The importance was not what Mr. Vishinsky said but what he did not say. For in stating the Soviet acceptance of strict, complete and effective atomic control on a permanent basis, so as to enforce the unconditional prohibition of atomic weapons, he did not mention the now famous Soviet conditions that have effectively blocked all progress on this issue. One condition is that inspectors be barred from interfering with internal affairs in the USSR which could be construed as paralyzing their efforts altogether. The other forbids so-called surprise inspections unless there is reason to suspect a violation. That would make of inspection pretty much of a meaningless formality.

The fact that Mr. Vishinsky did not repeat these conditions to U.N. correspondents does not prove that Soviet policy has changed. The omission may have been indadvertent, or a trick. But it does suggest the possibility. If the Soviet Union really wants to demonstrate good will in a search for better East-West relations, this would be a way to do it.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: This is a big world in which we live. And perhaps because we're separated from Europe by so many miles, it's sometimes difficult to realize our influence abroad. Progress in big things isn't always swift. But as Thomas Carlyle once said: "The work an unknown good man has done is like a vein of water flowing hidden underground, secretly making the ground green." Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday October 30 1953 ①

This is the NEWS —

It was announced tonight that the Nobel Peace Prize for 1953 will go to General of the Army George Marshall. This prize, created by a Swede who invented dynamite, is worth about thirty-three thousand dollars. Dr. Ralph Bunche was the last American to win it. Theodore Roosevelt won it in 1906.

General Marshall, who will be 73 in December, was Chief of Staff of the Army during the late war; after that Secretary of State for two years, and then Secretary of Defense. It may be assumed that he receives this award primarily for the plan that bears his name, the Marshall Plan - [which was actually devised by Dean Acheson] This Nobel Peace Prize was awarded by europeans, and they, better than the rest of us, know what the Marshall Plan meant. To many in this country it meant traditional American generosity; (to some, too much generosity;) but to Europe the Marshall Plan meant rescue from profound despair. It meant the first real hope of economic recovery and political stability. It meant salvation from misery, chaos and communism. The award of the Nobel Prize to General Marshall is a European appraisal of the service he rendered. Of all the single acts, of all the individual efforts aimed at peace by individuals the world over, the Nobel Committee chose George Marshall as the recipient of its highest award. It is possible that this may not be the judgment of history, but it is the present European estimate of the contribution made by an American soldier statesman.

Today President Eisenhower appeared to join the ranks of the pessimists regarding the possibility of any workable agreement with the Russians. Representative Zablocki of Wisconsin had written the President about the arrest of Cardinal Wiscinszki of Poland. The President replied that the arrest of the Cardinal was profoundly discouraging, and went on to say: "It is difficult to believe that the Communist governments intend to honor agreements which might be reached to reduce world tensions." The President added: "The calculated repression of all religious organisations in the Communist states makes it apparent that wherever Communists are in position to use force and violence, they will do so, in an effort to win domination not only over the body and mind of man but over his soul as well." The President was not only protesting the arrest of a Catholic leader in Poland, he was also taking the opportunity to say he didn't believe the Communists would abide by any agreement that might conceivably be reached between the Soviet Empire and the rest of the world.

Earlier today, our Ambassador to the UN, Henry Cabot Lodge, formally asked the United Nations for a full discussion of an American Army report of mass murder and torture by the Communists in Korea. The UN Assembly Steering Committee is expected to approve the move on Monday.

In Washington, General Dean - the highest ranking American officer to be captured in Korea - spoke at a National Press Club meeting. He said that in September of 1950...while a prisoner...the Communists (THREATENED TO DRIVE) splinters under his fingernails, (AND THEN) set the splinters on fire. At this point, the General said, he was "afraid that he might break"...that he might disclose "secret defense plans for Japan" that the Communists were anxious to get. He attempted suicide. But the plan failed.

~~Tonite, the Defense Department...following up its atrocity story of two days ago...released a documentary motion picture called, "POWs Who did Not Confess." It is a detailed report by four American officers and an enlisted man who were subjected to "Communist indoctrination"... questioning...beatings...and torture. One of the officers in the film says Russian observers frequently attended these sessions.~~

5

At the United Nations today, the Russians said that "reactionary circles" in this country are trying to fan the embers of a cold war. They accuse us of getting false testimony from returned prisoners of war, who claimed that the Communists got germ-warfare confessions by torture. For our part, we accused the Russians, of stepping up a "hate-mongering slander of the American people."

In Korea, Communists efforts to woo back reluctant prisoners of war ~~will be~~ ARE BEING resumed tonite. Anti-Communist North Koreans ~~will be~~ HAVE ENDED A 13-DAY PROTEST AGAINST BEING interviewed...but no Chinese, WILL ATTEND TONITE'S SESSION.

And another meeting is scheduled for tonite on arrangements for the proposed Korean peace conference.

Four weeks of talks between this country and the Japanese ended in Washington today. It was announced that agreement had been reached on the need for "increasing Japan's self-defense forces against the threat of aggression." We have offered to help the Japanese by supplying them with military equipment, surplus farm products, and a 50-million dollar food program. It was also agreed that strict controls be maintained on trade between Japan and Communist China until a political settlement is reached in Korea.

Here in New York, there are still no signs of an end to the 5-day old milk strike. But Mayor Impelleteri says he'll keep both sides locked in a room until an agreement is reached.

In Kansas City, a Federal Grand Jury has indicted the kidnappers of Bobby Greenlease. They face a possible death penalty.

The United States Information Service has been investigated, purged, economized and reorganized into something quite unrecognizable. Now, as the United States Information Agency, it has been fitted out with a new charter and presented for public approval. At his news conference on Wednesday President Eisenhower announced the policy for the agency and circulated the policy letter of its new head, Theodore C. Streibert. In comparison with the old policy the new one is to have the agency deal more with news and facts, and less with propaganda. The agency will report more and harangue less. Its objective will be to explain and interpret the policies of the United States. Mr. Streibert in his own news conference said an objective also is to attack Soviet expansionism. But the Voice of America in its broadcasts to the Russian people will concentrate ~~XXX~~ on factual news reporting and credibility. It is the satellite countries, Mr. Streibert said, which like to hear arguments against the Soviet Union and will get to do so.

This is a distinct change for the better, and it would be pleasant to be able to say: "all's well that ends well." But the drama of the Voice and the Information service is not a story with a happy ending. Government agencies can't be shot to pieces one month, and put together and serenely resume healthy functioning the next. The President and Mr. Streibert have expressed excellent intentions. But it is sure to be some time before they can be fulfilled.

For one thing, the personnel at the agency has been ~~decimated~~ depleted through resignations and dismissals, and some of its most capable professionals no longer are there. For another, the agency is still suffering from shock, for it has experienced not a little witch-hunting. Its employees still have no security in their jobs. They still can't be sure that the worker at the next desk is not an informer. So the places vacated by capable workers are not being filled by capable workers. The experience at this agency has stamped the United States Government as perhaps the worst employer in the country. A bad employer can't attract professionals who already enjoy status and security, and certainly not if he offers pay way below the market rate, as a government agency must.

Three basic changes have not yet been put through that would help the Voice and the Information Service to live up to their possibilities. One is to set up a rational relation between the agency and Congress. A weakness at the Voice has been the dread of Congressional criticism, which often came like buckshot without careful aim. Writers at the agency, instead of thinking what their foreign audience needed to know, tended to avoid using material that might draw fire from Congress. The ideal solution would be to set up a joint congressional committee, made up of members who know something about the subject and its problems. It should be given an adequate staff, and then should be able to exercise all the oversight needed.

Then the new agency must have enough money. The economizers this past year snuffed out most of the radio services to vast areas of the world, to concentrate on regions behind the Iron Curtain. But if the new directive means anything, the service must be available also to our friends and those whose friendship we stand a chance of winning. It will now be possible to do this effectively, since the emphasis is to be on news and authentic interpretation of policy, and not on the continuous propaganda that formerly bored well-disposed listeners. The funds for adequate service to Latin America, France, Italy, Britain, the Commonwealth and many other countries should be restored. And the service behind the Iron Curtain should be expanded.

A further essential change is in the nature of the control of the State Department over the agency's output. Technically the agency is out of the State Department and receives only policy guidance. If this can become the kind of guidance the B.B.C. receives from the British Foreign Office, it would be all right. The B.B.C. is advised, not ordered. The guidances for the Voice have been commands, down to the last detail as to what could and could not be said. The State Department has no training in the direction of a journalistic operation like the Information Service. It made a botch of it while the agency was in the department. Since then the guidances have been no less restrictive, and the agency feels it must slavishly obey them. It should be set free to function like a responsible news service.

This reporter, because he is a reporter, has unbounded faith in the persuasiveness of facts. He believes that facts well presented speak for themselves, and that the first function of any service giving information about the United States and its policies is to state the facts and state them well. Everything else in such a service should be secondary. Mr. Streibert says that that is to be the accent in the new agency. In this he has this reporter's hearty support. He only wishes Mr. Streibert might be working with an agency not still frightened out of its skin, and one staffed with news men who know what a first-class news job is, and feel free to do it.

We have been talking about the problems of getting our story across to those behind the Iron Curtain. It would seem that William Penn was right when he said:"Truth often suffers more by the heat of its defenders than from the arguments of its opposers." What we must always keep in mind is something Ralph Waldo Emerson once said:"A little fact can be worth a whole limbo of dreams."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday, Nov. 2, 1953

This is the news:

The United Nations Steering Committee has asked the General Assembly to consider America's charges of atrocities committed by the Communists in Korea. The committee voted 12 to two after Andrie Vishinsky called the charges--among other things- "half-mad nightmares, an invention, fabrications and a fairy tale." He said the whole matter was brought up to frustrate a peaceful settlement of the Korean question and international peace and security. But American Ambassador Lodge told the committee that a full airing of our charges was part of the great debt we owe "to the tragic memory of the victims of the atrocities." Lodge said: "Human affairs cannot be conducted on the basis of ignoring evil, of sweeping things under the rug." We have charged that 61-hundred Americans were among the 30-thousand allied prisoners who were tortured and murdered by the enemy in Korea.

In Korea today 500 North Korean prisoners agreed to face Communists who want to explain why the prisoners should go home. The men were [redacted] transferred from their stockade to the neutral compound without any [redacted] difficulties. [redacted]. And Ambassador Arthur Dean, after a frutiless week of trying to get the enemy to agree on an agenda for a peace conference, says the Communists are now "turning out propaganda" instead of negotiating with him on when and where the meetings should be held. The enemy insists on first deciding who should attend.

Reporters at Panmunjom were told today by a person they describe as "a highly reliable source", that 19 of the 22 Americans now prisoners of the enemy would like to come home..if they were not afraid of the consequences. This unidentified person says: there are only three hard-core Communists among the American prisoners. The rest have been frightened by stories of facing execution for treason..of being questioned by the F.B.I. and then "killed." The 19 Americans are described as "a bunch of scared kids." And this "highly responsible source" says that letters from home and friends would help as much as anything to erase the fear from the minds of these men.

In this country, Secretary of Agriculture Benson tonight told a meeting of southern governors that the Administration is going to ask the states to assume greater responsibility in stabilizing and promoting agriculture. Benson said that with this increased local leadership will go heavier financial responsibilities for the states. And in Washington the Secretary announced that he is putting into immediate effect, a controversial plan for re-shuffling the Department of Agriculture. Benson says this has the approval of the President. A major feature of the plan calls for abolishing seven regional federal offices of the Soil Conservation Service, and turning the function of these offices over to the states. Some Congressmen had asked the Secretary to hold up the plan, until a committee could investigate it. Many call today's action unwise.. and disappointing. Others think it was the proper thing to do at this time. Secretary Benson says the plan has "unusually wide approval and very little opposition."

At the Southern Governors Conference in Hot Springs, Virginia, Governor Talmadge of Georgia called on the Supreme Court to uphold segregation in the schools, and let the South solve its own racial problems. Talmadge, in a roundly applauded speech, said that a ruling against segregation would be "the most fool-hardy sociological calamity in our national history...nothing less than a major step towards national suicide."

And the western governors, meeting in Albuquerque, New Mexico, heard Arizona's Governor Pyle say, that the most momentous problems in its history face the "strategic western frontier of the most beset nation on earth." He said the question facing the West today is "How we can lend a helping hand rather than ask for a helping hand."

Former Defense Secretary Lovett told a Senate committee today that the armed forces could make "very rich savings" if they improved their book-keeping practises. Lovett said that no secretary can operate unless he knows where he stands.. on military finances, inventories, and such matters.

Air Force Secretary Talbott is now in Spain, were he told reporters in Madrid, that we plan to store atomic bomb at the new bases we are to acquire in Spain. Talbott and General Twining, the air force chief of staff, are studying sites for five American air bases.

West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer said today that the victory of his coalition in yesterday's Hamburg election, is a new endorsement of his plan to put a half million Germans into the planned European army. And the East German communist regime says it has sentenced to death the leader of an underground resistance group. Six other anti-Communists have been sentenced to long prison terms.

Official at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington reported today that the condition of General George C. Marshal is "good" and has improved since he was admitted to the hospital yesterday afternoon. The 72-year-old General Marshal, who was awarded the Nobel peace prize last week, is suffering from an inflamation of the right lung.

In Boston today a fire broke out in the hold of the Norwegian freighter "black Falcon" . At least twelve persons are known to have been burned to death.. all longshoremen.

Here in New York, Greek King Paul and Queen Frederika received the city's traditional welcome today with an estimated 750-thousand persons turning out to welcome them.

Tomorrow we elect a new mayor in this town to succeed Mayor Impellitteri. The candidates are Democrat--Bob Wagner Junior.. Republican, Harold Reigelman and Liberal Rudolph Halley.

And across the Hudson in New Jersey the voters will chose a new governor: Republican Paul L. Troast or Democrat Robert Minor.

And Virginia is ending its hottest general election race for governor in 24 years in a contest which may show whether the Republicans are making new gains in the once DEMOCRATIC solid South.

Edward R. Murrow: November 2, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

The Trieste crisis has apparently abated. Last week end the diplomats in Belgrade took their usual three days off. For the first time in 3 weeks, The announcement of a Five Power Conference on Trieste is expected soon.

Our new Ambassador to Belgrade, James Riddleburger, is now on his way to take up his new post. He faces one of the most difficult tasks in American diplomatic history, for he must try to pick up the pieces of American foreign policy as applied to Yugoslavia - pieces that were scattered in all directions by what practically everyone now admits was a badly timed, badly executed though not necessarily badly intended political move. Our handling of the Trieste situation must be regarded not as a calculated but as a miscalculated risk.

Tonight we are in a position to make some definitive estimate of what that miscalculation has cost us. Our first loss involves a considerable amount of valuable intelligence information - mainly military information about the Soviet Union and its satellites. The Yugoslavs aren't going to continue to supply us with that type of intelligence. The Yugoslavs have now been driven into a position of cool reserve toward the West. The actual words used in Belgrade are these: "Yugoslav neutrality will be like Indian neutrality."

The Anglo-American decision, from which we have had to back down, has changed the climate of public opinion in Yugoslavia. We are now regarded with scepticism and suspicion, while the British are openly reviled. Representative John Blatnik, Democrat from Minnesota, XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX who spent last week touring Slovenian villages -(he speaks the language)- found an active, almost panicky fear of war and another Italian invasion. And the last Italian occupation was not particularly pleasant.

Also as a result of the Trieste dispute the allied strategic position in ~~West~~ South Europe may have been weakened. Marshal Tito told a visitor last week that Trieste is unimportant in itself or as a port to either Italy or Yugoslavia. Its importance is that of the strategic gateway to Yugoslavia, and he wanted Yugoslavs and not Italians to defend the Trieste approaches to the Lubjyana gap, because the Yugoslavs would really defend.

Also Yugoslav relations with Greece and Turkey in the Regional Defense Pact may have been weakened. Greece and Turkey are NATO members, Yugoslavia is not; and the Yugoslavs are convinced, rightly or wrongly, that Italy has used the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation for blackmail, and to mask her aggressive XXXXXXXXXX intentions. This means inevitably that the Greek-Turkish-Yugoslav Balkan Pact will be slowed down, if it isn't completely derailed.

Competent observers in Belgrade are agreed that our attempt to settle the Trieste issue without consulting the Yugoslavs has ~~XXXXXXX~~ backfired, has in fact strengthened the hand of those elements in Yugoslavia who wish to creep back at least to the edge of the Kremlin fold. # Marshal Tito has said that he doesn't want the Russians involved in any way in the Trieste dispute. But it remains a fact that the Russians are the only ones who have gained any tangible results from the Trieste dispute. # If the Yugoslavs are neutral it means the equivalent of thirty-five divisions to the Russians, and it's worth more than that in terms of Moscow's relations with the satellite countries. For Moscow will use this in an effort to prove that Titoism doesn't pay, and that dependence on the good will and consistency of the West is a snare and delusion. Moreover, the losing or loosening of our relations with Yugoslavia doesn't automatically guarantee the winning of Italy, for the Italian internal situation is such that they may have to have more and more Triestes in order to stay in office. We may have saved Premier Pella from resigning, as he threatened to do, in October, so that he can resign in February or April.

Clearly we have paid a high price for thinking that we could dispose of Yugoslav interest in the Trieste area, without consulting them. / We have now agreed to consult in a Five Power Conference. / The Yugoslav attitude, as outlined here, is completely authoritative. / Part of it may be bluff - I do not know. But they have called our bluff, and the matter will now go to a Five Power Conference, (where obviously it should have gone in the beginning.) We have lost much and gained nothing, unless it be the belated realization that we cannot act as though we owned those nations that are associated with us, however tentative or tenuous that association may be. If our State Department has learned that lesson, perhaps the price has not been too high.

It would seem that we have not handled the Trieste situation in the best traditions of diplomacy. And we have discovered, as C.C. Colton concluded more than a hundred years ago that:"Ignorance is a blank sheet on which we may write, but error is a scribbled one from which we must first erase." But as Henry Ford once said:"Even a mistake may turn out to be the one thing necessary to a worthwhile achievement."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The United Nations Steering Committee has asked the General Assembly to consider America's charges of atrocities committed by the Communists in Korea. The committee voted 12 to 2 after Andrie Vishinsky called the charges - among other things" - half-mad nightmares, an invention, fabrications, and a fairy tale." He said the whole matter was brought up to frustrate a peaceful settlement of the Korean question and international peace and security. But American Ambassador Lodge told the committee that a full airing of our charges was part of the great debt we owe "to the tragic memory of the victims of the atrocities." Lodge said: "Human affairs cannot be conducted on the basis of ignoring evil, of sweeping things under the rug." We have charged that 61-hundred Americans were among the 30-thousand allied prisoners who were tortured and murdered by the enemy in Korea.

In Korea today 500 North Korean prisoners agreed to face Communists who want to explain why the prisoners should go home. The men were transferred from their stockade to the neutral compound without any difficulties. And Ambassador Arthur Dean, after a fruitless week of trying to get the enemy to agree on an agenda for a peace conference, says the Communists are now "turning out propaganda" instead of negotiating with him on when and where the meetings should be held. The enemy insists on first deciding who should attend.

Reporters at Panmunjom were told today by a person they describe as "a highly reliable source" that 19 of the 22 Americans now prisoners of the enemy would like to come hime if they were not afraid of the consequences. This unidentified person says: there are only three hard-core Communists among the American prisoners. The rest have been frightened by stories of facing execution for treason - of being questioned by the FBI and then "killed." The 19 Americans are described as "a bunch of scared kids." And this "highly responsible source" says that letters from home and friends would help as much as anything to erase the fear from the minds of these men.

In this country, Secretary of Agriculture Benson tonight told a meeting of southern governors that the Administration is going to ask the states to assume greater responsibility in stabilizing and promoting agriculture. Benson said that with this increased local leadership will go heavier financial responsibilities for the states. And in Washington the Secretary announced that he has the approval of the President. A major feature of the plan calls for abolishing seven regional federal offices of the Soil Conservation Service and turning the function of these offices over to the states. Some Congressmen had asked the Secretary to hold up the plan until a committee could investigate it. Many call today's action unwise - and disappointing. Others think it was the proper thing to do at this time. Secretary Benson says the plan has "unsuaully wide approval and very little oppositior

At the Southern Governors Conference in Hot Springs, Virginia, Governor Talmadge of Georgia called on the Supreme Court to uphold segregation in the schools and let the South solve its own racial problems. Talmadge, in a roundly applauded speech, said that a ruling against segregation would be "the most fool-hardy sociological calamity in our national history - nothing less than a major step towards national suicide."

And the western governors, meeting in Albuquerque, New Mexico, heard Arizona's Governor Pyle say that the most momentous problems in its history face the "strategic western frontier of the most beset nation on earth. He said the question facing the West today is "how we can lend a helping hand rather than ask for a helping hand?"

Former Defense Secretary Lovett told a Senate committee today that the armed forces could make "very rich savings" if they improved their book-keeping practices. Lovett said that no secretary can operate unless he knows where he stands - on military finances, inventories and such matters.

Air Force Secretary Talbott is now in Spain where he told reporters in Madrid that we plan to store atomic bomb at the new bases we are to acquire in Spain. Talbott and General Twining, the air force chief of staff, are studying sites for five American air bases.

West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer said today that the victory of his coalition in yesterday's Hamburg election is a new endorsement of his plan to put a half million Germans into the planned European army. And the East German communist regime says it has sentenced to death the leader of an underground resistance group. Six other anti-Communists have been sentenced to long prison terms.

Official at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington reported today that the condition of General George C. Marshal is "good" and has improved since he was admitted to the hospital yesterday afternoon. The 72-year-old General, who was awarded the Nobel peace prize last week, is suffering from an inflamation of the right lung.

In Boston today a fire broke out in the hold of the Norwegian freighter "black Falcon." At least 12 persons are known to have been burned to death - all longshoremen.

Here in New York, Greek King Paul and Queen Frederika received the city's traditional welcome today with an estimated 750-thousand persons turning out to welcome them.

Tomorrow we elect a new mayor in this town to succeed Mayor Impelliteri. The candidates are Democrat Bob Wagner Junior - Republican Harold Reigelman and Liberal Rudolph Halley.

And across the Hudson in New Jersey the voters will choose a new governor: Republican Paul L. Troast or Democrat Robert Minor.

And Virginia is ending its hottest general election race for governor in 24 years in a contest which may show whether the Republicans are making new gains in the once Democratic solid South.

The Trieste crisis has apparently abated. Last week end the diplomats in Belgrade took their usual three days off, for the first time in 3 weeks. The announcement of a Five Power Conference on Trieste is expected soon.

Our new Ambassador to Belgrade, James Riddleburger, is now on his way to take up his new post. He faces one of the most difficult tasks in American diplomatic history, for he must try to pick up the pieces of American foreign policy as applied to Yugoslavia - pieces that were scattered in all directions by what practically everyone now admits was a badly timed, badly executed though not necessarily badly intended political move. Our handling of the Trieste situation must be regarded not as a calculated but as a miscalculated risk.

Tonight we are in a position to make some definitive estimate of what that miscalculation has cost us. Our first loss involves a considerable amount of valuable intelligence information - mainly military information about the Soviet Union and its satellites. The Yugoslavs aren't going to continue to supply us with that type of intelligence. The Yugoslavs have now been driven into a position of cool reserve toward the West. The actual words used in Belgrade are these: "Yugoslav neutrality will be like Indian neutrality."

The Anglo-American decision, from which we have had to back down, has changed the climate of public opinion in Yugoslavia. We are now regarded with scepticism and suspicion, while the British are openly reviled. Representative John Blatnik, Democrat from Minnesota, who spent last week touring Slovenian villages (he speaks the language) found an active, almost panicky fear of war and another Italian invasion. And the last Italian occupation was not particularly pleasant.

Also as a result of the Trieste dispute the allied strategic position in South Europe may have been weakened. Marshal Tito told a visitor last week that Trieste is unimportant in itself or as a port to either Italy or Yugoslavia. Its importance is that of the strategic gateway to Yugoslavia, and he wanted Yugoslavs and not Italians to defend the Trieste approaches to the Lubjyana gap, because the Yugoslavs would really defend.

Also Yugoslav relations with Greece and Turkey in the Regional Defense Pact may have been weakened. Greece and Turkey are NATO members, Yugoslavia is not; and the Yugoslavs are convinced, rightly or wrongly, that Italy has used the North Atlantic Treaty Organization for blackmail, and to mask her aggressive intentions. This means inevitably that the Greek-Turkish-Yugoslav Balkan Pact will be slowed down, if it isn't completely derailed.

Competent observers in Belgrade are agreed that our attempt to settle the Trieste issue without consulting the Yugoslavs has backfired, has in fact strengthened the hand of those elements in Yugoslavia who wish to creep back at least to the edge of the Kremlin fold. Marshal Tito has said that he doesn't want the Russians involved in any way in the Trieste dispute. But it remains a fact that the Russians are the only ones who have gained any tangible results from the Trieste dispute. If the Yugoslavs are neutral it means the equivalent of thirty-five divisions to the Russians, and it's worth more than that in terms of Moscow's relations with the satellite countries. For Moscow will use this in an effort to prove that Titoism doesn't pay, and that dependence on the good will and consistency of the West is a snare and delusion. Moreover, the losing or loosening of our relations with Yugoslavia doesn't automitically guarantee the winning of Italy, for the Italian internal situation is such that they may have to have more and more Triestes in order to stay in office. We may have saved Premier Pella from resigning, as he threatened to do, in October, so that he can resign in February or April.

Clearly we have paid a high price for thinking that we could dispose of Yugoslav interest in the Trieste area, without consulting them. We have now agreed to consult in a Five Power Conference. The Yugoslav attitude, as outlined here, is completely authoritative. Part of it may be bluff - I don't know. But they have called our bluff, and the matter will now go to a Five Power Conference, where obviously it should have gone in the beginning. We have lost much and gained nothing, unless it be the belated realization that we cannot act as though we owned those nations that are associated with us, however tentative or tenuous that association may be. If our State Department has learned that lesson, perhaps the price has not been too high.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that we have not handled the Trieste situation in the best traditions of diplomacy. And we have discovered, as C.C. Colton concluded more than a hundred years ago that: "Ignorance is a blank sheet on which we may write, but error is a scribbled one from which we must first erase." But as Henry Ford once said: "Even a mistake may turn out to be the one thing necessary to a worthwhile achievement."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday Nov. 3, 1953

This is the news:

We are now receiving the first scattered returns from the major election contetests in New York City, New Jersey and Virginia.

Here in New York with 8 precincts reporting the vote for mayor runs this way:

Democrat Wagner... 2,000

Republican Reigelman... 16- HUNDRED

Liberal Halley..... 470

In New Jersey's race for governor the FIRST ABSENTEE BALLOTS SHOW:

[redacted]

[redacted]

Republican Paul L. Troast... 237

Democrat Robert Minor..... 118

And in Virginia's contest for governor scattered early returns show:

[redacted] Democrat Thomas B. Stanley..... 31- HUNDRED

Republican Theodore Dalton..... 19- HUNDRED

In London today, Prime Minister Churchill said he believes the danger of war has lessened..because the Russian people and their leaders have lost their stomach for aggression. In a speech to the House of Commons -- (which I'd like to review in a few minutes) Sir Winston said the Russians now realize, along with the rest of the world, that an atomic war would mean annihilation.

In Washington, Secretary of State Dulles told reporters "there is reason to fear" that the Communists are evading serious talks about any concrete subject involving global tensions.. in both Europe and the Far East.

And my colleague David Schoenbrun cables from Paris that Russia has now replied to the latest western note, requesting a Big Three meeting on Germany and Austria. The French say the Russians repeat their old proposals, in what amounts to a rejection of our suggestions.

In Korea, the Communists had more poor luck trying to convince North Korean prisoners of war to return home. In six hours of explanations, they convinced only 17 of 484 men to return to North Korea. Today they'll try to explain things to Chinese prisoners. And not far away at Panmunjom, American Ambassador Arthur Dean is still trying to convince the Communists to agree on the terms for a Korean peace conference. Dean has proposed a discussion of all points raised by both sides "with the understanding that no agreement will be final until we have a meeting of minds on all points." The enemy is considering this.

Two cabinet members, Secretary of State Dulles and Defense Secretary Wilson today denied that we have any plans to stockpile atomic bombs at American air bases in Spain. Yesterday, Air Force Secretary Talbott, who is visiting the sites for such bases in Spain, was reported to have told reporters that eventually we will have atomic bombs at these bases. Today, Talbott denied this statement.. said he never made it and never will make statements about atomic weapons. ~~Mr. Dulles authorized statement says: "We have no plans for stoping atomic weapons in Spain. In and when we have [illegible] plans for storing atomic weapons, we shall [illegible] publicly to the world and our potential enemy."~~

The Moscow Radio today claimed that Soviet scientists have created

"several types of atomic and hydrogen bombs."

At the United Nations today, Secretary General Hammershold said that a million dollar investigation of the loyalty of American employes of the U.N. has turned up no evidence against ~~any~~ such Americans. The investigation is almost 80 per cent completed.

In Washington, the President said today, in a statement for Education Week, that the great task of American teachers is "to guard with [redacted] devoted vigilance, the freedom of thought and discussion, which inspire free men to teach all men how to be free."

And the governing body of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, says there is now "a subtle but potent assault upon basic human rights" in this country. The church's General Council says congressional inquiries have tended to become "inquisitions." The council adds: "The shrine of conscience, and private judgement, which god alone has a right to enter, is being invaded."

~~Here in New York, Senator McCarthy says that a man believed to be Abraham Brothman... who served a prison term in the Rosenberg atomic espionage case, is now free and working for a private [illegible] plant. The Senator says [illegible] an employe of the plant in [illegible], New York.~~

~~says the Brethren now employed there is the same man who served a sentence on a conspiracy charge.~~

In Washington, Jane M. Hoey was fired as director of the Bureau of Public Assistance. She said her removal is "playing politics with poverty." But a spokesman for Secretary Oveta Culp Hobby of the Department of health, Education and Welfare, says Miss Hoey was removed because of the need for "an administration representative" in the policy-making post.

~~Republican Governor Beardsley of Iowa says it [illegible] Secretary of Agriculture B[illegible] some of the financial burden of [illegible] ing farmers. And at the Southern governors' conference at Hot Springs, a Republican [illegible]m governor.. McMeldin of Maryland, and a Democratic Governor of Texas, warned that the federal government is getting so big that democracy is threatened.~~

In Kansas City, Carl Austin Hall and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady have both pleaded guilty to federal ~~kidnapping~~ charges of kidnapping 6-year-old Bobby Greenlease.

Edward R. Murrow: November 3, 1953. (Swing) 7.45 p.m.

In the colorful opening of the new session of the British Parliament today, the limelight was shared by a highly popular young Queen and a venerable and revered Prime Minister. Queen Elizabeth is the youngest monarch to have opened Parliament since Queen Victoria, and Sir Winston Churchill is the oldest Prime Minister to have launched the debate on an Address from the Throne since Gladstone. The Queen in her robes and wearing the Imperial Crown added the charm of her young comeliness to an occasion that always delights the British with their predilection for the fullest pomp of tradition.

The Address from the Throne is a milestone in Britain's constitutional procedures. The Queen does not write it. It is drawn up by the Cabinet as a statement of what the government's policy is to be, then it is put into the archaic phraseology of a royal statement, and the monarch reads it as though it were her own idea. When the ceremony in the Lords is over, the House debates the address from the throne, and by the end of the evening Parliament knows what work is cut out for the session. In a sense it takes the place of the State of the Union message to our Congress, but with a more ~~xxxxxx~~ clearly defined legislative program.

Today's event was picturesque but routine. Sir Winston might have made two spectacular announcements, both of which have been predicted. He might have served notice he was going to Moscow on his own to sound out Premier Malenkov on the possibilities of reducing world tensions. And he might have told the Commons that a General Election was at hand. He did neither; it might be added, to the relief of his own Conservatives. The bulk of the opinion in his Party is against a meeting of the four heads of state. The Labor Opposition does want it, partly in the hope that such a meeting might be fruitful, but also because it would relish the sight of a divided Conservative Party. But Sir Winston did not divide his ranks or delight the Bevanites.

He said that he still hopes such a meeting might have a useful place in international contacts. "But on the other hand" he went on, "one must not overlook the risk of such a four-power conference ending in a still worse deadlock than there is at present." That phrase certainly reflects the thinking in Washington, and it also expresses what Foreign Secretary Eden fears. Sir Winston said it would be foolish to imagine there is any chance of making - straight away - a general settlement of all the cruel problems in East and West, in Germany and in all the satellite countries. "We are not likely" he said, "to get them laid to rest as great dangers and evils by personal meetings, however friendly. Time undoubtedly will be needed" he said solemnly, looking carefully over the whole House, "more time than some of us here are likely to see." Sir Winston did give the House his reason for wishing a conference. It is that the Soviet leaders may recognize it is in their interest to turn their attention to internal prosperity. The only sure guide to the actions of a mighty nation, he pointed out, is a correct estimate of its own interests. "Applying that test" he said, "I feel a sense of reassurance. Studying our own strength, and that of Europe, under the massive American shield, I do not find it unreasonable or dangerous to conclude that internal prosperity, rather than external conquest, is not only the deep desire of the XXXXXXXXXX Russian peoples, but also the long interest of their rulers."

Sir Winston believes there has been a diminution of tension, and said that the probabilities of another war have diminished, or at least become more remote. And he coined a characteristic Churchillian phrase to sum up the effect on the future of atomic weapons. "I sometimes have an awed thought" he said, "that the annihilating character of these agencies may bring an utterly unforeseen security to mankind. When the advance of destructive weapons enables everyone to kill everybody else, nobody will want to kill anybody at all."

It would have come as a great surprise had Sir Winston announced an early election. There had been talk of it before the Coronation, with the idea that that event might produce a great swing to tradition. But it didn't, and public opinion polls show Conservative popularity somewhat waning. So, Sir Winston today asserted his faith in ~~the quinquennial~~ ~~that~~, the law which provides for elections every five years. He left a loophole, the possibility of an extraordinary situation making an election either ~~[illegible]~~ compelling or desirable. But otherwise members will not have to break off their work, to fight for their seats. And that certainty brings relief to a good many, who do not care to risk their jobs in the changing tides of public opinion.

The only unexpected announcement of the day was that the effort is to be renewed to complete the reform of the House of Lords. What is projected, is an Upper House where hereditary membership is abolished, and members are appointed, either from inside the peerage or outside it, for reasons of personal distinction; and where women can sit with the men. It also will be proposed that peers not appointed to the Lords, can be candidates for seats in the House of Commons. The reform would end the existence of the House of Lords as a closed corporation of aristocracy. ~~But it also might~~

Mr. Clement Attlee, the Leader of the Opposition, was not impressed by the Government's promise to consider reforming the House of Lords. He said governments have been considering that for 41 years, "so a year or two more won't do any harm." Mr. Attlee, of course, failed to mention that during the six years the Labor Party was in power, nothing was done about altering the status of the House of Lords. Maybe it all goes to prove that both Parties in England believe in the "inevitability of gradualness."

Sir Winston Churchill has lived the "full life." And perhaps because he has, his appreciation of both time and patience in world affairs is considerable. Sir Winston, it would seem, is in agreement with two ancients - Es-ki-lus and Pericles. They once concluded: "Time as he grows old teaches many lessons...to be ruled by time is to be ruled by the wisest counsellor of all."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Aeschylus

ES

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

We are now receiving the first scattered returns from the major election contests in New York City, New Jersey and Virginia.

Here in New York with 8 precincts reporting the vote for mayor runs this way:

Democrat, Wagner - 2,000

Republican, Reigelman - 16 hundred

Liberal, Halley - 470

In New Jersey's race for governor the first absentee ballots show:

Republican, Paul L. Troas - 237

Democrat, Robert Minor - 118

And in Virginia's contest for governor scattered early returns show:

Democrat Thomas B. Stanley - 31 hundred

Republican Theodore Dalton - 19 hundred

In London today, Prime Minister Churchill said he believes the danger of war has lessened because the Russian people and their leaders have lost their stomach for aggression. In a speech to the House of Commons (which I'd like to review in a few minutes) Sir Winston said the Russians now realize, along with the rest of the world, that an atomic war would mean annihilation.

In Washington, Secretary of State Dulles told reporters "there is reason to fear" that the Communists are evading serious talks about any concrete subject involving global tensions - in both Europe and the Far East.

And my colleague David Schoenbrun cables from Paris that Russia has now replied to the latest western note requesting a Big Three meeting on Germany and Austria. The French say the Russians repeat their old proposals in what amounts to a rejection of our suggestions.

In Korea the Communists had more poor luck trying to convince North Korean prisoners of war to return home. In six hours of explanations they convinced only 17 of 484 men to return to North Korea. Today they'll try to explain things to Chinese prisoners. And not far away at Panmunjom, American Ambassador Arthur Dean is still trying to convince the Communists to agree on the terms for a Korean peace conference. Dean has proposed a discussion of all points raised by both sides "with the understanding that no agreement will be final until we have a meeting of minds on all points." The enemy is considering this.

Two cabinet members, Secretary of State Dulles and Defense Secretary Wilson today denied that we have any plans to stockpile atomic bombs at American air bases in Spain. Yesterday, Air Force Secretary Talbott, who is visiting the sites for such bases in Spain was reported to have told reporters that eventually we will have atomic bombs at these bases. Today, Talbott denied this statement - said he never made it and never will make statements about atomic weapons.

The Moscow Radio today claimed that Soviet scientists have created "several types of atomic and hydrogen bombs."

At the United Nations today, Secretary General Hammershold said that a million dollar investigation of the loyalty of American employees of the U.N. has turned up no evidence against any such Americans. The investigation is almost 80 percent completed.

In Washington, the President said today, in a statement for Education Week, that the great task of American teachers is "to guard with devoted vigilance the freedom of thought and discussion which inspire free men to teach all men how to be free."

And the governing body of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America says there is now "a subtle but potent assault upon basic human rights" in this country. The church's General Council says congressional inquiries have tended to become "inquisitions." The council adds: "The shrine of conscience and private judgement, which God alone has a right to enter, is being invaded.

In Washington, Jane M. Hooey was fired as director of the Bureau of Public Assistance. She said her removal is "playing politics with poverty." But a spokesman for Secretary Oveta Culp Hobby of the Department of health, Education and Welfare, says Miss Hooey was removed because of the need for "an administration representative" in the policy-making post.

In Kansas City, Carl Austin Hall and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady have both pleaded guilty to federal charges of kidnapping 6-year-old Bobby Greenlease.

In the colorful opening of the new session of the British Parliament today, the limelight was shared by a highly popular young Queen and a venerable and revered Prime Minister. Queen Elizabeth is the youngest monarch to have opened Parliament since Queen Victoria, and Sir Winston Churchill is the oldest Prime Minister to have launched the debate on an Address from the Throne since Gladstone. The Queen in her robes and wearing the Imperial Crown added th charm of her young comeliness to an occasion that always delights the British with their predilection for the fullest pomp of tradition.

The address from the Throne is a milestone in Britain's constitutional procedures. The Queen does not write it. It is drawn up by the Cabinet, as a statement of what the government's policy is to be, then it is put into the archaic phraseology of a royal statement, and the monarch reads it as though it were her own idea. When the ceremony in the Lords is over, the House debates the address from the throne, and by the end of the evening Parliament knows what work is cut out for the session. In a sense it takes the place of the State of the Union message to our Congress, but with a more clearly defined legislative program.

Today's event was picturesque but routine. Sir Winston might have made two spectacular announcements, both of which have been predicted. He might have served notice he was going to Moscow on his own to sound out Premier Malenkov on the possibilities of reducing world tensions. And he might have told the Commons that a General Election was at hand. He did neither; it might be added, to the relief of his own Conservatives. The bulk of the opinion in his Party is against a meeting of the four heads of state. The Labor Opposition does want it, partly in the hope that such a meeting might be fruitful, but also because it would relish the sight of a divided Conservative Party. But Sir Winston did not divide his ranks or delight the Bevanites.

He said that he still hopes such a meeting might have a useful place in international contacts. "But on the other hand" he went on, "one must not overlook the risk of such a four-power conference ending in a still worse deadlock than there is at present." That phrase certainly reflects the thinking in Washington, and it also expresses what Foreign Secretary Eden fears. Sir Winston said it would be foolish to imagine there is any chance of making - straight away - a general settlement of all the cruel problems in East and West, in Germany and in all the satellite countries. "We are not likely" he said, "to get them laid to rest as great dangers and evils by personal meetings, however friendly. Time undoubtedly will be needed" he said solemnly, looking carefully over the whole House, "more time than some of us here are likely to see." Sir Winston did give the House his reason for wishing a conference. It is that the Soviet leaders may recognize it is in their interest to turn their attention to internal prosperity. The only sure guide to the actions of a mighty nation, he pointed out, is a correct estimate of its own interests. "Applying that test" he said, "I feel a sense of reassurance. Studying our own strength, and that of Europe, under the massive American shield, I do not find it unreasonable or dangerous to conclude that internal prosperity rather than external conquest, is not only the deep desire of the Russian peoples, but also the long interest of their rulers."

Sir Winston believes there has been a diminution of tension, and said that the probabilities of another war have diminished, or at least become more remote. And he coined a characteristic Churchillian phrase to sum up the effect on the future of atomic weapons. "I sometimes have an awed thought" he said, "that the annihilating character of these agencies may bring an utterly unforeseen security to mankind. When the advance of destructive weapons enables everyone to kill everybody else, nobody will want to kill anybody at all."

It would have come as a great surprise had Sir Winston announced an early election. There had been talk of it before the Coronation, with the idea that that event might produce a great swing to tradition. But it didn't, and public opinion polls show Conservative popularity somewhat waning. So, Sir Winston today asserted his faith in the law which provides for elections every five years. He left a loophole, the possibility of an extraordinary situation making an election either compelling or desirable. But otherwise members will not have to break off their work to fight for their seats. And that certainty brings relief to a good many who do not care to risk their jobs in the changing tides of public opinion.

The only unexpected announcement of the day was that the effort is to be renewed to complete the reform of the House of Lords. What is projected is an Upper House where hereditary membership is abolished and members are appointed, either from inside the peerage or outside it, for reasons of personal distinction; and where women can sit with the men. It also will be proposed that peers not appointed to the Lords can be candidates for seats in the House of Commons. The reform would end the existence of the House of Lords as a closed corporation of aristocracy.

Mr. Clement Attlee, the Leader of the Opposition, was not impressed by the Government's promise to consider reforming the House of Lords. He said governments have been considering that for 41 years, "so a year or two more won't do any harm." Mr. Attlee, of course, failed to mention that during the six years the Labor Party was in power nothing was done about altering the status of the House of Lords. Maybe it all goes to prove that both Parties in England believe in the "inevitability of gradualness."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Sir Winston Churchill has lived the "full life." And perhaps because he has his appreciation of both time and patience in world affairs is considerable. Sir Winston, it would seem, is in agreement with two ancients, Aeschylus and Pericles. They once concluded: "Time as he grows old, teaches many lessons:to be ruled by time is to be ruled by the wisest counsellor of all." Good Night and Good Luck!

(1) Wednesday, Nov. 4, 1953

Good Evening

The President said today that he's not completely pleased by yesterday's election results. But..he told White House reporters:"I've lost skirmishes before". When Mr. Eisenhower met with the newsmen he was prepared for their questions on the election returns: in New Jersey where a Democrat, Robert Meyner, became the state's first Democratic governor in 10 years. And in New Jersey's 6th congressional district where a political newcomer, Democrat Harrison Williams, Junior, became the first member of his party chosen there (the district was organized + ~~elected~~) for congress since ~~1952~~. Williams had campaigned on a promise to follow the record of former Representative Clifford Case, a liberal Republican who resigned. Both these New Jersey results were upsets. And the congressional victory for the Democrats now leaves ~~them~~ (them) ~~Democrats~~ only two seats short of the Republican strength in the House of representatives.

Here in New York, Democrat Bob Wagner, son of the late Senator, defeated his Republican and Liberal opponents running by a plurality of 360-thousand. And in Virginia the Democrats continued their control with Theodore B. Stanley beating his Republican opponent for governor.

So..Mr. Eisenhower anticipated the questions and had answers. ~~He has lost skirmishes before.~~ He feels the political climate will change before the 1954 congressional election after the people have had a chance to inspect the legislative program he will present to the Congress in January. ~~The President says he has great faith in the common sense of the American people when they are informed.~~ He was asked about a statement by Republican Representative Brown of Ohio that: "The people voted for a change in 1952 and they don't feel they got it." The President said: he thinks the people want an orderly and progressive change and they will get it.

Among most Republican leaders there was no effort to minimize yesterday's election results. ~~on top of the recent Democratic congressional victory in Wisconsin.~~ Party Chairman Hall said bluntly: "As of today we are in trouble politically." But Hall too suggested that the Republican outlook will improve when Congress acts on the Administration program. Some Republicans, like Chairman Reed of the Ways and Means Committee, made it clear they feel people are dissatisfied with what the Administration has done. Reed referred particularly to the way his efforts to cut taxes had been brushed aside. Among the Democrats there was almost unanimous public chortling. National Chairman Mitchell said: "We are on the march." Former President Truman is happy. Former presidential candidate Stevenson thinks "the fruit of Republican promises and performance is dissatisfaction, disillusion and defeat."

At his news conference, the President announced that the Russians have rejected western proposals for an early conference on Germany and Austria. ~~The President~~ He said the latest Soviet note indicates that they want to "create as many difficulties as possible to prevent a meeting of the Big Four powers." He says the Russians are doing this by injecting impossible conditions.. regarding the European defense community.. the North Atlantic system of collective security and the position of Red China. The President says the Russians have no intention to get together with us. ~~but rather want to create as many difficulties as possible.~~

In Korea today, the Communists will again try to persuade Chinese prisoners to return home. In their last effort the enemy managed to convince only three of the 205 they "explained" things to.. and one of the three was held back by the neutral Indians for a sanity test. The enemy "explainers" dragged on their arguments so long that some American and Swiss obervers left some of the questioning groups in angry protest. Allied officers call the Communist tactics "brainwashing."

American Ambassador Arthur Dean is still trying to get the enemy to agree on the time and place for a peace conference. But the Communists told him he has failed to advance anything useful to get the conference underway. Dean tells reporters: "I am a very patient man."

And South Korean President Rhee has told American reporters in Korea he will not permit India to attend the peace conference unless the Indians join the table as "a Communist state...never, as a neutral." Rhee also says again he will try to drive the enemy out of North Korea if the peace conference fails to unify all of Korea.

In Sweden today the Nobel prize for physics went to Dr. Frederick Zernike, a Dutch scientist who invented a new micropscope. And the chemistry prize was awarded to Dr. Hermann Staudinger, a German, who did pioneer research leading to the production of nylon stockings and synthetic rubber.

off at 5:00

And now here is Edward R. Murrow's recorded report from an aircraft carrier in the Atlantic:

.5

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Wednesday, November 4, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

ANNOUNCER: (C O M M E R C I A L) ... And, now, here is Edward R. Murrow.

MURROW: This is the news! Tonight I'm on an aircraft carrier off the east coast, so tonight's report will be made by my old friend and colleague, Raymond Swing. I will attempt to report later direct from the carrier.

SWING: Good Evening! ... And, now, here's Ed. R. Murrow's recorded report from an aircraft carrier in the Atlantic.

MURROW: We're about a hundred and fifty miles off the east coast, on the aircraft carrier Gilbert Islands, commanded by Commodore Mitchell? Lee. This is what's known as a "killer group," fourteen aircraft, four helicopters, five destroyers. We've been chasing a submarine, American submarine, of course, and we're surrounded by electronic gear beyond description or understanding. We watched helicopters hovering overthe water, dropping a line with a special shoreline? listening gear; listening under the water from a submarine, then dropping smoke flares to make the spot, calling in the bombers and, later, the destroyers come knifing through the clear green water plowing a huge white-edged furrow. If war comes, we can't win unless we control the vital sea. It seems to me that the possibility of atomic attack on our cities, has caused some of us to forget the fact, forget too, that guided missiles - launched from enemy submarines- could likewise devastate our cities and ports.

As I understand it, what's going on out here in the Atlantic is part of the unending struggle between attack and defense. It's a struggle that's being fought in the laboratories, on drawing boards, and, the results are tested out here on the ocean.

One of the great privileges of a reporter is to spend time with the fliers, who're out here trying to work out the problem; trying to be ready today and also figuring out what must be ready by next year and the year after. They're special kind of people. I spent most of the afternoon flying in a helicopter, making a film for television and in the course of it, I gained some superficial knowledge of this exercise. But I'm going to take this opportunity to put some questions to an expert, Commodore Fetcher Lee. Commodore, what exactly isa "killer group"?

LEE: Mr. Murrow, you've already described it; it's simply a spot? aircraft carrier, a group of ships, and the planes, x helicopters, which together, form a team, which can hunt out wherever we can find it, the submarines which may menace our security.

MURROW: Well, sir, why couldn't this job be done by land-based aircraft?

LEE: It could, and is very frequently. We use blimks? and helicopters as well as long-ranged land-based air ... in the areas where we have the bases, but in lots of places in the ocean you don't have bases, except a mobile base like ours here, at sea - we can move it anywhere that the enemy starts working in x submarines, and we can maintain it there for weeks and months at a time, that's the reason we have to have this part of the overall team, the "hunter-killer group."

MURROW: Well, sir, your mission here is to find and kill submarines. In case of war, just how substantial is the Russian submarine threat?

LEE: Well, I would say it's very considerable, very considerable. Hitler started off World War II with about fifty-five or six submarines. We think the Russians have around three hundred and fifty at the present time. Hitler almost won the battle of the Atlantic; the outcome of World War II hung in the balance for months on the struggle between Hitler's submarines and the millions of men, thousands of planes and ships that we put into the struggle against him. The Russians can certainly profit by Hitler's lessons; and I remember one of his quotations, - Hitler said to his admirals, "It is incomparably more efficient to think enemy material at sea than to fight personnel and its weapons after it's been unloaded on land."

MURROW: Well, sir, in case of war with Russia, couldn't we bottle up their submarines in the Baltic and the Black Sea and prevent them from ever reaching the Atlantic?

LEE: Well, we didn't bottle up Hitler in the Baltic. He was operating his submarines out of western France. (laughter)

MURROW: Well, that's a complete and conclusive answer, I would say. I'd like to put to you, Commodore, one final question: What would happen in a war if we should lose command of the Atlantic?

LEE: I don't know how anybody is going to ~~predict~~ predict how any war is going to come out or what's going to happen in war. When World War II started few Americans had ever heard of such places as Guadacanal and Iwo Jima and ...? Nobody ever thought that we would be fighting a crucial battle such as the battle of Midway, in the middle of the Pacific, or the Coral Sea in the southwest Pacific, or in Northern Africa. I think, however that America's security depends in large measure on her ability to move men and materials across the seas, to do the job wherever it is. The Atlantic is certainly the incompellable highway of the globe as concerns any future military action. If we lose the Atlantic, I think we'll lose the war.

MURROW: Thank you very much, indeed, Commodore Fetcher Lee. We've been speaking to you from the carrier, Gilbert Islands.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today. Now, here's Bob Dixon.

ANNOUNCER: ... (C O M M E R C I A L) ... That's my word for today. And here's Mr. Murrow with his word for today.

MURROW: After spending some time with the men who service and fly the planes from the deck of an aircraft carrier, one can't help being reminded of something the Roman (~~indistinct~~ Plautus) once wrote: "Courage stands before everything; it is what preserves our liberty, safety, life and our homes and (indistinct) our country and our children. Courage comprises all things. A man with courage has every blessing. Good Night and Good Luck.

ANNOUNCER: (C O M M E R C I A L) ... Listen to Murrow - tomorrow!

THIS IS THE CBS ... RADIO NETWORK.

Ed. trans. P. O.

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Wednesday, November 4, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

ANNOUNCER: (C O M M E R C I A L) ... And, now, here is Edward R. Murrow.

MURROW: This is the news! Tonight I'm on an aircraft carrier off the east coast, so tonight's report will be made by my old friend and colleague, Raymond Swing. I will attempt to report later direct from the carrier.

SWING: Good Evening! ... And, now, here's Ed. R. Murrow's recorded report from an aircraft carrier in the Atlantic.

MURROW: We're about a hundred and fifty miles off the east coast, on the aircraft carrier Gilbert Islands, commanded by Commodore Mitchell? Lee. This is what's known as a "killer group," fourteen aircraft, four helicopters, five destroyers. We've been chasing a submarine, American submarine, of course, and we're surrounded by electronic gear beyond description or understanding. We watched helicopters hovering overthe water, dropping a line with a special shoreline? listening gear; listening under the water from a submarine, then dropping smoke flares to make the spot, calling in the bombers and, later, the destroyers come knifing through the clear green water plowing a huge white-edged furrow. If war comes, we can't win unless we control the vital sea. It seems to me that the possibility of atomic attack on our cities, has caused some of us to forget the fact, forget too, that guided missiles - launched from enemy submarines - could likewise devastate our cities and ports.

As I understand it, what's going on out here in the Atlantic is part of the unending struggle between attack and defense. It's a struggle that's being fought in the laboratories, on drawing boards, and, the results are tested out here on the ocean.

One of the great privileges of a reporter is to spend time with the fliers, who're out here trying to work out the problem; trying to be ready today and also figuring out what must be ready by next year and the year after. They're special kind of people. I spent most of the afternoon flying in a helicopter, making a film for television and in the course of it, I gained some superficial knowledge of this exercise. But I'm going to take this opportunity to put some questions to an expert, Commodore Fetcher Lee. Commodore, what exactly isa "killer group"?

LEE: Mr. Murrow, you've already described it; it's simply a spot? aircraft carrier, a group of ships, and the planes, x helicopters, which together, form a team, which can hunt out wherever we can find it, the submarines which may menace our security.

MURROW: Well, sir, why couldn't this job be done by land-based aircraft?

LEE: It could, and is very frequently. We use blimps? and helicopters as well as long-ranged land-based air ... in the areas where we have the bases, but in lots of places in the ocean you don't have bases, except a mobile base like ours here, at sea - we can move it anywhere that the enemy starts working in x submarines and we can maintain it there for weeks and months at a time, that's the reason we have to have this part of the overall team, the "hunter-killer group."

MURROW: Well, sir, your mission here is to find and kill submarines. In case of war, just how substantial is the Russian submarine threat?

LEE: Well, I would say it's very considerable, very considerable. Hitler started off World War II with about fifty-five or six submarines. We think the Russians have around three hundred and fifty at the present time. Hitler almost won the battle of the Atlantic; the outcome of World War II hung in the balance for months on the struggle between Hitler's submarines and the millions of men, thousands of planes and ships that we put into the struggle against him. The Russians can certainly profit by Hitler's lessons; and I remember one of his quotations, - Hitler said to his admirals, "It is incomparably more efficient to think enemy material at sea than to fight personnel and its weapons after it's been unloaded on land."

MURROW: Well, sir, in case of war with Russia, couldn't we bottle up their submarines in the Baltic and the Black Sea and prevent them from ever reaching the Atlantic?

LEE: Well, we didn't bottle up Hitler in the Baltic. He was operating his submarines out of western France. (laughter)

MURROW: Well, that's a complete and conclusive answer, I would say. I'd like to put to you, Commodore, one final question: What would happen in a war if we should lose command of the Atlantic?

LEE: I don't know how anybody is going to ~~[illegible]~~ predict how any war is going to come out or what's going to happen in war. When World War II started few Americans had ever heard of such places as Guadacanal and Iwo Jima and ...? Nobody ever thought that we would be fighting a crucial battle such as the battle of Midway, in the middle of the Pacific, or the Coral Sea in the southwest Pacific, or in Northern Africa. I think, however that America's security depends in large measure on her ability to move men and materials across the seas, to do the job wherever it is. The Atlantic is certainly the incompellable highway of the globe as concerns any future military action. If we lose the Atlantic, I think we'll lose the war.

MURROW: Thank you very much, indeed, Commodore Fetcher Lee. We've been speaking to you from the carrier, Gilbert Islands.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today. Now, here's Bob Dixon.

ANNOUNCER: ... (C O M M E R C I A L) ... That's my word for today. And here's Mr. Murrow with his word for today.

MURROW: After spending some time with the men who service and fly the planes from the deck of an aircraft carrier, one can't help being reminded of something the Roman (indistinct) once wrote: "Courage stands before everything; it is what preserves our liberty, safety, life and our homes and (indistinct) our country and our children. Courage comprises all things. A man with courage has every blessing. Good Night and Good Luck.

ANNOUNCER: (C O M M E R C I A L) ... Listen to Murrow - tomorrow!

THIS IS THE CBS ... RADIO NETWORK.

Ed. trans. P. O.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening:

The President said today that he's not completely pleased by yesterday's election results. But, he told White House reporters: "I've lost skirmishes before." When Mr. Eisenhower met with the newsmen he was prepared for their questions on the election returns: in New Jersey where a Democrat, Robert Meyner, became the state's first Democratic governor in 10 years. And in New Jersey's 6th congressional district where a political newcomer, Democrat Harrison Williams, Junior, became the first member of his party chosen there for Congress since the district was organized. Williams had campaigned on a promise to follow the record of former Representative Clifford Case, a liberal Republican who resigned. Both these New Jersey results were upsets. And the congressional victory for the Democrats now leaves them only two seats short of the Republican strength in the House of representatives.

Here in New York, Democrat Bob Wagner, son of the late Senator, defeated his Republican and Liberal opponents winning by a plurality of 360-thousand. And in Virginia the Democrats continued their control with Theodore B. Stanley beating his Republican opponent for governor.

So, Mr. Eisenhower anticipated the questions and had answers. He has lost skirmishes before. He feels the political climate will change before the 1954 congressional election; after the people have had a chance to inspect the legislative program he will present to the Congress in January. The President says he has great faith in the common sense of the American people when they are informed. He was asked about a statement by Republican Representative Brown of Ohio that: "The people voted for a change in 1952 and they don't feel they got it." The President said: he thinks the people want an orderly and progressive change and they will get it.

Among most Republican leaders there was no effort to minimize yesterday's election results on top of the recent Democratic congressional victory in Wisconsin. Party Chairman Hall said bluntly: "As of today we are in trouble politically." But Hall too suggested that the Republican outlook will improve when Congress acts on the Administration program. Some Republicans like Chairman Reed of the Ways and Means Committee, made it clear they feel people are dissastified with what the Administration has done. Reed particularly referred to the way his efforts to cut taxes had been brushed aside. Among the Democrats there was almost unanimous public chortling. National Chairman Mitchell said: "We are on the march." Former President Truman is happy. Former presidential candidate Stevenson thinks "the fruit of Republican promises and performance is dissatisfaction, disillusion and defeat."

At his news conference, the President announced that the Russians have rejected western proposals for an early conference on Germany and Austria. He said the latest Soviet note indicates that they want to "create as many difficulties as possible to prevent a meeting of the Big Four powers." He says the Russians are doing this by injecting impossible conditions regarding the European defense community - the North Atlantic system of collective security and the position of Red China. The President says the Russians have no intention to get together with us.

In Korea today, the Communists will again try to persuade Chinese prisoners to return home. In their last effort the enemy managed to convince only three of the 205 they "explained" things to and one of the three was held back by the neutral Indians for a sanity test. The enemy "explainers" dragged on their arguments so long that some American and Swiss observers left some of the questioning groups in angry protest. Allied officers call the Communist tactics "brainwashing."

American Ambassador Arthur Dean is still trying to get the enemy to agree on the time and place for a peace conference. But the Communists told him he has failed to advance anything useful to get the conference underway. Dean tells reporters: "I am a very patient man."

And South Korean President Rhee has told American reporters in Korea he will not permit India to join the table as "a Communist state - never, as a neutral." Rhee also says again he will try to drive the enemy out of North Korea if the peace conference fails to unify all of Korea.

In Sweden today the Nobel prize for physics went to Dr. Ferederick Zernike, a Dutch scientist who invented a new microscope. And the chemistry prize was awarded to Dr. Hermann Staudinger, a German, who did pioneer research leading to the production of nylon stockings and synthetic rubber.

And now here is Edward R. Murrow's recorded report from an aircraft carrier in the Atlantic:

MURROW: We're about a hundred and fifty miles off the east coast, on the aircraft carrier Gilbert Islands, commanded by Commodore Mitchell Lee. This is what's known as a "killer group," fourteen aircraft, four helicopters, five destroyers. We've been chasing a submarine, American submarine, of course, and we're surrounded by electronic gear beyond description or understanding. We watched helicopters hovering over the water, dropping a line with a special shoreline listening gear; listening under the water from a submarine, then dropping smoke flares to make the spot, calling in the bombers and later, the destroyers come knifing through the clear green water plowing a huge white-edged furrow. If war comes, we can't win unless we control the vital sea. It seems to me that the possibility of atomic attack on our cities, has caused some of us to forget the fact, forget too, that guided missiles - launched from enemy submarines could likewise devastate our cities and ports.

As I understand it, what's going on out here in the Atlantic is part of the unending struggle between attack and defense. It's a struggle that's being fought in the laboratories, on drawing boards, and, the results are tested out here on the ocean.

One of the great privileges of a reporter is to spend time with the fliers, who're out here trying to work out the problem; trying to be ready today and also figuring out what must be ready by next year and the year after. They're special kind of people. I spent most of the afternoon flying in a helicopter, making a film for television and in the course of it, I gained some superficial knowledge of this exercise. But I'm going to take this opportunity to put some questions to an expert, Commodore Lee. Commodre, what exactly is a "killer group"?

LEE: Mr. Murrow, you've already described it; it's simply a spot aircraft carrier, a group of ships, and the planes, helicopters, which together, form a team, which can hunt out wherever we can find it, the submarines which may menace our security.

MURROW: Well, sir, why couldn't this job be done by land-based aircraft?

LEE: It could, and is very frequently. We use blinks and helicopters as well as long-ranged land-based air - in the areas where we have the bases, but in lots of places in the ocean you don't have bases, except a mobile base like ours here, at sea - we can move it anywhere that the enemy starts working in submarines, and we can maintain it there for weeks and months at a time, that's the reason we have to have this part of the overall team, the "hunter-killer group."

MURROW: Well, sir, your mission here is to find and kill submarines. In case of war, just how substantial is the Russian submarine threat?

LEE: Well, I would say it's very considerable, very considerable. Hitler started off World War II with about fifty-five or six submarines. We think the Russians have around three hundred and fifty at the present time. Hitler almost won the battle of the Atlantic; the outcome of world war II hung in the balance for months on the struggle between Hitler's submarines and the millions of men, thousands of planes and ships that we put into the struggle against him. The Russians can certainly profit by Hitler's lessons; and I remember one of his quotations, - Hitler said to his admirals, "it is incomparable more efficient to sink enemy material at sea than to fight personnel and its weapons after it's been unloaded on land."

MURROW: Well, sir, in case of war with Russia, couldn't we bottle up their submarines in the Baltic and the Black Seas and prevent them from ever reaching the Atlantic?

LEE: Well, we didn't bottle up Hitler in the Baltic. He was operating his submarines out of western France.

MURROW: Well, that's a complete and conclusive answer, I would say. K'd like to put to you, Commodore, one final question: What would happen in a war if we should lose command of the Atlantic?

LEE: I don't know how anybody is going to predict how any war is going to come out or what's going to happen in war. When World War II started few Americans had ever heard of such places as Guadacanal and Iwo Jima. Nobody ever thought that we would be fighting a crucial battle such as the battle of Midway, in the middle of the Pacific, or the Coral Sea in the southwest Pacific, or in Northern Africa. I think, however, that America's security depends in large measure on her ability to move men and materials across the seas, to do the job wherever it is. The Atlantic is certainly the incompellable highway of the globe as concerns any future military action. If we lost the Atlantic, I think we'll lose the war.

MURROW: Thank you very much, indeed, Commodre Lee. We've been speaking to you from the carrier, Gilbert Islands.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. Now, here's Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: After spending some time with the men who service and fly the planes from the deck of an aircraft carrier, one can't help being reminded of something the Roman Plautus once wrote: "Courage stands before everything; it is what preserves our liberty, safety, life and our homes and our country and our children. Courage comprises all things. A man with courage has every blessing. Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday November 5
1953

This is the news:

British Foreign Secretary Eden said today that Britain wants a conference with the Russians "at any level", despite what he calls Moscow's "fundamental hostility to the western nations." Mr. Eden told the House of Commons that the British are prepared to discuss Germany and Austria with the Russians at any time.. at any place.. and without prior conditions.

He said Moscow's most recent reply to a western note, setting a time and date for such a conference, was full of conditions that would "destroy our defensive arrangements altogether."

Hector McNeill the former minister of state ~~for foreign affairs~~ in the Labor government, said the first block on a meeting with the Russians must be removed in Washington and not in Moscow.

In Washington today the State Department ~~[illegible]~~ released the text of the latest Soviet note with what the President has called "its impossible conditions." And department officials are saying, unofficially, that the language in the new note.. such as its talk of "the threat of a new world war"..indicates a return to the attitude of the Russians ~~[illegible]~~ when Stalin was alive. ~~[illegible]~~

[redacted]

In Korea today Ambassador Dean suggested to the Communists that it might be wise to let a subcommittee try to reach agreement on a time, place and the composition of the Korean peace conference. Dean feels that "staff advisers" might have a "freer exchange of ideas" than he's been having with the enemy negotiators.

The Communists TODAY had very little luck trying to win back prisoners of war who do not want to return home. In angry and prolonged explanations, they managed to convince only two of 136 Chinese to go home. And allied officers are convinced that the enemy's delaying tactics "suggest they are getting ready for some kind of blow-up that will get them out of this unpleasant business."

American officers indicate that when we start questioning the 22 Americans who refuse to return home, we may play for them recorded pleas from their families.

In Manila today, Philippine President Quirino told reporters, that he has no proof that America is meddling in the Philippine election that is to be held on Tuesday. But he indicated he's going to keep on attacking American-meddling as a campaign issue. Our embassy in Manila denies any meddling in the campaign.

In Washington, [redacted] Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele told health authorities that Public Health victories over communicable diseases--like smallpox--will be followed by the prevention of non-communicable diseases, like cancer and heart trouble. Dr. Scheele said: "Medical research is now on the verge of remarkable discoveries in our knowledge of chronic and mental diseases." He said we are now learning how "to reduce specific infections to manageable proportions."

The Veterans Administration says that from now on veterans with ailments they did not get while in service will be required to make a report on their finances before being admitted to Veterans Hospitals. Former soldiers could be prosecuted for false statements on their inability to pay for their hospitalization.

~~Washington today had an imaginary atomic bomb attack with some 500-thousand government workers and school children participating in the civil defense test. The President and Mrs. Eisenhower went down to the new air-conditioned shelter that has been built under the White House.~~

~~Today that shelter accomodated 200 persons comfortably. It has several rooms and an elaborate communications system.~~

The President today issued an armistice day proclomation for next Wednesday calling on all Americans to dedicate themselves "to the task of promoting with fervor and zeal a permanent peace among all peoples of the earth."

And Mr. Eisenhower gave New York State authority to join Canada in constructing a 600-million dollar ST. Lawrence River power project. The controversial St. Lawrence Seaway is not directly involved in the power project.

Senator Mc Carthy said today he cannot "conceive of anyone sending children to Harvard university where they would be open to indoctrination by Communist professors." The Senator says that yesterday Dr. Wendell H. Furry, a professor of physics at Harvard, refused to answer CERTAIN COMMITTEE QUESTIONS. McCarthy noted that the Harvard Corporation last May decided to keep Furry on the staff despite his refusal to tell another Senate committee about his alleged communist party membership. There is no comment from Harvard or the professor.

In Trieste today American and British troops were sent to the center of the city to guard it from thousands of Italians who fought police for two hours and threw stones at allied military offices. Two Italians were killed by the territorial police.

Edward R. Murrow: November 5, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

For several years this reporter has been interested in how personal opinion and perspective are altered by experience and circumstances. Having spent the last two days on an aircraft carrier - carrier-based bombers, and helicopters - the perspective on who is going to defend this country in case of war has altered somewhat. So many of us have come to think of our defense in terms of radar nets, fast interceptors and civil defense. All of these are important - may indeed be vital - but if our ships don't make port, if we lose command of the sea, our forces abroad will wither and be overrun; our foreign air bases cannot be nourished and supplied; and we would in due course become a big island off the coast of Kamchatka, with the rest of the world either united against us or indifferent to our fate. Even in this age of air power we cannot fly uranium ore in from the Belgian Congo, or bauxite from South America. So it follows that those who defend on the sea - a sea which so long defended us - are essential to our survival if war should come.

If it comes, the principal Russian naval threat will be by submarine, as we reported last night from the Carrier "Gilbert Islands". The training, the experimentation for this defense is a tiring, undramatic, almost routine job - carried out by a lot of American kids in yellow, green and red jerseys, who move amongst those whirling propellers like ballet dancers, and who command the vocabulary of mule skinners. It's done by pilots who somehow find that blacked-out Carrier in the middle of the night, and then say, "A night landing is just like a day landing, only you can't see."

All this skill - this teamwork - this experimentation costs a fearful amount of money - maybe it will never be needed; but it is part of the price of our insurance policy on survival.

In these continuing exercises and programs that the Navy conducts - testing new techniques and tactics - there must always be a simulated enemy. Last night I reported that we were looking for a submarine. About six o'clock this morning the submarine got through our destroyer screen, and could have sunk us, although we were turning away at high speed. The boys in the submarine listened to last night's broadcast, and rather thought that we didn't make sufficient mention of them. Bill Downs was down there with them, and this is his report.

I think there is some sort of federal regulation against transmission of direct messages by radio; but Bill Downs and I would like to stretch it a little, by sending greetings and gratitude to officers and crew of the Becuna and Gilbert Islands. Neither vessel is glamorous, new or famous, but both are manned by men, quietly, efficiently and undramatically going about their nation's business.

Downs Lead Murrow Show Nov. 5 7 45

The name of the submarine, Ed, is the SS Becuna --
~~I understand the Becuna is what they call the Great Barracuda.~~
It is skippered by a Pacific war undersea veteran named Lt. Commander Harold Shear of Shelter Island, New York.

~~I hope this is more their report than mine and that I do it justice.~~ ~~It's a rare job. I don't apologize~~ -

Bill Downs CBS NY Murrow show 7 45 pm

For the past four days, a US Navy aircraft carrier and five destroyers have been trying to locate and knock out a ~~submarine~~ US Navy submarine ranging the Atlantic off the some 3-thousand miles of coast line that ~~[illegible]~~ runs northward from Norfolk, Va., to the tip of Maine. It's a big practice operation —

I happened to be in the ~~Submarine -- called the Becuna~~ Becuna -- on a television film assignment as were you — on this job And in between ~~[illegible]~~ surfacing and diving and snorkling and periscoping, I felt sorry for you guys trying to find us.....and I felt a little frightened for the safety of the United States.

It was a new experience for me.....joining this ~~strange fraternity~~ Group of men who work and live in submersables. Because in the cramped quarters of a submarine, man becomes small and puny in the ~~[illegible]~~ sea around him.....and the boat itself is but a rain-drop of steel battling the awful immensity of the ocean.

The best effort that even a great nation such as our own can produce against the submarine is the complex air-sea defensive composite called the "hunter-killer" force.

If there is a Neptune which rules the waves of the Atlantic during this winter storm season....he must be laughing.

For there we were -- sometimes pitching on the surface --- mostly in the gluey clam under the surface --- a few thousand tons of carefully-balanced hollow steel trying to survive and hide from other men in destroyers and helocopters and bomber planes. And there literally ~~is~~ are millions of square miles of salt water to hide in. For mostly you battle the sea.

Still, we were dangerous----just as dangerous as the hyped-up atom that makes Uranium 235.....or the hydrogen molecule that makes water heavy. Because we could be carrying a guided missile.... or a rocket....or a delayed-action mine ..... all nuclear armed ---

And had we been sent on a mission to New York harbor or Sandy Hook or Baltimore or Norfolk.....it is possible that we could have missiled or rocketed or mined these places with atoms and paralyized our east coast.....In fact, we won a battle of the Atlantic, so to speak, at the water's edge of the United States.

As far as I know, we have something less than 70 submarines in service. The latest report on the Russian submarine fleet -- and this estimate is at least 10 years old -- The soviets have 350. It's a pretty good argument for the Navy.

You've been with the navy carrier and the helicopter boys, Ed. I would like to report that the men in the submarine service have the same problems of sudden death.....and have the same approach to it.

In fact, operating a submarine involves the same problems as, say flying a helocopter. Under the sea, a submarine has to be guided in four dimensions.....there's no setting an automatic pilot and letting it take over. You have to "fly" a submarine all the time. The big difference is that a Navy pilot has a parachute.....the submarine men have escape lung equipment and other devices. In case of emergency, both get wet.

We've been ashore less than 8 hours now....and somewhere out in the Atlantic the Becuna is still diving from periscope level deep down to a thermal which will fool the destroyers..... and zig-zagging in the night so that Navy fliers can't spot her.

It all comes under the day-to-day job of defense.....and I think we don't appreaciate what these people are doing enough.

It's ~~not difficult~~ used to be easy to get a sense of security when a wide expanse of water separates two continents. But 250 years ago, an Englishman - Alexander Pope wisely observed that: "Seas only join the regions they divide. As for the small carriers patrolling the Atlantic, Joseph Conrad came close with these lines:"The ship - a fragment detached from the earth - went on lonely and swiftly like a small planet."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday, Nov. 6, 1953

This is the news:

Attorney General Brownell charged today that former President Truman kept Harry Dexter White on the government payroll, and promoted him, after the F.B.I. reported that White was a Russian spy. White, who died five years ago, had served the government in various high positions in the financial field. Brownell charges--on the basis of facts that came to his attention in the last fewdays--that the F.B.I. twice told the White House, through General Vaughn, then Mr. Truman's military aide, that White was a Russian spy. Brownell says that at that time White was one of the most important men in our government. That this case shows the difficult task the Eisenhower Administration faces in weeding out subversives from the federal payroll.

The first reaction to this came from Mr. Truman. He says: "I don't recall that such a thing happened. As soon as it was discovered that White was not loyal, he was fired." Mr. Truman also says: "The Administration is desperate because of the Tuesday elections. They'll stop at nothing, lies or anything else, to accomplish their purpose. They're scared. They're desperate."

And former military aide Vaughn said: I can't conceive of J. Edgar Hoover giving me such a report instead of sending it to the Justice Department." Vaughn says the Brownell charge is "malarkey". He thinks the Republicans are suffering from WHAT HE CALLS "New Jerseyitis."

Next reaction: from White House Secretary Hagerty. He says Mr. Truman's statement is not true, that "Mr. White was not fired. He resigned." And Hagerty released a letter in which Mr. Truman spoke of White filling his job with distinction."

Then back to Mr. Truman who said: "SOMETIMES PEOPLE ARE FIRED BY BEING ALLOWED TO RESIGN."

And to former Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, who told reporters he never was suspicious of White, who worked for him. Morgenthau says the F.B.I. told him they were not suspicious of White until months after Morgenthau resigned.

No comment from the F.B.I. But the Republican Congressional committee says all this "further vindicates" the position of Senator McCarthy.

In Moscow tonight, Marshal Voroshilov, the president of the Soviet Union charged that Western Germany is becoming the spark of a war in Europe. And in a foreign policy speech (which I'd like to review in a minute) he said there can be no hope of easing international tensions, without Communist China.

There was new rioting by pro-Italians in Trieste today. And the allied military government says six persons have been killed in the past two days. The State Department takes a "most serious view" of these riots and demonstrations. And Italian Premier Pella has protested to Washington and London, against the shooting of Italian demonstrators. Dispatches from Trieste says this was done by the local police. The Yugoslavs have given us their plan for settling the dispute. But no details have been made public.

An Italian court today convicted two Americans.. Aldo Icardi of Pittsburgh and Carl Lo Dolce of Rochester.. of the war-time murder of their commanding officer, Major William Holohan of New York. The two men were tried in ABSENTIA and sentenced to prison terms. They're both now in this country.

In Korea today, as American and Communist staff officers prepared to meet to try to work out details for a peace conference. (something their superiors could not agree on.) the Indian chairman of the neutral nation commission called the Communist questioning of prisoners of war "useless and inhuman." Indian General Timaya said the "explaining" may end on Monday, unless the Communists change their tactics. Today Timaya was forced to listen to a complaint from the 22 Americans who do not want to return home from Communist prison camps. In one of strangest requests to come from any prisoners, the men told Timaya they want their mail censored.. they are bothered by what their petition calls "the slander, bribery and coercion" contained in letters they've received from this country. The American prisoners say this mail is intimidating them.. so they want it censored. The Army in Washington doubts that many of the men are receiving any letters. The Army says five men are running the other 17 and do not permit letters to be read.

The Army today issued a January draft call for 23-thousand men.. the same quota that's been in effect since last July.

The President today issued a new order designed to give us a freer flow of information about government activities..without jeopardizing national security. Attorney General Brownell says this will replace an old order issued by Mr. Truman which Brownell says smacked of "dictatorship" and covered up dereliction of duty and mistakes.

Edward R. Murrow: November 6, 1953. (Swing) 7.45 p.m.

A chapter has closed and another has opened, in the story of Soviet foreign policy. The one that has closed began with the time after Stalin's death, when Moscow let it be known that its foreign policy was to change. The Kremlin was depicted as wanting to ease world tensions, wanting to meet, negotiate and find solutions. The Kremlin gave this impression in its usual way. It suddenly settled a number of small outstanding matters. Its diplomats abroad showed up at dinners and receptions, smiling and talking with conciliatory charm. Soviet speeches in the United Nations and elsewhere omitted their customary bad language about the United States. Visitors were admitted into the Soviet Union, correspondents in Moscow were allowed to cable more freely, and even to visit parts of the country previously sealed off from foreign eyes.

This chapter made perplexing reading, for certain indications suggested that it might be true. For example, the rivalry between Stalin's political heirs was bitter. The Kremlin could not well be stirring up world discord while its own leaders were wrestling to get hold of the spoon. At the same time signs sprang up of portentous dissatisfaction among Soviet consumers. The Beria purge, followed by a series of local purges that spread to the satellites, confirmed the volcanic nature of the crisis.

Some Western leaders, mindful of the burden of armament costs, thought it might be the time to exploit the cares and anxieties of the Kremlin to gain concessions. A typical French reaction was that of Monsieur Herriot, who said flatly that the Defense Community treaty must not be ratified before top level negotiations with the Soviet Union had been held and failed. Sir Winston Churchill had private information about serious agricultural shortages in the Soviet Union to which he attached great importance, and he wanted to go in person to Moscow.

Some readers of this chapter, however, were skeptical. They had not forgotten previous chapters. In the last one before Stalin's death, Soviet foreign policy had been set down in bold lines by the Soviet dictator himself. The coming war, he said, was not going to be between the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R., but between the U.S.A. and its own revolting allies. Clearly what Soviet policy sought was not peace but discord among the Allies. And nothing the Kremlin actually did after Stalin's death abandoned this formula. A new look was being given Soviet policy, but it still could be intended only to beguile anti-Americans in Britain, France and elsewhere, as it did.

Then came the uprising in East Germany and rumblings in other satellite lands. It was as though the Kremlin, giving one inch of conciliation, faced explosive demands for freedom from its opressed subjects. Thereafter the new look was quietly eliminated. Stepp by step - or one can say, note by note - the Soviet foreign policy grew sullen again, and began bristling with familiar barrack-room adjectives about the West's preparations for war. And the last note, on Monday, ended all chance of a conference to discuss the future of Germany, and that closed the chapter.

Now a new chapter begins. It will be less perplexing. Marshal Voroshilov has taken care of that. Tonight he gave the big speech at the ~~XXXXXXXXX~~ evening meeting preceding the Moscow celebration of the anniversary of the revolution. Things said on such an occasion have double emphasis. The Kremlin addressed both the Soviet peoples and the world. To both Marshal Voroshilov gave the solemn assurance: Soviet foreign policy has not changed. He did not say that a change had been tried and proved a mistake; he said, simply, it had not changed. And then he set off some fire-cracker sputterings about so-called American imperialism.

So this speech, and the note that preceded it, are the authentic statement of current Soviet foreign policy. There is to be no conciliation, no search for accomodation. The Kremlin now turns on Dr. Adenauer the vehemence once reserved for Hitler. He is called a leader of German monopolists, employing Hitlerite generals to build up German power, so that all of Western Europe will be sucked into a war of revenge. The note was an ill-tempered scolding that the Defense community has not been scotched, and that Communist China has not been accepted as a member in good standing of the World Community before a Korean peace conference has even been prepared.

In the United Nations today Mr. Vishinsky rejected a resolution calling for a renewed study of disarmament by the U.N.'s Standing Commission. He did so in a speech reiterating his long-familiar attacks on the United States as a war-monger. He did not explain how the United States can want and accept disarmament with fool-proof controls if it also wants war. The United States is one of the countries that is seeking once more to break the deadlock in the disarmament commission due to Soviet obstruction. Mr. Vishinsky's only contribution to disarmament was to give his own personal pledge that if the Soviet Union promised not to use fission and hydrogen bombs it would not even make them. This performance, too, must have been timed to coincide with the note and the Voroshilov speech.

There is a little twist in the new chapter about Soviet policy. The Soviet government announces that it has joined the International Labor Office. This has long been a target of Soviet Union jibes and abuse. Now it joins.

It does so, however, with so many reservations that to make its membership effective the I.L.O. would have to be revolutionized. The I.L.O. must have been joined with a purpose. It may be no more than that the Soviet Union knows it can sow more discord among Western members by being inside than out. That, too, would conform with Voroshilov's assurance that Soviet foreign policy has not changed.

For those who anticipated a change for the better in Russian foreign policy, we might turn to two observations -one made by Francis Bacon, the other by John Galsworthy:"It is sufficiently clear that all things are changed and nothing really perishes and that the sum remains absolutely the same...matters change and morals change but men remain."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Attorney General Brownell charged today that former President Truman kept Harry Dexter White on the government payroll, and promoted him, after the FBI reported that White was a Russian spy. White, who died five years ago, had served the government in varioushigh positions in the financial field. Brownell charges on the basis of facts that came to his attention in the last few days that the FBI twice told the White House, through General Vaughn, then Mr. Truman's military aide, that White was a Russian spy. Brownell says that at that time White was one of the most important men in our government; that this case shows the difficult task the Eisenhower Administration faces in weeding out subversives from the federal payroll.

The first reaction to this came from Mr. Truman. He says: "I don't recall that such a thing happened. As soon as it was discovered that White was not loyal, he was fired." Mr. Truman also says: "The Administration is desperate because of the Tuesday elections. They'll stop at nothing, lies or anything else, to accomplish their purpose. They're scared. They're desperate."

And former military aide Vaughn said: "I can't conceive of J. Edgar Hoover giving me such a report instead of sending it to the Justice Department." Vaughn says the Brownell charge is "malarky." He thinks the Republicans are suffering from what he calls "New Jerseyitis."

Next reaction: from White House Secretary Hagerty. He says Mr. Truman's statement is not true that "Mr. White was not fired. He resigned." And Hagerty released a letter in which Mr. Truman spoke of White "filling his job with distinction."

Then back to Mr. Truman who said: "Sometimes people are fired by being allowed to resign."

And to former Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, who told reporters he never was suspisious of White who worked for him. Morgenthau says the FBI told him they were not suspicious of White until months after Morgenthau resigned.

No comment from the FBI. But the Republican Congressional committee says all this "further vindicates" the position of Senator McCarthy.

In Moscow tonight, Marshal Voroshilov, the president of the Soviet Union charged that Western Germany is becoming the spark of a war in Europe. And in a foreign policy speech which I'd like to review in a minute he said there can be no hope of easing international tensions without Communist China.

There was new rioting by pro-Italians in Trieste today. And the allied military government says six persons have been killed in the past two days. The State Department takes a "most serious view" of these riots and demonstrations. And Italian Premier Pella has protested to Washington and London against the shooting of Italian demonstrators. Dispatches from Trieste says this was done by the local police. The Yugoslavs have given us their plan for settling the dispute. But no details have been made public.

An Italian court today convicted two Americans - Aldo Icardi of Pittsburgh and Carl Lo Dolce of Rochester of the wartime murder of their commanding officer, Major William Holohan of New York. The two men were tried in absentia and sentenced to prison terms. They're both now in this country.

In Korea today as American and Communist staff officers prepared to meet to try to work out details for a peace conference - something their superiors could not agree on - the Indian chairman of the neutral nation commission called the Communist questioning of prisoners of war "useless and inhuman." Indian General Timaya said the "explaining" may end on Monday unless the Communists change their tactics. Today Timaya was forced to listen to a complaint from the 22 Americans who do not want to return home from Communist prison camps. In one of strangest requests to come from any prisoners, the men told Timaya they want their mail censored - they are bothered by what their petition calls "the slander, bribery and coercion" contained in letters they've received from this country. The American prisoners say this mail is intimidating them so they want it censored. The Army says five men are running the other 17 and do not permit letters to be read.

The Army today issued a January draft call for 23-thousand men - the same quota that's been in effect since last July.

The President today issued a new order designed to give us a freer flow of information about government activities without jeopardizing national security. Attorney General Brownell says this will replace an old order issued by Mr. Truman which Brownell says smacked of "dictatorship" and covered up dereliction of duty and mistakes.

A chapter has closed and another has opened, in the story of Soviet foreign policy. The one that has closed began with the time after Stalin's death, when Moscow let it be known that its foreign policy was to change. The Kremlin was depicted as wanting to ease world tensions, wanting to meet, negotiate and find solutions. The Kremlin gave this impression in its usual way. It suddenly settled a number of small outstanding matters. Its diplomats abroad showed up at dinners and receptions, smiling and talking with conciliatory charm. Soviet speeches in the United Nations and elsewhere omitted their customary bad language about the United States. Visitors were admitted into the Soviet Union, correspondents in Moscow were allowed to cable more freely, and even to visit parts of the country previously sealed off from foreign eyes.

This chapter made perplexing reading, for certain indications suggested that it might be true. For example, the rivalry between Stalin's political heirs was bitter. The Kremlin could not well be stirring up world discord while its own leaders were wrestling to get hold of the spoon. At the same time signs sprang up of protentous dissatisfaction among Soviet consumers. The Beria purge, followed by a series of local purges that spread to the satellites, confirmed the volcanic nature of the crisis.

Some Western leaders, mindful of the burden of armament costs, thought it might be the time to exploit the cares and anxieties of the Kremlin to gain concessions.

A typical French reaction was that of Monsieur Herriot, who said flatly that the Defense Community treaty must not be ratified before top level negotiations with the Soviet Union had been held and failed. Sir Winston Churchill had private information about serious agricultural shortages in the Soviet Union to which he attached great importance, and he wanted to go in person to Moscow.

Some readers of this chapter, however, were skeptical. They had not forgotten previous chapters. In the last one before Stalin's death, Soviet foreign policy had been set down in bold lines by the Soviet dictator himself. The coming war, he said, was not going to be between the USA and the USSR, but between the USA and its own revolting allies. Clearly what Soviet policy sought was not peace but discord among the Allies. And nothing the Kremlin actually did after Stalin's death abandoned this formula. A new look was being given Soviet policy, but it still could be in ended only to beguile anti-Americans in Britain, France and elsewhere, as it did.

Then came the uprising in East Germany and rumblings in other satellite lands. It was as though the Kremlin, giving one inch of concialiation, faced explosive demands for freedom from its oppressed subjects. Thereafter the new look was quietly eliminated. Step by step - or one can say, note by note - the Soviet foreign policy grew sullen again, and began bristling with familiar barrack-room adjectives about the West's preparations for war. And the last note, on Monday, ended all chance of a conference to discuss the future of Germany, and that closed the chapter.

Now a new chapter begins. It will be less perplexing. Marshal voroshilov has taken care of that. Tonight he gave the big speech at the evening meeting preceding the Moscow celebration of the anniversary of the revolution. Things said on such an occasion have double emphasis. The Kremlin addressed both the Soviet peoples and the world. To both Marshal Voroshilov gave the solemn assurance: Soviet foreign policy has not changed. He did not say that a change had been tried and proved a mistake; he said, simply, it had not changed. And then he set off some fire-cracker sputterings about so-called American imperialism.

So this speech, and the note that preceded it, are the authentic statement of current Soviet foreign policy. There is to be no conciliation, no search for accomodation. The Kremlin now turns on Dr. Adenauer the vehemence once reserved for Hitler. He is called a leader of German monopolists, employing Hitlerite generals to build up German power so that all of Western Europe will be sucked into q war of revenge. The note was an ill-tempered scolding that the Defense community has not been scotched, and that Communist China has not been accepted as a member in good standing of the World Community before a Korean peace conference has even been prepared.

In the United Nations today Mr. Vishinsky rejected a resolution calling for a renewed study of disarmament by the UN's Standing Commission. He did so in a speech reiterating his long-familiar attacks on the United States as a war-monger. He did not explain how the United States can want and accept disarmament with fool-proof controls if it also wants war. The United States is one of the countries that is seeking once more to break the deadlock in the disarmament commission due to Soviet obstruction. Mr. Vishinsky's only contribution to disarmament was to give his own personal pledge that if the Soviet Union promised not to use fission and hydrogen bombs it would not even make them. This performance, too, must have been timed to coincide with the note and the Voroshilov speech.

There is a little twist in the new chapter about Soviet policy. The Soviet government announces that it has joined the International Labor Office. This has long been a target of Soviet Union jibes and abuse. Now it joins. It does so, however, with so many reservations that to make its membership effective the ILO would have to be revolutionized. The ILO must have been joined with a purpose. It may be no more than that the Soviet Union knows it can sow more discord among Western members by being inside than out. That, too, would conform with Voroshilov's assurance that Soviet foreign policy has not changed.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: For those who anticipated a change for the better in Russian foreign policy, we might turn to two observations - one made by Francis Bacon, the other by John Galsworthy: "It is sufficiently clear that all things are changed and nothing really perishes and that the sum remains absolutely the same - matters change and morals change but men remain."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday, Nov. 9 / 1953

This is the news:

Attorney General Brownell announced today that at least eight government officials were aware of an F.B.I. report labelling the late Harry Dexter White a Russian spy..at the time former President Truman promoted White. Following up his Friday night speech, Brownell issued a statement saying that Justice Department records show that copies of a report on White--sent to the White House--were also sent to Supreme Court Justice Clark, then the attorney general....then Secretary of State Byrnes... the late James Forrestal, who was navy secretary at the time. The report also went to: Spruille Braden, then an assistant secretary of state...to Admiral Leahy who was Mr. Truman's chief of staff...to General Vandenbergh, then the air force assistant chief of staff.. and to Fred Lyon, a state department official...amd the late Fred Vinson, then secretary of the treasury. So far we have a comment only from Admiral Leahy AND MR. BRADEN. [redacted] BOTH SAY THEY DO [redacted] not remember the report on White.

[redacted]

Mr. Brownell's statement today quotes one paragraph from the report distributed by the F.B.I. in 1945 and early 1946. It says the information was received from confidential, reliable sources. And it says:

"in no instance is any transaction or event related (in the report on Harry Dexter White) where the reliability of the source of information is questionable."

Senator Mc Carthy said today that William Henry Taylor, whom the senator describes as a "protege" of White, testified today that he was never a Communist or a spy. [I'd like to review the developments in the White case in a few minutes.]

At Harvard, President Nathan M. Pusey said today:"I am not aware that there is any person among the Harvard faculty who is a member of the Communist party." Last week Senator Mc Carthy asked Pusey about "his attitude towards retaining teachers who refuse to state whether they are communists." Pusey said today: "Harvard is absolutely, unalterably finally opposed to Communism. It exists for the sake of free inquiry and the free mind."

In London today, Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons that the recent bloody riots in Trieste had been caused by Italian extremists. He said Great Britain will resist violence in Trieste from any quarter.

An Italian foreign office spokesman says this charge is completely false. And the Vice President of Yugoslavia says the western powers are " prone to yield before the blackmail of the Italian government."

My colleague David Schoenbrun cables from Paris that Prime Minister Churchill has invited President Eisenhower and French Premier Laniel to a Big Three conference to decide policy on the future of western Germany. Schoenbrun says no time or place have been set. The British news agency Reuters says the Big Three are planning a meeting, probably in Bermuda.

Secretary of State Dulles today told Washington reporters that Russia's most recent note on Germany is "not acceptable" as far as we are concerned. Dulles said the Kremlin wants the free world to "unconditionally surrender their protective principles and practises of security" before any East-West meeting can be held. Mr. Dulles also told the reporters that we might consider recognizing Communist China if the Chinese change their anti-western policies and stop supporting aggression in Indo-China and elsewhere. Mr. Dulles..in this first hint that such a move might be considered..said that the Administration has never specifically said it would opposed reognizing Red China forever.

On Formosa today the touring Vice President Nixon told the Chinese Nationalist legislature, that we recognize their country because they [redacted] are "truly representative of the Chinese people."

There was no progress in Korea today on the enemy's "explanations" to prisoners who do not want to go home.

In the Philippines, some 5-million persons have started voting for a new president. The incumbent, President Quirino, predicts his re-election by half a million votes. His opponent, Ramon Magsaysay says he'll win by at least one million votes "in a clean election."

At the United Nations, American Ambassador Lodge urged the rulers of Russia to change their minds and attitudes, and negotiate honestly towards a genuine [redacted] disarmamaent.

And the western powers..America, Britain and France.. condemned Isreal for last month's raid ON a Jordan village, which resulted in the death of 53 persons. Lodge endorsed Sir Gladwyn Jebb's statement that Isreal is apparently unwilling "to punish those responsible, and hence, by implication, their willingness to condone" the raid.

In Iran today former Premier Mossadegh told a court MARTIAL that if he is convicted of trying to overthrow the monarchy... defying the Shah.. and dissolving the parliament..he will not appeal. And, he said, if he's released he'll commit suicide.

King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia died today. He was believed to be 73.. the world's richest and most powerful absolute monarch. His son, Crown Prince Saud, has succeeded to the throne.

In Washington, the Supreme Court ruled today that baseball is a sport and not an interstate business.... and therefore cannot be challenged in courts as an illegal monopoly. Chief Justice Warren said, in the majority opinion, THAT if there are "any evils in this field" Congress should take action to correct them.

In Hugo, Oklahoma, Mrs. Tommie Doughty, a 17-year-old former carnival strip teaser, was arrested and admitted kidnapping 5-months-old Richard Lee Stammer in Indianapolis. The baby was not harmed.

Edward R. Murrow: November 9, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

The case of Harry Dexter White, deceased, has so far raised more questions than it has answered. This is perhaps because there has been much talk but little evidence. This reporter does not pretend to know whether Mr. White was or was not a Communist spy, as alleged by Attorney General Brownell. Mr. Brownell asserted on Friday that President Truman promoted White after he had been told by the F.B.I. that White was a Russian spy. ~~THEMAX~~ Mr. Truman denied it. General Harry Vaughan, the President's aide, who according to Brownell received the information about White, said he'd never heard of the man. Chairman Mitchell of the Democratic National Committee suggested that the whole matter should be placed before a Grand Jury, ~~[illegible]~~

Today, Vincent Quinn, now county District Attorney in Queen's County here in New York, said that in 1947 a Federal Grand Jury had studied the matter of Mr. White - all the evidence - and had failed to return an indictment "because it felt there was insufficient evidence to warrant such action." [He said this was the same Grand Jury that later indicted twelve top Communist leaders in this country.]

Today Senator McCarthy said: "Anyone with an ounce of brains knows you can have a completely documented case of espionage which would not be a legal case." And the Senator said: "It is completely dishonest to say that unless you can send them to jail they are innocent." But our traditional concept of the law says that a man must be presumed innocent until there is sufficient evidence to send him to jail; or to otherwise penalise him for breaking an established law. One can only assume that what the Senator meant was that a given body of evidence might convince him that a man had engaged in espionage, but the evidence would not convince a jury.

Mr. White, three days before his death, denied before the House Committee on Un-American Activities, that he had ever been a Communist or ever committed a disloyal act. This statement might not have convinced a jury either. It would probably have depended upon the evidence. And the difficulty in this case is that so far we do not have - any of us - the evidence. The House Committee, in a report rendered after Mr. White's death, said that no charge of Communist Party affiliation had been made against him. But here again this cannot be regarded as proof that he did not supply information to Russia.

Today's statement by Mr. Brownell - reported earlier in this program - does not add substantially to the available evidence. He says, in effect, that the adverse report on Mr. White received wide circulation in government departments. He does not say what evidence the report contained.. We do know that it was an F.B.I. report. And we also know that the F.B.I. does not evaluate material, which means that it does not reach conclusions. It reports fact, rumor, gossip - attempts to give some ~~XXXXXXXX~~ indication of the credibility or reliability of witnesses, but does not go beyond that.

Mr. Brownell may have in his possession conclusive evidence that Harry Dexter White was, as he alleges, a Russian spy. He may have evidence, as he alleges, that Mr. Truman was acquainted with this fact when he promoted him. But if he has such evidence it has not been produced. There are sound security reasons why the details of an F.B.I. report should not be made public. ~~XXXXXXXXXXXXX~~ But it would seem that a charge of this nature, made with the approval of the President of the United States against a former President - a charge which clearly implies that Mr. Truman was either knowingly or unknowingly an instrument of espionage, should be backed by rather more evidence than has so far been produced.

Again this reporter doesn't know who's right and who's wrong, for the evidence has not been disclosed. But this procedure raises a question that is perhaps more fundamental than whether Mr. White was or was not a Russian spy; for it involves the Attorney General, with the approval of the President, with the combined authority of those two offices, asserting that a man was a spy, without producing evidence. In this particular case the man is dead. But if this practise is to be pursued it may subsequently be applied to you or to me. The basic question would seem to be the selective release or interpretation of material gathered by the F.B.I., when that interpretation or conclusion is unaccompanied by evidence or witnesses. The question here, as I see it, isn't whether Brownell is right, or Truman is right, or whether Harry Dexter White was a spy. We are being asked to make up our minds without access to evidence. And if that should become our habit, then our heritage is in danger.

We were discussing the case of Harry Dexter White...and the danger of drawing conclusions based on insufficient facts. Mark Twain once wrote: "I think there is no sense in forming an opinion when there is not enough evidence to form it on. If you build a person without any bones in him he may look fair enough to the eye but he will be limber and cannot stand up; and I consider that evidence is the bones of an opinion."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Attorney General Brownell announced today that at least eight government officials were aware of an FBI report labelling the late Harry Dexter White a Russian spy - at the time former President Truman promoted White. Following up his Friday night speech, Brownell issued a statement saying that Justice Department records show that copies of a report on White sent to the White House were also sent to Supreme Court Justice Clark, then the attorney general - then Secretary of State Byrnes - the late James Forrestal, who was navy secretary at the time. The report also went to: Spruille Braden, then an assistant secretary of state, to Admiral Leahy who was Mr. Truman's chief of staff, to General Vandenbergh, then the air force assistant chief of staff, and to Fred Lyon, a state department official, and the late Fred Vinson, then secretary of the treasury. So far we have a comment only from Admiral Leahy and Mr. Braden. Both say they do not remember the report on White.

Mr. Brownell's statement today quotes one paragraph from the report distributed by the FBI in 1945 and early 1946. It says the information was received from confidential, reliable sources. And it says: "in no instance is any transaction or event related (in the report on Harry Dexter White) where the reliability of the source of information is questionable."

Senator McCarthy said today that William Henry Taylor, whom the senator describes as a "protege" of White, testified today that he was never a Communist or a spy. I'd like to review the developments in the White case in a few minutes.

At Harvard, President Nathan M. Pusey said today: "I am not aware that there is any person among the Harvard faculty who is a member of the Communist party." Last week Senator McCarthy asked Pusey about "his attitude towards retaining teachers who refuse to state whether they are communists." Pusey said today: "Harvard is absolutely, unalterably finally opposed to Communism. It exists for the sake of free inquiry and the free mind."

In London today, Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons that the recent bloody riots in Trieste had been caused by Italian extremists. He said Great Britain will resist violence in Trieste from any quarter.

An Italian foreign office spokesman says this charge is completely false. And the Vice President of Yugoslavia says the western powers are "prone to yield before the blackmail of the Italian government."

My colleague David Schoenbrun cables from Paris that Prime Minister Churchill has invited President Eisenhower and French Premier Laniel to a Big Three conference to decide policy on the future of western Germany. Schoenbrun says no time or place have been set. The British news agency Reuters says the Big Three are planning a meeting, probably in Bermuda.

Secretary of State Dulles today told Washington reporters that Russia's most recent note on Germany is "not acceptable," as far as we are concerned. Dulles said the Kremlin wants the free world to "unconditionally surrender their protective principles and practices of security" before any East-West meeting can be held. Mr. Dulles also told the reporters that we might consider recognizing Communist China if the Chinese change their anti-western policies and stop supporting aggression in Indo-China and elsewhere. Mr. Dulles in this first hint that such a move might be considered said that the Administration has never specifically said it would oppose recognizing Red China forever.

On Formosa today the touring Vice President Nixon told the Chinese Nationalist legislature that we recognize their country because they are "truly representative of the Chinese people."

There was no progress in Korea today on the enemy's "explanations" to prisoners who do not want to go home.

In the Philippines, some 5-million persons have started voting for a new president. The incumbent, President Quirino, predicts his re-election by half a million votes. His opponent, Ramon Magsaysay says he'll win by at least one million votes "in a clean election."

At the United Nations, American Ambassador Lodge urged the rulers of Russia to change their minds and attitudes and negotiate honestly towards a genuine disarmament.

And the western powers, American, Britain and France, condemned Israel for last month's raid on a Jordan village which resulted in the death of 53 persons. Lodge endorsed Sir Gladwyn Jebb's statement that Israel is apparently unwilling "to punish those responsible and hence, by implication, their willingness to condone" the raid.

In Iran today former Premier Mossadegh told a court martial that if he is convicted of trying to overthrow the monarchy defying the Shah, and dissolving the parliament he will not appeal. And, he said, if he's released he'll commit suicide.

King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia died today. He was believed to be 73; the world's richest and most powerful absolute monarch. His son, Crown Prince Saud, has succeeded to the throne.

In Washington, the Supreme Court rules today that baseball is a sport and not an interstate business and therefore cannot be challenged in courts as an illegal monopoly. Chief Justice Warren said, in the majority opinion, that if there are any evils in this field, Congress should talke action to correct them.

In Hugo, Oklahoma, Mrs. Tommie Doughty, a 17-year-old former carnival strip teaser, was arrested and admitted kipnapping 5-months-old Richard Lee Stammer in Indianapolis. The baby was not harmed.

The case of Harry Dexter White, deceased, has so far raised more questions than it has answered. This is perhaps because there has been much talk but little evidence. This reporter does not pretend to know whether Mr. White was or was not a Communist spy, as alleged by Attorney General Brownell. Mr. Brownell asserted on Friday that President Truman promoted White after he had been told by the F.B.I. that White was a Russian spy. Mr. Truman denied it. General Harry Vaughan, the President's aide, who according to Brownell received the information about White, said he'd never heard of the man. Chairman Mitchell of the Democratic National Committee suggested that the whole matter should be placed before a Grand Jury.

Today, Vincent Quinn, now county District Attorney in Queen's County here in New York, said that in 1947 a Federal Grand Jury had studied the matter of Mr. White - all the evidence - and had failed to return an indictment because it felt there was insufficient evidence to warrant such action. He said this was the same Grand Jury that later indicted twelve top Communist leaders in this country.

Today Senator McCarthy said: "Anyone with an ounce of brains knows you can have a completely documented case of espionage which would not be a legal case." And the Senator said: "It is completely dishonest to say that unless you can send them to jail they are innocent." But our traditional concept of the law says that aman must be presumed innocent until there is sufficient evidence to send him to jail; or to otherwise penalise him for breaking an established law. One can only assume that what the Senator meant was that agiven body of evidence might convince him that a man had engaged in espionage, but the evidence would not convince a jury.

Mr. White, three days before his death, denied before the House Committee on Un-American Activities, that he had ever been a Communist or ever committed a disloyal act. This statement might not have convinced a jury either. It would probably have depended upon the evidence. And the difficulty in this case is that so far we do not have - any of us- the evidence. The House Committee, in a report rendered after Mr. White's death, said that no charge of Communist Party affiliation had been made against him. But here again this cannot be regarded as proof that he did not supply information to Russia.

Today's statement by Mr. Brownell - reported earlier in this program - does not add substantially to the available evidence. He says, in effect, that the adverse report on Mr. White received wide circulation in government departments. He does not say what evidence the report contained..We do know that it was an F.B.I. report. And we also know that the F.B.I. does not evaluate material, which means that it does not reach conclusions. It reports fact, rumor, gossip - attempts to give some indication of the credibility or reliability of witnesses, but does not go beyond that.

Mr. Brownell may have in his possession conclusive evidence that Harry Dexter White was, as he alleges, a Russian spy. He may have evidence, as he alleges, that Mr. Truman was acquainted with this fact when he promoted him. But if he has such evidence it has not been produced. There are sound security reasons why the details of an F.B.I. report should not be make public. But it would seem that a charge of this nature, made with the approval of the President of the United States against a former President - a charge which clearly implies that Mr. Truman was either knowingly or unknowingly an instrument of espionage, should be backed by rather more evidence than has so far been produced.

Again this reporter doesn't know who's right and who's wrong, for the evidence has not been disclosed. But this procedure raises a question that is perhaps more fundamental than whether Mr. White was or was not a Russian spy; for it involves the Attorney General, with the approval of the President, with the combined authority of those two offices, asserting that a man was a spy, without producing evidence. In this particular case the man is dead. But if this practise is to be pursued it may subsequently be applied to you or to me. The basic question would seem to be the selective release or interpretation of material gathered by the F.B.I., when that interpretation or conclusion is unaccompanied by evidence or witnesses. The question here, as I see it, isn't whether Brownell is right, or Truman is right, or whether Harry Dexter White was a spy. We are being asked to make up our minds about access to evidence. And if that should become our habit, then our heritage is in danger.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. Now here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We were discussing the case of Harry Dexter White...and the danger of drawing conclusions based on insufficient evidence. Mark Twain once wrote: "I think there is no sense in forming an opinion when there is not enough evidence to form it on. If you build a person without any bones in him he may look fair enough to the eye, but he will be limber and cannot stand up; and I consider that evidence is the bones of an opinion."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday November 10, 1953.

This is the news:

Former President Truman has been supbened to testify before the House un-American activities Committee in Washington on Friday. Mr. Truman, who is visiting here in New York, accepted the subpena without comment. THE COMMITTEE HAS ALSO SUBPOENED GOV. BYRNES OF SOUTH CAROLINA. Officials at the Library of Congress cannot find any precedent for a Congressional committee issuing a subpena to a former President.. although some, such as Herbert Hoover, have testified by invitation. [No invitation was sent Mr. Truman.] [redacted]

The former President left his hotel this evening to deliver a speech before the New York alumni of City College. He will say that [redacted] "in times such as these, when the national government is yielding to hysteria rather than resisting it, our colleges and unversities [redacted] have a special obligation to maintain freedom of thought and inquiry." There is no mention in his prepared text of the Harry Dexter White case.. the reason for his subpena by the House committee. But Mr. Truman will say that its ridiculous to charge that as President he was soft towards Communism. He thinks the record will prove this. The former president also speaks of "demagogues among us who play on our fears to further partisan political ends."

Also in New York today was Herbert Brownell, the attorney general, who last week made the charge that the White House had F.B.I. information that the late Harry Dexter White was a Russian spy, at the time the government promoted White to a high government post. Brownell said today that this White case is only the beginning of a Republican expose of what he called Democratic coddling of Communists. Brownell said 40 college students in the New York area will be hired to work part-time hunting Communists. They won't be paid but they'll get college credits for their work.."digging out evidence to prosecute subversives and criminals."

In Arkansas, Democratic Chairman Mitchell charged that the Republicans "tried a former president of the United States for treason before a luncheon club" to divert attention from scandals in New York. This was a reference to Brownell's Friday speech to a club in Chicago. And Mitchell, questioned about the New York scandals, charged in essence, that Brownell is a prospective candidate to replace Governor Dewey and New York Republican officials are now involved with harness racetrack officials and labor racketeers in questionable activities. Mitchell says some of the Republicans involved are close friends of Governor Dewey.

In Washington today the President announced that he will meet with Prime Minister Churchill and French Premier Laniel in Bermuda, in early December. I'd like to discuss this meeting in a few minutes.

The President told a convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy that "to reach a high place in your profession, you do not have to surrender principles..you can stand for what you believe."

And Mr. Eisenhower rejected a Tariff Commission recommendation to increase duties on low-priced briarwood pipes.

Republican Senator Cooper of Kentucky told the President today, that "there is a general failure on the part of the people, to understand what is being done in Washington." He urged the President to make a few short, simple radio and television reports to the people, to relieve "their confusion about what is going on"..particularly on farm, fiscal and defense issues.

Defense Secretary Wilson says the Pentagon cannot excuse those American prisoners of war in Korea, who confessed to germ warfare charges.. even under very heavy pressure.

At Panmunjom the staff officers--allied and enemy--assigned to try to work out arrangements for a Korean peace conference, are said to have reached a deadlock. And General Timaya.. the Indian commander of the repatriation commission.. says he has almost abandoned hope for getting the prisoner of war explanation program started again. He referred to the "interminable stoppages and demoralizing interruptions" by the Communists.

We now have some early results from the election in the Philippines. The Philippine News Service says that the present lead of Ramon Magsaysay "appears likely to develop into a unprecedented landslide victory" over President Quirino. In Manila, with almost all precincts reporting, Magsaysay has 170-thousand votes to Quirino's 42-thousand.

In this country, General Motors today bought--for 26 million dollars.. the Kaiser Motors plant at Willow Run, near Detroit. [Kaiser will move its operations to Toledo.] [redacted]

In Iran, former Premier Mossadegh alternately laughed, wept and yawned at his court martial. He said he resisted the Shah's order dismissing him because he thought it was a hoax.

Edward R. Murrow: November 10, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Secretary Dulles, in an unusually thorough analysis of the latest Soviet note, pointed out yesterday that the Kremlin had made a number of specific demands. The first of these is that talks between Britain, France and the United States cease. The note branded such talks as collusion against the desire of the Soviet Union to deal with each of the Big Three separately. Only six days passed after the arrival of the note before it was announced that President Eisenhower, Prime Minister Churchill, Premier Laniel and their Foreign Ministers are to meet in Bermuda. This is a postponed meeting, nevertheless the resumption of what the Kremlin calls collusion comes with a promptitude that the Kremlin will be able to misunderstand.

The Soviet note went on to demand an immediate suspension of steps to complete the unification of Western Europe and the establishment of the European Defense Community. High on the agenda for the Bermuda meeting is expected to be the problem of unifying Western Europe and ratifying the defense community treaty. So the second request of the Kremlin no doubt will be disregarded.

The note further asked that mutual security arrangements such as NATO be abandoned, along with base arrangements in Europe, Asia and Africa, that give strength to collective security. The Bermuda Conference is timed to finish in time for the NATO meeting of the Foreign Ministers in Paris December 11th, and in a way prepares for it. So another demand of the Kremlin is sure to be disregarded. That makes the Bermuda Conference an eloquent and thorough reply to the Soviet note. The Kremlin, ending a phase of its dealings with the West, has stated what it wants from the West, stated it clearly and coldly, without palaver and propaganda. The West replies by going back to its policy of building strength and improving its collaboration. Undoubtedly a note will be sent to Moscow replying to the Soviet note. But the Kremlin will not need to read it; it already will know the score.

Reports persist that Sir Winston Churchill is preparing to revive at Bermuda his proposal of May 11th of top level four-power talks. This is authoritatively denied in British quarters, and the Prime Minister in Parliament told a Labor questioner today that he adhered to his last foreign policy speech that indicated this was not the time for such talks. Reports from French sources that Malenkov was not averse to a four-power top level meeting caused only incredulity in British and French government sources. Mr. Dulles pointed out yesterday that the Soviet note laid down conditions that had to be met before such a conference even could be held.

As Mr. Dulles put it, in order to gain the privilege of a conference with the rulers of the Soviet and Chinese communist world, the European and Asian nations, not now subject to Soviet domination, must first unconditionally surrender their protective principles and practise of security, and present themselves to the Soviet Union, divided and weakened. In the face of such a condition, a proposal for a four-power conference hardly comes into consideration. And one can be just as sure that Malenkov would be glad ~~XXXXX~~ if a top level conference could be held on such a condition.

The Soviet note as seen from Bonn has a special bearing on the outlook for German unification. It is read there as a formal notice that no compromises will be made with the West, to unify Germany. Walter Lippmann, writing from Bonn for the New York Herald Tribune, believes the Kremlin is serving notice, particularly on the satellite and communist leadership, that for the present, Soviet policy is to maintain the status quo, and nothing will be done to reach agreement with the West that involves concessions in Eastern Europe. While the Kremlin's policy may not be to expand further in the West, it promises that no retreat will be made in the East.

The signs multiply that the Kremlin's interest in the status quo is at least partly due to internal strain. The Soviet Union faces a drastic reduction in its food supply. How serious it is, and how much it will affect Russian civilians, cannot be said without knowing the size of the autumn harvest. But it is noted that Marshal Voroshilov, in his anniversary address last week, did not give a figure of the wheat crop, usually included on such an occasion. ~~XXXXXX~~ All that he said was, that measures should be taken to increase the yield per acre. It has been gathered from other official Soviet statements that the crop this year (vegetables as well as wheat) is at the level of 1928. Since that year, the Soviet population has increased a third. So the per capita food supply may have fallen dangerously. The satellites would expect this to mean increased pressure on them to export food to the Soviet Union, even though some of them face crop shortages of their own.

Reports from Soviet sources have suggested that a prosperous economy was now in a position to increase the supply of consumer goods, and raise the standard of living. But it may not be true, that the Kremlin is planning to pamper civilians, after having overworked, under-clothed and under-housed them for years. That is, the new policy may not be designed as a reward; it may simply be readjustment in an emergency - one to make sure of peace at home in the face of great anxiety.

If this is what has dominated policy makers in the Kremlin, they must rely for whatever successes they score in dealings with the West on friction within the Western coalition. The Soviet dream has always been that the West will conveniently collapse and so bear out the forebodings about Capitalism of Karl Marx, and that before then the Western Alliance will fall apart. It is true that the Western coalition does sometimes stumble and falter. But at Bermuda it has a fresh opportunity to implement its belief in the necessity and advantages of solidarity, political, military and economic.

There are those who argue that political conferences never achieve what they set out to do. The recent record would seem to bear this out. Nonetheless, as William Sumner once [redacted] (remarked:) "Association is the simplest mode of attaining accord between men." If this be so, then those attending the Bermuda meeting would do well to recall these words by Seneca:"Lack of confidence is not the result of difficulty; the difficulty comes from lack of confidence."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Former President Truman has been subpoenad to testify before the House un-American activities Committee in Washington on Friday. Mr. Truman, who is visiting here in New York, accepted the subpoena without comment. The committee has also subpoenad Governor Byrnes of South Carolina. Officials at the Library of Congress cannot find any precedent for a Congressional committee issuing a subpoina to a former President - although some, such as Herbert Hoover, have testified by invitation. No invitation was sent Mr. Truman.

The former President left his hotel this evening to deliver a speech before the New York alumni of City College. He will say that "in times such as these, when the national government is yielding to hysteria rather than resisting it, our colleges and universities have a special obligation to maintain freedom of thought and inquiry." There is no mention in his prepared text of the Harry Dexter White case O the reason for his subpoena by the House committee. But Mr. Truman will say that its ridiculous to charge that as President he was soft towards Communism. He thinks the record will prove this. The former president also speaks of "demagogues among us who play on our fears to further partisan political ends."

Also in New York today was Herbert Brownell, the attorney general, who last week made the charge that the White House had FBI information that the late Harry Dexter White was a Russian spy, at the time the government promoted White to a high government post. Brownell said today that this White case is only the beginning of a Republican expose of what he called Democratic coddling of Communists. Brownell said 40 college in the New York area will be hired to work part-time hunting Communists, They won't be paid but they'll get college credits for their work - "digging out evidence to prosecute subversives and criminals."

In Arkansas, Democratic Chairman Mitchell charged that the Republicans "tried a former president of the United States for treason, before a luncheon club", to divert attention from scandals in New York. This was a reference to Brownell's Friday speech to a club in Chicago. And Mitchell, questioned about the New York scandals, charged in essence, that Brownell is a prospective candidate to replace Governor Dewey and New York Republican officials are now involved with harness racetrack officials and labor racketeers in questionable activities. Mitchell says some of the Republicans involved are close friends of Governor Dewey.

In Washington today the President announced that he will meet with Prime Minister Churchill and French Premier Laniel in Bermuda in early December. I'd like to discuss this meeting in a few minutes.

The President told a convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy that "to reach a high place in your profession you do not have to surrender principles - you can stand for what you believe."

And Mr. Eisenhower rejected a Tariff Commission recommendation to increase duties on low-priced briarwood pipes.

Republican Senator Cooper of Kentucky told the President today that "there is a general failure on the part of the people to understand what is being done in Washington." He urged the President to make a few short, simple radio and television reports to the people to relieve "their confusion about what is going on" - particularly on farm, fiscal and defense issues.

Defense Secretary Wilson says the Pentagon cannot excuse those American prisoners of war in Korea who confessed to germ warfare charges - even under very heavy pressure.

At Panmunjom the staff officers - allied and enemy - assigned to try to work out arrangements for a Korean peace conference, are said to have reached a deadlock. And General Timaya - the Indian commander of the repatriation commission says he has almost abandoned hope for getting the prisoner of war explanation program started again. He referred to the "interminable stoppages and demoralizing interruptions" by the Communists.

We now have some early results from the election in the Philippines. The Philippine News Service says that the present lead of Ramon Magsaysay "appears likely to develop into an unprecedented landslide victory" over President Quirino. In Manila, with almost all precincts reporting, Magsaysay has 170-thousand votes to Quirino's 42-thousand.

In this country, General Motors today bought for 26-million dollars - the Kaiser Motors plant at Willow Run, near Detroit. Kaiser will move its operations to Toledo.

In Iran, former Premier Mossadegh alternately laughed, wept and yawned at his court martial. He said he resisted the Shah's order dismissing him because he thought it was a hoax.

Secretary Dulles, in an unusually thorough analysis of the latest Soviet note, pointed out yesterday that the Kremlin had made a number of specific demands. The first of these is that talks between Britain, France and the United States cease. The note branded such talks as collusion against the desire of the Soviet Union to deal with each of the Big Three separately. Only six days passed after the arrival of the note before it was announced that President Eisenhower, Prime Minister Churchill, Premier Laniel and their Foreign Ministers are to meet in Bermuda. This is a postponed meeting, nevertheless the resumption of what the Kremlin calls collusion comes with a promptitude that the Kremlin will be able to understand.

The Soviet note went on to demand an immediate suspension of steps to complete the unification of Western Europe and the establishment of the European Defense Community. High on the agenda for the Bermuda meeting is expected to be the problem of unifying Western Europe and ratifying the defense community treaty. So the second request of the Kremlin no doubt will be disregarded.

The note further asked that mutual security arrangements such as NATO be abandoned, along with base arrangements in Europe, Asia and Africa, that give strength to collective security. The Bermuda Conference is timed to finish in time for the NATO meeting of the Foreign Ministers in Paris December 11th, and in a way prepares for it. So another demand of the Kremlin is sure to be disregarded. That makes the Bermuda Conference an eloquent and thorough reply to the Soviet note. The Kremlin, ending a phase of its dealings with the West, has stated what it wants from the West, stated it clearly and coldly, without palaver and propaganda. The West replies by going back to its policy of building strength and improving its collaboration. Undoubtedly a note will be sent to Moscow replying to the Soviet note. But the Kremlin will not need to read it; it already will know the score.

Reports persist that Sir Winston Churchill is preparing to revive at Bermuda his proposal of May 11th of top level four-power talks. This is authoritatively denied in British quarters, and the Prime Minister in Parliament told a Labor questioner today that he adhered to his last foreign policy speech that indicated this was not the time for such talks. Reports from French sources that Malenkov was not averse to a four-power top level meeting caused only incredulity in British and French government sources. Mr. Dulles pointed out yesterday that the Soviet note laid down conditions that had to be met before such a conference even could be held.

As Mr. Dulles put it, in order to gain the privilege of a conference with the rulers of the Soviet and Chinese communist world, the European and Asian nations not now subject to Soviet domination must first unconditionally surrender their protective principles and practice of security, and present themselves to the Soviet Union divided and weakened. In the face of such a condition a proposal for a four-power conference hardly comes into consideration. And one can be just as sure that Malenkov would be glad if a top level conference could be held on such a condition.

The Soviet note as seen from Bonn has a special bearing on the outlook for German unification. It is read there as a formal notice that no compromises will be made with the West to unify Germany. Walter Lippman, writing from Bonn for the New York Herald Tribune, believes the Kremlin is serving notice particularly on the satellite and communist leadership that for the present Soviet policy is to maintain the status quo, and nothing will be done to reach agreement with the West that involves concessions in Eastern Europe. White the Kremlin's policy may not be to expand further in the West it promises that no retreat will be made in the East.

The signs multiply that the Kremlin's interest in the status quo is at least partly due to internal strain. The Soviet Union faces a drastic reduction in its food supply. How serious it is, and how much it will affect Russian civilians, cannot be said without knowing the size of the autumn harvest. But it is noted that Marshal Voroshilov, in his anniversary address last week did not give a fugure of the wheat crop, usually included on such an occasion. All that he said was that measures should be taken to increase the yield per acre. It has been gathered from other official Soviet statements that the crop this year - vegetables as well as wheat - is at the level of 1928. Since that year the Soviet population has increased a third. So the per capita food supply may have fallen dangerously. The satellites would expect this to mean increased pressure on them to export food to the Soviet Union even though some of them face crop shortages of their own.

Reports from Soviet sources have suggested that a prosperous economy was now in a position to increase the supply of consumer goods, and raise the standard of living. But it may not be true that the Kremlin is planning to pamper civilians, after having overworked, underclothed and underhoused them for years. That is, the new policy may not be designed as a reward; it may simply be readjustment in an emergency - one to make sure of peace at home in the face of great anxiety.

If this is what has dominated policy makers in the Kremlin, they must rely for whatever successes they score in dealings with the West on friction within the Western coalition. The Soviet dream has always been that the West will conveniently collapse and so bear out the forebodings about Capitalism of Karl Marx, and that before then the Western Alliance will fall apart. It is true that the Western coalition does sometimes stumble and falter. But at Bermuda it has a fresh opportunity to implement its belief in the necessity and advantages of solidarity, political, military and economic.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: There are those who argue that political conferences never achieve what they set out to do. The recent record would seem to bear this out. Nonetheless, as William Sumner once remarked: "Association is the simplest mode of attaining accord between men." If this be so, then those attending the Bermuda meeting would do well to recall these words by Seneca: "Lack of confidence is not the result of difficulty; the difficulty comes from lack of confidence."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday
November 11, 1953.

This is the news:

The President said today that he does not believe that former President Truman knowingly appointed to office a man identified as a Communist spy. Mr. Eisenhower told reporters such a conclusion is "inconceivable." And as far as he's concerned he would not have subpenead Mr. Truman and Supreme Court Justice Clark to testify on the HARRY DEXTER White case [redacted] -- AS The House Un-American activities committee has DONE. [redacted] For 18 minutes reporters questioned Mr. Eisenhower on Attorney General Brownell's charge last week that an F.B.I. report IDENTIFYING Harry Dexter White AS A SPY had been delivered to Mr. Truman in 1945. Mr. Eisenhower said today: he has full confidence in Brownell.. he does not want to prejudice Brownell's case before he is ready to announce more concrete evidence on his charge. The President said: he had told Brownell to make a public report on a factual basis. [redacted] He rejected the idea that Brownell has pictured Mr. Truman as "harboring [redacted] a known traitor." The President said Brownell never told him that Mr. Truman had actually seen the report said to have labelled White as a spy. Mr. Eisenhower also said he would not at any time be a party to an INJUSTICE [redacted] to anyone. He is confident Brownell is proceeding along the paths of justice.

And Attorney General Brownell tonight issued a statement which said in part: "In charging that there has been laxity, which I believe to be the case, there is no intention of impugning the loyalty of any high official of the prior Administration." Brownell also released a State Department memorandum which former Secretary of State Byrnes sent to the White House, addressed to the President, calling Mr. Truman's attention to an F.B.I. report on Harry Dexter White. Brownell says this helps prove that the White House knew about White before the Senate confirmed his promotion.

And Byrnes, now governor of South Carolina, today refused to accept a House un-American Activities Committee subpena to testify in Washington tomorrow. He said such a subpena could paralyze the Administration of a sovereign state by taking its governor out of the state. The Governor offered to testify before a subcommittee in South Carolina. The committee says it will send such a committee to the state.

Mr. Truman, still in New York, has not said what he plans to do about his subpena. But one of his visitors today quoted him as saying: "The committee better be there on time (friday) because I will."

Chairman Velde of the committee says he still wants to hear from Mr. Truman. [redacted]

A democratic member of the committee, Walter of Pennsylvania, says Velde acted illegally in issuing the subpena. He points out that in 1948 the committee VNANIMOUSLY agreed that [redacted] "no charge of Communist affiliation had been raised" against Harry White.. although he was accused of "playing footsie" with Communists. And Walter also suggests that in the period when the F.B.I. REPORT WAS ISSUED, [redacted], General Eisenhower was army chief of staff and his then chief of intelligence, General Vandebergh, also received an F.B.I. report on Harry White.

Another Democratic Committee member, Moulder of Missouri, wants Attorney General Brownell to be the first witness.."to present his charges."

Senator Mc Carthy thinks the President was "being a gentleman" at his news conference today. Mc Carthy says Mr. Truman [redacted] "deliberately, knowingly, and without regard for the interests of the country, appointed, promoted, and advanced, a Communist."

Adlai Stevenson issued a statement saying in part: "To subpena a former president, a supreme court justice and a governor is a serious thing... to do it for partisan purposes is more than serious." The [redacted] (STEVENSON) [redacted] statement adds: "I (WOULD) [redacted] urge impetuous politicians to consider the impact of such disrespect and reckless procedure on the high office of the presidency and the world we must lead. We must distinguish between (USEFUL) [redacted] information in the national interest and heedless partisan showmanship."

In Indiana, Republican National Committeeman Gates says the White charge gives the Republicans "an issue", and if it can be EXPLOITED [redacted] Indiana will elect Republican congressmen next year.

And Democratic Senator Ellendar of Louisiana wants to see the F.B.I. report that Attorney General Brownell says shows that White was a spy. The Senator says he has been assured time and again by F.B.I. Chief Hoover that the F.B.I. never makes a conclusion.

At the White House news conference today, the President asked reporters to remind the nation that this was armistice Day. And later he went to the Tomb of the Unknown soldier to pay the traditional silent tribute to this nation's honored dead. At his news conference the President also noted that the Navy has reported that race segregation has been virtually abolished at all installations in the south. He called this most encouraging. And Mr. Eisenhower said he was "pleased" at the victory of a Republican in yesterday's California congressional race.

National Chairman Hall called this victory an endorsement of the Eisenhower Administration and a good omen for 1954.

Democratic Chairman Mitchell said: "when the Republicans win they call it an endorsement of the Administration; when they lose it's a local skirmish."

At the United Nations today, the General Assembly voted 53 to 5 to hear American charges that the Communists in Korea committed atrocities against allied prisoners. The vote came after Andrie Vishinsky said the Americans were trying to inflame public opinion with flagrant lies..to kill the Korean political conference.

In the Philippines, half of the vote in the Monday presidential election is now in. And Ramon Magsaysay holds a three to one lead over President Quirino, who has not yet conceded defeat.

And here in New York, Republican State Senator Wicks has accused Governor Dewey and top Republican leaders of trying to "intimidate and coerce" the State Senate into voting him out of his office as acting leiutenant governor. Wicks has been under fire from the Governor because he visited an extortionist, Joey Fay, at Sing Sing prison.

Edward R. Murrow: November 11, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

The whole episode concerning Harry Dexter White, Attorney General Brownell - a hundred and sixty million other people - and the subpoena served on Mr. Truman and others, has become very confusing and contradictory. So I thought to ask my colleagues in Europe, what sort of impression the whole thing was making over there. It should be explained that when a foreign correspondent receives such a request, he goes to official spokesmen, the politicians, to the newspapers, and to old-time friends whose judgment regarding the tides of public opinion in their own country has been proved sound over the years. Here is a summary of reports received from England, France and Germany.

Government officials in all three countries aren't talking. In London the conservative Daily Mail says the summoning of Mr. Truman will "be beyond the imagination of most Britons....." Eisenhower's press conference statement, disassociating himself from the subpoena, was the first news in the whole unsavory episode, which has not damaged American prestige. The paper wonders if the Administration has "decided to adopt McCarthy tactics permanently." It is also pointed out that the charges against Mr. Truman were made not with the formal dignity and full authority of Mr. Brownell's office, as Attorney General; but in a partisan speech, on a Party political occasion.

Dick Hottelet cables from Germany that official quarters refuse to comment for the record - they just roll their eyes. He reports that many German politicians are appalled by the serious damage that must be done to the prestige of the office of the presidency. The Germans are depending on President Eisenhower, and they fear that if each new administration is to hound its predecessor with legal or semi-legal action, such a precedent must paralyze initiative. One prominent German newspaper man said: "This looks like the apex of McCarthyism." A German politician said: "This seems like an approach to political cannibalism. The Western world is divided and confused enough as it is. America is the leader, and it can't afford the doubtful luxury of successive administrations devouring each other."

The leading newspaper in Paris says that the French are only spectators, without the right to interfere in this American drama. But its editor then goes on to say: "Eisenhower's news conference remarks today are a remarkable evasion of the issue, and an admission of the political aims of this attack on Truman. Eisenhower reproaches the Congressional Committee for subpoenaing the ex-President, but he says not a word about the original accusation made by his Attorney General Brownell, which provoked the Congressional action." The French editor wants to know: "Did Brownell accuse Truman publicly with Eisenhower's knowledge, or not? Is the charge true or false? And what are the facts?" And he says: "What a coincidence that Brownell should make his ~~XXXXXXXXX~~ revelation on the eve of the important California election; whereas Eisenhower now plays the role of the fair-minded conciliator, sympathising with the persecuted Truman, after the California election is safely in the bag."

The biggest daily newspaper in Paris, middle-of-the-road and generally pro-American, asks the question: "To what extent can the Attorney General use secret police reports to accuse private citizens? To what extent should F.B.I. reports be used for political ends?" Another influential Paris newspaper, Le Monde, says: "They could have asked Truman to make a deposition rather than subpoenaing him with implications of criminality." The paper continues: "The gravest aspect of this ugly business is that it gives new life and impetus to McCarthyism, which was just at the point of losing speed and prestige."

DAVE Schoenbrun informs me from Paris that the Belgian, Dutch and Swiss papers take very much the same line as the French papers I have just quoted.

It may be that the European editors are too cynical, or that distance distorts their view. In some cases they haven't got their facts exactly right, but facts are hard to come by in this case. ~~[illegible]~~

But whatever the facts -(and there are few enough)- and whatever the outcome, it is clear from these reports, that in the eyes of many Europeans who believe what they read in their papers, our stature has diminished.

This is a big world in which we live. But it doesn't take long for an incident in one country to set off a chain reaction in other countries. As for that reaction, we would do well to remember something the Greek Euripides once said:"Far different do things appear far off than close at hand." And since this is so, the Roman Quintilian was probably right when he concluded:"It is the worst impressions which are the most lasting."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President said today that he does not believe that former President Truman knowingly appointed to office a man identified as a Communist spy. Mr. Eisenhower told reporters such a conclusion is "inconeivable." And as far as he's concerned he would not have subpoened Mr. Truman and Supreme Court Justice Clark to testify on the Harry Dexter White case as the House Un-American activities committee has done. For 18 minutes reporters questioned Mr. Eisenhower on Attorney General Brownell's charge last week that an FBI report identifying Harry Dexter White as a spy had been delivered to Mr. Truman in 1945. Mr. Eisenhower said today: he has full confidence in Brownell - he does not want to prejudice Brownell's case before hd is ready to announce more concrete evidence on his charge. The President said: he had told Brownell to make a public report on a factual basis. He rejected the idea that Brownell has pictured Mr. Truman as "harboring a known traitor." The President said Brownell never told him that Mr. Truman had actually seen the report said to have labelled White as a spy. Mr. Eisenhower also said he would not at any time be a party to an injustice to anyone. He is confident Brownell is proceeding along the paths of justice. And Attorney General Brownell tonight issued a statement which said in part: "In charging that there has been laxity, which I believe to be the case, there is no intention of impugning the loyalty of any high official of the prior Administration." Brownell also released a State Department memorandum which former Secretary of State Byrnes sent to the White House, addressed to the President, calling Mr. Truman's attention to an FBI report on Harry Dexter White. Brownell says this helps prove that the White House knew about White before the Senate confirmed his promotion.

And Byrnes, now governor of South Carolina, today refused to accept a House un-American Activities Committee subpoena to testify in Washington tomorrow. He said such a subpoena could paralyze the Administration of a sovereign state by taking its governor out of the state. The Governor offered to testify before a subcommittee in South Carolina. The committee says it will s end such a committee to the state.

Mr. Truman, still in New York, has not said what he plans to do about his subpoena. But one of his visitors today quoted him as saying: "The committee better be there on time (Friday) because I will."

Chairman Velde of the committee says he still wants to hear from Mr. Truman. A democratic member of the committee, Walter of Pennsylvania, says Velde acted illegally in issuing the subpoena. He points out that in 1948 the committee unanimously agreed that "no charge of Communist affiliation had been raised" against Harry White - although he was accused of "playing footsie" with Communists. And Walter also suggests that in the period when the FBI report was issued, General Eisenhower was army chief of staff and his then chief of intelligence, General Vondenbergh, also received an FBI report on Harry White. Another Democratic Committee member, Moulder of Missouri, wants Attorney General Brownell to be the first witness "to present his charges."

Senator McCarthy thinks the President was "being a gentleman" at his news conference today. McCarthy says Mr. Truman "deliberately, knowingly and without regard for the interests of the country, appointed, promoted and advanced a Communist.

Adlai Stevenson issued a statement saying in part: "To Subpoena a former president, a supreme court justice and a governor is a serious thing - to do it for partisan purposes is more than serious." The Stevenson statement adds: "I would urge impetuous politicians to consider the impact of such disrespect and reckless procedure on the high office of the presidency and the world we must lead. We must distinguish between useful information in the national interest and heedless partisan showmanship."

In Indiana, Republican National Committeeman Gates says the White charge gives the Republicans "an issue", and if it can be exploited Indiana will elect Republican congressmen next year.

And Democratic Senator Ellendar of Louisiana wants to see the FBI report that Attorney General Brownell says shows that White was a spy. The Senator says he has been assured time and again by FBI Chief Hoover that the FBI never makes a conclusion.

At the White House news conference today, the President asked reporters to remind the nation that this was armistice Day. And later he went to the Tomb of the Unknown soldier to pay the traditional silent tribute to this nation's honored dead. At his news conference the President also noted that the Navy has reported that race segregation has been virtually abolished at all installations in the south; he called this most encouraging. And Mr. Eisenhower said he was "pleased" at the victory of a Republican in yesterday's California congressional race. National Chairman Hall called this victory an endorsement of the Eisenhower Administration and a good omen for 1954.

Democratic Chairman Mitchell said: "When the Republicans win they call it an endorsement of the Administration; when they lose it's a local skirmish."

At the United Nations today the General Assembly voted 53 to 5 to hear American charges that the Communists in Korea committee atrocities against allied prisoners. The vote came after Andrei Vishinsky said the Americans were trying to inflame public opinion with flagrant lies to kill the Korean political conference.

In the Philippines half of the vote in the Monday presidential election is now in. And Ramon Magsaysay holds a three to one lead over President Quirino who has not yet conceded defeat.

And here in New York, Republican State Senator Wicks has accused Governor Dewey and top Republican leaders of trying to "intimidate and coerce" the State Senate into voting him out of his office as acting lieutenant governor. Wicks has been under fire from the Governor because he visited an extortionist, Joey Fay, at Sing Sing prison.

The whole episode concerning Harry Dexter White, Attorney General Brownell - a hundred and sixty million other people - and the subpoena served on Mr. Truman and others, jas become very confusing and contradictory. So I thought to ask my colleagues in Europe what sort of impression the whole thing was making over there. It should be explained that when a foreign correspondent receives such a request he goes to official spokesmen, the politicians, to the newspapers, and to old-time friends whose judgment regarding the tides of public opinion in their own country has been proved sound over the years. Here is a summary of reports received from England, France and Germany.

Government officials in all three countries aren't talking. In London the conservative Daily Mail says the summoning of Mr. Truman will "be beyond the imagination of most Britons" - "Eisenhower's press conference statement disassociating himself from the subpoena was the first news in the whole unsavory episode which has not damaged American prestige. The paper wonders if the Administration has "decided to adopt McCarthy tactics permanently." It is also pointed out that the charges against Mr. Truman were made not with the formal dignity and full authority of Mr. Brownell's office, as Attorney General; but in a partisan speech on a Party political occasion.

Dick Hottelet cables from Germany that official quarters refuse to comment for the record - they just roll their eyes. He reports that many German politicians are appalled by the serious damage that must be done to the prestige of the office of the presidency. The Germans are depending on President Eisenhower, and they fear that if each new administration is to hound its predecessor with legal or semi-legal action, such a precedent must paralyze initiative. One prominent German newspaper man said: "This looks like the apex of McCarthyism." A German politician said: "This seems like an approach to political cannibalism. The Western world is divided and confused enough as it is. America is the leader, and it can't afford the doubtful luxury of successive administrations devouring each other."

The leading newspaper in Paris says that the French are only spectators, without the right to interfere in this American drama. But its editor then goes on to say: "Eisenhower's news conference remarks today are a remarkable evasion of the issue, and an admission of the political aims of this attack on Truman. Eisenhower reproaches the Congressional Committee for subpoenaing the ex-President, but he says not a word about the original accusation made by his Attorney General Brownell, which provoked the Congressional action." The French editor wants to know: "Did Brownell accuse Truman publicly with Eisenhower's knowledge, or not? Is the charge true or false? And what are the facts?" And he says: "What a coincidence that Brownell should make his revelation on the eve of the important California election; whereas Eisenhower now plays the role of the fair-minded conciliator, sympathizing with the persecuted Truman, after the California election is safely in the bag."

The biggest daily newspaper in Paris, middle-of-the-road and generally pro-American, asks the question: "To what extent can the Attorney General use secret police reports to accuse private citizens? To what extent should FBI reports be used for political ends?" Another influential Paris newspaper, Le Monde, says: "They could have asked Truman to make a deposition rather than subpoenaing him with implications of criminality." The paper continues: "The gravest aspect of this ugly business is that it gives new life and impetus to McCarthyism, which was just at the point of losing speed and prestige."

Dave Schoenbrun informs me from Paris that the Belgian, Dutch and Swiss papers take very much the same line as the French papers I have just quoted.

It may be that the European editors are too cynical, or that distance distorts their view. In some cases they haven't got their facts exactly right, but facts are hard to come by in this case. But whatever the facts (and there are few enough) and whatever the outcome, it is clear from these reports that in the eyes of many Europeans who believe what they read in their papers, our stature has diminished.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: This is a big world in which we live. But it doesn't take long for an incident in one country to set off a chain reaction in other countries. As for that reaction, we would do well to remember something the Greek Euripides once said: "Far different do things appear far off than close at hand." And since this is so, the Roman Quintilian was probably right when he concluded: "It is the worst impressions which are the most lasting."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Thursday - Nov. 12, 1953

This is the news:

Former President Truman today rejected a subpena from the House Un-American activities Committee..on constiutional grounds [which we'll hear him explain in a few minutes.] Mr. Truman made his view known shortly after the Committee chairman, Republican Representative Velde, had announced an indefinite postponement of Mr. Truman's scheduled appearance before the committee here in Washington tomorrow. Then, later, after a committee meeting, Velde issued a statement saying: the Committee does not intend to try to "force" the former president's "co-operation." Velde said there is no question of Mr. Truman's personal loyalty. But Velde says the nation's security was jeopardized because some responsible authority in the Truman administration failed to alert the Senate and the people as to the nature of the late Harry Dexter White's activities. (Attorney General Brownell has charged that that White was a Russian spy.)

The House committee also voted down a Democratic request to subena Brownell. It did invite him to tell his story. And he has accepted. The committee has let stand its supbena to Supreme Court Justice Clark to appear tomorrow.

~~White House reporters asked news Secretary James Hagerty if the White House had interceded in any way to make Velde or his committee postpone a hearing on Mr. Truman. Hagerty said: no.~~

On the Senate side, the Jenner committee today heard from General Vaughn, former military aide to Mr. Truman. He said he was a "conveyer" of FBI reports... he received many.. remembers nothing about the one on White. Vaughn says if the Justice Department says a report on White was delievred to him, then that is so. The committee also heard from former assistant attorney general, T. Lamar Caudle. He said, that in 1946, he saw a long report indicating that White was a member of a Communist underground. But he doesn't remember the EXACT date.. doesn't recall that it labelled White a spy.. doesn't remember any proof that the statements in the report were true. Caudle suggested cryptically -what some newspapers are atttirbuting to friends of Mr. Truman.. that Harry Dexter White may have been kept under F.B.I. surveillance, after the Senate confirmed his promotion.

Chairman Jenner sees no need for his Senate committee to call

Mr. Truman. Jenner says "the record speaks for itself." It is apparent to him that the F.B.I. report on White was communicated to Mr. Truman. ~~But Republican Senator Hendrickson of New [illegible] committee member [illegible] not convinced that the record [illegible]~~

The President left Washington tonight by train for a two-day visit to Canada: to promote continental defense and stimulate international trade. Before he left Mr. Eisenhower announced that the United States and Canada are setting up a joint committee to smooth out trade and other economic problems between the two countries.

And the President spent a half hour with the governor general of Pakistan. The Indian press says if we make a military alliance with Pakistan it will be considered an unfriendly act by India.

~~Vice President Nixon arrived in [illegible] tonight [illegible] some 50-thousand South Koreans turned out [illegible] Seoul.~~

In the Philippines, President Quirino has conceded defeat in his re-election campaign. And President-elect Magsaysay says the democratic election in his country "ensures that its free instiutions will survive and flourish for generations to come."

In West Germany today, Chancellor Adenauer said "every scrap of gossip over the possible withdrawal of American troops" from Europe will provoke fear and uneasiness. He wants an increase in our forces.

And in France, General De Gaulle called for the defeat of the European army plan. He wants France to take the lead in bringing Russia and the west together.

At the United Nations, Isreali Ambassador Eban proposes an immediate meeting of political and military representatives of Isreal and Jordan.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson said today he's not interested in personal popularity. And he's seeking an agricultural program that will serve "all agriculture" and "all the people."

Interior Secretary McKay says the oil industry has never asked the government for special favors and he'd like to see "the record stand that way."

In New York state, the Republican executive committee has voted unanimously to demand the resignation of Republican State Senator Wicks who is now majority leader and acting president of the State Senate. The committee says confidence in Wicks has been destroyed because he visited extortionist

Joe

Joey Faye in prison.

In New York city today, former President Truman [redacted] told Reporters his view on the subpena he received from the House un-American activities Committee. No questions were asked, by Mr. Truman's order. He merely RECORDED this letter sent to Chairman Velde of the Committee:

(runs 5;

ending "I shall be happy to appear"

So far as we can determine Mr Trumans historical references are correct... However it should be pointed out that they all apply to relations between the president and the congress while the President was still in office...there is no precedent...no court decision dealing with a subpeona issued to a former President...So Mr Truman establishes a precedent by refusing to appear.....No one is going to try to force him to do so... We dont know whether Supreme court Justice Tom Clark will show up tomorrow morning ..but the guessing is that he wont.....The House comittees invitation to Attorney General Brownell to appear before it may serve to ~~give this xxxxxxxxxx~~ produce some additional information...As things stand now the Attorney General made a charge...he has not produced hard evidence to support that charge...President Eisenhower says he will do so... ...and there the matter stands for the moment...but it wont stand there for very long... There are skilled professional investigators and politicians on both sides of this controversy...there is no shortage of documents....or opinions...but a great shortage of ~~fax~~ evidence

Bob Dixon

Last night we [redacted]x reported the European reaction to our domestic squabble .....

It wasnt favourable.....Tonght there is a dispatch from London reporting that the Conservative Daily Express carries a front page cartoon...showing two American Senators standing beneath a bust of George Washington...Says one Senator to the other...

"Personally Senator,Id like to reopen the whole Cherry Tree Inquiry.I figure he was shielding someone"

Good night and good luck...

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Former President Truman today rejected a subpoena from the House Un-American activities Committee on "constitutional grounds" which we'll hear him explain in a few minutes. Mr. Truman made his view known shortly after the Committee chairman, Republican Representative Velde, had announced an indefinite postponement of Mr. Truman's scheduled appearance before the committee here in Washington tomorrow. Then, later, after a committee meeting, Velde issued a statement saying: the Committee does not intend to try to "force" the former president's "cooperation." Velde said there is no question of Mr. Truman's personal loyalty. But Velde says the nation's security was jeopardized because some responsible authority in the Truman administration failed to alert the Senate and the people as to the nature of the late Harry Dexter White's activities. Attorney General Brownell has charged that White was a Russian spy.

The House committee also voted down a Democratic request to subpoena Brownell. It did invite him to tell his story and he has accepted. The committee has let stand its subpoena to Supreme Court Justice Clark to appear tomorrow.

On the Senate side, the Jenner committee today heard from General Vaughn, former military aide to Mr. Truman. He said he was a "conveyer" of FBI reports - he received many - remembers nothing about the one on White. Vaughn says if the Justice Department says a report on White was delivered to him then that is so. The committee also heard from former assistant attorney general, T. Lamar Caudle. He said that in 1946 he saw a long report indicating that White was a member of a Communist underground. But he doesn't remember the exact date - doesn't recall that it labelled White a spy - doesn't remember any proof that the statements in the report were true. Caudle suggested cryptically (what some newspapers are attributing to friends of Mr. Truman) that Harry Dexter White may have been kept under FBI surveillance after the Senate confirmed his promotion.

Chairman Jenner sees no need for his Senate committee to call Mr. Truman. Mr. Jenner says "the record speaks for itself." It is apparent to him that the FBI report on White was communicated to Mr. Truman.

The President left Washington tonight by train for a two-day visit to Canada: to promote continental defense and stimulate international trade. Before he left, Mr. Eisenhower announced that the United States and Canada are setting up a joint committee to smooth out trade and other economic problems between the two countries.

And the President spent a half hour with the governor general of Pakistan. The Indian press says if we make a military alliance with Pakistan it will be considered an unfriendly act by India.

In the Philippines, President Quirino has conceded defeat in his re-election campaign. And President-elect Magsaysay says the democratic election in his country "insures that its free institutions will survive and flourish for generations to come."

In West Germany today, Chancellor Adenauer said "every scrap of gossip over the possible withdrawal of American troops" from Europe will provoke fear and uneasiness. He wants an increase in our forces.

And in France, General DeGaulle called for the defeat of the European army plan. He wants France to take the lead in bringing Russia and the west together.

At the United Nations, Israeli Ambassador Eban proposes an immediate meeting of political and military representatives of Israel and Jordan.

Secretar of Agriculture Benson said today he's not interested in personal popularity. And he's seeking an agricultural program that will serve "all agriculture and "all the people."

Secretary of Interior McKay says the oil industry has never asked the government for special favors and he'd like to see "the record stand that way."

In New York state, the Republican executive committee has voted unanimously to demand the resignation of Republican State Senator Wicks who is now majority leader and acting president of the State Senate. The committee says confidence in Wicks has been destroyed because he visited extortionist Joey Faye in prison.

In New York city today, former President Truman told reporters his view on the subpoena he received from the House un-American activities Committee. No questions were asked, by Mr. Truman's order. He merely recorded this letter sent to Chairman Velde of the Committee:

TRUMAN: The subpoena does not state the matters upon which you seek my testimony, but I assume from the press stories that you seek to examine me with respect to matters which occurred during my tenure of the President of the United States.

In spite of my personal willingness to cooperate with your committee, I feel constrained by my duty to the people of the United States to decline to comply with the subpoena.

In doing so, I am carrying out the provisions of the Constitution of the United States; and am following a long line of precedents, commencing with George Washington himself in 1796. Since his day, Presidents Jefferson, Monroe, Jackson, Tyler, Polk, Fillmore, Buchanan, Lincoln, Grant, Hayes, Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, Coolidge, Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt have declined to respond to subpoenas or demands for information of various kinds by Congress.

The underlying reason for this clearly established and universally recognized constitutional doctrine has been succinctly set forth by Charles Warren, one of our leading constitutional authorites, as follows:

'In this long series of contests by the Executive to maintain his constitutional integrity, one sees a legitimate conclusion from our theory of government Under our Constitution, each branch of the Government is designed to be a coordinate representative of the will of the people. Defense by the Executive of his constitutional powers becomes in very truth, therefore, defense of popular rights - defense of power which the people granted to him.

It was in that sense that President Cleveland spoke of his duty to the people not to relinquish any of the powers of his great office. It was in that sense that President Buchanan stated the people have rights and prerogatives in the execution of his office by the President which every President is under a duty to see 'shall never be violated in his person' but 'passed to his successors unimpaired by the adoption of a dangerous precedent.' In maintaining his rights against a trespassing Congress, the President defends not himself, but popular government; he represents not himself but the people.

President Jackson repelled an attempt by the Congress to break down the separation of powers in these words:

"For myself I shall repel all such attempts as an invasion of the principles of justice as well as of the Constitution, and I shall esteem it my sacred duty to the people of the United States to resist them as I would the establishment of a Spanish Inquisition."

I might commend to your reading the opinion of one of the committees of the House of Representatives in 1879, House Report 141 March 3, 1879, Forty-fifth Congress, Third Session, in which the House Judiciary Committee said the following: "The Executive is as independent of either house of Congress as either house of Congress is independent of him, and they cannot call for the records of his actions, or the action of his officers against his consent, any more than he can call for any of the journals or records of the House or Senate."

It must be obvious to you that if the doctrine of separation of powers and the independence of the Presidency is to have any validity at all, it must be equally applicable to a President after his term of office has expired when he is sought to be examined with respect to any acts occurring while he is President.

The doctrine would be shattered, and the President, contrary to our constitutional government, would become a mere arm of the Legislative Branch of the Government if he would feel during his term of office that his every act might be subject to official inquiry and possible distortion for political purposes.

If your intention, however, is to inquire into any acts as a private individual either before or after my Presidency and unrelated to any acts as President, I shall be happy to appear."

MURROW: So far as we can determine Mr. Truman's historical references are correct. However, it should be pointed out that they all apply to relations between the president and the Congress while the President was still in office. There is no precedent - no court decision dealing with a subpoena issued to a former President. So Mr. Truman establishes a precedent by refusing to appear. No one is going to try to force him to do so. We don't know whether Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark will show up tomorrow morning - but the guessing is that he won't. The House Committees invitation to Attorney General Brownell to appear before it may serve to produce some additional information. As things stand now the Attorney General made a charge; he has not produced hard evidence to support that charge; President Eisenhower says he will do so; and there the matter stands for the moment; but it won't stand there for very long. There are skilled professional investigators and politicians on both sides of this controversy - there is no shortage of documents - or opinions - but a great shortage of evidence.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Last night we reported the European reaction to our domestic squabble - it wasn't favorable. Tonight there is a dispatch from London reporting that the Conservative Daily Express carries a front page cartoon - showing two American Senators standing beneath a bust of George Washington. Says one Senator to the other: "Personally Senator, I'd like to reopen the whole Cherry Tree Inquiry. I figure he was shielding someone."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday, Nov. 13, 1953

This is the news:

Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark has told the House Un-American Activities Committee, that he will not answer a subponea to testify in the Harry Dexter White case. Clark, in a letter to the Committee, said: "The independence of the three branches of our government, is the cardinal principle on which our constitutional system is founded." He indicated, however, that he might answer written questions, submitted by members of the Committee. Representative Velde, who heads the Committee, said he "appreciated this very nice letter." And that the Committee probably would send some questions for Clark to answer.

The Justice turned down the subponea for the same constitutional reasons former President Truman cited. But today, Mr. Truman told newsmen that simply because he didn't comply with the subponea, should not be interperted to mean that he'll have nothing further to say about the case. (Incidentally, Mr. Truman said he didn't know where the subponea was...he thinks a souvenir hunter may have taken it.)

Earlier in the day, Republican Representative Clardy of Michigan confirmed reports, that the publicity director of the Republican National Committee had strongly argued against issuing the Truman subponea.

According to Represtative Clardy, the National Committee seemed to feel that this was "bad business."

The ranking Democrat of the House Un-American Committee, Rep. Francis of Pennsylvania, said he understood that White was kept in the government with the approval of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover./Francis said this was so FBI agents could keep a closer check on White's activities. There's been no comment from the FBI. But Representative Francis thinks Hoover should be called to testify.

On Tuesday, the Senate Internal Sub-Committee will question Attorney General Brownell...who just a week ago tonite made the ~~original~~ original charge against White. Members of the House committee have been invited to attend the session as "spectators."

Secretary of the Army Stevens said today there are no suspected spies among the 33 workers suspended on loyalty charges at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey.(Senator Mc Carthy's sub-committee has been holding hearings on this matter.)/Stevens said that several of those recently suspended have been re-instated. He promised that he would "personally see that all of the others are given a fair hearing."

Russia's Foreign Minister Molotov held one of his rare news conferences today. And immediately accused the three Western Powers of blocking a meeting of the foreign ministers. He urged a five-power meeting with no fixed agenda. The Fifth Power he said must be what he described as the "indispensable partner" -- Red China.

At the United Nations, Andrei Vishinksy was saying much the same thing. But Britain's Minister of State, Selwyn Lloyd said that if Russia is sincere in its desire to lessen world tension, Britain, the United States and France are prepared to discuss specific issues: Germany, Korea and Dis-Armament.

In Austria, Dr. Karl Gruber has resigned as foreign minister, after having filled that post for the past 8 years. He became involved in a dispute with Conservatives over remarks he made about them in a book.

Prime Minister Churchill's Conservative government held its 18 vote majority in Commons, with two victories in special by-elections. Both districts voted the same, percentage-wise, as they did in the 1951 general election.

At Panmunjom, staff officers have ended six days of secret negotiations on arrangements for a Korean peace conference. They've turned the talks back to the diplomats. The meetings resume tonite.

South Korea's President Syngman Rhee told newsmen today that if we stand firm, the enemy will come to terms. Rhee said he believed the Communists would accept a proposal to withdraw Chinese troops from North Korea, and all allied forces from South Korea. He said this would be a face-saving solution for the Communists. But, he warned:"If peaceful unification of his country is not achieved within the 90-day limit, South Korea will be forced to take independent action."

Republican Senator Bridges of New Hampshire says he does not agree with Secretary Dulles' recent statement that the Eisenhower administration might some day recognize Red China. Bridges said that if Dulles was quoted correctly,"he does not reflect my views, or those of the American people I have met."

The State Department has denied a statement made by an executive of the Chrysler Corporation that trade might be re-opened with Communist China. The Department says studies are constantly being made on this subject, but there's been no change in our policy...and none is contemplated.

Here in New York, J. Russel Sprague has resigned as a member of the Republican National Committee. He said he is giving up the post because of criticism regarding ownership of stock in trotting tracks now under investigation. Governor Dewey says Sprague is "above reproach." He's asked him to "reconsider."

A Committee of the National Academy of Sciences has backed up the report of the Bureau of Standards that the battery additive AD-X2 is "without merit." The Committee was appointed by Commerce Secretary Weeks, who originally charged the Bureau with not being "sufficiently objective" in this study.

[redacted] says we can [redacted] 1954.

Edward R. Murrow: November 13, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Somewhere in the twilight zone between fact and legend, there lived in an English forest eight or nine hundred years ago, a band of outlaws. # They were depicted as a special kind of outlaws, who preferred to rob the rich, and often to do so for the benefit of the poor. The feats and adventures of Robin Hood and his companions have been part of the lore of English-speaking children for many centuries. # Scientifically and legally speaking, there is no proof whatever that Robin Hood ever existed. He may have been simply a forest sprite like Puck. # Maid Marian, the girl in the Robin Hood story, almost certainly was added to the legend by Morris dancers, hundreds of years after the Robin Hood ballads first became popular.

But real or not, Robin Hood today made news, on a state, national and international level. This was thanks to the vigilance of Mrs. Thomas J. White, now serving a four-year term, as a Republican member of Indiana's Textbook Commission. In that capacity, she recommended that all references to Robin Hood be deleted from textbooks in Indiana, because, she says, the Robin Hood story tends to support communism. She declared that there is in existence, a communist directive to stress the story of Robin Hood. "They want to stress it" she is quoted as saying of the communists, "because Robin Hood robbed the rich and gave their wealth to the poor." She added that it is just a smearing of law and order, and anything that disrupts law and order is meat for the communists.

Wilbur Young, Indiana State Superintendent of Education, today promised to re-read the Robin Hood literature, to be able better to judge whether it should be banned as communist doctrine. If he does his homework thoroughly, he will become familiar with the treatment of the legend by such noted British writers as Ben Jonson, Tennyson and Alfred Noyes. If these writers themselves should now come under suspicion, it can be said, at least for Ben Jonson and Tennyson, that they pre-dated the rise of modern communism, and that any communist propaganda in their writings about Robin Hood is purely coincidental. But Alfred Noyes would not be able to shelter behind the calendar in this way, and would have to find some other defense.

School children in Indianapolis are not as yet to be disinfected from the taint of the Robin Hood legend, for the city superintendent of schools, R.H. Shibler, said - perhaps irrelevantly and perhaps not - that he didn't believe the Robin Hood story was any worse for children, than what they get to see on television. The State Superintendent pointed out that Mrs. White is only one of seven commissioners, and he said she was entitled to her own opinion. And that having been said, the matter might have subsided had it not passed into the domain of international news.

The present High Sheriff of Nottingham, England, by name William John Cox, today vigorously denied that Robin Hood was a communist. Holding the same office that was filled by the sheriff who, in the legend, tried so unsuccessfully to enforce the law against the bandits, his opinion may carry some weight. He says that Robin Hood was a gangster, and that if he lived today he would have to go after him. The English, he went on to say, have never minded their children learning about Robin Hood, Maid Marian, Little John, and the rest, because, he said: "It's our heritage." But he quickly explained: "Mind you, I'm not a communist; I'm a member of the Conservative Party."

Mrs. White's work did not stop with advocating purging Indiana textbooks of references to Robin Hood. She also recommended that all references to the Quaker religion be deleted. She said that this was because, to use her words, "Quakers believe in not fighting wars. All the men they get to believe that they don't need to go to war" she said, "the better off the communists are."

Mrs. White stated that she often consults Indiana's Senator William E. Jenner about questionable books, and about persons mentioned in textbooks.

She did not say whether she consulted him about the subversive implications of the Quaker faith. If she had, it might have occurred to the Senator that Pennsylvania is a Republican stronghold, and that the Penn in Pennsylvania is the name of one of the founders of the Quaker faith.

A remarkable week is ending in the United States. And it is not altogether inappropriate that it should be notable for the dedication of a new, historic rogues' gallery - this one a gallery of "Red rogues of the past." And it is fitting that nominated to it should be such differing servants of communism as Robin Hood, and William Penn.

Sufficient time remains for one item of current intelligence. The weather man holds the view that the week end will be clear and seasonably warm throughout most of the country.

Even the story of Robin Hood has now apparently become a point of controversey. Perhaps the best way to explain it is in these words by Sir John Harington:"It is a proverb used long ago, we soon believe the thing we would have so." Oscar Wilde - 3-hundred years later - put it another way when he said:"I can believe anything provided it is incredible."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday November 16 1953

This is the news:

The Big Three western powers today accused Russia of trying to avoid negotiations on Germany and Austria. In seperate notes delivered to the Kremlin, the United States, Great Britain and France also said the Russians are trying to avoid negotiations on "anything which might have positive results." And all three powers rejected as "totally unacceptable" the recent Soviet note explaining Moscow's "conditions" for a Big Four foreign ministers conference.

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that at the Bermuda conference, scheduled for next month, he and the President and French Premier Laniel will discuss how to arrange a meeting with the Russians. Sir Winston also said that a Laborite move to change Britain's present two-year conscription system would alarm her allies and imply to the Communist world that the North Atlantic treaty forces are breaking up.

In this country tonight, former President Truman will address the nation on the Harry Dexter White Case. Mr. Truman's speech will be heard over many of these stations at 11 p.m. eastern standard time.

In Washington, Eric Severeid (LATE THIS AFTERNOON obtained SOME) information on what's in that speech and some of the reasoning and circumstances behind its preparation. ERIC - - ending: "anyway the wind is rising and everybody around here is frantically trying to batten down the political hatches.")

(runs 4;30

In Washington today, a federal grand jury indicted Herbert A. Bergson, a former assistant attorney general in the Truman administration. He is charged with violating a law that makes it a misdemeanor for a former federal employe to prosecute any claims against the government involving a matter with which the employe was connected when he worked for the government. The law BANS such activities during a two-year period after an employe leaves government work. Bergson accuses Attorney General Brownell of "a reckless disregard of his sworn duty" for bringing about the prosecution. He issued a statement saying he never "switched sides" in connection with any litigation "inside or outside the government."

Another federal jury indicted Warren L. Stephenson on charges of perjury in connection with his testimony about an alleged attempt at influence peddling. Stephenson, a former Republican leader in the District of Columbia, is accused of FALSELY denying that he tried to do business with a California company that makes rocket launchers for the navy.

The President today sent a letter to the C.I.O. convention meeting in Cleveland. Mr. Eisenhower pledged that his proposals for amending the Taft-Hartley labor law will be fair to labor, management and the public.

Commerce Secretary Weeks today proposed the gradual removal of tariffs except where they are needed to protect American wage rates in industries "important to a substantial segment of the American economy."

The State Department says the western powers are working on the idea of a five-power conference to settle the Trieste dispute. But there is no information on how soon any such conference would get underway.

General Grunther, the North Atlantic treaty commander, visited West Germany today and said the supreme allied command in Europe "refuses to consider any alternative " to the proposed six-nation European army. "General [redacted] Grunther said "we consider French-German [redacted] collaboration essential."

In Korea, the Communists today called off their talks with prisoners of war who refuse to return home. There was no explanation for breaking-off the questioning. Yesterday, after a ten day interval, the Communists questioned North Koreans. Only six changed their minds and decided to go home; 221 others refused all explanations.

At the United Nations today, [redacted] Jordan told the Security Council that the Palestine situation is now as grave as it was in 1948 when the Arab-Isreali war broke out. The Jordan representative warned that what he called Isreal's "expansionist policy must be checked " to avoid "a full-fledged conflict." Isreali Ambassador Eban said later, he was disappointed because of Jordan's "negative response" to his proposal for direct talks on border difficulties.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson said today that a preliminary study shows that the drop in prices paid to farmers for low grade cattle is being reflected in lower prices to consumers for low grade beef.

In Kansas City today Robert C. Greenlease, whose son Bobby was kidnapped and Killed, testified at the trial of the kidnappers: Carl Austin Hall and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady. Greenlease said that the

the first kdinap note he received from the couple said:"If you try to trap us your wife and your other child and yourself will be killed." Hall and Heady have pleaded guilty. A 12-man jury is now hearing evidence before deciding whether they should die in the poison gas chamber. The attorney appointed to defend the couple called for a short trial.. said there is no need to call any witnesses. But Federal Judge Reeves ordered the trial to proceed..with witnesses.

Here in New York today, Senator Mcc Carthy said he will soon hold public hearings on alleged spy activity at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey. He said this is necessary "so there can be no misconception of what espionage means." Army Secretary Stevens has said that any army investigation at Fort Monmouth has produced no evidence of espionage.

Chairman Velde of the House un-American Activities Committee says he is going to seek a new law to deny government contracts to any firms that recognizes and deals with Communist-dominated unions.

And in North Carolina, the F,B.I. today arrested 14 persons described as former members of the Ku Klux Klan. They are charged with kidnapping and flogging a bother and sister. F.B.I. Chief Hoover says these arrests are a continuation of the F.B.I. investigations of flogging in certain areas of North and South Carolina.

The United States today informally ~~informed~~ told India that we are considering a military aid agreement with ~~Pakistan~~ Pakistan. This is a standard agreement aimed at strengthening the defenses of the free world. We're told that this country is not negotiating with ~~Iran~~ Pakistan for military bases in return for our military assistance. Yesterday, India's Prime Minister Nehru said that a military pact between the United States and Pakistan would have "some very far-reaching consequences in the whole structure of things in South Asia."

As my colleague, Eric Severeid pointed out, Mr. Truman's speech tonite represents the joint effort of a number of his Washington aides. In drawing up the general outline, they were undoubtedly guided by the thinking of both Seneca and Montaigne who said: "Let us say what we feel and feel what we say...be not ashamed to say what you are not ashamed to think."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Eric Sevareid on Edward R. Murrow News - CBS Radio - Nov. 16, 1953

The substance of the Truman speech for tonight was composed here in Washington by Truman's former associates in office. What I am going to say now about the speech was written before the Truman text began to clear over the news agency wires a few minutes ago; we can see how right or wrong I am later on. Anyway, in rough outline, the speech that went to Truman from here can be summarized as follows:

It will be a defense against the Brownell statements on the Harry Dexter White case, but it will also be an attack, and a very strong one, against the Republicans. The former President will charge that retreading the White case is a purely political maneuver on the part of Republican leaders.

He will declare that the decision to keep White in a government post, after FBI dossiers were available casting grave suspicion on White, was a decision that he, Truman, took himself, that he assumes full responsibility for it, and that he took it after receiving the advice and recommendations of other high officials in his government.

These officials were, chiefly, the late Chief Justice Vinson, who was Treasury Secretary at the period involved and Associate Justice Tom Clark, who was then Attorney General, the man to whom J. Edgar Hoover and the FBI directly reported.

Truman is expected to say that the crucial FBI report on White came to him in early February of '46; and that it was handed to him by his military aide, Major General Harry Vaughan. He will say that on February 6, he got a memorandum from Secretary of State Byrnes, that he sent the original of it over to Treasury Secretary Vinson, and that he, Vinson and Byrnes got together to discuss it -- the same day, as he recalls it.

He is also expected to say that around the same time, he was told that Vinson and Clark had discussed the White case between themselves. That, presumably, was the conference that figures in many Washington reports today - a conference at which J. Edgar Hoover is also reported to have been present. It was at that conference, according to current reports, that it was decided to keep White on, in order to watch him and in order to keep whatever Communist associates he might have had from becoming alarmed. Truman tonight, however, is not expected to claim that Mr. Hoover played a part in this decision. Incidentally, he is not expected to attack Governor Byrnes, despite his bitter dislike of the former Secretary of State.

So far as I can discover in advance, Truman will not quote from any official records or memoranda to back up his defense. Fred Vinson's personal records from his period as head of the Treasury were kept in a safe at the Treasury, and Truman's friends here have not had access to them, if they still exist.

The country apparently will have to take Harry Truman's word for what happened, or doubt his word, as it wishes. Fred Vinson is dead; J. Edgar Hoover may or may not publicly testify as to his own knowledge in the whole affair of long ago, and Tom Clark is now on the Supreme Court, and is currently refusing to become involved in any way, because of his position. The original plan of Truman's friends here was to have Clark issue a statement, then for the former president to make his speech. That was abandoned; then the plan was to have Clark answer some questions, in a letter to Truman which Truman could read over the air; according to my information, Clark has also backed away from that.

If my information is as solid as I believe it to be, it is out of Clark's own recollections that this whole line of defense has grown, over the last few days; but Clark, who would be the chief and indispensable supporting witness, refuses to be publicly drawn into this hullaballoo, much, incidentally, to the anger of other Truman associates, who have pointed out to no avail that Clark owes his whole career to Truman.

Truman is expected to end his speech tonight with a blistering assault on Attorney General Brownell, who set off the whole dynamite trail with his Chicago speech a week ago Friday. Many people in this town are asking this question tonight: Why does Truman not wait until Brownell has testified under oath tomorrow at the hearing and then respond? The only answer I can find seems insubstantial, but still, very much in line with the Truman personality. When Truman first read the speech - he tried it aloud - he got so excited about it that he said the people have a right to know the story at once, so he insisted on going ahead at once.

That's about it, Ed. The Truman speech may not entirely lay the White ghost; certainly, administration officials appear serenely confident they can effectively rebut whatever the former President has to say. In any case the wind is rising, and everybody around here is frantically ~~trying~~ trying to button down the political hatches.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Big Three western powers today accused Russia of trying to avoid negotiations on Germany and Austria. In separate notes delivered to the Kremlin, the United States, Great Britain and France also said the Russians are trying to avoid negotiations on "anything which might have positive results." And all three powers rejected as "totally unacceptable"the recent Soviet note explaining Moscow's"conditions"for a Big Four foreign ministers conference.

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that at the Bermuda conference, scheduled for next month, he and the President and French Premier Laniel will discuss how to arrange a meeting with the Russians. Sir Winston also said that a Laborite move to change Britain's present two-year conscription system would alarm her allies and imply to the Communist world that the North Atlantic treaty forces are breaking up.

In this country tonight, former President Truman will address the nation on the Harry Dexter White Case. Mr. Truman's speech will be heard over many of these stations at 11 p.m. eastern standard time. In Washington, Eric Severeid late this afternoon obtained some information on what's in that speech and some of the reasoning and circumstances behind its preparation. Eric.

SEVEREID: The substance of the Truman speech for tonight was composed here in Washington by Truman's former associates in office. What I am going to say now about the speech was written before the Truman text began to clear over the news agency wires a few minutes ago; we can see how right or wrong I am later on. Anyway, in rough outline, the speech that went to Truman from here can be summarized as follows: It will be a defense against the Brownell statements on the Harry Dexter White case, but it will also be an attack, and a very strong one, against the Republicans. The former President will charge that retreading the White case is a purely political maneuver on the part of Republican leaders. He will declare that the decision to keep White in a government post, after FBI dossiers were available casting grave suspicion on White, was a decision that he, Truman, took himself, that he assumes full responsibility for it, and that he took it after receiving the advice and recommendations of other high officials in his government. These officials were, chiefly, the late Chief Justice Vinson, who was Treasury Secretary at the period involved and Associate Justice Tom Clark, who was then Attorney General, the man to whom J. Edgar Hoover and the FBI directly reported. Truman is expected to say that the crucial FBI report on White came to him in early February of '46; and that it was handed to him by his military aide, Major General Harry Vaughan. He will say that on February 6, he got a memorandum from Secretary of State Byrnes, that he sent the original of it over to Treasury Secretary Vinson, and that he, Vinson and Byrnes got together to discuss it - the same day, as he recalls it. He is also expected to say that around the same time, he was told that Vinson and Clark had discussed the White case between themselves That, presumably, was the conference that figures in many Washington reports today - a conference at which J. Edgar Hoover is also reported to have been present. It was at that conference, according to current reports, that it was decided to keep White on, in order to watch him and in order to watch him and in order to keep whatever Communist associates he might have had from becoming alarmed. Truman tonight, however, is not expected to claim that Mr. Hoover played a part in this decision. Incidentally, he is not expected to attack Governor Byrnes, despite his bitter dislike of the former Secretary of State.

So far as I can discover in advance, Truman will not quote from any official records or memoranda to back up his defense. Fred Vinson's personal records from his period as head of the Treasury were kept in a safe at the Treasury, and Truman's friends here have not had access to them, if they still exist.

The country apparently will have to take Harry Truman's word for what happened, or doubt his word, as it wishes. Fred Vinson is dead; J. Edgar Hoover may or may not publicly testify as to his own knowledge in the whole affair of long ago, and Tom Clark is now on the Supreme Court, and is currently refusing to become involved in any way, because of his position. The original plan of Truman's friends here was to have Clark issue a statement, then for the former president to make his speech. That was abandoned; then the plan was to have Clark answer some questions, in a letter to Truman which Truman could read over the air; according to my information, Clark has also backed away from that.

If my information is as solid as I believe it to be, it is out of Clark's own recollections that this whole line of defense has grown, over the last few days; but Clark, who would be the chief and indispensable supporting witness, refuses to be publicly drawn into this hullaballoo, much, incidentally, to the anger of other Truman associates, who have pointed out to no avail that Clark owes his whole career to Truman.

Truman is expected to end his speech tonight with a blistering assault on Attorney General Brownell, who set off the whole dynamite trail with his Chicago speech a week ago Friday. Many people in this town are asking this question tonight: Why does Truman not wait until Brownell has testified under oath tomorrow at the hearing and then respond? The only answer I can find seems insubstantiel, but still, very much in line with the Truman personality.

When Truman first read the speech - he tried it aloud - he got so excited about it that he said the people have a right to know the s tory at once, so he insisted on going ahead at once.

That's about it, Ed. The Truman speech may not entirely lay the White ghost; certainly, administration officials appear serenely confident they can effectively rebut whatever the former President has to say. In any case the wind is rising, and everybody around here is frantically trying to button down the political hatches.

In Washington today, a federal grand jury indicted Herbert A. Bergson, a former assistant attorney general in the Truman administration. He is charged with violating a law that makes it a misdemeanor for a former federal employee to prosecute any claims against the government involving a matter with which the employee was connected when he worked for the government. The law bans such activities during two-year period after an employee leaves government work. Bergson accuses Attorney General Brownell of "a reckless disregard of his sworn duty" for bringing about the prosecution. He issued a statement saying he never "switched sides" in connection with any litigation "inside or outside the government."

Another Federal Jury indicted Warren L. Stephenson on charges of perjury in connection with his testimony about an alleged attempt at influence peddling. Stephenson, a former Republican leader in the District of Columbia, is accused of falsely denying that he tried to do business with a California company that makes rocket launchers for the navy.

The President today sent a letter to the CIO convention meeting in Cleveland. Mr. Eisenhower pledged that his proposals for amending the Taft-Hartley labor law will be fair to labor, management and the public.

Commerce Secretary Weeks today proposed the gradual removal of tariffs except where they are needed to protect American wage rates in industries "important to a substantial segment of the American economy."

The State Department says the western powers are working on the idea of a five-power conference to settle the Trieste dispute. But there is no information on how soon any such conference would get underway.

General Grunther, the North Atlantic treaty commander, visited West Germany today and said: the supreme allied command in Europe "refuses to consider any alternative" to the proposed six-nation European army." General Grunther said "we consider French-German collaboration essential."

In Korea, the Communists today called off their talks with prisoners of war who refuse to return home. There was no explanation for breaking-off the questioning. Yesterday, after a ten-day interval, the Communists questioned North Koreans. Only six changed their minds and decided to go home; 221 others refused all explanations.

At the United Nations today, Jordan told the Security Council that the Palestine situation is now as grave as it was in 1948 when the Arab-Israeli war broke out. The Jordan representative warned that what he called Israel's "expansionist policy must be checked "to avoid a full-fledged conflict." Israeli Ambassador Eban said later he was disappointed because of Jordan's "negative response" to his proposal for direct talks on border difficulties.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson said today that a preliminary study shows that the drop in prices paid to farmers for low grade cattle is being reflected in lower prices to consumers for low grade beef.

In Kansas City today Robert C. Greenlease, whose son Bobby was kidnapped and killed, testified at the trial of the kidnappers: Carl Austin Hall and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady. Greenlease said that the first kidnap note he received from the couple said: "If you try to trap us your wife and your other child and yourself will be killed." Hall and Heady have pleaded guilty. A 12-man jury is now hearing evidence before deciding whether they should die in the poison gas chamber. The attorney appointed to defend the couple called for a short trial - said there is no need to call any witnesses. But Federal Judge Reeves ordered the trial to proceed - with witnesses.

Here in New York today, Senator McCarthy said he will soon hold public hearings on alleged spy activity at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey. He said this is necessary "so there can be no misconception of what espionage means." Army Secretary Stevens has said that an army investigation at Fort Monmouth has produced no evidence of espionage.

Chairman Velde of the House Un-American Activities Committee says he is going to seek a new law to deny government contracts to any firms that recognizes and deals with Communist-dominated unions.

And in North Carolina, the FBI today arrested 14 persons described as former members of the Ku Klux Klan. They are charged with kidnappings and flogging a brother and sister. FBI Chief Hoover says these arrests are a continuation of the FBI investigations of flogging in certain areas of North and South Carolina.

The United States today informally told India that we are considering a military aid agreement with Pakistan. This is a standard agreement aimed at strengthening the defenses of the free world. We're told that this country is not negotiating with Pakistan for military bases in return for our military assistance. Yesterday, India's Prime Minister Nehru said that a military pact between the United States and Pakistan would have "some very far-reaching consequences in the whole structure of things in South Asia."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: As my colleague, Eric Severeid pointed out, Mr. Truman's speech tonight represents the joint effort of a number of his Washington aides. In drawing up the general outline, they were undoubtedly guided by the thinking of both Seneca and Montaigne who said: "Let us say what we feel and feel what we say - be not ashamed to say what you are not ashamed to think."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday Mar. 17, 1953

This is the news:

Attorney General Brownell said today, "there is considerable doubt" that anything was done by Former President Truman "to protect the national interest" in the case of Harry Dexter White. Mr. Truman said last night that he promoted White, but kept him under F.B.I. surveillance, after receiving F.B.I. reports on White. Brownell said today that the records fail to show that anything was done to interfere "with a spy ring of which White was a part." Mr. Brownell also told a Senate committee he is certain that when its investigation is completed, the committee will conclude that "there was an unwillingness on the part of Mr. Truman and others around him to face the facts." And he said "this delusion, this attitude, may have resulted in great harm to our nation." Mr. Brownell said he personally evaluated the F.B.I. evidence and decided that White was a Communist spy.

F.B.I. Chief J. Edgar Hoover also testified. He denied what Chairman Jenner called "a widely publicized rumor", that Hoover had agreed to promote White and keep the F.B.I. checking on him. Hoover said he was not a party to any such agreement.. it was made by higher authorities..

And when then Attorney General Clark told him Mr. Truman wanted White kept under surveillance, Hoover agreed to do this. Hoover also said, in answer to a question, that promoting White to the International Monetary Fund "certainly hampered" the F.B.I's work. Because the F.B.I. has no jurisdiction in the INTERNATIONAL Monetary Fund building, just as it has no jurisdiction in the United Nations building. Hoover also said, that he told then Attorney General Clark it would be "unwise" to let White remain in the government.. on the basis of F.B.I. reports that mentioned White. I should like to review today's testimony in a few minutes.

Former President Truman had no comment today on the Brownell testimony, but he did say he was "highly pleased" with the number of telegrams he's received complimenting him on his speech of last night.

3

Secretary of State Dulles said today that all of the prisoners we hold in Korea should be set free on January 22.. (whether or not a peace conference is underway.) The Secretary thus indirectly rejected a proposal by India's Prime Minister Nehru that the future of these prisoners should be examined..if plans for the peace conference collapse. Mr. Dulles said today that "armistice provisions are clear on this point".. ~~the prisoners must be set free 120 days after the "explanations" began, if no other agreement on their future has been reached at the political conference. And if there is no such conference, the prisoners still go free.~~

~~Mr. Dulles also told reporters we are not negotiating with Pakistan for any military agreement, to ship American weapons to them.~~

In Korea today, Ambassador Arthur Dean told the enemy we would be willing to invite neutral nations to a Korean peace conference: if the two sides reach an agreement on Korea and want to move on to consider broader Asian questions.. and if the conference bogs down and appears unable to make progress. We have rejected an enemy proposal to invite Russia, India, Pakistan, Burma and Indonesia to a conference to be held at Panmunjom. Ambassador White predicts" "a long horse trade."

Admiral Radford, the chairman of our joint chiefs of staff, said in Madrid today that the "build-up phase" of American defense is now complete... The next "maintenance phase" should cost American taxpayers less money. "But,"he said," it is still very expensive."

Harold Stassen ~~[illegible]~~ told the National Grange in Vermont today that the Administration wants to expand farm markets overseas because American farmers are producing "more food than we need or can consume."

In Cleveland, the C.I.O. convention condemned Attorney General Brownell's charge against Mr. Truman as "a disgraceful chapter in American history." The convention also approved a "no-raiding agreement" that's already been approved by the A.F. of L.

And in Albany, the State Senate adjourned today without acting on Governor Dewey's move to oust acting Leiutenant Governor Wicks.

Edward R. Murrow: November 17, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Todays ~~The~~ hearing before the Senate Internal Security Sub-Committee offered a strong contrast with Mr. Truman's broadcast last night. The broadcast had been filled with feeling. That was - or was not - justified according to the way a listener himself felt. But it did not offer many facts. The committee hearing was not keyed to an emotional level, however strongly emotions played just below the surface. And a flood of facts poured out, indeed poured so steadily that not many listeners (or viewers) would have been able to appraise all of them.

But there is not too much difficulty in comparing the two occasions. Certain central issues were at stake and definite answers were supplied for them. To take the first, the issue that stirred Mr. Truman's feelings most deeply, the accusation that he promoted a man he knew to be a communist spy, and thereby betrayed the interest of his country. Mr. Brownell said again he was not impugning the loyalty of those dealing with Mr. White. He did mean the President, when he said that those in authority promoted Mr. White. But he did not bear down on Mr. Truman for knowing Mr. White was a spy when he promoted him. The reports Mr. Truman had received and read were enough to convince any reasonable man, he declared, that Mr. White was not a suitable person to promote. He declined to use the word disloyalty in describing the President. He was asked if he would substitute the word "stupid". No, he said, nobody could call Mr. Truman stupid. He chose the word "blindness." And he reminded the committee of Mr. Truman's insistence that the inquiries into disloyalty in the government were "red herrings". Since Mr. Brownell supplied a mass of details about the activities of Mr. White which the President knew about - and which the public had not heard until this afternoon - he fortified the use of the word "blindness". Inasmuch as the Republicans are to campaign next year on the softness of the Truman administration toward suspected communists they can chalk up the hearing this afternoon as productive. It gave them quite a lot of ammunition.

The next central issue was the one raised by Mr. Truman in saying Mr. White was put on the monetary fund so that he and his associates could be better kept under surveillance. After Mr. J. Edgar Hoover had finished his testimony not a great ~~MMX~~ deal was left of this explanation. True, something was left. The then Secretary Vinson and the then Attorney General Clark did confer on the problem of Mr. White in Mr. Hoover's presence. They had to decide how to advise the President to deal with the appointment to the monetary fund, after the Senate had confirmed him. The two Cabinet ~~M~~ Members, he said, saw three alternatives. The President could dismiss White, although there was not enough evidence to convict him in court. Or he could tell White that he had changed his mind about signing his commission and ask him to resign. But under a Supreme Court ruling, he could not refuse to sign the commission. The third alternative was to name Mr. White to the fund, not as its head, but merely as American representative, and then to make sure he was surrounded by men safe in respect to security, and see that surveillance continued. The President took the third course and surveillance went on, though Mr. White was not surrounded by safe men, since Mr. Coe was made secretary of the fund, and later Mr. Glasser got a job too - both men linked with Mr. White in providing information to the Soviet spy apparatus.

It has been published that Mr. Hoover agreed to Mr. White's transfer to the monetary job so as to make surveillance more effective. Mr. Truman didn't say this, he didn't even mention Mr. Hoover. Even so Mr. Hoover emphatically denied the story, and denied that he ever had asked that a suspected man be kept on his job to make it easier to get evidence against him.

As to Mr. White, he did not agree or disagree, since his province was to inform, but not evaluate his information. That had to be done by those politically responsible. The committee room loudly applauded Mr. Hoover's description of his duties. But a moment later it heard Mr. Hoover say that in a conversation with the Attorney General he had said that Mr. White was not fit for promotion. That lapse only goes to show how hard it must be for Mr. Hoover not to evaluate the data he has gone to such pains to obtain.

A fourth issue also was given some light. This is the reason why White was not indicted by the federal grand jury. The reason, according to Mr. Brownell, was that much of the evidence had been obtained by wire-tapping or from sources made possible by wire-tapping. Such evidence is not admissable in a federal court. Mr. Brownell drove home this point by urging a law permitting the use of evidence collected by wire-tapping in similar cases in the future.

It does add to the public's information of the case to say that this was the reason - or one reason - Mr. White was not indicted by the federal grand jury. But the public still does not have the evidence to prove legally that Harry White was a Russian spy. It does not have the evidence obtained by wire-tapping. It is not able to judge whether this would have been sufficient to convict him. And it does not know the rest of the evidence. Mr. Brownell produced a good deal of data in his statement to the committee - data which he said he had taken from the F.B.I. files. Much of this was new. Still it was not evidence.

But Mr. Brownell was not trying Harry White today. He was attempting to show that the White promotion had been a grave risk to the national safety, and about that a great many persons, not Republicans, are sure to agree. Mr. Brownell did not start off TODAY by calling Mr. White a spy, he called him "a valuable adjunct" to the Soviet espionage system, which is something legally quite different.

However, the issue is no longer whether Mr. White was known to be a spy. Mr. Brownell changed his ground along with his language. The issue is whether the Truman administration was soft on suspected communists. The charge isn't that the Truman administration did not act. It has been shown that it did act. The charge is that it did not act effectively. And on this revised ground the debate went better for the Republicans this afternoon, and [redacted] worse for the Democrats.

Mr. Brownell, in his testimony today, urged a number of revisions of the law - particularly one which would allow the use of evidence secured by wire-tapping. But until changes are legally made, we would do well to follow the advice of the Roman Cato who said:"Accept the law which you yourself make." For as Thoreau noted:" It is not as important to cultivate a respect for the law so much as for the right."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday November 18, 1953.

This is the news:

The President said today that he hopes Communism-in-government will not be an issue in next year's political campaign. At a news conference today Mr. Eisenhower refused to talk about the Harry Dexter White Case. But he did tell reporters: he hopes the Administration will clean Communists out of the government. He does not believe Americans can afford to live in fear of each other forever. He hopes his Administration will demonstrate by its actions that there is no need for the people to fear that the government is weak in its vigilance against Communism. He hopes this will eliminate the need for continuing Congressional investigations. But Congress has the right to go ahead and do as it sees fit. ~~Mr. Eisenhower was reminded that Republican National Chairman Hall recently said that Communism in government would be a major campaign issue next year. The President said.~~ Mr. Eisenhower was asked for comment on former President Truman's statement that the Eisenhower Administration has embraced McCarthyiism for political purposes. Angrily, he said he would take the verdict of the White House reporters on that and further, he is not too clear on what Mc Carthyism means. The President was also reminded that Republican National Chairman Hall said recently that Communism in government would be a major campaign issue next year. The President said: issues are not made by an individual.. but by the needs of the country.

Chairman Hall said today he agrees with the President's hope that Communism in government will be history by Next November. He said he's confident that for years to come the people will not forget -as he put it-- [redacted] which party let Communists into government and which party drove them out."

In Washington today the Jenner Committee produced evidence to show that former Treasury Secretary Snyder promoted Harold Glasser after Snyder had received F.B.I. reports citing Glasser as a Soviet spy. The Committee also says that later, after Elizabeth Bentley identified Glasser as a member of a spy ring, Snyder repeated his praise of Glasser to a private organization that employed Glasser. Snyder sent the committee a telegram saying he will be happy to answer questions. The telegram also said that within 18 months after he became Secretary of the Treasury "all suspected subversives had been seperated" from his department.

Boston University today suspended Professor Maurice Halperin head of the school's Latin American [redacted] Studies Department. Yesterday Attorney General Brownell named Halperin as [redacted] one who participated in, or was used by a Soviet spy ring.

At his White House newsconference , the President told reporters he does not think the budget can be balanced in the next fiscal year.. because of promised tax adjustments, and the high cost of farm relief. [redacted]

~~President also said he hopes to have ready soon his promised statement on atomic weapons and civilian defense. He wants to give the world as much information as possible without being needlessly alarming.~~

At the United Nations today we joined the French and British in demanding that the Security Council vote the "strongest censure" against Israel for the killing of 53 Arabs in a Jordan village last month. The three western powers charge the attack was carried out by the armed forces of Israel.. in violation of the truce agreement.

In Korea we're still trying to arrange a peace conference but American Ambassador Arthur Dean says he "just cannot understand" the latest Communist proposals on what role neutral nations would play.

In Rome, [redacted] Premier Pella told his Chamber of Deputies Italy is ready to join diplomatic negotiations to settle the dispute over Trieste. But such negotiations will fail unless they take into account "factors which Italy considers vital."

Secretary of State Dulles today told the C.I.O. convention in Cleveland THAT the Russians have retreated into a diplomatic defensive and the free world now has the diplomatic and moral initiative. And Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell, in his first major speech since taking the cabinet job six weeks ago, told the C.I.O.: President Eisenhower will support changes in those provisions of the Taft-Hartley law "which are really dangerous to labor, really loaded and really unfair." He referred to no specific provisions of the law.

In Philadelphia, the International Longshoremen's Association named William V. Bradley of New York to be its new president after Joseph P. Ryan resigned. Ryan was named president emeritus with a 10-thousand dollar annual pension.

Here in New York, Sir Roger Makins, the British ambassador to the United States, warned that any "unfavorable turn" in the high level of our military expenditure and economic aid abroad, may mean a "disastrous" setback to the free nations of Europe.

And in Albany, State Senator Arthur Wicks resigned as Republican majority leader, as soon as the Senate adjourned its special session.

Wicks' resignation was demanded by Governor Dewey because Wicks visited exhotrionist Joey Faye in prison. Wicks says he resigned because he is going on a vacation and does not want his [redacted] senate duties to interfere. [redacted]

Edward R. Murrow: November 18, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

At the end of his testimony before the Senate sub-Committee yesterday Attorney General Brownell hoped that the Congress "would enact new legislation that would allow the government to use wire-tap evidence to prove its espionage cases." He said: "At the present time information received by tapping wires cannot be used as evidence in the federal courts." And Mr. Brownell added: "There are cases of espionage presently in the Department of Justice, but since some of the important evidence was obtained by wire-tapping the cases cannot be proved in court, and therefore there will be no prosecution so long as the law remains in its present state."

Mr. Brownell thus joins a long list of Attorneys General, most of them Democrats, who have sought to clarify this complex and delicate issue through Congressional legislation. Various Bills have been introduced over the past fifteen years, in an attempt to define the areas where wire-tap evidence would be admissible before federal courts, and to define the responsibilities and the penalties for those agencies and individuals who authorize or divulge wire-tapping and the information thus obtained. None of these Bills has become law.

The whole ~~XXXXXX~~ question of wire-tapping has long been the subject of controversy. More than twenty years ago Justice Holmes condemned it as "dirty business." And in 1928 Justice Brandeis said: "As a means of espionage, writs of assistance and general warrants are but puny instruments of tyranny and oppression when compared with wire-tapping." In 1941 President Roosevelt said: "As an instrument for oppression of free citizens I can think of none worse than indiscriminate wire-tapping." Justice Brandeis also contended that the fourth amendment, that is the Search and Seizure provision of the Constitution, forbade wire-tapping. He referred to the "right to be let alone, the most comprehensive of rights, and the right most valued by civilized man."

Presumably Attorney General Brownell was not advocating "unrestrained and uncontrolled" wire-tapping. This whole question raises one of the most delicate problems in the field of democratic statesmanship. Basically it involves the finding of a proper balance between the rights of the individual to be protected from unwarranted snooping on the one hand, and the security needs of the nation on the other.

About three years ago Mr. J. Edgar Hoover stated that less than 170 telephones were then being tapped by the F.B.I. Today, the F.B.I. declined to reveal how many phones are tapped. The Bureau is, of course, under no obligation to divulge such information.

Many law enforcement officers, in addition to Mr. Brownell, take exception to the Supreme Court ruling that information obtained by wire-tapping cannot be used as evidence in the federal courts. They say that it handicaps officers of the law, while still permitting private persons to make use of wire-taps to eavesdrop on their competitors, employers, workmen or others.

One of the difficulties in this whole area of tapping telephones was illustrated in the second trial of Judith Coplon, when Judge Ryan made available to the defense an F.B.I. memorandum which stated that "Tiger" - the code word for wire-tap - had been furnishing information concerning the activities of Miss Coplon since her first conviction. The memorandum recommended that the wire-tap be discontinued in view of the immediacy of Miss Coplon's second trial; and that all records in the New York office regarding that wire-tap be destroyed. The memorandum concluded: "This memorandum is for administrative purposes, to be destroyed after action is taken, and not sent to files." In other words, this was a direction to destroy evidence obtained by wire-tap, and also to destroy the final memorandum ordering the destruction. of that evidence

At the present time the confusion continues, and so does the wire-tapping; the legal status of he who taps and gets tapped is in considerable doubt.

Attorney General Brownell's recommendation was that evidence gained through wire-tapping should be admitted as evidence in federal courts. His objective is clear. He wants to use such evidence to secure convictions in espionage cases. # However, effective legislation on this subject will have to cover a wider area. For example, what individual or agency shall be empowered to authorize a wire-tap - what kind of reports shall be required - how long can the wire-tap be operational - and what penalty shall be imposed for divulging irrelevant information, which might be damaging to the individual but which could not be regarded as proof of illegal or subversive action.

This is a case where the relationship between the individual and the state is reduced to the dimensions of a telephone line, and the question of who shall be entitled to listen, and what the listener shall be entitled to do with the information thus obtained. Few will doubt that Mr. Brownell's objective is commendable, or that the difficulties are formidable. For the rest we shall have to wait and see what the language of the law provides.

This whole question of wire-taps is not one that can be easily described within the fine limitations of the law. The human element is also something to be considered. And those who argue this point apparently feel as the Latin Jel-i-us and Lord Byron did when they wrote:"The most difficult thing of all is to listen and keep quiet...for he who listens once may listen twice."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President said today that he hopes Communism-in-government will not be an issue in next year's political campaign. At a news conference today Mr. Eisenhower refused to talk about the Harry Dexter White Case. But he did tell reporters he hopes the Administration will clean Communists out of the government. He does not believe Americans can afford to live in fear of each other forever. He hopes his Administration will demonstrate by its actions that there is no need for the people to fear that the government is weak in its vigilance against Communism. He hopes this will eliminate the need for continuing Congressional investigations. But Congress has the right to go ahead and do as it sees fit. Mr. Eisenhower was asked for comment on former President Truman's statement that the Eisenhower Administration has embraced McCarthyism for political purposes. Angrily, he said he would take the verdict of the White House reporters on that and further, he is not too clear on what McCarthyism means. The President was also reminded that Republican National Chairman Hall said recently that Communism in government would be a major campaign issue next year. The President said: issues are not made by an individual - but by the needs of the country.

Chairman Hall said today he agrees with the President's hope that Communism in government will be history by Next November. He said he's confident that for years to come the people will not forget as he put it "which party let Communists into government and which party drove them out."

In Washington today the Jenner Committee produced evidence to show that former Treasury Secretary Snyder promoted Harold Glasser after Snyder had received FBI reports citing Glasser as a Soviet spy. The Committee also says that later, after Elizabeth Bentley identified Glasser as a member of a spy ring, Snyder repeated his praise of Glasser to a private organization that employed Glasser.

Snyder sent the committee a telegram saying he will be happy to answer questions. The telegram also said that within 18 months after he became Secretary of the Treasury "all suspected subversives had been separated" from his department.

Boston University today suspended Professor Maurice Halperin, head of the school's Latin American Studies Department. Yesterday Attorney General Brownell named Halperin as one who participated in, or was used by a Soviet spy ring.

At his White House news conference, the President told reporters he does not think the budget can be balanced in the next fiscal year because of promised tax adjustments and the high cost of farm relief.

At the United Nations today we joined the Franch and British in demanding that the Security Council vote the "strongest censure" against Israel for the killing of 53 Arabs in a jordan village last month. The three western powers charge the attack was carried out by the armed forces of Israel - in violation of the truce agreement.

In Korea we're still trying to arrange a peace conference but American Ambassador Arthur Dean says he "just cannot understand" the latest Communist proposals on what role neutral nations would play.

In Rome, Premier Pella told his Chamber of Deputies Italy is ready to join diplomatic negotiations to settle the dispute over Trieste. But such negotiations will fail unless they take into account "factors which Italy considers vital."

Secretary of State Dulles today told the CIO convention in Cleveland that the Russians have retreated into a diplomatic defensive and the free world now has the diplomatic and moral initiative. And Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell, in his first major speech since taking the cabinet job six weeks ago, told the CIO: President Eisenhower will support changes in those provisions of the Taft-Hartley law "which are really dangerous to labor, really loaded and really unfair." He referred to no specific provisions of the law.

In Philadelphia, the International Longshoremen's Association named William

V. Bradley of New York to be its new president after Joseph P. Ryan resigned. Ryan was named president emeritus with a 10-thousand dollar annual pension.

Here in New York, Sir Roger Makins, the British ambassador to the United States, warned that any "unfavorable turn" in the high level of our military expenditure and economic aid abroad, may mean a "disastrous" setback to the free nations of Europe.

And in Albany, State Senator Arthur Wicks resigned as Republican majority leader, as soon as the Senate adjourned its special session. Wicks' resignation was demanded by Governor Dewey because Wicks visited extortionist Joey Faye in prison. Wicks says he resigned because he is going on a vacation and does not want his senate duties to interfere.

At the end of his testimony before the Senate sub-committee yesterday Attorney General Brownell hoped that the Congress "would enact new legislation that would allow the government to use wire-tap evidence to prove its espionage cases." He said: "At the present time information received by tapping wires cannot be used as evidence in the federal courts." And Mr. Brownell added: "There are cases of espionage presently in the Department of Justice, but since some of the important evidence was obtained by wire-tapping the cases cannot be proved in court, and therefore there will be no prosecution so long as the law remains in its present state."

Mr. Brownell thus joins a long list of Attorneys General, most of them Democrats, who have sought to clarify this complex and delicate issue through Congressional legislation. Various bills have been introduced over the past fifteen years, in an attempt to define the areas where wire-tap evidence would be admissible before federal courts, and to define the responsibilities and the penalties for those agencies and individuals who authorize or divulge wire-tapping and the information thus obtained. None of these Bills has become law.

The question of wire-tapping has long been the subject of controversy. More than twenty years ago Justice Holmes condemned it as "dirty business." And in 1928 Justice Brandeis said: "As a means of espionage, writs of assistance and general warrants are but puny instruments of tyranny and oppression when compared with wire-tapping." In 1941 President Roosevelt said: "As an instrument for oppression of free citizens I can think of none worse than indiscriminate wire-tapping." Justice Brandeis also contended that the fourth amendment, that is the Search and Seizure provision of the Constitution, forbade wire-tapping. He referred to the "right to be let alone, the most comprehensive of rights, and the right most valued by civilized man."

Presumably Attorney General Brownell was not advocating "unrestrained and uncontrolled" wire-tapping. This whole question raises one of the most delicate problems in the field of democratic statesmanship. Basically it involves the finding of a proper balance between the rights of the individual to be protected from unwarranted snooping on the one hand, and the security needs of the nation on the other.

About three years ago Mr. J. Edgar Hoover stated that less than 170 telephones were then being tapped by the FBI. Today, the FBI declined to reveal how many phones are tapped. The Bureau is, of course, under no obligation to divulge such information.

Many law enforcement officers, in addition to Mr. Brownell, take exception to the Supreme Court ruling that information obtained by wire-tapping cannot be used as evidence in the federal courts. They say that it handicaps officers of the law, while still permitting private persons to make use of wire-taps to eavesdrop on their competitors, employers, workmen or others.

One of the difficulties in this whole area of tapping telephones was illustrated in the second trial of Judith Coplon, when Judge Ryan made available to the defense an FBI memorandum which stated that "Tiger" the code word for wire-tap had been furnishing information concerning the activities of Miss Coplon since her first conviction. The memorandum recommended that the wire-tap be discontinued in view of the immediacy of Miss Coplon's second trial; and that all records in the New York office regarding that wire-tap be destroyed. The memorandum concluded: "This memorandum is for administrative purposes, to be destroyed after action is taken, and not sent to files." In other words, this was a direction to destroy evidence obtained by wire-tap, and also to destroy the final memorandum ordering the destruction of that evidence.

At the present time the confusion continues, and so does the wire-tapping; the legal status of he who taps and gets tapped is in considerable doubt.

Attorney General Brownell's recommendation was that evidence gained through wire-tapping should be admitted as evidence in federal courts. His objective is clear. He wants to use such evidence to secure convictions in espionage cases. However, effective legislation on this subject will have to cover a wider area. For example, what individual or agency shall be empowered to authorize a wire-tap what kind of reports shall be required - how long can the wire-tap be operationsl - and what penalty shall be imposed for divulging irrelevant information, which might be damaging to the individual but which could not be regarded as proof of illegal or subversive action.

This is a case where the relationship between the individual and the state is reduced to the dimensions of a telephone line, and the question of who shall be entitled to listen, and what the listener shall be entitled to do with the information thus obtained. Few will doubt that Mr. Brownell's objective is commendable, or that the difficulties are formidable. For the rest we shall have to wait and see what the language of the lawprovides.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: This whole question of wire-taps is not one that can be described within the fine limitations of the law. The human element is also something to be considered. And those who argue this point apparently feel as the Latin Jelius and Lord Byron did when they wrote: "The most difficult thing of all is to listen and keep quiet - for he who listens once may listen twice."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday, November 19, 1953

This is the news:

American Ambassador Dean said in Korea today, that a new enemy plan for a peace conference "could offer a very fruitful basis for further negotiations." The Communists have now told us that the neutral nations, they insist be represented at the conference, would not have the right to vote. Dean says this indicates the enemy has made a "prepared concession", and is now awaiting further instructions. At the same time there was no progress in the enemy's questioning of prisoners who do not want to go home. And the Peiping radio says that the American plan to free all such prisoners ON January 22 is "a new scheme to sabotage the explanations" to the men.

Tokyo newspapers today are carrying a headline that reads: "The United States did make a mistake in 1946." The papers are giving much attention to a speech in Tokyo by Vice President Nixon. He said we made a mistake in disarming Japan after the war, because we "misdjudged the intentions of the Soviet leaders." The Vice President called on Japan to assume her share of the responsibilities of rearming. The Japanese, who have been shying away from rearming because of ITS economic burden, are showing little excitement over Mr. Nixon's suggestion to rearm. The foreign office interprets the speech as a suggestion that the Japanese revise their American-sponsored constitution which bans rearmament. And a top official of the governing Liberal Party told reporters only that Mr. Nixon had stressed the need of Japan's economic development in cooperation with the United States.

Red Cross executives in Moscow announced today that the Russians are freeing 12-hundred Japanese who have been held prisoners since the end of World War Two. Another thousand will be set free when their so-called "sentences" have been completed.

At the United Nations, Andrei Vishinsky charged again that we are preparing to start a new war. He said our aim was to bolster a faltering economy. As Vishinsky sees it: we have growing unemployment.. a crisis in the auto industry and a slow down of the boom. He also said the BERMUDA conference in December will increase world tensions. American Delegate Wadsworth replied that the Vishinsky speech contained no suggestion "sincerely designed to reduce international tension and avert war."

The State Department today again asked Canada to let members of the Jenner committee question IGOR Guzenko about Soviet spying in this country. Guzenko, now a ward of the Canadian government, is a former code clerk in the Soviet embassy in Ottawa. In 1946 he provided Canada with evidence of Russian theft of atomic secrets. Canada recently rejected an American request to let the Jenner committee question Guzenko. And today External Affairs Minister Lester B. Pearson told his House of Commons that permission will not be granted unless the committee has "some new factors bearing on the case."

Chairman Velde of the House un-American Activities Committee said today that the supbena the committee has given to former President Truman is still in full force. He said he hopes Mr. Truman will appear before the committee instead of what he described as "prattling" to the radio and press.

The McCarthy committee, meeting in Boston today, heard a former General Electric employe testify that he has been an F.B.I. informer in the Communist party since 1941. William H. Teto told the committee that there are Communist cells in four General Electric plants in Massachusetts. He knows of at least 45 Communists in two of these plants. The F.B.I. says Teto's wife threatened to leave him and his children were jeered at in school because of the belief that their father was a Communist. The Middlesex County district attorney says he has known of Teto's undercover work for a number of years. Teto refused to discuss with reporters an earlier police record involving larceny by checks.

In Washington, a high Treasury Department official told reporters that the government will operate in the red by about four billion dollars next year even though federal spending should be cut by six billions. This official, who does not want his name used, says that about three-quarters of the cut in spending can be made in the defense budget..without hurting national security.

The C.I.O. convention in Cleveland today again called for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law.. went on record against any form of sales or manufacturers excise tax.. and pledged to "intensify" its drive to organize non-union workers, particularly in the South.

A Senate committee investigating juvenile delinquency was told today that the attack on this problem must begin in the home. Dr. Martha Eliot, head of the federal children's bureau, said that at least one out of every 18 youngsters in the 10-to-17 age group was in trouble with the police last year.

In Kansas City, a federal jury took 67 minutes to decide that [redacted] Carl Austin Hall and Mrs, Bonnie Brown Heady MUST DIE FOR [redacted] the kdnaping and murder of six-year-old Bobby Greenlease. Federal Judge Reeves has sentenced both TO [redacted] die in the Missouri lethal gas chamber on December 18th. Robert Greenlease, the father of the murdered boy said of the sentence: "Its too good for them, but its the best the LAW [redacted] provides."

Catholic University today awarded the President an honorary doctor of laws degree "for his outstanding achivements as a general, a president and a private citizen."

And the Baseball Writers Association today named Roy Campanella, the Dodgers catcher, as the most valuable player in the National League. He is the first catcher to be honored BY [redacted] the same award twice.

In Iran the prosecution demanded MAT [redacted] former Premier Mossadegh be executed. Earlier, Mossadegh threatened to "fast unto death" if he is sent back to a prison cell."

Edward R. Murrow: November 19, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

It was exactly five months ago that the Russians called out their tanks and armored columns to put down a spontaneous uprising in eastern Germany. Today the East German administration is conducting one of the biggest and best publicized security campaigns for many years. Every day there is fresh news of trials, sentences - the apprehension of Western agents and saboteurs. Some of the reports coming out of the communist zone of Germany read like rather improbable spy thrillers - defecting double agents, secret codes, clandestine radio transmitters and all the rest. The Communist security service is being given unprecedented publicity as the guardian of the so-called People's Republic.

Dick Hottelet, who covers Germany for us, cables that the Soviet empire has embarked on its most determined effort to consolidate and increase its strength. Every kind of police, judicial and popular terror has been employed, while simultaneously taxes have been lowered, the price of consumer goods has gone down, and the standard of living for those who are willing to work and obey orders has gone up. The communists have been working hard to get back to the position that obtained in eastern Germany before the rising of June 17th, and they have had considerable success. The recruiting and militarization of the so-called People's Police, which was stopped for a while after June 17th, has now been resumed. The Society for Sport and Technology, which trains young and old in sharp-shooting, gliding and partisan warfare, is back in business full swing.

All during the late summer and early autumn the communist regime in east Germany pilloried and arrested people who travelled to West Berlin to obtain food parcels. In many factories carefully staged and well supervised workers' meetings, are used for the denunciation of those workers who took part in the June demonstrations. They are assailed as "capitalist pawns" and "imperialist vipers," and then arrested when they leave the room.

What the communists are doing in eastern Germany is the story of the carrot and the stick applied to ~~the country~~ a country. Security measures and oppressive action have been stepped up, but there was a pay raise at the end of July, a general tax reduction in the middle of October, and price reductions on twelve thousand unrationed items at the end of October. # The production of consumer goods has actually been increased, and massive propaganda has multiplied the benefits, and painted the rosiest of pictures of a ~~XXXXX~~ prosperous future.

The Russians have done their part by sending home thousands of German prisoners of war, by announcing the end of reparations payments, and by returning to the East Germans thirty-three of the largest industrial plants in the Russian zone - [plants which were confiscated by the Russians at the end of the war.]

It would appear that the communists in eastern Germany now feel themselves strong enough to engage in a flamboyant, well-publicized attack on their internal enemies, and this, coupled with Russian intransigence in regard to conversations with the West, would indicate that they are engaged in solidifying control of the areas they now hold. Russian action in the international field dovetails with their policies in Eastern Germany. There is to be no compromise, and no retreat - the improvement in food, clothing and working conditions, is accompanied ~~XXX~~ by a new and ruthless suppression of all doubtful or dissident elements.

In the five months that have elapsed since the June uprising, the communists have re-established and solidified their hold on Eastern Germany. They have made it clear that they are not interested in talking seriously about the possibility of changing the present situation.

During that same five months period the Western powers, have to a large extent, been engaged in arguing amongst themselves. It may be that the Bermuda Conference will produce greater unity of view and objective; but the fact remains that during the last five months the Russians have been engaged in solidifying their hold on what might be called their frontier provinces, while the Western nations have been exposing their national prejudices and reluctance to combine. # The West has been engaged in a process described by the late Mayor Reuter of Berlin as "talking things to pieces".

It would seem that in the past few months the Russians have again taken the initiative in Eastern Germany, while the West deliberates and debates. Of course, the representatives of the Big Three powers may feel as Seneca once did when he argued: "What reason could not avoid, delay has often cured." But as Publilius Syrus pointed out: "To plan carefully may be the safest delay but sometimes by deliberation opportunity can be lost."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

American Ambassador Dean said in Korea today that a new enemy plan for a peace conference "could offer a very fruitful basis for further negotiations." The Communists have now told us that the neutral nations they insist be represented at the conference would not have the right to vote. Dean says this indicates the enemy has made a "prepared concession" and is now awaiting further instructions. At the same time there was no progress in the enemy's questioning of prisoners who do not want to go home. And the Peiping radio says that the American plan to free all such prisoners on January 22 is "a new scheme to sabotage the explanations" to the men.

Tokyo newspapers today are carrying aheadline that reads: "The United States did make a mistake in 1946." The papers are giving much attention to a speech in Tokyo by Vice President Nixon. He said we made a mistake in disarming Japan after the war because we "misjudged the intentions of the Soviet leaders." The Vice President called on Japan to assume her share of the responsibilities of rearming. The Japanese, who have been shying away from rearming because of its economic burden, are showing little excitement over Mr. Nixon's suggestion to rearm. The foreign office interprets the speech as a suggestion that the Japanese revise their American-sponsored constitution which bans rearmament. And a top official of the governing Liberal Party told reporters only that Mr. Nixon had stressed the need of Japan's economic development in cooperation with the United States.

Red Cross executives in Moscow announced today that the Russians are freeing 12-hundred Japanese who have been held prisoners since the end of World War Two. Another thousand will be set free when their so-called "sentences" have been completed.

At the United Nations, Andrei Vishinsky charged again that we are preparing to start a new war. He said our aim was to bolster a faltering economy. As Vishinsky sees it: we have growing unemployment - a crisis in the auto industry and a slow down of the boom. He also said the Bermuda conference in December will increase world tensions. American Delegate Wadsworth replied that the Vishinsky speech contained no suggestion "sincerely designed to reduce international tension and avert war."

The State Department today again asked Canada to let members of the Jenner committee question Igor Guzenko about Soviet spying in this country. Guzenko, now a ward of the Canadian government, is a former code clerk in the Soviet embassy in Ottawa. In 1946 he provided Canada with evidence of Russian theft of atomic secrets. Canada recently rejected an American request to let the Jenner committee question Guzenko. And today External Affairs Minister Lester B. Pearson told his House of Commons that permission will not be granted unless the committee has "some new factors bearing on the case."

Chairman Velde of the House un-American Activities Committee said today that the subpoena the committee has given to former President Truman is still in full force. He said he hopes Mr. Truman will appear before the committee instead of what he described as "prattling" to the radio and press.

The McCarthy committee, meeting in Boston today, heard a former General Electric employee testify that he has been an FBI informer in the Communist party since 1941. William H. Teto told the committee that there are Communist cells in four General Electric plants in Massachusetts. He knows of at least 45 Communists in two of these plants. The FBI says Teto's wife threatened to leave him and his children were jeered at in school because of the belief that their father was a Communist. The Middlesex County district attorney says he has known of Teto's undercover work for a number of years. Teto refused to discuss with reporters an earlier police record involving larceny by checks.

In Washington, a high Treasury Department official told reporters that the government will operate in the red by about four billion dollars next year even though federal spending should be cut by six billions. This official, who does not want his name used, says that about three-quarters of the cut in spending can be made in the defense budget - without hurting national security.

The CIO convention in Cleveland today again called for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law went on record against any form of sales or manufacturers excise tax and pledged to "intensify" its drive to organize non-union workers, particularly in the South.

A Senate committee investigating juvenile delinquency was told today that the attack on this problem must begin in the home. Dr. Martha Eliot, head of the federal children's bureau, said that at least one out of every 18 youngsters in the 10-to-17 age group was in trouble with the police last year.

In Kansas City, a federal jury took 67 minutes to decide that Carl Austin Hall, and Mrs. Bonnie Heady must die for the kidnapping and murder of six-year-old Bobby Greenlease. Federal Judge Reeves has sentenced both to die in the Missouri lethal gas chamber on December 18th. Robert Greenlease, the father of the murdered boy said of the sentence: "It's too good for them but its the best the law provides."

Catholic University today awarded the President an honorary doctor of laws degree "for his outstanding achievements as a general, a president and a private citizen."

And the Baseball Writers Association today named Roy Campanella, the Dodgers catcher, as the most valuable player in the National League. He is the first catcher to be honored by the same award twice.

In Iran the prosecution demanded that former Premier Mossadegh be executed. Earlier, Mossadegh threatened to "fast unto death" if he is sent back to a prison cell."

It was exactly five months ago that the Russians called out their tanks and armored columns to put down a spontaneour uprising in Eastern Germany. Today the East German administration is conducting one of the biggest and best publicized security campaigns for many years. Everyday there is fresh news of trials, sentences - the apprehension of Western agents and saboteurs. Some of the reports coming out of the Communist zone of Germany read like rather improbably spy thrillers - defecting double agents, secret codes, clandestine radio transmitters and all the rest. The Communist security service is being given unprecedented publicity as the guardian of the so-called People's Republic.

Dick Hottelet, who covers Germany for us, cables that the Soviet empire has embarked on its most determined effort to consolidate and increase its strength. Every kind of policy, judicial and popular terror has been employed, while simultaneously taxes have been lowered, the price of consumer goods has gone down, and the standard of living for those who are willing to work and obey orders has gone up. The Communists have been working hard to get back to the position that obtained in eastern Germany before the rising of June 17th, and they have had considerable success. The recruiting and militarization of the so-called People's Police, which was stopped for a while after June 17th, has now been resumed. The Society for Sport and Technology which trains young and old in sharp-shooting, gliding and partisan warfare, is back in business full swing.

All during the late summer and early autumn the communist regime in east Germany pilloried and arrested people who travelled to West Berlin to obtain food parcels. In many factories carefully staged and well supervised workers' meetings are used for the denunciation of those workers who took part in the June demonstrations. They are assailed as "capitalist pawns" and "imperialist vipers," and then arrested when they leave the room.

What the communists are doing in eastern Germany is the story of the carrot and the stick applied to a country. Security measures and oppressive action have been stepped up, but there was a pay raise at the end of July, a general tax reduction in the middle of October, and price reductions on twelve thousand unrationed items at the end of October. The production of consumer goods has actually been increased, and massive propaganda has multiplied the benefits and painted the rosiest of pictures of a prosperous future.

The Russians have done their part by sending home thousands of German prisoners of war, by announcing the end of reparations payments and by returning to the East Germans thirty-three of the largest industrial plants in the Russian zone - plants which were confiscated by the Russians at the end of the war.

It would appear that the communists in eastern Germany now feel themselves strong enough to engage in a flamboyant, well-publicized attack on their internal enemies, and this, coupled with Russian intransigence in regard to conversations with the West would indicate that they are engaged in solidifying control of the areas they now hold. Russian action in the international field dovetails with their policies in Eastern Germany. There is to be no compromise and no retreat - the improvement in food, clothing and working conditions is accompanied by a new and rut less suppression of all doubtful or dissident elements.

In the five months that have elapsed since the June uprising, the Communists have re-established and solidified their hold on Eastern Germany. They have made it clear that they are not interested in talking seriously about the possibility of changing the present situation.

During that same five months period the Western powers have to a large extent been engaged in arguing amongst themselves. It may be that the Bermuda Conference will produce greater unity of view and objective; but the fact remains that during the last five months the Russians have been engaged in solidifying their hold on what might be called their frontier provinces, while the Western nations have been exposing their national prejudices and reluctance to combine. The West has been engaged in a process described by the late Mayor Reuter of Berlin as "talking things to pieces."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that in the past few months the Russians have again taken the initiative in Eastern Germany while the West deliberates and debates. Of course, the representatives of the Big Three powers may feel as Seneca once did when he argued: "What reason could not avoid, delay has often cured." But as Publilius Syrus pointed out: "to plan carefully may be the safest delay, but sometimes by deliberation opportunity can be lost." - Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday, Nov. 20, 1953

This is the news:

The President today authorized an exchange of certain atomic information with Great Britain and Canada. The three countries will tell each other what they know about the effect of atomic weapons on troops in the field and on people in possible target cities. The exchange of this information by our country has been approved by the Congressional atomic energy committee.

The Canadian government has protested informally to the State Department over the recent release by Attorney General Brownell of a top secret F.B.I. letter that mentions CANADA. The letter, from F.B.I. Chief Hoover to the White House in 1946, spoke of views that "originated with sources highly placed in the Canadian government". They concerned Harry Dexter White. The Canadian AMBASSADOR has "expressed surprise" because of the reference to Canada.

Republican Senator Hendrickson of New Jersey today called on Supreme Court Justice Clark to explain his activities in the White case. And Democratic Representative Moulder of Missouri says Secretary of State Dulles and former Secretary of State Byrnes should be questioned about their relations with Alger Hiss.

The Army said today that in January it will list [redacted] as dead about 4-thousand men...now listed as missing in action in Korea. All men missing in action for more than a year will be presumed dead. This would bring the fatal casualties in Korea to 29,600.

In Korea today, American Ambassador Dean told the Communists their plan for neutrals to attend the Korean peace conference is "fuzzy." He wants more details.

And Chairman Wiley of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee says, we must increase our aid to French and other anti-Communist forces in Indo-China. He wants a "decisive victory" over the Communist-led guerrillas.

Vice President Nixon has arrived in the Philippines for a three day visit. And Carlos Romulo, former foreign minister of the Philllipines, says it is high time for President Quirino "to shut up", and stop charging that Americans INTERFERED [redacted] in the RECENT [redacted] election [redacted] in which Quirino was defeated by Raymond Magsaysay.

At the United Nations today, the United States, France and Great Britain asked the Security Council for quick approval of their resolution censuring Israel for the raid in Jordan last month in which at least 53 Arabs were killed. Israel claims this resolution is too one-sided and discriminatory. The Arabs says it doesn't go far enough.

~~And before the U.N's Social Committee, American representative Mrs. Oswald B. Lord, charged that slave labor is an "international cancer" and Russia is the "central source of infection."~~

In Paris today, the French National Assembly postponed a decision on the European army plan after Foreign Minister Bidault collapsed in the middle of an appeal for approval of the project. Bidault had just announced that Britain has agreed to sign a treaty formally linking her with the European Defense Community. In a few minutes I'd like to DISCUSS the importance of this debate. [redacted]

The Catholic Bishops of the United States charged tonight that Russia's assault on religion is "the bitterest, the bloodiest persecution in all history." The bishops have denounced all those who "retreated to a POLITE [redacted] neutralism" in the struggle between the church and communism.

The White House physician, Major General Howard Snyder, said today that President Eisenhower's heart is sound and entirely free of disease... despite reports from "certain [redacted] columnists and radio commentators."

Major General Dean, who was recently released from an enemy prison camp in Korea, today was named deputy commanding general of the Sixth Army with headquarters at San Fransisco.

Walter Reuther has been re-elected president of the C.I.O. by acclamation. He told the convention: America has failed to make the same progress in the human and social sciences that it has in the phsyical sciences.

Two Harvard authorities..Doctors Sheldon and Eleanor Glook.. told a Senate committee today that many problems of juvenile delinquency may be traced back to inadequacies in the family life of the youngsters. They say a very large percentage of juvenile delinquents showed signs of going wrong when they were under ten years old.

Chief Justice Earl Warren said today that the work of the honest policeman is frequently frustrated by "the withering hand of politics that comes down on the shoulder of the law enforcement officer."

Edward R. Murrow: November 20, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Next to one of the great debates in our own Congress, the debate now coming to a close in the French assembly outranks any other discussion abroad for its importance to Americans. The French are in the process of making up their minds about re-arming Germany, on which our European policy rests. They have gone about it in the grand style, in a full dress debate, and not any talk in any parliament is more splendid or more eloquent than such an occasion in the French Assembly. Outsiders may not realize that the French process of government, which seems to be chronically so slow and hesitant, actually produces some of the most brilliant discussions in the world. It is as though France, despite a mysterious ~~invalidism~~ Political Malady, could on occasion demonstrate a first-class mind and a genius in self-expression. Our forefathers paid more attention to debate than we do. One of the prices of the speed of modern journalism is the loss of the custom of publishing and reading the speeches of great controversies. So on this side of the ocean we shall not hear the ring of the rhetoric in the Palais Bourbon. But it has been a memorable week in the French Assembly, and it did not lose in drama because Foreign Minister Bidault, after working all night, collapsed from exhaustion while delivering the speech of his career.

However, it needs to be said that this debate was held at an unpropitious time. Though it is the first great assembly debate on foreign policy in nineteen months, it falls a few weeks before a presidential election. After the new president is chosen the government has to resign. So all that this government is asking in regard to Germany and the defense community could be affected by the formation of a new government. However, it is not likely that the distinct trend in the government's favor this week will be changed. But the treaty creating the defense community is not up for ratification now. All that the Assembly will vote next Tuesday is an order of the day advising the government. And the occasion is the coming of two conferences where French foreign policy will be involved. One of these is the meeting in Bermuda early in December. The other is a meeting of the foreign ministers of the defense community in the Hague a few days earlier.

Looked at from our more distant perspective the reluctance of the French to embrace the idea of European unity appears to be timid. But it may be generously remembered that France is a democracy where tomb stones vote, or to be more literal, where the living seldom vote forgetful of the dead. No country has so many graves of young and middle-aged men in proportion to the population, and these dead, with few exceptions, fell in wars with Germany. Any argument that pointed to the peril of a belligerent Germany automatically lined up a majority in the country. And though the Assembly has not debated this issue before, the newspapers have been full of it and it has dominated every political meeting.

It is a paradox that the French invented the idea of a European army and a European defense community as a way to escape the emotional negative of simply being afraid of Germany; and yet they have proved to be the most hesitant about using their own invention. In the great debate the French have shown themselves divided right down to the roots. The differences over arming Germany have not followed party lines. They have produced the most incongruous groups. On one side are to be found the violently anti-communist Gaullists, Comrade Thorez and his Communist faithful, the traditional liberal Edouard Herriot, the diehard conservative Edouard Daladier, the man of Munich, the devout Catholic Francois de Menthon and the aristocratic fellow-traveller Gilbert de Chambrun. They make a strange team. But on the other side of the fence the left-wing Catholic Georges Bidault is allied with the arch-conservative Paul Reynaud, and the spokesman of small business, Antoine Pinay.

As the debate developed, it became clear that the sentiment against re-arming Germany had weakened. The question was not so much whether to do it as how to do it. The Gaullists, vigorously opposed to the European Defense Community, were willing that Germany should have a national army. They were not opposed to closer European unity as such, but wanted it through confederation, not federation.

Actually the endorsement of the official policy of entering the defense community appears to have been clinched with Monsieur Bidault's announcement of Britain's readiness to link itself by treaty with the new community. That assured socialist support, not unanimously, but in numbers great enough to overcome the loss of votes from the Gaullists. For the socialists have said all along they would vote for the European Defense Community if closer British co-operation could be assured.

Since the final vote next Tuesday will be only on an order of the day, the completion of the defense community will still be in abeyance. And Monsieur Bidault said today that France will insist on an acceptable solution to the Saar problem, on the new tie with Britain being put in concrete form and on France's allies accepting French reservations taking account of France's obligations overseas.

But the course of French policy appears to have been set. The opposing leaders have had their say, and the nation is on the brink of a great departure.

The United States is concerned in that a favorable vote on Tuesday, even though inconclusive, should make fairly certain the adoption of the measures on which the whole European policy of the previous Administration was based, on which the policy of the present one is based, and for which General Eisenhower, in his last year in Europe, crusaded with the fervor of a missionary.

The French, ~~after~~ having gone through two recent wars with Germany, are obviously in no great hurry to see a former enemy re-armed. It's much as James Norman Hall once said:"The thing that numbs the heart is this: that men can not devise some scheme of life to banish fear that lurks in most men's eyes." For as Quintas Rufus pointed out centuries ago:"Fear always makes men ready to believe the worst."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President today authorized an exchange of certain atomic information with Great Britain and Canada. The three countries will tell each other what they know about the effect of atomic weapons on troops in the field and on people in possible target cities. The exchange of this information by our country has been approved by the Congressional atomic energy committee.

The Canadian government has protested informally to the State Department over the recent release by Attorney General Brownell of a top secret FBI letter that mentions Canada. The letter, from FBI Chief Hoover to the White House in 1946, spoke of views that "originated with sources highly placed in the Canadian government." They concerned Harry Dexter White. The Canadian ambassador, has "expressed surprise" because of the reference to Canada.

Republican Senator Hendrickson of New Jersey today called on Supreme Court Justice Clark to explain his activities in the White case. And Democratic Representative Moulder of Missouri says Secretary of State Dulles and former Secretary of State Byrnes should be questioned about their relations with Alger Hiss.

The Army said today that in January it will list as dead about 4-thousand men now listed as missing in action in Korea. All men missing in action for more than a year will be presumed dead. This would bring the fatal casualties in Korea to 29,600.

In Korea today, American Ambassador Dean told the Communists their plan for neutrals to attend the Korean peace conference is "fuzzy." He wants more details.

And Chairman Wiley of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee says we must increase our aid to French and other anti-Communist forces in Indo-China. He wants a "decisive victory" over the communist-led guerrillas.

Vice President Nixon has arrived in the Philippines for a three day visit. And Carlos Romulo, former foreign minister of the Phillipines, says it is high time for President Quirino "to shut up" and stop charging that Americans interferred in the recent election in which Quirino was defeated by Raymond Magsaysay.

At the United Nations today, the United States, France and Great Britain asked the Security Council for quick approval of their resolution censuring Israel for the raid in Jordan last month in which at least 53 Arabs were killed. Israel claims this resolution is too one-sided and discriminatory. The Arabs say it doesn't go far enough.

In Paris today, the French National Assembly postponed a decision on the European army plan after Foreign Minister Bidault collapsed in the middle of an appeal for approval of the project. Bidault had just announced that Britain has agreed to sign a treaty formally linking her with the European Defense Community. In a few minutes I'd like to discuss the importance of this debate.

The Catholic Bishops of the United States charged tonight that Russia's assault on religion is "the bitterest, the bloodiest persecution in all history." The bishops have denounced all those who "retreated to a polite neutralism" in the struggle between the church and communism.

The White House physician, Major General Howard Snyder, said today that President Eisenhower's heart is sound and entirely free of disease despite reports from "certain columnists and radio commentators."

Major General Dean, who was recently released from an enemy prison camp in Korea, today was named deputy commanding general of the Sixth Army with headquarters at San Francisco.

Walter Reuther has been re-elected president of the CIO by acclamation. He told the convention: America has failed to make the same progress in the human and social sciences that it has in the physical sciences.

Two Harvard authorities, Doctors Sheldon and Eleanor Glook, told a Senate committee today that many prlblems of juvenile delinquency may be traced back to inadequacies in the family life of the youngsters. They say a very large percentage of juvenile delinquents showed signs of going wrong when they were under ten years old.

Chief Justice Earl Warren said today that the work of the honest policeman is frequently frustrated by "the withering hand of politics that comes down on the shoulder of the law enforcement officer."

Next to one of the great debates in our own Congress, the debate now coming to a close in the French assembly outranks any other discussion abroad for its importance to Americans. The French are in the process of making up their minds about re-arming Germany, on which our European policy rests. They have gone about it in the grand style, in a full dress debate, and not any talk in any parliament is more splendid or more eloquent than such an occasion in the French Assembly. Outsiders may not realize that the French process of government, which seems to be chronically so slow and hesitant, actually produces some of the most brilliant discussions in the world. It is as though France, despite a mysterious political malady could on occasion demonstrate a first-class mind and a genius in self-expression. Our forefathers paid more attention to debate than we do. One of the prices of the speed of modern journalism is the loss of the custom of publishing and reading the speeches of great controversies. So on this side of the ocean we shall not hear the ring of the rhetoric in the Palais Bourbon. But it has been a memorable week in the French Assembly, and it did not lose in drama because Foreign Minister Bidault, after working all night, collapsed from exhaustion while delivering the speech of his career.

However, it needs to be said that this debate was held at an unpropitious time. Though it is the first great assembly debate on foreign policy in nineteen months, it falls a few weeks before a presidential election. After the new president is chosen the government has to resign. So all that this government is asking in regard to Germany and the defense community could be affected by the formation of a new government. However, it is not likely that the distinct trend in the government's favor this week will be changed. But the treaty creating t e defense community is not up for ratification now. All that the Assembly will vote next Tuesday is an order of the day "advising" the government. And the occasion is the coming of two conferences where French foreign policy will be involved. One of these is the meeting in Bermuda early in December. The other is a meeting of the foreign ministers of the defense community in the Hague a few days earlier.

Looked at from our more distant perspective the reluctance of the French to embrace the idea of European unity appears to be timid. But it may be generously remembered that France is a democracy where tomb stones vote, or to be more literal, where the living seldom vote forgetful of the dead. No country has so many graves of young and middle-aged men in proportion to the population, and these dead, with few exceptions, fell in wars with Germany. Any argument that pointed to the peril of a belligerent Germany automatically lined up a majority in the country. And though the Assembly has not debated this issue before, the newspapers have been full of it and it has dominated every political meeting.

It is a paradox that the French invented the idea of a European army and a European defense community as a way to escape the emotional negative of simply being afraid of Germany; and yet they have proved to be the most hesitant about using their own invention. In the great debate the French have shown themselves divided right down to the roots. The differences over arming Germany have not followed party lines. They have produced the most incongruous groups. One one side are to be found the violently anti-communist Gaullists, Comrade Thorez and his Communist faithful, the traditional liberal Edouard Herriot, the diehard conservative Edouard Daladier, the man of Munich, the devout Catholic Francois de Menthon and the aristocratic fellow-traveller Gilbert de Chambrun. They make a strange team. But on the other side of the fence the left-wing Catholic Georges Bidault is allied with the arch-conservative Paul Reynaud, and the spokesman of small business, Antoine Pinay.

As the debate developed, it became clear that the sentiment against re-arming Germany had weakened. The question was not so much whether to do it as how to do it. The Gaullists, vigorously opposed to the European Defense Community, were willing that Germany should have a national army. They were not opposed to closer European unity as such, but wanted it through confederation, not federation.

Actually the endorsement of the official policy of entering the defense community, appears to have been clinched with Monsieur Bidault's announcement of Britain's readiness to link itself by treaty with the new community. That assured socialist support, not unanimously, but in numbers great enough to overcome the loss of votes from the Gaullists. For the socialists have said all along they would vote for the European Defense Community if closer British cooperation could be assured.

Since the final vote next Tuesday will be only on an order of the day, the completion of the defense community will still be in abeyance. And Monsieur Bidault said today that France will insist on an acceptable solution to the Saar problem, on the new tie with Britain being put in concrete form and on France's allies accepting French reservations taking account of France's obligations overseas.

But the course of French policy appears to have been set. The opposing leaders have had their say, and the nation is on the brink of a great departure.

The United States is concerned in that a favorable vote on Tuesday, even though inconclusive, should make fairly certain the adoption of the measures on which the whole European policy of the previous Administration was based, on which the policy of the present one is based, and for which General Eisenhower, in his last year in Europe, crusaded with the fervor of a missionary.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The French, having gone through two recent ward with Germany, are obviously in no great hurry to see a former enemy re-armed. It's much as James Norman Hall once said: "The thing that numbs the heart is this: that men cannot devise some scheme of life to banish fear that lurks in most men's eyes." For as Quintas Rufus pointed out centuries ago: "Fear always makes men ready to believe the worst."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday, November 23, 1953

This is the news:

One of Canada's leading newspapers charged today that the Senate's Jenner committee is building up WHAT IT CALLED "a fantastic and sordid smear" of Canadian Foreign Secretary Lester B. Pearson. (a former president of the United Nations General Assembly.) The Toronto Star says there is a possibility that within a matter of days or weeks the Jenner Committee may release testimony naming Pearson as A source of information for a Russian spy ring..during World War Two when Pearson was stationed in Washington. The Star says such TESTIMONY was given to a Congressional committee, in secret, in August of 1951. The newspaper says that the release of this will be used FOR what it calls "blackmail" to get Canada to permit American investigators to question Igor Guzenko, the former code clerk in the Russian embassy..who now lives in Canada.

Mr. Pearson arrived here in New York by plane today, and refused to comment on the story in the Toronto Star. And the counsel for the Jenner committee, Robert Morris, says the committee does not contemplate any such thing as mentioned in the paper's story. Morris says: "It has never been contemplated." He refused to say if the committee has any information linking the Canadian foreign minister to a Soviet spy ring.

Attorney General Brownell today advised the Jenner committee that in 1946 nine government officials received F.B.I. reports linking Harold Glasser to a Soviet spy ring. This was before Glasser was promoted in the Treasury Department. It appears that all the reports were distributed before Glasser accompanied then Secretary of State Marshal to a Moscow Big Four foreign ministers conference in 1947.

The U.S. Parole Board announced today that for a second time it has turned down a plea for parole by Alger Hiss.. who is now serving a prison sentence for perjury.. FOR SAYING that he did not give government secrets to Communist spies. Hiss went to prison in March of 1951... is due for release in November of 1954.

A Senate committee today heard Harry J. Anslinger, the head of the federal Narcotics Bureau, testify that dope from Communist China is flooding the United States. Anslinger says the Chinese communist government takes a cynical attitude toward the situation.. is forcing farmers to grow opium in some areas.

Hammarskjold

In Korea today the prisoner repatriation commission voted down a Communist plan to get the stalled "explanations" [redacted] started again. And American Ambassador Dean challenged the enemy to invite Russia to the Korean peace conference, as a co-belligerent in the Korean war.

Communist China and North Korea today signed a ten-year economic pact. One of its terms calls for wiping out North Korea's war debt to the Chinese.

At the United Nations, Selwyn Lloyd of Great Britain , told the Russians we have no objections to top level conferences between [redacted] Russian and Chinese Communists. Therefore, Lloyd cannot understand why Andrie Vishinsky "makes a greivance" out of the forthcoming Bermuda meeting of American, British and French leaders. Lloyd said British-American relations are strong and solid.

Also at the United Nations: Isreal today asked Secretary General Hammershold to put into effect an article of the Isreali-Jordan armistice agreement.. and call both parties to "obligatory talks." Isreali Ambassador Abba Eban, says Jordan has brushed aside Isreal's informal call for consultations on recent border incidents.

Britain's chief delegate to the United Nations--Sir Gladwyn Jebb has been re-assigned as Ambassador to France. He will be succeeded by Sir Pierson Dixon, who is 49.., deputy undersecretary of state at the foreign office...and a former private secretary to two British foreign ministers: Anthony Eden and the late Ernest Bevin. He attended many of the war-time meetings of foreign ministers.

Queen Elizabeth left London by plane today to start the first round-the-world trip ever undertaken by a British ruler.

An Italian government spokesman says Italy has approved a five-power conference on the future of Trieste.

In Iran, former Premier Mossadegh made three unsuccessful attempts to walk out on his treason trial.

In West Berlin, seventeen and a half thousand pounds of butter were handed out to East Berliners who are over 60 years of age. Some later reported that East German police took their butter away when they returned home.

Norris E. Dodd, the director-general of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, said today that "per capita food production has just about regained its pre-war level" in most areas of the world. But--he said--"this was and is a level too low for health in many areas, AND dangerously near famine in some."

In Washington today, House Speaker Martin, just home from a two month trip to Europe, called on the President and then told reporters: "We are going to have peace." Martin says the free nations of Europe are building strong military forces and have recovered economically--with American aid. He feels:"no nation is going to attack strength."

Edward R. Murrow: November 23, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Reports from Indo-China tonight say that the French Union forces have killed three hundred and thirty-three communist-led rebels, and captured six hundred and sixteen more in the course of the last week. These isolated actions were round the fringe of the Red River Delta. There are two Communist divisions on the northern fringe of the delta believed to be ready to attack, plus an unknown number of geurilla forces - perhaps as many as ~~XXXXXXXXXXXXXX~~ sixty thousand - wrecking communications lines and raiding villages.

The monsoon rains have ended; the eighth winter of war in Indo-China is opening; and the French forces have no considerable victories to report. There have been spoiling attacks and minor actions, but the basic military situation remains unchanged. The French General Navarre has received about nine battalions of reinforcements - some from Korea and some from Germany - but he has so far been unable to launch an effective offensive.

Since the early summer the French Government has been attempting to prove to the people of Indo-China, and the world, that France has no imperial interests in Indo-China, and that the war there is in fact a defense against communist aggression, not just an effort to perpetuate French colonialism. As far back as last July the French offered to "perfect" independence treaties with the associated states of Indo-China, and invited the governments of the three states to enter into immediate negotiation. The French have been trying to persuade the governments and the peoples of Indo-China that they can genuinely resist communism, while fighting for their own country's freedom and welfare. One reason for this has been the hope of recruiting Indo-Chinese troops to replace French troops in the line, so that, as Mr. Eisenhower said of Korea, "Asians might fight Asians". Another factor driving the French towards concessions is the surly and uncertain support given by French public opinion, to this exhausting seven-year war - it has already cost the French more than double the amount of the Marshall Plan aid they have received from us. We are now paying something like forty percent of the financial cost of the war in Indo-China, but the French are paying, not only with money, but with the cream of their young officer personnel.

About a month ago the French demanded to know of Emperor Boa Dai, whether he intended to keep Viet Nam a loyal member of the French Union. David Schoenbrun cables me from Paris tonight that Bao Dai has replied to the French note, although his answer hasn't yet been published. Bao Dai insists that France must recognize Viet Nam as a free and independent nation, voluntarily associated with the French Union in a new treaty. He is asking for much the same status as India enjoys in the British Commonwealth. Bao Dai insists that membership in the French Union requires "equality of rights and duties."

The Viet Nam premier Vantam has left Saigon for Paris by plane. He is openly pro-French, and presumably wouldn't dare leave his capital unless he thought there was no immediate danger from the Nationalist groups which have been pressing for a break with France, and the overthrow of his government.

Schoenbrun cables that Bao Dai's answer and the impending arrival of the Viet Nam Premier have aroused new hope in Paris, for it is realized that the only possibility of ending the war in Indo-China and of relieving France of this military burden is to win Nationalist support, and the mass enthusiasm of the peoples of Indo-China for the war against Communism. This new development does not of course alter the military picture in Indo-China. The French forces badly need a victory, and so far they haven't been able to win it. The Communists, in spite of increased American aid, have been able to maintain the military position pretty much as it has been. The hope to be found in this new development is that it may reduce the defeatism and indifference of the people of Indo-China, and perhaps also of the French politicians; and that it may persuade the people of Indo-China that they have their own future and independence to fight for, rather than just a perpetuation of French interests. In theory, at least, this could make possible a negotiated settlement, without appeasement or surrender to the Communists. Such a hope has not been in sight before, and from this distance it doesn't appear to be a very healthy hope. No one can be sure of the Communist grand strategy in Indo-China, except that it must be their long-range purpose to take it. Conceivably they could settle for a truce in Indo-China, as they have in Korea; but this would merely freeze forces in position, as it has in Korea.

The French are obviously hopeful that they may be able to re-kindle the spirit of the Indo-Chinese people and convince them that they have a stake in their own future. The French are not unaware, as Emerson was when he said:"Nothing great is ever achieved without enthusiasm." Lewis Morris put the situation even more bluntly:"Life is act and not to do is death."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday, November 24, 1953.

This is the news:

Adlai Stevenson charged today that the attitude of Republican leaders is: "I like Ike..but I don't like what Ike likes." In a speech to the Georgia legislature, Stevenson charged that the Republicans are trying to govern the nation and guide the world by what he called: "promises, postponment, paralysis and slander." ~~"Republicans are "indicting by suspicion and convicting by accusation."~~ The former Democratic presidential candidate charged that that ~~the~~ President Eisenhower's lieutenants have "taken McCarthyism away from Mc Carthy." ~~He said: "What an end to the great crusade."~~ Stevenson called for ~~while~~ a full disclosure of mistakes and failures of the past but--he said--"for the love of heaven lets do it with dignity, objectivity and justice and with some better motive than partisan strife that can only seriously weaken the United States."

The President himself left Washington and flew to Augusta, Georgia today after a speech last night in which he said we must not weaken the code by which we have lived.."the right to meet your accuser face to face,.if you have one; the right to go to ~~your~~ the church or synagogue or even the mosque of your own choosing; your right to speak your mind and be protected."

In a few minutes I'd like to review the President's remarks and its possible connection with a decision made today by Air Force Secretary Talbott. He has decided that Lieut. Milo J. Radulovich is not a security risk. An air force board had found to the contrary because of alleged pro-Communist activities of Radulovich's father and sister. The board did not question his loyalty. Today, in Michigan, the 26-year-old Radulovich told reporters: "Nobody will have cause to regret Mr. Talbott's decision."

[redacted]

Lester Pearson, Canada's external affairs minister, says his government will announce tomorrow its decision on an American request for permission to let Senate investigators question Igor Guzenko... a former code clerk in the Russian embassy in Ottawa. Pearson indicates Guzenko will be free to talk to the Americans if he wants to. And Pearson says he has no knowledge, aside from what he's read in the papers, about an alleged charge that PEARSON helped supply information to the Russians during World War Two.

Secretary of State Dulles today described Pearson as a strong and vigorous foe of Communism. [redacted] Mr. Dulles also said he feels its entirely proper for two Senate committees--Jenner's and McCarthy's-- to request Canadian permission to question Guzenko. [redacted]

~~Senator McCarthy today made public a sworn statement by David~~

Greenglass, now serving a 15-year prison sentence for his part in the espionage RING of the executed Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. Greenglass says as far as he knows a radar spy ring headed by Rosenberg "could very possibly be continuing to this day." Senator Mc Carthy tonight will reply to former President Truman's recent attack on McCarthyism. The Senator may be heard over many of these stations at 11 p.m. eastern standard time.

Supreme Court Justice Douglas said in Philadelphia tonight that we will never win the peace until we have done away with what he called "the witch hunt and merchants of hate." Douglas says men and women are being condemned in America today "on the basis of hearsay, innuendo and guilt by association." He says this has made us suspect abroad.

At the United Nations today the Security Council voted "the strongest censure" against Israel for an attack by Israeli troops on a Jordan village. Fifty three Arabs were killed. Israeli Ambassador Eban told the Council that the language used in this censure was stronger than THAT used against the Communist aggressors in Korea.

Secretary of State Dulles agreed today that we made a mistake after World War two in totally disarming Germany and Japan. He said he was among the many who misjudged the intentions of Russia. He says it was a natural mistake then.. at the end of the war.. to believe that the world would start an era of lasting peace.

In Korea we have again turned down the enemy proposal to hold a peace conference at the Village of Panmunjom.

And the Yugoslavs say they have turned down a plan for a conference on Trieste because the proposal called for Italy to get the allied zone of Trieste before the conference began.

~~French Premier Laniel says that at Bermuda next month he will ask President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill for pledges of support for the French claim on the Saar territory.. and to continue to keep their troops in Europe..~~

In Brooklyn, the Dodgers have selected a new manager.. Wally Alston, former manager of the Montreal Royals of the International League. Alston has been in the Brooklyn farm system for eight and a half years.

Edward R. Murrow: November 24, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

There has been too much news today in the field of security and civil liberties to be easily digested, and it may help keep things clear to focus on only two features. One is the off-the-cuff speech of President Eisenhower last night; the other is the decision of Air Secretary Talbott that Lieutenant Radulovich is not a security risk and may keep his commission in the Air Reserve. The President's speech was by no means easy to understand and evaluate. On the other hand, Secretary Talbott's decision about Lieutenant Radulovich is perfectly clear. Quite possibly the Secretary's decision helps one understand and evaluate what the President meant, though even that is not obvious.

One of the objections raised against the hearing of the Tenth Air Force Board at Selfridge Field, which found Lieutenant Radulovich to be a security risk, was that evidence was not disclosed to the lieutenant and came from unidentified sources. President Eisenhower, in his unorthodox speech about American rights laid down as a principle, "the right to meet your accuser face to face." But Secretary Talbott said nothing about this right in his decision. What he did was to cope with another problem, now much discussed, of guilt by association. The issue in the Radulovich case was the lieutenant's association with his sister and father. Mr. Talbott did not say a word to clear the sister. But he decided that the b~~rother's~~ Lt's association with her "was not such as to make her activities and beliefs the determining factor in this case". The Secretary did express an opinion about the father. "The record" he said, "does not support the conclusion that the father has engaged in activities of such a type as to bear upon the decision in this case." That is, the relations of the lieutenant with the father did not make him a security risk since no case was made against the father. And the relations with the sister did not make him a security risk because the association with her was not close enough to injure his status.

The connection between this decision and the President's pungent reference to the code of Wild Bill Hickok is not close. There is a connection in spirit, perhaps, but certainly not in detail. For the President did not mention guilt by association. What he talked about was fair play. A great many Americans will agree that the Talbott decision implemented the rules of fair play. But there the relationship seems to cease.

What the President had in mind can only be deduced. He does not like the assassination of character from behind. "In this country" he said, "If someone dislikes you or accuses you he must come up front. He cannot hide behind the shadows." But how far the President wants this principle to be applied one does not know. Should it hold in the government service? President Eisenhower certainly knows that of the 1,456 employees ousted from public service by his administration not one was allowed to face his accuser, cross-examine him or challenge his credibility. Not that these rules originated with the Republicans. They were introduced under the Democrats. It often is argued that the right of an employee to a government job is not a civil liberty. It also is argued that the government must have leeway to judge the fitness of an employee without being tied to the laws of evidence. Even so, does an American lose his right to meet his accuser face to face simply because he holds a government job? If he is dismissed as a security risk, he may be made unemployable. Such a result is just as severe a punishment as a court would be likely to hand out. And if this is done on untested evidence, with the accuser not met face to face, have his rights as an American been protected?

To raise this question may be carrying the President's words into regions he had not intended. In the context of recent events, it may be more reasonable to believe the President was referring to accusations against eminent Democrats based on charges in secret files made by unidentified witnesses. Or he may have been referring to charges against persons glibly called "spies" on evidence given by accusers whom the accused never met face to face.

I repeat that it is not easy to understand or evaluate what the President meant, much as one must approve the moral tone in which he spoke. If he wanted to make it clear that he had not, for his part, embraced what Mr. Truman defined as McCarthy-ism, he chose a symbolic way of speaking.

The President dislikes personal attacks, which is ~~to~~ commendable. So last night's speech became a kind of parable. Hence, if it was unclear it was meant to be unclear. If it conveyed intimations, it was meant to convey intimations. And those for whom the intimations were intended were presumed to be smart enough to know how they were meant for them. ~~Secretary Talbott included.~~

Reports from Washington say that the White House staff regarded the Brownell charges in the White case as aimed to take spy-hunting out of the hands of Senator McCarthy, and that it misjudged the effect the Brownell speech would have. A White House aide is quoted as saying that the speech was aimed more at McCarthy than Truman. Now the White House staff wishes Mr. Truman had not been damaged and that the speech had been modified before it was made, not afterwards. So in this context, the President's speech may have been an effort to do what Mr. Brownell failed to do, make a clean break with practices many Americans regard as unfair. But it is not easy to see how the campaign to which the Jenner Committee and the Attorney General appear to be committed can be conducted if the President's new rule is affirmed. Yet one is entitled to hope that the accused will be allowed to face the accuser, and that the shooting will be in front, as in the days of Wild Bill Hickok.

At 11 o'clock tonight (Eastern Standard Time), we shall know, at any rate, whether the Senator from Wisconsin appreciates a White House parable. For at that time Senator McCarthy will reply to Mr. Truman.

~~We are inclined to forget at times that~~ the basis of a Demomratic society rests in large measure on a sense of tolerance, understanding and fair play. Many years ago, Daniel Defoe and the Frenchman La Bru-yar cautioned wisely: "We hear much of people calling out to punish the guilty, but very few are concerned to clear the innocent...a guilty man punished is an example for the rabble; an innocent man condemned is the affair of all honest men."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday, Mar 25, 1953

This is the news:

Canada has agreed to permit American authorities to question Igor Guzenko, the former Soviet embassy code clerk who exposed a Soviet spy ring in Canada. Foreign Minister Lester Pearson said today if Guzenko is willing.. Canada will arrange a confidential meeting with American authorities. It must be held under Canadian supervision. And Canada wants the right to approve in advance any information the American investigators later want to make public. Guzenko today told a Canadian newspaper, the Toronto Telegram, that he has no new information as such for the American people. But he said he has advice that would be of value on spy techniques and how to expose them.

Mr. Pearson said today that once before, in 1949, Senate investigators questioned Guzenko. And he took note of a reference to "sources highly placed in the Canadian government" in an F.B.I. document. This document, sent to the White House in 1946, was declassified and made public by Attorney General Brownell during his testimony on the Harry Dexter White Case. The F.B.I. letter said , in effect, that "highly placed Canadian" sources warned the F.B.I. that White might be a Soviet spy. Mr. Pearson said today it was no Canadian who told this to the F.B.I... it was a security liason officer in a friendly embassy of another country represented in Ottawa. Pearson said this information was not actually new but just a reminder of what the original F.B.I. file, sent to Canada, had reported on Harry Dexter White.

Here in New York today Senator McCarthy questioned a man he described as one who "appears to be one of the most active Communist espionage agents this committee has uncovered to date." The witness was Harry A. Hyman, a one-time employe of an electronics laboratory. McCarthy introudced evidence that Hyman--now an insurance salesman--had made some 400 telephone calls to army installations and electronics plants in the past two years. Hyman refused to say whether he is a Communist or a Soviet agent. And when the Senator asked: "Are you not an espionage agent for the Communist party at this very moment?" Hyman replied: "If you have evidence of that produce it." McCarthy said: "The best evidence is your sitting there and refusing to tell us whether or not you are or are not an active Communist agent." McCarthy also asked: "Do you feel you should be walking the streets in this country or that you should have the same fate as the Rosenbergs (who were excuted for espionage." The witness called this an outrageous question.

In Alabama today the visiting Adlai Stevenson took note of that part of Senator McCarthy's speech last night in which the Senator said that Communism would be an issue in the 1956 presidential race. Stevenson noted that this conflicts with a hope expressed by the President. And Stevenson commented: "There comes a time when such contradictions no longer serve the national interest."

The government announced today that the cost of living has increased a fraction of one per cent... the eighth straight month the index has gone up.. the fifth month in a row that it's hit a new high. This increase is enough to give a million auto workers a two cents an hour pay increase under the escalator clause in their contract. Commissioner of Labor Statistics Ewan Clague says living costs may go down a bit next winter. And Dr. Gabriel How-ge (~~ne Hauge~~), the president's economic expert, says we have passed through [redacted] what he calls a "psychological depression" and are now "in a period of real economic adjustment."

Foreign Aid Director Stassen has informed Congress that it will be possible to make "a considerable reduction" in our military aid to Western Europe next year. And he says that with a few exceptions, economic aid can be ended.

Assistant Defense Secretary Hannah says the army, navy and marine corps are studying the possibility of cutting their manpower strength by ten per cent in the next fiscal year. It's been estimated that such a manpower cut might save one billion dollars.

Former Social Security Commissioner Arthur Altmeyer has been subpenaed by a House committee studying social security. The subpena was issued after Altmeyer rejected an invitation to testify voluntarily. He had been connected with the Social Security agency from 1935 until a few months ago when he was forced out of office by the new administration. It's reported that Altmeyere turned down the first invitation because he said, he felt that the committee was trying to WRECK the social security program.

In Washington today the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia.. the ruling body of the city.. ordered some of it agencies, to hire and fire without regard to race creed or color. The order exempted all departments and institutions in which there would be a controversey over mixing white and colored people.

In FRANKFURT Germany, Chief Justice William Clark of the American court of Appeals in Germany, charges that he has been "fired" by the State Department for "refusing to take orders." The Department says Clark is being let out because his term expires early in January and also as an economy measure and because the court's work is tapering off.

~~In Korea, American Ambassador Arthur Dean says some way must be found to assure Russia's attendance at the Korean peace conference, and to be sure that the Russians abide by conference decisions.~~

In Boston tonight, the F.B.I. arrested three persons in connection with LAST YEAR'S 681-thousand-dollar Danvers armored car robbery. They arrested George O'brien, his wife and 19-year old son who is a student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The father is charged with participating in the robbery; the mother and son with receiving stolen property. The robbery took place in three minutes while the truck guards were enjoying a quick cup of coffee.

Edward R. Murrow: November 25, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Tonight it appears possible, even probable, that the French Government will fall before the Bermuda Conference between Britain, the United States and France gets underway. French Premier Laniel has threatened to resign unless the Assembly votes approval of his rather vague plans for European unification. The final vote will probably come on Friday night.

French politics will probably always remain a mystery to most foreign observers. Political action in France does not follow clearly defined and often predictable channels, as it does in Britain and the United States. The French politician, combining a high degree of individualism with cynicism and sophistication, often appears to ignore all channel markers and sees nothing unusual or extraordinary in attempting to navigate the Ship of State on dry land. But in this case the essentials of the controversy are clear. The debate in the Assembly has been going on for a week. More than fifty Deputies have had their say. What is going on in Paris would be called a Great Debate in this country. It has cut across all Party lines because the French are attempting to hammer out an historic decision which will largely determine their future course. The debate has been bitter, emotional and confused. But the timid, the fence-sitters and the mugwumps have had to make their choice.

In all this confusion and anger, certain conclusions have been reached. Everyone without exception now agrees that France can no longer stand alone, and must seek its future security and salvation, in some larger association of nations. The days of independent glory are over, and all the French leaders - even the most nationalistic of them - have admitted this in the current debate. The profound difference of opinion, has to do with the nature of the associations France should seek. The Communists clamor for the friendship treaty with Russia. The De Gaullists, on the extreme Right, also talk of a closer association with Russia, but this talk is mainly a bluff and a threat, aimed at the Americans and the British, and calculated to get what De Gaulle wants from those two countries. What the General wants is a confederation of all Western Europe, including Scandinavia, Spain and Portugal; and he wants it to be led by France, with Anglo-American support, plus guarantees that the Germans will not usurp the moral and political leadership of France. Then there are the center groups between these two extremes, composed principally of the Catholics and the Socialists. These are the visionaries of the new Europe - a Federal United States of Europe, in which a democratically elected executive and legisla~~tive~~ture would eventually control all of Western Europe. These are the three broad divisions of modern Gaul. Each has its own little splinter group. But all are looking toward Europe in some form or other as the basis of the association France must seek.

In the course of this crucial debate there has been almost no mention of the United Nations or the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. It is now clear, as it never was before, that for Frenchmen the choice has been narrowed down - for or against European-wide institutions as the basis of French foreign policy.

Dick Hottelet cables that the Germans are watching affairs in Paris with deep concern and disappointment. They do not expect any decisive action in Paris before next Spring, if then. The Germans are bitter at the way the French are kicking about the European Army Plan, which was a French idea in the first place. The Adenauer administration is so completely committed to the European Army Plan that officials in Bonn merely shrug their shoulders when asked what they're going to do if Spring comes and the French still refuse to play ball. The Germans become increasingly restive in their present twilight status of an occupied country, a country that is divided with the Russians glowering over their shoulder. Currently the Germans, with the most stable government in Western Europe, are all for European unity and the European Army. But if the delays continue and the frictions increase, they may decide to go it alone, and no one can be sure of the direction in which they will go.

The debate in France is complicated and confused, but for the French and for us it is crucial. The importance to us can be easily stated. It could wreck our whole foreign policy, so far as Europe is concerned. So the French politicians, who often appear to us to be brilliant, highly individualistic and irresponsible, are really arguing not only about what's going to happen to them but what's going to happen to us.

It is always difficult to view politics at a distance. And no one was more aware of this than Will Rogers. In 1931 he wrote:"When you start telling France something about Germany, the French will say: that's fine from an American angle, but we happen to live right across the river from 'em and we know what's going to happen to us soon as they are able again. Don't try to shorten our lives." Times haven't changed.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Thursday Nov. 26

This is the news:

The Russians changed their signals tonight and announced that they will consent to meet with "representatives" of the United States, Great Britain and France. Moscow radio, broadcasting this brief surprise announcement, says the text of the Soviet reply to the western powers bid for a Big Four foreign ministers meeting, will be made public later. So far we do not know where or when the Russians propose to meet with western [redacted] "representatives." And we do not know what conditions the Russians are proposing. The British news agency Reuters suggests that the Russians want the meeting to be held in Berlin. Reuters also says the Soviet note... now being translated in the western embassies in Moscow.. is eight pages long. British and French sources say this is in reply to the western note of November 16 turning down Moscow's "conditions" for such a meeting. At that time the Russians insisted first, that there be a five power meeting to include Red China. Then they wanted what the west described as "a defenseless Europe as the price for Soviet participation in such a conference. [redacted]am

~~Tonight's announcement of Moscow comes on the eve of the~~

Tonight's announcement from Moscow comes but a week in advance of the scheduled Big Three meeting in Bermuda. And it comes on the eve of a vote in the French Assembly on Premier Daniel's announced support of the European army treaty.

In Brussels today the Belgian House of Representatives ratified the European army plan by a three to one vote. We're told approval by the Belgian Senate is certain. Only West Germany has completed ratification. The Dutch House has voted approval... and Italy and Luxembourg have yet to give the matter formal consideration.

At the United Nations today the Dutch representative warned the Soviet Union that if it tries to force ~~is~~ ITS system on the west "our peace-loving world will handle the Russians in the way it handled the Kaiser and Hitler." And Soviet Delegate Vishinsky later appeared to warn the west that Russia may have some atomic and hydrogen weapons that we don't have. Then the U.N's Political Committee rejected every paragraph of Moscow's "peace plan". Among other things it called for a ban on nuclear weapons.

In Korea, Thanksgiving Day has passed, with no progress on negotiations looking towards a peace conference.. and no progress in the stalled exchange or prisoners of war who do not want to go home.

A Czechoslovakian truce inspection officer in Korea was seriously wounded today. But no one seems to know if he shot himself, or was wounded when his gun went off accidentally.

Vice President Nixon was in Burma today. In a speech over the Burmese radio he said our country seeks no bases in Burma. And we have never sought favors that would cast doubt on the Burmese courage or "discredit its new nationalism." Later the Vice President visited the ancient city of Pegu and walked among anti-American demonstrators, shaking hands and answering questions.

The President today attended a special Thanksgiving service at the Reid Memorial Presbyterian Church in Atlanta. And he heard Dr. Robert Strong offer thanks for the administrations " trend away from a regimented economy, and toward a decentralized government, and the expression of the free spirit of our nation." Tonight, with their son, Major John and his family, the Eisenhower's had their Holiday meal at the Augusta National Golf Course where the President is vacationing.

The Federal Reserve Board reported in Washington today that in 1953 the nation enjoyed a new level of good living. The Board predicts a record production for the year. Personal income is expected to set a record. And the only drop on the board's charts is shown in the graph on farm income. The report says the income of farm proprietors "declined markedly".. and is now back at the postwar low reached in 1949.

Democratic Representative Eberharter of Pennsylvania says a House committee studying the social security system "has been nothing but an attempt to discredit and smash the present system." But Republican Representative Goodwin of Massachusetts says: "There is no intention of breaking up social security, but of trying to improve it."

Republican Senator Malone of Nevada charges that the late Harry Dexter White deliberately underestimated America's mineral and patroleum reserves in 1944 in order to promote a multi-million dollar loan to Russia. The loan was never made. But Malone says White "faked" statistics in an effort to make the loan to Russia in return for Soviet raw materials.

Chairman Jenner of the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee said today that the convicted perjurer Alger Hiss is among nine former federal employes whose government jobs are being investigated by his committee. The Senators want to know how these people kept their jobs despite derogatory security reports.

Democratic Senator Humphrey of Minnesota says "apparently Senator McCarthy is determined to shoot at President Eisenhower as well as former President Truman." Humphrey says Mc Carthy's Tuesday night speech indicates to him that Mc Carthy is "trying to set himself up apart from the Eisenhower Administration."

And the New York Times reports from Washington that White House staff members are "hopping mad" over the McCarthy speech. They are reported to feel that Mc Carthy: criticized Mr. Eisenhower as well as Mr. Truman.. tried to make himself, rather than the Administration's legislative program, the central issue of next year's congressional campaign. The White House staff members are also reported to believe that McCarthy distorted the case of John Paton Davies.. a State Department diplomat.. although he personally was aware of the true facts in the case.

And that's the news on this Thanksgiving Day. For some reason there never seems to be much news on a holiday. But there is never any lack of proclamations. My favorite proclamation offered today came from General John Hull, our Far East Commander. He said: "Let us reflect that in this year of 1953 our country is still free and still strong - that we have withstood every attack upon our liberties, whether from without or within - and that we have not only the earthly resources but also the moral strength to continue in the path of international righteousness, and the cause of humanity and peace. Let us thank God that this is so."

I would suppose it to be true that most of us have personal and private reasons for giving thanks - [reasons which we would not publish or utter before a microphone.] But I should like to suggest a few perhaps unorthodox reasons for national thanksgiving. We should give thanks for the burdens we bear; they are part of the price of power. As a nation we are in a position to influence and indeed determine the course of history. Other nations have been created and then crushed, without ever having such an opportunity or such an awesome responsibility.

We should give thanks that we have allies - great and proud nations whose history and culture are thicker and longer than ours, and who have joined with us, not as satellites seeking survival but because we and they desire to live in the same kind of world. Troublesome as allies often are we should give thanks that they do not follow us blindly; that they argue and contend - are frequently disposed to counter-balance our impatience with their experience.

We should give thanks that in a period in the history of this minor planet when humans have devised a method of destroying humanity, we as a nation are not a spectator. The decisions we have been called upon to make in the last few years have been hard and harsh, and we may again be forced to bite upon the iron. But the power of decision is ours and we cannot abdicate. We should be thankful that we are not isolated - that our inheritance,received almost before we reached maturity, includes the hope of survival, freedom and the dignity of the individual. We should be grateful for the knowledge possessed by most of us that if we fail there will be no interest, anywhere, in apologies for that failure. There are those, even amongst our allies, who doubt that we are or will become a great nation. But we are obliged to do so, not only in order to ensure the survival of this nation's state, but in order to preserve from extinction the ideas, the beliefs which created the nation.

We should be thankful that we can still argue, that most of us can still distinguish between dissent and disloyalty; and that there is, slowly but perceptibly, occurring in this country an increase in racial tolerance.

We are confronted with internal and external threats. We are required to be vigilant lest we lose our liberties in the process of preparing to defend them.

We might give thanks that however well or ill we discharge our duties or face our responsibilities, it will be done by what Will Rogers used to call the "big, normal majority" - through the laborious process - slow and painful - of the people who live in this country making up their collective mind. It is not true that the scientists have provided us with weapons we cannot control or manipulate. The existence of the most fantastic destructive devices has nothing whatever to do with the necessity to render continuing judgment between good and evil, between justice and injustice. There exists no moral difference between a big bomb and a little bomb.

We should give thanks for the burdens we bear, because we must believe that we can bear them; must believe that all the blood and all the history which brought us, however reluctantly, to this position of leadership was not merely a series of accidents. When Mr. Roosevelt said this nation had a rendezvous with destiny he stated no time limit. It seems to me that we have not yet reached the rendezvous point. And who among us would cast off these burdens, responsibilities and demands for decision? Who would willingly become a spectator, leaving the power of decision - however terrible or hopeful the consequences may be - to other men and other nations?

Ernst Reuter, the late Mayor of Berlin, used to say during the air lift: "We have to be heroes, whether we like it or not". For our part, we have to be leaders, with all the dangers and obligations that that word implies, whether we like it or not.

XXXXXX

November 26, 1953.

WORD FOR TODAY

These lines, by Samuel ~~Eliot~~ Morison, would seem appropriate as another Thanksgiving comes to an end: "One small candle lighted near Plymouth Rock on a dull December day in 1620 has burned with a steady flame that no misfortune could quench. Let us have confidence that divine providence, who kept alight that one small candle from which a thousand have been lit, has some great purpose for the million-candle power nation to perform."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday Nov 27, 1953
Evening

This is the news:

The State Department says that the Russian note, agreeing to a meeting of the Big Four is "disappointing." The British "welcome" the acceptance...the French are "hopeful" that a conference will produce results...and my colleague, Richard C. Hottelet cables from Bonn that the Germans feel we should follow up the suggestion for a meeting in Berlin.

I'd like to discuss the note, and the results of today's French Assembly vote in a few minutes. (The French gave Premier Laniel a vote of confidence on the eve of the Bermuda conference. But a strong opposition indicated France could not promise to go along in approving a European Army.)

On Formosa, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek met with South Korea's President Syngman Rhee. The talks were secret. But Chiang later told newsmen his "sincere hope is that the two governments will cooperate to "eliminate" the common enemy."

At Panmunjom, our envoy, Arthur Dean, says there is a "distinct possibility" that his preliminary talks with the Communists will assure a holding of the Korean Peace Conference. Both sides meet again tonight.

There is still no casualty report on that fire which has destroyed our headquarters in the South Korean port of Pusan. The fire is now under control. But thousands of homes have been destroyed.

An American soldier - Sgt. Maurice Schick of Canonsburg, Pennsylvania has confessed the brutal murder of a nine-year-old child a week ago in Tokyo. Schick is married and the father of two adopted children.

Our Ambassador to the United Nations, Henry Cabot Lodge, told the assembly today that President Eisenhower approves complete independence for Puerto Rico, if that is what that country wants. The announcement was greeted with considerable applause.

Also at the UN, it was made known that we will have to contribute less toward the running of that organization next year. And the Russians will have to give more than they have in the past.

The Justice Department today filed a 188-page brief asking the Supreme Court to outlaw segregation in the public schools. The brief said the court not only had the "authority but the duty to see that there is no discrimination because of race or color." In an immediate reaction, Governor Talmadge of Georgia said this action "will be a tremendous blow to the Republican Party in the South. It might solidify the south behind the Democrats."

The President, in a letter to Chairman Hendrickson and his committee looking into juvenile delinquency, said he hopes the Committee's work will make the people aware of the immensity of the problem. The President promised the "wholehearted assistance" of all government agencies.

Secretary of the Air Force Talbott warned today that we are "woefully weak" in our supplies of titanium - a strong, lightweight metal used in the production of high-speed aircraft. He urged that immediate steps be taken to increase supplies.

And the Director of Selective Service, General Hershey, made known that he's opposed to any upward revision of mental requirements for draftees. He contends that the standards are too high already.

Senator Jenner said today that his Internal Security subcommittee heard testimony last June indicating that Alger Hiss tried to control strategic positions in the State Department. Jenner said the committee was given this information by J. Anthony Panuch, a former assistant in the department.

Edward R. Murrow: November 27, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Notes from Moscow are usually so drafted and timed as to serve Soviet power interests; that is a fact of Recent History ~~and it is not finding fault to point that out.~~ Obviously it is the job of a Foreign Office to serve its country's power interests. The Soviet note of yesterday is a characteristic example ~~instance~~ of drafting and timing a note to serve power interests. It was drafted to accept a four-power meeting on Germany without repeating the unacceptable conditions spelled out in the preceding Soviet note. And it was timed to arrive just before the French Assembly was to vote on the policy of the Laniel Government, a Policy favorable to European unification, and by implication, favorable to a re-armed Germany. In not repeating the unacceptable conditions, Moscow was trying to look conciliatory. No other look would have influenced the French Assembly to overthrow the Laniel Government and thus condemn to failure the years of effort to set up a European Defense Community. And there would have been no point in sending the note at this precise moment except to influence the Assembly.

As it turned out the note failed to overthrow the Laniel Government and so it failed to wreck the European Defense Community. And that is the momentous fact to register about it. Foreign Minister Molotov can gloomily report to his colleagues that he did his best. And certainly he tried hard enough. He had written a note on November 3rd that was perhaps purposely too stiff, then had softened it to show an ostensible change of temper and policy. And the note did strike the French Assembly, as correspondents reported, like a bombshell. They had not been sure Laniel was going to win before the note arrived. Then they became all the more unsure of it. But the strategy did not succeed. Laniel goes to Bermuda without a resoundingly affirmed confidence; but he goes.

The French Assembly probably is the weakest link in the chain of Western power, but it has proved stronger than the Kremlin's power to thwart and destroy in France. The Soviet leaders have not been able to exploit French fear of Germany enough to overcome French fear of communist power. Now the West can go forward with its work of creating effective strength in Europe. #

There still is room for failure. But the French Assembly has put substance into the hopes for success. The debate just ended has shown a large majority in favor of a close alliance with the partners in the Atlantic Pact. # Only four out of more than twenty speakers opposed German re-armament. Less than eighty out of 627 Deputies indicated they would vote against German re-armament in any form. The differences that proved so awkward were over the means and not the end, both of German re-armament and the unification of Europe.

It is well to repeat that the arming of Germany as an organic part of Western strength would be a bitter defeat for the Soviet Union. That is not said as a guess. Moscow has repeatedly warned that it must not happen. No notes in peacetime have been couched in words more grave or ominous than the Soviet notes on this theme. Earlier, the Kremlin hoped to stop the West by frightening it. It was trying to make neutralists of the war-weary and exposed Western Europeans. When that campaign did not succeed, the Soviet strategy was reversed. The Kremlin decided to present itself as peace-loving, and to turn European suspicions against the United States. It is this new strategy that now has floundered.

As things turned out Laniel won by a narrow margin, a majority of 29 with a hundred members abstaining. So the Kremlin was right if it was sure there could be a majority against Laniel. But it was not able to marshal this majority. The abstainers did not like the Laniel policy for one reason or another, but they disliked a Kremlin victory still more. So they did not vote. It may even be that without yesterday's note they would have voted, and that the Kremlin misjudged the position. It may be that unintentionally they helped Laniel. It may be that Molotov should confess to his colleagues that, as Artemus Ward said of Napoleon, he had tried to do too much and had done it.

Now that the note has failed of its purpose, it does not pass out of the picture. The Kremlin is on record as retreating from the stand it took in the stiff note of November 3rd. That note, it will be recalled, objected in principle to the security measures of the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance, to the arming of Germany and the sharing of bases. And the Russians objected in principle to the holding of three-power meetings. They no longer can object to that, for this note is to be considered at one such a meeting in Bermuda.

Previously the Soviet Government had insisted on a five-power conference, with Communist China attending, to be held at the same time as a conference over Germany. Now it is willing to have a meeting over Germany first, but insists that such a conference must take up and arrange for a meeting with China.

As for the earlier conditions, it should be emphasized that they are not withdrawn. They simply are not made as pre-conditions. The new note re-states and re-argues them. And if a conference is held they are sure to re-appear one after the other, so the outlook for a conference is ~~not too rosy~~ Rather dusty

If anyone asks himself if the Soviet leaders are not to be credited with a sincere desire to reduce tensions and turn their efforts to raising the standards of Russian consumers, a four-power conference should answer the question. If the meeting is held and fails, the remaining opposition to a European community and Army can be expected to fold up. If it is held and the totally unexpected happens, if the Soviet Union agrees to free German elections, if at the same time it throws its influence behind a genuine peace in Korea, if it accepts controlled disarmament - [and Foreign Minister Bidault wants that made a demand by a four-power conference] - and if it does not set too high a price on Communist China's presence at a conference table, then 1954 can be a year when the cold war gives way to an era of work for peace ~~in~~ and good will. But it takes second sight to discover portents of such an era in the Soviet note. To ordinary journalistic eyes it is a fairly familiar concoction, perhaps not so abusive and hostile as usual, for it does represent a retreat of sorts, but it is a studiously non-committal document. The Western Powers had asked for a four-power conference without conditions. The Kremlin now says yes, and does not renew its conditions. But that is as far as it goes. If at Berlin, where the Soviet Government would like to hold the meeting, the Kremlin should be ready to go further and act to relieve tensions, the West will rejoice. But the time for rejoicing is after, not before the act.

The French have given Premier Laniel a modest vote of confidence as he prepares to leave for the Bermuda conferences. The French opposition is obviously skeptical, for as Daniel Webster said:"Men can not be forced into trust." But Laniel may yet win over his critics. The Roman Livy was aware of this centuries ago when he remarked:"Confidence placed in another often compels confidence in return."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The State Department says that the Russian note agreeing to a meeting of the Big Four is "disappointing." The British "welcome" the acceptance - the French are "hopeful" that a conference will produce results - and my colleague, Richard C. Hottelet cables from Bonn that the Germans feel we should follow up the suggestion for a meeting in Berlin.

I'd like to discuss the note and the results of today's French Assembly vote in a few minutes. The French gave Premier Laniel a vote of confidence on the eve of the Bermuda conference. But a strong opposition indicated France could not promise to go along in approving a European Army.

On Formosa, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek met with South Korea's President Syngman Rhee. The talks were secret. But Chiang later told newsmen his "sincere hope is that the two governments will cooperate to "eliminate" the common enemy.

At Panmunjom, our envoy, Arthur Dean, says there is a "distinct possibility" that his preliminary talks with the Communists will assure a holding of the Korean Peace Conference. Both sides meet again tonight.

There is still no casualty report on that fire which has destroyed our headquarters in the South Korean port of Pusan. The fire is now under control. But thousands of homes have been destroyed.

An American soldier - Sgt. Maurice Schick of Canonsburg, Pennsylvania has confessed the brutal murder of a nine year old child a week ago in Tokyo. Schick is married and the father of two adopted children.

Our Ambassador to the United Nations, Henry Cabot Lodge, told the assembly today that President Eisenhower approves complete independence for Puerto Rico, if that is what that country wants. The announcement was greeted with considerable applause.

Also at the UN, it was made known that we will have to contribute less toward the running of that organization next year. And the Russians will have to give more than they have in the past.

The Justice Department today filed a 188-page brief asking the Supreme Court to outlaw segregation in the public schools. The brief said the Court not only had the "authority but the duty to see that there is no discrimination because of race or color." In an immediate reaction, Governor Talmadge of Georgia said this action "will be a tremendous blow to the Republican Party in the South. It might solidify the south behind the Democrats."

The President, in a letter to Chairman Hendrickson and his committee looking into juvenile delinquency, said he hopes the Committee's work will make the people aware of the immensity of the problem. The President promised the "wholehearted assistance" of all government agencies.

Secretary of the Air Force Talbott warned today that we are "woefully weak" in our supplies of titanium - a strong, lightweight metal used in the production of high-speed aircraft. He urged that immediate steps be taken to increase supplies.

And the Director of Selective Service, General Hershey made known that he's opposed to any upward revision of mental requirements for draftees. He contends that the standards are too high already.

Senator Jenner said today that his Internal Security subcommittee heard testimony last June indicating that Alger Hiss tried to control strategic positions in the State Department. Jenner said the committee was given this information by J. Anthony Panuch, a former assistant in the Department.

Notes from Moscow are usually so drafted and timed as to serve Soviet power interests; that is a fact of recent history. Obviously it is the job of a Foreign Office to serve its country's power interests. The Soviet note of yesterday is a characteristic example of drafting and timing a note to serve power interests. It was drafted to accept a four-power meeting on Germany without repeating the unacceptable conditions spelled out in the preceding Soviet note. And it was timed to arrive just before the French Assembly was to vote on the policy of the Laniel government, a policy favorable to European unification, and by implication, favorable to a re-armed Germany. In not repeating the unacceptable conditions, Moscow was trying to look conciliatory. No other look would have influenced the French Assembly to overthrow the Laniel Government and thus condemn to failure the years of effort to set up a European Defense Community. And there would have been no point in sendin the note at this precise moment except to influence the Assembly.

As it turned out the note failed to overthrow the Laniel Government and so it failed to wreck the European Defense Community. And that is the momentous fact to register about it. Foreign Minister Molotov can gloomily report to his colleagues that he did his best. And certainly he tried hard enough. He had written a note on November 3rd that was perhaps purposely too stiff, then had softened it to show an ostensible change of temper and policy. And the note did strike the French Assembly, as correspondents reported, like a bombshell. They had not been sure Laniel was going to win before the note arrived. Then they became all the more unsure of it. But the strategy did not succeed. Laniel goes to Bermuda without a resoundingly affirmed confidence; but he goes.

The French Assembly probably is the weakest link in the chain of Western power, but it has proved stronger than the Kremlin's power to thwart and destroy in France. The Soviet leaders have not been able to exploit French fear of Germany enough to overcome French fear of communist power. Now the West can go forward with its work of creating effective strength in Europe. There still is room for failure. But the French Assembly has put substance into the hopes for success. The debate just ended has shown a large majority in favor of a close alliance with the partners in the Atlantic Pact. Only four out of more than twenty speakers opposed German re-armament. Less than eighty out of 627 Deputies indicated they would vote against German re-armament in any form. The differences that proved so ackward were over the means and not the ned, both of re armament and the unification of Europe.

It is well to repeat that the arming of Germany as an organic part of Western strength would be a bitter defeat for the Soviet Union. That is not said as a guess. Moscow has repeatedly warned that it must not happen. No notes in peacetime have been couched in words more grave or ominous than the Soviet notes on this theme. Earlier, the Kremlin hoped to stop the West by frightening it. It was trying to make neutralists of the war-weary and exposed Western Europeans. When that campaign did not succeed, the Soviet strategy was reversed. The Kremlin decided to present itself as peace-loving, and to turn European suspicions against the United States. It is this new strategy that now has floundered.

As things turned out Laniel won by a narrow margin, a majority of 29 with a hundred members abstaining. So the Kremlin was right if it was sure there could be a majority against Laniel. But it was not able to marshal this majority. The abstainers did not like the Laniel policy for one reason or another, but they disliked a Kremlin victory still more. So they did not vote. It may even be that without yesterday's note they would have voted, and that the Kremlin misjudged the position. It may be that unintentionally they helped Laniel. It may be that Molotov should confess to his colleagues that, as Artemus Ward said of Napoleon, he had tried to do too much and had done it.

Now that the note has failed of its purpose, it does not pass out of the picture. The Kremlin is on record as retreating from the stand it took in the stiff note of November 3rd. That note, it will be recalled, objected in principle to the security measures of the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance, to the arming of Germany and the sharing of bases. And the Russians objected in principle to the holding of three-power meetings. They no longer can object to that, for this note is to be considered at one such a meeting in Bermuda.

Previously the Soviet Government had insisted on a five-power conference, with Communist China attending, to be held at the same time as a conference over Germany. Now, it is willing to have a meeting over Germany first, but insists that such a conference must take up and arrange for a meeting with China.

As for the earlier conditions, it should be emphasized that they are not withdrawn. They simply are not made as pre-conditions. The new note re-states and re-argues them. And if a conference is held they are sure to re-appear one after the other, so the outlook for a conference is rather dusty.

If anyone asks himself if the Soviet leaders are not to be credited with a sincere desire to reduce tensions and turn their efforts to raising the standards of Russian consumers, a four-power conference should answer the question. If the meeting is held and fails, the remaining opposition to a European community and Army can be expected to fold up. If it is held and the totally unexpected happens, if the Soviet Union agrees to free German elections, if at the same time it throws its influence behind a genuine peace in Korea, if it accepts controlled disarmament and Foreign Minister Bidault wants that made a demand by a four-power conference - and if it does not set too high a price on Communist China's presence at a conference table, then 1954 can be a year when the cold war gives way to an era of work for peace and good will. But it takes second sight to discover portents of such an era in the Soviet note. To ordinary journalistic eyes it is a fairly familiar concoction, perhaps not so abusive and hostile as usual, for it does represent a retreat of sorts, but it is a studiously non-committal document. The Western Powers had asked for a four-power conference without conditions. The Kremlin now says yes, and does not renew its conditions. But that is as far as it goes. If at Berlin, where the Soviet Government would like to hold the meeting, the Kremlin should be ready to go further and act to relieve tensions, the West will rejoice. But the time for rejoicing is after, not before the act.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The French have given Premier Laniel a modest vote of confidence as he prepares to leave for the Bermuda conferences. The French opposition is obviously skeptical, for as Daniel Webster said: "Men cannot be forced into trust." But Laniel may get win over his critics. The Roman Livy was aware of this centuries ago when he remarked: "Confidence placed in another often compels confidence in return."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday November 30, 1953

This is the news:

British Foreign Secretary Eden said today he has every reason to believe that the United States shares his hope for an early Big Four foreign ministers conference with the Russians. Mr. Eden told the House of Commons that Moscow's latest note, accepting such a conference, had no conditions. The State Department on Friday called the Soviet note "disappointing." But today Secretary of State Dulles told a House committee: "We approach a possible meeting with representatives of the Soviet Union."

In his testimony (to a committee investigating Russia's seizure of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia) the Secretary outlined our general approach to any meeting with the Russians. He said we welcome opportunities to settle specific disputes..and reduce the risk of war. "But," he said," let me assure you that we do not look upon the conference table as a place where we surrender our principles...but rather as a place for making our principles prevail."

In his direct testimony on the Baltic states, Mr. Dulles said the captive peoples of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia are not forgotten. He assured them that "we are not prepared to seek illusory safety for ourselves" while bargaining away their freedom. The Secretary noted that 15 once-independent nations have now been Sovietized. He pointed out that the leaders of Russia are still asking free peoples to rely on Soviet mutual security pacts. "We should know," said Mr. Dulles," that when the Soviet rulers use the word 'security', they mean an opportunity for the Soviet Union to secure new victims."

At the United Nations today, Ambassador Lodge charged that under a conscious policy of "wholesale brutalities", laid down by world Communism, 38-thousand allied soldiers and civilians were brutally treated in Korea. All but a few thousand died. And American representatives say of the 11-thousand non-Korean troops subjected to these atrocities, all but a few hundred were American G.I's. Lodge told the United Nations that Russian officers headed the Communist prison camps in North Korea, and Soviet citizens were the leading officials in the North Korean government. Ambassador Lodge proposes that the U.N. express its grave concern at "reports and information" that in many instances the enemy employed inhuman practises. The British delegate, Sir Gladwyn Jebb said the only motive for these atrocities seems to have been "a love of cruelty for its own sake." He said if the delegates ignore this atrocity report they are guilty of [redacted] "callousness unworthy of this great organization that would lower its status in the eyes of world opinion."

The General Assembly today rejected Russia's demand for a ban on atomic and hydrogen weapons and a cut in armaments by the big powers.

In Korea, some American reporters have been told that we might start "explanations" next week to the 22 Americans who refuse to return home from Communist prisoner of war camps. And the allied command [redacted]ow wants to start--tomorrow--questioning 328 South Koreans who don't want to come home.

And General Taylor, the 8th army commander, today offered "all the resources of the United Nations" to rebuild the city of Pusan which was swept by fire over the week-end. Twenty-seven thousand persons lost their homes.

Britain's Prime Minister Churchill was 79 years old today. And the President cabled him warmest congratulations and his best wishes for many more years of hapinness and contentment.

In Washington today the President said he thinks the Department of Agriculture should spend more money for soil conservation. He asked Secretary Benson to see if he could use some of the money he plans to save elsewhere to aid the conservation program.

And Secretary Benson, speaking in Chicago tonight, will say that rigid price supports and production controls for farm products...could bring unemployment among non-farmers and "terrific repercussions in our entire economy."

Interior Secretary Mc Kay told a Senate committee that this country does not have "enough petroleum to depend on in the event of an all-out war." He said we must continue to import some oil supplies.

Chairman Langer of the Senate Judiciary committee said today he will investigate a charge by a federal judge that Attorney General Brownell refused to let the F.B.I. help the prosuection investigate a jury-tampering case in Denver. United States District Judge Ritter, in Denver, said recently that Brownell refused to let the F.B.I. help the local federal district attorney.. Charles Vigil. But Vigil won the case, smashing a Denver gambling ring, and then was fired. Clayton Fritchey, deputy chairman of the Democratic National Committee, says Vigil was replaced by Donald E. Kelly, a fraternity brother of Brownell.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch says today that Igor Guzenko, the former Russian code clerk, has decided he cannot "in safety" testify before the Jenner committee. The paper quotes Guzenko as saying he has nothing to give the Senators except advice. He feels the choice he faces is conversation with the American officials or the safety of [redacted] "my family and myself." Guzenko is said to believe that if he does testify he would endanger the disguise he has so carefully cultivated to hide his identity and his new home [redacted] somewhere in Canada. And Guzenko has told the [redacted] TORONTO Telegram that there are many Soviet spys who could be encouraged to desert their bosses in the United States and Canada if they could be assured of safety and lifelong protection with material [redacted] security.

Edward R. Murrow: November 30, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

There is still no settlement in the New York newspaper strike. The photo engravers asked for a package increase of fifteen dollars a week, covering wages, pensions and welfare benefits. The publishers offered a weekly package increase of three dollars and seventy-five cents. Six major newspapers are shut down because the mechanical, editorial and business employees refuse to cross the photo engravers' thin picket lines.

In New York subways and buses most people have nowhere to hide, unless they bought a magazine. It is a case of "unusual exposure" for the faces of commuting New Yorkers.

This is an appropriate time to reflect upon the continuing phenomenon of the daily newspaper. There was a time, about twenty years ago, when certain enthusiastic persons - (with more enthusiasm than judgment) - thought radio news would kill them off. A city without newspapers serves to remind everyone that press, radio and television are basically complementary. But the newspaper is more "tangible". Have regard for the disappointment of those who are denied pictures of the latest murder or investigation; for the disappointment of those who are not informed as to who was born and who died - what well-known business man dined with what attractive blonde at what well-known bistro. Consider the bitterness in the heart of the hostess whose party didn't get into print. Pity the faithful reader who cannot read his favorite column, and is therefore denied support and sustenance for his favorite prejudice. Spare a thought for those long, turgid editorials chock-full of phrases that have long since lost their cutting edge. And do not disregard the secondary uses of the newspaper. What else is so suitable for lining the garbage pail, or to light a fire in the grate or stove? And what of the unfortunates who wrap newspapers in a triple layer under their jackets, or spread the magazine zections between mattress and springs? There's warmth and protection there; (and no radio or television station can make this claim.) And did you ever try to pack china or glassware without newspapers?

But a newspaper is like your youth - never appreciated till it's gone. It is essential even for those who deal in radio and television news to be able to read, [even though at times they may have difficulty reading their own copy aloud.]

This reporter pretends to no considerable knowledge of newspapers, although his record as a customer and reader in several countries would add up to a tidy sum, both in money and time. I would suppose that the main thing wrong with newspapers in this country is that there aren't enough of them, and that the editors have in many cases assigned too much of their responsibility to the syndicated columns.

It is not as great a calamity for a community to be without newspapers as it was before the advent of radio and television. But a community must commune, and newspapers are a mainstay of communication. Without press or radio, a community would be stunned as by a stroke of paralysis. With the press silent, the paralysis is only partial. But in free countries newspapers are something more than mere communicators. They are an essential part of the community's freedom. They are an essential part of its spirit and health. So a community without newspapers, or with censored newspapers is less than free. This is an old story to us, and there was probably a time when the press was more powerful than it now is. We still talk, and rightly, about the freedom of the press as one of the foundations of our national life. But it is well to remember that freedom through the press is the thing that comes first.

This reporter is uninformed as to who is right and who is wrong in this controversy between publishers and employees here in New York City. But the absence of newspapers brings forcibly to mind considerations other than the absence of the comics, the columns, the cartoons and the long and informative despatches containing intelligence from various points at home and abroad. I would suppose that there are good newspapers, and bad ones. Some contain more news than others. Most of us have our favorites and are prepared to defend them. Some are altogether predictable in editorial policy and in presentation of the news. But most of us - disregarding the secondary uses of newspapers - probably feel that we couldn't be free without the newspapers, and that is the real reason we want the newspapers to be free. Even in a controlled society, where every effort is made to make people think the same thing at the same time, there must be newspapers. How much more important are they to us where diversity, dissent, disclosure and information may color the white space of newsprint.

We were talking of the newspaper strike here in New York. And it reminded me of something Will Rogers once said:" No matter how punk you might think your local newspaper is getting, just take it away from you and see how you feel. There's no substitute. Don't underestimate your paper no matter how small it is. For a breakfast without a newspaper is a horse without a saddle."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday, Dec. 1, 1953

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles charged today that Senator McCarthy's speech of a week ago "attacked the very heart of American foreign policy." #

Mr. Dulles did not mention McCarthy's name. But he IDENTIFIED [redacted] the speech by describing it as "criticizing the government for speaking too kindly to our allies..sending them "perfumed notes" instead of using threats and intimidations to compel them to do our bidding." In a few minutes we'll hear the major portion of Mr. Dulles' statement.

Democratic Senator Humphrey of Minnesota says he's glad the Secretary has finally spoken out. Republican Senator Hendrickson of New Jersey told reporters: "We Republicans ought to sit down and talk things over instead of calling each other names."

At the United Nations today Andrie Vishinsky ATTACKED ~~commented on~~ the American charge that the Communists murdered thousands of soldiers and civilians in Korea. He called this everything from "bosh" to "deliberate lies designed to wreck the chances of a Korean peace." Ambassador Lodge followed...asking the Russians to agree to permit an impartial investigation in Korea and China of our atrocity charges. Lodge said: "This puts Vishinsky's good faith to the test. We await his answer."

And the Australian Delegate, Sir Percy Spender said:"If Vishinky in truth represents the people of his country, then God help the cause of peace." He called the speech the "most irresponsible and evil speech ever made in the General Assembly."

In Washington today, Alfred Berzins, who was a minister of the Latvian government before the Russians took over, charged that Andrei Vishinsky is "the greatest murderer in this world and the greatest of liars." Berzins told a House committee that Vishinsky masterminded the Communist enslavement of his country.

The United States today again appealed to the Russians to account for the hundreds of thousands of missing prisoners of World War Two. And 800 Japanese prisoners of the Russians, returned to their homeland today. Many had been prisoners for eight years. Some told of a "terrifying" military establishment and an atomic arsenal the Russians have constructed in Siberia.

In Korea tonight the allies start questioning 30 South Koreans who in the past decided they did not want to return to their homes from Communist prisoner of war camps.

The Russians today broadcast a note they have sent Pakistan asking for clarification of reports that Pakistan may permit the United States to build air bases there. Moscow took note of "press reports" to this affect, but the Russians did not note other "press reports" in which top American and Pakistani officials denied the stories.

In Iran today the strange court-martial of former premier Mossadegh took a new turn when Mossadegh challenged the prosecutor to a wrestling match. He said if he won that would prove his point..that he is not as weak as he looks.

In Washington the Jenner committee made public a part of an F.B.I. report of 1945 based on testimony by Igor Guzenko, the former Russian code clerk. Guzenko then told investigators that it was possible that a scientist on the staff of Admiral Ernest King..then commander in chief of our fleet.. may have passed on to Russian spies information on the Navy's proximity fuse. The Senate committee says it has already questioned this scientist who was a consultant to Admiral King.

Treasury Secretary Humphrey says the Administration has not abandoned its hope for an early balanced budget. But, he said, this goal cannot be reached "as rapidly as we all might wish."

Defense Secretary Wilson says he thinks the army can cut its manpower by ten per cent next year..without reducing any of its world-wide obligations.

Democratic Senator Byrd, back from a European tour, says he's impressed by the progress we've made in establishing 150 bases overseas. He's especially pleased "with progress in Spain" and feels "we can depend on Generalissimo Franco."

Here in New York, the photo-engravers, whose strike has shut down every major newspaper in the city, have agreed to vote tomorrow on whether they should arbitrate four issues.

And this city now has a strike on the waterfront. Most of the ports are tied up as a result of work stoppages by longshoremen, who are angry over a new New York-New Jersey waterfront control law. The strikers are trying to force the new commission to temporarily resinstate men who have been barred from the piers because of criminal records.

Edward R. Murrow: December 1, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Secretary Dulles, by answering in his news conference this morning a charge made by Senator McCarthy in his telecast last week, opened what some observers believe will be an Administration counter-offensive against the Wisconsin senator. The fact that Mr. Dulles was closeted both yesterday, and this morning, with President Eisenhower, and let it be known that his reply to the McCarthy charge had the President's approval, is not the only basis for the belief. State Department sources showed confidence that a real counter-offensive had begun, and displayed a confident spirit. # If President Eisenhower, at his news conference tomorrow, speaks out unequivocally to the same effect, then the belief will become a fact, and not just a possibility. It had been noted in Washington that since the McCarthy telecast, no prominent Republican had spoken out in defense of the Eisenhower Administration. That perhaps is what stirred Secretary Dulles to ~~XXXXXX~~ action. Now Washington waits in some excitement to learn if President Eisenhower is stirred to the same depth.

Secretary Dulles, in taking issue with Senator McCarthy, refrained from using his name, but he answered the McCarthy charge in the words the Senator had used. Here is a portion of Mr. Dulles' statement as recorded at his conference:;;;;.....(TAPE: 3 Min. End cue:..."...if circumstances were reversed would reject."

Mr. Dulles, in his conference, also revealed that John Patton Davies is now undergoing a new security investigation, (which will be completed in about a month.) The retention of Mr. Davies in the United States Foreign Service had been cited by Senator McCarthy as an instance where the Administration had, as he put it, struck out. The new investigation can end in one of two ways. Mr. Davies may be dropped, and that would be a kind of McCarthy victory. Or he may be retained, in which case Mr. Dulles would be able to justify the retention on the ground that the evidence had been tested afresh. That is, the mention of the new investigation today did not necessarily represent an effort to soften the answer being made to Senator McCarthy.

One portion of Mr. Dulles' statement calls for comment - his claim that the Soviet acceptance of a four-power conference is a diplomatic victory for the West. The statement is true enough, for the Soviet note was a retreat, and a retreat is of itself a limited victory, for the other side. But it has to be pointed out that on last Friday the State Department issued a formal statement calling the Soviet note "disappointing," and saying nothing about a diplomatic and moral victory. That can only mean that the victory had not then been discovered. Mr. Dulles spoke today about not grabbing at a Soviet proposal without reading the fine print. One must charitably conclude that the State Department experts were buried in fine print on Friday. / Perhaps the alacrity with which London and Paris have welcomed a meeting with the Soviet Union, has made the Western victory suddenly visible.

No one can say for certain if a big four conference will materialize in the immediate future. And there are those who contend that the recent record shows such meetings achieve little, anyway. They might quote Charles Dana who once remarked:"A word that is not spoken never does any mischief." But others...perhaps more hopeful...might agree with Henry Ward Beecher when he said:"All words are pegs to hang ideas on."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Tuesday, December 1, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... Here is a portion of Mr. Dulles's statementas recorded at his conference.

DULLES: Since I ...? back with you last week, there has been a widely publicized criticism of this Administration's foreign policy. The burden of that criticism was that we spoke too kindly to our allies and sent them so-called "perfumed" notes instead of using threats and intimidation to compel them to do our bidding. I welcome constructive criticism, but the criticism I refer to attacks the very heart of United States foreign policy. It is a clearand firm purpose of this administration to treat other free nations as sovereign equals, whether they be large or small, strong or weak. My grandfather, John W. Foster, of Indiana, himself a Secretary of State, said of American foreign policy, that from the beginning it had been marked by quote "a spirit of justice, forbearance and magnanimity." I do not intend myself to mar that record. The tide of recent events has made our nation more powerful. But I believe that it should not make us less loyal to our great American traditions and that it should not blur our dedication to the truth, expressed in our Declaration of Independence, that we owe a respect to the opinions of others. Today it is to our interest to assist certain countries. But that does not give us the right totry to take them over, to dictate their trade policies or to make them our satellites. Indeed, we do not want weak or subservient allies. Our friends and allies are dependable just because they are unwillingto be anyone's satellites. They will sacrifice freely much in a common effort, butthey will no more be subservient to the United States than they will be subservient to Soviet Russia. Let us bethankful that they arethat way. And that there still survives so much rugged determination to be free. If that were not so, we would be isolated in a world, and in mortal peril. To maintain a cooperation of the free is a difficult and delicate process. Without mutual respect and friendship, it would be impossible. We do not propose to throw away those precious assets by blusteringand domineering methods. We shall be firm and persistent in trying to secure agreement on what we believe to be right. We shallexpect a fair sharing of efforts and burdens, but we shall try not to be arrogant or to demand of others what we ourselves - if circumstances were reversed - would reject.

(30)

Ed. trans. P. O.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles charged today that Senator McCarthy's speech of a week ago "attacked the very heart of American foreign policy." Mr. Dulles did not mention McCarthy's name. But he identified the speech by describing it as "criticizing" the government for speaking too kindly to our allies - sending them "perfumed notes" instead of using threats and intimidations to compel them to do our bidding. In a few minutes we'll hear the major portion of Mr. Dulles' statement.

Democratic Senator Humphrey of Minnesota says he's glad the Secretary has finally spoken out. Republican Senator Hendrickson of New Jersey told reporters: "We Republicans ought to sit down and talk things over instead of calling each other names."

At the United Nations today Andrei Vishinsky attacked the American charge that the Communists murdered thousands of soldiers and civilians in Korea. He called this everything from "bosh" to "deliberate lies designed to wreck the chances of a Korean peace." Ambassador Lodge followed - asking the Russians to agree to permit an impartial investigation in Korea and China of our atrocity charges. Lodge said: "This puts Vishinsky's good faith to the test. We await his answer."

And the Australian Delegate, Sir Percy Spender said: "If Vishinsky in truth represents the people of his country, then God help the cause of peace." He called the speech the "most irresponsible and evil speech ever made in the General Assembly."

In Washington today, Alfred Berzins, who was a minister of the Latvian government before the Russians took over, charged that Andrei Vishinsky is "the greatest murderer in this world and the greatest of liars." Berzins told a House committee that Vishinsky masterminded the Communist enslavement of his country.

The United States today again appealed to the Russians to account for the hundreds of thousands of missing prisoners of World War Two. And 800 Japanese prisoners of the Russians, returned to their homeland today. Many had been prisoners for eight years. Some told of a "terrifying" military establishment and an atomic arsenal the Russians have constructed in Siberia.

In Korea tonight the allies start questioning 30 South Koreans who in the past decided they did not want to return to their homes from Communist prisoner of war camps.

The Russians today broadcast a note they have sent Pakistan asking for clarification of reports that Pakistan may permit the United States to build air bases there. Moscow took note of "press reports" to this affect, but the Russians did not note other "press reports" in which top American and Pakistani officials denied the stories.

In Iran today the strange court-martial of former premier Mossadegh took a new turn when Mossadegh challenged the prosecutor to a wrestling match. He said if he won that would prove his point - that he is not as weak as he looks.

In Washington the Jenner committee made public a part of an FBI report of 1945 based on testimony by Igor Guzenko, the former Russian code clerk. Guzenko then told investigators that it was possible that a scientist on the staff of Admiral Ernest King then commander in chief of our fleet may have passed on to Russian spies information on the Navy's proximity fuse. The Senate committee says it has already questioned this scientist who was a consultant to Admiral King.

Treasury Secretary Humphrey says the Administration has not abandoned its hope for an early balanced budget. But, he said, this goal cannot be reached "as rapidly as we all might wish."

Defense Secretary Wilson says he thinks the army can cut its manpower by ten percent next year without reducing any of its world-wide obligations.

Democratic Senator Byrd, back from a European tour, says he's impressed by the progress we've made in establishing 150 bases overseas. He's especially pleased "with progress in Spain" and feels "we can depend on Generalissimo Franco."

Here in New York, the photo-engravers whose strike has shut down every major newspaper in the city have agreed to vote tomorrow on whether they should arbitrate four issues.

And this city now has a strike on the waterfront. Most of the ports are tied up as a result of work stoppages by longshoremen who are angry over a new New York-New Jersey waterfront control law. The strikers are trying to force the new commission to reinstate temporarily men who have been barred from the piers because of criminal records.

Secretary Dulles, by answering in his news conference this morning a charge made by Senator McCarthy in his telecast last week, opened what some observers believe will be an Administration counter-offensive against the Wisconsin senator. The fact that Mr. Dulles was closeted both yesterday, and this morning, with President Eisenhower, and let it be known that his reply to the McCarthy charge had the President's approval, is not the only basis for the belief. State Department sources showed confidence that a real counter-offensive had begun, and displayed a confident spirit. If President Eisenhower, at his news conference tomorrow, speaks out unequivocally to the same effect, then the belief will become a fact, and not just a possibility. It had been noted in Washington that since the McCarthy telecast, no prominent Republican had spoken out in defense of the Eisenhower Administration. That perhaps is what stirred Secretary Dulles to action. Now Washington waits in some excitement to learn if President Eisenhower is stirred to the same depth.

Secretary Dulles, in taking issue with Senator McCarthy, refrained from using his name, but he answered the McCarthy charge in the words the Senator had used. Here is a portion of Mr. Dulles' statement as recorded at his conference:

DULLES: Since last week, there has been a widely publicized criticism of this Administration's foreign policy. The burden of that criticism was that we spoke too kindly to our allies and sent them so-called "perfumed" notes instead of using threats and intimidation to compel them to do our bidding. I welcome constructive criticism, but the criticism I refer to attacks the very heart of United States foreign policy. It is a clear and firm purpose of this administration to treat other free nations as sovereign equals, whether they be large or small, strong or weak. My grandfather, John W. Foster, of Indiana, himself a Secretary of State, said of American foreign policy, that from the beginning it had been marked by quote "a spirit of justice, forbearance and magnanimity." I do not intend myself to mar that record. The tide of recent events has made our nation more powerful. But I believe that it should not make us less loyal to our great American traditions and that it should not blur our dedication to the truth, expressed in our Declaration of Independence, that we owe a respect to the opinions of others. Today it is to our interest to assist certain countries. But that does not give us the right to try to take them over, to dictate their trade policies or to make them our satellites. Indeed, we do not want weak or subservient allies. Our friends and allies are dependable just because they are unwilling to be anyone's satellites. They will sacrifice freely much in a common effort, but they will no more be subservient to the United States than they will be subservient to Soviet Russia. Let us be thankful that they are that way. And that there still survives so much rugged determination to be free. If that were not so, we would be isolated in a world, and in mortal peril. To maintain a cooperation of the free is a difficult and delicate process. Without mutual respect and friendship, it would be impossible. We do not propose to throw away those precious assets by blustering and domineering methods. We shall be firm and persistent in trying to secure agreement on what we believe to be right. We shall expect a fair sharing of efforts and burdens, but we shall try not to be arrogant or to demand of others what we ourselves - if circumstances were reversed - would reject."

MURROW: Mr. Dulles, in his conference, also revealed that John Patton Davies is now undergoing a new security investigation which will be completed in about a month. The retention of Mr. Davies in the United States Foreign Service had been cited by Senator McCarthy as an instance where the Administration had, as he put, it, struck out. The new investigation can end in one of two ways. Mr. Davies may be dropped, and that would be a kind of McCarthy victory. Or he may be retained, in which case Mr. Dulles would be able to justify the retention on the ground that the evidence had been tested afresh. That is, the mention of the new investigation today did not necessarily represent an effort to soften the answer being made to Senator McCarthy.

One portion of Mr. Dulles' statement calls for comment - his claim that the Soviet acceptance of a four-power conference is a diplomatic victory for the West. The statement is true enough, for the Soviet note was a retreat, and a retreat is of itself a limited victory, for the other side. But it has to be pointed out that on last Friday the State Department issued a formal statement calling the Soviet note "disappointing," and saying nothing about a diplomatic and moral victory. That can only mean that the victory had not then been discovered. Mr. Dulles spoke today about not grabbing at a Soviet proposal without reading the fine print. One must charitably conclude that the State Department experts were buried in fine print on Friday. Perhaps the alacrity with which London and Paris have welcomed a meeting with the Soviet Union, has made the western victory suddenly visible.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL: No one can say for certain if a big four conference will materialize in the immediate future. And there are those who contend that the recent record shows such meetings achieve little, anyway. They might quote Charles Dana who once remarked: "A word that is not spoken never does any mischief." But others, perhaps more hopeful, might agree with Henry Ward Beecher when he said: "All words are pegs to hang ideas on."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday, Dec. 2, 1953

This is the news:

The President said today he is in full accord, with Secretary of State Dulles's attack on Senator McCarthy's attitude toward our allies.// Mr. Eisenhower told reporters that unity among free nations is our only hope for survival./ And, without mentioning Senator McCarthy, he disputed his recent statement, that Communism in government will be an issue in next year's congressional elections./ The President repeated his "conviction" that fear of communists in government will not be an issue, [redacted]. In a few minutes, we'll hear the statement the President read to White House reporters.

The President also told reporters: the question of admitting Communist China to the United Nations is not open to negotiation with anybody, at the present time.../ Any cuts in our troop strength overseas, will not affect those units closest to "hostile positions"./.. he hopes next week's Bermuda meeting will help prevent misunderstandings./// he doubts whether taxes can or should be raised, above the present levels. Mr. Eisenhower also said: he's encouraged by Vice President Nixon's far eastern tour.

Mr. Nixon today spent two hours visiting with India's Prime Minister Nehru in New Delhi. He described Nehru as "a very [redacted] eloquent and [redacted] articulate advocate of his point of view."

~~India today signed a five year trade agreement with Russia, the first such agreement with Moscow the Indian have negotiated since they became an independent state.~~

Both India and Russia today were warned by Pakistan not to meddle in Pakistan's foreign affairs. [redacted] Premier Mohammed Ali denied the Russian charge that Pakistan has offered military bases to the United States.

The French have invited the Communists in Indo-China to make an official presentation of their views on a possible armistice in the seven-year-old war in Indochina.

And in Korea tonight, the allies will again question 30 South Korean prisoners of the Communists. Yesterday the first 30 prisoners questioned all chose to remain with the enemy instead of returning home.

At the United Nations today, Ambassador Lodge charged that North Korean General Nam Il set a record for "international double-talk and double-DEALING" by protesting prison riots on Koje island at the same time he was masterminding the riots. Andrie Vishinsky asked for evidence. And Vishinsky called the American suggestion that an impartial commission investigate our charges of communist-committed atrocities.. Vishinsky called this "demagogic in character, designed for public consumption."

General Ridgeway, the former 8th army commander in Korea who is now the army chief of staff, told a Senate committee today that we can prove the Communists in Korea "violated every recognized rule of humanity and decency." ~~Ridgeway said the enemy failed to return eight thousand six hundred American prisoners who knew to have been victims of their atrocities.~~ The General said: we can prove beyond question that the Communists deliberately shot wounded prisoners.. brutally mutilated both the wounded and the dead..used cruel tortures for minor infractions of prison rules.. and served some of our men food they knew would bring on sickness or death. General Ridgeway said this was "the most brutal and ruthless conduct in the history of modern warfare..without parallel in modern times."

Admiral Radford, the chairman of the joint chiefs of staffs, told a West Point audience today that the truce in Korea is not peace.. and the threat of war has not diminished.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Hannah says we must continue the draft for many years to come. AND [redacted] universal military training must be put off.

The Justice Department today denied a charge by Federal Judge Ritter that the F.B.I. was kept out of a jury-tampering case in Denver. The Justice department says there is no substance to the charge...19 F.B.I. agents worked on the case...and they supplied information which was the basis ~~of~~ For the conviction of the defendents. The United States attorney in the case, Charles S. Vigil, a Democrat, says he was twice refused F.B.I. help. Vigil was later replaced by a Republican.

The Jenner Committee today decided to accept Canada's conditions on questioning Igor Guzenko, the former Soviet embassy code clerk. This means Canada will decide what testimony can be made public. AND the interview must be held under Canadian SUPERVISION. [redacted].

~~The Committee today asked William Ludwig Ullman, a former Treasury department employe, if he had ever engaged in espionage against~~

~~the United States. He refused to answer because it "might tend to incriminate" him.~~

Thirty-three thousand C.I.O. steelworkers quit work today at more than half the plants of the American and Continental Can companies. The walkouts were scattered through 37 cities. The men want a 21-cent an hour "package" raise. The companies offered ten and a half cents. SPOKESMEN for the Florida citrus industry say they'll suffer serious losses if their can supplies are not continued.

Here in New York, striking A.F. of L. photo-engravers refused to arbitrate their dispute with the city's major newspapers. BUT They offered to cut their demands in half. Tonight union and newspaper managers will meet with federal mediators.

Air Secretary Talbott said today the Civil Air Patrol, founded 12 years ago, "deserves the gratitude of the entire country."

~~In Iran, a spokesman says his country has decided to resume diplomatic relations with Great Britain.~~

At the White House today the President told reporters that he wanted to read a statement for two reasons: because it was all he would say on the subject.. and so that he could be quoted directly. We recorded the President's statement for you:

RETURN CUE: "...such a program will be enacted."

Edward R. Murrow: December 2, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

It seems to this reporter that the President, in his comments today, was saying two things. He was reaffirming the continuity of American foreign policy. What he had to say about our relations with our allies and the rest of the free world might have come, as indeed it has, from the lips of Truman or Acheson.

The President's references to Senator McCarthy, translated into military language, meant that the Administration, by 1954, would destroy the Senator's ammunition and his sources of supply. Senator McCarthy's reputation has been built upon the search for communists in government. If there aren't any communists left in government, and if the people believe that to be a fact, then the Senator will lack both ammunition and targets. He has no political, social or economic philosophy sufficiently different or unique from those advocated by Republicans or Democrats to permit him to win and hold a large mass following.

In a sense, of course, this argument about what will be the issues in the 1954 elections is academic; for those issues will be determined, not by words from President Eisenhower or Senator McCarthy but by events.

Those who are ~~already~~ predicting what the issues will be in next year's elections, might do well to recall something H.W. Beecher once said: "The gravest events often dawn with no more noise than the morning star makes in rising." Actually, it's very much as Carl Sandburg pointed out in these words:"The woman named "Tomorrow" sits with a hairpin in her teeth and takes her time and does her hair the way she wants it."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Wednesday, December 2, 1953
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: ..... At the White House today the President told reporters that he wanted to read a statement for two reasons, - because it was all he would say on the subject and so that he could be quoted directly. We recorded the President's statement for you.

EISENHOWER: I am in full accord with the statement made yesterday by Secretary Dulles in his press conference. I would like to add this comment to what he said. The easiest thing to do with great power is to abuse it, (?) to use it with effect. This most powerful of the free nations must not permit itself to grow weary of the processes of negotiation and adjustment that are fundamental to freedom. If it should turn impatiently to coercion of other free nations, our (word unintelligible), of course, so far as our friends are concerned would be a mark of the imperialist rather than of the leader. What America is doing abroad in the way of military and economic assistance is as much a part of our own security program as our military efforts at home. We hope to be able to maintain these overseas elements of our security program as long as our enlightened self-interest requires even though we may, and probably we always will, have various differences of opinion with the nations receiving our aid.

We do this because unity among x free nations is our only hope (?) for survival in the face of the worldwide Soviet conspiracy backed by the weight of Soviet military power. This thought (?) dominates all other considerations of our times, - the issue, freedom versus Communism, is a life and death matter. To my mind it is the struggle of the ages. This fact arouses justifiable concern about Communism in our own Government. I repeat my previously expressed conviction that fear of Communists actively undermining our Government will not be an issue in the 1954 elections. Long before then this Administration willhave made such progress in rooting them out under the security program developed by Attorney General Brownell that this can no longer be considered a serious menace. As you already know, about fifteen hundred persons who were security risks have already been removed. Fair, thorough and decent investigations followed by unhesitating corrective action are the most effective and the only efficient way to get this necessary job done. By next fall I hope that the public, no longer fearful that Communists are destructively at work within the Government, will wish to commend the efficiency of this Administration in eliminating this menace to the nation's security. The people must have the facts on this important subject in order to reach sound conclusions. As provided for in the liberalized regulations of this Administration established facts, so far as the national security permits, will continue to be made available. The best way to keep subversives out of the Government is not to employ them in the first place. The Administration will continue to hunt for any that are present and, of course, any subversives located by a congressional committee will be removed promptly just as will any others. In all that we do to combat subversion, it is imperative that we protect the basic rights of loyal American citizens. I am determined to protect those rights to the limit of the powers of the office with which I have been intrusted by the American people. In my judgment, the efficiency and vision with which the Government is administered by this Republican Administration, and whether or not the Congress enacts a progressive, dynamic program enhancing the welfare of all the people of our country will determine the future political complexion of the Congress and the future of the Administration. I am convinced that those who fight for the program, that I shall soon submit to the Congress, will deserve and will receive the respect and support of the American people. In any event, unless the Republican Party can develop and enact such a program for the American people it does not deserve to remain in power, but I know that these sentiments are shared by the vast majority of the Republicans in this country, particularly by my close associates both in the Senate and the House of Representatives. Because of this unity of feeling, such a program will be enacted.

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President said today he is in full accord with Secretary of State Dulles's attack on Senator McCarthy's attitude toward our allies. Mr. Eisenhower told reporters that unity among free nations is our only hope for survival. And, without mentioning Senator McCarthy, he disputed his recent statement that Communism in government will be an issue in next year's congressional elections. The President repeated his "conviction" that fear of communists in government will not be an issue. In a few minutes we'll hear the statement the President read to White House reporters.

The President also told reporters: the question of admitting Communist China to the United Nations is not open to negotiation with anybody, at the present time. Any cuts in our troop strength overseas will not affect those units closest to "hositle positions". He hopes next week's Bermuda meeting will help prevent misunderstandings; he doubts whether taxes can or should be raised above the present levels. Mr. Eisenhower also said: he's encouraged by Vice President Nixon's far eastern tour.

Mr. Nixon today spent two hours visiting with India's Prime Minister Nehru in New Delhi. He described Nehru as "a very eloquent and articulate advocate of his point of view."

Both India and Russia today were warned by Pakistan not to meddle in Pakistan's foreign affairs. Premier Mohammed Ali denied the Russian charge that Pakistan has offered military bases to the United States.

The French have invited the Communists in Indo-China to make an official presentation of their views on a possible armistice in the seven-year-old war in Indo-China.

And in Korea tonight, the allies will again question 30 South Korean prisoners of the Communists. Yesterday the first 30 prisoners questioned all chose to remain with the enemy instead of returning home.

At the United Nations today, Ambassador Lodge charged that North Korean General Nam Il set a record for "international double-talk and double-dealing by protesting prison riots on Koje island at the same time he was masterminding the riots. Andrei Vishinsky asked for evidence. And Vishinsky called the American suggestion that an impartial commission investigate our charges of communist-committed atrocities - Vishinsky called this "demagogic in character, designed for public consumption."

General Ridgeway, the former 8th army commander in Korea who is now the army chief of staff, told a Senate committee today that we can prove the Communists in Korea "violated every recognized rule of humanity and decency." The General said: we can prove beyond question that the Communists deliberately shot wounded prisoners, brutally mutilated both the wounded and the dead, used cruel tortures for minor infractions of prison rules and served some of our men food they knew would bring on sickness or death. General Ridgeway said this was "the most brutal and ruthless conduct in the history of modern warfare - without parallel in modern times."

Admiral Radford, the chairman of the joint chiefs of staffs, told a West Point audience today that the truce in Korea is not peace - and the threat of war has not diminished.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Hannah says we must continue the draft for many years to come. And universal military training must be put off.

The Justice Department today denied a charge by Federal Judge Ritter that the FBI was kept out of a jury-tampering case in Denver. The Justice Department says there is no substance to the charge - 19 FBI agents worked on the case and they supplied information which was the basis for the conviction of the defendents. The United States attorney in the case, Charles S. Vigil, a Democrat, says he was twice refused FBI help. Vigil was later replaced by a Republican.

The Jenner Committee today decided to accept Canada's conditions on questionin

Igor Guzenko, the former Soviet embassy code clerk. This means Canada will decide what testimony can be made public and the interview must be held under Canadian supervision.

Thirty-three thousand CIO steelworkers quit work today at more than half the plants of the American and Continental Can companies. The walkouts were scattered through 37 cities. The men want a 21-cent an hour "package" raise. The companies offered ten and a half cents. Spokesmen for the Florida citrus industry say they'll suffer serious losses if their can supplies are not continued.

Here in New York, striking AFL photo-engravers refused to arbitrate their dispute with the city's major newspapers. But they offered to cut their demands in half. Tonight union and newspaper managers will meet with federal mediators.

Air Secretary Talbott said today the Civil Air Patrol, founded 12 years ago, "deserves the gratitude of the entire country."

At the White House today the President told reporters that he wanted to read a statement for two reasons: because it was all he would say on the subject; and so that he could be quoted directly. We recorded the President's statement for you:

EISENHOWER: I am in full accord with the statement made yesterday by Secretary Dulles in his press conference. I would like to add this comment to what he said. The easiest thing to do with great power is to use it with effect. This most powerful of the free nations must not not permit itself to grow weary of the processes of negotiation and adjustment that are fundamental to freedom. What America is doing abroad in the way of military and economic assistance is as much a part of our own security program as our military efforts at home. We hope to be able to maintain these overseas elements of our security program as long as our enlightened self-interest requires even though we may, and probably we always will, have various differences of opinion with the nations receiving our aid.

We do this because unity among free nations is our only hope for survival in the face of the worldwide Soviet conspiracy backed by the weight of Soviet military power. This thought dominates all other considerations of our times - the issue, freedom versus Communism is a life and death matter. To my mind it is the struggle of the ages. This fact arouses justifiable concern about Communism in our own Government. I repeat my previously expressed conviction that fear of Communists actively undermining our Government will not be an issue in the 1954 elections. Long before then this Administration will have made such progress in rooting them out under the security program developed by Attorney General Brownell that this can no longer be considered a serious menace. As you already know, about fifteen hundred persons who were security risks have already been removed. Fair, thorough and decent investigations followed by unhesitating corrective action are the most effective and the only efficient way to get this necessary job done. By next fall I hope that the public, no longer fearful that Communists are destructively at work within the Government, will wish to commend the efficiency of this Administration in eliminating this menace to the nation's security. The people must have the facts on this important subject in order to reach sound conclusions. As provided for in the liberalized regulations of this Administration established facts, so far as the national security permits, will continue to be made available. The best way to keep subversives out of the Government is not to employ them in the first place. The Administration will continue to hunt for any that are present and, of course, any subversives located by a congressional committee will be removed promptly just as will any others. In all that we do to combat subversion, it is imperative that we protect the basic rights of loyal American citizens. I am determined to protect those rights to the limit of the powers of the office with which I have been entrusted by the American people. In my judgment, the efficiency and vision with which the Government is administered by this Republican administration, and whether or not the Congress enacts a progressive, dynamic program enhancing the welfare of all the people of our country will determine the future political complexion of the Congress and the future of the Administration. I am convinced that those who fight for the program, that I shall soon submit to the Congress, will deserve and will receive the respect and support of the American people. In any event, unless the Republican Part can develop and enact such a program for the American people it does not deserve to remain in power, but I know that these sentiments are shared by the vast majority of the Republicans in this country, particularly by my close associates both in the Senate and the House of Representatives. Because of this unity of feeling, such a program will be enacted.

MURROW: It seems to this reporter that the President, in his comments today, was saying two things. He was reaffirming the continuity of American foreign policy. What he had to say about our relations with our allies and the rest of the free world might have come, as indeed it has, from the lips of Truman or Acheson.

The President's references to Senator McCarthy, translated into military language, meant that the Administration, by 1954, would destory the Senator's ammunition and his sources of supply. Senator McCarthy's reputation has been built upon the search for communists in government. If there aren't any communists left in government, and if the people believe that to be a fact, then the Senator will lack both ammunition and targets. He has no political, social or economic philosophy sufficiently different or unique from those advocated by Republicans or Democrats to permit him to win and hold a large mass following.

In a sense, of course, this argument about what will be the issues in the 1954 elections is academic; for those issues will be determined, not by words from President Eisenhower or Senator McCarthy but by events.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Those who are predicting what the issues will be in next year's elections, might do well to recall something H.W. Beecher once said: "The gravest events often dawn with no more noise than the morning star makes in rising." Actually, it's very much as Carl Sandburg pointed out in these words: "The woman named "tomorrow" sits with ahairpin in her teeth and takes her time and does her hair the way she wants it.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Thursday, December 3, 1953

This is the news:

Senator McCarthy said today it is "ridiculous and untrue" to charge that he is challenging the President's leadership of the Republican party. In a statement which we'll hear in a few minutes, he did ask those who agree with him to write the President in protest against any of our allies trading with Communist China.

In Washington today, a former G.I... Roy P. Manring of Chicago.. told a Senate committee how North Koreans shot 41 Americans after tying their hands behind their backs with bootlaces. [redacted]

The United Nations General Assembly today voted to condemn atrocities by any government. The resolution, approved by a 42 to 5 vote, expressed grave concern at reports of Communist atrocities in Korea. After the Russian bloc voted against the resolution, Andrei Vishinsky attacked it as "a falsification, a [redacted] fake and utterly spurious."

In Korea today American Ambassador Dean told reporters that we cannot accept the enemy's demand to have Russia represented as a neutral nation at the Korean peace conference. Dean said the Soviet Union "is not a neutral..will never be a neutral and we could never accept her as a neutral." ~~He said the Chinese and North Korean communists must be complete about face on their demand to have Russia represented as a neutral.~~

Tonight the allied will again question South Koreans PRISONERS who want to stay with the Communists. In two days all 60 prisoners questioned have refused to return home..

Vice President Nixon today told the Indian parliament that American foreign policy will be made by the President "and you can be sure he will be supported by an overwhelming majority of the people." It was an obvious effort to counteract Indian fears over recent statements by Senator Mc Carthy ..but no names were mentioned. Mr. Nixon also said the President is trying to insure peace by maintaining enough military strength to keep the Communists from thinking they can win a new war. When he finished, the Indian vice president told MR. NIXON: "We have faith in freedom and faith in friendship with all nations.

And Prime Minister Nehru told American reporters: the United States is supporting colonialism in Indo-China and parts of Africa.. he again urged recognition of Communist China.. and said THERE are basic differences of approach but no basic chasm between the people of his country and the United States. Nehru feels the chances of war are remote because both sides are aware of the terrible consequences.

Here in New York, Democratic Representative Richards of South Carolina told a United Nations committee that the American people are "appalled" at the prospect of "rewarding" eleven Americans who were discharged from the U.N. secretariat for refusing the answer questions on their loyalty. The U.N. plans to pay these people 189-thousand dollars in compensation and "indemnities."

Andrie Vishinsky today was invited by a House committee to testify on "the illegal seizure" of Latvia, Esthonia and Lithuania. The special House committee, in a letter to Vishinsky, called him "the outstanding unpunished criminal of our time" and accused him of personally directing the seizure of the three countries.

In San Fransisco, a former Communist told the House un-American activities Committee that in 1948 he met Robert L. Condon--now a Democratic congressman from California.. at a closed meeting of Communist party members. The witness Charls D. Blodgett of Chicago said the meeting was called to influence a Democratic political campaign. Condon is the representative who was denied admittance to an atomic test at Las Vegas. At the time he denied being a Communist.

A special committee of Admirals and Generals reported today that a career in the military service is losing its attractiveness because of too little pay and too much criticism. The committee predicted "most serious consequences" unless this can be corrected.

Admiral Radford, the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, says the chiefs favor a gradual--not radical--change in the national defense set-up, based on a long-term program.

Here in New York, former President Truman's aid tonight that the United States must help solve the Israeli-Arab crisis which is "undermining the whole life of the Middle East."

And a federal mediator reported "no progress" in today's effort to settle the six day old strike against New York's major newspapers. There will be further negotiations tomorrow.

Now.. for Senator McCarthy's statement replying to recent remarks by the President and Secretary of State Dulles. We recorded it in Washington.

RETURN CUE: "SO THAT HE MAY BE PROPERLY GUIDED IN THE MATTER."

Full Statement

That was Senator Joseph Macarthy of Wisconsin, stating the basis of his disagreement with President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles.. and asking that letters and telegrams be sent to the President...

There has been no comment on the Senator's statement from either the White House or the Department of State.

Senator Mc Carthy has urged those who feel as he does, that our allies should not become involved in trade with Red China, to write to the President and tell him so. It is undoubtedly, as Juvenal said centuries ago, that the "incurable itch of writing possess many." It's also true, as Christopher Morley once remarked: "The problem is to teach ourselves to think - the writing will take care of itself."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Thursday, December 3, 1953
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: ..... Now, for Senator McCarthy's statement, replying to recent remarks by the President and Secretary of State Dulles. We recorded it in Washington.

McCARTHY: On November 24, I discussed the Communist agents and how they were protected, coddled, and promoted under the Democrats' Truman regime. I then pointed out a few mistakes I ... made by my own Republican Party. At that time I said, and I quote, "before looking at some of the cases in which our batting average is zero let me make it clear that I think that this Republican Administration is doing a job so infinitely better than the Truman-Acheson regime that there is absolutely no comparison, and I spent perhaps as much time as any other man last fall urging the American people to elect President Eisenhower. I would do the same again as I do have a great deal of admiration for the President and I think he has an excellent record for the time he has been in office. However, errors by Democrats or Republicans are equally bad and one of the reasons that the Democrats were removed from office was their refusal to recognize their own errors and I feel that if we Republicans do likewise it can well be fatal not only to our Party but also to our country.

However, let me make these points perfectly clear. No. 1 - it has been suggested by our political enemies that I am challenging President Eisenhower's Party leadership. Nothing could be more ridiculous or untrue than that suggestion. No. 2 - I will give my utmost support to all Republican candidates for the House and Senate next year because I feel it is important beyond words to this nation that we have a Republican Senate and House to work with a Republican President. No. 3 - the Administration has already rid itself of one thousand four hundred and fifty-six security risks, risks inherited from the Truman Administration, and practically all of the fourteen hundred and fifty-six were removed because of Communist activities, connections, or because of perversion. I think this is an outstanding record and a real contrast to the Communist-ridden Truman-Acheson regime. No. 4 - I frankly believe that the question of Communism will be a very important issue in 1954 because the facts have proved that the Democrats represent the Party of the Left, the Party which is soft on Communism. This will become more and more important as the full facts about the Truman cover-up of Communists becomes known, as it will be made known over the months ahead. This nation must stand as a bulwark against Communism in the world and on the subject of Communism the difference in attitude between the Republicans and Democrats will be a most important political issue for many years to come, so this should make it clear once and for all that I will continue to give my support to the Republican Party, to the Eisenhower Administration, now and in the future. This does not mean that I will refrain from criticising my own Party when I think it is making mistakes, therefore, last Tuesday night I discussed our failure to clean up one of the foulest situations which we inherited from the Democrat (sic) Administration. I pointed out that on September 10 of this year the Army announced that some nine hundred American young men, known to the Army to have been living in prisons of the Communists, were still unaccounted for. I also pointed out that on September 12 of this year the Chinese Communists thumbed their nose at us and announced that they would not treat as prisoners-of-war American fliers who were shot down during the Korean war over Manchuria. I pointed out that my Party was not responsible for this situation, that we inherited it from the corrupt Communist-ridden Truman-Acheson regime but that it is now our duty properly to protect those young men who are as of today in Communist prisons.

The course of action which I recommended was that we refuse to give any American dollars to any nation, shipping any goods to Communist China so long as a single American remained in a Communist blood-stained dungeon. On this matter, Secretary Dulles and I are in complete disagreement. In a Republic such as ours there must be room for honest difference of opinion. I respect the honesty and sincerity of purpose of Secretary Dulles. However, I have such a deep conviction, such very deep convictions, on this subject that I shall continue to discuss the matter at every opportunity and I cannot too strongly urge Secretary Dulles to reappraise our whole policy in this regard. It is my hope that such a reappraisal may result in a change of policy in this respect and I think President Eisenhower is an honorable man. I think he will follow the will of the American people if that will is made known to him and I would like to take this occasion to urge each and every American who feels as I do about this blood trade (?) with our mortal enemy that they write or wire the President of the United States and let him know how they feel so he may be properly guided in the matter.

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

Friday, December 4

This is the news:

The President flew to Bermuda today to join Prime Minister Churchill and French Premier Laniel. The three men then met for an hour and a half and reported that they had "made a general review of the world situation." [redacted] ministers [redacted] to have agreed to [redacted] peace [redacted]. In a few minutes I'd like to discuss some of the background of this Bermuda conference.

In Washington today Senator McCarthy accused the White House of making what he called "a [redacted] grievous mistake" in its tabulations of telegrams the Senator urged people to send to the President. Yesterday McCarthy appealed for public support in stamping out what he called "blood trade" with Communist China. This afternoon the White House announced that more than 15-hundred telegrams had been received by 4 p.m. Washington time. McCarthy says his own sources [redacted] indicate that more than 2-thousand messages had been received at the White House by last midnight. And he said they were continuing to arrive at Western Union at the rate of 250 to 350 an hour. The Senator said one difference in his figures and those released by the White House was caused by the fact that Western Union could not get all the telegrams it received to the White House — with the available lines. The White House says that tomorrow it will reveal how many of the telegrams it has received were for or against the Senator's point of view.

Chairman Potter of the Senate committee investigating atrocities in Korea says a United Nations resolution on the same subject is "inadequate". He will ask Congress to press for an investigation by an impartial U.N. committee. Today the Senator's committee was told that General McArthur ordered that evidence on atrocities be collected back in 1950. And Colonel James Hanley, in charge of this project, said: "We have evidence.. affidavits..eyewitness accounts and photographs of the bodies."

In Korea today, Ambassador Dean said again that we would free 22-thousand Chinese and North Korean war prisoners on January 22..unless a Korean peace conference is then underway.

~~Thirty more South Korean war prisoners have refused to return to their homeland.~~

And an Indian spokesman says the 22 Americans who prefer to stay with the enemy have turned down copies of the New Testament and asked, instead, for Communist newspapers.

The Communists today started a world-wide propaganda campaign for a cease-fire in Indochina. The World Federation of Trade Unions, supervised by the Cominform, plans meetings and demonstrations to support this position..later this month.

The deputy secretary of defense, Roger M. Kyes, said today that our new heavy bomber, the B-52 is faster than our medium bomber, the B-47..which has flown 656 miles an hour. Kyes also said we are saving millions of dollars in defense spending by trimming "fat wherever it hampers the strength of our military muscle."

A federal grand jury in Washington today indicted Val R. Lorwin, a former state department official, on charges of falsely denying that he was a Communist during a loyalty hearing in 1950. Lorwin says the charge is wholly false.. that he was cleared by the State Department's loyalty board after 90 witnesses supported the evidence he produced.

Democratic Congressman Condon of California today accused the House un-American activities committee of "drumming up fantastic witnesses."

[One witness testified yesterday that the congressman attended a Communist meeting in 1948.]

In Miami today the former President of Cuba, Carlos Prio Socarras, was arrested and charged with conspiracy to violate the neutrality act...by shipping arms out of the country. Prio and the interior minister in his former regime are said to have shipped a "considerable" quantitity of arms and ammunition to Cuba. James Guilmartin, the United States district attorney in Miami, says "the implication is quite clear that these munitions were to be used for a revolution in Cuba." The Prio regime was overthrown by Batista in March of 1952. Prio says he knows nothing about the charges.

Here in New York we're told there has been "absolutely no change" in negotiations to settle the week old newspaper strike.

Brigadier General Sarnoff today announced the election of a new president of the National Broadcasting Company. He is Sylvester L. Weaver, Junior. And General Sarnoff's son, Robert, has been named executive vice president of N.B.C.

Edward R. Murrow: December 4, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

There is not much point in looking back to what the Bermuda Conference was originally intended to be. The Soviet acceptance of a four-power conference has changed all that. Bermuda has become the prologue to the four-power conference, that, and little else. The subjects that were to have been talked about, like the European Army, and British and American commitments to French security, still will be talked about, but in a different setting, and with much greater urgency. Before the Kremlin reversed itself on a four-power conference, Bermuda was to be an occasion for the Big Three to iron out differences that stood in the way of the European Defense Community. # And in addition, they were going to see if they could agree on a common approach to the Soviet Union for the reduction of tension. For a time it looked as though Soviet hostility had ruled out negotiation. And if that were so, no other course remained for France but to close ranks, and accept the European Defense Community, and its inclusion of an armed Germany. At that time there seemed to be a good chance of treaty ratification this winter.

Now ratification will have to wait. The immediate hope for it, depends on the Big Four conference with the Russians failing, and failing in a big way. Only then would the French opponents of a re-armed Germany, put the danger of a threatening Soviet Union ahead of their fear of Germany.

It hardly needs saying that the Western Powers cannot go into a conference with the Soviet Union intending to make it fail. They may ~~be sure~~ think it will fail, and Washington may be even surer of it than London or Paris. But they must test, in good faith, the good faith of the Kremlin. The Kremlin must do the failing. It has to fail openly, in full view, and without being able to pass the blame to the Big Three. / Otherwise the failure will not solidify Western unity, and it will not convince the French Assembly, and the House of Commons, that there is no acceptable way to reduce tensions at present. And for this to happen, the Big Three have to know clearly what they want the Kremlin to do, and what they will accept from the Kremlin, in the way of counter-proposals. / If the Bermuda Conference is a big success it will have to produce this understanding. It remains to be seen how well it will be able to do so.

The problem is best stated in terms of security. The purpose of the European Defense Community and the European Army, including Germans, is to make the West so strong, that the Soviet Union will not venture to expand in that direction. The men in the Kremlin see this greater security of the West, as representing greater insecurity for them. The re-arming of Germany - no matter how it is done - means a sharp setback for them in the rivalry for power. They have denounced the European Defense Community, like NATO before it, as instruments of aggression, and evidence of the intent of aggression.

The West, to meet this objection, has been weighing an offer to the Soviet Union of a mutual security pact. The idea was first publicized by Sir Winston Churchill, who was thinking in terms of another Locarno Treaty, something that would be a guarantee against Germany rising again, to threaten its neighbors. Later the idea was re-stated, in different terms by Chancellor Adenauer. Being smack against the Iron Curtain, the German leader could understand why the Kremlin should be afraid of the rise of a re-armed Germany, allied with the West. But since he wanted Germany re-armed and associated with the West only for its own safety, he urged the West to offer the Kremlin a non-aggression pact. This would, he thought, underscore the defensive nature of all alliances of true democracies.

Perhaps the shrewdest stroke in recent diplomacy, is hidden in a passage of the last Soviet note, that has escaped wide attention. In it Mr. Molotov appropriated the Western idea of a non-aggression pact and made it a Soviet proposal. What Mr. Molotov says, in effect, is that Soviet power in Europe is just as defensive, as the West says Western power is, and if the West doesn't believe it, he will sign a pact of non-aggression and mutual security.

That is my language, not Mr. Molotov's. His language is long-worded and somewhat obscure, as is customary in Soviet notes. But that is the gist of it. And the West must be prepared to face and answer such a Kremlin offer.

So the crucial point is whether the Soviet Union can make the French believe Red power to be less of a danger than the re-arming of Germany. If the Kremlin offers a broad mutual security system, including everybody - the Soviet Union, the satellites and the West - how much will the French be impressed? And if this is linked with promises of greatly increased East-West trade in non-strategic goods, how much will the British be impressed?

What Washington would think of it is not hard to foretell. For though Washington wants tensions reduced as much as anybody else does, it asks for proof of a change in Soviet intentions before the Western guard is relaxed. And it has all along rejected promises not to do things. It does not trust Soviet promises at all.

At Bermuda it is not going to be easy to put together a concerted Western policy. President Eisenhower may find himself on one side with Sir Winston Churchill, and Premier Laniel on the other, in more than one debate. That will not be because they want something different, but because they do not want to pay the same price or run the same risks for it.

Twenty years ago, Will Rogers wrote of International Conferences:"Other nations have got it on us. They always bring a pack of experts and technical men along to advise, while with us, if we can find a man to send to one, we are lucky, and we always feel uneasy until he gets home. But I've always noticed, any time a man can't come and settle without bringing his lawyer - look out." Times have changed.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President flew to Bermuda today to join Prime Minister Churchill and French Premier Laniel. The three men then met for an hour and a half and reported that they had "made a general review of the world situation." In a few minutes I'd like to discuss some of the background of this Bermuda conference.

In Washington today Senator McCarthy accused the White House of making what he called "a grievous mistake" in its tabulation of telegrams the Senator urged people to send to the President. Yesterday McCarthy appealed for public support in stamping out what he called "blood trade" with Communist China. This afternoon the White House announced that more than 15-hundred telegrams had been received by 4 p.m. Washington time. McCarthy says his own sources indicate that more than 2-thousand messages had been received at the White House by last midnight. And he said they were continuing to arrive at Western Union at the rate of 250 to 350 an hour. The Senator said one difference in his figures and those released by the White House was caused by the fact that Western Union could not get all the telegrams it received to the White House with the available lines. The White House says that tomorrow it will reveal how many of the telegrams it has received were for or against the Senator's point of view.

Chairman Potter of the Senate committee investigating atrocities in Korea says a United Nations resolution on the same subject is "inadequate." He will ask Congress to press for an investigation by an impartial U.N. committee. Today the Senator's committee was told that General MacArthur ordered that evidence on atrocities be collected back in 1950. And Colonel James Hanley, in charge of this project, said: "We have evidence - affidavits - eyewitness accounts and photographs of the bodies."

In Korea today, Ambassador Dean said again that we would free 22-thousand Chinese and North Korean war prisoners on January 22 unless a Korean peace conference is then underway.

And an Indian spokesman says the 22 Americans who prefer to stay with the enemy have turned down copies of the New Testament and asked, instead, for Communist newspapers.

The Communists today started a world-wide propaganda campaign for a cease-fire in Indochina. The World Federation of Trade Unions, supervised by the Cominform, plans meetings and demonstrations to support this position - later this month.

The deputy secretary of defense, Roger M. Kyes, said today that our new heavy bomber, the B-52 is faster than our medium bomber, the B-47 which has flown 656 miles an hour. Kyes also said we are saving millions of dollars in defense spending by trimming off "fat wherever it hampers the strength of our military muscle."

A federal grand jury in Washington today indicted Val R. Lorwin, a former State Department official, on charges of falsely denying that he was a Communist during a loyalty hearing in 1950. Lorwin says the charge is wholly false - that he was cleared by the State Department's loyalty board after 90 witnesses supported the evidence he produced.

Democratic Congressman Condon of California today accused the House un-American activities committee of "drumming up fantastic witnesses." One witness testified yesterday that the congressman attended a Communist meeting in 1948.

In Miami today the former President of Duba, Carlos Prio Socarras, was arrested and charged with conspiracy to violate the neutrality act by shipping arms out of the country. Prio and the interior minister in his former regime are said to have shipped a "considerable" quantity of arms and ammunition to Cuba. James Guilmartin, the United States district attorney in Miami, says "the implication is quite clear that these munitions were to be used for a revolution in Cuba." The Prio regime was overthrown by Batista in March of 1952. Prio says he knows nothing about the chargex.

Here in New York we're told there has been "absolutely no change" in negotiations to settle the week old newspaper strike.

Brigadier General Sarnoff today announced the election of a new president of the National Broadcasting Company. He is Sylvester L. Weaver, Junior. And General Sarnoff's son, Robert, has been named executive vice president of NBC.

There is not much point in looking back to what the Bermuda Conference was originally intended to be. The Soviet acceptance of a four-power conference has changed all that. Bermuda has become the prologue to the four-power conference, that and little else. The subjects that were to have been talked about, like the European Army, and British and American commitments to French security, still will be talked about, but in a different setting and with much greater urgency. Before the Kremlin reversed itself on a four-power conference, Bermuda was to be an occasion for the Big Three to iron out differences that stood in the way of the European Defense Community. And in addition, they were going to see if they could agree on a common approach to the Soviet Union for the reduction of tension. For a time it looked as though Soviet hostility had ruled out negotiation. And if that were so, no other course remained for France but to close ranks, and accept the European Defense Community and its inclusion of an armed Germany. At that time there seemed to be a good chance of treaty ratification this winter.

Now ratification will have to wait. The immediate hope for it, depends on the Big Four conference with the Russians failing, and failing in a big way. Only then would the French opponents of a re-armed Germany put the danger of a threatening Soviet Union ahead of their fear of Germany.

It hardly needs saying that the Western Powers cannot go into a conference with the Soviet Union intending to make it fail. They may thin, it will fail, and Washington may be even surer of it than London or Paris. But they must test, in good faith, the good faith of the Kremlin. The Kremlin must do the failing. It has to fail openly, in full view, and without being able to pass the blame to the Big Three. Otherwise the failure will not solidify Western unity, and it will not convince the French Assembly, and the House of Commons, that there is no acceptable way to reduce tensions at present. And for this to happen, the Big Three have to know clearly what they want the Kremlin to do, and what they will accept from the Kremlin, in the way of counter-proposals. If the Bermuda Conference is a big success it will have to produce this understanding. It remains to be seen how well it will be able to do so.

The problem is best stated in terms of security. The purpose of the European Defense Community and the European Army, including Germans, is to make the West so strong, that the Soviet Union will not venture to expand in that direction The men in the Kremlin see this greater security of the West as representing greater insecurity for them. The re-arming of Germany - no matter how it is done - means a sharp setback for them in the rivalry for power. They have denounced the European Defense Community, like NATO before it, as instruments of aggression, and evidence of the intent of aggression.

The West, to meet this objection, has been weighing an offer to the Soviet Union of a mutual security pact. The idea was first publicized by Sir Winston Churchill, who was thinking in terms of another Locarno Treaty, something that would be a guarantee against Germany rising again to threaten its neighbors. Later the idea was re-stated, in different terms by Chancellor Adenauer. Being smack against the Iron Curtain, the German leader could understand why the Kremlin should be afraid of the rise of a re-armed Germany, allied with the West. But since he wanted Germany re-armed and associated with the West only for its own safety, he urged the West to offer the Kremlin a non-aggression pact. This would, he thought, underscore the defensive nature of all alliances of true democracies.

Perhaps the shrewdest stroke in recent diplomacy, is hidden in a passage of the last Soviet note that has escaped wide attention. In it Mr. Molotov appropriated the Western idea of a non-aggression pact and made it a Soviet proposal. What Mr. Molotov says, in effect, is that Soviet power in Europe is just as defensive, as the West says Western power is, and if the West doesn't believe it, he will sign a pact of non-aggression and mutual security. That is my language, not Mr. Molotov's. His language is long-worded and somewhat obscure, as is customary in Soviet notes. But that is the gist of it. And the West must be prepared to face and answer such a Kremlin offer.

So the crucial point is whether the Soviet Union can make the French believe Red power to be less of a danger than the re-arming of Germany. If the Kremlin offers a broad mutual security system, including everybody - the Soviet Union, the satellites and the West - how much will the French be impressed? And if this is linked with promises of greatly increased East-West trade in non-strategic goods, how much will the British be impressed?

What Washington would think of it is not hard to foretell. For though Washington wants tensions reduced as much as anybody else does, it asks for proof of a change in Soviet intentions before the Western guard is relaxed. And it has all along rejected promises not to do things. It does not trust Soviet promises at all.

At Bermuda it is not going to be easy to put together a concerted Western policy. President Eisenhower may find himself on one side with Sir Winston Churchill, and Premier Laniel on the other, in more than one debate. That will not be because they want something different, but because they do not want to pay the same price or run the same risks for it.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Twenty years ago, Will Rogers wrote of International Conferences: "Other nations have got it on us. They always bring a pack of experts and technical men along to advise, while with us, if we can find a man to send to one, we are lucky and we always feel uneasy until he gets home. But I've always noticed any time a man can't come and settle without bringing his lawyer - look out." Times have changed.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday, December 7, 1953.

This is the news:

The Big Three conference in Bermuda will end later tonight with a communique explaining what the three men want the world to know. Then the President flys to New York tomorrow to speak to the United Nations.

At the United Nations today, the General Assembly asked Russia and Communist China to permit a special commission to enter their countries to search for missing prisoners OF World War Two. And the Assembly received a message from Chou en Lai, the premier and foreign minister of Communist China, charging that what he called the "criminal" policy of the United States had led to a "critical situation" in Korea. He blamed us for the delay in agreeing on a peace conference and the delay in questioning more enemy prisoners now in our hands.

[redacted]

IN KOREA, Another 30 South Koreans, held by the enemy, have refused all explanations and decided to remain with the Communists. That makes 160 -- out of 160 questioned -- who have refused to come home. The date for questioning the 22 Americans who want to stay with the enemy has not been set. But the mother of one of them, Mrs. Portia Howe of Alden, Minnesota, today received a State Department passport to go to Japan. Once there she'll have to convince American and neutral authorities to permit her to go to Korea and the prison camp to see her son. Mrs. Howe says her boy is a victim of "brainwashing and needs help." She told reporters: "Its my son's life that's at stake. I will wait in Japan and hope and pray I'll be cleared for the rest of the way."

In Tokyo, a Japanese war prisoner.. just returned from Russia... said today that he saw some "American prisoners" in a Soviet camp.

~~Vice President Nixon was in Pakistan today where he conferred with Prime Minister Mohammed Ali. He later told reporters: "the United States will be proud to stand with Pakistan in developing the country, industrially, and in maintaining the security from forces that would destroy it."~~

At Pearl Harbor today.. and in Arlington National Cemtery.. there were ceremonies marking the 12th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

And tonight, in Indianapolis, Defense Secretary Wilson said we now have have the most powerful and effective air force in the world. Wilson added that our combat experience in Korea indicates that we also have the best pilots.

222.

Labor Secretary Mitchell said today that the Administration will recommend to Congress that it broaden the unemployment compensation system "substantially." And as part of a campaign to safeguard the economy against aggression Mitchell said the Administration wants to increase both the amount and the COVERAGE of the present 75-cents-an-hour federal minimum wage.

The Supreme Court today again listened to arguments on whether or not the 14th amendment to the Constiution outlawed racial segregation in the public schools. Twenty-one states now practice this, or are permitted to segregate white and colored children. Thurgood Marshal of New York told the court that under the 14th amendment, any kind of segregation is illegal. But John W. Davis, a veteran constiutional lawyer representing South Carolina, said this is not so.. that neither the Court nor the Congress has the power to order Negro and white children to be.. as he put it.. "re-assorted or co-mingled." Davis said if this should happen "the results would not be pleasing."

The Court ruled today.. six to three.. that an employer may fire employes on the picket line who publicly attack the employer's product,,.. if such attacks have nothing to do with the labor dispute. Justice Burton held that:"There is no more elemental cause for discharge of an employe than disloyalty to his employer."

The White House said today that so far it has received more than 19-thousand telegrams in response to Senator McCarthy's appeal for public support to halt American aid to allies who trade with Communist China. The White House says no LATE breakdown of the telegram has been made.(.as to whether they support the Senator's or the President's views.) [redacted]

Here in New York, the ten day-old strike of photo-engravers continues. The strikers are scheduled to hold a meeting Wednesday. But they could meet earlier. [redacted] The president of the striking A.F. of L. union says he's not too optomistic about an early end to the strike that has shut down all but one of the city's major newspapers. The publishers have released a statement by George C. Biggers.. President of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.. saying the strike has proved to be against the public interest, and may lead to laws providing for compulsory arbitration and labor courts.

In Jerusalem today, David Ben-Gurion resigned as prime minister of Israel. He insists he is too tired to carry on and intends to retire to a home in the desert to think and rest.

The Bermuda conference is at an end. And I've asked my colleage, David Schoenbrun to record for us some of his impressions of the meetings."

RETURN CUE:

"Unless more comes out of the conference now."

Edward R. Murrow: December 7, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

The communique on the Bermuda Conference is expected some time later tonight. / It would appear that much of today was spent discussing the Far Eastern situation, including Korea and Indo-China. # So far as Europe is concerned, the French are believed to have made the point very strongly, that German troops can never replace British and American forces now deployed on the Continent. President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill are reported to have expressed "understanding and sympathy" for the French position, but neither the British nor the Americans, would set a time limit on how long their troops would remain on the Continent.

The Principal news from Bermuda is the announcement that President Eisenhower will be flying to New York tomorrow morning. He will make a speech at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, New York time, before the Assembly of the United Nations. His topic will be, "The Perils that Confront the World in this Atomic Age." Reporters in Bermuda assume that he will not say anything, that has not been agreed upon by the three nations at Bermuda, although the degree and depth of the threat, is not the same for all three nations.

Over the week end, reporters on Bermuda have made much of the secrecy that has surrounded these conversations. This was inevitable, and indeed necessary, and could have been anticipated. Even the final communique is not likely to be very informative. Insofar as there was argument, it was a family argument; and every effort was made to prevent hostile neighbors from overhearing it. Insofar as there was agreement, it was a case of the three nations deciding how they would play their hand when they sit down with the Russians. We are not likely to be told of the formal or informal agreements reached, any more than we were told of the agreements reached by the Allied powers during the war. The result of conferences is seldom found in the concluding communique. It is found, rather, in policies pursued by the various nations in subsequent months and years. But it is unlikely that many firm and fast commitments were made in Bermuda, for the simple reason that none of the participants know, as of now, what policy the Russians will pursue when the Four Power meeting is convened.

The Bermuda Conference was merely a prelude to the meeting with the Russians - it was a meeting where no one could win, because the purpose was to try to decide how the three Western Powers will play their hand when they sit down with the Russians. The difficulty in making advance decisions under these circumstances is not only that we do not know what's in the Russian hand - we don't even know what rules they will propose for this deadly game.

The primary purpose of the meeting in Bermuda must necessarily have been to devise a strategy designed to convince the largest possible part of the world that if the conference with the Russians fails, it will be their fault and not ours. And if it succeeds - even partially - it will be because the Western Powers were resolute and united.

Tomorrow afternoon, at 4, when the President speaks to the United Nations, we may get some idea of how the Western Powers have agreed to play this hand. It will be a speech as eagerly awaited in Moscow as by the reporters who have been trying to found out what's been happening in Bermuda.

It remains to be seen just what has been achieved in the course of the Bermuda conference. So far, at least, the newsmen have been kept pretty much in the dark. Which reminds me of something Confucius once said: "Strange how much you've got to know before you know how little you know." George Fuller put it another way: "A good edge, he said, is good for nothing if it has nothing to cut."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Monday, December 7, 1953
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: ..... The Bermuda conference is at an end and I've asked my colleague, David Schoenbrun, to record for us some of his impressions of the meetings.

SCHOENBRUN: Ed, I asked a friend of mine downstairs just a few minutes ago here at the Castle Harbor news headquarters whether he thought this conference has accomplished much and whether it was a good idea to have held it. He replied: "Why, this conference hasn't been held." This is an opinion that is held by many observers here, most of the Europeans and even some of the Americans. There's a feeling here, a very definite one, that nothing at all has been accomplished in Bermuda that could not have been and that, in fact, was not well under way already back in Paris, in London, and in Washington, before this conference began. The only single accomplishment that we know about at all from official announcements is that we have agreed upon the text of the note to Russia. They haven't even told us details of that note, although I've learned from very reliable sources that the note accepts the Russian proposition that the meeting be held in Berlin and that it proposes that it be held very early next year on or about the fifth of January.

Well, this is not much of an accomplishment because, before I left Paris, one week ago, they had already studied that note and had agreed to do pretty much the same thing.

There's been no other major announcement from Bermuda. We do know, again from unofficial sources, that Mr. Churchill has tried to push his plan for a high-level meeting with Malenkov and has not received any particular encouragement from President Eisenhower or the French. I know from very reliable French sources that they have received absolutely no encouragement whatsoever on an American guarantee to provide a counterweight to German power to enable the French to ratify the European army and take the dangerous step of rearming their dangerous enemies, Germany.

In the Far East, in Indo-China, in Trieste, almost nothing has been settled. On the troubled question of Trieste we learn, again from unofficial sources, that there's going to be another invitation to Italy and Jugoslavia to get together around a conference table.

This conference began with a smoke screen around it, a smoke screen and a barbed wire fence. It's now ending in a bit of fireworks, the fireworks being President Eisenhower's trip to the United Nations tomorrow, apparently very neatly timed, even if coincidentally timed, to take the attention away from this Bermuda conference. This has, thus, been a secret conference, perhaps in the nature of Yalta. There may have been secret deals made here. We don't know this now; we'll find it out perhaps in our capitals next week. One thing is certain. There has been no real progress made here on any of the outstanding problems of the west, no indication whatsoever that there's some different plan we have for building a different and a better world. This will be very disappointing to the people of the world unless more comes out of this conference now.

MURROW: The official communique on the Bermuda conference is expected sometime later tonight .....

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Big Three conference in Bermuda will end later tonight with a communique explaining what the three men want the world to know. Then the President flies to New York tomorrow to speak to the United Nations.

At the United Nations today, the General Assembly asked Russia and Communist China to permit a special commission to enter their countries to search for missing prisoners of World War Two. And the Assembly received a message from Chou en Lai, the premier and foreign minister of Communist China, chargint that what he called the "criminal" policy of the United States had led to a "critical situation" in Korea. He blamed us for the delay in agreeing on a peace conference and the delay in questioning more enemy prisoners now in our hands.

In Korea, another 30 South Koreans, held by the enemy, have refused all explanations and decided to remain with the Communists. That makes 160 - out of 160 questioned who have refused to come home. The date for questioning the 22 Americans who want to stay with the enemy has not been set. But the mother of one of them, Mrs. Portia Howe of Alden, Minnesota, today received a State Department passport to go to Japan. Once there, she'll have to convince American and neutral authorities to permit her to go to Korea and the prison camp to see her son. Mrs. Howe says her boy is a victim of "brainwashing and needs help." She told reporters: "Its my son't life that's at stake. I will wait in Japan and hope and pray I'll be cleared for the rest of the way."

In Tokyo, a Japanese war prisoner, just returned from Russia said today that he saw some "American prisoners" in a Soviet camp.

At Pearl Harbor today and in Arlington National Cemetery - there were ceremonies marking the 12th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

And tonight, in Indianapolis, Defense Secretary Wilson said we now have the most powerful and effective air force in the world. Wilson added that our combat experience in Korea indicates that we also have the best pilots.

Labor Secretary Mitchell said today that the Administration will recommend to Congress that it broaden the unemployment compensation system "substantially." And as part of a campaign to safeguard the economy against depression Mitchell said the Administration wants to increase both the amount and the coverage of the present 75-cents-an-hour federal minimum wage.

The Supreme Court today again listened to arguments on whether or not the 14th amendment to the Constitution outlawed racial segregation in the public schools. Twenty one states now practice this, or are permitted to segregate white and colored children. Thurgood Marshal of New York told the court that under the 14th amendment any kind of segregation is illegal. But John W. Davis, a veteran constitutional lawyer representing South Carolina, said this is not so - that neither the Court nor the Congress has the power to order Negro and white children to be - as he put it "re-assorted or co-mingled." Davis said if this should happen "the results would not be pleasing."

The Court ruled today - six to three - that an employer may fire employees on the picket line who publicly attack the employer's product, if such attacks have nothing to do with the labor dispute. Justice Burton held that: "There is no more elemental cause for discharge of an employee than disloyalty to his employer."

The White House said today that so far it has received more than 19-thousand telegrams in response to Senator McCarthy's appeal for public support to halt American aid to allies who trade with Communist China. The White House says no late breakdown of the telegram has been made as to whether they support the Senator's or the President's views.

Here in New York, the ten day-old strike of photo-engravers continues. The strikers are scheduled to hold a meeting Wednesday. But they could meet earlier. The president of the striking AFL union says he's not too optimistic about an early end to the strike that has shut down all but one of the city's major newspapers. The publishers have released a statement by George C. Biggers - president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association - saying the strike has proved to be against the public interest and may lead to laws providing for compulsory arbitration and labor courts.

In Jerusalem today, David Ben-Gurion resigned as prime minister of Israel. He insists he is too tired to carry on and intends to retire to a home in the desert to think and rest.

The Bermuda conference is at an end. And I've asked my colleague, David Schoenbrun to record for us some of his impressions of the meetings."

SCHOENBRUN: Ed, I asked a friend of mine downstairs just a few minutes ago here at the Castle Harbor news headquarters whether he thought this conference has accomplish much and whether it was a good idea to have held it. He replied: "Why, this conference hasn't been held." This is an opinion that is held by many observers here, most of the Europeans and even some of the Americans. There's a feeling here, a very definite one, that nothing at all has been accomplished in Bermuda that could not have been and that, in fact, was not well under way already back in Paris, in London, and in Washington, before this conference began. The only signle accomplishment that we know about at all from official announcements is that we have agreed upon the text of the note to Russia. They haven't even told us details of that note, although I've learned from very reliable sources that the note accepts the Russian proposition that the meeting be held in Berlin and that it proposes that it be held very early next year on or about the fifth of January.

Well, this is not much of an accomplishment because, before I left Paris, one week ago, they had already studied that note and had agreed to do pretty much the same thing.

There's been no other major announcement from Bermuda. We do know, again from unofficial sources, that Mr. Churchill has tried to push his plan for a high-level meeting with Malenkov and has not received any particular encouragement from President Eisenhower or the French. I know from very reliable French sources that they have received absolutely no encouragement whatsoever on an American guarantee to provide a counterweight to German power to enable the French to ratify the European army and take the dangerous step of rearming their dangerous enemies, Germany. In the Far East, in Indo-China, in Trieste, almost nothing has been settled. On the troubled question of Trieste we learn, again from unofficial sources, that t ere's going to be another invitation to Italy and Yugoslavia to get together around a conference table.

This conference began with a smoke screen around it, a smoke screen and a barbed wire fence. It's now ending in a bit of fireworks, the fireworks being President Eisenhower's trip to the United Nations tomorrow, apparently very neatly timed, even if coincidentally timed, to take the attention away from this Bermuda conference. This has, thus, been a secret conference, perhaps in the nature of Yalta. There may have been secret deals made here. We don't know this now; we'll find it out perhaps in our capitals next week. One thing is certain. There has been no real progress made here on any of the outstanding problems of the west, no indication whatsoever that there's some different plan we have for building a different and a better world. This will be very disappointing to the people of the world unless more comes out of this conference now.

MURROW: The communique on the Bermuda Conference is expected sometime later tonight. It would appear that much of today was spent discussing the Far Eastern situation, including Korea and Indo-China. So far as Europe is concerned, the French are believed to have made the point very strongly that German troops can never replace British and American forces now deployed on the Continent. President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill are reported to have expressed "understanding and sympathy" for the French position, but neither the British nor the Americans would set a time limit on how long their troops would remain on the Continent.

The principal news from Bermuda is the announcement that President Eisenhower will be flying to New York tomorrow morning. He will make a speech at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, New York time, before the Assembly of the United Nations. His topic will be, "The Perils that Confront the World in this Atomic Age." Reporters in Bermuda assume that he will not say anything that has not been agreed upon by the three nations at Bermuda, although the degree and depth of the threat is not the same for all three nations.

Over the weekend, reporters on Bermuda have made much of the secrecy that has surrounded these conversations. This was inevitable, and indeed necessary, and could have been anticipated. Even the final communique is not likely to be very informative. Insofar as there was argument, it was a family argument; and every effort was made to prevent hostile neighbors from overhearing it. Insofar as there was agreement, it was a case of the three nations deciding how they would play their hand when they sit down with the Russians. We are not likely to be told of the formal or informal agreements reached, any more than we were told of the agreements reached by the Allied powers during the war. The result of conferences is seldom found in the concluding communique. It is found, rather, in policies pursued by the various nations in subsequent months and years. But it is unlikely that many firm and fast commitments were made in Bermuda, for the simple reason that none of the participants know, as of now, what policy the Russians will pursue when the Four Power meeting is convened.

The Bermuda Conference was merely a prelude to the meeting with the Russians - it was a meeting where no one could win, because the purpose was to try to decide how the three Western Powers will play their hand when they sit down with the Russians. The difficulty in making advance decisions under these circumstances is not only that we do not know what's in the Russian hand - we don't even know what rules they will propose for this deadly game.

The primary purpose of the meeting in Bermuda must necessarily have been to devise a strategy designed to convince the largest possible part of the world that if the conference with the Russians fails, it will be their fault and not ours. And if it succeeds - even partially - it will be because the Western Powers were resolute and united.

Tomorrow afternoon, at 4, when the President speaks to the United Nations, we may get some idea of how the Western Powers have agreed to play this hand. It will be a speech as eagerly awaited in Moscow as by the reporters who have been trying to find out what's been happening in Bermuda.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It remains to be seen just what has been achieved in the course of the Bermuda conference. So far, at least, the newsmen have been kept pretty much in the dark. Which reminds me of something Confucius once said: "Strange how much you've got t know before you know how little you know." George Fuller put it another way: "A good edge, he said, is good for nothing, if it has nothing to cut."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President proposed today that an International atomic energy agency be created, with all nations possessing atomic power, to pool part of their atomic resources. This would include Russia. In a speech to the United Nations--which I'd like to review in a few minutes, the President proposed that this new agency develop peaceful uses for the atom to benefit all people and avoid an atomic war.

Both at the United Nations and among members of both political parties in this country there was praise for the President's message. Madame Pandit of India hopes the statesmen of the world give it serious consideration. Britain's Sir Gladwyn Jebb calls it a "noble and moving statement." Chairman Cole of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee urges all Americans to unite behind the President's plan. Members of both parties suggest that perhaps more information is needed on how we will safeguard our atomic secrets. And from Andrie Vishinsky of Russia there was only this comment: "We must study it."

The President returned to Washington tonight after a busy week-end devoted to the Bermuda conference. The Big three, in their communique, challenged Russia to negotiate peace settlements in Europe and Asia.

AND They announced they are sending notes to Russia urging an early Big Four Foreign Ministers meeting in Berlin.

IN Berlin today, the anti-Communist "Information Bureau-West" reports that the foreign ministers of Russia and her satellites are going to meet in Moscow on Friday.

The United Nations General Assembly..before hearing the President today..agreed unanimously not to reopen the Korean debate at this time. And at Panmunjom, the Communists angrily rejected the allies' final offer of a plan for a peace conference. The rejection was made without even reading our proposal. And American Ambassador Dean told reporters: "It is very obvious that the Communists have stopped negotiating." He says it up to the enemy to make the next move.

In Pakistan today, Prime Minister Mohammed Ali told reporters that India is trying to maintain its strong international bargaining position, by opposing proposed American military aid to Pakistan. The Prime Minister said his country has no aggressive design against any country..merely wants to strengthen its own defenses. And he told the reporters:"If we become important or strong, it diminishes the bargaining power of India."

In Washington today the Administration asked the Supreme Court to outlaw racial segregation in the nation's public schools. Assistant Attorney General J. Lee Rankin.. (arguing the same point of view held by the Truman administration.) said that seperate schools for Negro children, even if equal to facilities for white children, are illegal under the constiution. But Virginia's Attorney general--J. Lindsay Almond-- told the court it was being asked to make a decision "contrary to the spirit, intent and purpose of the 14th amendment."

The White House announced that by this afternoon it has received 25-thousand telegrams as a result of Senator McCarthy's appeal to the public to protest American aid to allies who trade with Communist China.

AND The White House estimates that about 25-thousand letters have been received. But as yet there is no breakdown on how many favor the Administration policy..and how many support the Senator's view.

[redacted]

~~The White House also announced that Mrs. Eisenhower has been in bed since Sunday with a chest cold. She has cancelled all appointments. Her secretary described Mrs. Eisenhower's illness as a bronchial condition.~~

Senate Republican Leader Knowland said today that Communism ~~will~~ in government will be an important issue in next year's congressional elections "regardless of the desires of anyone."

Here in New York, the 11-day-old strike by A.F. of L. photo-engravers has been called off. The ~~[illegible]~~ STRIKERS voted to accept a federal mediators proposal to go back to work for the $3.75 weekly package increase the publishers offered before the strike began. Both sides agreed to let a three-man fact-finding panel decide whether wages should be increased or working hours reduced. Neither side will be forced to accept the fact-finders recommendations. The city's morning newspapers are rushing to get out their next editions.

[redacted] Dec. 8

President Eisenhower's proposal to the General Assembly is to tackle the problems of the atomic age first of all by enlarging the peace-time uses of atomic energy through a new international agency. The idea as he stated it had not been aired publicly before and it took the delegates and the world wide audience by surprise. Mr. Eisenhower's plan is that this agency be supplied uranium and fissionable materials by the powers possessing them, so that scientists can make atomic energy useful to ~~the whole of~~ mankind as a whole. The new agency would be set up by the powers directly involved--the Soviet Union included, as Mr. Eisenhower stressed--and it would be responsible for protecting the supplies it received so that they could not be used for war. "The ~~ingenuity~~ INGENUITY of the scientists" he said, "will provide special safe conditions under which such a ~~bank~~ bank of fissionable material could be made essentially immune to surprise attack."

He outlined what the agency would have to do. "Its more important responsibility" he said, "would be to devise methods whereby this fissionable material would be allocated to serve the peaceful pursuits of mankind. Experts would be mobilized to apply atomic energy to the needs of agriculture, medicine and other peaceful activities. A special purpose would be to provide abundant electrical energy ~~in~~ in the power-starved areas of the world. Thus the contributing ~~powers~~ Nations would be dedicating some of ~~their~~ their strength to serve the needs rather than the fears of the world."

The plan itself was not spelled out. Obviously it could not be. He foresaw that it would start in a small way. But he promised to submit to Congress, with every expectation of approval, any plan that would do four things: First, encourage world-wide investigation into the most effective peacetime uses of fissionable material. Second, begin to diminish the potential destructive power of the world's atomic stockpiles. Third, allow all peoples of all nations to see that the Great Powers, both of the East and the West, are interested in human aspirations first and foremost, rather than in building up armaments. And fourth, open a new channel for peaceful discussion and to initiate a new approach to the many difficult problems that must be solved in both private and public conferences, if the world is to shake off the inertia imposed by fear and make positive progress toward peace."

¶ The idea of a new international agency is not original with Mr. Eisenhower. The United Nations in a resolution passed November eighteenth proposed that a new subcommittee of interested powers be named by the disarmament commission to seek an acceptable solution in private. "We shall carry these private talks to a new conception" said the President. "We would seek more than the mere reduction or elimination of atomic materials available for military purposes. It is not enough just to take this weapon out of the hands of the soldiers. It must be put into the hands of those who will know how to strip its military casing and adapt it to the arts of peace."

He stressed that is no dream that atomic energy can be put to peaceful services. "That capability, already proved" he said, "is here, now, today. Who can doubt" he asked, "that if the entire body of the world's scientists and engineers had adequate amounts of fissionable material with which to test and develop their ideas, this capability would rapidly be transformed into universal, efficient and economic usage?"

One advantage Mr. Eisenhower mentioned for this approach, it would be much easier than wrestling first with the difficulties raised by international inspection. And with this argument he brought the sequence of American disarmament efforts up to date. First had come the Baruch plan, which ultimately languished in Russian insistence on sovereignty. President Truman also went to the General Assembly, trying to get ~~motion~~ action again, and made a speech advocating general disarmament. This was followed by the introduction in Paris two winters ago of detailed disarmament proposals, the ones which made Mr. Vishinsky spend most of one night laughing. ~~Discussions~~ Discussions bogged down again, this time over international inspection issues. And there the stalemate persisted till today. Today Mr.Eisenhower was trying to blast an opening path out of the dead-end. He did not say to the Russians: if you don't like our plan, bring in a better one. He himself brought in a better one. HE found the new approach. And it is one that will appeal both to the idealism and the practicality of the world, quite a lot for a new approach to do.

It is notable that the constructive proposal with which the President's speech ended overshadowed the sensational statements it included about the perils of the atomic age. Part of this address was to have been the key portion of the much predicted speech known as Operation Candor. This part was grim. Here are one or two features from it. The President said that a single air group, afloat or land-based, now can deliver a destructive cargo exceeding in power all the bombs that fell on Britain in World War Two. Atomic bombs today are more than twenty-five times as powerful as the weapons with which the atomic age dawned. Hydrogen weapons are in the range of millions of tons of TNT equivalent. ~~The President did not go on to use the figure of the Strategic Bombing Survey which put the total of tons of bombs dropped by the American and British air forces in World War Two at one point nine millions, perhaps less than a single hydrogen bomb.~~ The President said that the stockpile of atomic weapons exceeds by many times the explosive equivalent of all bombs and all shells that came from every plane and every gun in every theater of the war through the whole of World War Two.

These horrifying facts are really beyond grasp. But the Eisenhower plan is not beyond grasp. It is to make atomic energy the servant, not the master of men. And that idea is sure to have the attention of the world tomorrow.

The President today offered a new approach for the control of atomic energy. In a world accustomed to cynicism, there are those who would agree with the Greek historian Xenophon that "every word is vain that is not completed by deed." But those more hopeful might feel as Spinoza did when he remarked:"I endeavor not to laugh at human actions, not to lament them, despise them - but to try to understand them."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday December 9 1953

This is the news:

The Moscow radio says President Eisenhower's new atomic energy plan is a threat to launch an atomic war. The Russian radio, in a [redacted] comparatively fast reaction to the President's speech to the United Nations yesterday, calls it "a eulogy of the policy of force." Actually, the president proposed an international pool of atomic energy to be used for peaceful purposes. But the Moscow radio has this to say: it was a war-mongering speech..a variation of the Baruch plan [redacted] for international control of atomic energy. And says the Russian broadcast: the week-end Bermuda conference proved that the three western powers do not want to ease the international tension.

Andrie Vishinsky took occasion in the closing minutes of the 8th General Assembly to say that there must first be an unconditional ban on atomic weapons and aplan for strict international control before atomic ENERGY can be used for peaceful purposes.

The first official American reaction to the Moscow broadcast came from James Wadsworth, the deputy chief of our United Nations [redacted] delegation. He told reporters; "The delegation is amazed.. nobody could read such a connotation into the President's speech." Earlier, American Delegate Henry Ford had said that the President's speech had brought fresh air to the Assembly's meeting. And former President Truman, in Missouri, called it a good speech and expressed the hope that "it might be carried to a successful conclusion and bring peace to the world."

At the end of today's U.N. session, Chairman Pandit of India expressed the hope that Prime Minister Churchill, French President Auriol and Russian Premier Malenkov might address the Assembly in person.. as did the President. She referred to Mr. Eisenhower's speech as [redacted] "affirmation of man's desperate need" for assurance of peace.

In Korea today the Communists have again rejected our "final offer" for a peace conference plan. The enemy insists that Russia be seated at the conference as a neutral. American Ambassador Dean told the Communists he would wait "a reasonable time" for them to show a willingness to negotiate. Other American officials indicate our delegation is packing, plans to be out of Panmunjom before Christmas.

In Washington today the Supreme Court heard final arguments on whether the segregation of white and negro children in public schools violates the CONSTITUTION. Lawyers for Negro parents said this is not constitutional under any circumstances. Lawyers for some southern states said it is entirely legal if Negro children have schools as good as those maintained for white children. The court may not hand down its decision before next spring.

Senator McCarthy said today it is "ridiculous beyond words" for the Eisenhower Administration to follow a security order laid down by former President Truman in 1948. This order provides that the files on loyalty investigations of federal workers must be kept secret. Mc Carthy says: "Someplace somebody is tying someone's hands."

And the White House announced a GENERAL breakdown of the 25-thousand telegrams it has received in response to McCarthy's appeal for wires protesting American aid to allies who trade with Communist China. White House Secretary Hagerty says the telegrams on the Administration's side are "slightly ahead. He said of the roughly 25-thousand letters received, "the other point of view"--as he called it--is ahead. Hagerty also said: This is the last I'm going to say on the subject.

The General Electric Company announced today that it will immediately fire [redacted] any of its 230-thousand workers who are admitted communists, spies [redacted] (SABOTEURS,) It will suspend employes who refuse to [redacted] testify [redacted] on such matters under oath before a "compenetent government authority." The company has asked the government to set up an "independent security agency" to give suspended employes a chance to be cleared and reinstated.

The Veterans Administration announced today that next year it will pay a regular dividend of 190-million dollars to veterans holding about five million [redacted] national service life insurance policies.

The State Department today suspended the chief justice of the American court system in Germany.. Justice William Clark. And the department named an associate justice to take his place immediately. Clark has said he will ignore his suspension by the State Department.

Informed sources in Paris say General Gruenther, the head of the North Atlantic armed forces, will ask [redacted] NATO leaders for 12-hundred more airplanes and a 10 per cent increase in ground forces. The ministers of the 14 North Atlantic Treaty countries meet in Paris on Monday.

Edward R. Murrow: December 9, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Whether by design, by coincidence or by a mixture of the two, President Eisenhower is living through his biggest week as President. It started by his accepting the challenge of Senator McCarthy for power within the Republican Party. It went on to the decision to present an uncompromising case against racial segregation in the schools to the Supreme Court. It took him to Bermuda, where instead of being led by Sir Winston Churchill, he dominated the events there with his plan for an international atomic stockpile for peaceful purposes. Then he focused world attention on his proposal by laying it before the General Assembly of the United Nations. The week may reach its most important moment when the President meets Republican leaders ~~in~~ of Congress tomorrow to discuss the forthcoming legislative program, for that will test the President's leadership.

This is a changed ~~man~~ President from the P~~resident~~ man who has been under steady criticism for having a mistaken concept of his function ~~as President~~. Critics said he was being Chairman of the Board, not a dynamic political leader. This week has made him the political leader - (for the time being at least.) Whether he planned it this way, or whether the events simply unfolded this way, the result is the same. The President is demonstrating leadership within his Party, in the country as a whole, and in the most difficult problem in world affairs. It still remains to be seen where his leadership will lead. But it is newsworthy that the President has responded to events in a manner not shown before. And in theory, at least, the dynamic leader should have more success than the Chairman of the Board.

Partly through the President's leadership, the Bermuda Conference is fading out as an historic event. ~~Though it was the first Big Three meeting on the highest level since 1946, and though~~ Although big ideas were at first conceived for it, it was eclipsed by the President's atomic plan. It had at one time been intended to produce a Declaration of Bermuda, that was to have historic rank along with other Western declarations. But Sir Winston Churchill was taken by surprise by the introduction of the atomic plan. Not that he disliked the plan; he hated to see the Bermuda Conference fade out. He also preferred reporting to his own Parliament, before an official accounting for Bermuda was given to the U.N. Assembly. But the President's initiative prevailed. And Bermuda ended without doing anything of historic importance, unless it was that for the first time, a speech of an American president, was edited and cleared by foreign governments. A "declaration of Bermuda" never showed up. And the conference became no more than one in a sequence.

Correspondents who flocked there are complaining bitterly at the inept treatment they received. They did not so much mind the barbed wire, which shut them off from the Ministers. But no press officer had the initiative or skill, to feed out the available news, so the conference failed to capture world attention.

Actually more was done than the public was allowed to learn, till the end. The communique showed more support from the French for the European Defense Community than had been foreseen. It showed that thought had been given to Indo-China. It reaffirmed the place of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, as the foundation of Western policy. And a number of differences were ironed out. It appears that the French did not ask a pledge from Britain and the United States, to keep a fixed number of troops in Europe as a price for ratifying the European Defense Community treaty. What they want is an undertaking not to denounce the NATO treaty - which began with a lifetime of twenty years - for the duration of the defense community, which is set for fifty years.

The question was raised at Bermuda of an alternative to the defense community, if France should fail to ratify it. The British wanted to explore the inclusion of Germany in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

WE'RE TOLD

Secretary Dulles shut off this talk altogether. In his view no alternative could remotely provide the advantages of the European Defense Community, so the conference ended with this the concerted objective of the three powers.

Now comes the meeting of the NATO foreign ministers next week, and it carries on where Bermuda left off. It may fix the terms of the British co-operation with the European Army. After that comes a meeting of Big Three experts to fix the agreed strategy for the meeting with Mr. Molotov in Berlin in January. At Bermuda it was already decided what to do if Mr. Molotov demands a Five Power meeting including Red China. Two conditions will be laid down. The Communists must show a desire for success of the preliminary peace talks on Korea. And in Indo-China the Communist insurgents must take effective steps to end the conflict there. These are natural conditions. If tensions are to be eased they must be eased in Asia as well as Germany and Austria, and in Indo-China quite as much as in Korea.

But it is a long leap to a Five Power Conference. The Four Power Conference will be test enough. It will be a test of Soviet good will in agreeing to free elections in Germany, and the relinquishment of the Soviet foothold in East Germany. But it will also be a test of Western solidarity. Western unity is now fairly strong, but it may have to withstand both shock and guile if the Berlin Conference is not to be a Western defeat.

It is ~~probably~~ Indeed true, as Joseph Joubert once said that "we are all of us more or less echoes, repeating involuntarily the virtues, the defects, the movements and the character of those among whom we live." But in leading a political party, as in leading a nation, it's pretty much as J.N. Hunt concluded: "The depth of one's convictions measures the breadth of his influence."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Moscow radio says President Eisenhower's new atomic energy plan is a threat to launch an atomic war. Th Russian radio, in a comparatively fast reaction to the President's speech to the United Nations yesterday, calls it a "eulogy of the policy of force." Actually, the president proposed an international pool of atomic energy to be used for peaceful purposes. But the Moscow radio has this to say: it was a war-mongering speech - a variation of the Baruch plan for international control of atomic energy. And, says the Russian broadcast: the week-end Bermuda conference proved that the western powers do not want to ease the international tension.

Andrei Vishinsky took occasion in the closing minutes of the 8th General Assembly to say that there must first be an unconditional ban on atomic weapons and a plan for strict international control before atomic energy can be used for peaceful purposes.

The first official American reaction to the Moscow broadcast came from James Wadsworth, the deputy chief of our United Nations delegation. He told reporters: "The delegation is amazed - nobody could read such a connotation into the President's speech." Earlier, American Delegate Henry Ford had said that the President's speech had brought fresh air to the Assembly's meeting. And former President Truman, in Missouri, called it a good speech and expressed the hope that "it might be carried to a successful conclusion and bring peace to the world."

At the end of today's U.N. session, Chairman Pandit of India expressed the hope that Prime Minister Churchill, French President Auriol and Russian Premier Malenkov might address the Assembly in person - as did the President. She referred to Mr. Eisenhower's speech as "affirmation of man's desperate need" for assurance of peace.

In Korea today the Communists have again rejected our "final offer" for a peace conference plan. The enemy insists that Russia be seated at the conference as a neutral. American Ambassador Dean told the Communists he would wait "a reasonable time" for them to show a willingness to negotiate. Other American officials indicate our delegation is packing, plans to be out of Panmunjom before Christmas.

In Washington today the Supreme Court heard final arguments on whether the segregation of white and negro children in public schools violates the constitution. Lawyers for Negro parents said this is not constitutional under any circumstances. Lawyers for some southern states said it is entirely legal if Negro children have schools as good as those maintained for white children. The court may not hand down its decision before next spring.

Senator McCarthy said today it is "ridiculous beyond words" for the Eisenhower Administration to follow a security order laid down by former President Truman in 1948. This order provides that the files on loyalty investigations of federal workers must be kept secret. McCarthy says: "Someplace, somebody is tying someone's hands."

And the White House announced a general breakdown of the 25-thousand telegrams it has received in response to McCarthy's appeal for wires protesting American aid to allies who trade with Communist China. White House Secretary Hagerty says the telegrams on the Administration's side are "slightly ahead." He said of the roughly 25-thousand letters received, "the other point of view" as he called it - is ahead. Hagerty also said: "This is the last I'm going to say on the subjecy.

The General Electric Company announced today that it will immediately fire any of its 230-thousand workers who are admitted communists, spies or saboteurs. It will suspend employees who refuse to testify on such matters under oath before a "competent government authority." The company has asked the government to set up an "independent security agency" to give suspended employees a chance to be cleared and reinstated.

The Veterans Administration announced today that next year it will pay a regular divident of 190-million dollars to veterans holding about five million national service life insurance policies.

The State Department today suspended the chief justice of the American court system in Germany - Justice William Clark. And the department named an associate justice to take his place immediately. Clark has said he will ignore his suspension by the State Department.

Informed sources in Paris say General Gruenther, the head of the North Atlantic armed forces, will ask NATO leaders for 12-hundred more airplanes and a 10 percent increase in ground forces. The ministers of the 14 North Atlantic Treaty countries meet in Paris on Monday.

Whether by design, by coincidence or by a mixture of the two, President Eisenhower is living through his biggest week as President. It started by his accepting the challenge of Senator McCarthy for power within the Republican Party. It went on to the decision to present an uncompromising case against racial segregation in the schools to the Supreme Court. It took him to Bermuda, where instead of being led by Sir Winston Churchill, he dominated the events there with his plan for an international atomic stockpile for peaceful purposes. Then he focused world attention on his proposal by laying it before the General Assembly of the United Nations. The week may reach its most important moment when the President meets Republican leaders of Congress tomorrow to discuss the forthcoming legislative program, for that will test the President's leadership.

This is a changed President from the man who has been under steady criticism for having a mistaken concept of his function. Critics said he was being Chairman of the Board, not a dynamic political leader. This week has made him the political leader - for the time being at least. Whether he planned it this way, or whether the events simply unfolded this way, the result is the same. The President is demonstrating leadership within his Party, in the country as a whole, and in the most difficult problem in world affairs. It still remains to be seen where his leadership will lead. But it is newsworthy that the President has responded to events in a manner not shown before. And in theory, at least, the dynamic leader should have more success than the Chairman of the Board.

Partly through the President's leadership, the Bermuda Conference is fading out as an historic event. Although big ideas were at first conceived for it, it was eclipsed by the President's atomic plan. It had at one time been intended to produce a Declaration of Bermuda that was to have historic rank along with other Western declarations. But Sir Winston Churchill was taken by surprise by the introduction of the atomic plan. Not that he disliked the plan; he hated to see the Bermuda Conference fade out. He also preferred reporting to his own Parliament before an official accounting for Bermuda was given to the U.N. Assembly. But the President's initiative prevailed. And Bermuda ended without doing anything of historic importance, unless it was that for the first time a speech of an American president was edited and cleared by foreign governments. A "declaration of Bermuda" never showed up. And the conference became no more than one in a sequence.

Correspondents who flocked there are complaining bitterly at the inept treatment they received. They did not so much mind the barbed wire which shut them off from the Ministers. But no press officer had the initiative or skill to feed out the available news, so the conference failed to capture world attention.

Actually more was done than the public was allowed to learn till the end. The communique showed more support from the French for the European Defense Community than had been foreseen. It showed that thought had been given to Indo-China. It reaffirmed the place of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as the foundation of Western policy. And a number of differences were ironed out. It appears that the French did not ask a pledge from Britain and the United States to keep a fixed number of troops in Europe as a price for ratifying the European Defense Community treaty. What they want is an undertaking not to denouce the NATO treaty - which began with a lifetime of twenty years - for the duration of the defense community, which is set for fifty years.

The question was raised at Bermuda of an alternative to the defense community if France should fail to ratify it. The British wanted to explore the inclusion of Germany in the North Altantic Treaty Organization.

We're told Secretary Dulles shut off this talk altogether. In his view no alternative could remotely provide the advantages of the European Defense Community, so the conference ended with this the concerted objective of the three powers.

Now comes the meeting of the NATO foreign ministers next week, and it carries on where Bermuda left off. It may fix the terms of the British co-operation with the European Army. After that comes a meeting of Big Three experts to fix the agreed strategy for the meeting with Mr. Molotov in Berlin in January. At Bermuda it was already decided what to do if Mr. Molotov demands a Five Power meeting including Red China. Two conditions will be laid down. The Communists must show a desire for success of the preliminary peace talks on Korea. And in Indo-China the Communist insurgents must take effective steps to end the conflict there. These are natural conditions. If tensions are to be eased they must be eased in Asia as well as Germany and Austria, and in Indo-China quite as much as in Korea.

But it is a long leap to a Five Power Conference. The Four Power Conference will be test enough. It will be a test of Soviet good will in agreeing to free elections in Germany, and the relinquishment of the Soviet foothold in East Germany. But it will also be a test of Western solidarity. Western unity is now fairly strong, but it may have to withstand both shock and guile if the Berlin Conference is not to be a Western defeat.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It is perhaps true, as Joseph Joubert once said that "we are all of us more or less echoes, repeating involuntarily the virtues, the defects, the movements and the character of those among whom we live." But in leading a political party, as in leading a nation, it's pretty much as J.N. Hunt concluded: "The depth of one's convictions measures the breadth of his influence."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Fifth Wash.

Thursday Dec. 10, 1953.

This is the news:

The President is waiting for an "official" Russian reaction, to his new atomic energy proposal. Last night the Moscow radio described Mr. Eisenhower's speech to the United Nations as "threatening atomic war." But today the White House news secretary said: The government does not believe that this reaction "represents the considered opinion of the Soviet government"... The President has always recognized that his suggesstion would require thoughtful study. Therefore any 24-hour reactions by Soviet officials, or Soviet propaganda media, "cannot be accepted as anything more than stop-gap, interim statements." The White House also says that the President is still "very hopeful that Soviet leaders will recognize his proposal for what it is.. a serious and feasible first step toward atomic peace." AND the State Department SAYS: Ambassador to Russia Bohlen has been instructed to call to the attention of the Kremlin "the special character" of the President's atomic proposal. Radio Moscow today devoted 56 words to the President's speech in its home broadcast to the Soviet people. It mentioned the fact that the speech had been made before the United Nations. Then the broadcast CONCLUDED:

"In the introductory part of his speech Eisenhower has stated that he felt it incumbent upon himself to speak in a new language..the language of atomic war." That was the whole summary given the Russian people.

The Communist rebels in Indo-China , for the second time in two weeks, HAVE made an offer to negotiate a settlement of the war in Indo-China. The enemy radio says: the Communists will negotiate if France WILL respect "our true independence". This apparently means the Viet Minh want the French to agree to allow the establishment of a Communist regime in Viet Minh..closely linker to Communist China and Russia. ~~The broadcast today said:"If the French government is sincere, if it respects our true independence, if it wishes to negotiate to put an end to the war, our people and our government are ready for discussions."~~

In Korea today, Ambassador Dean told reporters he will do "everything possible" to reach an agreement with the Communists on a Korean peace conference. In yesterday's meeting he told enemy negotiators that IF A CONFERENCE SHOULD BE ARRANGED they would have to "get their orders from the Kremlin" before they would know how to vote. [redacted]

Officials here in Washington say Dean has been authorized to return home for Christmas. This would not mean an end to the negotiations. But it would be a means of giving him a rest from "the exhaustive negotiations." Kenneth T. Young, the State Department's director of Northeast Asian affairs, is now in Korea and would substitute for Ambassador Dean.

[redacted]

A.F. of L. President George Meany today resigned from the public advisory board of the Foreign Operations Administration. He told Administrator Harold Stassen..who is on his way to Turkey.. that although Congress ordered the agency to strentgthen free labor unions overseas "virtually the entire labor program of the agency has been dismantled" in recent months. Meany says the Foreign Operations Administration is doing very little to encourage anti-Communist labor unions abroad. He says he agreed to serve on the Board last March but it held no meetings until this month.

Senator McCarthy said today that he will subpena retired Brigadier General Telford Taylor for questioning about possible security leaks at the army's radar center at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey.

General Taylor, who was chief prosecutor at the Nuremberg war crimes trial, recently said, in a speech at West Point, that McCarthy's Fort Monmouth investigation was "a most dangerous threat to the morale and efficiency of the army." Taylor said Mc Carthy would be guilty of risking the nation's security if he does not prove the charges he has made against certain INDIVIDUALS at Fort Monmouth. Today the Senator told reporters:"Taylor has interested himself very greatly in this investigatio n. Some of his associations indicate that he may be able to give us information of some value." General Taylor told reporters:"I will of course appear and respond to any congressional committee subpena that may be issued to me."

The Canadian government says Igor Guzenko, the former Russian code clerk, has agreed to tell the Senate's internal security committee what he knows about Soviet spying. The Canadian government does not say where or when the interview will take place.

The President today fired two remaining Democratic members of the War Claims Commission and replaced them with a three-man, all Republican, commission. The two ousted commissioners...Mrs. Georgia Lusk and Myron Weiner.. both claim they were appointed by former President Truman to serve until the commission goes out of business..until it HAS considered the claims of all American civilians who were interned by the Japanese in World War Two. Both refused to submit resignations from their 14-thousand dollar a year jobs. The White House, ordering them fired tomorrow, SAYS they were supposed to serve "at the pleasure of the President."

The President today received a report recommending that the government's 70 independent agencies be cut at least in half. The privately financed report, prepared through Temple University, recommends, among other things, a drastic, long-range re-organization of the Labor Department. This would rewrite the law which instructs the Department to "foster and promote" the welfare of wage earners. The report suggests that the Labor Department should be regarded as a servant of the public at large rather than as a champion of labor.

Today in Oslo, Lady Churchill accepted Sir Winstons Nobel Prize for literature..and red his acceptance speech. //The British Prime Minister referred to "the age of storm and tragedy thru which we have been living for the past fifty years...The power of man has grown in every sphere except over himself...Never in the field of action have events seemed so harshly to dwarf personalities... Rarely in history have brutal facts so dominated thoughts, or has such widespread individual virtue found so dim a collective focus. The fearful question confronts us..have our problems got beyond our controll//.Undoutedly we are passing thru a phase where this may be so...Well may we humble ourselves, and seek for guidance and mercy. Sir Winston added..we in Europe and the western world, who have planned for health and social security , who have marvelled at the triumphs of medecine and science, and who have aimed at justice and freedom for all, have nevertheless been witnesses of famine misery, cruelty and destruction, before which pale the deeds of Attila and Genghis Khan.....But in spite of all this Churchill says.."Let us therefore confront the clatter and rigidity we see around us with tolerance variety and calm...//..General George Marshall in accepting the Nobel Peace prize did so "on behalf of the American people who made possible the realization of the European recovery program.."..a few students demonstrated and scattered some leaflets describing Marshall as a man preparing for another war..

The phrase in Sir winstons speech that most impressed this reporter was where he said that "widespread individual virtue found so dim a collective focus"...here he was talking about both men and nations in the western world...talking about the millions of decent tolerant devoted citizens...willing to defend their heritage of freedom..prepared to make sacrifices...willing to serve the causes for which their ancestors fought..believing fiercely in the dignity of the human being,but being unable to find what Sir Winston called a "collective focus"...That is a nation with a philosophy,a policy,an example and a course of action which would represent and reflect all of this individual virtue that is looking for a symbol and a champion....The world is marred by cleavages graver and more violent than those which convulsed Europe after the fall of the Roman empire,and in this state the peoples look about for leadership and light and a sense of steadiness.//.Sir Winston reccomends that we humble ourselves and seek for guidance and mercy,but he certainly implies that this will not be enough...and he adds that we must have tolerance variety and ~~xxxx~~ calm.....If these qualities,if these elements of leadership are to be demonstrated effectively by a nation state...they must in terms of power,be demonstrated by this country...To an awesome degree the hopes and the fears of the free world are focused on this country..but anyone who has gone amongst our allies must agree with Sir Winston that the collective focus is dim...Again quoting Churchill,perhaps out of context but I think not..we have not been very tolerant..nor have we been very calm...This can change...may indeed be changing...the communique after the Bermuda meeting was devoid of any threat or bluster...The Presidents proposal regarding the creation of an international atomic stockpile for peacefull purposes, did much to regain the inniative,diplomatically,for the west...The Russian radio has turned it down and that fact may insure that it will become a workable proposition for the free world,we may in fact be able to take in each others atoms and turn them to the uses of peace..but untill this is actually done the focus,even for many of our allies will remain dim. # If the Russians had seized upon the Marshall plan,made huge requests for aid for th themselves and their satelites,it is unlikely that congress ~~xx~~ would have appropriated a dollar for the Marshall plan.(Russian refusal made the plan a sucess.).their refusal of the atomic plan may do the same thing for it...but even if the plan had been accepted by all nations concerned,including the Russians,the reduction of tension would have been very small,the race for arms and power would have gone on..but there would at least have been an international demonstration of the promise as well as the threat contained in atomic power....

It seems to this reporter that if our world leadership is to be brought clearly into focus,we must state,at the appropriate time,the conditions under which we are prepared to live in the same world with the Russians....I am not sure that they are prepared to live with us ~~xx~~ under any conditions....but that fact..if it is one...does not relieve us of the responsibilities of letting it be known,more fully that we have so far,what they must do and what we are prepared to do,in order that this cleavage of the world may be seen in clear focus..It is important that our allies,and the neutrals,and ourselves be able to measure,in clear light,what we will settle for ,as against what the Russians will settle for.//.This cant be done tomorrow or at Berlin...it may take decades...maybe it cant be done at all....

History gives us no example where this kind of power struggle has been settled without resort to violence.//.But even if it comes to that..our constant objective must be to sharpen and clear the focus on our policy,and our aspirations,and the conditions under which we are prepared to live with Communism as well as the conditions and considerations which will cause us to put this continuing contest to the final arbitrament of war....
Everything that is done to clear the haze from our policy and our purpose,to sharpen the ~~purpose~~ objectives of our policy... helps to improve and sharpen what ~~Mr Churchill~~ Sir Winston called that "dim collective focus...."

orbi

peace prize 52

Albert Schweitzer..!.Humanitarianism consists of never sacraficing a human being to a purpose

Voltaire..If you wish to converse with me ..define your terms..

Good write up -

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President is waiting for an "official" Russian reaction to his new atomic energy proposal. Last night the Moscow radio described Mr. Eisenhower's speech to the United Nations as "threatening atomic war." But today the White House news secretary said: The government does not believe that this reaction "represents the considered opinion of the Soviet government" - the President has always recognized that his suggestion would require thoughtful study. Therefore any 24-hour reactions by Soviet officials, or Soviet propaganda media, "cannot be accepted as anything more than stop-gap, interim statements." The White House also says that the President is still "very hopeful that Soviet leaders will recognize his proposal for what it is - a serious and feasible first step toward atomic peace." And the State Department says: Ambassador to Russia Bohlen has been instructed to call to the attention of the Kremlin "the special character" of the President's atomic proposal. Radio Moscow today devoted 56 words to the President's speech in its home broadcast to the Soviet people. It mentioned the fact that the speech had been made before the United Nations. Then the broadcast concluded: "In the introductory part of his speech Eisenhower has stated that he felt it incumbent upon himself to speak in a new language - the language of atomic war." That was the whole summary given the Russian people.

The Communist rebels in Indo-China, for the second time in two weeks, have made an offer to negotiate a settlement of the war in Indo-China. The enemy radio says: the Communists will negotiate if France will respect "our true independence." This apparently means the Viet Minh want the French to agree to allow the establishment of a Communist regime in Viet Minh - closely linked to Communist China and Russia.

In Korea today, Ambassador Dean told reporters he will do "everything possibl to reach an agreement with the Communists on a Korean peace conference. In yesterday's meeting he told enemy negotiators that if a conference should be arranged, they would have to "get their orders from the Kremlin" before they would know how to vote.

Officials here in Washington say Dean has been authorized to return home for Christmas. This would not mean an end to the negotiations. But it would be a means of giving him a rest from "the exhaustive negotiations." Kenneth T. Young, the State Department's director of Northeast Asian affairs, is now in Korea and would substitute for Ambassador Dean.

AFL President George Meany today resigned from the public advisory board of the Foreign Operations Administration. He told Administrator Harold Stassen, who is on his way to Turkey, that although Congress ordered the agency to strengthen free labor unions overseas "virtually the entire labor program of the agency has been dismantled" in recent months. Meany says the Foreign Operations Administration is doing very little to encourage anti-Communist labor unions abroad. He says he agreed to serve on the Board last March, but it held no meetings until this month.

Senator McCarthy said today that he will subpoena retired Brigadier General Telford Taylor for questioning about possible security leaks at the army's radar center at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey. General Taylor, who was chief prosecutor at the Nuremberg war crimes trial, recently said, in a speech at West Point, that McCarthy's Fort Monmouth investigation was "a most dangerous threat to the morale and efficiency of the army." Taylor said McCarthy would be guilty of risking the nation's security if he does not prove the charges he has made against certain individuals at Fort Monmouth. Today the Senator told reporters: "Taylor has interested himself very greatly in this investigation. Some of his associations indicate that he may be able to give us information of some value." General Taylor told reporters: "I will of course appear and respond to any congressional committee subpoena that may be issued to me."

The Canadian government says Igor Guzenko, the former Russian code clerk, has agreed to tell the Senate's internal security committee what he knows about Soviet spying. The Canadian government does not say where or when the interview will take place.

The President today fired two remaining Democratic members of the War Claims Commission and replaced them with a three-man, all Republican, commission. The two ousted commissioners - Mrs. Georgia Lusk and Myron Weiner - both claim they were appointed by former President Truman to serve until the commission goes out of business - until it has considered the claims of all American civilians who were interned by the Japanese in World War Two. Both refused to submit resignations from their 14-thousand dollar a year jobs. The White House, ordering them fired tomorrow, says they were supposed to serve "at the pleasure of the President."

The President today received a report recommending that the government's 70 independent agencies be cut at least in half. The privately financed report, prepared through Temple University, recommends, among other things, a drastic, long-range re-organization of the Labor Department. This would rewrite the law which instructs the Department to "foster and promote" the welfare of wage earners. The report suggests that the Labor Department should be regarded as a servant of the public at large rather than as a champion of labor.

Today in Oslo, Lady Churchill accepted Sir Winstons Nobel Prize for literature - and read his acceptance speech. The British Prime Minister referred to "the age of storm and tragedy through which we have been living for the past fifty years - the power of man has grown in every sphere except over himself. Never in the field of action have enents seemed so harshly to dwarf personalities. Rarely in History have brutal facts so dominated thought or has such widespread individual virtue found so dim a collective focus. The fearful question confronts us - have our problems got beyond our control? Undoubtedly we are passing through a phase where this may be so. Well, may we humble ourselves and seek for guidance and mercy, Sir Winston added.. We in Europe and the western world who have planned for health and social security, who have marvelled at the triumphs of medecine and science, and who have aimed at justice and freedom for all, have nevertheless been witnesses of famine misery, cruelty and destruction before which pale the deeds of Attila and Genghis Khan - but in spite of all this Churchill says let us therefore confront the clatter and rigidity we see around us with tolerance variety and calm. General George Marshall in accepting the Nobel Peace prize did so "on behalf of the American people who made possible the realization of the European recovery program" a few students demonstrated and scattered some leaflets describing Marshall as a man preparing for another war..The phrase in Sir Winston's speech that most impressed this reporter was where he said that "widespread individual virtue found so dim a collective focus" - Here he was talking about both men and nations in the western world - talking about the millions of decent tolerant devoted citizens - willing to defend their heritage of freedom - prepared to make sacrifices - willing to serve the causes for which their ancestors fought - believing fiercely in the dignity of the human being, but being unable to find what Sir Winston called a "a collective focus" - That is a nation with a philosophy, a policy, an example and a course of action which would represent and reflect all of this individual virtue that is looking for a symbot and a champion. The world is marred by cleavages graver and more violent than those which convulsed Europe after the fall of the Roman empire, and in this state the peoples look about for leadership and light and a sense of steadiness. Sir Winston recommends that we humble ourselves and seek for guidance and mercy, but he certainly implies that this will not be enough - and he adds that we must have tolerance variety and calm. If these qualities, if these elements of leadership are to be demonstrated effectively by a nation state they must in terms of power, be demonstrated by this country. To an awesome degree the hopes and the fears of the free world are focused on this country - but anyone who has gone amongst our allies must agree with Sir Winston that the collective focus is dim. Again quoting Churchill, perhaps out of context but I think not, we have not been very tolerant - nor have we been very calm. This can change - may indeed be changing - the communique after the Bermuda meeting was devoid of any threat or bluster. The President's proposal regarding the creation of an international atomic stockpile for peaceful purposes did much to regain the iniative, diplomatically, for the West. The Russian radio has turned it down and that fact may insure that it will become a workable proposition for the free world, we may in fact be able to take in each others atoms and turn them to the uses of peace - but until this is actually done the focus, even for many of our allies will remain dim. If the Russians had seized upon the Marshall plan, made hugh requests for aid for themselves and their satellites, it is unlikely that Congress would have appropriated a dollar for the Marshall plan. Russian refusal made the plan a success - their refusal of the atomic plan may do the same thing for it - but even if the plan had been accepted by all nations concerned, including the Russians, the reduction of tnesion would have been very small, the race for arms and power would have gone on - but there would at least have been an international demonstration of the promise as well as the threat contained in atomic power.

It seems to this reporter that if our world leadership is to be brought clearly into focus, we must state, at the appropriate time, the conditions under which we are prepared to live in the same world with the Russians - I am not sure that they are prepared to live with us under any conditions - but that fact - if it is one - does not relieve us of the responsibilities of letting it be known, more fully that we have so far, what they must do and what we are prepared to do, in order that this cleavage of the world may be seen in clear focus. It is important that our allies, and the neutrals, and ourselves be able to measure, in clear light, what we will settle for, as against what the Russians will settle for. This can(t be done tomorrow or at Berlin - it may take decades - maybe it can't be done at all. History gives us no example where this kind of power struggle has been settled without resort to vidence. But even if it comes to that - our constant objective must be to sharpen and clear the focus on our policy, and our aspirations, and the conditions under which we are prepared to live with Communism as well as the conditions and considerations which will cause us to put this continuing contest to the final arbitrament of war. Everything that is done to clear the haze from our policy and our purpose, to sharpen the objectives of our policy - helps to improve and sharpen what Sir Winston called that "dim collective focus.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: WORD FOR TODAY: "Humanitarianism consists of never sacrificing a human being to a purpose." - Albert Schweitzer - "If you wish to converse with me, define your terms." - Voltaire.

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday, Dec. 11, 1953

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles said today, that until we have an international agreement on atomic controls, the free world must maintain the power "to strike back against any aggressor." Just before taking off for Paris, with Defense Secretary Wilson, MR. DULLES told reporters: The President's "great address" to the United Nations, "boldly chartered the way to reduce the great peril of our time." He said: "We hope others will follow in that way. In any case, progress will of necessity be gradual." And the State Department revealed that before the President made his Tuesday speech, our ambassador in Moscow, Charles Bohlen, had told Foreign Minister Molotov that the speech would be one of "seriousness and importance." Since then, Bohlen handed Molotov a copy of the speech. A State Department spokesman said he doesn't know what else the two men may have discussed. And he said, so far, there has been no response from the Soviet government, to the President's proposal for an international atomic energy pool.

Defense Secretary Wilson--before he took off for Paris--told reporters that the draft call for February will be dropped to 18-thousand from the monthly level of 23-thousand that's been maintained since last July. Wilson does not think the draft call will be cut further

In Paris, the North Atlantic Military committee..awaiting the arrival of Secretaries Dulles and Wilson.. announced its support of General ~~[illegible]~~he Greunther's demand for a big increase in the NATO airforce next year. Informed sources say Greunther will ask the Council of Ministers for more than thirteen hundred planes next year.

In Oslo, Norway, General Marshal--accepting the Nobel peace prize--said today that the world now needs "a spiritual regeneration that would re-establish a feeling of good faith among men generally." He said: "Material assistance is not sufficient. Nations must learn that large armies are impractical tools for shaping peace. History books must be cleansed of nationalistic distortions so the youth of the world may see objectively why wars occur."

In PARIS, WEST GERMAN [redacted], Chancellor Adenauer said again that prompt establishment of a European army is essential to maintain the independence of Western Europe and preserve world peace.

And FRENCH [redacted] Premier Laniel, just back from the Bermuda conference, ridiculed [redacted] reports of [redacted] French-British friction at the recent conference. He called this "an absurdity."

Iranian Premier Zehdi told reporters today that he is confident the Anglo-Iranian oil dispute can be settled soon, "with justice and reason and with safeguards for the national prestige of Iran." Vice President Nixon was in Teheran today and received an honorary degree from Teheran university.

In Italy, a 24-hour strike by government workers who are seeking higher wages just about paralyzed railroad and postal service. And striking teachers kept many of the schools closed throughout the country.

There's been no change in the situation in Korea. Although Communist South Koreans who don't want to return home have refused to be interviewed unless given the opportunity to make long [redacted] "counter-explanations."

Mrs. Portia Howe of Minnesota, who is now in Tokyo hoping to see her prisoner son who doesn't want to return home, told reporters today she is going to "wait and pray" that she may be given the opportunity to go to Korea. The Far Eastern command has refused to permit her to travel to Panmunjom.

In Indo-China the French have evacuated a city they recently vowed to defend. French officials say they withdrew because "The town itself is like a mousetrap"..presumably a reference to the fact that its surrounded by high hills. In a minute I'D like to discuss the latest Communist offer to negotiate ON the Indo China war.

In Washington today, House Speaker Martin told reporters he feels the President will seek re-election in 1956. And Martin predicts that the Republicans will gain 20 seats in next year's congressional elections.

Senator McCarthy said today that he has received a list of about 125 persons who--he says--are former Communists, who fled from Germany to the United States, secured their citizenship papers, and then returned to Germany to work for the American high commissioner. McCarthy says this is "infiltration" and he plans to study the staff of the High Commissioner's

Edward R. Murrow: December 11, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Diplomatic storms often are heralded by a kind of diplomatic heat lightning. In the current news are two happenings that signal the approach of the Four Power Conference in Berlin. If one can call them heat lightning it is right to say they have played over the skies of France. One is an editorial in Pravda, the Moscow Communist newspaper, which makes skillful use of the flattery to which Frenchmen gladly respond, the discussion of France's place as a great power. It charges that her allies have kept France from occupying the place to which she is rightfully entitled.

The other event is more ominous, it is last night's new offer from the Communist insurgents in Indo-China, the Vietminh, to negotiate a peace. It will be recalled that an invitation to negotiate with the Vietminh leader, Ho Chi Minh, appeared recently in a Scandinavian newspaper. The French were immediately attentive, but they remained cautious. They said that if the offer was made "in an official manner", they would give it full consideration.

This news is not of an offer through formal diplomatic channels. But it is much more official than a story planted in a Scandinavian newspaper. It is a statement over the Vietminh radio, which is pretty close to being in "the official manner" which the French stipulated. "If the French government is sincere" the broadcast said, "and if it desires negotiations to end the war, our people and our government are ready to negotiate."

Premier Laniel has twice told the French Assembly that his government is not necessarily waiting for unconditional surrender of the Vietminh insurgents and would consider an end to the fighting by diplomatic means. It will be recalled that the Radical Socialist, Pierre Mendes-France, failed to become premier during the last government crisis, after campaigning as an advocate of a negotiated peace with Ho Chi Minh. Since he lost by only three votes, nearly half the Assembly may think well of the present offer.

The Vietminh peace feeler is a reminder that the Communists are able, and prefer, to deal with problems simultaneously, on a world-wide scope. The Western powers prefer taking a step at a time. Going to Berlin, the West expects to discuss no more than German unity and an Austrian treaty. The Communists consider Germany, Austria, Korea, the recognition of Red China and Indo-China as parts of a problem that cannot be settled piece-meal.

At the Big Four conference coming up, the Kremlin faces defeat in the battle to keep Germany from joining the West. What most easily would avert this defeat would be to "sour" the French on their Western Allies. The Pravda editorial and the Vietminh peace offer seem to be concocted for their souring effect. If the French are not aroused over the danger of re-arming the Germans, they now are being tempted with the prospect of an armistice in Indo-China.

And it is a temptation. The fighting there has gone on more than seven years - four years longer than the Korean war - and it has cost fifty thousand killed and missing, and in money more than the total aid received under the Marshall Plan. Even the optimists say the war in Indo-China cannot be won short of two more years, even with increased American help.

When the war started, it was frankly waged to keep a wealthy possession within the French empire. Since then the Indo-Chinese have been granted a large measure of political independence. It is true that the French insist on the Associated States remaining in the French Union, but as free and self-governing people, not as colonials. So the nature of the war has changed. The French find themselves holding communism at bay in Asia, and since the whole free world benefits, they believe it should share more of the burden.

At the Four Power conference Mr. Molotov will urge a world approach, in particular a Five Power meeting including Red China. He has already served notice to this effect. It is hardly a coincidence that at this moment the talks in Korea are deadlocked, and the French are being lured by the offer of a negotiated peace with Ho Chi Minh. These are issues in the world crisis, along with Germany.

A German settlement by itself, as the West wants it, appears to be out of the question at Berlin. If Mr. Molotov refuses a German settlement, and if in consequence the Germans do join the European Army, that would be a big Soviet defeat. But there still can be an off-setting Kremlin victory. All that Ho Chi Minh needs to demand in Indo-China is membership in the coalitions governing Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. He needs no more for once accepted, the Communists can in due course take over complete power as they did in all the European satellite countries. A negotiated peace with Ho Chi Minh on sterner terms is too much to expect. He is not that badly beaten. If he is to stop fighting, he has to be appeased, and if he is appeased, it is hard to see how communism can be kept from winning Indo-China from within.

Even to the United States this would mean losing as much as is at stake in Korea. It might even mean losing the maintenance of free governments on the mainland of Asia. Early in World War II, Vichy France let the Japanese into Indo-China, and that cost the Allies two of the bitterest years of war in their history. This time France, though harried and weary, is free. This time history should not need to repeat itself.

We were discussing the relation of history and the fears that it has a tendency to repeat itself. Those who take an more hopeful view might well turn to something Sir James Bryce and Lord Acton once said:" The secret of history is to know what to neglect...and the great object in trying to understand history is to get behind men and grasp ideas."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles said today that until we have an international agreement on atomic controls the free world must maintain the power "to strike back against any aggressor." Just before taking off for Paris with Defense Secretary Wilson, Mr. Dulles told reporters: The President's "great address" to the United Nations "boldly chartered the way to reduce the great peril of our time." He said: "We hope others will follow in that way. In any case, progress will of necessity be gradual." And the State Department revealed that before the President made his Tuesday speech our ambassador in Moscow, Charles Bohlen, had told Foreign Minister Molotov that the speech would be one of "seriousness and importance." Since then Bohlen handed Molotov a copy of the speech. A State Department spokesman said he doesn't know what else the two men may have discussed. And he said, so far, there has been no response from the Soviet government to the President's proposal for an international atomic energy pool.

Defense Secretary Wilson - before he took off for Paris - told reporters that the draft call for February will be dropped to 18-thousand from the monthly level of 23-thousand that's been maintained since last July. Wilson does not think the draft call will be cut further.

In Paris, the North Atlantic Military committee awaiting the arrival of Secretaries Dulles and Wilson announced its support of General Gruenther's demand for a big increase in the NATO airforce next year. Informed sources say Gruenther will ask the Council of Ministers for more than thirteen hundred planes next year.

In Oslo, Norway, General Marshal - accepting the Nobel peace prize - said today that the world now needs "a spiritual regeneration that would re-establish a feeling of good faith among men generally." He said: "Material assistance is not sufficient. Nations must learn that large armies are impractical tools for shaping peace. History books must be cleansed of nationalistic distortions so the youth of the world may see objectively why wars occur."

In Paris, West German Chancellor Adenauer said again that prompt establishment of a European army is essential to maintain the independence of Western Europe and preserve world peace.

And French Premier Laniel, just back from the Bermuda conference, ridiculed reports of French-British friction at the recent conference. He called this "an absurdity."

Iranian Premier Zehdi told reporters today that he is confident the Anglo-Iranian oil dispute can be settled soon "with justice and reason and with safeguards for the national prestige of Iran." Vice President Nixon was in Teheran today and received an honorary degree from Teheran University.

In Italy, a 24-hour strike by government workers who are seeking higher wages just about paralyzed railroad and postal service. And striking teachers kept many of the schools closed throughout the country.

There's been no change in the situation in Korea. Although Communist South Koreans who don't want to return home have refused to be interviewed unless given the opportunity to make long "counter-explanations."

Mrs. Portia Howe of Minnesota, who is now in Tokyo hoping to see her prisoner son who doesn't want to return home, told reporters today she is going to "wait and pray" that she may be given the opportunity to go to Korea. The Far Eastern command has refused to permit her to travel to Panmunjom.

In Indo-China the French have evacuated a city they recently vowed to defend. French officials say they withdrew because "The town itself is like a mousetrap" presumably a reference to the fact that its surrounded by high hills. In a minute I'd like to discuss the latest Communist offer to negotiate on the Indo China war.

In Washington today, House Speaker Martin told reporters he feels the President will seek re-election in 1956. And Martin predicts that the Republicans will gain 20 seats in next year's congressional elections.

Senator McCarthy said today that he has received a list of about 125 persons who, he says, are former Communists, who fled from Germany to the United States, secured their citizenship papers, and then returned to Germany to work for the American High Commissioner. McCarthy says this is "infiltration" and he plans to study the staff of the high commissioner.

Diplomatic storms often are heralded by a kind of diplomatic heat lightening. In the current news are two happenings that signal the approach to the Four Power Conference in Berlin. If one can call them heat lightening it is right to say they have played over the skies of France. One is an editorial in Pravda, the Moscow Communist newspaper, which makes skillful use of the flattery to which Frenchmen gladly respond, the discussion of France's place as a great power. It charges that her allies have kept France from occupying the place to which she is rightfully entitled.

The other event is more ominous, it is last night's new offer from the Communist insurgents in Indo-China, the Vietminh, to negotiate a peace. It will be recalled that an invitation to negotiate with the Vietminh leader, Ho Chi Minh, appeared recently in a Scandinavian newspaper. The French were immediately attentive, but they remained cautious. They said that if the offer was made "in an official manner" they would give it full consideration.

This news is not of an offer through formal diplomatic channels. But it is much more official than a story planted in a Scandinavian newspaper. It is a statement over the Vietminh radio which is pretty close to being in "the official manner" which the French stipulated. "If the French government is sincere" the broadcast said, "and if it desires negotiations to end the war, our people and our government are ready to negotiate."

Premier Laniel has twice told the French Assembly that his government is not necessarily waiting for unconditional surrender of the Vietminh insurgents and would consider an end to the fighting by diplomatic means. It will be recalled that the Radical Socialist, Pierre Mendes-France, failed to become premier during the last government crisis, after campaigning as an advocate of a negotiated peace with Ho Chi Minh. Since he lost by only three votes, nearly half the Assembly may think well of the present offer.

The Vietminh peace feeler is a reminder that the Communists are able, and prefer, to deal with problems simultaneously, on a world-wide scope. The Western powers prefer taking a step at a time. Going to Berlin, the West expects to discuss no more than German unity and an Austrian treaty. The Communists consider Germany, Austria, Korea, the recognition of Red China and Indo-China as parts of a problem that cannot be settled piece-meal.

At the Big Four conference coming up, the Kremlin faces defeat in the battle to keep Germany from joining the West. What most easily would avert this defeat would be to "sour" the French on their Western Allies. The Pravda editorial and the Vietminh peace offer seem to be concocted for their souring effect. If the French are not aroused over the danger of re-arming the Germans, they now are being tempted with the prospect of an armistice in Indo-China.

And it is a temptation. The fighting there has gone on more than seven years - four years longer than the Korean war - and it has cost fifty thousand killed and missing, and in money more than the total aid received under the Marshall Plan. Even the optimists say the war in Indo-China cannot be won short of two more years, even with increased American help.

When the war started, it was frankly waged to keep a wealthy possession within the French empire. Since then the Indo-Chinese have been granted a large measure of political independence. It is true that the French insist on the Associated States remaining in the French Union, but as free and self-governing people, not as colonials. So the nature of the war has changed. The French find themselves holding Communism at bay in Asia, and since the whole free world benefits, they believe it should share more of the burden.

At the Four Power conference Mr. Molotov will urge a world approach, in particular a Five Power meeting including Red China. He has already served notice to this effect. It is hardly a coincidence that at this moment the talks in Korea are deadlocked, and the French are being lured by the offer of a negotiated peace with Ho Chi Minh. These are issues in the world crisis, along with Germany.

A German settlement by itself, as the West wants it, appears to be out of the question at Berlin. If Mr. Molotov refuses a German settlement, and if in consequence the Germans do join the European Army, that would be a big Soviet defeat. But there still can be an off-setting Kremlin victory. All that Ho Chi Minh needs to demand in Indo-China is membership in the coalitions governing Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. He needs no more,for once accepted, the Communists can in due course take over complete power as they did in all the European satellite countries. A negotiated peace with Ho Chi Minh on sterner terms is too much to expect. He is not that badly beaten. If he is to stop fighting, he has to be appeased, and if he is appeased, it is hard to see how communism can be kept from winning Indo-China from within.

Even to the United States this would mean losing as much as is at stake in Korea. It might even mean losing the maintenance of free governments on the mainland of Asia. Early in World War II, Vichy France let the Japanese into IndoOChina, and that cost the Allies two of the bitterest years of war in their history. This time France, though harried and weary, is free. This time history should not need to repeat itself.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We were discussing the relation of history and the fears that it has a tendence to repeat itself. Those who take a more hopeful vies might well turn to something Sir James Bryce and Lord Acton once said: "The secret of history is to know what to neglect - and the great object in trying to understand history is to get behind men and grasp ideas."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday, Dec 14/1953

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles said in Paris today that if the nations of Europe decide to commit suicide by blundering into another war "they may have to commit it alone." [In a few minutes I'd like to examine both Mr. Dulles' statement to reporters, and a statement by French Foreign Minister Bidault.]

Mr. Dulles had nothing to say about the situation in Korea, where our ambassador Dean is leaving for Washington and "consultations", in a few hours. Dean told reporters at Panmunjom that the conference with the Communists could be resumed, if the enemy so desires. His aide, Kenneth Young, is standing by. Dean laid out, as a condition for resuming the meetings, that the enemy withdraw his charge that we are guilty of " perfidy". (faithlessness, treachery, breaking our word.) But today the Chinese Communist radio repeated the "perfidy" charge, and said the breakdown in the negotiations was due to what they called "the contemptible cold war policy of the United States."

General Thimaya, the Indian in charge of the repatriation of war prisoners, says he doubts that the 22 Americans who have chosen to REMAIN with the enemy are at all anxious to come home; he thinks they are trying to stall off allied "explanations" as to why they should return home. And in Tokyo, the mother of one of these men, Mrs. Portia Howe of Minnesota made public a letter she has received from her son; declaring his eagerness to stay with the Communists. Mrs. HOWE, a devout woman, says she will remain in Tokyo and has not given up her hope for the eventual return of her son. She read from Proverbs: "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." She asked reporters and all who would hear: "Where did I fail?"

Vice President Nixon today returned from his 45-thousand mile trip around the world. He told reporters in Washington: there is a great well of friendship in Asia for the American people despite efforts of the Communists to "build up hatred." Mr. Nixon said that if the Communists reject President Eisenhower's recent proposal for an international pool of atomic energy for peaceful purposes then the Communists "will lose tremendously among the people of Asia who desperately want peace."

The President today told a conference of 175 American mayors that for the first time in history our cities have become the principal targets for an enemy seeking to conquer our nation. He said: "The city has moved from a position of support in the rear out into the front line." He called on the mayors to prepare for a possible atomic attack without panic or hysteria. He said: "Ordered haste will save you and panic will destroy you. So it is first of all against the incidence of panic that we must be prepared." The President said we cannot be an armed camp..we're not going to transfer ourselves into militarists. But: "We are simply going to do our job..intelligently."

Admiral Radford, the chairman of the Joint chiefs of staff, said today that the joint chiefs feel our armed forces should be based on a greater use of airpower.. all-around atomic strength.. and eventually, fewer men. He says the President and the Defense Department agree that "this nation will maintain a national airpower superior to that of any other nation in the world." The Joint Chiefs would base their plans on a 20-year period.. so that we could win a limited war or an all-out war if it were forced upon us. He said atomic weapons today have reached "almost a conventional status" with our armed forces.

A Presidential Commission reported today that we could simultaneously operate a military training system and the draft... if we used a lottery. The lottery would determine which young men would get six months of military training and who would be required to serve two years as a draftee. The National Security Training Commission recommends that such a system start by January first of 1955. The commission chairman, Julius Ochs Adler, says he thinks this plan "can win approval" of Congress.

Russian Ambassador Zarubin called on acting secretary of state Smith today..spent 18 minutes with him.. then told reporters they had discussed:" lend-lease, nothing more." Later the State Department announced cancellation of a meeting scheduled to be held tomorrow on the lend-lease problem. The Russians oppose our proposals.

Federal District Judge Leahy today cleared the du Pont company of a charge that it created and maintained a monopoly of the cellophane business. Judge Leahy says duPont "should not be punished for its success."

Here in New York, Senator McCarthy told a witness who refused to say whether she had been a Communist that she should "apply for a job over at Harvard..that's a sanctuary for Communists." Mc Carthy also told the witness, Sylvia Berke, a public school clerk, that the president of Harvard "has publicly announced that he won't fire Communists."

At Harvard, Dr. Pusey was not available for comment.

Edward R. Murrow: December 14, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

There occurred in Paris today, a most remarkable dialogue between Secretary of State Dulles and French Foreign Minister Bidault. Part of it was in private, part at a news conference - but the despatches make clear the substance of what was said. Both men were warning of the catastrophic consequences which will befall the free world, unless their respective policies were approved. Mr. Dulles was pressing for French approval of the European Defense Community, which means a European Army, including German troops. He said that a French failure to approve this plan would force Washington to make "an agonising re-appraisal of its own basic policies toward Europe". In short, unless the French agree to the European Army plan, we will reconsider our European Army commitments, and may conclude that the best way to defend Europe is from air bases scattered round the edges. Mr. Dulles emphasized that Congress will want French ratification of the European Defense Community, before acting on appropriations for the next fiscal year. He said: "We are not so much interested in getting German troops, as we are in a situation in which the Western nations, especially France and Germany, will not commit suicide." And Mr. Dulles added: "If they decide to commit suicide, they may have to commit it alone."

Our Secretary of State also said that a Soviet attack does not now seem imminent, but the Soviet Union is making strides in its atomic weapons program, and there has been an increase in the "quality of danger from Russia." He also believes that the war against the communists in Indo-China can be concluded successfully within the next year; but he did not elaborate the military considerations that led him to this conclusion.

The French Foreign Minister agreed with Mr. Dulles on the ideal of European unity, based on French-German reconsiliation. But he warned, in solemn and grave terms, that a united Europe could not be formed in isolation - that a strong Anglo-American counterweight was needed to give balance to the European community. What he meant was that German power must be contained and channeled by Western leadership - that France alone could not contain or guide a resurgent Germany without British and American support and physical presence on the Continent. In short, the French want us and the British to agree to stay on the Continent indefinitely. Mr. Dulles contended that the North Atlantic Treaty commits us to twenty years, and that in his view and the President's it was a "durable treaty."

In this dialogue between Dulles and Bidault, there is to be found most solemn undertones. Each man knows the other's mind. Neither was trying to threaten, bludgeon or frighten the other into doing what he wanted him to do. From Mr. Dulles there was the ~~solemn~~ hard warning that our Congress and the American people will not long co-operate complacently with a Europe which fails to take what we regard as the necessary steps towards unity. Bidault was saying that the French can't take the risk of embracing the Germans as brothers in arms, unless the Americans and the British agree more firmly than they have so far, to stay on the Continent and make the plan work.

This was not a personal argument between two men, for each was talking over the other's shoulder. Dulles was addressing himself to the French politicians and editors who have so far blocked ratification of the European Defense Community. He was warning them of the consequences of continued refusal or prolonged delay. Bidault, likewise, was talking not so much to Dulles as to the American Congress and people; trying to persuade them that the French Parliament and people remain unwilling to see the Germans re-armed, unless the British and ourselves strengthen and deepen our existing commitments - in other words promise that under no circumstances will we allow the French and Germans once again to contend for power and dominance on the Continent.

It seems to this reporter that both men stated the obvious, and in unusually blunt terms. If the French refuse to agree to the European Army plan, then we will of necessity have to reconsider our whole European foreign policy, because that plan is the very heart of our policy; without that we wouldn't have any policy left, unless it be one of massive retaliatory power based on airfields around the edges of Europe. And unless the French can be persuaded that the British and ourselves will guarantee them against renewed German competition and aggression, over a long period of time, they won't agree to the plan. On this issue hinges not only the twenty billion we have put into Europe since the end of the war, but our whole European foreign policy. #This dilemma has been taking shape for some time. But today in Paris it was thoroughly unveiled. As David Schoenbrun cables me from Paris tonight, the diplomats there are like a man who has known for months that he would have to have a serious operation, and then suddenly, at a routine check-up, hears the doctor say that he must undergo major ~~XXXXXX~~ surgery immediately.

The French are obviously suspicious of their German neighbors. And are not inclined to make any major moves, without assurances of backing from the British and ourselves. Actually, what they want are promises. And it may be as Sam Slick once said that "mankind lives on promises." But it is equally true, as Charles Spurgeon concluded that "often promises don't fill the belly."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles said in Paris today that if the nations of Europe decide to commit suicide by blundering into another war "they may have to commit it alone." I'd like to examine in a few minutes both Mr. Dulles' statement to reporters and a statement by French Foreign Minister Bidault.

Mr. Dulles had nothing to say about the situation in Korea where our ambassador Dean is leaving for Washington and "consultations" in a few hours. Dean told reporters at Panmunjom that the conference with the Communists could be resumed if the enemy so desires. His aide, Kenneth Young, is standing by. Dean laid out as a condition for resuming the meetings that the enemy withdraw his charge that we are guilty of "perfidy" faithlessness, treachery, breaking our word. But today the Chinese Communist radio repeated the "perfidy" charge and said the breakdown in the negotiations was due to what they called "the contemptible cold war policy of the United States."

General Thimaya, the Indian in charge of the repatriation of war prisoners, says he doubts that the 22 Americans who have chosen to remain with the enemy are at all anxious to come home; he thinks they are trying to stall off allied explanations as to why they should return home. And in Tokyo, the mother of one of these men, Mrs. Portia Howe of Minnesota, made public a letter she has received from her son; declaring his eagerness to stay with the Communists. Mrs. Howe, a devout woman, says she will remain in Tokyo and has not given up her hope for the eventual return of her son. She read from Proverbs: "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." She asked reporters and all who would hear: "Where did I fail?"

Vice President Nixon today returned from his 45-thousand mile trip around the world. He told reporters in Washington: there is a great well of friendship in Asia for the American people despite efforts of the Communists to "build up hatred." Mr. Nixon said that if the Communists reject President Eisenhower's recent proposal for an international pool of atomic energy for peaceful purposes then the Communists "will lose tremendously among the people of Asia who desperately want peace."

The President today told a conference of 175 American mayors that for the first time in history our cities have become the principal targets for an enemy seeking to conquer our nation. He said: "The city has moved from a position of support in the rear out into the front line." He called on the mayors to prepare for a possible atomic attack without panic or hysteria. He said: "Ordered haste will save you and panic will destroy you. So it is first of all against the incidenc of panic that we must be prepared." The President said we cannot be an armed camp; we're not going to transfer ourselves into militarists. But: "We are simply going to do our job - intelligently."

Admiral Radford, the chairman of the Joint chiefs of staff, said today that the joint chiefs feel our armed forces should be based on a greater use of air-power - all-around atomic strength - and eventually, fewer men. He says the President and the Defense Department agree that "this nation will maintain a national airpower superior to that of any other nation in the world." The Joint Chiefs would base their plans on a 20-year period - so that we could win a limited war or an all-out war if it were forced upon us. He said atomic weapons today have reached "almost a conventional status" with our armed forces.

A Presidential Commission reported today that we could simultaneously operate a military training system and the draft - if we used a lottery. The lottery would determine which young men would get six months of military training and who would be required to serve two years as a draftee. The National Secretary Training Commission recommends that such a system start by January first of 1955. The commission chairman, Julius O. Adler, says he thinks this plan "can win approval" of Congress.

Russian Ambassador Zarubin called on acting secretary of state Smith today - spent 18 minutes with him - then told reporters they had discussed: "lend-lease, nothing more." Later the State Department announced cancellation of a meeting scheduled to be held tomorrow on the lend-lease problem. The Russians oppose our proposals.

Federal District Judge Leahy today cleared the du Pont company of a charge that it created and maintained a monopoly of the cellophane business. Judge Leahy says duPont "should not be punished for its success."

Here in New York, Senator McCarthy told a witness who refused to say whether she had been a Communist that she should "apply for a job over at Harvard - that's a sanctuary for Communists." McCarthy also told the witness, Sylvia Berke, a public school clerk, that the president of Harvard "has publicly announced that he won't fire Communists." At Harvard, Dr. Pusey was not available for comment.

There occurred in Paris today a most remarkable dialogue between Secretary of State Dulles and French Foreign Minister Bidault. Part of it was in private, part at a news conference - but the despatches make clear the substance of what was said. Both men were warning of the catastrophic consequences which will befall the free world, unless their respective policies were approved. Mr. Dulles was pressing for French approval of the European Defense Community, which means a European Army including German troops. He said that a French failure to approve this plan would force Washington to make "an agonizing re-appraisal of its own basic policies toward Europe."

In short, unless the French agree to the European Army plan we will reconsider our European Army commitments, and may conclude that the best way to defend Europe is from air bases scattered round the edges. Mr. Dulles emphasized that Congress will want French ratification of the European Defense Community before acting on appropriations for the next fiscal year. He said: "We are not so much interested in getting German troops as we are in a situation in which the Western nations especially France and Germany, will not commit suicide." And Mr. Dulles added:

"If they decide to commit suicide, they may have to commit it alone."

Our Secretary of State also said that a Soviet attack does not now seem imminent, but the Soviet Union is making strides in its atomic weapons program, and there has been an increase in the "quality of danger from Russia." He also believes that the war against the communists in Indo-China can be concluded successfully within the next year; but he did not elaborate the military considerations that led him to this conclusion.

The French Foreign Minister agreed with Mr. Dulles on the ideal of European unity, based on French-German reconciliation. But he warned, in solumn and grave terms, that a united Europe could not be formed in isolation - that a strong Anglo-American counterweight was needed to give balance to the European community. What he meant was that German power must be contained and channeled by Western leadership - that France alone could not contain or guide a resurgent Germany without British and American support and physical presence on the Continent. In short, the French want us and the British to agree to stay on the Continent indefinitely. Mr. Dulles contended that the North Atlantic Treaty commits us to twenty years, and that in his view and the President's it was a "durable treaty."

In this dialogue between Dulles and Bidault, there is to be found most solemn undertones. Each man knows the other's mind. Neither was trying to threaten, bludgeon or frighten the other into doing what he wanted him to do. From Mr. Dulles there was the hard warning that our Congress and the American people will not long co-operate complacently with a Europe which fails to take what we regard as the necessary steps towards unity. Bidault was saying that the French can't take the risk of embracing the Germans as brothers in arms, unless the Americans and the British agree more firmly than they have so far, to stay on the Continent and make the plan work.

This was not a personal argument between two men, for each was talking over the other's shoulder. Dulles was addressing himself to the French politicians and editors who have so far blocked ratification of the European Defense Community. He was warning them of the consequences of continued refusal or prolonged delay. Bidault, likewise, was talking not so much to Dulles as to the American Congress and people; trying to persuade them that the French Parliament and people remain unwilling to see the Germans re-armed, unless the British and ourselves strengthen and deepen our existing commitments - in other words promise that under no circumstances will we allow the French and Germans once again to contend for power and cominance on the Continent.

It seems to this reporter that both men stated the obvious, and in unusually blunt terms. If the French refuse to agree to the European Army plan, then we will of necessity have to reconsider our whole European foreign policy, because that plan is the very heart of our policy; without that, we wouldn't have any policy left, unless it be one of massive retaliatory power based on airfields around the edges of Europe. And unless the French can be persuaded that the British and ourselves will guarantee them against renewed German competition and aggression, over a long period of time, they won't agree to the plan. On this issue hinges not only the twenty billion we have put into Europe since the end of the war, but our whole European foreign policy. This dilemma has been taking shape for some time. But today in Paris it was thoroughly unveiled. As David Schoenbrun cables me from Paris tonight, the diplomats there are like a man who has known for months that he would have to have a serious operation, and then suddenly, at a routine check-up, hears the doctor say that he must undergo major surgery immediately.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The French are obviously suspicious of their German neighbors. And are not inclined to make any major moves without assurances of backing from the British and ourselves. Actually, what they want are promises. And it may be as Sam Slick once said that "mankind lives on promises." But it is equally true, as Charles Spurgeon concluded that "often promises don't fill the belly."

Good Nite and Godd Luck!

Tuesday, December 15, 1953

This is the news:

Defense Secretary Wilson said in Paris today, that the President is going to ask Congress to amend our atomic energy law. (so we can share information on atomic weapons with our allies in Western Europe.) Wilson also promised to equip our allies with the latest weapons.. (some of them presumably to be atomic weapons.) And he said we'll increase our air forces in Europe next year. The Council of Ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization voted today to increase the air forces of NATO by 25 per cent, with a 15 per cent increase in naval forces, and a five per cent ground force increase. And General Grunther, the NATO commander, told the ministers the buildup of NATO forces since 1951 has been "fantastic".

OFFICIALS of our west European allies, today were inclined to take a calmer approach, in public, than newspapers in their countries have taken towards Secretary of State Dulles. Mr. Dulles SAID yesterday, that France must ratify the European army plan soon or face an American "re-appriasal of our European policies." French and British newspapers called this: "a brutal ultimatum.. folly... at best left unsaid."

But French Vice Premier Reynaud is reported to have told a secret cabinet meeting: Dulles was perfectly justified..he could have used more diplomatic language; but the important thing is that he spoke the truth. British Defense Minister, Field Marshal Lord Alexander said; "The Americans have spent billions and billions of dollars in Europe and they want to see results. " Chancellor Adenauer's party in West Germany calls the Dulles statement "logical and natural." The Belgian foreign minister says its time for west europe to say "yes or no" to the European army plan. The Dutch Foreign Minister told reporters: "In dealing with the French it is sometimes necessary to be very clear." Italian Premier Pella thinks it was "a very courageous statement."

In Korea today, Ambassador Dean turned down a Communist request for an immediate renewal of the talks he broke off when the Communists accused us of "perfidy." Dean says the enemy repeated the insult today. But--before leaving for Washington in a few hours--he told reporters he thinks the Communists want a Korean peace conference and he feels that eventually they'll retract the statement. The Moscow radio accuses us of breaking off the talks as part of what it calls "a long-term manuver for wrecking the armistice."

Indian General Thimaya said today that his troops will release all prisoners still in their control, on January 22nd. This is what the allies have been demanding, against Communist opposition. But Thimaya says he is "worried" by what will happen when the prisoners..on both sides.. are set free. And the Indian GENERAL told reporters today, he does not think the 22 Americans who want to stay with the Communists, will ever agree to return to our lines. He talked with the men today and says he's convinced they have firm political beliefs in Communism. Thimaya says all of the Americans "are dying for news".. he told them something of what's happened in the world in recent weeks, and he reports that they considered this "a good day."

In Washington today the Mayors conference sent the White House a memorandum blaming "public apathy" toward civil defense, on the failure of Congress to "take civil defense seriously."

A special presidential commission has proposed an attack on slums and the "decay" that blight American cities and towns. The Commission endorses the "need" for government-subsidized low-cost housing. It recommends that the government spend millions, to help restore run-down neighborhoods.

A Senate committee "task force"--headed by Republican Senator Mundt of South Dakota, today called the late Harry Dexter White "a notorious communist agent". He's accused of plotting to influence our government to give Russia German occupation currency at the end of World War Two.

And Senator Mc Carthy said today his investigating committee does not have the job of proving espionage... but merely to alert security officers to it. He says that up to the first of this year "there was practically no concern for the security of our secrets."

The Democratic National Committee today issued a 16-page "fact sheet" SAYING that under the Democrats the federal government "had the most successful record of any free country in crushing" Communist subversion. Among other things the Democratic record says: 83 Communist leaders were prosecuted under the Smith act. And nine persons were convicted of espionage and related activities. House Republican Leader Martin calls this "bunkum politics."

The White House says the President will fly to Augusta, Georgia, on Christmas Day..or the day after. He may stay through New Year's day while working on the State of the Union address and other messages he'll send to Congress in January.

Edward R. Murrow: December 15, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

The problem of the equal distribution of the sacrifices of military service seems to be one of the hardest nuts that the government and its advisers have to crack. Nobody will pretend that it is solved by present practices, which keep thousands of veterans of World War II under arms while many more thousands of young men are not called into service at all. That is highly inequitable. The only excuse for it is that a better practise has not been found. Now the President's Commission on National Security Training recommends what it considers a better procedure. Writing what is actually a substitute for the kind of universal military training defeated by the last Congress, it proposes to keep the draft with two years' service, and in addition introduce a program of six months' military training for another set of young men. The decision as to which kind of service the young men are to undergo would be made by a drawing of names, in other words, a kind of lottery.

Terence, the Latin dramatist, said that life was like a game of dice. Voltaire called it a game of chance. It has often been said that life is a lottery. But this idea has not yet been accepted as our basic national philosophy. The proposal that a young man should roll the dice to decide whether to serve his country for two years or six months is putting a strange price-mark on the duties of citizenship.

And while a drawing of names isn't literally the rolling of dice, we imagine that Terence and Voltaire would agree that it amounts to the same thing. National service is a grave matter. Nothing a nation does is graver than taking two years of duty from its young men, at the possible risk of their lives. If the nation is a democracy, the utmost measure of equality must prevail in apportioning the obligations of service. This the President's commission recognizes. The first finding in its recommendation reads: "All should share equally the obligation to serve the nation." But it goes on to propose a system in which the equality is not in the term of a service, but in an equal submission to a gamble. That is a curious place for equality to stop. And it is not too much to say that the commission by introducing the element of the gamble is undermining the concept of national service. It makes it something that by luck can be escaped. A soldier now serving in Korea after having seen active duty in World War II may be embittered by the thought that hordes of his generation haven't done any service whatever. But it seems a poor remedy that they should lay the blame on the outcome of a lottery.

Congress is reported today to be unfavorable to the lottery idea, since it has consistently objected to the legalization of lotteries. # This reporter should explain that he is not objecting to a lottery as such. He has often been fascinated by the thought of the revenues that would flood to the Treasury of the United States - in place of income + Corporate - taxes - if the gambling instincts of the nation were suitably exploited for the public good in a national lottery. But a distinction must be drawn between gambling voluntarily under treasury auspices in a lottery with money prizes, and being compelled to gamble under the auspices of the Defense Department for escape from eighteen months of national service. # If gambling is to be legalized, a far better place to begin would seem to be with the cash gamblers freely risked in a government lottery. A start should not be made in gambling for lives.

The President's commission foresees a system that would be giving six months of training to a possible million-and-a-half young men by 1960. These men in an emergency would complete their training in quicker time than those without training. The commission rightly says this is a better system than the one in force before World Wars I and II. # Unfortunately the experience of those wars does not necessarily apply to a future war. The commission makes this statement: "If there is another World War we will probably be attacked first or early in the conflict. If we do not have trained fighting men beforehand, we will not have time to train them afterwards. In peacetime we cannot possibly maintain active forces large enough to insure victory in war." But in the art of war as now developing there may not be time to complete the training of even partially trained men, certainly not for adequate defense.

It also is at least questionable whether a direct attack will be made on the United States. Much more likely is an attack on outposts vital to American security, and there immediate defense by fully trained forces would be essential. It does not solve the problem of deterring or meeting attack on these outposts to have partially trained men in the reserves. Only if the conflict dragged out, as in Korea, would reserves become vital.

The report of the commission deserves study as a discussion of one of the country's most difficult problems. But as it stands it is more of a preparation for World War II than of World War III. And it underscores, without solving it, the problem of apportioning military service with scrupulous equality.

How to maintain an efficient and equitable method of keeping our armed services supplied with manpower has yet to be resolved. Appropriately, two hundred years ago the Frenchman Vovnarg remarked:"Nothing is more plausible in theory than equality but nothing is more impracticable." And Alfred Martin once added;"The supreme worth of life is not wealth, not ease, nor fame or even happiness - but service. Nothing else counts."

Good Nite and Good Luck.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Defense Secretary Wilson said in Paris today that the President is going to ask Congress to amend our atomic energy law so we can share information on atomic weapons with our allies in Western Europe. Wilson also promised to equip our allies with the latest weapons - some of them presumably to be atomic weapons. And he said we'll increase our air forces in Europe next year. The Council of Ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization voted today to increase the air forces of NATO by 25 percent with a 15 percent increase in naval forces and a five percent ground force increase. And General Grunther, the NATO commander, told the ministers the buildup of NATO forces since 1951 has been "fantastic."

Officials of our west European allies today were inclined to take a calmer approach in public than newspapers in their countries have taken towards Secretary of State Dulles. Mr. Dulles said yesterday that France must ratify the European army plan soon or face an American "re-appraisal of our European policies." French and British newspapers called this: "a brutal ultimatum - folly - at best left unsaid." But French Vice Premier Reynaud is reported to have told a secret cabinet meeting: Dulles was perfectly justified - he could have used more diplomatic language; but the important thing is that he spoke the truth. British Defense Minister, Field Marshal Lord Alexander said: "The Americans have spent billions and billions of dollars in Europe and they want to see results. "Chancellor Adenauer's party in West Germany calls the Dulles statement "logical and natural." The Belgian foreign minister says its time for west Europe to say "yes or no" to the European army plan. The Dutch Foreign Minister told reporters: "In dealing with the French it is sometimes necessary to be very clear." Italian Premier Pella thinks it was "a very courageous statement."

In Korea today, Ambassador Dean turned down a Communist request for an immediate renewal of the talks he broke off when the Communists accused us of

"perfidy." Dean says the enemy repeated the insult today. But before leaving for Washington in a few hours, he told reporters he thinks the Communists want a Korean peace conference and he feels that eventually they'll retract the statement. The Moscow radio accuses us of breaking off the talks as part of what it calls "a long-term manuever for wrecking the armistice."

Indian General Thimaya said today that his troops will release all prisoners still in their control on January 22nd. This is what the allies have been demanding against Communist opposition. But Thimaya says he is "worried" by what will happen when the prisoners on both sides are set free. And the Indian General told reporters today he does not think the 22 Americans who want to stay with the Communists will ever agree to return to our lines. He talked with the men today and says he's convinced they have firm political beliefs in Communism. Thimaya says all of the Americans "are dying for news" - he told them something of what's happened in the world in recent weeks and he reports that they considered this "a good day."

In Washington today the Mayors conference sent the White House a memorandum blaming "public apathy" toward civil defense on the failure of Congress to "take civil defense seriously."

A special presidential commission has proposed an attack on slums and the "decay" that blight American cities and towns. The Commission endorses the "need" for government-subsidized low-cost housing. It recommends that the government spend millions to help restore run-down neighborhoods.

A Senate committee "task force" headed by Republican Senator Mundt of South Dakota, today called the late Harry Dexter White "a notorious Communist agent." He's accused of plotting to influence our government to give Russia German occupation currency at the end of World War Two.

And Senator McCarthy said today his investigating committee does not have the job of proving espionage but merely to alert security officers to it. He says that up to the first of this year "there was practically no concern for the security of our secrets."

The Democratic National Committee today issued a 16-page "fact sheet" saying that under the Democrats the federal government "had the most successful record of any free country in crushing" Communist subversion. Among other things the Democratic record says: 83 Communist leaders were prosecuted under the Smith act, and nine persons were convicted of espionage and related activities. House Republican Leader Martin calls this "bumkum politics."

The White House says the President will fly to Augusta, Georgia, on Christmas Day or the day after. He may stay through New Year's day while working on the State of the Union address and other messages he'll send to Congress in January.

The problem of the equal distribution of the sacrifices of military service seems to be one of the hardest nuts that the government and its advisers have to crack. Nobody will pretend that it is solved by present practices, which keep thousands of veterans of World War II under arms while many more thousands of young men are not called into service at all. That is highly inequitable. The only excuse for it is that a better practice has not been found. Now the President's Commission on National Security Training recommends what it considers a better procedure. Writing what is actually a substitute for the kind of universal military training defeated by the last Congress, it proposes to keep the draft with two years' service, and in addition introduce a program of six months' military training for another set of young men. The decision as to which kind of service the young men are to undergo would be made by a drawing of names, in other words, a kind of lottery.

Terence, the Latin dramatist, said that life was like a game of dice. Voltaire called it a game of chance. It has often been said that life is a lottery. But this idea has not yet been accepted as our basic national philosophy. The proposal that a young man should roll the dice to decide whether to serve his country for two years or six months is putting a strange price-mark on the duties of citizenship.

And while a drawing of names isn't literally the rolling of dice, we imagine that Terence and Voltaire would agree that it amounts to the same thing. National service is a grave matter. Nothing a nation does is graver than taking two years of duty from its young men, at the possible risk of their lives. If the nation is a democracy the utmost measure of equality must prevail in apportioning the obligations of service. This the President's commission recognizes. The first finding in its recommendation reads: "All should share equally the obligation to serve the nation." But it goes on to propose a system in which the eqality is not in the terms of a service, but in an equal submission to a gamble. That is a curious place for equality to stop. And it is not too much to say that the commission by introducing the element of the gamble is undermining the concept of national service. It makes it something that by luck can be escaped. A soldier now serving in Korea after having seen active duty in World War II may be embittered by the thought that hordes of his generation haven't done any service whatever. But it seems a poor remedy that they should lay the blame on the outcome of a lottery.

Congress is reported today to be unfavorable to the lottery idea, since it has consistently objected to the legalization of lotterois. This reporter should explain that he is not objecting to a lottery as such. He has often been fascinated by the thought of the revenues that would flood to the Treasury of the United States - in place of income and corporate taxes - if the gambling instincts of the nation were suitably exploited for the public good in a national lottery. But a distinction must be drawn between gambling voluntarily under treasury auspices in a lottery with money prizes, and being compelled to gamble under the auspices of the Defense Department for escape from eighteen months of national service. If gambling is to be legalized, a far better place to begin would seem to be with the cash gamblers freely risked in a givernment lottery. A start should not be made in gambling for lives.

The President's commission foresees a system that would be giving six months of training to a possible million-and-a half young men by 1960. These men in an emergency would complete their training in quicker time than those without training. The commission rightly says this is a better system than the one in force before World Wars I and II. Unfortunately the experience of those wars does not necessarily apply to a future war. The commission makes this statement: "If there is another World War we will probably be attacked first or early in the conflict. If we do not have trained fighting men beforehand, we will not have time to train them afterwards. In peacetime we cannot possibly maintain active forces large enough to insure victory in war." But in the art of war as now developing there may not be time to complete the training of even partially trained men, certainly not for adequate defense.

It also is at least questionable whether a direct attack will be made on the United States. Much more likely is an attack on outposts vital to American security, and there immediate defense by fully trained forces would be essential. It does not solve the problem of deterring or meeting attack on these outposts to have partially trained men in the reserve. Only if the conflict dragged out, as is Korea, would reserves become vital.

The report of the commission deserves study as a discussion of one of the country's most difficult problems. But as it stands it is more of a preparation for World War II than of World War III. And it underscores, without solving it, the problem of apportioning military service with scrupulous equality.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: How to maintain an efficient and equitable method of keeping our armed services supplied with manpower has yet to be resolved. Appropriately, two hundred years ago the Frenchman Vovnarg remarked: "Nothing is more plausible in theory than equality but nothing is more impracticable." And Alfred Martin once added: "The supreme worth of life is not wealth, not ease, nor fame or even happiness - but service. Nothing else counts."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday, Dec 16, 1953

This is the news:

The President said today that he's determined to keep working for international control of atomic energy..no matter what the Russians officially say about his latest plan. Mr. Eisenhower says, even if the Russians turn down his plan for an international pool of atomic energy to be used for peaceful purposes he will keep trying to solve the problem. And as for our allies...the President will ask Congress for a ~~limited~~ change in our atomic energy law so that we can give them "very limited information". This would not include anything about the processes or techniques of building weapons, [redacted]

In one respect it was an unusual news conference Mr. Eisenhower held today. Because, later, the White House made available to the radio networks a recording of everything he said. Tonight over many of these stations at [redacted] 10 P.M. EASTERN TIME you will hear a Presidential news conference..for the first time.

The President [redacted] was asked about Secretary of State Dulles statment in Paris that we may have to have an "agonizing re-appraisal" of our obligations to Western Europe — if the European army plan is not quickly approved. The President said he's somewhat astomished that this caused so much of a fuss.. that anyone felt there was anything new in it. Mr. Eisenhower pointed out that under the Richards amendment to the foreign aid bill, beginning next year, 50 per cent of our military aid to Europe must be channeled through the European Defense Community. At the moment this has not been set up. So the President asked: "What do we do?"

Mr. Eisenhower also commended Vice President and Mrs. Nixon for their "splendid job" on a tour around the world...and he said that at his conferences with Republican congressional leaders, beginning tomorrow, he will accept a modification of the details of his legislative program but not of its principles. The President said: "This is one Administration that believes in carrying out its promises." [redacted]

The Soviet government tonight made public detailed charges against former DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER AND Secret Police Chief Beria. The government newspaper Izvestia says Beria has admitted that he was guilty of: trying to place his secret police organization.. the ministry of internal affairs.. above the Communist party and above the Soviet government. The Russians says Beria wanted to seize power, liquidate the Soviet system, and set up capitalism and the rule of the ~~bourgeoisie.~~ BOURGEOISIE Today's announcement lists other plotters: a former minister of state control.. former minister of internal affairs in Georgia (where Beria was born).. former deputy minister of internal affairs in the Soviet Union.. two former secret police chiefs.. a former chief of investigators.. The announcement says Beria started his so-called "traitorous activities" [redacted] at the time of the revolution. We are now told.. more than five [redacted] months after his arrest that Beria will soon stand trial. [redacted] possible to [redacted] Soviet [redacted] "brought into court for trial."

Moscow radio also says that Premir Malenkov has had a cordial meeting with Otto Grotewhol, the prime minister of Communist east Germany.

In Korea today, a South Korean who escaped from an enemy prison camp says that at least three of the 22 Americans held by the Communists really want to go home.

In Washington, Attorney General Brownell told a commission studying JUDICIAL and congressional salaries that the Administration favors a 10-thousand dollar a year raise for federal judges. (who now make from 15-thousand to Chief Justice Warren's salary...$25,500) The Administration also would raise the salaries of representatives and Senators to 25-thousand a year. (They now make $12,500 plus $2500 in expenses.)

Here in New York, a state committee investigating charities was told that the Disabled American Veterans Foundation spent 79 per cent of the FUNDS it collected for raising the money. The Fund..which raised 21-million dollars in three years..spent 18 per cent of it for welfare purposes. And the organization was accused of using President Eisenhower's name and that of former President Truman without authorization. An official of the fund acknowledged that none of the money was used for direct aid to INDIVIDUAL veterans. He said the PURPOSE of the organization is to give veterans counsel and advice.

Senator Mc Carthy today heard a witness refuse to answer certain questions because, he said, he was acting on the advice of the scientist Albert Einstein. The witness, Albert Shadowitz, voluntarily said he never engaged in espionage work. But he refused to [redacted]m cooperate with the McCarthy committee or "any other committee of a similar nature."

The National Labor Relations Board has ordered an election before next Wednesday night to determine what union shall represent 25-thousand longshoremen in the port of New York. And a vice president of the longshoreman's union that was recently ousted from the A.F. of L. said today that John L. Lewis of the coal miners has loaned the union 50-thousand dollars.

The AF of L. and the C.I.O. have formally signed an agreement not to take over union members who are already organized in unions.

And the Air Force says Major Charles Yeager has flown a Bell x- 1 A rocket plane "more than 1600 miles an hour." That's more than twice the speed of sound..more than two miles per second.

Edward R. Murrow: December 16, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Today the Council of Ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization - fourteen of them - wound up their meeting in Paris. President Eisenhower's proposal for a world bank of atomic energy was "warmly endorsed." The final communique declared again that the European Defense Community, including German military power, is essential to the defense of the West. The Ministers "noted with satisfaction" that Congress will be asked for authorisation to permit us to give our Allies certain information about atomic weapons. The Ministers also agreed that Russian strategy and objectives - the domination of the world by communism - have not changed, even though they have agreed to sit down at a Four Power meeting in Berlin.

There was another echo of Mr. Dulles' statement that unless the French ratify the European Defense Community, we may have to re-appraise our whole policy - the Foreign Affairs Committee of the French Assembly said, in effect, that it will not be influenced or pushed by any intervention from whatever source it comes, even from the "best friends of France."

This meeting of the NATO council was overshadowed by the blunt warning from our Secretary of State. Dave Schoenbrun cables from Paris that there was in fact a new climate of confidence and progress discernible, despite

Mr. Dulles' dramatic threat. General Gruenther, who employs words cautiously, called the military progress "fantastic". For next year the Council decided on seven new divisions, as well as increased air and naval power. It is no longer true that all the Russians need to reach the ~~XXX~~ Channel is shoe leather. The Western strength, even without German participation, is now sufficient to require full mobilization by the Russians, and a huge build-up of rolling stock and dumps to a point where Western intelligence would have plenty of advance warning. # The West is still short of tactical air, but both the progress and the plans must be deemed encouraging.

A measure of the Russian plans was revealed today by Walter Ulbricht. He is the Secretary of the Communist Party in Eastern Germany, and the recognized mouthpiece of Moscow. # Today Ulbricht formally proposed that both East and West Germany be invited to send representatives to the Four Power Conference scheduled for Berlin in early January. This proposal must be regarded as a combined trial balloon and a delaying tactic. ~~This~~ IT HAS BEEN REJECTED BY THE STATE DEPARTMENT AND IS CERTAIN ~~proposal is certain to be turned down by the Western Powers, as well as by~~ TO BE TURNED DOWN BY the West German Government. West German Chancellor Adenauer has said that his government would not even ask for an observer at the Conference, because he said: "This would put us at the same table with the East German Communist Government, and would imply recognition of that government, which we don't want to do."

Russian propaganda in recent weeks indicates that they are trying to separate two areas of discussion. # They want the abandonment of the European Defense Community and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization; and secondly, they want the isolation and the neutralization of Germany. # Specifically, Moscow has been wooing France with the argument, that she is threatened on two sides - by domineering Allies on the one hand, and by a dynamic and predatory Germany on the other. # The Russians are waving the bloody shirt of a revived Germn militarism, not only at France, but at the rest of Western Europe. And there is a terrible lot of blood on that shirt.

A secondary objective of the Russians, is to get the East and West German governments together, on an equal basis, as though they were indeed similar in nature and purpose. # The Communists are never worried by contradictions in their own ~~XXXXXXXXXXX~~ propaganda. For example, in Ulbricht's speech today he made another appeal for private negotiations between Western and Eastern Germany. In the next breath he belabored the West German leaders as hirelings of Anglo-American imperialists, Hitlerian fascists, and warmongers; men, who if they get arms again, plan to deprive France of her sovereignty, honor and traditions. At the same time he offered to negotiate trade, travel and cultural agreements with these same leaders. And he went on to promise the West Germans that if Germany were re-united the country could have its own armed forces, and could as he put it, "pursue an independent foreign policy." Ulbricht was trying to aim the same speech at the French and at the West Germans, and the objective is clear: to divide Western Europe, isolate Germany, and then undermine both.

If it becomes necessary for us to "re-appraise" our policy in regard to Western Europe, it will have to be done in the light of the knowledge that that is what Russian policy is; and that no single nation in the alliance can commit suicide without wounding us seriously in the process.

In the unending cold war, the Russians are not averse to the use of pressure when it serves their ends. For they know, as did Frances Willard, that "success doesn't just happen." Probably Jean De La Bruyere was right when he remarked:"There are only two ways ~~in~~ of getting on in the world: by one's own industry or by the stupidity of others."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Thursday, Dec. 17, 1953

This is the news:

Prime Minister Churchill says he thinks he has convinced the President and the French of the " justice and advantage" of offering the Russians a guarantee against aggression. In a speech to the House of Commons Sir Winston said: "The Soviet Union is entitled to assurance against aggression after what she suffered at Hitler's hands." And he hopes that at the Berlin meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers there will be some agreement "to provide Russia with a sense of security arising from other facts than mere force." The members of parliament cheered loudly as Sir Winston continued: "The world is in need of that"" CHURCHILL also made reference to President Eisenhower's recent speech proposing an international pool of atomic energy for peaceful purposes. He called this "one of the most important events in world history since the end of the war".. a possible turning point in history. He added: "I fervently hope that the Soviet Union will not ignore this beam of light amid so much darkness and confusion.." He thinks the President's speech might end the long deadlock over atomic energy.. and might afford an opportunity to make contact with the Russians "on the highest level."/Again the prime minister spoke of the necessity for good Anglo-American relations, and he said:"It would be a pity for those relations to be expressed in McCarthy-Bevanite terms.".. a reference to Senator McCarthy and Left Wing Laborite Aneurin Bevan./And again he stressed the importance of the French joining the European army plan.

The French parliament today took two ballots on electing a new president. And on each, the leading candidate was Marcel Naegelen, a Socialist, former governor of Algeria, and a man opposed to the European plan. But he did not get a majority and the parliament adjourned until tomorrow.

Secretary of State Dulles returned to Washington, from the North Atlantic powers meeting in Paris. He told reporters he was "much encouraged" by the progress of the NATO alliance.. He's convinced, its a "very substantial deterrent to war."/Defense Secretary Wilson.. also returning from Paris.. was asked about reports that we might cut off foreign aid if the European army is not ratified by the French. Wilson said: "That would not be my way of going about it."

The President today met with cabinet members, administration leaders and the top Republicans in Congress. It was the first of three meetings to draw up a legislative program for Congress. The President told his advisors: he knows they'll succeed in giving the nation a forward-looking, progressive program. And he let it be known he'll speak on radio and television on the night of January 4th to report on what the Administration has done to date.. and sketch the pattern of his program for next year. DURING today's 10- hour meeting, Chairman Taber of the House Appropriations Committee said he expects budget cuts "all down the line." But Chairman Short of the house Armed Services committee said "there can some saving.. but not much."

The Department of Agriculture in a final estimate on this year's crops reports a near-record output "despite a severe drought in a large part of the country." And the Defense Department, acknowledging pressure from Congress, has reversed itself and banned the sale of [redacted]r liquor by the bottle on military posts.

The Federal Communications Commission today approved new color television standards. They'll enable millions of viewers to receive colour pictures in black and white without modifying their sets. The new standards were developed by an industry-wide committee of scientists. The F.C.C. warns that color TV will not be available for some time. Industry spokesmen estimate that the first color sets will cost from $800 to 1-thousand dollars and will be available to the average owner in three or four years.

In Moscow today Communist radio stations began broadcasting what they called "appeals from the Workers" of Russia for the death of Lavrenti Beria, the former deputy prime minister of Russia. [redacted] D like to discuss the Beria case in a moment.

In Korea, allied officers are trying to figure out a way to get in touch with the four Americans who are reported willing to leave Communist prison camps. A South Korean who escaped from one camp says 20 of his countrymen also want to return home.

In Pakistan, Prime Minister Mohammed Ali told reporters that any American military assistance to his country would be just that--"assistance and not a purchase deal by Pakistan."

Ali said informal talks have been held on this, but no formal negotiations have started.

Here in New York, the Yankee Stadium and the Kansas City Blues stadium--also owned by the Yankees--have been sold for six and a half million dollars. The purchaser, Arnold Johnson and his associates of Chicago, then sold the land under the stadium to the Knights of Columbus and leased the Stadium back to the owners of the Yankees. This leaves the Yankees as tenants.. the Johnson corporation as owners of the stadium.. and the Knights of Columbus as owners of the land on which the Stadium is built.

Edward R. Murrow: December 17, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

We are only beginning to realize the full measure and the effect of the charges brought against Beria and his six henchman. He was Deputy Premier and head of the Russian Secret Police. # Dispatches from Moscow indicate that his trial will be held in private - Beria and the rest may not even be present, since there is a Russian law of 1934 which says that such trials shall take place without the presence of the parties. The court must make its finding within ten days; conviction carries the death penalty; and there is no possibility of appeal. The whole thing will be a judicial farce by Western standards, because it has been announced that Beria has already confessed. Even the trial may not prove whether Beria himself is alive or dead.

This episode makes a complete and cynical mockery of the entire history of the Soviet Union and its revolutionary principles. It must be remembered that three other Georgians were indicted along with Beria. The official version of the history of the Bolshevik Revolution in that area was written by Beria. He, together with Stalin, a fellow Georgian, was of course the hero in that account. The book was required Party reading, and over the years it has sold almost as many copies as the works of Stalin.

(The book has now been withdrawn from circulation.) But the accusation is now made, that Beria has been an imperialist agent since 1917; has always favored the restoration of capitalism. This is the destruction of thirty-five years of Russian political education and orientation. The admission is, that the official version of events in the Caucasus, during and after the revolution, was concocted by an enemy of the Bolshevik state. This throws suspicion, not only upon all other Soviet history, which may at some future time turn out also to have been written by enemies of the State, but also upon all Soviet officials; the man in the street may well ask himself: If Beria is a traitor, how do I know that Malenkov or Molotov are not also traitors?

So far, the Russian Government's case against Beria has been couched in general terms. There have been no details as to when, where, and for whom Beria was an imperialist agent. Nothing has been said about how the six other defendants fit into the case, but it is not to be doubted, that they will fit, for in a Communist trial everything fits. The published version of the trial may well deny all Russian historical records, may besmirch the whole historical landscape of Russian history; may make liars out of Soviet educators, historians and politicians. But the case against Beria will be airtight, and it will fit.

It is to be noted that four Georgians and one Ukrainian are among those indicted. # This may mean that the whole nationalities question will be one of the elements in Beria's trial. # At this distance it isn't possible to figure out whether Beria is at fault because he encouraged, or because he discouraged various nationalisms such as the Georgian or the Ukrainian - whether it was right or wrong to put Russians into key positions, or to make sure that local leaders were given the leading roles.

The Beria trial, such as it will be, ought to give us some idea of the new Russian administration's attitude towards nationalities. But the nature of the charges so far revealed indicates the internal stresses to which the Russian regime is now subjected.

We in the West find it difficult if not impossible to place ourselves in the position of the average Russian. # We are inclined to think that public opinion counts for nothing in a dictatorship, where all the organs for influencing public opinion can be manipulated by the government. But public opinion, however carefully protected and conditioned, remains a powerful factor even in a dictatorship.

The revelations regarding Beria, if translated into American terms, would have to read something like this: Our government would have to announce that J. Edgar Hoover, the head of the F.B.I., Alben Barkley, Carl Sandburg, Bob LaFollette, and others, had all been agents of communist imperialism since 1917. This announcement - to pursue this ridiculous parallel - would descend upon an American public which had neither heard nor read a word of criticism of these men for the past thirty years. Such an announcement - even if we had lived in such a controlled society for such a long period of time - would cause us furiously to think, and perhaps to suspect that everything was not lovely in the garden; that our leaders had been misleading us.

We don't know, and may not know whether Beria is alive or dead; or whether he was in alliance with capitalistic interests. But whether alive or dead, his demise - which is certain - will cause millions of Russians to think, to wonder and to speculate. His legacy to his successors will be scepticism, doubt, disbelief. Whether the charges against him be true or false, he is an ally - willing or unwilling - of those who like to ask questions in search of truth. And this is a habit that no dictatorship can afford.

As we mentioned a moment ago, there are some ~~unorthodox~~ strange aspects to the Beria trial - not the least of which is that the defendent may not even be present. Henri Amiel once remarked:"Truth is not only violated by falsehood - it may be equally outraged by silence." Quite appropriately, Daniel Webster observed:"There is nothing so powerful as truth - and often nothing so strange."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Prime Minister Churchill says he thinks he has convinced the President and the French of the "justice and advantage" of offering the Russians a guarantee against aggression. In a speech to the House of Commons Sir Winston said: "The Soviet Union is entitled to assurance against aggression after what she suffered at Hitler's hands." And he hopes that at the Berlin meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers there will be some agreement "to provide Russia with a sense of security arising from other facts than mere force." The members of parliament cheered loudly as Sir Winston continued: "The world is in need of that." Churchill also made reference to President Eisenhower's recent speech proposing an international pool of atomic energy for peaceful purposes. He called this "one of the most important events in world history since the end of the war" - a possible turning point in history. He added: "I fervently hope that the Soviet Union will not ignore this beam of light amid so much darkness and confusion." He thinks the President's speech might end the long deadlock over atomic energy and might afford an opportunity to make contact with the Russians "on the highest level." Again the prime minister spoke of the necessity for good Anglo-American relations and he said: "It would be a pity for those relations to be expressed in McCarthy-Bevanite terms," - a reference to Senator McCarthy and Left Wing Laborite Aneurin Bevan. And again he stressed the importance of the French joining the European army plan.

The French parliament today took two ballots on electing a new president. And on each the leading candidate was Marcel Naegelen, a Socialist, former governor of Algeria and a man opposed to the European Army plan. But he did not get a majority and the parliament adjourned until tomorrow.

Secretary of State Dulles returned to Washington from the North Atlantic powers meeting in Paris. He told reporters he was "much encouraged" by the progress of the NATO alliance. He's convinced its a "very substantial deterrent to war." Defense Secretary Wilson also returning from Paris was asked about reports that we might cut off foreign aid if the European army is not ratified by the French. Wilson said: "That would not be my way of going about it."

The President today met with cabinet members, administration leaders and the top Republicans in Congress. It was the first of three meetings to draw up a legislative program for Congress. The President told his advisors: he knows they'll succeed in giving the nation a forward-looking, progressive program. And he let it be known he'll speak on radio and television on the night of January 4th to report on what the Administration has done to date and sketch the pattern of his program for next year. During today's 10-hour meeting, Chairman Taber of the House Appropriations Committee said he expects budget cuts "all down the line." But Chairman Short of the house Armed Services committee said "there is some saving, but not much."

The Department of Agriculture in a final estimate on this year's crops reports a near-record output "despite a severe drought in a large part of the country." And the Defense Department, acknowledging pressure from Congress, has reversed itself and banned the sale of liquor by the bottle on military posts.

The Federal Communications Commission today approved new color television standards. They'll enable millions of viewers to receive color pictures in black and white without modifying their sets. The new standards were developed by an industry-wide committee of scientists. The F.C.C. warns that color TV will not be available for sometime. Industry spokesmen estimate that the first color sets will cost from 800 to 1 thousand dollars and will be available to the average owner in three or four years.

In Moscow today Communist radio stations began broadcasting what they called "appeals from the Workers" of Russia for the death of Lavrenti Beria, the former deputy prime minister of Russia. I'd like to discuss the Beria case in a moment.

In Korea, allied officers are trying to figure out a way to get in touch with the four Americans who are reported willing to leave Communist prison camps.

A South Korean who escapef from one camp says 20 of his countrymen also want to return home.

In Pakistan, Prime Minister Mohammed Ali told reporters that any American military assistance to his country would be just that - "assistance and not a purchase deal by Pakistan." Ali said informal talks have been held on this, but no formal negotiations have started.

Here in New York, the Yankee Stadium and the Kansas City Blues stadium, also owned by the Yankees - have been sold for six and a half million dollars. The purchaser, Arnold Johnson and his associates of Chicago, then sold the land under the stadium to the Knights of Columbus and leased the Stadium back to the owners of the Yankees. This leaves the Yankees as tenants - the Johnson corporation as owners of the stadium and the Knights of Columbus as owners of the land on which the Stadium is built.

We are only beginning to realize the full measure and the effect of the charges brought against Beria and his six henchmen. He was Deputy Premier and head of the Russian Secret Police. Dispatches from Moscow indicate that his trial will be held in private - Beria and the rest may not even be present, since there is a Russian law of 1934 which says that such trials shall take place without the presence of the parties. The court must make its finding within ten days; conviction carries the death penalty; and there is no possibility of appeal. The whole thing will be a judicial farce by Western standards, because it has been announced that Beria has already confessed. Even the trial may not prove whether Beria himself is alive or dead.

This episode makes a complete and cunical mockery of the entire history of the Soviet Union and its revolutionary principles. It must be remembered that three other Georgians were indicted along with Beria. The official version of the history of the Bolshevik Revolution in that area was written by Beria. He, together with Stalin, a fellow Georgian, was of course the hero in that account. The book was required Party reading, and over the years it has sold almost as many copies as the works of Stalin. The book has now been withdrawn from circulation. But the accusation is now made that Beria has been an imperialist agent since 1917; has always favored the restoration of capitalism. This is the destruction of thirty-five years of Russian political education and orientation. The admission is that the official version of events in the Caucasus during and after the revolution was concocted by an enemy of the Bolshevik state. This throws suspicion, not only upon all other Soviet history which at some future time turn out also to have been written by enemies of the State - but also upon all Soviet officials; the man in the street may well ask himself: If Beria is a traitor, how do I know that Malenkov or Molotov are not also traitors?

So far the Russian Government's case against Beria has been couched in general terms. There have been no details as to when, where, and for whom Beria was an imperialist agent. Nothing has been said about how the six other defendants fit into the case, but it is not to be doubted that they will fit, for in a Communist trial everything fits. The published version of the trial may well deny all Russian historical records, may besmirch the whole historical landscape of Russian history; may make liars out of Soviet educators, historians and politicians. But the case against Beria will be airtight, and it will fit.

It is to be noted that four Georgians and one Ukrainian are among those indicted. This may mean that the whole nationalities question will be one of the elements in Beria's trial. At this distance it isn't possible to figure out whether Beria is at fault because he encouraged, or because he discouraged various nationalisms such as the Georgian or the Ukrainian - whether it was right or wrong to put Russians into key positions, or to make sure that local leaders were given the leading roles.

The Beria trial, such as it will be, ought to give us some idea of the new Russian administration's attitude towards nationalities. But the nature of the charges so far revealed indicates the internal stresses to which the Russian regime is not subjected.

We in the West find it difficult if not impossible to place ourselves in the position of the average Russian. We are inclined to think that public opinion counts for nothing in a dictatorship, where all the organs for influencing public opinion can be manipulated by the government. But public opinion, however carefully protected and conditioned, remains a powerful factor even in a dictatorship.

The revelations regarding Beria, if translated into American terms, would have to read something like this: Our government would have to announce that J. Edgar Hoover, the head of the FBI, Alben Barkley, Carl Sandburg, Bob LaFollette, and others, had all been agents of Communist imperialism since 1917. This announcement - to pursue this ridiculous parallel - would descend upon an American public which had neither heard nor read a word of criticism of these men for the past thirty years. Such an announcement - even if we had lived in such a controlled society for such a long period of time - would cause us furiously to think, and perhaps to suspect that everything was not lovely in the garden; that our leaders had been misleading us.

We don't know, and may not know whether Beria is alive or dead; or whether he was in alliance with capitalistic interests. But whether alive or dead, his demise - which is certain - will cause millions of Russians to think, to wonder and to speculate. His legacy to his successors will be scepticism, doubt, disbelief. Whether the charges against him be true or false, he is an ally - willing or unwilling - of those who like to ask questions in search of truth. And this is a habit that no dictatorship can afford.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: As we mentioned a moment ago, there are some strange aspects to the Beria trial - not the least of which is that the defendent may not even be present. Henri Amiel once remarked: "Truth is not only violated by falsehood - it may be equally outraged by silence." Quite appropriately, Daniel Webster observed: "There is nothing so powerful as truth - and often nothing so strange."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday, Dec. 18, 1953.

This is the news:

The French, who are growing accustomed to governmental crises, are confronted with a new one tonite. Parliament is unable to agree on who should be the new President. And after four indecisive ballots, and no decision, it was agreed to postpone further voting until tomorrow morning, our time.

The list of candidates had been narrowed to two - Premier Laniel and Marcel Naegelan, a Socialist. Laniel ran 64 votes ahead of Naegelan on the last ballot, but was more than fifty votes shy of the required majority. There is now some talk that members of Parliament are prepared to drop both men, as candidates to succeed Vincent Auriol - if they can come up with a suitable substitute.

Earlier today, Secretary of State Dulles won more congressional support for his warning to France, that it must ratify the proposed European Army, or face a possible cut in American military aid. Republican Senator Hickenlooper said: "the French have to understand that we're not going to continue to be Uncle Bountiful, unless they cooperate." Democratic Senator Mansfield of Montana said Dulles' warning was blunt but necessary.

Ambassador Dean has given a brief report to Mr. Dulles on the status of the Korean Peace Conference which has yet to be formalized. There are no details on the Dean summary. But we are told that next Tuesday, the Secretary of State will speak to the National Press Club in Washington. And that his speech will be a "major" one.

The President spent another day with Republican leaders, drafting a legislative program for the next session of Congress. And at the end of a long, ten-hour day, Mr. Eisenhower issued a statement saying the "way has been cleared for January tax reductions - both on personal income and excess profits." (The last Democratic-controlled Congress had already passed legislation making this move possible.)

The President's statement also said that in addition to a discussion of taxes, legislative leaders concerned themselves today with a foreign affairs review, Hawaiian statehood, public works, farm problems, the St. Lawrence Waterway and extension of social security benefits. [Two final meetings will be held tomorrow.]

In Chicago today, Senator Mc Carthy said that he still believes Communism will be the chief issue in next year's election. He said the President is doing a "tremendously good job, but no one can have a hundred per cent perfect record." Mc Carthy said he's still opposed to our giving aid to countries trading with Red China. He hopes in the coming election, those who feel as he does, will be elected to Congress.

The Russian Army newspaper Red Star said today that only a series of Soviet offensives in the winter of 1945 "prevented the defeat of American and British forces and saved France from another German occupation." The paper said the western powers deliberately weakened French resistence - in order to pose as France's liberators.

In Washington, the Cpurt of Military Appeals has allowed Major General Robert Grow to withdraw his request for a new trial. Grow was convicted of violating security regulations in jotting down military secrets in a diary which was later stolen by Russian agents.

The Senate Elections subcommittee recommended today that 30-thousand votes cast in the Senate race in New Mexico last November be thrown out for violation of the election laws. The Committee vote ran strictly along party lines. It involves Democratic Senator Chavez who edged out Patrick J. Hurley.

Early this morning, the kidnappers and killers of Bobby Greenlease went to their death in Missouri State Prison without revealing what had become of half of the 6-hundred-thousand-dollar ransom money still missing. But today, in Kansas City, a federal Grand Jury indicted Elmer Dolan, a suspended St. Louis policeman who had handled the suitcases containing some of the money. Dolan is accused of perjury.

Here in New York, a grand jury has returned murder indictments against Harlow Fraden and Dennis Wepman, charging that they killed Fraden's parents by poison. [Both ~~youths~~ young men have admitted taking part in the crime.]

The wreckage of a missing American patrol bomber has been sighted on a glacier in Iceland. The first reports indicate that there are survivors among the nine-man Navy crew. And a rescue party is now on its way.

Frances Cardinal Spellman left New York by plane today to spend another Christmas with American forces in Korea. He will also visit servicemen in Alaska.

In Rome today, the Italian Parliament approved an amnesty bill that will free more than half of all the jail inmates in that country... in time for Christmas.

And in Bonn, West German leaders say they believe that the proposed Big Three Western power meeting in Berlin, set for early January will probably be pushed back by the Russians to the end of the month.

Edward R. Murrow: December 18, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

The release by the White House of a tape recording of President Eisenhower's last news conference raises some interesting questions. This is the first time a President has permitted direct quotation of all his off-the-cuff replies to newsmen. Heretofore direct quotation has had to be specially authorized, and for only selected passages. This has been thought advisable to protect the President both at home and abroad. No president, however gifted, can measure, in an instant, what the effect is going to be of the words he uses to answer an unexpected question. His own countrymen may know more or less what the hazards in a press conference are, and make allowances for hasty phrases. Foreigners are not able to do so.

At first glance the new policy looks like an unassailable decision in a modern democracy, since it draws the President and the people closer together, and increases interest in public affairs. And it helps create the image of the President as a man of candor, with nothing to hide. No one will question Mr. Eisenhower's desire to merit that description.

But if tape recordings of NEWS conferences are going to be broadcast often, are they not going to force the President to put a curb on himself? That is, more of a curb than he already imposes? If he feels that a question is too hot, he will realize that he is inescapably on the record, and will want either to evade the question, or blur his answer. Then the news conference would tend to become what it should not be, a place where thoughts that ought to be revealed, are hidden.

It can be argued that there is not much difference between broadcasting a tape recording and publishing in a newspaper a stenographic report, in which the President is quoted nearly verbatim, but indirectly. That is the practise Mr. Eisenhower already had authorized, and in doing so had gone much farther than his predecessors. It can be noted that the President already has developed a highly personal kind of circumlocution by which he avoids pin-pointed answers to some questions.

The difference between printing indirect quotations and broadcasting the President's own voice may not be great, but there still is a difference. The President's voice, his feelings, his hesitations and pauses, all are registered on the tape recording, and sometimes say more than words. Indirect quotation in print is less forceful than recorded speech. If a mistake is being made, it is more damaging if quotation is direct and vocal.

Obviously it is also true that if a good statement is being made, it becomes more forceful by being heard out of the President's own mouth. And surely that is the reason for the new policy. It has been announced that the tape recordings will be only occasionally released. Inevitably the occasion will be when the President has had a good day with the press, when he has been in form, when he has said things he wants the public to understand and support.

In this the President is exploiting the nature of modern communications for his own advantage. ~~Let me say emphatically that~~ Of course he has every right to do so. But it would not be accurate to say that he is only making the President more accessible to the people. He is doing something else, too. He is making the people somewhat more accessible to the President. And that would appear to be the motive.

This is the time when Mr. Eisenhower's record as President depends on his success as leader of his Party. It is evident that to have success, he must increase his personal influence. Enlisting public support will do just that. The President's critics have been exploiting the communications media to oppose him, and he is entitled to use them too.

In allowing only occasional broadcasts of the news conferences, the President is sure of their wide use. They would have a novelty value regardless of their news content. One may wonder if something is amiss in news practises, when political news commands time on the air, and space in the newspapers, for any reason other than its content. But it does in this country today. We know that the phrase: "In the public interest" is presumed to be the guiding principle in operating press, radio and television in the field of political affairs. But the phrase has lost its shape. It has become: "What interests the public". Surely it is axiomatic that what interests the public, is not necessarily in the greatest public interest. Skillful politicians know how to grab headlines, and increase their political power, by staying on page one of the newspapers, and on the best spots on radio and television. It has developed into an art, and the communications media accede to it, regardless of whether editors deeply believe the material has merit, or is in the interests of the country.

Since this has already happened in communications, the President is keeping abreast of the times in assuring himself a greater share of the space and time given to Washington news. And since he is President, most of his news conferences will justify their widest use.

This departure is an experiment - not all news conferences will be recorded and broadcast. The practise, if it is pursued, will require a new and delicate editorial judgment by officials in the White House, and by the broadcasters.

This reporter is leaving for Korea later tonight, and will hope to do some reporting from out there next week. There are at least two things that reporters should remember: Thoreau, when he said: "It takes two to speak the truth; one to speak and another to hear". And then there is the counsel of Terence, who said: "Nothing is ever said that has not been said before."

XXXXX Goodnight and Good Luck!

69

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The French, who are growing accustomed to governmental crises, are confronted with a new one tonight. Parliament is unable to agree on who should be the new President. And after four indecisive ballots and no decision, it was agreed to postpone further voting until tomorrow morning, our time.

The list of candidates had been narrowed to two - Premier Laniel and Marcel Naegelan, a Socialist. Laniel ran 64 votes ahead of Naegelan on the last ballot but was more than fifty votes shy of the required majority. There is now some talk that members of Parliament are prepared to drop both men as candidates to succeed Vincent Auriol - if they can come up with a suitable substitute.

Earlier today, Secretary of State Dulles won more congressional support for his warning to France that it must ratify the proposed European Army or face a possible cut in American military aid. Republican Senator Hickenlooper said: "the French have to understand that we're not going to continue to be Uncle Bountiful unless they cooperate." Democratic Senator Mansfield of Montana said Dulles' warning was blunt but necessary.

Ambassador Dean has given a brief report to Mr. Dulles on the status of the Korean Peace Conference which has yet to be formalized. There are no details on the Dean summary. But we are told that next Tuesday, the Secretary of State will speak to the National Press Club in Washington. And that his speech will be a "major" one.

The President spent another day with Republican leaders, drafting a legislative program for the next session of Congress. And at the end of a long-ten hour day, Mr. Eisenhower issued a statement saying the "way has been cleared for January tax reductions - both on personal income and excess profits." The last Democratic-controlled Congress had already passed legislation making this move possible.

The President's statement also said that in addition to a discussion of taxes, legislative leaders concerned themselves today with a foreign affairs review, Hawaiian statehood, public works, farm problems, the St. Lawrence Waterway and extension of social security benefits. Two final meetings will be held tomorrow.

In Chicago today, Senator McCarthy said that he still believes Communism will be the chief issue in next year's election. He said the President is doing a "tremendously good job but no one can have a hundred percent perfect record." McCarthy said he's still opposed to our giving aid to countries trading with Red China. He hopes in the coming election, those who feel as he does, will be elected to Congress.

The Russian Army newspaper Red Star said today that only a series of Soviet offensives in the winter of 1945 "prevented the defeat of American and British forces and saved France from another German occupation." The paper said the western powers deliberately weakened French resistence - in order to pose as France's liberators.

In Washington, the Court of Military Appeals has allowed Major General Robert Grow to withdraw his request for a new trial. Grow was convicted of violating security regulations in jotting down military secrets in a diary which was later stolen by Russian agents.

The Senate Elections subcommittee recommended today that 30-thousand votes cast in the Senate race in New Mexico last November be thrown out for violation of the election laws. The Committee vote ran strictly along party lines. It involves Democratic Senator Chavez who edged out Patrick J. Hurley.

Early this morning, the kidnappers and killers of Bobby Greenlease went to their death in Missouri State Prison without revealing what had become of half of the 6-hundred thousand dollar ransom money still missing. But today, in Kansas City, a federal Grand Jury indicted Elmer Dolan, a suspended St. Louis policeman who had handled the suitcases containing some of the money. Dolan is accused of perjury.

Here in New York, a grand jury has returned murder indictments against Harlow Fraden and Dennis Wepman, charging that they killed Fraden's parents by poison. Both young men have admitted taking part in the crime.

The wreckage of a missing American patrol bomber has been sighted on a glacier in Iceland. The first reports indicste that there are survivors among the nine-man Navy crew. And a rescue party is now on its way.

Frances Cardinal Spellman left New York by plane today to spend another Christmas with American forces in Korea. He will also visit servicemen in Alaska.

In Rome today, the Italian Parliament approved an amnesty bill that will free more than half of all the jail inmates in that country in time for Christmas.

And in Bonn, West German leaders say they believe that the proposed Big Three Western power meeting in Berlin, set for early January will probably be pushed back by the Russians to the end of the month.

The release by the White House of a tape recording of President Eisenhower's last news conference raises some interesting questions. This is the first time a President has permitted direct quotation of all his off-the-cuff replies to newsmen. Heretofore direct quotation has had to be specially authorized, and for only selected passages. This has been thought advisable to protect the President both at home and abroad. No president, however, gifted, can measure, in an instant, what the effect is going to be of the words he uses to answer an unexpected question. His own countrymen may know more or less what the hazards in a press conference are, and make allowances for hasty phrases. Foreigners are not able to do so.

At first glance the new policy looks like an unassailable decision in a modern democracy, since it draws the President and the people closer together, and increases interest in public affairs. And it helps create the image of the President as a man of candor, with nothing to hide. No one questions Mr. Eisenhower's desire to merit that description.

But if tape recordings of news conferences are going to be broadcast often, are they not going to force the President to put a curb on himself? That is, more of a curb than he already imposes? If he feels that a question is too hot, he will realize that he is inescapably on the record, and will want either to evade the question, or blur his answer. Then the news conference would tend to become what it should not be, a place where thoughts that ought to be revealed, are hidden.

It can be argued that there is not much difference between broadcasting a tape recording and publishing in a newspaper a stenographic report, in which the President is quoted nearly verbatim, but indirectly. That is the practice Mr. Eisenhower already had authorized, and in doing so had gone much farther than his predecessors. It can be noted that the President already has developed a highly personal kind of circumlocution by which he avoids pin-pointed answers to some question.

The difference between printing indirect quotations and broadcasting the President's own voice may not be great, but there still is a difference. The President's voice, his feelings, his hesitations and pauses, all are registered on the tape recording, and sometimes say more than words. Indirect quotation in print is less forceful than recorded speech. If a mistake is being made, it is more damaging if quotation is direct and vocal.

Obviously it is also true that if a good statement is being made, it becomes more forceful by being heard out of the President's own mouth. And surely that is the reason for the new policy. It has been announced that the tape recordings will be only occasionally released. Inevitably the occasion will be when the President has had a good day with the press, when he has been in form, when he has said things he wants the public to understand and support.

In this the President is exploiting the nature of modern communications for his own advantage. Of course he has every right to do so. But it would not be accurate to say that he is only making the President more accessible to the people. He is doing something else, too. He is making the people somewhat more accessible to the President. And that would appear to be the motive.

This is the time when Mr. Eisenhower's record as President depends on his success as leader of his Party. It is evident that to have success, he must increase his personal influence. Enlisting public support will do just that. The President's critics have been exploiting the communications media to oppose him, and he is entitled to use them too.

In allowing only occasional broadcasts of the news conferences, the President is sure of their wide use. They would have a novelty value regardless of their news content. One may wonder if something is amiss in news practices, when political news commands time on the air, and space in the newspapers, for any reason other than its content. But it does in this country today. We know that the phrase: "In the public interest" is presumed to be the guiding principle in operating press, radio and television in the field of political affairs. But the phrase has lost its shape. It has become: "What interests the public." Surely it is axiomatic that what interests the public, is not necessarily in the greatest public interest. Skillful politicians know how to grab headlines, and increase their political power, by staying on page one of the newspapers, and on the best spots on radio and television. It has developed into an art, and the communications media accede to it, regardless of whether editors deeply believe the material has merit, or is in the interests of the country.

Since this has already happened in communications, the President is keeping abreast of the times in assuring himself a greater share of the space and time given to Washington news. And since he is President, most of his news conferences will justify their widest use.

This departure is an experiment - not all news conferences will be recorded and broadcast. The practice, if it is pursued, will require a new and delicate editorial judgment by officials in the White House, and by the broadcasters.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: This reporter is leaving for Korea later tonight, and will hope to do some reporting from out there next week. There are at least two things that reporters should remember: Thoreau, when he said:"It takes two to speak the truth; one to speak and another to hear." And then there is the counsel of Terence, who said: "Nothing is ever said that has not been said before."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

(1)

Monday, Dec 21, 1953.

The Soviet Union is willing to meet with other countries to discuss President Eisenhower's plan for an international pool of atomic energy. Secretary of State Dulles says this is a hopeful sign. But the Moscow note to Washington, reacting to the President's recent speech to the United Nations, has a few conditions. The Russians will talk over the Eisenhower plan but they insist that any agreement must call for an unconditional ban on atomic and hydrogen weapons. Russia is ready to negotiate but she says the President's proposal is not clear.. needs clarification. For example, Moscow notes that Mr. Eisenhower suggested that the new international atomic energy pool be made up of small contributions from those nations that have atomic energy. Moscow says: unless weapons are banned, the participating nations could use the remainder of their atomic production to make new weapons.

Soon after the Soviet note was made public Secretary of State Dulles issued a carefully worded statement. He said the Russians "seem not to have caught the spirit of the President's proposal." Moscow complains that this plan would not remove the threat of atomic weapons.

Mr. Dulles says the plan is intended only as a first step towards eventual ban of such weapons. Then The Secretary notes: "The Soviet Union expresses its readiness to take part in confidential or diplomatic talks concerning the President's proposal. This is hopeful. Little can be achieved through public debate." ~~Mr. Dulles~~ continues: ~~"The United States will, through new channels which the Soviet Union now accepts, explore every possibility towards securing an agreement and bringing the President's proposal into the realm of creative action."~~

Ambassador Lodge, at the United Nations, says the Russian reaction is "very encouraging if true."

In Korea, the United Nations command is preparing a last minute effort to convince 22 Americans now in Communist hands, that they should return to this country. Under terms of the armistice agreement the 90-day period for "explanations" to prisoners of war ends at midnight Wednesday..Korean time. General Hull, the allied commander in the Far East, says we are preparing a last-day ~~offer for~~ effort at "explanations." ~~We'll talk to the Americans if they're interested in changing their minds. General Hull says his major concern is that the American prisoners "have the freedom of choice" to return to our lines if they want to.~~

Tonight over many of these CBS radio stations Ambassador Dean, who has been negotiating with the enemy at Panmunjom, will make a report to the nation. It will be heard at 11;30 p.m. eastern time.

In Paris, the French National Assembly has again failed to elect a new president of the republic. Ten times since Friday the Right and Left votes have failed to produce the necessary majority for any candidate. And Premier Laniel has lost ground steadily in the last few votes. Tonight, before the Parliament adjourned for another day, the chairman called on all deputies and senators to have their political leaders meet with him tomorrow. He said it is the duty of all parties to "decide on a man to save the Republic."

There is word from Rome tonight of what reporters there are calling "a political time bomb." In essence its this: since last June a special election committee has been counting challenged votes. These votes apparently indicate that the pro-western forces should have a good majority in the present Parliament. At the same time the new votes would eliminate some 60 Communist and pro-Communist deputies. Under the law, any coalition that receives a simple majority, is entitled to sixty four and a half per cent of the Chamber of Deputy seats. So, if the challenged votes are officially reported and if our information is correct--that the results would force a big reshuffle of the Italian parliament-- then the new parliament might be strong enough to end indecision and keep Italy from the same political paralysis that now grips France. But, we're told, the recount may be stalled--purposely.

In Yugoslavia, Marshal Tito says he pulled back his troops from the Trieste border because the danger of aggression in that area has ceased. (Italian troops have also been withdrawn and only normal border patrols remain.)

In Teheran, a military court has found former Premier Mossadegh guilty on 13 charges of attempting to overthrow the Shah. Mossadegh has been sentenced to three years in solitary confinement. The court said the midlness of the sentence is due to an appeal made by the Shah on Mossadegh's behalf.

In Washington today, Army undersecretary Earl D. Johnson said that the army has slowed down to a walk its purchases of manufactured goods. And the program will ease off more next year. Johnson says this does not mean that money has stopped flowing into industry. He says: "It means rather than industry's backlog of army orders is shrinking. Money is still flowing out at close to peak rates because of old open orders."

Two Washington columnists who specialize in government personnel matters reported today that the Administration is planning to create well-paid jobs as patronage handlers in ever federal agency and department. Civil Service Commission Chairman Young says the head of any government agency has the authority to designate an assistant to handle personnel problems within his bureau. Young says: "There's nothing new in this concept."

[redacted] The White House says the President has now resigned from most of the organizations to which he belonged at the time he took office. The White House says Mr. Eisenhower had joined "several hundred organizations." But now he feels that he should retain his membership only in those in which he can be active..like the Red Cross.

The National Labor Relations Board today reversed an old ruling that [redacted] called on employers to give unions equal time to deliver speeches on UNIONIZING [redacted] employes during working hours. Hereafter neither the boss or the union can make speeches on company property, during working hours, for 24 hours before an N.L.R.B. election.

Here in New York the Labor Board will conduct an election tomorrow among the 22-thousand dockworkers in the city..to determine which of two unions they want to respresent them. And William V. Bradley, the new president of the International Longshoremen's Association, says his union's financial troubles are over. He says if the I.L.A. wins tomorrow's election he favors affiliating with John L. Lewis' coal miners. The I.L.A. was recently ousted from the American Federation of Labor on the grounds that it is "crime ridden."

As you know, Edward R. Murrow is on his way to Korea. The fighting there has stopped, but the problems of Korea have not been solved and the fate of all of us is still tied to what happens there. Ed Murrow decided to spend this Christmas, as he spent last Christmas, in Korea. ~~Yesterday~~ He had got as far as Wake Island on his long journey, where he recorded this report:

RECORDING: RUNS 3:31...
ENDS...." heavy and light calibre guns."

That was to have been the end of Ed Murrow's report from Wake Island. But before he took off for the long jump to Tokyo, he found himself not only reporting but participating in a news story. We got this recording a couple of hours later.

RECORDING: RUNS: 1:12
ENDS:..."Good night and good luck."

Ed Murrow is going to Korea for Christmas. Its not the place that most of us would choose to go, if we had a choice. The Americans who are there, standing guard during the frustrating negotiations for a peace, don't have a choice. Maybe that's why Ed Murrow decided that this was the place he wanted to report from this Christmas.

This is Charles Collingwood.

I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news.

But first Bob Dixon

The American Automobile Association says that because old folks tend to wear dark clothes, they're harder to see at night and are more susceptibl to accident. So, continues the AAA: "If you're still wondering what to get your old Aunt Fanny for Xmas, how about a white scarf or a light hat or even white socks. And if you don't have an Aunt Fanny, the same type of gift could also come in handy for Uncle (EDGAR") This is CC... Goodnite!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

CHARLES COLLINGWOOD

Monday, December 21, 1953
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: This is Wake Island, a tiny atoll in the Pacific, actually 19.3 (?) degrees north, 166.5 degrees east. It's about nineteen hundred and eighty-four miles southeast of Tokyo, twenty-two hundred and ninety-six miles west of Honolulu. It's about thirty hours of flying time from New York and I should tell you, Charlie, coming out here I tried to sit down and write the sort of piece I have tried so often before as to what one thinks about on a long flight, but I found it completely impossible because on this occasion it seems that I just wasn't doing any thinking, so I'll tell you a little about Wake Island.

Actually, it lies across the international dateline and it counts its calendar one day ahead of our calendars at home and the people who live here will point out to you that as a result of this Christmas arrives first on Wake Island of any place on the globe. There are five hundred and fifty people living here on Wake and most of their business is maintaining an aerial commerce over the Pacific and that's what brought them here. Most of them are employees of Pan-American, the Civil Aeronautics Authority, the Weather Bureau, the Coast Guard, and the people who take care of the unscheduled airlines. The island itself is administered by the CAA. I suppose to most Americans, Wake Island remains in their memory by reason of its having been the first battleground in our war with Japan. It was just twelve years ago that the defense of the island by four hundred gallant Marines under the command of Major James B. Devereaux (?) came to an end. In recent years, Wake came into the news as the site of that rather notable exchange of views on the Korean war between President Truman and General Douglas MacArthur.

Wake is an atoll consisting of three small island, - Wilkes (?), Pelew (?), and Wake, separated by narrow shallow channels. The islands enclose a sort of triangular lagoon four-and-a-half miles long. The residents say thefishing here is pretty good. The climate is just about like that of the Hawaiian Islands, averaging about 75 degrees and frequently being subjected to rain squalls. All over Wake you still see the evidences of World War 11, the old Singapore guns that the Japanese moved in after they took Singapore. You still see the trenches, the rebutments,the odd Japanese landing vessel that lies resting in the shallow water. For people who live here on Wake they take the time not only from their memories of World War 11, but also the typhoon of 1952 and you can still see the results of that because it leveled every building that stood above ground. One of the things which strikes any visitor to Wake Island is the extent to which things aren't changed from World War 11. You see light tanks, rough red-? searchlights, heavy and light calibre guns.

Good night and good luck!

MURROW: Charlie, this is by way of a postscript. It's about two hours later and we are back on Wake Island. What happened was this. Just as we were about to take off word came in that a flying boat of the Air-Sea Rescue Squadron had either gone down or was about to go down a hundred and seventy-five miles ~~NNE~~ east of Wake Island so we were diverted with this big Stratocruiser to go and look for it, and wecruised around first at four thousand feet and then finally came down to about five hundred and I've never seen so many pairs of strained eyes. I think this reporter's eyes will never be the same again because everyone was looking for this flying boat. The flying boat had gone on to look for a DC-4, which has lost a motor. Well, the DC-4 finally came in all right. We discovered subsequently that the flying boat had flung overboard everything that was loose, the floor (?) beds, its communication system, and everything else. Finally the word came in from Wake that the flying boat was in wearing only one fan, making a hundred and five miles an hour, and had landed on the strip, so then we went up in the Stratocruiser to about five thousand feet and dumped some two thousand gallons of gasoline so that we could come back again to Wake and land and, so, now, when they put the gasoline that we dumped back in the Stratocruiser we will be off again with only two hours' delay for Tokyo and then on to Korea.

Good night and good luck!

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
(WITH CHARLES COLLINGWOOD)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening:

The Soviet Union is willing to meet with other countries to discuss President Eisenhower's plan for an international pool of atomic energy. Secretary of State Dulles says this is a hopeful sign. But the Moscow note to Washington, reacting to the President's recent speech to the United Nations, has a few conditions. The Russians will talk over the Eisenhower plan but they insist that any agreement must call for an unconditional ban on atomic and hudrogen weapons. Russia is ready to negotiate but she says the President's proposal is not clear - needs clarification. For example, Moscow notes that Mr. Eisenhower suggested that the new international atomic energy pool be made up of small contributions from those nations that have atomic energy. Moscow says: unless weapons are banned, the participating nations could use the remainder of their atomic production to make new weapons.

Soon after the Soviet note was made public Secretary of State Dulles issued a carefully worded statement. He said the Russians "seem not to have caught the spirit of the President's proposal." Moscow complains that this plan would not remove the threat of atomic weapons. Mr. Dulles says the plan is intended only as a first step towards eventual ban of such weapons. Then the Secretary notes: "The Soviet Union expresses its readiness to take part in confidential or diplomatic talks concerning the President's proposal. This is hopeful. Little can be achieved through public debate." Ambassaodr Lodge, at the United Nations, says the Russian reaction is "very encouraging if true."

In Korea, the United Nations command is preparing a last minute effort to convince 22 Americans now in Communist hands, that they should return to this country. Under terms of the armistice agreement the 90-day period for "explanations" to prisoners of war ends at midnight Wednesday - Korean time. General Hull, the allied commander in the Far East, says we are preparing a last-day effort at explanations."

Tonight over many of these CBS radio stations Ambassador Dean, who has been negotiating with the enemy at Panmunjom, will make a report to the nation. It will be heard at 11:30 p.m. eastern time.

In Paris, the French National Assembly has again failed to elect a new president of the republic. Ten times since Friday the Right and Left votes have failed to produce the necessary majority for any candidate. And Premier Laniel has lost ground steadily in the last few votes. Tonight, before the Parliament adjourned for another day, the chairman called on all deputies and senators to have their political leaders meet with him tomorrow. He said it is the duty of all parties to "decide on a man to save the Republic."

There is word from Rome tonight of what reporters there are calling "a political time bomb." In essence its this: since last June a special election committee has been counting challenged votes. These votes apparently indicate that the pro-western forces should have a good majority in the present Parliament. At the same time the new votes would eliminate some 60 Communist and pro-Communist deputies. Under the law, any coalition that receives a simple majority, is entitled to sixty four and a half percent of the Chamber of Deputy seats. So, if the challenged votes are officially reported and if our information is correct - that the results would force a big reshuffle of the Italian parliament - then the new parliament might be strong enough to end indecision and keep Italy from the same political paralysis that now grips France. But, we're told, the recount may be stalled - purposely.

In Yugoslavia, Marshal Tito says he pulled back his troops from the Trieste border because the danger of aggression in that area has ceased. (Italian troops have also been withdrawn and only normal border patrols remain.)

In Teheran, a military court has found former Premier Mossadegh guilty on 13 charges of attempting to overthrow the Shah. Mossadegh has been sentenced to three years in solitary confinement. The court said the mildness of the sentence is due to an appeal made by the Shah on Mossadegh's behalf.

In Washington today, Army undersecretary Earl D. Johnson said that the army has slowed down to a walk its purchases of manufactured goods. And the program will ease off more next year. Johnson says this does not mean that money has stopped flowing into industry. He sayd: "It means rather than industry's backlog of army orders is shrinking. Money is still flowing out at close to peak rates because of old open orders."

The White House says the President has now resigned from most of the organization to which he belonged at the time he took office. The White House says Mr. Eisenhower had joined "several hundred organizations." But now he feels that he should retain his membership only in those in which he can be active - like the Red Cross.

The National Labor Relations Board today reversed an old ruling that called on employers to give unions equal time to deliver speeches on unionizing employees during working hours. Hereafter neither the boss or the union can make speeches on company property, during working hours, for 24 hours before an NLRB election.

Here in New York the Labor Board will conduct an election tomorrow among the 22-thousand dockworkers in the city to determine which of two unions they want to represent them. And William V. Bradley, the new president of the International Longshoremen's Association, says his union's financial troubles are over. He says if the ILA wins tomorrow's election he favors affiliating with John L. Lewis' coal miners. The ILA was recently ousted from the American Federation of Labor on the grounds that it is "crime ridden."

As you know, Edward R. Murrow is on his way to Korea. The fightint there has stopped, but the problems of Korea have not been solved and the fate of all of us is still tied to what happens there. Ed Murrow decided to spend this Christmas, as he spent last Christmas, in Korea. He had got as far as Wake Island on his long journey when he recorded this report:

MURROW: This is Wake Island, a tiny atoll in the Pacific, actually 19.3 degrees north, 166.5 degrees east. It's about nineteen hundred and eighty-four miles southeast of Tokyo, twenty-two hundred and ninety-six miles west of Honolulu. It's about thirty hours of flying time from New York and I should tell you, Charlie, coming out here I tried to sit down and write the sort of piece I have tried so often before as to what one thinks about on a long flight, but I found it completely impossible because on this occasion it seems that I just wasn't doing any thinking, so I'll tell you a little about Wake Island.

Actually, it lies across the international dateline and it counts its calendar one day ahead of our calendars at home and the people who live here will point out to you that as a result of this Christmas arrives first on Wake Island of any place on the globe. There are five hundred and fifty people living here on Wake and most of their business is maintaining an aerial commerce over the Pacific and that's what brought them here. Most of them are employees of Pan-American, the Civil Aeronautics Authority, the Weather Bureau, the Coast Guard, and the people who take care of the unscheduled airlines. The island itself is administered by the CAA. I suppose to most Americans, Wake Island remains in their memory by reason of its having been the first battleground in our war with Japan. It was just twelve years ago that the defense of the island by four hundred gallant Marines came to an end. In recent years, Wake came into the news as the site of that rather notable exchange of views on the Korean war between President Truman and General Douglas MacArthur.

Wake is an atoll consisting of three small islands separated by narrow shallow channels. The islands enclose a sort of triangular lagoon four-and-a-half miles long. The residents say the fishing here is pretty good. The climate is just about like that of the Hawaiian Islands, averaging about 75 degrees and frequently being subjected to rain squalls. All over Wake you still see the evidences of World War II, the old Singapore guns that the Japanese moved in after they took Singapore. You still see the trenches, the rebutments, the odd Japanese landing vessel that lies resting in the shallow water. For people who live here on Wake they take the time not only from their memories of World War II, but also the typhoon of 1952 and you can still see the results of that because it leveled every building that stood above ground. One of the things which strikes any visitor to Wake Island is the extent to which things aren't changed from World War II. You see light tanks, searchlights, heavy and light calibre guns.

Good Night and good Luck!

COLLINGWOOD: That was to have been the end of Ed Murrow's report from Wake Island. But before he took off for the long jump to Tokyo, he found himself not only reporting but participating in a news story. We got this recording a couple of hours later.

MURROW: Charlie, this is by way of a postscript. It's about two hours later and we are back on Wake Island. What happened was this. Just as we were about to take off word came in that a flying boat of the Air-Sea Rescue Squadron had either gone down or was about to go down a hundred and seventy-five miles east of Wake Island so we were diverted with this big stratocruiser to go and look for it, and we cruised around first at four thousand feet and then finally came down to about five hundred and I've never seen so many pairs of strained eyes. I think this reporter's eyes will never be the same again because everyone was looking for this flying boat. The flying boat had gone on to look for a DC-4, which has lost a motor. Well, the DC-4 finally came in all right. We discovered subsequently that the flying boat had flung overboard everything that was loose, the floor beds, its communication system, and everything else. Finally the word came in from Wake that the flying boat was in wearing only one fan, making a hundred and five miles an hour, and had landed on the strip, os then we went up in the Stratocruiser to about five thousand feet and dumped some wo thousand gallons of gasoline so that we could come back again to Wake and land and, so, now, when they put the gasoline that we dumped back in the Stratocruiser we will be off again with only two hours' delay for Tokyo and then on to Korea.

Good Night and Good Luck!

COLLINGWOOD: Ed Murrow is going to Korea for Christmas. Its not where most of us would choose to go, if we had a choice. The Americans who are there, standing guard during the frustrating negotiations for a peace, don't have a choice. Maybe that's why Ed Murrow decided that this was the place he wanted to report from this Christmas. This is Charles Collingwood. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news. But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

C.C: The American Automobile Association says that because old folks tend to wear dark clothes, they're harder to see at night and are more susceptible to accident. So, continues the AAA: "If you're still wondering what to get your old Aunt Fanny for Xmas, how about a white scarf or a light hat or even white socks. And if you don't have an Aunt Fanny, the same type of gift could also come in handy for Uncle Edgar." This is Charles Collingwood...Good nite!

Tues. December 22, 1953

Good evening:

Secretary of State Dulles predicts that the new year will be "a time for great decisions." He feels that 1954 [redacted] may see a recession of the horror of atomic warfare." The Secretary told the National Press Club in Washington that the danger of war has lessened in the last year or two. But the threat of Russian attack remains "immense and persistent." The Secretary also made it clear that if and when we meet with the Russians to discuss the control of atomic energy we will be ready to talk about the control of atomic weapons as well. The President has suggested a pool of atomic energy for peaceful purposes. Moscow has insisted on discussing a ban on [redacted] weapons. Mr. Dulles said today that there is nothing in the Eisenhower proposal that would prohibit a discussion of atomic weapons.

And once again the Secretary took occasion to prod the French into approving the European army plan. He hinted today that unless the French act soon we may decide to withdraw the American troops now stationed in "advance positions" in west Germany. He said:"It is not acceptable that American troops be the principle defender of West Germany while the Germans themselves look on as mere observers." (West Germany soldiers would be part of the European army the French have delayed approving.) And Mr. Dulles also pointed out that the failure of the French to act has "placed the entire North Atlantic treaty organization on a foundation which is precarious."

In Paris today, Premier Joseph Laniel withdrew as a candidate for president of France. After ten unsuccessful attempts to be elected, in six days of voting by the Parliament, Laniel evidently withdrew because he is convinced he cannot be elected. There was no voting today. But day-long conferences among political leaders made no reported progress. It was what the French call "a dialogue of the deaf".. with both sides talking, but neither side willing to listen.

In Teheran, former Premier Mossadegh has now decided to appeal his sentence of three years in solitary confinement.. for treason.

And in Palestine, Jordan officials charge that regular Isreali troops crossed the Jordan frontier in three places last night and killed three persons. United Nations officials are investigating.

3

There are now less than fifteen hours before the "persuasion period" for Korean war prisoners comes to an end. Inside a barbed wire compound at Panmunjom are 22 Americans, one British soldier and a hundred or so South Koreans who have decided not to return home. An American major tonight broadcast a message to the prisoners. He said, in part: "If you really want to come home now is the chance for which you have been waiting." They've been promised that they will face no military punishment if they change their minds before tomorrow morning's deadline.

Our special Ambassador to the proposed Korean Peace talks, Arthur Dean, SAYS that while the outlook for a conference is "discouraging it is by no means hopeless. There is no easy, pat solution. It will take all the brains, energy, resolution and patience at our command."

One of Japan's top military spokesmen told an Associated Press Correspondent today: "There's a strong anti-American feeling in Japan and it's increasing. It's too bad but it's true." He suggested that American troops be withdrawn as soon as possible or "the day will come when we will regret not having made the move."

A group of Republican Congressmen met with the President at the White House today to discuss what could be done to assure another Republican victory in 1954. In a statement released after the meeting, they concluded:"A republican Congress can be elected if the Administration's program is wise, progressive and forward looking and stresses a humanitarian approach."

Former Assistant Secretary of State Spruille Braden appeared before the Senate Internal subcommittee. He testified that while Ambassador to Cuba he opposed and defeated a proposal by Harry Dexter White which wpuld have bankrupted Cuba and hurt relations between the two countries. Braden also said that interference by State Department representatives who were "socialistically inclined" prevented our establishing a sound foreign policy in Latin America.

Here in New York, dock workers are voting on whether the International Longshoremen's Union, the new AF of L. union or no union should represent them in future negotiations. The ILA has the backing of mine boss John L. Lewis.

5

This country, in a reversal of policy, has agreed to cooperate with 14 other western nations in keeping a fleet of weather ships in the North Atlantic. Their primary function is to give information to commercial airlines. Last October we had announced that we planned to withdraw our ships because we felt that the number and cost could not be justified. But other governments strongly urged us to reconsider. And the State Department today announced the ships will remain in service.

Ed Murrow is now in Korea. As soon as he arrived he joined a company in the line to get the feel of things in Korea now. This is his report after twelve hours in the line:

RECORDING

And this is C.C.. I'oo be back in a moment with a footnote to the news.

But first bob Dixon

CBS RADIO DIVISION

CHARLES COLLINGWOOD

Tuesday, December 22, 1953
7:45-8:00 p.m.

COLLINGWOOD: Ed Murrow is now in Korea. As soon as he arrived he joined a company in the line. This is his report after twelve hours in the line.

MURROW: This is Korea! Coming back here after one year is almost like coming home. The weather is the same, cold and damp. The blue haze of the charcoal fires hangs over Seoul in the late evening. The truck convoys wind up to the front followed by that blue-white biting dust. It seems that the same scavengers are on watch at the garbage dumps. The small children in the street don't seem to have aged. This, of course, is a most superficial report based on twelve hours with the line company, - Fox Company of the Wolfhound Regiment. I am told that conditions there are typical. This new line is a fighting line. I have never seen positions so well dug in, the fields of fire so clear. The boys seem to know why they're here. The mail and the packages are getting through from home. Troops in the rear areas are training and are training hard. If this war should begin again the foreward line is very hard. It's probably better than the old one. But the Army appears to have forgotten all that it learned about dispersal of vehicles and camouflage. A determined enemy attack from the air would create chaos, but to this reporter the most impressive aspects of this first day in Korea was that every man that I talked with had an answer to the question - why are you here? One said: "This thing has gone far enough." Another: "I'd rather fight here than in Texas." And when I asked a boy from Ohio why he was here, he said: "Now, that's a pretty stupid question, isn't it?" And there was no choice but to agree.

Up on the main line of resistance the squad tents are warm. They have oil-burning stoves. The mail and the packages are coming through all right. The Christmas decorations are a little more professional than they were a year ago, but whenever you ask a soldier where he would like to be outside of Korea he just grins and says - Oh, Ohio, or Kansas, or wherever his home happens to be.

Years ago this reporter formed the habit of doing his first broadcast from a foreign post by asking questions of a colleague who had been there for a long time. Tonight that colleague, and an old friend, is Bob Pierpoint.

Bob, is anyone out here worried about what will happen tomorrow night when the six-month term for the x explanations to PWs expires?

PIERPOINT: Ed, I don't think anyone is really particularly worried about it. It's a sort of a cut-and-dried procedure now. Everyone knows that after tomorrow night no prisoners will be allowed explanations, that they still have to spend another thirty days inside the prison compounds under the Indian guards because that was under the terms of the armistice agreement.

MURROW: Yes.

PIERPOINT: But, actually, that was set up so that the Korean political or peace conference could discuss their fate, but that has never convened.

MURROW: Yes.

PIERPOINT: But General Hull xxx went up and talked today with General Thimayya and it seems now that all the prisoners will be released a month from tomorrow. I don't think that there's any particular reason for worry. Of course, there is some concern about the twenty-two Americans who have chosen to stay with the Communists but, after all, they have made their choice. We've given them every opportunity to change their mind. They have refused and that's all there is to it.

MURROW: Well, Bob, we agreed a moment ago that this word "morale" is very difficult to define, but would you say that what I said earlier about the morale of American troops is accurate?

PIERPOINT: Yes, up to a certain point. I think it's always difficult to judge morale in peacetime. Of course, the guys do dislike the training problems that they have to run. They get awfully tired of digging foxholes for nothing, but, on the other hand, I think they do appreciate now that they're being well taken care of and that this is all very necessary. I was out today at a fighter base near Seoul here while you were up at the front and I got very much the same answers. The fellers say - Well, we got a job to do. Somebody had to stay in Korea, we were selected and we're going to go through with it. I'd say that's good morale.

MURROW: Well, Bob, I have spent one day with one company. You spent a lot of time with a lot of companies. Would you say that there is very much concern up here that this war is likely to start up again?

PIERPOINT: Well, of course, the guy on the line always has a little skepticism about what's going to happen just across the neutral zone there. He never can tell when somebody's going to fire off a round at him, but, generally speaking, I don't think anyone really expects the war to start up again here in the near future. I heard a report today from quite a high-ranking officer who says that there is no indication that the Chinese are building up at all over there and, as a matter of fact, I think more people have been worried about what Syngman Rhee would do.

MURROW: Yes.

PIERPOINT: And even that problem has to some extent diminished in the past few weeks.

MURROW: Then, Pierpoint, as an old Korean hand, you would say that what is really happening out here is that the boys are just sitting here and sweating it out, is that right?

PIERPOINT: That's about all they can do, Ed.

MURROW: I've just been chatting for a few minutes with Bob Pierpoint, our correspondent in Korea, and trying to cross-reference some of my immediate impressions with some of his more considered and experienced impressions.

Thank you very much, Bob.

We will be talking to you from Seoul again tomorrow night and this is Ed Murrow recording from Seoul.

Goodnight and good luck!

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

FOOTNOTE

In Baltimore, Maryland, a Catholic priest, Monsignor [redacted] Mendelis, is telling Children that it isn't Santa Claus who gives them presents, but their parents and friends out of the love Jesus put in their hearts. At first he was worried over how parents would react to his campaign to give, as he says, Christmas back to Christ, but now he reports letters are running three to one in his favor.

THIS IS CC... GOODNIGHT

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (Charles Collingwood)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening:

Secretary of State Dulles predicts that the new year will be "a time for great decisions." He feels that 1954 may see a recession of the horror of atomic warfare." The Secretary told the National Press Club in Washington that the danger of war has lessened in the last year or two. But the threat of Russian attack remains "immense and persistent." The Secretary also made it clear that if and when we meet with the Russians to discuss the control of atomic energy we will be ready to talk about the control of atomic weapons as well. The President has suggested a pool of atomic energy for peaceful purposes. Moscow has insisted on discussing a ban on weapons. Mr. Dulles said today that there is nothing in the Eisenhower proposal that would prohibit a discussion of atomic weapons.

And once again the Secretary took occasion to prod the French into approving the European army plan. He hinted today that unless the French act soon we may decide to withdraw the American troops now stationed in "advance positions" in West Germany. He said: "It is not acceptable that American troops be the principle defender of West Germany while the Germans themselves look on as mere observers." (West German soldiers would be part of the European army the French have delayed approving.) And Mr. Dulles also pointed out that the failure of the French to act has "placed the entire North Atlantic treaty organization on a foundation which is precarious."

In Paris today, Premier Joseph Laniel withdrew as a candidate for president of France. After ten unsuccessful attempts to be elected, in six days of voting by the Parliament, Laniel evidently withdrew because he is convinced he cannot be elected. There was no voting today. But day-long conferences among political leaders made no reported progress. It was what the French call "a dialogue of the deaf"..with both sides talking, but neither side willing to listen.

In Teheran, former Premier Mossadegh has now decided to appeal his sentence of three years in solitary confinement..for treason.

And in Palestine, Jordan officials charge that regular Isreali troops crossed the Jordan frontier in three places last night and killed three persons. United Nations officials are investigating.

There are now less than fifteen hours before the "persuasion period" for Korean war prisoners comes to an end. Inside a barbed wire compound at Panmunjom are 22 Americans, one British soldier and a hundred or so South Koreans who have decided not to return home. An American major tonight broadcast a message to the prisoners. He said, in part: "If you really want to come home now is the chance for which you have been waiting." They've been promised that they will face no military punishment if they change their minds before tomorrow morning's deadline.

Our special Ambassador to the proposed Korean Peace talks, Arthur Dean, says that while the outlook for a conference is "discouraging it is by no means hopeless. There is no easy, pat solution. It will take all the brains, energy, resolution and patience at our command."

One of Japan's top military spokesmen told an Associated Press Correspondent today: "There's a strong anti-American feeling in Japan and it's increasing. It's too bad but it's true." He suggested that American troops be withdrawn as soon as possible or "the day will come when we will regret not having made the move."

A group of Republican Congressmen met with the President at the White House today to discuss what could be done to assure another Republican victory in 1954. In a statement released after the meeting, they concluded: "A republican Congress can be elected if the Administration's program is wise, progressive and forward looking and stresses a humanitarian approach."

Former Assistant Secretary of State Spruille Braden appeared before the Senate Internal subcommittee. He testified that while Ambassador to Cuba he opposed and defeated a proposal by Harry Dexter White which would have bankrupted Cuba and hurt relations between the two countries. Braden also said that interference by State Department representatives who were "socialistically inclined" prevented our establishing a sound foreign policy in Latin America.

Here in New York, dock workers are voting on whether the International Longshoremen's Union, the new AF of L union or no union should represent them in future negotiations. The ILA has the backing of mine boss John L. Lewis.

This country, in a reversal of policy, has agreed to cooperate with 14 other western nations in keeping a fleet of weather ships in the North Atlantic. Their primary function is to give information to commercial airlines. Last October we had announced that we planned to withdraw our ships because we felt that the number and cost could not be justified. But other governments strongly urged us to reconsider. And the State Department today announced the ships will remain in service.

Ed Murrow is now in Korea. As soon as he arrived he joined a company in the line. This is his report after twelve hours in the line.

MURROW: This is Korea! Coming back here after one year is almost like coming home. The weather is the same, cold and damp. The blue haze of the charcoal fires hangs over Seoul in the late evening. The truck convoys wind up to the front followed by that blue-white biting dust. It seems that the same scavengers are on watch at the garbage dumps. The small children in the street don't seem to have aged. This, of course, is a most superficial report based on twelve hours with the line company, - Fox Company of the Wolfhound Regiment. I am told that conditions there are typical. This new line is a fighting line. I have never seen positions so well dug in, the fields of fire so clear. The boys seem to know why they're here. The mail and the packages are getting through from home. Troops in the rear areas are training and are training hard. If this war should begin again the foreward line is very hard. It's probably better than the old one. But the Army appears to have forgotten all that it learned about dispersal of vehicles and camouflage. A determined enemy attack from the air would create chaos, but to this reporter the most impressive aspects of this first day in Korea was that every man that I talked with had an answer to the question - why are you here? One said: "This thing has gone far enough." Another: "I'd rather fight here than in Texas." And when I asked a boy from Ohio why he was here, he said: "Now, that's a pretty stupid question, isn't it?" And there was no choice but to agree.

Up on the main line of resistance the squad tents are warm. They have oil-burning stoves. The mail and the packages are coming through all right. The Christmas decorations are a little more professional than they were a year ago, but whenever you ask a soldier where he would like to be outside of Korea he just grins and says - Oh, Ohio, or Kansas, or wherever his home happens to be.

Years ago this reporter formed the habit of doing his first broadcast from a foreign post by asking questions of a colleague who had been there for a long time. Tonight that colleague, and an old friend, is Bob Pierpoint.

Bob, is anyone out here worried about what will happen tomorrow night when the six-month term for the explanations to PWs expires?

PIERPOINT:Ed, I don't think anyone is really particularly worried about it. It's a sort of a cut-and-dried procedure now. Everyone knows that after tomorrow night no prisoners will be allowed explanations, that they still have to spend another thirty days inside the prison compounds under the Indian guards because that was under the terms of the armistice agreement.

MURROW: Yes.

PIERPOINT:But, actually, that was set up so that the Korean political or peace conference could discuss their fate, but that has never convened.

MURROW: Yes.

PIERPOINT:But General Hull went up and talked today with General Thimayya and it seems now that all the prisoners will be released a month from tomorrow. I don't think that there's any particular reason for worry. Of course, there is some concern about the twenty-two Americans who have chosen to stay with the Communists but, after all, they have made their choice. We've given them every opportunity to change their mind. They have refused and that's all there is to it.

MURROW: Well, Bob, we agreed a moment ago that this word "morale" is very difficult to define, but would you say that what I said earlier about the morale of American tropps is accurate?

PIERPOINT: Yes, up to a certain point. I think it's always difficult to judge morale in peacetime. Of course, the guys do dislike the training problems that they have to run. They get awfully tired of digging foxholes for nothing, but, on the other hand, I think they do appreciate now that they're being well taken care of and that this is all very necessary. I was out today at a fighter base near Seoul here while you were up at the front and I got very much the same answers. The fellers say - Well, we got a job to do. Somebody had to stay in Korea, we were selected and we're going to go through with it. I'd say that's good morale.

MURROW: Well, Bob, I have spent one day with one company. You spent a lot of time with a lot of companies. Would you say that there is very much concern up here that this war is likely to start up again?

PIERPOINT: Well, of course, the guy on the line always has a little skepticism about what's going to happen just across the neutral zone there. He never can tell when somebody's going to fire off a round at him, but, generally speaking, I don't think anyone really expects the war to start up again here in the near future. I heard a report today from quite a high-ranking officer who says that there is no indication that the Chinese are building up at all over there and, as a matter of fact, I think more people have been worried about what Syngman Rhee would do.

MURROW: Yes.

PIERPOINT: And even that problem has to some extent diminished in the past few weeks.

MURROW: Then, Pierpoint, as an old Korean hand, you would say that what is really happening out here is that the boys are just sitting here and sweating it out, is that right?

PIERPOINT: That's about all they can do, Ed.

MURROW: I've just been chatting for a few minutes with Bob Pierpoint, our correspondent in Korea, and trying to cross-reference some of my immediate impressions with some of his more considered and experienced impressions.

Thank you very much, Bob.

We will be talking to you from Seoul again tomorrow night and this is Ed Murrow recording from Seoul.

Good night and good luck!

COLLINGWOOD: And this is Charles Collingwood. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news.

But first Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

COLLINGWOOD: In Baltimore, Maryland, a Catholic priest, Monsignor Mendelis, is telling children that it isn't Santa Claus who gives them presents, but their parent and friends out of the love Jesus put in their hearts. At first he was worried over how parents would react to his campaign to give, as he says, Christmas back to Christ, but now he reports letters are running three to one in his favor.

This is Charles Collingwood...GOODNIGHT.

Wednesday Dec 23, 1953

Good evening:

Lavrenti Beria , once one of the most powerful men in the Soviet Union, has been shot by a firing squad. The government newspaper Izvestia told the Russian people today that six of Beria's top aides, also found guilty of treason, were shot at the same time. They had no appeal from their death sentence. Soviet law permits none in such cases. For almost 15 years Lavrenti Beria was the head of the Soviet Union's Ministry of Internal Affairs.. the M.V.D... the secret police. He was the first deputy under former Premier Stalin. And until his arrest in June of this year he was a first deputy premier under Malenkov. The six men who went to their death with Beria were all once top men in the Soviet government..particularly the business of secret police, special investigations, concentration camps. They were tried and are said to have confessed "orally and in writing" before a court headed by Marshal Koniev, a war-time Soviet hero.

The Russians lost a former secret police chief.. and the people of France today--finally--got a new president. On the 13th ballot by the French Parliament the honors went to Senator Rene Coty, no relation to the perfume manufacturers. Coty is 71.. a member of parliament for 30 years. He is almost unknown to most French people. And no one--at the moment--seems to know what he thinks of the European army plan or the North Atlantic treaty organization. Coty's duties as chief of state call for him to be pretty much of a figure-head. Among his chief jobs is the naming of new premiers. Tonight, shortly after his election, Coty told the Parliament: "In the words of World War One Premier Georges Clemenceau: "Liberty is the right to discipline one's self and not to be disciplined by someone else." He said he would not forget and others should not forget that "the regime cannot defend itself unless it knows how to reform itself."

The long wrangle over chosing a French president has left many American officials discouraged. They regard the 13 ballots as a symptom of the deep political divisions in France. And they fear these divisions may be reflected in long wrangling when the new government is formed in January.

Tonight, soon after Coty's election was announced, the White House issued a statement to make it clear to the French--and the rest of our west European allies--that the President supports in detail Secretary of State Dulles recent warning to the French: a failure to agree soon to join the European army plan will make it necessary for Washington to re-examine its basic European policies. The President believes that the failure of the European army plan "would confront the United States with the necessity of reappraising its basic policies." The President considers this plan "the only practical proposal for ending permanently the recurrent strife between France and Germany".. and creating a solid core for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

In Korea today, the 22 young Americans who have turned down a an almost final chance to return home from Communist prison camps have now been listed as "absent without leave." In a few minutes we'll hear an excerpt from the American message that they rejected.

India's Prime Minister Nehru said today that if Pakistan should accept American military aid it would threaten Asian peace and weaken Pakistan "in the spirit of man." Nehru says this reminds him of creeping colonialism. But his sister, Madame Pandit, who is also president of the United Nations General Assembly, told the Indian parliament: (IT) should not develop a fear psychosis over the American-Pakistan situation... She does not believe there is any threat from America.. and she is not prepared to believe charges about American imperialism.

In Washington, the government announces that after rising for eight months the cost of living dipped slightly during November. The government index went down three-tenths of one per cent.. mainly due to a big drop in food prices.

Democratic Senator Douglas of Illinois says he believes the country is now in a "real recession" which might contain the seeds of a full scale depression. He asks the President to prepare a program for such an eventuality.

Vice President Nixon will be heard over many of these CBS radio stations tonight in a report on his 45-thousand mile tour of the Far East and the Middle East. He'll be heard at 10;30 p.m. eastern time.

~~The Department of Agriculture says it has found no evidence of~~ any ~~widespread, above normal profit making by beef and cattle processors and wholesale distributors during the past two years.~~

Here in New York rival union logshoremen fought with knives and fists over a federal bargaining election. Two hundred police restored order after three dockers were knifed and four others beaten up enough to be sent to hospitals.

The Baseball Writers Association today selected Junior Gilliam, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, as the National League rookie of the year. Gilliam took over second base for the Dodgers last spring.

And in London, the mother of the mysteriously missing british diplomat, Guy Burgess received a Christmas letter from him. Burgess has been missing for two and a half years and is now believed to be behind the iron curtain. The intimate letter to his mother was ~~mailed~~ apparently mailed in Great Britain by someone other than Burgess.. whose whereabouts ~~is~~ are still a mystery.

Now here is Ed Murrow's recorded report from Korea:

And this is CC. - I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news - Good food, Bob Dixon

FOOTNOTE

Chances are you don't have on hand Volume "B" of the 1952 Soviet Encyclopedia. But if you did, you would find under Beria, L.P.:"One of the outstanding leaders of the Communist Party and the Soviet State...a true pupil and comrade in arms of J.V. Stalin...he possess five orders of Lenin, two orders of the Red Banner and seven medals." Tonite, L.P. Beria is dead... shot as a traitor. Which perhaps only goes to prove how difficult it is these days for historians to keep up with history.

This is CC...goodnite.

CBS RADIO DIVISION

CHARLES COLLINGWOOD

Wednesday, December 23, 1953
7:45-8:00 p.m.

COLLINGWOOD: Now, here is Ed Murrow's recorded report from Korea.

MURROW: This is Korea! This reporter has spent most of the day with half of one platoon of Marines, about a hundred yards from the southern line of the demilitarized zone. There isn't any news up there, not even about what goes on in Korea, so I've asked Bob Pierpoint to brief you on the day's news.

Bob!

PIERPOINT: Well, Ed, first of all I'd like to play a part of the recording that was played as an explanation to the American prisoners today.

VOICE: If there are any of you who have been fearful of expressing your desire to return to the United States now is your opportunity. Now is the time. Come forward and inform the guard nearest you. The Indian guards will protect you. You have nothing to fear. The guards will protect you. In a matter of hours you will be on your way home. We shall wait here with the Indian guards for half-an-hour and those of you who may desire to come forward you need not fear for your safety. If you really want to come home now is the chance for which you have been waiting. The ninety-day explanation period expires tonight - twenty-three December at midnight. The fact that you have not elected repatriation prior to this time will not be held against you. With the protection afforded you by the Indian guards you are free to make your choice.

PIERPOINT: That was the voice of the American explainer, Major Edward Moorer, Ed, and the news is that none of the Americans chose to come back. But there's more than that. The pro-Communist prisoners sang and danced and shouted during the entire broadcast. It was a weird and a rather frightening sight up there at Panmunjom today. One of the observers said it was probably the strangest spectacle he'd ever witnessed. The show started just about nine o'clock thismorning when around a hundred Allied officials, correspondents and officers arrived at Panmunjom. The United Nations observers were restricted to an area about thirty yards from the actual prisoner enclosure and the loudspeakers were about fifteen yards closer in to the barbed wire fence. At first the prisoners, the twenty-two Americans and one British soldier and the hundred-or-so South Koreans, they merely continued to play volley ball or ping-pong and generally milled around inside, but at the first sound from the loudspeaker there was a carefully prearranged reaction and it certainly demonstrated the strong hypnotic effect of any group action. The prisoners immediately began singing Communist songs, then they joined hands in traditional and highly emotional oriental folk dances. One of the Korean correspondents explained that one of the folk dances was a harvest dance. Some of the Americans joined in. They danced with South Koreans and with other Americans in twos and threes and there was a lot of rhythmical hand-clapping and the beating of cymbals and drums during the dancing. They all seemed to be enjoying themselves. Many of the Americans laughed and joked at the U. N. observers and correspondents and none of them appeared to be listening to the recorded explanations being played. Incidentally, there were only nineteen Americans actually in the enclosure. Three of the Americans, so the Indians said, were in the hospital. But even though they were not listening or did not seem to be listening, it was rather obvious that they must have heard something that was being said. The U. N. message was played four different times for each one of the three nationalities. It was played loudly and there wasn't singing and dancing all of the time. The message itself was confined to a rather simple and dignified explanation to the prisoners and it told them to walk up to the nearest armed Indian neutral guard and ask to be sent home, but not a single pro-Communist prisoner seized the opportunity. Years of Communist indoctrination and the amazingly strong group control exercise were just too much.

At the end of the day the prisoners requested that U. N. correspondents visit the prison camp to talk with the twenty-two Americans tomorrow. I've asked to go along on that trip. The Indian neutrals have given their permission for the correspondents to attend and it certainly ought to be a very interesting session. That's about it for today, Ed.

MURROW: Thank you, Bob Pierpoint, for the report on what happened at Panmunjom today.

This is Ed Murrow recording from Seoul.

Goodnight and good luck!

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

Good evening:

The President tonight offered a Christmas eve prayer for peace. And he told the nation:"All hearts in America are filled with special thanks to God that the blood of those we love no longer spills on battlefields abroad." It was Mr. Eisenhower's first Christmas message to the nation and we've recorded for you the Christmas eve prayer offered by the President:

(runs 3 minutes

end cue:

"our supplication that peace on earth may live with us, always.")

It was a busy day for the President who earlier personally greeted 516 members of the White House staff. With Mrs. Eisenhower at his side the President gave each staff member a portrait of Abraham Lincoln that he had painted.. a copy of an original in the living quarters of the White House.

In Korea and wherever American members of the armed forces overseas are doing duty it was a quiet day. In a few minutes we'll hear Ed Murrow's report from Korea.

Even the 22 Americans who have refused to return to their country had some sort of Christmas celebration in the Communist prisoner of war camps they prefer to home. For most of these men it was the fourth such holiday in prison. And their Indian guards say they know "through secret means" that none of the men really wants to return home.

Admiral Radford, the chairman of our joint chiefs of staff, was in Korea today visiting South Korean President Rhee. They spent two and a half hours together. But there is no information on the subjects they discussed.

While Korea was quiet the French in Indo-China announced that Communist Viet Min forces opened a Christmas eve offensive about 225 miles south of Hanoi. The enemy struck into a fortified French post and then routed a French unit trying to reach the area.

In India today, Prime Minister Nehru told his Parliament that the Chinese Communists have withdrawn many of their troops from Tibet.. because of the difficulty in feeding them.

And George V. Allen, our ambassador to India, said in New Delhi today that we have given India 20-million dollars to buy railway locomotives and freight cars... That's the largest single amount given to India so far under the Technical Assistance Program.

And in Washington, Secretary of State Dulles announced that we have returned to Japan about 20 small islands they lost in World War two. We will retain possession of Okinawa and some 200 other smaller islands for strategic reasons. Mr. Dulles says we intend to retain these islands "for the foreseeable future." Prime Minister Yoshida has expressed to the State Department a "thank you, for the big Christmas gift."

In Bethlehem today, Jordan and Israel, who are technically at war, engaged in temporary acts of peace. Israel allowed more than a thousand Christian Arabs who live in Israel to visit in the Arab section of Jerusalem

In Vatican City, Pope Pius said in his annual Christmas message that European unity would be a means of preserving peace on earth. He asked:"Why continue to hesitate? The end is clear;the needs of the nations are obvious to all." The Pope said that through unity the nations of Europe could overcome the division caused by a discrepancy in standards of living and productivity."

In this country, the Chicago Weather Bureau says there is very little chance of a white Christmas. The sky is cloudless over most of the country. There were a few scattered snow flurries reported in Northern Michigan..parts of the midwest.. and some sections of New England and the Rocky Mountain states

Dun and Bradstreet reports that Christmas shoppers this month spent more money than in any previous Christmas season. On the basis of a preliminary survey its estimated that the retail volume of this shopping season will be about 17 and a third billion dollars... one to three per cent higher than the figures for last Christmas. And following the pattern of the last few years most of the shopping was done this last week.

Here in New York, A.F. of L. President George Meany today charged that the New York waterfront election was held under "circumstances of intimidation and violence by known criminals to a degree without precedent in a representation election." The National Labor Relations Board says that the independent union--recently ousted by the American Federation of Labor--is leading the new A.F. of L. union by 15-hundred votes. But 45-hundred ballots have been challenged. Both unions say they are confident the vote will turn out in their favor.

Its now Christmas day in Korea and Ed Murrow is spending it with the troops. Before he left Seoul he made this Christmas eve recording for you:

(Murrow runs: 5;40

return cue: Good night and good luck)

And this reporter would add his own wish for a Christmas for everyone as full and as happy as every Christmas should be. Christmas Eve is a time when only the hardest hearts & scrooges ~~and~~ can resist the Christmas spirit.

This is C.C. - Good night

~~Kor~~ Christmas is the hardest time for soldiers in a foreign land. It is a day when no ~~[illegible]~~ ~~no~~ ~~[illegible]~~ activity can keep out thoughts of home. The unhappiest of us will have a Christmas than anyone in Korea. Those of us at home may well spare a kind thought for those in Korea.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
(WITH CHARLES COLLINGWOOD)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening:

The President tonight offered a Christmas eve prayer for peace. And he told the nation: "All hearts in America are filled with special thanks to God that the blood of those we love no longer spills on battlefields abroad." It was Mr. Eisenhower's first Christmas message to the nation and we've recorded for you the Christmas eve prayer offered by the President:

(runs 3 minutes -- end cue: "our supplication that peace on earth may live with us, always.")

It was a busy day for the President who earlier personally greeted 516 members of the White House staff. With Mrs. Eisenhower at his side the President gave each staff member a portrait of Abraham Lincoln that he had painted...a copy of an original in the living quarters of the White House.

In Korea and wherever American members of the armed forces overseas are doing duty it was a quiet day. In a few minutes we'll hear Ed Murrow's report from Korea.

Even the 22 Americans who have refused to return to their country had some sort of Christmas celebration in the Communist prisoner of war camps they prefer to home. For most of these men it was the fourth such holiday in prison. And their Indian guards say they know "through secret means" that none of the men really wants to return home.

Admiral Radford, the chairman of our joint chiefs of staff, was in Korea today visiting South Korean President Rhee. They spent two and a half hours together. But there is no information on the subjects they discussed.

While Korea was quiet the French in Indo-China announced that Communist Viet Min forces opened a Christmas eve offensive about 225 miles south of Hanoi. The enemy struck into a fortified French post and then routed a French unit trying to reach the area.

In India today, Prime Minister Nehru told his Parliament that the Chinese Communists have withdrawn many of their tropps from Tibet...because of the difficulty in feeding them.

And George V. Allen, our ambassador to India, said in New Delhi today that we have given India 20-million dollars to buy railway locomotives and freight cars...That's the largest single amount given to India so far under the Technical Assistance Program.

And In Washington, Secretary of State Dulles announced that we have returned to Japan about 20 small islands they lost in World War Two. We will retain possession of Okinawa and some 200 other smaller islands for strategic reasons. Mr. Dulles says we intend to retain these islands "for the foreseeable future." Prime Minister Yoshida has expressed to the State Department a "thank you, for the big Christmas gift."

In Bethlehem today, Jordan and Israel, who are technically at war, engaged in temporary acts of peace. Israel allowed more than a thousand Christian Arabs who live in Israel to visit in the Arab section of Jerusalem.

In Vatican City, Pope Pius said in his annual Christmas message that European unity would be a means of preserving peace on earth. He asked: "Why continue to hesitate? The end is clear; the needs of the nations are obvious to all." The Pope said that through unity the nations of Europe could overcome the division caused by a discrepancy in standards of living and productivity."

In this country, the Chicago Weather Bureau says there is very little chance of a white Christmas. The sky is cloudless over most of the country. There were a few scattered snow flurries reported in Northern Michigan...parts of the midwest...and some sections of New England and the Rocky Mountain states.

Dun and Bradstreet reports that Christmas shoppers this month spent more money than in any previous Christmas season. On the basis of a preliminary survey its estimated that the retail volume of this shopping season will be about 17 and a third billion dollars...one to three per cent higher than the figures for last Christmas. And following the pattern of the last few years most of the shopping was done this last week.

Here in New York, A.F. of L. President George Meany today charged that the New York waterfront election was held under "circumstances of intimidation and violence by known criminals to a degree without precedent in a representation election." The National Labor Relations Board says that the independent union--recently ousted by the American Federation of Labor--is leading he new A.F. of L. union by 15-hundred votes. But 45-hundred ballots have been challenged. Both unions say they are confident the vote will turn out in their favor.

It's now Christmas day in Korea and Ed Murrow is spending it with the troops. Before he left Seoul he made this Christmas eve recording for you:
MURROW: This is Korea. It's Christmas Eve out here. There is a threat or a promise of snow in the air, also a little Christmas music. Today, the (drowned out), but tonight the cold will stab through thick winter clothing. The air will bite keenly, but for most of the boys the loneliness will be worse. They aren't beefing about lack of mail or parcels. A good job has been done in that department. The chow is all right. I lunched today with an outfit that was stringing wire. The wire was being flown in by helicopter, but, then, it had to be manhandled into place. We had combat rations, but things weren't bad. There was a rumor that everyone would get a day off tomorrow. There was a small argument between a boy from Kansas and another from Oregon. The subject was - how long since we had a day off? One said six months. The other said it was Thanksgiving. And the first said maybe that was right, but it sure seemed like six months ago. Tonight the trees will be lit even up where they only have candles. There will be some singing and in the rear areas no end of parties for Korean kids. Some letters will be written, some prayers said, and some unspoken, and I suppose most thoughts will go out across that big ocean that divides these boys and men from home. Old magazines will be read and several thousand guys named Joe sitting in brown tents heated by oil stoves will say to each other - do you think we'll still be here next Christmas?

Up at the front about one-third of the men in the line companies will be standing to their weapons out there in the cold darkness listening and looking and maybe thinking. This reporter has been thinking for the past three days that there are certain things we, as a nation, might learn from what's going on out here. In the first place, there is this coalition of free nations. None of them directly or physically threatened by what happened in Korea, but they sent their sons out here in a common venture, a common cause, and it has worked. There is perhaps another lesson we might learn from Korea. Generally it's called tolerance, The Army's policy of non-segregation has produced tolerance. The infusion of South Koreans into the American armed forces has produced more tolerance and, then, there's another example being wrought out here - generosity. Not just the Christmas parties for orphans, but the rebuilding of schools and hospitals. Not done with dollars but with hands and much sweat. I would suppose that no previous American Army ever found itself in exactly this position. There is no war, but there could be tonight. This means that the Army must be both ready and relaxed. Neither the Commanders nor the troops see any end or any solution, but this produces no demand for immediate action and no hysteria. There is a calm, purposeful atmosphere about this Army which would suit us well at home. This is not an Army seized with a desire to dictate to its allies out here and from that we might learn something about the way to deal with allies in general. But I have the feeling that we might draw the primary lessons from what appears to me to be the attitude of the American troops here and I repeat that four days with them is all I've had. Most of them don't like Korea, but they have a vague idea why they are here. They don't want to conquer anybody, but they are quietly, methodically, and efficiently going about the business of preparing to fight if they must. Maybe that's because the strident tones of politicians at home are softened by distance. Maybe it's because soldiers are generally too tired to attend to the words of politicos. I don't know. But there is a steadiness, attention to detail, and a determination out here that is most impressive. If, as many Generals including Eisenhower have said, an Army is merely a reflection of the climate and public opinion of the country from which it comes then by those standards America is rather less confused, divided, and hysterical when viewed from Korea than when viewed from Washington. This reporter is leaving now to spend Christmas Eve through to the dawn of Christmas Dawn with half a platoon of Marines at an observation post. Theirs was a gracious invitation, warmly accepted, although it's going to be mighty cold up there. And since I have access to a microphone, and they haven't, they would not consider it presumptuous of me to wish you a most agreeable Christmas Season on behalf of your fellow-countrymen who will be standing to their weapons up there tonight. If it does snow, the scene won't be very much like Valley Forge, but those boys out there will do to stand in for their ancestors. This is Ed Murrow recording from Seoul. Goodnight and good luck.

COLLINGWOOD: And this is Charles Collingwood. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news - but first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

COLLINGWOOD: Christmas is the hardest time for soldiers in a foreign land. It is a day when no cynicism and no activity can keep out thoughts of home. The unhappiest of us will have a better Christmas than anyone in Korea. Those of us at home may well spare a Christmas thought for those in Korea.

This is Charles Collingwood - Goodnight!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

CHARLES COLLINGWOOD

Thursday, December 24, 1953
7:45-8:00 p.m.

COLLINGWOOD: It is now Christmas Day in Korea and Ed Murrow is spending it with the troops. Before he left Seoul he made this Christmas Eve recording for you.

MURROW: This is Korea! It's Christmas Eve out here. There is a threat or a promise of snow in the air, also a little Christmas music. Today, the (drowned out), but tonight the cold will stab through thick winter clothing. The air will bite keenly, but for most of the boys the loneliness will be worse. They aren't beefing about lack of mail or parcels. A good job has been done in that department. The chow is all right. I lunched today with an outfit that was stringing wire. The wire was being flown in by helicopter, but, then, it had to be manhandled into place. We had combat rations, but things weren't bad. There was a rumor that everyone would get a day off tomorrow. There was a small argument between a boy from Kansas and another from Oregon. The subject was - how long since we had a day off? One said six months. The other said it was Thanksgiving. And the first said maybe that was right, but it sure seemed like sixmonths ago. Tonight the trees will be lit even up where they only have candles. There will be some singing and in the rear areas no end of parties for Korean kids. Some letters will be written, some prayers said, and some unspoken, and I suppose most thoughts will go out across that big ocean that divides these boys and men from home. Old magazines will be read and several thousand guys named Joe sitting in brown tents heated by oil stoves will say to each other - do you think we'll still be here next Christmas?

Up at the front about onethird of the men in the line companies will be standing to their weapons out there in the cold darkness listening and looking and maybe thinking. This reporter has been thinking for the past three days that there are certain things we, as a nation, might learn from what's going on out here. In the first place, there is this coalition of free nations. None of them directly or physically threatened by whathappened in Korea, but they sent their sons out here in a common venture, a common cause, and it has worked. There is perhaps another lesson we might learn from Korea. Generally it's called tolerance. The Army's policy of nonsegregation has produced tolerance. The infusion of South Koreans into the American armed forces has produced more tolerance and, then, there's another example being wrought out here, - generosity. Not just the Christmas parties for orphans, but the rebuilding of schools and hospitals. Not done with dollars but with hands and much sweat. I would suppose that no previous American Army ever found itself in exactly this position. There is no war, but there could be tonight. This means that the Army must be both ready and relaxed. Neither the Commanders nor the troops see any end or any solution, but this produces no demand for immediate action and no hysteria. There is a calm, purposeful atmosphere about this Army which would suit us well at home. This is not an Army seized with a desire to dictate to its allies out here and from that we might learn something about the way to deal with allies in general. But I have the feeling that we might draw the primary lessons from what appears to me to be the attitude of the American troops here and I repeat that four days with them is all I've had. Most of them don't like Korea, but they have a vague idea why they are here. They don't want to conquer anybody, but they are quietly, methodically, and efficiently going about the business of preparing to fight if they must. Maybe that's because the strident tones of politicians at home are softened by distance. Maybe it's because soldiers are generally too tired to attend to the words of politicos. I don't know. But there is a steadiness, attention to detail, and a determination out here that is most impressive. If, as many Generals including Eisenhower havesaid, an Army is merely a reflection of the climate and public opinion of the country from which it comes then by those standards America is rather less confused, divided, and hysterical when viewed from Korea than when viewed from Washington. This reporter is leaving now to spend Christmas Eve through to the dawn of Christmas Dawn with half a platoon of Marines at an observation post. Theirs was a gracious invitation, warmly accepted, although it's going to be mighty cold up there. And since I have access to a microphone, and they haven't, they would not consider it presumptuous of me to wish you a most agreeable Christmas Season on behalf of your fellow-countrymen who will be standing to ~~stack~~ their weapons up there tonight. If it does snow, the scene won't be very much like Valley Forge, but those boys out there will do to stand in for their ancestors.

This is Ed Murrow recording from Seoul.

Goodnight and good luck!

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

Dec. 25, 1953

Good evening:

American troops in Korea on this Christmas Day were praised for their efforts and warned again of the threat of Communism. Two high American churchmen spoke to the soldiers. Methodist Bishop William C. Martin told the men that by sharing their Christmas with the people of Korea they had brought the spiritual message of the holiday to more people in Korea than ever before. And Bishop Martin--who is president of the National Council of Churches of the United States--told the men they must not think of themselves as merely defending a 150-mile line across Korea. He said: "You came here to protect those who could not help themselves. Your gift to these unfortunate people is not paralleled in the history of Korea." And with the American Third Division, Francis Cardinal Spellman warned of the challenge from Moscow. He said: "The red star of Communism has risen to challenge our star of Bethlehem."

Edward R. Murrow who has spent the past week in Korea, commuting between Seoul and the front lines recorded for you a few ~~minutes~~ hours ago his observations on Christmas in Korea. Here it is:

(runs 4;50 ending Good night and good luck)

Korea was quiet. But in Indo-China Communist troops were again on the march. They have invaded the independent kingdom of Laos and are said to be moving toward the border of Thailand. The prime minister of LAOS has appealed to the free world to halt this "odious aggression." The enemy launched his attack yesterday from his mountain hideouts in neighboring Viet Nam. And the heavily outnumbered French and Laotion forces were reported to have suffered heavy casualties in their early retreat. Reports from Saigon indicate that the enemy may be determined to try to cut Indo-China in two, at its narrow waist.

On Formosa, Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek told his national assembly again that he hopes his Nationalist troops can recover the mainland of China within the next year. He described the assembly meeting as a "political counter-offensive" preceeding a military counter-attack.

And the Moscow radio in a rare display broadcast a merry Christmas wish to the United States. The Moscow radio commentator said that not in recent years had the possibility of peace been so close or so real..as it is now.

As much of the world observed a day of peace and happiness, two railroad wrecks in separated corners of the globe brought death to hundreds. Reports from Vienna indicate that as many as 186 persons may have been killed in a wreck in Czechoslovakia yesterday. Of course there's no official information from behind the iron curtain. But reporters indicate that one way or another they have determined that there was a serious train wreck.. that "many persons were killed".. when two trains collided.

And from New Zealand we are still getting the details on the worst train wreck in that country's history: 64 bodies counted and an official estimate of 100 missing. Prime Minister Sidney G. Holland says close to 164 must be dead. The accident occured when the Wellington-to-Auckland express plunged into a raging river. The river is normally ~~clam~~ calm and is spanned by a bridge. But on Christmas eve either the bridge had been carried away or the impact of the train caused it to collapse. Officials are not yet certain. But they do know that five of the train's nine cars were catapulted into the river.

The accident occured as Queen Eilizabeth was visiting in Auckland. Many of the passengers were on their way to see and hear her annual Christmas message to the Commonwealth. The Queen expressed her deep sorrow. And then in a broadcast to her people throughout the commonwealth she re-dedicated herself "heart and soul, every day of my life" to her people. Queen Elizabeth said:"The Commonwealth bears no resemblance to the empires of the past. It is an entirely new conception.. built on the highest qualities of the spirit of man... friendship...loyalty and the desire for freedom and peace." She went on to note that some people have expressed the hope that her reign may mark a new Elizabethan age. "Frankly," said the Queen,"I do not myself feel at all like my great Tudor forebearer, who was blessed with neither husband nor children, who ruled as a despot and was never able to leave her native shores." But she said there was one comparison with the first Elizabethan age..."Britain was great in spirit and well endowed with men who were ready to encompass the earth."

In this country, the President today flew from Washington to Augusta , Georgia, with his family. Mr. Eisenhower told reporters that for the next ten days he plans to do nothing but work. The President was in high spirits. At one point when photographers were snapping pictues of him and his grandchildren Mr. Eisenhower challenged the photographers to a "contest".. and he began taking pictures of the camermen. Later, he apologized to reporters who had to leave their families to make the trip to Augusta. He told them:"Why don't you just write up a bunch of stories for use here and go on back. As a matter of fact"..he said---"I'll be glad to write your stories for you if you want me to." And later the President said: "Nothing can make me mad today."

Throughout the country most of us had fair skies..except for rain in parts of the south.

The National Safety Council, maintaining its constant warning to motorists to drive carefully, says tonight that what it calls "an appaling massacre" is taking place on our highways. One tabulation shows 144 killed in highway accidents by this afternoon... that's more than the Safety Council had estimated.

Christmas meant happiness in most American homes, but in some it meant tragedy. For, as it brings out the best in most of us, it brought out the worst in some. In Long Beach, California, a legless veteran of the Korean war was set upon by a gang of young hoodlums. They beat him up, broke his artificial legs, stole the watch his wife gave him for Christmas and took his last ten dollars.

But in Provo, Utah, they stopped a train to bring happiness to a 7-year-old crippled boy. He has cerebral palsy and the thing he likes best to do is to sit in the window and wave at the trains that go by. Well, while he sat in open-eyed wonder, the train stopped, right in front of his window, and out stepped Santa Claus and the trains crew. They brought him an electric train and showed him how a railroad man like him should run it.

In Milwaukee, four prisoners at the County Jail said they wanted to go to confession and take Holy Communion on Christmas Day. The guards opened their cells and they tried to stage a jail break.

Here in New York tonight Lee Shubert died. The 78-year-old theatrical producer suffered "a complete failure of the circulatory system." Lee Shubert was one of three brothers whose theatrical business was at one time estimated to be worth 400-million dollars.

7

In Gilman, Colorado a man lent a Santa Claus outfit to a friend and then went berserk, killing himself and a neighbor and seriously wounding his wife and another woman.

But in Phoenix, Arizona, a fifteen year old boy said "People sure are wonderful." People from all over the country had sent Wallace Avans gifts and money to help make a Christmas for the Avans family after the boy had rescued his baby brother in a fire which wiped out all the family's possessions.

c A six day truckdrivers strike against the Minneapolis Star and Tribune ended today as both sides apparently got the Christmas spirit and reached a compromise.

It took a lot of ingenuity to get Christmas dinner for some three thousand families in Burlington, Vermont. A major gas failure cooled the stoves in all homes which use gas for cooking.

But for most Americans, this Christmas was as it should be, happy and generous and full of the things which warm the heart.

In Washington, ~~some of the Senators and congressmen who spent the day in the city had something to tell reporters.~~ Democratic Senator Gillette of Iowa says the Administration is using forrign aid as a "club" to compel our allies to accept our policy. Gilette feels there was "no justification whatever" for Secretary of State Dulles recent warning to France that we would make "an agonizing re-appraisal" of our foreign policy if the European army plan is not ratified soon.

Democratic Senator Hunt says he's going to ask Dempcratic leaders to back his plan to make Democrats vice-chairmen of Senate committees.

Republican Representative Brown of Ohio wants the postoffice department to issue a special 3-cent commemorative stamp in honor of Ohio's late Senator Taft.

And Republican Representative Hope of Kansas says he doubts that there will be any ~~changes~~ major changes in the present farm policy.

AND THAT's the news on this christmas day. This is CC.. Good night.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
(WITH CHARLES COLLINGWOOD)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening:

American troops in Korea on this Christmas Day were praised for their efforts and warned again of the threat of Communism. Two high American churchmen spoke to the soldiers. Methodist Bishop William C. Martin told the men that by sharing their Christmas with the people of Korea they had brought the spiritual message of the holiday to more people in Korea than ever before. And Bishop Martin -- who is the president of the National Council of Churches of the United States -- told the men they must not think of themselves as merely defending a 150-mile line across Korea. He said: "You came here to protect those who could not help themselves. Your gift to these unfortunate people is not paralleled in the history of Korea." And with the American Third Division, Francis Cardinal Spellman warned of the challenge from Moscow. He said: "The red star of Communism has risen to challenge our star of Bethlehem."

Edward R. Murrow who has spent the past week in Korea, commuting between Seoul and the front lines recorded for you a few hours ago his observation on Christmas in Korea. Here it is:

MURROW: ....a few flakes of snow about midnight last night, some pretty fair singing in the rear areas particularly "Silent Night." The chaplains and the padres talked briefly, at least those I heard. Their words were traditional. This wasn't the occasion for oratory. Last night up front a few patrols went out. The squawk box in the platoon CP came to life about every fifteen minutes as the boys in the holes on the forward slope reported all secure. We talked about the weather and about home. There was a long conversation about grand strategy, how we should deal with the Russians, and what was right and what was wrong about our international policy, but it didn't add up to much and no one took it very seriously anyway. It was probably just talk to avoid thought. A 20-year-old youngster from West Virginia made Corporal yesterday, somehow found cigars for half the platoon. He's sure he'll be a Sergeant before long. Oh, yes, there was a couple of extra candles in the platoon CP, a bunker about twelve-by-ten. One or two of the old-timers told stories about earlier wars. No one really listened, althought there was a polite silence while the stories were being told. About four this morning the new Corporal called one of his forward positions no answer. He called again and still there was silence and so a Kansas boy picked up his musket and went out into the dark, came back in about ten minutes. All was well. He said something had gone wrong with the unmentionable telephone wire. We went up and talked to a youngster in a fighting hole on the forward slope. A couple of nights ago he caught two unauthorized personnel trying to get through the lines. He figured they might have been spies, but he didn't figure he'd get a medal for it. We talked a little about new cars. He favored the old hand-operated gear shift. He'd been out here about ten months, saw a little fighting, was shaken up some by enemy mortars, and he said the ten months had passed pretty quickly. He thought every young man ought to do some time in the armed forces. If he was lucky he might serve with the Marines.

About five-thirty this morning a little dirty, grey light oozed up over the brown hills to the east. Two boys in sleeping bags inside the bunker kept on snoring. The new Corporal lifted his telephone and there was a candle on each side of it and he checked his forward positions every fifteen minutes. An Alabama voice came through the speaker. He wanted to know how much longer he had to stay out on that unmentionable hill and the Corporal said another half-hour. The Alabama boy was not enthused. About six-thirty the truck came up with chow. The men turned out of the tents. Most of them ate standing up, - bacon, coffee, toast, boiled eggs. The general opinion was that there might be turkey for lunch but no one was making (drowned out) A PFC from Connecticut said he sure would like to call home and figuring that he might make the call on this broadcase I thought I could talk the platoon leader into letting him come down to Seoul with me. I asked him what he would say if he did call home and he said: "Gee, I don't know. Just Merry Christmas, I guess," so I undertook to say it for him, also for boys who come from Oregon and Arkansas, Ohio, and the Carolinas. They all looked just a little older this morning than they had last night, but maybe it was just the light. Today, many of the frontline outfits had visitors, Korean orphans, plenty of presents, Santa Claus surrounded by sandbags, boxes of candy alongside boxes of ammunition. The boys didn't have to dig or string wire today, but otherwise Christmas Day was very much like any other day in Korea, maybe not so cold as usual, and now the men and boys out here can look forward to another month or six months, maybe a year or sixteen months before it's their time to come home. The Christmas trees ought to last quite a while out here in this cold weather.

This is Ed Murrow recording From Seoul. Goodnight and good luck!

COLLINGWOOD: Korea was quiet. But in Indo-China Communist troops were again on the march. They have invaded the independent kingdom of Laos and are said to be moving toward the border of Thailand. The Prime Minister of Laos has appealed to the free world to halt this "odious aggression." The enemy launched his attack yesterday from his mountain hideouts in neighboring Viet Nam. And the heavily outnumbered French and Laotion forces were reported to have suffered heavy casualties in their early retreat. Reports from Saigon indicate that the enemy may be determined to try to cut Indo-China in two, at its narrow waist.

On Formosa, Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek told his national assembly again that he hopes his Nationalist troops can recover the mainland of China within the next year. He described the assembly meeting as a "political counter-offensive" preceeding a military counter-attack.

And the Moscow radio in a rare display broadcast a Merry Christmas wish to the United States. The Moscow radio commentator said that not in recent years had the possibility of peace been so close or so real...as it is now.

As much of the world observed a day of peace and happiness, two railroad wrecks in separated corners of the globe brought death to hundreds. Reports from Vienna indicate that as many as 186 persons may have been killed in a wreck in Czechoslovakia yesterday. Of course there's no official information from behind the iron curtain. But reporters indicate that one way or another they have determined that there was a serious train wreck... that "many persons were killed"...when two trains collided.

And from New Zealand we are still getting the details on the worst train wreck in that country's history: 64 bodies counted and an official estimate of 100 missing. Prime Minister Sidney G. Holland says close to 164 must be dead. The accident occured when the Wellington-to-Auckland express plunged into a raging river. The river is normally calm and is spanned by a bridge. But on Christmas eve either the bridge had been carried away or the impact of the train caused it to collapse. Officials are not yet certain. But they do know that five of the train's nine cars were catapulted into the river.

The accident occured as Queen Elizabeth was visiting in Auckland. Many of the passengers were on their way to see and hear her annual Christmas message to the Commonwealth. The Queen expressed her deep sorrow. And then in a broadcast to her people throughout the commonwealth she re-dedicated herself "heart and soul, every day of my life" to her people. Queen Elizabeth said: "The Commonwealth bears no resemblance to the empires of the past. It is an entirely new conception...built on the highest qualities of the spirit of man...friendship...loyalty and the desire for freedom and peace." She went on to note that some people have expressed the hope that her reign may mark a new Elizabethan age. "Frankly," said the Queen, "I do not myself feel at all like my great Tudor forebearer, who was blessed with neither husband nor children, who ruled as a despot and was never able to leave her native shores." But she said there was one comparison with the first Elizabethan age..."Britain was great in spirit and well endowed with men who were ready to encompass the earth."

In this country, the President today flew from Washington to Augusta, Georgia, with his family. Mr. Eisenhower told reporters that for the next ten days he plans to do nothing but work. The President was in high spirits. At one point when photographers were snapping pictures of him and his grandchildren Mr. Eisenhower challenged the photographers to a "contest"...and he began taking pictures of the cameramen. Later, he apologized to reporters who had to leave their families to make the trip to Augusta. He told them: "Why don't you just write up a bunch of stories for use here and go on back. As a matter of fact"...he said...I'll be glad to write your stories for you if you want me to." And later the President said: "Nothing can make me mad today."

Throughout the country most of us had fair skies...except for rain in parts of the south.

The National Safety Council, maintaining its constant warning to motorists to drive carefully, says tonight that what it calls "an appaling massacre" is taking place on our highways. One tabulation showed 144 killed in highway accidents by this afternoon...that's more than the Safety Council had estimated.

Christmas meant happiness in most American homes, but in some it meant tragedy. For, as it brings out the best in most of us, it brought out the worst in some. In Long Beach, California, a legless veteran of the Korean war was set upon by a gang of young hoodlums. They beat him up, broke his artificial legs, stole the watch his wife gave him for Christmas and took his last ten dollars.

But in Provo, Utah, they stopped a train to bring happiness to a 7 year old crippled boy. He has cerebral palsy and the thing he likes best to do is to sit in the window and wave at the trains that go by. Well, while he sat in open-eyed wonder, the train stopped, right in front of his window, and out stepped Santa Claus and the train's crew. They brought him an electric train and showed him how a railroad man like him should run it.

In Milwaukee, four prisoners at the County Jail said they wanted to go to confession and take Holy Communion on Christmas Day. The guards opened their cells and they tried to stage a jail break.

Here in New York tonight Lee Shubert died. The 78-year-old theatrical producer suffered "a complete failure of the circulatory system." Lee Shubert was one of three brothers whose theatrical business was at one time estimated to be worth 400-million dollars.

In Gilman, Colorado a man lent a Santa Claus outfit to a friend and then went berserk, killing himself and a neighbor and seriously wounding his wife and another woman.

But in Phoenix, Arizona, a fifteen year old boy said "People sure are wonderful." People from all over the country had sent Wallace Avans gifts and money to help make a Christmas for the Avans family after the boy had rescued his baby brother in a fire which wiped out all the family's possessions.

A six day truck drivers strike against the Minneapolis Star and Tribune ended today as both sides apparently got the Christmas spirit and reached a compromise. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news - but first,

It took a lot of ingenuity to get Christmas dinner for some three thousand families in Burlington, Vermont. A major gas failure cooled the stoves in all homes which use gas for cooking.

But for most Americans, this Christmas was as it should be, happy and generous and full of the things which warm the heart. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news - but first Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

COLLINGWOOD: In Washington, Democratic Senator Gillette of Iowa says the Administration is using foreign aid as a "club" to compel our allies to accept our policy. Gillette feels there was "no justification whatever" for Secretary of State Dulles recent warning to France that we would make "an agonizing re-appraisal" of our foreign policy if the European army plan is not ratified soon.

Democratic Senator Hunt says he's going to ask Democratic leaders to back his plan to make Democrats vice-chairmen of Senate Committees.

Republican Representative Brown of Ohio wants the postoffice department to issue a special 3-cent commemorative stamp in honor of Ohio's late Senator Taft.

And Republican Representative Hope of Kansas says he doubts that there will be any major changes in the present farm policy.

And that's the news on this Christmas day. This is Charles Collingwood. Good Night.

Dec 20, 1953

Good evening:

French warplanes are attacking the Communist invaders in Indo-China. And French reconnaissance troops say they have been unable to make contact with the enemy forces who cut Indo-China in two over the week-end. The French say the Communists may be avoiding "contact" at this time. And there are reports that the French are preparing a counter-attack to the enemy's biggest offensive of the Indo-China war. The Communists are now on the Thailand border and Thailand has mobilized her small forces. And the enemy radio has broadcast a message from the Communist chief Ho Chi Minh calling on his TROOPS to "make an assault that will destroy the enemy."

American troops in Korea are now waiting to learn whether their OUTFITS ARE INCLUDED IN the DIVISIONS that we plan to withdraw from Korea. And officials of other allied government with troops in Korea expect the week-end Washington announcement to result in pressure on them to bring home some of their men.

The United States today signed an agreement with Pakistan to send that county 22-million dollars worth of technical assistance. This is not the proposed military program to which India has objected.

The White House has announced that the President has invited a group of Democratic leaders in Congress to meet with him and Republican leaders on January 5th. They will discuss bipartisan support of the Administration's foreign policy and national defense programs. Its the first time the President has summoned Democratic leaders to the White House. All have agreed to review in advance his State of the Union message. White House news secretary Hagerty says the plan to invite the Democrats has been under consideration all along. For the most part Democrats in Congress had the same comment Republicans had in Democratic administrations. That is, that they were being called in for an advance look at a program that has already been determined.. with no chance to get their own ideas incorporated in the President's message.

In Washington today a majority of some 300 economists..attending a forum of the American Statistical Association..made it known that they believe the country is having "an orthodox recession". They feel its mild; but general.. They anticipate a cut in payrolls and production. By a three to one show of hands the economists expressed belief that the recession would last through 1954. They agreed there is nothing to get excited about.

Later, Unde secretary of Commerce Williams predicted that busines "will maintain the economic growth in both production and distribution which is essential to our continued happiness and properity."

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad says it will lay off 5-thousand workers beginning January first because of a drop in freight traffic volume in the past few months.

The Defense Department says the armed forces have trimmed their military manpower by 51-thousand men since the Eisenhower Administration took office in January. As of November 30th we had three million 456-thousand men and women in uniform.

Retired Admiral DeWitt Ramsey, president of Aircraft Industries Association, says the industry may stop building piston-engine bombers next year..to confine its military production to jet aircraft. Admiral Ramsey says during 1953 the industry made more jet engines than piston-powered engines. He says the last piston-engined fighter was delivered during 1953 "and in all probability" the last piston-engined bomber will be delievered in 1954.

Nelson Cruikshank, the director of the American Federation of Labor's insurance activities, charged today that "some politicians" are "impuging the good faith of their government"... by implying that social security benefits can be changed at will.

5

The State Department says the Russians have promised to release two Americans who have been held by the Russians for several years. They are: Private Homer Cox of Louisiana who disappeared in September of 1949 while serving as a military policeman with the army in Berlin. And Leland Towers of San Fransisco who was last heard from in October of 1951 while traveling in Europe as a tourist. Moscow has not said when or where the men will be set free.

The Department also indicates that together with the British and French we will accept a Soviet proposal for the big four foreign ministers meeting in Berlin to begin on January 25th. (instead of January 4th as we originally suggested.)

In Paris today an organization that studies the financial affairs of west European countries reports that Great Britain and France have made rapid progress toward prosperity..but Italy is lagging.

In Madrid, William D. Clark, recently dismissed as American chief justice for Germany, told reporters that the State Department has seized his diplomatic passport on threat of arrest and given him a one-way ticket home. Clark who is now vacationing in Spain refused, for one month, to obey the department's order to return home.

6

Edward R. Murrow is now someplace over the eastern part of this country, returning BY PLANE from his visit to Korea and Japan. Before he started home he recorded this report from Japan:

runs 6 minutes

(cue good night and good luck.

And this is C.C. - I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news - Bad Ford, Bob Dixon -

...

This is an involved complex world in which we're living...and often its difficult to ~~look ahead~~ see ahead. In Ironton, Ohio, a six-year old - Johnny Earhart - found this true, too. He complained REPEATEDLY THAT he couldn't see the blackboard in school. An eye specialist said there was nothing wrong with Johnny's eyes. BUT Johnny insisted he couldn't see the blackboard. Why, asked the specialist ? Because, said Johnny, there's a great big boy sitting in front of me."

This is CC...goodnite.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
(WITH CHARLES COLLINGWOOD)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1953
7:45-8:00 PM EST

Good Evening:

French warplanes are attacking the Communist invaders in Indo-China. And French reconnaissance troops say they have been unable to make contact with the enemy forces who cut Indo-China in two over the week-end. The French say the Communists may be avoiding contact "at this time." And there are reports that the French are preparing a counter-attack to the enemy's biggest offensive of the Indo-China war. The Communists are now on the Thailand border and Thailand has mobilized her small forces. And the enemy radio has broadcast a message from the Communist chief Ho Chi Minh calling on his troops to "make an assault that will destroy the enemy." American troops in Korea are now waiting to learn whether their outfits are included in the two divisions that we plan to withdraw from Korea. And officials of other allied government with troops in Korea expect the week-end Washington announcement to result in pressure on them to bring home some of their men.

The United States today signed an agreement with Pakistan to send that county 22-million dollars worth of technical assistance. This is not the proposed military program to which India has objected.

The White House has announced that the President has invited a group of Democratic leaders in Congress to meet with him and Republican leaders on January 5th. They will discuss bipartisan support of the Administration's foreign policy and national Defense programs. It's the first time the President has summoned Democratic leaders to the White House for a preview of a Presidential message. All have agreed to review in advance his State of the Union message. White House news secretary Hagerty says the plan to invite the Democrats has been under consideration all along. For the most part Democrats in Congress had the same comment Republicans had in Democratic administrations in similar situations. That is, that they were being called in for advance look at a program that has already been determined...with no chance to get their own ideas incorporated in the President's message.

In Washington today a majority of some 300 economists...attending a forum of the American Statistical Association...made it known that they believe the country is having "an orthodox recession." They feel it's mild; but general. They anticipate a cut in payrolls and production. By a three to one show of hands the economists expressed belief that the recession would last through 1954. They agreed there is nothing to get excited about. Later, Undersecretary of Commerce Williams predicted that business "will maintain the economic growth in both production and distribution which is essential to our continued happiness and prosperity."

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad says it will lay off 5-thousand workers beginning January first because of a drop in freight traffic volume in the past few months.

The Defense Department says the armed forces have trimmed their military manpower by 51-thousand men since the Eisenhower Administration took office in January. As of November 30th we had three million 456 thousand men and women in uniform.

Retired Admiral DeWitt Ramsey, president of Aircraft Industries Association says the industry may stop building piston-engine bombers next year...to confine its military production to jet aircraft. Admiral Ramsey says during 1953 the industry made more jet engines than piston-powered engines. He says the last piston-engined fighter was delivered during 1953 "and in all probability" the last piston-engined bomber will be delivered in 1954.

Nelson Cruikshank, the director of the American Federation of Labor's insurance activities, charged today that "some politicians" are "impuging the good faith of their government"...by implying that social security benefits can be changed at will.

The State Department says the Russians have promised to release two Americans who have been held by the Russians for several years. They are: Private Homer Cox of Louisiana who disappeared in September of 1949 while serving as a military policeman with the army in Berlin. And Leland Towers of San Francisco who was last heard from in October of 1951 while traveling in Europe as a tourist. Moscow has not said when or where the men will be set free.

The Department also indicates that together with the British and French we will accept a Soviet proposal for the big four foreign ministers meeting in Berlin to begin on January 25th (instead of January 4th as we originally suggested.)

In Paris tdday an organization that studies the financial affairs of west European countries reports that Great Britain and France have made rapid progress toward prosperity...but Italy is lagging.

In Madrid, William D. Clark, recently dismissed as American Chief Justice for Germany, told reporters that the State Department has seized his diplomatic passport on threat of arrest and given him a one-way ticket home. Clark, who is now vacationing in Spain refused, for one month, to obey the department's order to return home.

Edward R. Murrow is now someplace over the eastern part of this country, returning by plane from his visit to Korea and Japan. Before he started home he recorded this report from Japan:

MURROW: This is Tokyo. We're just on our way back from Korea. It's a curious thing how one can travel so far and learn so little, because right now I have no more idea of what is going to happen in Korea than I had when I left New York. Perhaps one reason for that is that no one in Korea seemed to have any firm ideas either. No reporter, at least not this one, can spend twelve hours in a foreign capital and come up with a definitive suggestion as to exactly what is heppening. So I've again availed myself of the services of my old friend and colleague Bob Pierpoint, who lives here in Tokyo.

Bob, one or two superficial impressions I would like to check with you, the first is that there's been an enormous improvement in the course of the last year - it's been just about a year since I was here last - an enormous improvement in the dress, in the general appearance, behaviour of people in the streets, is that right?

PIERPOINT: Yes, I would say that's quite generally true, Ed, people dress better than they did a year or two years ago, and they seem on the surface at least to be living better. However, I would like to say this, that does not reflect the basic problem of this country which is a shaky economy. The consumption level is very high.

MURROW: Yes.

PIERPOINT: But they're not putting enough money into capital goods and they're finding that they're having more and more trouble exporting because they have not nationalized their industries, so that while nowadays people do have enought to eat and pretty good clothes to wear, maybe six months from now when they aren't able to export any more they're going to be in real trouble.

MURROW: Well, isn't it going to be necessary eventually for them to trade more with the mainland of Asia than they are now?

PIERPOINT: I think most everyone here seems to feel that Japan is going to have to find outlets for its goods, greater export markets and of course the obvious export market here is China. Southeast Asia and China both present problems. They are trading with Southeast Asia to quite a large extent now, but those countries down there are building up their own industries, and they want to put up tariff laws so that they can protect their infant industries and build them up in India, in Burma, in Siam and the Philippines, and at the same time China, of course, presents a political problem to Japan. But I think most of us here feel that in the future Japan is going to have to find ways to trade with the Asiatic mainland.

MURROW: Bob, what about the relationship between American troops stationed in Japan and the Japanese civilians?

PIERPOINT: Well, Ed, I think the anti-Americanism that we heard so much about last year and up until the Spring of this year, was over-exaggerated to a certain extent and also has declined. It was, of course, the natural after-result of the occupation. After all any country after it's been occupied feels the need to assert its independence, its national character, and the Japanese did that. To a certain extent it was...the thing was fostered and heated up by the Communists here. But I think the Japanese themselves began to realize after a while that the thing had gone too far, and nowadays you find essentially very little anti-Americanism here. I think that I can say with some assurance that the Japanese basically are pro-American. You go out into the countryside here and the people are friendly. If they like you they don't even resent the uniform like they may in many other countries. I don't think it's the problem that we sometimes have feared.

MURROW: B ob, you spoke of the Communists. What do the Communists think in Japan?

PIERPOINT: Ed, the Communist Party here doesn't have too many members - less than fifty thousand, I believe - and they don't have a single member in the Diet anymore. They have quite a few followers among the Koreans in Japan; particularly what are called the "North Koreans."

MURROW: Yes.

PIERPOINT: The Koreans are displaced people here; they're not liked and not wanted by the Japanese and they turn to communism as a way out of their problems. But generally speaking some of the trade unions are pretty far to the left and Radical Socialists...it's hard to define that line, Ed, between communism and the far left Socialists, but generally speaking I don't think the Communists are very powerful in Japan.

MURROW: How much freedom of discussion is there here in terms of newspapers and radio and so forth?

PIERPOINT: A great deal. The Japanese have learned a lot along that line in the last ten years. The newspapers are of all colors and all varieties of political opinion, and these opinions are expressed forcibly and I think very well.

MURROW: Well, Bob Pierpoint, we've just come back from Korea, what do you think the reaction will be out there amongst the boys to the President's announcement that two divisions are going to be pulled out of Korea?

PIERPOINT: Well, I think every (indistinct) is hoping he's in the division that's gonna be pulled out, Ed.

MURROW: I'm sure that's the case. It was very impressive to me this time as it always is to spend only five or six days with troops, wandering about the front in this case when no fighting is going on, and to discover at the end of five or six days when you've acquired more friends than you would be likely to find in an equal length of time almost anywhere. Thank you very much, Bob Pierpoint. For the last few minutes, I've been sitting here in Tokyo chatting with my old friend and colleague, Bob Pierpoint. This is Ed Murrow recording from Tokyo. Good Night and Good Luck!

COLLINGWOOD: And this is Charles Collingwood. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news. But, first, Bob Dixon.

DIXON: COMMERCIAL

COLLINGWOOD: This is an involved complex world in which we're living...and often it's difficult to see ahead. In Ironton, Ohio, a six-year-old, Johnny Earhart found this true, too. He complained repeatedly that he couldn't see the blackboard in school. An eye specialist said there was nothing wrong with Johnny's eyes, but Johnny insisted he couldn't see the blackboard. Why, asked the specialist? Because, said Johnny, there's a great big boy sitting in front of me. This is Charles Collingwood. Goodnight.

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Monday, December 28, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

COLLINGWOOD: ... Edward R. Murrow is now somewhere over the eastern part of this country, flying back by plane from his visit to Korea and Japan. Before he started home he recorded this report from Japan.

MURROW: This is Tokyo. We're just on our way back from Korea. It's a curious thing how one can travel so far and learn so little, because right now I have no more idea of what is going to happen in Korea than I had when I left New York. Perhaps one reason for that is that no one in Korea seemed to have any firm ideas either. No reporter, at least not this one, can spend twelve hours in a foreign capital and come up with a definitive suggestion as to exactly what is happening. So I've again availed myself of the services of my old friend and colleague Bob Pierpoint, who lives here in Tokyo. Bob, one or two superficial impressions I would like to check with you, the first is that there's been an enormous improvement in the course of the last year - it's been just about a year since I was here last - an anormous improvement in the dress, in the general appearance, behavior of people in the streets, is that right?

PIERPOINT: Yes, and I would say that's quite generally true, Ed, people dress better than they did a year or two years ago, and they seem on the surface at least to be living better. However, I would like to say this, that does not reflect the basic problem of this country which is a shaky economy. The consumption level is very high.

MURROW: Yes.

PIERPOINT: But they're not putting enough money into capital goods and they're finding that they're having more and more trouble exporting because they haven't nationalized their industries, so that while nowadays people do have enough to eat and pretty good clothes to wear, maybe six months from now when they aren't able to export any more they're going to be in real trouble.

MURROW: Well, isn't it going to be necessary eventually forthem to trade more with the mainland of Asia than they are now?

PIERPOINT: I think most everyone here seems to feel that Japan is going to have to find outlets for its goods, greater export markets and of course the obvious export market here is China. Southeast Asia and China both present problems. They are trading with Southeast Asia to quite a large extent now, but those countries down there are building up their own industries, and they want to put up tariff laws so that they can protect their infant industries and build them up in India, in Burma, in Siam and the Philippines, and at the same time China, of course, presents a political problem to Japan. But I think most of us here feel that in the future Japan is going to have to findways to trade with the Asiatic mainland.

MURROW: Bob, what about the relationship between American troops stationed in Japan and the Japanese civilians?

PIERPOINT: Well, Ed, I think the anti-Americanism that we heard so much about last year and up until the Spring of this year, was over-exaggerated to a certain extent and also has declined. It was, of course, the natural after-result of the occupation. After all any country after it's been occupied feels the need to assert its independence, its national character, and the Japanese did that. To a certain extent it was ... the thing was fostered and heated up by the Communists here. But I think the Japanese themselves began to realize after a while that the thing had gone too far, and nowadays you find essentially very little anti-Americanism here. I think that I can say with some assurance that the Japanese basically are pro-American. You go out into the countryside here and the peopleare friendly. If they like you they don't even resent the uniform like they may in many other countries. I don't think it's the problem that we sometimes have feared.

MURROW: Bob, you spoke ofthe Communists. What do the Communists think in Japan?

PIERPOINT: Ed, the Communist Party here doesn't have too many members - less than fifty thousand, I believe - and they don't have a single member in the Diet anymore. They have quite a few followers among theKoreans in Japan; particularly what are called the "North Koreans."

MURROW: Yes.

PIERPOINT: The Koreans are displaced people here; they're not liked and not wanted by the Japanese and they turn to communism as a way outof their problems. But generally speaking some of the trade unions are pretty far to the left and Radical Socialists ... it's hard to define that line, Ed, between communism and the far left Socialists, but generally speaking I don't think the Communists are very powerful in Japan.

MURROW: How much freedom of discussion is there here in terms of newspapers and radio and so forth?

PIERPOINT: A great deal. The Japanese have learned a lot along that line in the last ten years. The newspapers are of all colors and all varities of political opinion, and these opinions are expressed forcibly and I think very well.

MURROW: Well, Bob Pierpoint, we've just come back from Korea, what do you think the reaction will be out there amongst the boys to the President's announcement that two divisions are going to be pulled out of Korea?

PIERPOINT: Well, I think every ~~single~~ ... (indistinct) ... is hoping he's in the division that's gonna be pulled out, Ed.

MURROW: I'm surethat's the case. It was very impressive to me this time as it always is to spend only five or six days with troops, wandering about the front in this case when no fighting is going on, and to discover at the end of five or six days when you've acquired more friends than you wouldbe likely to find in an equal length of time almost anywhere. Thank you very much, Bob Pierpoint. For the last few minutes, I've been sitting here in Tokyo chatting with my old friend and colleague, Bob Pierpoint. This is Ed Murrow recording from Tokyo. Good Night and Good Luck!

COLLINGWOOD: And this is Charles Collingwood. I'll be back in a moment with a footnoteto the news. But, first, Bob Dixon.

ANNOUNCER: (C O M M E R C I A L) ... (30) Ed. trans. P.O.

Tuesday December 29,

This is the news:

Defense Secretary Wilson warned the nation today that we must pay high defense costs.. and accept military service as a normal part of life..for as long as Russia threatens world peace. In his first report to the President Mr. Wilson said that in the middle of this year we had the strongest armed forces we have ever had "short of war." He says that if the Eisenhower Administration had continued the Truman military program, it would have been so expensive as to endanger our economic health. BUT NEW ECONOMIES [redacted] and new strategies have been worked out. AND [redacted] says Wilson, even with these, the cost of maintaining an adequate defense force will probably be high for many years to come.

Secretary of State Dulles told reporters today that even though we plan to recall two divisions from Korea, our military power in the Far East will not be reduced. He acknowledged that there will be a reduction in foot soldiers. But not in our overall strength, because of the continuing build-up of our air and sea power. Mr. Dulles says the withdrawl of the two divisions is possible for these reasons: One, just before the truce in Korea we had completed a large buildup of our ground forces. Two, one of the key reasons for seeking an armistice in Korea was to avoid having troops pinned down on the Asiatic mainland; Three, we have built up our air and sea power in the Orient "substantially"; and Four we have warned Communist China and her allies that if the Korean war should start again..or if the Chinese Reds openly intervene in Indo-China.."our reaction won't necessarily be limited to either area". This was the suggestion-first made to the Legion last September..that we might decide to strike back at the Communist China mainland. And again Mr. Dulles warned the Chinese that we and our allies would join in "quick retaliation" should the Chinese intervene in Indo-China or renew the Korean war. He also pointed out that our greater reliance on air and sea power gives us a great choice of how to retaliate.

Mr. Dulles feels that the American press has greatly exaggerated the Communist successes in Indo-China..particular the enemy drive that cut Indo-China in two. He says the advance to the border of Thiland does not pose a present threat to that country... it does not upset the present French plans for an eventual victory. We take a serious view of the recent enemy attack. But there's no reason to get panicky. And the Secretary says he has complete confidence in the French Union forces. He acknowledged, too, without amplification, that there could be a relationship between this enemy attack and the late January meeting in Berlin of the Big Four foreign ministers.

As far as we know there has been no contact between enemy and French forces in Indo-China in the past 24 hours. The French are building up their forces for a counter-attack. And the Communist guerrillas appear to be regrouping their forces to continue their drive. High French officials take the same view as Secretary Dulles--they minimize the enemy success... claim the French troops "have the situation well in hand." And French Defense Minister Pleven, in Paris, says France still plans to withdraw 15-thousand of her 185-thousand troops now in Indo-China. [redacted]

American air force officials in Germany say [redacted] they are going to replace more than 10-thousand American airmen in Europe with 86-hundred civilians.. as an economy move. They say the air force in the Far East will soon put a similar program into operation.

~~And the Army says that next year it will shorten the active duty tours of some 6-thousand name gulan junior officers, most graduates of the reserve officers training corps... the officer candidates program.. and the National Guard.~~

The President today made known his support of a policy STARTED by the old administration to channel more government defense contracts into areas where "there has been a large amount of unemployment." And some southern Democrats quickly decided that this was a renewal of the Truman policy to give more business to northern textile mills at the expense of business southern mills might have done.

Treasury Secretary Humphrey says in Newsweek that he looks for a continued high level of business activity next year. And GEORGE Meany, the president of the American Federation of Labor, predicts a rising tide of unemployment for next year. He criticized Administration officials for calling job cutbacks "mere readjustments of the economy."

Chairman Curtis of a House subcommittee today proposed a change in the social security law to give immediate pensions to all retired persons who are over 65. He would also raise the present payments.. and permit retired workers to earn up to a thousand dollars a year and still draw their pensions. Curtis, a Republican from Nebraska, would finance the changes in the law by extending the tax to cover almost all workers under 65.. and to all types of income.

In Berlin today the Russians set free two Americans who have spent years in Soviet prison camps. The two men, Private Homer Cox of Oklahoma and Merchant Seaman Leland Towers of California, will not make any statements until the army has investigated their stories.

Edward R. Murrow: December 29, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

South Korean President Syngman Rhee again today used hard and ominous language in his New Year's message. He promised the North Koreans that the South would "come to their rescue just as soon as possible." Mr. Rhee said that our special Ambassador, Mr. Arthur Dean, had met with the Communist delegates at Panmunjom for almost two months, only to find that in the end the Communists never could be persuaded by words, no matter how rational and justifiable. President Rhee believes that the failure of the preliminary talks can "be regarded as final." He called upon the Allies to conclude futile discussions with the Communists, and to rise with us in courage and valor for the last great battle to annihilate the Red forces who seek the destruction of the free world.

In part of his message the President appeared to be threatening what he has threatened before, a single-handed South Korean effort to reach the Yalu. But later on he said: "The current international situation does not permit us to take the action we so desperately want to take."

The State Department's Kenneth Young, who will talk to the Communists if any more talking is done, said that President Rhee's statement about a permanent breakdown in the talks was "largely a matter of speculation." The Communists have given every indication that they do not want a political peace conference. But he said: "Who knows what's going to happen in the next month, or two, or three?"

Whatever the purely military reasons that may lie behind our decision to pull two divisions out of Korea, it must be regarded as a warning to the South Koreans that we are not disposed to support any venture they may undertake; and it is added proof that there is no considerable Communist build-up in either ground or air strength. Both sides are digging in deeper and deeper. The sound of blasting drifts down from the Chinese lines, to be answered by dynamite explosions along our own main line of resistance. Our aprons of barbed wire stretch farther and farther down the forward slopes, and our bunkers keep getting deeper at the bottom and thicker on top.

One week in Korea qualifies no one as an expert, but the troops on at least three division fronts appeared to be in good spirits; discipline is excellent, weapons ready and well cared for; night patrols are still run down to the edge of the de-militarized zone; all forward positions are manned at night; and the army appears to operate on the old principle that a tired soldier is a good soldier, for when there's nothing else to do there's always more digging to be done.

I didn't encounter any happy troops in Korea - didn't expect to - but they are steady, resigned and confident. The question most frequently asked of a visiting reporter, who for some reason is supposed to have inside information, is whether they'll still be out there next Christmas. My own guess would be that they will be. The guessing you hear amongst some of the brass, is that if the war should start again in Korea, that would rapidly become a minor theater of operations because the war couldn't be confined to Korea again. (as Sec Dulles suggested again today) The best guess is that Syngman Rhee will continue to talk tough, but that he will not try to go it alone to the Yalu. However, this guess is always accompanied by the statement that the ancient President is not altogether predictable, and might possibly be capable of making a fanatical gamble.

One of the strongest impressions this reporter brought back from Korea is that not enough is being done in the area of education and information. Most of the boys have a vague idea ~~sometimes even a well formulated idea~~ as to why it is necessary for them to be in Korea, and of the chain of events that led up to the war and this uneasy truce. Some of the officers contend that it is their job to strengthen the line, and teach the men to fight; in short, that they aren't a bunch of schoolteachers. This is to a large extent a garrison army, even in the forward positions, there is time enough to tell the troops what's going on in the world, and the issues and events that finally landed them in a hole on the slope of those inhospitable mountains. They are curious, often eager to learn; and more information would probably make them better fighting men, if it comes to that, and certainly better citizens when they have finished their tour of duty. An army isn't a college, and never will be; but there are so many wasted hours out there, and so much time to think....mostly about home, of course. But even their attitude toward what goes on at home may be largely determined by what they know. It ought to be possible to devise a better method, or beef up the present operation to the point where the troops, who are prepared to defend the free world, know more about why they are there, and what those who sent them there are trying to do to unscramble the mess. Korea is often referred to as a good training ground for troops. In a sense that's true, although we aren't likely to fight a future war from such fixed positions. But under existing conditions it could be a different kind of training ground, which in the end of the day might be as important as the training in military science and tactics.

The past week ~~has been~~ was spent with some of the troops in Korea. And after having talked with a few of our men, eaten with them, and moved about on assignment with them, I think I know what Jefferson meant when he said: "Traveling makes a man wiser but sometimes less happy." But one thing I am certain of and that's an observation Disraeli once made: "Travel, he said, teaches toleration."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Defense Secretary Wilson warned the nation today that we must pay high defense costs and accept military service as a normal part of life for as long as Russia threatens world peace. In his first report to the President, Mr. Wilson said that in the middle of this year we had the strongest armed forces we have ever had "short of war." He says that if the Eisenhower Administration had continued the Truman military program it would have been so expensive as to endanger our economic health. But new economies and new strategies have been worked out. And, says Wilson, even with these, the cost of maintaining an adequate defense force will probably be high for many years to come.

Secretary of State Dulles told reporters today that even though we plan to recall two divisions from Korea our military power in the Far East will not be reduced. He acknowledged that there will be a reduction in foot soldiers. But not in our overall strength because of the continuing build-up of our air and sea power. Mr. Dulles says the withdrawl of the two divisions is possible for these reasons: One, just before the truce in Korea we had completed a large buildup of our ground forces. Two, one of the key reasons for seeking an armistice in Korea was to avoid having troops pinned down on the Asiatic mainland; Three, we have built up our air and sea power in the Orient "substantially;" and Four, we have warned Communist China and her allies that if the Korean war should start again or if the Chinese Reds openly intervene in Indo-China "our reaction won't necessarily be limited to either area." This was the suggestion first made to the Legion last September that we might decide to strike back at the Communist China mainland. And again Mr. Dulles warned the Chinese that we and our allies would join in "quick retaliation" should the Chinese intervene in Indo-China or renew the Korean war. He also pointed out that our greater reliance on air and sea power gives us a great choice of how to retaliate.

Mr. Dulles feels that the American press has greatly exaggerated the Communist successes in Indo-China - particularly the enemy drive that cut Indo-China in two. He says the advance to the border of Thailand does not pose a present threat to that country - it does not upset the present French plans for an eventual victory. We take a serious view of the recent enemy attack. But there's no reason to get panicky. And the Secretary says he has complete confidence in the French Union forces. He acknowledged, too, without amplification, that there could be a relationship between this enemy attack and the late January meeting in Berlin of the Big Four foreign ministers.

As far as we know there has been no contact between enemy and French forces in Indo-China in the past 24 hours. The French are building up their forces for a counter-attack. And the Communist guerrillas appear to be regrouping their forces to continue their drive. High French officials take the same view as Secretary Dulles - they minimize the enemy success - claim the French troops "have the situation well in hand." And French Defense Minister Pleven, in Paris, says France still plans to withdraw 15-thousand of her 185-thousand troops now in Indo-China.

American air force officials in Germany say they are going to replace more than 10-thousand American airmen in Europe with 86-hundred civilians as an economy move. They say the air force in the Far East will soon put a similar program into operation. The President today made known his support of a policy started by the old administration to channel more government defense contracts into areas where "there has been a large amount of unemployment." And some southern Democrats quickly decided that this was a renewal of the Truman policy to give more business to northern textile mills at the expense of business southern mills might have done.

Treasury Secretary Humphrey says in Newsweek that he looks for a continued high level of business activity next year. And George Meany, the president of the American Federation of Labor predicts a rising tide of unemployment for next year. He criticized Administration officials for calling job cutbacks "mere readjustments of the economy."

Chairman Curtis of a House subcommittee today proposed a change in the social security law to give immediate pensions to all retired persons who are over 65. He would also raise the present payments and permit retired workers to earn up to a thousand dollars a year and still draw their pensions. Curtis, a Republican from Nebraska, would finance the changes in the law by extending the tax to cover almost all workers under 65 - and to all types of income.

In Berlin today the Russians set free two Americans who have spent years in Soviet prison camps. The two men, Private Homer Cox of Oklahoma and Merchant Seaman Leland Towers of California, will not make any statements until the army has investigated their stories.

South Korean President Syngman Rhee again today used hard and ominous language in his New Year's message. He promised the North Koreans that the South would "come to their rescue just as soon as possible." Mr. Rhee said that our special Ambassador, Mr. Arthur Dean, had met with the Communist delegates at Panmunjom for almost two months, only to find that in the end the Communists never could be persuaded by words, no matter how rational and justifiable. President Rhee believes that the failure of the preliminary talsk can "be regarded as final." He called upon the Allies to conclude futile discussions with the Communists, and to rise with us in courage and valor for the last great battle to annihilate the Red forces who seek the destruction of the free world.

In part of his message the President appeared to be threatening what he has threatened before, a single-handed South Korean effort to reach the Yalu. But later on he said: "The current international situation does not permit us to take the action we so desperately want to take."

The State Department's Kenneth Young, who will talk to the Communists, if any more talking is done, said that President Rhee's statement about a permanent breakdown in the talks was "largely a matter of speculation." The Communists have given every indication that they do not want a political peace conference. But he said: "Who knows what's going to happen in the next month, or two, or three?"

Whatever the purely military reasons that may lie behind our decision to pull two divisions out of Korea, it must be regarded as a warning to the South Koreans that we are not disposed to support any venture they may undertake; and it is added proof that there is no considerable Communist build-up in either ground or air strength. Both sides are digging in deeper and deeper. The sound of blasting drifts down from the Chinese lines, to be answered by dynamite explosions along our own main line of resistance. Our aprons of barbed wire stretch farther and farther down the forward slopes, and our bunkers keep getting deeper at the bottom and thicker on top.

One week in Korea qualifies no one as an expert, but the troops on at least three division fronts appeared to be in good spirits; discipline is excellent, weapons ready and well cared for; night patrols are still run down to the edge of the de-militarized zone; all forward positions are manned at night; and the army appears to operate on the old principle that a tired soldier is a good soldier, for when there's nothing else to do, there's alwasy more digging to be done.

I didn't encounter any happy troops in Korea - didn't expect to - but they are steady, resigned and confident. The question most frequently asked of a visiting reporter who for some reason is supposed to have inside information, is whether they'll still be out there next Christmas. My own guess would be that they will be. The guessing you hear amongst some of the brass is that if the war should start again in Korea, that would rapidly become a minor theater of operations because the war couldn't be confined to Koreaagain. As Secretary Dulles suggested again today the best guess is that Sybgman Rhee will continue to talk tough, but that he will not try to go it alone to the Yalu. However, this guess is always accompanied by the statement that the ancient President is not altogether predictable, and might possibly be capable of making a fanatical gamble.

One of the strongest impressions this reporter brought back from Korea is that not enough is being done in the area of education and information. Most of the boys have a vague idea as to why it is necessary for them to be in Korea, and of the chain of events that led up to the war and this uneasy truce. Some of the officers contend that it is their job to strengthen the line, and teach the men to fight; in short, that they aren't a bunch of schoolteachers. This is to a large extent a garrison army, even in the forward positions there is time enough to tell the troops what's going on in the world, and the issues and events that finally landed them in a hole on the slope of those inhospitable mountains. They are curious, often eager to learn; and more information would probably make them better fightint men, if it comes to that, and certainly better citizens when they have finished their tour of duty. An army isn't a college, and never will be; but there are os many wasted hours out there, and so much time to think - mostly about home, of course. But even their attitude toward what goes on at home may be largely determined by what they know. It ought to be possible to devise a better method, or beef up the present operation to the point where the troops, who are prepared to defend the free world, know more about why they are there, and what those who sent them there are trying to do to unscramble the mess. Korea is often referred to as a good training ground for troops. In a sense that's true, although we aren't likely to fight a future war from such fixed positions. But under existing conditions it could be a different kind of training ground, which in the end of the day might be as important as the training in military science and tactics.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The past week was spent with some of the troops in Korea. And after having talked with a few of our men, eaten with them, and moved about on assignment with them, I think I know what Jefferson meant when he said: "Traveling makes a man wiser but sometimes less happy." But one thing I am certain of and that's an observation Disraeli once made: "Travel, he said, teaches toleration."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday, Dec. 30, 1953.

This is the news:

Republican Senate Leader Knowland says he's "disappointed" with the President's new order aimed at helping areas hit by unemployment. Yesterday Mr. Eisenhower asked government agencies to channel some defense contracts into such areas. Some Southern Congressmen protested that this would take business from their textile mills and channel it to northern mills. And Senator Knowland said today that the new order is "too wide, and needs curtailment." Even though White House Secretary Hagerty told reporters that those who object to the order did not get the full story.. Senator Knowland said later that he's confident the Congress will correct what he called the "abuses" in the new policy." At least one New England senator, Saltonstall of Massachusetts, says the new order does not go far enough. And William Pollack, executive vice president of the C.I.O. Textile workers union, says the union welcomes "any move by the administration to relieve unemployment and to stimulate activity in the nation's distressed areas."

The Associated Press reports, on the basis of a nation-wide survey, that at least 52-thousand workers have been laid off their jobs in recent weeks throughout the country.

And in Washington, the American Economic Association heard two opposing views on the business outlook for next year. Dr. George W. Hildebrand of the University of California at Los Angeles, says that with a policy of tax reductions and so-called "easy money" the Administration may keep things humming for the next 12 months. He says the government is conducting an important economic experiment, designed to maintain "an expanding economy of private enterprise", and at the same time ease up on heavy federal spending. But Albert Gailord Hart, a Columbia University economist, and former consultant to the Treasury, predicts a serious slump in demand, for such things as automobiles, appliances and machinery. He says this will happen within a few years even if it does not happen next year.

A top C.I.O. official, Stanley H. Ruttenberg, the union's research and education director, today turned down the President's appointment to a government advisory board. Rutenberg said he never heard of the appointment, until he read about it in the papers; and neither he nor the C.I.O. was consulted about it. Two weeks ago George Meany, the president of the A.F. of L. quit as a member of a Foreign Assistance program board.

In Korea today, General Taylor, the 8th army commander, told his troops that he does not know which two American divisions will be withdrawn from Korea. And in commenting on a recent announcement by the President, General Taylor said he didn't know when the two divisions would leave or where they would go. He said in any event it will TAKE weeks or months before the transfer is made. In a series of talks across the front General Taylor told his troops:"Sometimes when you sit out there on the frozen hilltop with a hard wind blowing you might feel like forgotten men. But we know the people of America haven't forgotten us."

In Indo-China the Communist rebels have tightened their pressure on the last French fortress in the northwest... some 300 airline miles north of the recent activity that took the enemy to the border of Thailand. These forces have apparently made no new move in four days.

In Paris, Premier Laniel has decided to resign right after the first of the year instead of waiting until January 17th when the new president, Rene Coty, is inaugurated. Laniel's spokesman says he wants to give Coty enough time to start forming a new government to take part in the Big Four foreign ministers talks at the end of the month.

Democratic Senator Johnson of Colorado suggested today that the government follow up its decision to withdraw two divisions from Korea, by ordering the withdrawal of two of our divisions from Europe.

The Department of Agriculture says the prices farmers receive for their crops and livestock rose one per cent in the month ending December 15th. Farm prices are now about six per cent below what they were a year ago.

In Alabama, Tuskegee Institute says it recorded no lynchings in this country during 1953. Hereafter the Institute will measure race relations with a report based on economic, political and educational standards.

The Navy said today that it could find no one to blame for the October explosion on the carrier Leyte which took the lives of 37 men. A court of inquiry reports that sabotage had no part in the accident... and that "someone, unown and dead" injected air under high pressure into a small tube that contained oil. This, it's assumed, started the fire.

Representative Oakley of California says some Social Security Administration employes are getting "culture--including lectures on art, music and literature, on government time." Spokesmen for the Administration say they know nothing of such classes.

Edward R. Murrow: December 30, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

At this time of the year most of our foreign correspondents come home - from England, France, Germany and the Far East. And they are all men who have provided much background material for these reports. Tonight I want to chat for a while with out Chief European Correspondent, Howard K. Smith, who makes his headquarters in London.

1) How is Sir Winston Churchill's health?

2) How much impatience is there inside his own Party? - that is people who wish that he would retire.

3) What is Anthony Eden's position as the heir apparent?

4) Has the prospect of high level talks between the heads of states been abandoned in Britain?

5) What's happened to rationing?

6) As near as you can tell, what is the British attitude toward American troops stationed there?

7) Now that more newsprint is available, what use is being made of it?

8) What are the prospects for a General Election in Britain?

churchill's health. Churchill's health seems very good. But he has certainly aged a great many years in the past few months. A very rich full, active life seems to have taken its toll all at once. He has a hard time getting up stairs. At Bermuda, when he went out to the airport to meet PresidentEisenhower, and the president reviewed the British guard of honor, Sir Winston tried to walk with him,but-tho the president did not walk especially fast, Churchill could not follow him and stopped in the middle of the apron and just waited for Eisenhower to return from reviewing the guard. His mind is still alert, his wit is sharp as a diamond...but physically he has become very very old.

impatience with him in his party. Well, rumor in Britain has it that the younger men inhis party- and in his cabinet- are impatient with the boss. Churchilldenies he is an autocrat. He isquoted ashaving said, I simply give my colleagues plenty of time to consider the plans I put before them... then I expect them to agree with me. He has always had a tendency to take decisions without consulting the appropriate member of his cabinet, and now he does it moreso. For example, before boarding the plane in Bermuda to go back to .... England, he was seized with a fit of favor for the Bermudians and so announced he would restore the British garrison that had during the war been withdrawn and which was the center of Bermuda social life. Well, Bermuda is useless from a defense standpoint. Britain is suffering from a shortage of troops (that is why they are anxious to pull out of Egypt)....so it was not a wise gesture, and it was announced apparently without any consideration for or consultation with Churchill's own defense minister.

Eden's position: It has always been generally assumed Eden was the crown prince of Britishpolitics, the natural heir to the prime ministry. But in recent months, his position has been thrown into some doubt. Egypt has been the cause of thatsituation. Britain simply has to get out of Suez. She has 7o,ooo troops there she sorely needs for other defensive positions, and also to reduce her defense costs. The time is ripe now to get them out peacefully, without another ugly conflict in the Arab countries. But, inside the Consrvative party, there is a strong imperial wing. They consider that if Eden agrees totake British troops out of Suez he will be appeasing the Egyptians,

..... scuttling the empire. So Eden is really in rather n rrow straits. His future is likely to be decided on the Suez canal. If he agrees to withdraw British troops, he will, at the worst turn his party against him and see it reject him....at best, he will have to govern with a party divided against him. But if he does not agree to move out ofSuez, then he faces the prospect of a resumption of guerilla expensive warfare in Egypt, the prospect that the Egyptians will take the Suez issue before the UN, where is it highlylikely Britain would be out-voted...all of which might badly damage Eden's reputation. So the next weeks and month in Suez are going to have an important bearing on British internal politics.

Prospects for High-level talks The idea has lost its momentum, Ed. If Churchill had not been seized with illness shortly after proposing that kind of conference, he mighthave done something about it. But his illness gave all the opponents at home and abroad time to pretty well kill the idea. There is very little enthusiasm for it left now. Big conferances in general are in disrepute, after the Bermuda confer at which never have somany reporters had so little to report .....about. There is more hope being put in quiet ordinary channels of diplomacy in such meetings as Churchill had in private last week with the Russian ambassador, and so on.

Rationing Almost everything came off ration last summer, Ed. The Food Ministry announced, it is not printing any ration books at all for next year. Austerity is rapidly becoming a memory of the past. Many long years of careful husbandry of resources plus American help are be ring fruit at last.

Attitude towards US troops Even that has mellowed, Ed. ~~Rumm~~ The most anti-Ameriaan periodical-- aside from the Communist paper-- is the magazine Tribune, for which Aneuring Bevan writes. Well Tribune did a survey of thebehavior of American troops in Britain recently and came to the conclusion that the British press has been treating the American GI much less well than he deserves. He was, the paper said, a pretty decent chap, after all.

— 4

Use made of additional newsprint-- Not very good use is made of it, I am afraid Ed. I dont think it is generally known in this country that the British press generally-- excluding those fine papers the Times, Manchester Guardian and maybe a few others that also have small circulations-- the British press generally, the papers with four fifths of th cirtulation are on a pretty low level. More newspring has made the them the same, only moreso.

prospects for an election There is not much prospect of an early new election. Britain is really a democracy in a perfect state of balance. One month Labor leads the Tories by a few votes in the Gallup poll... that is the case now...but next month, the Tories may well lead Labor by a small fraction.An election could not give either party a majority that amounts to anything. There is really no burning issue between the parties to hold an election on. The Britishpeople are, I think, a little bored withpolitics, and would probably resent the party which forced an election.So, I don't think either is willing torisk such an eventuality.

***

We were discussing Sir Winston Churchill ~~tonite~~ and some of his methods of diplomacy. Of himself, Sir Winston once remarked:"Nothing in life is so exhilirating as to be shot at without result." Of the House of Commons, he said:"It thrives on criticism, it is impervious to newspaper abuse or taunts from any quarter. It is capable of digesting almost anything or any body of gentlemen - whatever be the views with which they arrive."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1953
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Republican Senate Leader Knowland says he's "disappointed" with the President's new order aimed at helping areas hit by unemployment. Yesterday Mr. Eisenhower asked government agencies to channel some defense contracts into such areas. Some Southern Congressmen protested that this would take business from their textile mills and channel it to northern mills. And Senator Knowland said today that the new order is "too wide, and needs curtailment." Even though White House Secretary Hagerty told reporters that those who object to the order did not get the full story. Senator Knowland said later that he's confident the Congress will correct what he called the "abuses" in the new policy." At least one New England senator, Saltonstall of Massachusetts, says the new order does not go far enough. And William Pollack, executive vice president of the CIO Textile workers union, says the union wlecomes "any move by the administration to relieve unemployment and to stimulate activity in the nation's distressed areas."

The Associated Press reports on the basis of a nation-wide survey, that at least 52-thousand workers have been laid off their jobs in recent weeks throughout the country.

And in Washington the American Economic Association heard two opposing views on the business outlook for next year. Dr. George W. Hildebrand of the University of California at Los Angeles says that with a policy of tax reductions and so-called "easy money" the Administration may keep things humming for the next 12 months. He says the government is conducting an important economic experiment designed to maintain "an expanding economy of private enterprise" and at the same time ease up on heavy federal spending. But Albert Gailord Hart, a Columbia University economist and former consultant to the Treasury, predicts a serious slump in demand for such things as automobiles, appliances and machinery. He says this will happen within a few years even if it does not happen next year.

A top CIO official, Stanley H. Ruttenberg, the union's research and education director, today turned down the President's appointment to a government advisory board. Rutenberg said he never heard of the appointment until he read about it in the papers; and neither he nor the CIO was consulted about it. Two weeks ago George Meany, the president of the AFL quit as a member of a Foreign Assistance program board. In Korea today, General Taylor, the 8th army commander, told his troops that he does not know which two American divisions will be withdrawn from Korea. And, in commenting on a recent announcement by the President, General Taylor said he didn't know when the two divisions would leave or where they would go. He said in any event it will take weeks or months before the transfer is made. In a series of talks across the front, General Taylor told his troops: "Sometimes when you sit out there on the frozen hilltop with a hard wind blowing you might feel like forgotten men. But we know the people of America haven't forgotten us."

In Indo-China, the Communist rebels have tightened their pressure on the last French fortress in the northwest - some 300 airline miles north of the recent activity that took the enemy to the border of Thailand. These forces have apparently made no new move in four days.

In Paris, Premier Laniel has decided to resign right after the first of the year instead of waiting until January 17th when the new president, Rene Coty, is inaugurated. Laniel's spokesman says he wants to give Coty enough time to start forming a new government to take part in the Big Four foreign ministers talks at the end of the month.

Democratic Senator Johnson of Colorado suggested today that the government follow up its decision to withdraw two divisions from Korea, by ordering the withdrawal of two of our divisions from Europe.

The Department of Agriculture says the prices farmers receive for their crops and live stock rose one percent in the month ending December 15th. Farm prices are now about six percent below what they were a year ago.

In Alabama, Tuskegee Institute says it recorded no lynchings in this country during 1953. Hereafter the Institute will measure race relations with a report based on economic, political and educational standards.

The Navy said today that it could find no one to blame for the October explosion on the carrier Leyte which took the lives of 37 men. A court of inquiry reports that sabotage had no part in the accident and that "someone, unknown, and dead" injected air under high pressure into a small tube that contained oil. This, it's assumed, started the fire.

Representative Oakley of California says some Social Security Administration employees are getting "culture - including lectures on art, music and literature, on government time." Spokesmen for the Administration say they know nothing of such classes.

At this time of the year most of our foreign correspondents come home - from England, France, Germany and the Far East. And they are all men who have provided much background material for these reports. Tonight I want to chat for a while with our Chief European Correspondetn, Howard K. Smith, who makes his headquarters in London.

How is Sir Winston Churchill's health?

SMITH: Churchill's health seems very good. But he has certainly aged a great many years in the past few months. A very rich full, active life seems to have taken its toll all at once. He has a hard time getting up stairs. At Bermuda, when he went out to the airport to meet President Eisenhower, and the president reviewed the British guard of honor, Sir Winston tried to walk with him, but though the President did not walk especially fast, Churchill could not follow him and stopped in the middle of the apron and just waited for Eisenhower to return from reviewing the guard. His mind is still alert, his wit is sharp as a diamond, but physically he has become very very old.

MURROW: How much impatience is there inside his own Party? - that is people who wish that he would retire?

SMITH: Well, rumor in Britain has it that the younger men in his party - and in his cabinet - are impatient with the boss. Churchill denies he is an autocrat. He is quoted as having said, I simply give my colleagues plenty of time to consider the plans I put before them, then I expect them to agree with me. He has always had a tendency to take decisions without consulting the appropriate member of his cabinet, and now he does it more so. For example, before boarding the plane in Bermuda to go back to England, he was seized with a fit of favor for the Bermudians and so announced he would restore the British garrison that had during the war been withdrawn and which was the center of Bermuda social life. Well, Bermuda is useless from a defense standpoint. Britain is suffering from a shortage of troops (that is why they are anxious to pull out of Egypt) so it was not a wise gesture, and it was announced apparently without any consideration for or consultation with Churchill's own defense minister.

MURROW: What is Anthony Eden's position as the heir apparent?

SMITH: It has always been generally assumed Eden was the crown prince of British politics, the natural heir to the prime ministry. But in recent months, his position has been thrown into some doubt. Egypt has been the cause of that situation. Britain simply has to get out of Suez. She has 70,000 troops there she sorely needs for other defensive positions, and also to reduce her defense costs. The time is ripe now to get them out peacefully, without another ugly conflict in the Arab countries. But, inside the Conservative party, there is a strong imperial wing. They consider that if Eden agrees to take British troops out of Suez he will be appeasing the Egyptians, scuttling the empire. So Eden is really in rather narrow straits. His future is likely to be decided on the Suez canal. If he agrees to withdraw British troops, he will, at the worst turn his party against him and see it reject him at best, he will have to govern with a party divided against him. But if he does not agree to move out of Suez, then he faces the prospect of a resumption of expensive guerilla warfare in Egypt, the prospect that the Egyptians will take the Suez issue before the UN, where it is highly likely Britain would be outvoted - all of which might badly damage Eden's reputation. So the next weeks and month in Suez are going to have an important bearing on British internal politics.

MURROW: Has the prospect of high level talks between the heads of states been abandoned in Britain?

SMITH: The idea has lost its momentum, Ed. If Churchill had not been seized with illness shortly after proposing that kind of conference, he might have done something about it. But his illness gave all the opponents at home andabroad time to pretty well kill the idea. There is very little enthusiasm for it left now. Big conferences in general are in disrepute after the Bermuda conference at which never have so many reporters had so little to report about. There is more hope being put in quiet ordinary channels of diplomacy in such meetings as Churchill had in private last week with the Russian ambassador, and so on.

MURROW: What's happened to rationing?

SMITH: Almost everything came off ration last summer, Ed. The Good Ministry announced, it is not printing any ration books at all for next year. Austerity is rapidly becoming a memory of the past. Many long years of careful husbandry of resources plus American help are bearing fruit at last.

MURROW: As near as you can tell, what is the British attitude toward American troop stationed there?

SMITH: Even that has mellowed, Ed. The most anti-American periodical - aside from the Communist paper - the the magazine Tribune, for which Aneurin Bevan writes. Well, Tribune did a survey of the behavior of American troops in Britain recently and came to the conclusion that t e British press has been treating the American GI much less well than he deserves. He was, the paper, said, a pretty decent chap, after all.

MURROW: Now that more newsprint is available, what use is being made of it?

SMITH: Not very good use is made of it, I am afraid Ed. I don't think it is generally known in this country that the British press generally - excluding those fine papers, the Times, Manchester Guardian and maybe a few others that also have small circulations - the British press generally, the papers with four fifths of the circulation are on a pretty low level. More newspring has made them the same, only more so.

MURROW: What are the prospects for a General Election in Britain?

SMITH: There is not much prospect of an early new election. Britain is really a democracy in a perfect state of balance. One month Labor leads the Tories by a few votes in the Gallup poll that is the case now, but next month, the Tories may well lead Labor by a small fraction. An election could not give either party a majority that amounts to anything. There is really no burning issue between the parties to hold an election on. The British people are, I think, a little bored with politics, and would probably resent the party which forced an election. So, I don't think either is willint to risk such an eventuality.

MURROW: This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We were discussing Sir Winston Churchill and some of his methods of diplomacy. Of himself, Sir Winston once remarked: "Nothing in life is so exhilerating as to be shot at without result." Of the House of Commons, he said: "It thrives on criticism, it is impervious to newspaper abuse of taunts from any quarter. It is capable of digesting almost anything or any body of gentlemen - whatever be the views with which they arrive."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Thursday, Dec 31, 1953

This is the news:

The Russians have chosen this New Year's eve to issue another statement on their desire for peace. And Premier Malenkov wishes the American people success "in the development of their greatly worthwhile task in preserving peace from all attaempts against it." In a message to International News Service, Malenkov says: there is no serious obstacle to Soviet-American relations.. he hopes "traditional bonds of friendship will be strengthened" between the two countries.. and "with all his heart" Malenkov says he wishes the American people "happiness and a peaceful life." He sees favorable possibilities for a relaxation of international tension.

There is no comment from the State Department. But Chairman Wiley of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee says if Malenkov's sentiments are substantiated by deeds "they will sound better." And at the same time the Communist newspaper Pravda charged today that the three western powers and West Germany plan to sabotage the forthcoming Berlin conference.

All reports from Europe tonight are optomistic. Sir Winston Churchill says [redacted] "The growing strength of the free world coupled with its desire to reach just and honorable agreements, has reduced the possibility of war."

French President Auriol says:"It is not talk alone that can modify relations between the great powers of the world."

Italian President ~~Einaudi~~ Eye-now-Dee promises that his government will work for "better times for all men."

Marshal Tito, who says he is not "an exaggerating optomist", says victory over the danger of war is in less question in the near future. Franco of Spain urges the West to take advantage of what he calls the "deep crisis" inside Russia caused by Stalin's death.

And on Formosa, Chiank Kai Shek has called on his people to prepare for more difficult tasks and more pains and sacrifices in 1954... He calls it the decisive year.

In Indo-China the war goes on. The French report that they killed 54 Communists in a small battle in the northwest. And southeast of Hanoi a French patrol was ambushed with "appreciable losses."

~~In Korea, the neutral Indians, in what they described as a routine head count of Chinese anti-Communists found 135 men who want to go home. They questioned a total of 11 hundred men without the knowledge of the United Nations Command. This has infuriated the South Koreans and~~

3

In Korea tonight, one of the 22 Americans who has refused to return home from a Communist prison camp, [redacted] changed his mind. The neutral Indians have not announced the name of this man.. they promise it later. There are no other details. Yesterday the Indians, in what they described as a routine check of 44-hundred Chinese in our prison camps, found 135 men who wanted to go home. The decision was made without any allied representatives present. The Chinese Communist radio says this "screening" by the Indians is illegal. And the South Korean foreign minister says that as a result, his government may free 7-thousand North Koreans now held by the allied command.

[redacted]

Tomorrow, the families of more than 36-hundred Americans who have been missing in Korea for more than a year will be told that these soldiers and airmen are presumed dead. That will bring the Korean war death list to almost 30-thousand men.

[redacted]

And in Berlin , a report on five Americans being held in Russian prisons came from two men just released by the Soviets in Berlin. Private Homer Cox and former seaman Leland Towers say six other citizens of western countries are also in these prisons. Both men described the prisons as "hell holes".. with men dying daily or worked to death.

In London it was announced that Queen Elizabeth has conferred 59 KNIGHTHOODS ~~knighthoods~~. one of the titles went to American-born Jacob Epstein the sculptor whose works have often been the center of controversey.

In this country, the New Year brings a 10 per cent income tax cut for 60-million Americans. And tomorrow the excess profits tax on 50-thousand corporations will expire. But the social security tax, paid by both employers and employees, will go up from one and a half to two per cent.

The Federal Reserve Board says industrial production dropped one and a half per cent in November. And the Post Office Department says that the volume of Christmas mail this year was the highest ever..about four per cent more than a year ago when seven billion pieces of mail were handled during the holiday season.

At Augusta, Georgia, the President today conferred with [redacted] advisors on HIS State of the Union message. And the President rejected an appeal by the independent International Longshoremens Association to assign a special representative to the New York waterfront dispute..to prevent a "chaotic strike." But Governor Dewey says the state will intercede before the National Labor Relations Board. The governor says he has evidence [redacted] of "coercion and intimidation" in the recent N.L.R.B. election.

George Meany, the president of the American Federation of Labor, charges that an old age insurance plan offered by Representative Curtis is "the most morally dishonest proposal to come from a person in a position of trust in many years." Curtis wants to put government payments to the aged on a new basis.

The State Department today banned further publication in this country of "The Romanian News".. in retaliation for the Romanian decision last week banning "News from America".. a publication distributed by our legation in Bucharest.

Edward R. Murrow: December 31, 1953. 7.45 p.m.

Again tonight we take advantage of the presence of one of our European colleagues to talk a little about what's going on in the rest of the world, with which we're going to have to live - whether we like it or not. David Schoenbrun, whose reports you have often heard on this program is in from Paris.

1) David, why can't the French keep a government for more than a few weeks?

2) The whole idea of a European Army was concocted by the French. We agreed to it, so did the Germans; and now the French are reluctant to go through with it - why?

3) What is this malady, this political sickness that afflicts the French, and is it permanent?

Sa 4/6/22

(1)

Murrow Schoenbrun why cant the French keep a government in office?

David. Because theyre afraid of dictators for one thing...because theyre civilized people for another and civilized people dont like rulers---Thomas Jefferson used to say: that government is best that governs least...and the French think the best way to make sure the government governs leastis to throw it out of office every four or five months. Theyre getting ready to throw the latest cabinet out as a New Years celebration early next week. We Americans will get all upset about the French crisis again...but they wont. Ive lived there a long time as you know ....Ive seen a lot of socalled crises...about eighteen since the end of the war....France goes on ...has even gotten stronger in the process in many ways.....

Murrow ~~Well now in what ways for example.~~

Schoenbrun Frenchmen and women are getting married more often and are having bigger and better babies.... theyre also writing some pretty good books that are influencing people all over the world. France has been for some two centuries and more the fountainhead of western culture....and still is to a great measure. You know we Americans at the moment are obsessed by such things as the European Army and are angry and furstrated about French refuaals to get on with it...rearming the Germans that is...but we forget our debt to Frqnce in the vital areas ~~of effect civilization which the French did get on without hesitations...from Henri Becquerel who first found that uranium salts were radiocative through Peirre and Marie Curie and Irene Curie and Kowarski and Halban the French led the world in devopming atomic energy right up to 1939...and their scientists are still creating in this new year.~~ murrow [redacted] But David science takes the long term view....humanity and progress...but the French seem to overlook the immediate issues: [redacted] you mentioned European Army...the free world needs German strength...Germany needs a free family to grow up in and plant the roots of its democracy...the French themselves first proposed unity with Germany in a European Army three years ago...ever since theyve been backtracking....why ?

schoenbrun....Well this is New Years Eve...a reminder that new years do roll around...and new situations develop....and what people thought and planned a year ago no longer looks like such a good idea today. I think we Americans had better not throw the first stone because we are not without sin....and backtracking . ~~as you put it~~. Why I remember a fellow named Ike Eisenhower who ran ~~against~~ against a man named Rober Taft for the Repuhlican nomination...because he opposed Tafts ideas on American military withdrawal from foreign soil...who wanted retrenchment and so on...Now Eisenhower is Presid nt and things have changed...and we're pulling divisions out of Korea and talking of pulling some back from Europe. And a man you know better than any reporter Ed Murrow...a man named Churchill propsed the European Army before the French did...back in August 1950. I sat in the news gallery in Strasbourg and listened to Mr Churchill proposed a joint army of Europe and promise that Britain would join it to defend the free world. But that was Mr Churchill, the Kings loyal opposition. Today he is Sir Winston, the Queens first Minister..Hes still calling for a European Army...telling the French to get on with it..but HE and england now refuse to join it....second thoughts, Ed..backtracking.

Murrow, Well just ~~xxxxxxx~~ what are the second thoughts of the French, why are they back tracking?

schoenbrun..... ~~First of all they think theres less danger today than~~ three years ago when the Korean war broke out..for one thing this New Year has brought an end to the shooting im Korea....and yet for the long suffering french it hasnt brought an end to the fighting in french indochina.... this is the eighth new years even that french boys are fighting and dying in the indochinese jungles...tonight at this very moment theres bitter fighting on the mekong river. ...and just so long as the french army is tied down on that river in asia theyll hesitate to raise a german army on the rhine in europe....military power almost always leads to political power...the french are afraid of german power on the continent....they were afraid three years ago too but they were more afraid of russia then. a lot has happened since then murrow ~~thats true enough but you cannot live forever on fear...nor~~ can nations affordthe civilized luxury of anarchy for long.. youve told us that the french have been making progress despite cabinet upheavals but surely this progress has been spotty.. surely something is seriously wrong in france for there to be so many crises so many strikes such slow and low production in the face ,for example,of the surge of german power and recovery...just what is wrong with France.....

~~Is a the~~ political sickness a more a symptom than the

schoenbrun

france is ill ,ed...a sick country ~~as you said~~...the malady is chromic as well as acute... ~~is deep rooted in some ways it goes~~ and this is not a good moment for trying new ideas — back two thousand years...to the day that Caesar first said "all Gaul is divided".... ~~its~~ divided geographically for instance...france is one the mediterranean and the atlantic seas facing south and west ~~turn~~ buffeted by ~~xxxxxxxxxxx~~ the powerful tides from those two areas of the world...and france is a land power too....bound by the umbilical cord of the rhine river to the continent of europe...the peninsula of Asia. France has some great treasures which are mixed blessings..... afertile soil and climate that provided the basis of power and civilization before the machine age...before the age of steel.... ~~xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx~~ france grew strong and powerful on steak and spinach when those ~~xxxxxxxx~~ muscle building elements meant power.....but when iron and coal and machines replaced men as the source of power in the 19th century France ~~xxx~~ found it was deficient in the proteins of the industrial age....but by that time france had already developed strong habits... habits suited for another age.... the land was divided into small parcels...men had developed individual creative arts...not community skills or habits of team work.... frenchmen didnt have to pull together like the early american pioneers against the elements of nature because nature was kind and gentle and bountiful in france....and when the sub-soil proved to be short of ~~xxxxxxxx~~ coke and iron for steel it was almost too late for france to shift its habits.. france is still trying to enter the twentieht century.

3

and through all the long pull of history france was wracked by war and revolution and counter revolution...one almost every fifteen years for the past 175.....

france carries her history on her back more than any country in the world today...the past is alive in france with all its passions and contradictions....yet france keeps on... ~~gerwix~~x and great progress has been and is being made... and french contributions to the west are still of vital importance and strength..

There is an illness in the land ....france is ~~sixkx~~ anguished and confused a...but there is a soundness and a strength too in the land ....and if may qote our american secretary of state mr dulles....who is often impatient with the french---it would be a grave mistake he said...to underestimate the french....in any case we cant afford to.... france is our key ally on three continents of the world.... europea africa and asia.

These words are a particular favorite of mine. I first quoted those words ~~used them~~ on another New Year's eve - from London - in 1940. They were written a long time ago by a German, Heinrich Heine: "The New Year is at the door. I wish for the stupid, a little understanding...and for the understanding a little poetry. I wish a heart for the rich and a little bread for the poor. But above all, I wish that we may blackguard each other as little as possible during the New Year."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday Jan 1, 1954

This is the news:

The western powers have accepted the Russian proposal of January 25th as the date for the Big Four foreign ministers conference in Berlin. And we have told Moscow we regret that the Russians did not accept our suggestion for the meeting to get started next Monday. The State Department, as well as the British and the French, also [redacted] agreed to let representatives of the High commissioners in Germany work out details on the site of the meeting and other arrangements. And we believe the matter of an agenda [redacted] should be left to the actual meeting of the foreign ministers. In a few minutes I'd like to put [redacted] some questions to my colleague, Richard C. Hottelet, who is just baxk from Germany.

The Russians today returned to West Germany 800 German men and women who had been held in Soviet prison camps. And among these returned prisoners were some who reported that many East Germans who took part in the June 17 revolt against Communist rule are now in Soviet prisons.

In Korea, Private First Class Claude Batchelor of Texas will tell reporters tonight more of the details surrounding his life in a Communist prison camp.. and his decision last night to return to America. Batchelor says he was persuaded, finally, to leave the enemy camp and return to the Americans by a heart-broken letter from his Japanese wife and by other mail from his family at home. Batchelor told Intelligence officers who questioned him that he was the "Number Two man" among the unrepatriated American prisoners. And he said at least one other man, and possibly more, want to come home. He told of a New Year's eve party in the neutral zone prisoner of war camp during which another American cried out: "I want to come home. I want to come home." Batchelor says he had a bit of trouble getting out of the camp because some of the other Americans carried daggers. But the neutral Indian guards say this is not true; they say they told talked with Batchelor and he told them none of the Americans are being held by force.

Washington sources say they have reports from Korea indicating that the Communists offered the American prisoners an automobile.. $5000 in cash and the promise of free eeucations in China to remain with the Communists.

In Indo-China today French General Henri Navarre told his forces that he fully expects a victory in the long war after another six months of hard fighting. Navarre hinted, in a New Year's message, that he would intensify his strategy of quick blows against the enemy deep inside Communist territory. Today there were some scattered clashes on the front lines. And the French report that the Communist-led Viet Minh troops are continuing to mass their forces in the northwest.

In India today Prime Minister Nehru told the National Trade Union Congress that India will never accept foreign military aid in any form. And, he said, India will never allow foreign troops on her soil. He says India's history and world history have shown that any foreign military aid is disastrous to any nation. And that's why he has repeatedly warned Pakistan not to accept military aid from the United States.

In Washington today the State Department challenged Soviet Premier Malenkov to back up his "expressed desire for peace" with deeds. A spokesman says we welcome the Malenkov statement of last night.. his desire to improve relations with the United States. And we suggest that the Russians will have an opportunity to prove this at the January 25th foreign ministers conference in Berlin. We also point out that Russia can prove its peaceful intentions by agreeing to : unite Germany and Austria...make possible a Korean peace conference AND bring an end to the war in Indo-China.

The President today started working at 8 a.m. at Augusta, Georgia. He worked with his top advisers for four and a half hours..on his State of the Union message and other papers. A secretary reports "quite a lot of progress." In the afternoon the President's advisers returned to their work and Mr. Eisenhower took off for a round of golf.

The National Safety Council said today that the 1953 traffic death total will be approximately the same as the 38-thousand lives lost in 1952. This would be the first year since 1939 that traffic deaths have not increased.

In today's Football bowl games; Oklahoma defeated Maryland, ranked Number one in the country, by a score of seven to nothing..in the Orange Bowl game. Michigan State defeated UCLA 28 to 20 in the Rose Bowl.

In the Sugar Bowl, Georgia Tech defeated West Virginia, 42 to 19.

Texas Tech won the Gator Bow game 35 to 13..over Auburn. And in the Cotton bowl it was Rice 28; Alabama, six. In this game, in Dallas, Tommy Lewis, an Alabama fullback, jumped up from the bench and tackled Rice Halfback Dick Moegle who was away on a touchdown run....

The referee then awarded Rice a touchdown and credited Moegle with a 95-yard run. And the Alabama fullback, Lewis, explained:" I saw him coming from the bench. The nearer he got to me, the nearer I moved to the field. I don't know what happened. I couldn't realize that I had done it when I returned to the bench."

Murrow: We learned today that the four power conference will be held in Berlin on January 25th. It will be the first time in years that western statesmen have had the chance to come to grips with the Soviet Foreign Minister. -- Our correspondent Dick Hottelet will be [redacted] going back to Germany to cover the story. -- Dick, is the trip going to be worth the trouble for all concerned? Is the conference likely to settle anything?

Hottelet: From all indications so far I'd say no. Both sides hold rigid, and opposite, positions on the main problems. Take the German problem, as a concrete example. [redacted] The Russians pay lip service to the cause of German unity, democracy and peace. They talk about free elections and withdrawal of occupation forces. You'd THINK we were not far apart. But every action of the communist regime in eastern Germany shows that unity to them means only a settlement which will bring all of Germany under soviet rule. Free elections are elections which the communists will win. Peace can be furthered in their eyes only by our abandoning everything we've tried to do in Germany in the past five years. --- I suspect that this same approach to words and problems will also apply to questions like [redacted] world tension, security and atomic control which are bound to be discussed in Berlin.

[redacted]

Murrow: Well now, if you think that no real progress will be made in Berlin, what's the use of going? Failure will only bring new disappointment? [redacted] may [redacted] wreck what chance there might have been.

Hottelet: There's plenty of reason to go to Berlin with neither false hopes nor immovable pessimism. It gives the west a chance to take Molotov's measure after a year of great change in the Soviet union. After all he is the number two man in the Kremlin. The western foreign ministers can confront him [redacted] with the whole world's demand for security from war. There is no reason why the west cannot [redacted] come up with some clear and concrete proposals. If the Russians accept - well, halleluya; if they don't they'll have to take the consequences in public opinion.

Murrow: So you think [redacted] Berlin will be a sparring session which we ought to try at least to win on points.

Hottelet: That's right.

Murrow: Well [redacted] Molotov is likely to throw a few punches himself.

Hottelet: He is bound to. He can jab and feint with ideas like a return to four power control of Germany, or recognition of the communist regime, OR an Eastern Locarno treaty which would neutralize Germany and [redacted] wreck [redacted] western [redacted] unity. He'll aim some special [redacted] arguments at France -- and perhaps play for time to make us all look weak and silly. ---- We've got to be ready for these tactics in any combination.

Murrow: The Germans [redacted] will certainly be watching closely to see how it all comes out. They've been getting a little restive. How much longer will they wait for the European Army and European unity?

Hottelet: The Germans are not busting to set up an army. But the defense treaties do more than that. [redacted] They also give Germany almost full sovereignty. [redacted] The Germans will not wait forever for France and the others to ratify the treaties. I believe they will start demanding equal rights in the next few months - with or without a defense [redacted] European community. Although they'd prefer to have [redacted] the EDC.

Murrow: Why?

Hottelet: German democrats don't want to risk a revival of NATIONAL military power either. -- Also, defense is a natural right for a free and equal nation. ---- In addition, although the economy is booming now, there are clouds on the horizon. If a recession comes defense contracts could be a shot in the arm, help maintain full employment and help keep the country politically sound.

Most of us are inclined to look forward to the start of a New Year with a degree of hopefulness. Samuel Johnson once put it this way: "It is necessary to hope, though hope should always be deluded; for hope itself is happiness - perhaps the chief happiness this world affords. And its frustrations - however frequent - are yet less dreadful than its extinction."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, JANUARY 1, 1954.
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Western Powers have accepted the Russian proposal of January 25th as the date for the Big Four foreign ministers conference in Berlin. And we have told Moscow we regret that the Russians did not accept our suggestion for the meeting to get started next Monday. The State Department, as well as the British and the French also agreed to let representatives of the High commissioners in Germany work out details on the site of the meeting and other arrangements. And we believe the matter of an agenda should be left to the actual meeting of the foreign ministers. In a few minutes I'd like to put some questions to my colleague, Richard C. Hottelet, who is just back from Germany.

The Russians today returned to West Germany 806 German men and women who had been held in Soviet prison camps. And among these returned prisoners were some who reported that many East Germans who took part in the June 17 revolt against Communist rule are now in Soviet prisons.

In Korea, Private First Class Claude Batchelor of Texas will tell reporters tonight more of the details surrounding his life in a Communist prison camp and his decision last night to return to America. Batchelor says he was persuaded, finally, to leave the enemy camp and return to the Americans by a heartbroken letter from his Japanese wife and by other mail from his family at home. Batchelor told Intelligence officers who questioned him that he was the "Number Two Man" among the unrepatriated American prisoners. And he said at least one other man, and possibly more, want to come home. He told of a New Year's Eve party in the neutral zone prisoner of war camp during which another American cried out: "I want to come home. I want to come home." Batchelor says he had a bit of trouble getting out of the camp because some of the other Americans carried daggers. But the neutral Indian guards say this is not true; they say they too, talked with Batchelor and he told them none of the Americans are being held by force.

Washington sources say they have reports from Korea indicating that the Communists offered the American prisoners an automobile - $5000 in cash and the promise of free educations in China to remain with the Communists.

In Indo-China today French General Henri Navarre told his forces that he fully expects a victory in the long war after another six months of hard fighting. Navarre hinted, in a New Year's message, that he would intensify his strategy of quick blows against the enemy deep inside Communist territory. Today there were some scattered clashes on the front lines. And the French report that the Communist-led Viet Minh troops are continuing to mass their forces in the northwest.

In India today Prime Minister Nehru told the National Trade Union Congress that India will never accept foreign military aid in any form. And, he said, India will never allow foreign troops on her soil. He says India's history and world history have shown that any foreign military aid is disastrous to any nation. And that's why he has repeatedly warned Pakistan not to accept military aid from the United States.

In Washington today the State Department challenged Soviet Premier Malenkov to back up his "expressed desire for peace" with deeds. A spokesman says we welcome the Malenkov statement of last night - his desire to improve relations with the United States. And we suggest that the Russians will have an opportunity to prove this at the January 25th foreign ministers conference in Berlin. We also point out that Russia can prove its peaceful intentions by agreeing to: unite Germany and Austria - make possible a Korean peace conference and bring an end to the war in Indo-China.

The President today started working at 8 a.m. at Augusta, Georgia. He worked with his top advisers for four and a half hours on his State of the Union message and other papers. A secretary reports "quite a lot of progress." In the afternoon the President's advisers returned to their work and Mr. Eisenhower took off for a round of golf.

The National Safety Council said today that the 1953 traffic death total will be approximately the same as the 38-thousand lives lost in 1952. This would be the first year since 1939 that traffic deaths have not increased.

In today's Football bowl games; Oklahoma defeated Maryland, ranked Number one in the country, by a score of seven to nothing - in the Orange Bowl game, Michigan State defeated UCLA 28 to 20 in the Rose Bowl. In the Sugar Bowl, Georgia Tech defeated West Virginia, 42 to 19. Texas Tech won the Bator Bowl game 35 to 13 over Auburn. And in the Cotton bowl it was Rice 28; Alabama, six. In this game, in Dallas, Tommy Lewis, an Alabama fullback, jumped up from the bench and tackled Rice Halfback Dick Moegle who was away on a touchdown run. The referre then awarded Rice a touchdown and credited Moegle with a 95-yard run. And the Alabama fullback, Lewis, explained: "I saw him coming from the bench. The nearer he got to me the nearer I moved to the field. I don't know what happened. I couldn't realize that I had done it when I returned to the bench."

We learned today that the four power conference will be held in Berlin on January 25th. It will be the first time in years that western statesmen have had the chance to come to grips with the Soviet Foreign Minister. Our correspondent, Dick Hottelet, will be going back to Germany to cover the story. Dick, is the trip going to be worth the trouble for all concerned? Is the conference likely to settle anything?

HOTTELET: From all indications so far, I'd say no. Both sides hold rigid, and opposite, positions on the main problems. Take the German problem, as a concrete example. The Russians pay lip service to the cause of German unity, democracy and peace. They talk about free elections and withdrawl of occupation forces. You'd think we were not far apart. But every action of the Communist regime in eastern Germany shows that unity to them means only a settlement which will bring all of Germany under Soviet rule. Free elections are elections which the Communists will win. Peace can be furthered in their eyes only by our abandoning everything we've tried to do in Germany in the past five years. I suspect that this same approach to words and problems will also apply to questions like world tension, security and atomic control which are bound to be discussed in Berlin.

MURROW: Well now, if you think that no real progress will be made in Berlin, what's the use of going? Failure will only bring new disappointment. Cynicism may wreck what chance there might have been.

HOTTELET: There's plenty of reason to go to Berlin with neither false hopes nor immovable pessimism. It gives the West a chance to take Molotov's measure after a year of great change in the Soviet Union. After all he is the number two man in the Kremlin. The western foreign ministers can confront him with the whole world' demand for security from war. There is no reason why the west cannot come up with some clear and concrete proposals. If the Russians accept - well, halleluya; if they don't they'll have to take the consequences in public opinion.

MURROW: So you think Berlin will be a sparring session which we ought to try at least to win on points.

HOTTELET: That's right.

MURROW: Well, Molotov is likely to throw a few punches himself.

HOTTELET: He's bound to. He can jab and feint with ideas like a return to four power control of ermany, or recognition of the Communist regime, OR an Eastern Locarno treaty which would neutralize Germany and wreck unity. He'll aim some special arguments at France - and perhaps play for time to make us all look weak and silly. We've got to be ready for these tactics in any combination.

MURROW: The Germans will certainly be watching closely to see how it all comes out. They've been getting a little restive. How much longer will they wait for the European Army and European unity?

HOTTELET: The Germans are not busting to set up an army. But the defense treaties do more than that. They also give Germany almost full sovereignty. The Germans will not wait forever for France and the others to ratify the treaties. I believe they will svart demanding equal rights in the next few months - with or without a European defense community. Although they'd prefer to have the EDC.

MURROW: Why?

HOTTELET: German democrats don't want to risk a revival of National military power either. Also, defense is a natural right for a free and equal nation. In addition, although the economy is booming now, there are blouds on the horizon. If a recession comes defense contracts could be a shot in the arm, help maintain full employment and help keep the country politically sound.

MURROW: This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Most of us are inclined to look forward to the start of a New Year with a degree of hopefulness. Samuel Johnson once put it this way: "It is necessary to hope, though hope should always be deluded; for hope itself is happiness - perhaps the chief happiness this world affords. And its frustrations - however frequent - are yet less dreadful than its extinction."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday, January 5, 1954

This is the news:

The President today told Congressional leaders of both parties, that we will strike directly at Communist China, if the Chinese renew the Korean war, or intervene in Indo-China./ Congressional sources, who attended the two and a half hour meeting, have told the United Press, that the President and Secretary of State Dulles insisted that the withdrawal of two of our divisions from Korea is an indication of strength./ These sources, say Democratic Senator Russell of Georgia expressed doubt.. said he fears it will be interpreted as an indication of weakness./ Mr. Dulles has twice warned the Chinese Communists against intervening in Indo-China, or renewing the Korean fighting. The United Press says, the President today was blunter than the Secretary has been. Mr. Eisenhower did not discuss his domestic program with the Democrats, who attended the White House meeting./ And one democrat, House Whip McCormack described it as: "A briefing, rather than a consultation."

2

~~This is the news:~~

~~The President today spent two and a half hours discussing his~~ foreign policy with ~~leaders of Congress, both Republicans and~~ Democrats. The group did not discuss the ~~domestic program the President will~~ send to Congress in his ~~State of the Union~~ message on Thursday. ~~And~~ the Democrats who ~~attended generally~~ had "no comment" for reporters ~~after the~~ meeting ~~was over. House~~ Democratic Whip McCormack told newsmen: "It was a briefing ~~rather than a consultation.~~" And among those ~~who briefed the~~ congressmen ~~were Secretary~~ of State Dulles.. Defense Secretary Wilson and Foreign ~~Aid Chief Stasseb.~~

The Department of Commerce reported today that unemployment rose about 400-thousand from November to December. The total unemployed in the country now is one million 850-thousand. In a few minutes I'd like to discuss the President's promise to use the Federal government to sustain the economy.

The Secret Service today announced the arrest of three persons in connection with the theft of 160-thousand dollars in new tenty dollar bills from the (BUREAU) of Engraving. All but 20-thousand dollars has been recovered. Those arrested are: James Rufus Landis, 29, a distributor-checker at the bureau..his wife..and William Giles, a government flag pole painter. The Secret Service says this is what happened. Landis had access to the government's money storage vault. Somehow he managed to get the new money. He claims someone else took it from him..out of the building. Then Landis, his wife and Giles took the money to a Virginia farm where Mrs. Landis father is employed. They hid the money there. The father-in-law became worried and called the Virginia state police. The police and secret service found 88-thousand dollars hidden in a tool chest. There was also seven thousand in small bills, the results of changing the new (TWENTY) dollar bills. The rest of the money was found under a truck in a corner of the Bureau of engraving. Landis admits helping plan and carry out the theft. He says his wife had nothing to do with it.

Senator McCarthy today denied published reports that he has agreed to turn his investigating committee's attention from Communism to waste and corruption. The Senator says no one in the Administration "from the President on down" has asked him to do this. He says his committee "will continue roughly in the future as it has in the past."

Senators Jenner and McCarran returned to New York today from Canada and the secret questioning of Igor Guzenko, who helped smash a Russian spy ring in Canada. They say they questioned Guzenko for more than five hours.. their mission was satisfactorily accomplished.

The Western allies today proposed to Moscow that representatives of all four nations meet in Berlin Thursday to agree on a place for the Jan. 25 meeting of the foreign ministers

In Italy, Premier Pella resigned today after four and a half months in office. My colleague Bill Downs cables from Rome that the cause of the resignation was Pella's difficulties with his own Christian Democratic Party. Pella wanted to appoint a conservative man to the ministry of agriculture. But party leaders wanted a more liberal man to carry out the land reform program that has long been a pet project of former Premier De Gasperi. There is no indication as to who will succeed Pella. But in all likelihood it will be another Christian Democrat.

In Paris tomorrow, Premier Laniel will tell a National Assembly committee that he wants a confidence vote that will either oust his government or make clear it support of Laniel before the Berlin conference.

West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer was 78 years old today. And William Clark the former chief justice of American courts in Germany, returned to New York and accused the State Department of "lying in its teeth" by denying that it had forcibly taken away his diplomatic passport. Clark says he may take court action against Secretary of State Dulles to get his passport restored.

The State Department announces that it has started "informal discussions" with the Chinese Communists to determine whether its possible to resume the Korean peace talks. We're told only that these discussions are being carried forward "through intermediaries."

Our 8th army is going ahead with its plans to guide 22-thousand anti-Communist war prisoners to freedom soon after their expected release on January 23rd.

Corporal Batchelor of Kermit, Texas, who recently decided to return home instead of staying with the Communists, told reporters in TOKYO today that the Communists ordered American prisoners not to come out for allied explanations. The Americans were also ordered to break up allied efforts to win the men back. Batchelor denied being an informer on fellow PRISONERS

[redacted]

The Army tonight released the names of 498 men who have been missing in Korea for more than a year. They are "presumed dead."

In Indo-China, the French say their troops have killed 45 more Communist-led rebels and captured 89 others in the Red River Delta. There were only minor patrol clashes in the northwest, as French fighters and bombers continued their round-the-clock attacks on enemy troop concentrations.

Edward R. Murrow: January 5, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

~~Nobody~~ Few will care to dispute the statement that one of the most important consideration of the New Year is what happens to American business. Three hundred economists met in Washington last week and debated the outlook. They were apart on details, but were fairly together about an orthodox recession coming up. Some thought it would lead to a three to five percent decline in production, some thought five to six percent, a few thought even more. But all of them rejected the forecast of Colin Clark, the eminent Australian economist now professor at Oxford, that the United States is heading into a major depression.

There was something new in this discussion - its candor. While the inevitable sprinkling of warnings have come from other quarters against "talking ourselves into a recession", it was recognized that something already has happened. Business already is having a setback, and it hasn't been the result of talk. Senator Douglas noted that automobile production was down 12 percent, steel production had dropped from above 100 to 67 percent, and carloadings were off.

Gerhard Colm, chief economist for the National Planning Association, pointed out that if full employment is to be maintained, production will have to increase ten billion dollars, whereas the decline in production may be between ten and twenty billions. That means that the American economy this year may fall twenty to thirty billion dollars short of maintaining normal growth. And that is no figure to be taken lightly.

But that is as pessimistic as the economists cared to be. For not only has the candor of the discussion been unusual, something else is different from earlier recessions. It is the conviction of everyone, literally everyone in the field, that a violent dip in American prosperity is avoidable. This is not a faith that has just been acquired. But it is new in comparison with the time about which Americans are acutely aware, the last great depression. Since then economic and political thinking has undergone a revolution. The business cycle, once held to be as fateful and inevitable as destiny, has ceased to be so regarded. It is like communicable disease after Pasteur discovered the cure for anthrax. The economy may get sick, but now the cause is known and a treatment is available. For this reason it is possible to talk about the sickness; indeed it becomes desirable to talk about it, because political action has to be taken and public support is essential. The economic doctors agree that the sickness can be mastered, even though they have differences about the way to do it. The remedies for a recession are complex and controversial. What is not complex and controversial is that the recession can be overcome. And that is a tremendous and cheering thought. It makes it a lot easier to talk about the business picture. One can mention unfavorable facts without dread. One can point out that if there is any recession things are already somewhat worse than they look, because this is a growing country and the only normal state is one in which production is increasing. That is where thinking should start, not in comparing the volume of this year's business with the volume a year or more ago. It is true the volume today is impressively great. It is true that this year well over sixty million persons should be employed. But it is also true that the number of unemployed will grow. Unemployment tends to create unemployment, government retrenchment tends to produce country-wide shrinkages. The real danger is from these two forces. But this danger is offset by the knowledge that the business cycle can be controlled.

President Eisenhower last night unequivocally promised that every legitimate means available to the Federal government is being used to sustain the economy, and will continue to be used as necessary. He did not spell out what the means will be. They are important. But much more important is the will to use them. Though economists have known that the business cycle could be controlled, they also know that the Federal government would have to take the necessary actions. The fear about the year ahead, especially as felt in Europe, has been due to uncertainty whether the present Administration would take the necessary actions, or take them in time.

The American economists know that President Eisenhower has chosen as economic advisers men who believe in Federal action. To name only two, Dr. Arthur Burns, recently made administrator of the ten million dollar research program aimed at control of the business cycle, is a specialist on the use of public works to help stabilize business activity. Dr. Gabriel Hauge, the President's economic assistant, is a recognized authority on applying indirect monetary controls to govern the economy. It is clear that the President has sought advice about action. He is receiving advice about action. That by itself wouldn't stave off a business decline. # But it is a promise that what experts know can be done will be done. For the Pres. — To have made the promise appears to be historically important, and it might some day be recognized as the most important single step the President has so far been called upon to take.

We have been discussing the administration's efforts to brace itself should another depression appeab on its way. Of course, the main problem is to be able to recognize the true symptoms. And as Benjamin Franklin once said:"Tis easy to see but hard to foresee." But perhaps, in the end, most of us would agree with Will Rogers when he remarked:"I base my faith on the fact that 98% of all predictions are wrong."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President today told Congressional leaders of both parties that we will strike directly at Communist China if the Chinese renew the Korean war or intervene in Indo-China. Congressional sources, who attended the two and a half hour meeting, have told the United Press that the President and Secretary of State Dulles insisted that the withdrawal of two of our divisions from Korea is an indication of strength. These sources say Democratic Senator Russell of Georgia expressed doubt said he fears it will be interpreted as an indication of weakness. Mr. Dulles has twice warned the Chinese Communists against intervening in Indo-China or renewing the Korean fighting. The United Press says the President today was blunter than the Secretary has been. Mr. Eisenhower did not discuss his domestic program with the Democrats who attended the White House meeting. And one Democrat, House Whip McCormack described it as "A briefing rather than a consultation."

The Department of Commerce reported today that unemployment rose about 400-thousand from November to December. The total unemployed in the country now is one million 850-thousand. In a few minutes I'd like to discuss the President's promise to use the Federal government to sustain the economy.

The Secret Service today announced the arrest of three persons in connection with the theft of 160-thousand dollars in new twenty dollar bills from the Bureau of Engraving. All but 20-thousand dollars has been recovered. Those arrested are: James Rufus Landis, 29, a distributor-checker at the bureau - his wife - and William Giles, a government flag pole painter. The Secret Service says this is what happened. Landis had access to the government's money storage vault. Somehow he managed to get the new money. He claims someone else took it from him out of the building. Then Landis, his wife and Giles took the money to a Virginia farm where Mrs. Landis father is employed. They hid the money there. The father-in-law became worried and called the Virginia state police. The police and secret service found 88-thousand dollars hidden in a tool chest. There was also seven thousand in small bills, the results of changing the new twenty dollar bills. The rest of the money was found under a truck in a corner of the Bureau of Engraving. Landis admits helping plan and carry out the theft. He says his wife had nothing to do with it.

Senator McCarthy today denied published reports that he has agreed to turn his investigating committee's attention from Communism to waste and corruption. The Senator says no one in the Administration "from the President on down" has asked him to do this. He says his committee "will continue roughly in the future as it has in the past."

Senators Jenner and McCarran returned to New York today from Canada and the secret questioning of Igor Guzenko, who helped smash a Russian spy ring in Canada. They say they questioned Guzenko for more than five hours - their mission was satisfactorily accomplished.

The Western allies today proposed to Moscow that representatives of all four nations meet in Berlin Thursday to agree on a place for the January 25th meeting of the foreign ministers.

In Italy, Premier Pella resigned today after four and a half months in office. My colleague Bill Downs cables from Rome that the cause of the resignation was Pella's difficulties with his own Christian Democratic Party. Pella wanted to appoint a conservative man to the Ministry of Agriculture. But party leaders wanted a more liberal man to carry out the land reform program that has long been a pet project of former Premier De Gasperi. There is no indication as to who will succeed Pella. But in all likelihood it will be another Christian Democrat.

In Paris tomorrow, Premier Laniel will tell a National Assembly committee that he wants a confidence vote that will either oust his government or make clear it support of Laniel before the Berlin conference.

West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer was 78 years old today. And William Clark, the former chief justice of American courts in Germany, returned to New York and accused the State Department of "lying in its teeth" by denying that it had forcibly taken away his diplomatic passport. Clark says he may take court action against Secretary of State Dulles to get his passport restored.

The State Department announces that it has started "informal discussions" with the Chinese Communists to determine whether its possible to resume the Korean peace talks. We're told only that these discussions are being carried forward "through intermediaries."

Our 8th army is going ahead with its plans to guide 22-thousand anti-Communist war prisoners to freedom soon after their expected release on January 23rd.

Corporal Batchelor of Kermit, Texas, who recently decided to return home instead of staying with the Communists, told reporters in Tokyo today that the Communists ordered American prisoners not to come out for allied explanations. The Americans were also ordered to break up allied efforts to win the men back. Batchelor denied being an informer on fellow prisoners.

The Army tonight released the names of 498 men who have been missing in Korea for more than a year. They are "presumed dead."

In Indo-China, the French say their troops have killed 45 more Communist-led rebels and captured 89 others in the Red River Delta. There were only minor patrol clashes in the northwest, as French fighters and bombers continued their round-the-clock attacks on enemy troop concentrations.

Few will care to dispute the statement that one of the most important considerations of the New Year is what happens to American business. Three hundred economists met in Washington last week and debated the outlook. They were apart on details, but were fairly together about an orthodox recession coming up. Some thought it would lead to a three to five percent decline in production, some thought five to six percent, a few thought even more. But all of them rejected the forecast of Colin Clark, the eminent Australian economist now professor at Oxford, that the United States is heading into a major depression.

There was something new in this discussion - its candor. While the inevitable sprinkling of warnings have come from other quarters against "talking ourselves into a recession", it was recognized that something already has happened. Business already is having a setback, and it hasn't been the result of talk. Senator Douglas noted that automobile production was down 12 percent, steel production has dropped from above 100 to 67 percent, and carloadings were off.

Gerhard Colm, Chief Economist for the National Planning Association, pointed out that if full employment is to be maintained, production will have to increase ten billion dollars, whereas the decline in production may be between ten and twenty billions. That means that the American economy this year may fall twenty to thirty billion dollars short of maintaining normal growth. And that is no figure to be taken lightly.

But that is as pessimistic as the economists cared to be. For not only has the candor of the discussion been unusual, something else is different from earlier recessions. It is the conviction of everyone, literally everyone in the field, that a violent dip in American prosperity is avoidable. This is not a faith that has just been acquired. But it is new in comparison with the time about which Americans are acutely aware, the last great depression. Since then economic and political thinking has undergone a revolution. The business cycle, once held to be as fateful and inevitable as destiny, has ceased to be so regarded. It is like communicable disease after Pasteur discovered the cure for anthrax. The economy may get sick, but now the cause is known and a treatment is available. For this reason it is possible to talk about the sickness; indeed it becomes desirable to talk about it, because political action has to be taken and public support is essential. The economic doctors agree that the sickness can be mastered, even though they have differences about the way to do it. The remedies for a recession are complex and controversial. What is not complex and controversial is that the recession can be overcome. And that is a tremendous and cheering thought. It makes it a lot easier to talk about the business picture. One can mention unfavorable facts without dread. One can point out that if there is any recession things are already somewhat worse than they look, because this is a growing country and the only normal state is one in which production is increasing. That is where thinking should start, not in comparing the volume of this year's business with the volume a year or more ago. It is true the volume today is impressively great. It is true that this year well over sixty million persons should be employed. But it is also true that the number of unemployed will grow. Unemployment tends to create unemployment, government retrenchment tends to produce country-wide shrinkages. The real danger is from these two forces. But this danger is offset by the knowledge that the business cycle can be controlled.

President Eisenhower last night unequivocally promised that every legitimate means available to the Federal government is being used to sustain the economy, and will continue to be used as necessary. He did not spell out what the means will be. They are important. But much more important is the will to use them. Though economis have known that the business cycle could be controlled, they also know that the Federal government would have to take the necessary actions. The fear about the year ahead, especially as felt in Eruope, has been due to uncertainty whether the present Administration would take the necessary actions, or take them in time.

The American economists know that President Eisenhower has chosen as economic advisors men who believe in Federal action. To name only two, Dr. Arthur Burns, recently made administrator of the ten million dollar research program aimed at control of the business cycle, is a specialist on the use of public works to help stabilize business activity. Dr. Gabriel Hauge, the President's economic assistant, is a recognized authority on applying indirect monetary controls to govern the economy. It is clear that the President has sought advice about action. He is receiving advice about action. That by itself wouldn't stave off a business decline. But it is a promise that what experts know can be done will be done. For the President to have made the promise appears to be historically important, and it might someday be recognized as the most important single step the President has so far been called upon to take.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We have been discussing the Administration's efforts to brace itself should another depression appear on its way. Of course, the main problem is to be able to recognize the true symptoms. And as Benjamin Franklin once said: "Tis easy to see but hard to foresee." But perhaps, in the end, most of us would agree with Will Rogers when he remarked: "I base my faith on the fact that 98& of all predictions are wrong."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday, January 6, 1954

This is the news:

The Russians have accepted our proposal to start secret talks on atomic energy in Washington. The Soviet government announced tonight that Ambassador to Washington Georgi Zarubin has been authorized to conduct "procedural talks" on the President's proposal for an international pool of atomic energy for peaceful purposes. The Russian announcement was made after Ambassador Bohlen again called on Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov..at Molotov's request. The State Department says Secretary of State Dulles "expects to proceed at an early date" with the conversations.

And in Berlin ~~tomorrow~~ the Russians have agreed to meet with the western commandants tomorrow to arrange for the foreign ministers conference that is to be held there at the end of this month

And in Korea we are still conducting secret negotiations with the Communists through a neutral intermediary... trying to arrange for the resumption of the preliminary peace talks.

In Washington today the 83rd Congress returned to work for its second session. There was no legislative business. But the Senators and Representatives heard euologies for the late Chief Justice Vinson..

They heard tributes to Sam Rayburn, the Democratic House leader, who was celebrating his 72nd birthday. They heard Republican Leader Halleck say the Republicans will try to get along with the Democrats. And four new Representatives and two new Senators formally took their seats.

In the House Republican Representative Keating of New York introduced a bill to legalize wire-tapping and to give the attorney general absolute power to grant immunity to witnesses who plead that their testimony might incriminate them.

The Treasury announced that it will wind up the 1953 calendar year over nine billion dollars in the red... a little less than the figure at the same time a year ago. Two key Senators--Democrat George of Georgia and Republican Flanders of Vermont--said they might go along with a move to increase the national debt limit..now set at 275-billions. But Democratic Senator Byrd of Virginia says he will fight any such move.

The Agriculture Department reported that since the days of the Hoover Farm Board--25 years ago--the government has spent about 14 billion dollars in direct federal farm aid programs. And officials say another two or three billions may be needed for the 1954 crops.

Democratic Senator Ellendar of Louisiana said he'll invite Senator McCarthy to tell the Senate whether he uses "rehashed, ~~plagiarism~~ plagiarized" information in his committee investigations. McCarthy said that's a lie or Ellendar doesn't know what he's talking about. Ellandar says most of the 200-thousand dollars spent by McCarthy's committee last year was wasted.. that McCarthy exposed no Communists... that his objective is publicity.

George Meany, the president of the American Federation of Labor, said today that he's alarmed by the recent "sharp increase" in unemployment...688-thousand more jobless in two months. Meany called on Congress to take action on policies designed to encourage economic stability and full employment.

Here in New York, Captain William Bradley, president on the independent Longshoremen's union, told reporters that John L. Lewis of the the coal miners has given the longshoremen another 50-thousand dollars and promised all the support the union might need in event of a strike. The union recently was thrown out of the A.F. of L. because of charges that it was dominated by racketeers.

In Detroit today, Wayne County Prosecutor Gerald O'brien, announced a "solution" of the attempt to assassinate C.I.O. President Walter Reuther five years ago. Reuther was shot through a kitchen window. His right armwas crippled. Today, O'Brien accused four men of conspiracy and assault, with intent to murder Reuther. ~~And he withheld the names of four other persons he is still seeking.~~ There was no explanation of the motive for the attack on Reuther. O'brien says there may be other "involvements." TWO MEN HAVE BEEN ARRESTED. ~~Among the four men arrested today was Carl Benda an ex-convict with a record back to 1920. Another~~ A third man is now serving time in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth. The whereabouts of the fourth man is unknown. Prosecutor O'Brien said his "solution" of the Walter Reuther case did not solve the attack on a brother, Victor Reuther, who lost an eye in an attempt to assassinate him in 1949. Walter Reuther said today that he has been co-operating with authorities seeking the men who attacked him.

In Washington, the government arrested a fourth person in connection with the 160-thousand dollars stolen from the Bureau of Printing and Engraving. She is Edith Irene Chase, a domestic. She's accused of receiving and passing a "large sum of money", knowing that it was stolen from the government's valuts. More than 31-thousand dollars are still missing..the rest has been recovered.

In Paris today, Premier Laniel called on the National Assembly to make it KNOWN whether it was for or against him. The Assembly then endorsed the Laniel policies by a vote of 319 to 249..a bigger majority than had been expected. Laniel told the deputies before the vote that if he was to be voted out it would be better to do it now RATHER than have a crisis just before the foreign ministers conference in Berlin.

In Korea, the Communists apparently have ignored an Indian request for the Communist views on what to do with prisoners of war on January 22.. when we intend to release 22-thousand men we hold. And General Taylor, the 8th army commander, has warned the South Koreans not to take any action against the neutral Indian soldiers who are now guarding the prisoners. General Taylor said we have guaranteed the safety of the Indian troops and the prisoners of war and we intend to protect them.

Admiral Radford, the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and Assistant Secretary of State Robertson, returned from the Far East today. Both said they are confident the 22-thousand men will be released without trouble. And both agreed that the peace negotiations will be resumed.

In Indo-China, French forces, led by paratroopers, have routed a strong enemy force in central Laos.. where the rebels last month cut Indo-China in two. The French say at least 169 guerrillas were killed.. many captured together with large quantities of arms.

Edward R. Murrow: January 6, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

Sometime early in ~~On the first day of~~ the New Year, even reporters should be permitted a personal word - even though it be not original. Have an idea I've read something like this - where - Being seized with an awareness that I can do little to illumine the darkling scene that surrounds us, I would confine myself to a simple, though in a sense, revolutionary suggestion. It might be termed an instrument to protect the dignity, self-respect and personality of pedestrians. Or it might be called a mace, to be employed against malicious motorists. The suggestion, for which patent has not been ~~XXX~~ applied for, is briefly this: Pedestrians in large cities, should be able to purchase for a nominal sum, a utensil or weapon, which is not yet marketed, under the name of: "The Master Mace for Those about to be Overrun". This should consist of a short length of cane resembling a swagger stick, to the end of which would be attached about two feet of chain. To the end of the chain there would be secured a hard rubber ball, about the size of a baseball, with spikes protruding from this ball. This instrument, or weapon, in addition to being decorative, could be employed to beat off ferocious dogs or small urchins; but its primary purpose, would be to offer the pedestrian some measure of defense, and indeed counter-attack, against malicious motorists. When said pedestrian is caught in the middle of an intersection, when the light changes, being unable to go either thither or yon without risk of nerve and limb - and when motorists begin to crowd him with racing motor and howling horn - the pedestrian would thus be equipped with mild means of retaliation. This modern mace would be adequate to bash in headlights - dent, scar and scratch fenders, but not sufficiently lethal to immobilize the vehicle. A sort of cold war weapon in the unending struggle between pedestrians and motorists.

It might also be employed against vehicles that splash muddy water on the innocent and wholly neutral pedestrian who is standing on the curb. He would at least, if he be a good wing shot, have a sporting chance of smashing a tail light or denting a rear fender, as the conveyance passed by. The well-equipped pedestrian, with an extra mace in his knapsack, might even try a swinging shot at the driver through the open window.

I am sure that psychiatrists will conclude that this suggestion arises out of something or other that is unwholesome - motorists will deplore it. But it seems to me a matter of urgent necessity that something should be done to restore the balance of power between motorists and pedestrians when the latter is caught in the middle of the street by a changing light. The offence of the motor car is about to overwhelm the defence of the pedestrian.

We live in a world of power, but even if automobiles come to be powered by atomic energy, the pedestrian should be permitted to make his gesture of defiance.

This suggestion, like many another - on less important subjects - will come to nothing. But hope is a stubborn thing. There may be XXXXX untold rebels amongst the pedestrians. These reflections, and this suggestion, arose as the result of observing an ancient and erect pedestrian, stop a Cadillac in its wheeltracks, merely by threatening it with a small and puny-looking cane. Had he been equipped with this reporter's proposed "Mace for Use against Menacing Motorists," the Cadillac might have gone into reverse, and telescoped traffic for a block or two, which in turn might have caused some aerial observer to describe the situation as "entirely normal".

It would seem that those who drive a car have a psychological as well as physical sense of superiority over those who walk. And as Samuel Hoffenstein once pointed out: "It's a lucky thing the wheel was invented before the automobile." But while we often joke about these things, whether you're walking or riding, be careful; don't take chances. "Be wary, " as Shakespeare said, "for best safety lies in fear."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Russians have accepted our proposal to start secret talks on atomic energy in Washington. The Soviet government announced tonight that Ambassador to Washington Georgi Zarubin has been authorized to conduct "procedural talks" on the President's proposal for an international pool of atomic energy for peaceful purposes. The Russian announcement was made after Ambassador Bohlen again called on Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov at Molotov's request. The State Department says Secretary of State Dulles "expects to proceed at an early date" with the conversations.

And in Berlin the Russians have agreed to meet with the western commandants tomorrow to arrange for the foreign ministers conference that is to be held there at the end of this month.

And in Korea we are still conducting secret negotiations with the Communists through a neutral intermediary - trying to arrange for the resumption of the preliminary peace talks.

In Washington today the 83rd Congress returned to work for its second session. There was no legislative business. But the Senators and Representatives heard euologies for the late Chief Justice Vinson. They heard tributes to Sam Rayburn, the Democratic House leader who was celebrating his 72nd birthday. They heard Republican Leader Halleck say the Republicans will try to get along with the Democrats. And four new Representatives and two new Senators formally took their seats.

In the House, Republican Representative Keating of New York introduced a bill to legalize wire-tapping and to give the attorney general absolute power to grant immunity to witnesses who plead that their testimony might incriminate them.

The Treasury announced that it will wind up the 1953 calendar year over nine billion dollars in the red - a little less than the figure at the same time a year ago. Two key Senators - Democrat George of Georgia and Republican Flanders of Vermont said they might go along with a move to increase the national debt limit now set at 275 billions. But Democratic Senator Byrd of Virginia says he will fight any such move.

The Agriculture Department reported that since the days of the Hoover Farm Board 25 years ago the government has spent about 14 billion dollars in direct federal farm aid programs. And officials say another two or three billions may be needed for the 1954 crops.

Democratic Senator Ellendar of Louisiana said he'll invite Senator McCarthy to tell the Senate whether he uses "rehashed, plagiarized" information in his committee investigations. McCarthy said that's a lie or Ellendar doesn't know what he's talking about. Ellandar says most of the 200-thousand dollars spent by McCarthy's committee last year was wasted that McCarthy exposed no Communists - that his objective is publicity.

George Meany, the president of the American Federation of Labor, said today that he's alarmed by the recent "sharp increase" in unemployment - 688-thousand more jobless in two months. Meany called on Congress to take action on policies designed to encourage economic stability and full employment.

Here in New York, Captain William Bradley, president on the independent Longshoremen's union, told reporters that John L. Lewis of the coal miners has given the longshoremen another 50-thousand dollars and promised all the support the union might need in event of a strike. The union recently was thrown out of the AFL because of charges that it was dominated by racketeers.

In Detroit today, Wayne County Prosecutor Gerald O'Brien announced a "solution" of the attempt to assassinate CIO President Walter Reuther five years ago. Reuther was shot through a kitchen window. His right arm was crippled. Today, O'Brien accused four men of conspiracy and assault with intent to murder Reuther. There was no explanation of the motive for the attack on Reuther. O'Brien says there may be other "involvements." Two men have been arrested. A third is now serving time in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth. The whereabouts of the fourth man is unknown. Prosecutor O'Brien said his "solution" of the Walter Reuther case did not solve the attack on a brother, Victor Reuther, who lost an eye in an attempt to assassinate him in 1949. Walter Reuther said today that he has been cooperating with authorities seeking the men who attacked him.

In Washington, the government arrested a fourth person in connection with the 160-thousand dollars stolen from the Bureau of Printing and Engraving. She is Edith Irene Chase, a domestic. She's accused of receiving and passing a "large sum of money" knowing that it was stolen from the government's vaults. More than 31-thousand dollars are still missing - thr rest has been recovered.

In Paris today, Premier Laniel called on the National Assembly to make it known whether it was for or against him. The Assembly then endorsed the Laniel policies by a vote of 319 to 249 - a bigger majority than had been expected. Laniel told the deputies before the vote that if he was to be voted out it would be better to do it now rather than have a crisis just before the foreign ministers conference in Berlin.

In Korea, the Communists apparently have ignored an Indian request for the Communist views on what to do with prisoners of war on January 22 when we intend to release 22-thousand men we hold. And General Taylor, the 8th army commander, has warned the South Koreans not to take any action against the neutral Indian soldiers who are now guarding the prisoners. General Taylor said we have guaranteed the safety of the Indian troops and the prisoners of war and we intend to protect them.

Admiral Radford, the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and Assistant Secretary of State Robertson, returned from the Far East today. Both said they are confident the 22-thousand men will be released without trouble. And both agreed that the peace negotiations will be resumed.

In Indo-China, French forces, led by paratroopers, have routed a strong enemy force in central Laos where the rebels last month cut Indo-China in two. The French say at least 169 guerrillas were killed - many captured together with large quantities of arms.

Sometime early in the New Year, even reporters should be permitted a personal word - even though it be not original. Have an idea I've read something like this - where being seized with an awareness that I can do little to illumine the darkling scene that sorrounds us, I would confine myself to a simple though in a sense revolutionary suggestion. It might be termed an instrument to protect the dignity, self-respect and personality of pedestrians. Or it might be called a mace to be employed against malicious motorists. The suggestion for which patent has not been applied for, is briefly this: Pedestrians in large cities should be able to purchase for a nominal sum a utensil or weapon, which is not yet marketed, under the name of: "The Master Mace for Those about to be Overrun." This should consist of a short length of cane resembling a swagger stick, to the end of which would be attached about two feet of chain. To the end of the chain there would be secured a hard rubber ball about the size of a baseball, with spikes protruding from this ball. This instrument, or weapon, in addition to being decorative, could be employed to beat off ferocious dogs or small urchins; but its primary purpose would be to offer the pedestrian some measure of defense, and indeed counter-attack against malicious motorists. hen said pedestrian is caught in the middle of an intersection when the light changes, being unable to go either thither or yon without risk of nerve and limb - and when motorists begin to crowd him with racing motor and howling horn - the pedestrian would thus be equipped with mild means of retaliation. This modern mace would be adequate to bash in headlights - dent, scar and scratch fenders, but not sufficiently lethal to immobilize the vehicle. A sort of cold war weapon in the unending struggle between pedestrians and motorists.

It might also be employed against vehicles that splash muddy water on the innocent and wholly neutral pedestrian who is standing on the curb. He would at least, if he be a good wing shot, have a sporting chance of smashing a tail light or denting a rear fender, as the conveyance passed by. The well-equipped pedestrian, with an extra mace in his knapsack, might even try a swinging shot at the driver through the open window.

I am sure that psychiatrists will conclude that this suggestion arises out of something or other that is unwholesome - motorists will deplore it. But it seems to me a matter of urgent necessity that something should be done to restore the balance of power between motorists and pedestrians when the latter is caught in the middle of the street by a changing light. The offense of the motor car is about to overwhelm the defense of the pedestrian. We live in a world of power, but even if automobiles come to be powered by atomic energy the pedestrian should be permitted to make his gesture of defiance.

This suggestion, like many another - on less important subjects - will come to nothing. But hope is a stubborn thing. There may be untold rebels amongst the pedestrians. These reflections and this suggestion arose as the result of observing an ancient and erect pedestrian stop a Cadillac in its wheeltracks, merely by threatening it with a small and puny-looking cane. Had he been equipped with this reporter's proposed "Mace for Use against Menacing Motorists," the Cadillac might have gone into reverse, and telescoped traffic for a block or two, which in turn might have caused some aerial observer to describe the situation as "entirely normal."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a Word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that those who drive a car have apsychological as well as physical sense of superiority over those who walk. And as Samuel Hoffenstein once pointed out: "It's a lucky thing the wheel was invented before the automobile." But while we often joke about these things, whether you're walking or riding, be careful; don't take chances. "Be wary," as Shakespeare said, "for best safety lies in fear."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Thursday January 7, 1954

This is the news:

The President today outlined for Congress and the nation his plans to build "a stronger America".... as he described it: "A nation whose every citizen has good reason for bold hope; where effort is rewarded and prosperity is shared; where freedom expands and peace is secure." At the start of the 54-minute STATE OF THE UNION MESSAGE he read to the Congress, the President listed his Administration's accomplishments in the past year: an end to the fighting in Korea...the completion of our most prosperous year in history... inflation [redacted] brought under control...taxes started [redacted] down...the cost of government [redacted] reduced...the cost of armaments [redacted] less oppressive, and yet we get militarily stronger every day. The President also noted the creation of the new Department of Health, Education and Welfare and said segregation in the armed forces is on the way out. Abroad, the President noted that Communist aggression has been halted in Korea... AND [redacted] is meeting vigorous resistance in Indo-China..there have been heartening political victories in West Germany and Iran...the free world is slowly gathering strength. And Mr. Eisenhower said: there are signs from behind the iron curtain that tyranny is in trouble and reminders that its structure is as brittle as its surface is hard. The President said that it became evident last year that the initiative in the cold war is becoming ours. Our policy is now free to develop along lines of our own choice. And, he said, in the New Year we must hold the initiative and use it.

Then the President outlined his objectives for the future. There can and will be additional tax cuts, but not at this time..not until we have reduced federal expenditures. He'll soon recommend 25 changes in the tax laws: to eliminate glaring inequities. And he wants to postpone for one year the sheduled April first cut of 5 per cent in corporation taxes.. and the scheduled Excise tax cuts on whiskey, tobacco, gasoline and automobiles.

Mr. Eisenhower says the new budget will be 5-billions below the present level. But it cannot be balanced yet. And he wants to increase the national debt limit beyond the present 275-B/millions.

He says: our economy is basically sound. He's confident we can make the switch from a wartime to peacetime economy, without a serious recession. But the Administration is taking no chances. Its ready to take vigorous action to offset any alarming slump. The government would do this through: easier credit policies... a public works program... loans. AND tax adjustments .

Mr. Eisenhower made it plain that he wants fewer men in the armed forces. We'll place heavier reliance on air power and atomic weapons. He wants maximum mobility with our forces not tied down in any area. And he wants more generous benefits for the morale of the men and women in the armed forces. We have spent one billion dollars on our continental defenses and they will be further strengthened.

The President told Congress that it can further strengthen our defenses by modifying the atomic law. He would tell our military allies the basic facts about the tactical use of atomic measures. (if Congress approves.) And Mr. Eisenhower noted that if Russia really shows "a truly constructive reaction" to his plan for the peaceful use of atomic energy this would "hold great hopes for the peace of the world."

The President said again that we are prepared to meet any renewal of the war in Korea. We will continue military assistance to Indo-China..military and economic assistance to Nationalist China. He believes that we can't cut down on economic aid to our allies. But we must continue military aid and technical aid. The President said he'll recommend to Congress, in a special message, a trade policy that would let free nations "earn their way" by selling more goods to us. He pledged continued firm support of the United Nations.. called again for West European approval of a European army.. promised to show "sympathy and impartial friendship" for both Arabs and Israelis in the Middle East. And he announced his intentions to continue our friendship with all of our neighbors in this hemisphere.

On the domestic scene the President sees the need of a law to revoke the citizenship of any Communist hereafter convicted of plotting to overthrow this government. He said: "When a citizen knowingly participates in the Communist conspiracy he no longer holds allegiance to the United States."

Mr. Eisenhower feels the Taft-Hartley law is "basically sound" and he'll suggest to Congress later just how he would improve it. The President wants a gradual change from the present program of high support for farm products to one that would be more flexible.. This, he says, would stimulate production of needed commodities and stimulate the consumption of products flooding the market.

He would continue building major flood control and power projects that are too big for local communities to handle. And he would strengthen the flood prevention and agricultural conservation programs.

Mr. Eisenhower called for prompt action to make Hawaii a state. (he said nothing about Alaska.) And he would have Congress give the citizens of Washington, D.C. the right to vote. He also favors a constiutional amendment to permit all 18-year olds to vote.

The President wants the government to encourage the expansion of private hospital and medical insurance plans. This could be done by a limited underwriting of such plans. He wants to help those states that cannot afford enough schools. And he wants each state to hold conferences on the teacher shortage and overcrowding of schools before a national meeting tackles these problems.

Mr. Eisenhower asked Congress to extend the Social Security program to another ten million workers and make six and a half million more people eligible for unemployment insurance. He would continue the present public housing program and improve the slum clearance projects.

In a moment I'd like to offer a ~~suggestion~~ comment on the problems facing President and Congress.

In Berlin today, representatives of the three western allies met for six hours with the Russian commandant. AH Allied spokesman says the atmospehere was friendly..another meeting will be held on Saturday as the four men try to work out arrangements for the Berlin conference of their foreign ministers.

General Grunther, the supreme allied commander in Europe, said in Paris that we still do not have the forces to meet an all-out Soviet offensive. But we do have the capability "to wreak a great deal of damage on the Soviet industrial potential and they are unable to meet this development at this time."

In Korea, the Communists flatly rejected the allied plan to free 22-thousand anti-Communist war prisoners on January 23. And the Chinese Communist radio revealed that the Indians, who control the prisoners, have made it known that they must release them unless the Communists and allies agree on some other plan.

A spokesman for the British foreign office says the United States and Britain have started secret talks in Washington on the president's plan for an atomic pool. And the State Department says we'll start talking with the Russians "presumably in the course of the next few days."

And the Navy says it must delay the launching of the super aircraft carrier Forrestal...from this spring until next fall.. because of the late delivery of the main engines and other major equipment.

Edward R. Murrow: January 7, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

Today the President walked down the middle aisle and delivered a middle-of-the-road speech. Mr. Eisenhower travelled a road that is broad, largely familiar, with plenty of room on both sides of him for fellow travellers - Republicans and Democrats. He announced no major changes in objectives for this nation in either domestic or foreign affairs.

Congressional opinion on the speech has been unusually restrained. Some Republicans are inclined to think that the President will have trouble with his proposal to cancel scheduled cuts in corporation and excise taxes, and with his request for higher postal rates.

Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas summed up the Democratic minority opinion when he said: "We still will have to wait to see what President Eisenhower's program is."

Agreement on broad principles and objectives is not difficult. The political in-fighting starts when specific recommendations are advanced, and, as the President said today, most of those will come later.

In this reporter's opinion it was a well written speech, setting forth ultimate objectives that have come to be accepted by the majority of Americans. If this program is to be translated into legislation, the President will require considerable help from the Democrats in order to do it.

Both the Democrats and the Republicans are obviously waiting for more detail. For example, how exactly are we to create a healthier and freer system of trade and payments within the free world? How, legally and under the Constitution, are citizens to be stripped of their citizenship? How necessary is it to increase the statutory debt limit? How are the promised further reductions in taxes to be made? And how are farm surpluses to be insulated from the normal channels of trade for special uses, so that our farmers will have a higher and steadier financial return over the years than they would under any other plan." On all of these subjects special messages and detailed recommendations will be forthcoming from the Administration.

What the President did today was to to give the Congress and the country a briefing on what might be called the big picture. He and his lieutenants will divulge and debate the tactics later. An enormous amount of staff work has been done, but in this situation some of the President's lieutenants may disaffect, and some of the opposition may join him. The balance of forces is so narrow that this session of Congress may resemble guerilla warfare rather than a contest between two well-disciplined forces.

an exclusive club —

A new session of Congress is underway. And for Democrats and Republicans alike, a few words from Rudyard Kipling:"The club exists to club men who otherwise would remain unclubbable, to their everlasting detriment. It softens the precocious, gives countenance to the weak and comfort to the solitary; it educates the overlearned and silences the argumentative -- the club exists to club men who otherwise would remain unclubbable."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, JANUARY 7, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President today outlined for Congress and the nation his plans to build "a stronger AmericaQ as he described it: "A nation whose every citizen has good reason for bold hope; where effort is rewarded and prosperity is shared; where freedom expands and peace is secure." At the start of the 54-minute state of the union message the President listed his Administration's accomplishments in the past year: an end to the fighting in Korea - the completion of our most prosperous year in history - inflation brought under control - taxes started down - the cost of government reduced - the cost of armaments less oppressive, and yet we get militarily stronger every day. The President also noted the creation of the new Department of Health, Education and Welfare and said segregation in the armed forces is on the way out. Abroad, the President noted that Communist aggression has been halted in Korea - and is meeting vigorous resistance in Indo-China - there have been heartening political victories in West Germany and Iran - the free world is slowly gathering strength. And Mr. Eisenhower said: there are signs from behind the Iron Curtain that tyranny is in trouble and reminders that its structure is as brittle as its surface is hard. The President said that it became evidence last year that the initiative in the cold war is becoming ours. Our policy is now free to develop along lines of our own choice. And, he said, in the New Year we must hold the initiative and use it.

Then the President outlined his objectives for the future. There can and will be additional tax cuts but not at this time - not until we have reduced federal expenditures. He'll soon recommend 25 changes in the tax laws to eliminate glaring inequities. And he wants to postpone for one year the scheduled April first cut of 5 percent in corporation taxes and the scheduled excise tax cuts on whiskey, tobacco, gasoline and automobiles.

Mr. Eisenhower says the new budget will be 5-billions below the present level. But it cannot be balanced yet. And he wants to increase the national debt limit beyond the present 275 billions.

He says: our economy is basically sound. He's confident we can make the switch from a wartime to peacetime economy without a serious recession. But the Administration is taking no chances. Its ready to take vigorous action to offset any alarming slump. The government would do this through: easier credit policies - a public works program, loans and tax adjustments.

Mr. Eisenhower made it plain that he wants fewer men in the armed forces. He'll place heavier reliance on air power and atomic weapons. He wants maximum mobility with our forces not tied down in any area. And he wants more generous benefits for the morale of the men and women in the armed forces. We have spent one billion dollars on our continental defenses and they will be further strengthened

The President told Congress that it can further strengthen our defenses by modifying the atomic law. He would tell our military allies t e basic facts about the tactical use of atomic measures - if Congress approves. And Mr. Eisenhower noted that if Russia really shows "a truly constructive reaction" to his plan for the peaceful use of atomic energy this would "hold great hopes for the peace of the world."

The President said again that we are prepared to meet any renewal of the war in Korea. We will continue military assistance to Indo-China - military and economic assistance to Nationalist China. He believes that we can't cut down on economic aid to our allies. But we must continue military aid and technical aid. The President said he'll recommend to Congress, in a special message, a trade policy that would let free nations "earn their way" by selling more goods to us. He pledged continued firm support of the United Nations - called again for West European approval of a European army - promised to "show sympathy and impartial friendship" for both Arabs and Israelis in the Middle East. And he announced his intentions to continue our friendship with all of our neighbors in this hemisphere.

On the domestic scene the President sees the need of a law to revoke the citizenship of any Communist hereafter convicted of plotting to overthrow this government. He said: "When a citizen knowingly participates in the Communist conspiracy he no longer holds allegiance to the United States."

Mr. Eisenhower feels the Taft-Hartley law is "basically sound" and he'll suggest to Congress later just how he would improve it. The President wants a gradual change from the present program of high support for farm products to one that would be more flexible. This, he says, would stimulate production of needed commodities and stimulate the consumption of products flooding the market. He would continue building major flood control and power projects that are too big for local communities to handle. And he would strengthen the flood prevention and agricultural conservation programs.

Mr. Eisenhower called for prompt action to make Hawaii a state. He said nothing about Alaska. And he would have Congress give the citizens of Washington, D.C. the right to vote. He also favors a constitutional amendment to permit all 18-year olds to vote.

The President wants the government to encourage the expansion of private hospital and medical insurance plans. This could be done by a limited underwriting of such plans. He wants to help those states that cannot afford enough schools. And he wants each state to hold conferences on the teacher shortage and overcrowding of schools before a national meeting tackles these problems.

Mr. Eisenhower asked Congress to extend the Social Security program to another ten million workers and make six and a half million more people eligible for unemployment insurance. He would continue the present public housing program and improve the slum clearance projects.

In a moment I'd like to offer a comment on the problems facing President and Congress.

In Berlin today, representatives of the three western allies met for six hours with the Russian commandant. An allied spokesman says the atmosphere was friendly - another meeting will be held on Saturday as the four men try to work out arrangements for the Berlin conference of their foreign ministers.

General Grunther, the supreme allied commander in Europe, said in Paris that we still do not have the forces to meet an all-out Soviet offensive. But we do have the capability "to wreak a great deal of damage on the Soviet industrial potential and they are unable to meet this development at this time."

In Korea, the Communists faltly rejected the allied plan to free 22-thousand anti-Communist war prisoners on January 23. And the Chinese Communist radio revealed that the Indians, who control the prisoners, have made it known that they must release them unless the Communists and allies agree on some other plan.

A spokesman for the British foreign office says the United States and Britain have started secret talks in Washington on the president's plan for an atomic pool. And the State Department says we'll start talking with the Russians "presumably in the course of the next few days."

And the Navy says it must delay the launching of the super aircraft carrier Forrestal - from this spring until next fall - because of the late delivery of the main engines and other major equipment.

Today the President walked down the middle aisle and delivered a middle-of-the-road speech. Mr. Eisenhower travelled a road that is broad, largely familiar, with plenty of room on both sides of him for fellow travellers - Republicans and Democrats. He announced no major changes in objectives for this nation in either domestic or foreign affairs.

Congressional opinion on the speech has been unusually restrained. Some Republicans are inclined to think that the President will have trouble with his proposal to cancel scheduled cuts in corporation and exise taxes, and with his request for higher postal rates.

Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas summed up the Democratic minority opinion when he said: "We still will have to wait to see what President Eisenhower's program is."

Agreement on broad principles and objectives is not difficult. The political in-fighting starts when specific recommendations are advanced, and, as the President said today, most of those will come later.

In this reporter's opinion it was a well written speech, setting forth ultimate objectives that have come to be accepted by the majority of Americans. If this program is to be translated into legislation, the President will require considerable help from the Democrats in order to do it. Both the Democrats and the Republicans are obviously waiting for more detail. For example, how exactly are we to create a healthier and freer system of trade and payments within the free world? How, legally and under the Constitution, are citizens to be stripped of their citizenship. How necessary is it to increase the statutory debt limit? How are the promised further reductions in taxes to be made? And how are farm surpluses to be "insulated from the normal channels of trade for special uses, so that our farmers will have a higher and steadier financial return over the years than they would under any other plan." On all of these subjects special messages and detailed recommendations will be forthcoming from the Administration.

What the President did today was to give the Congress and the country a briefing on what might be called the big picture. He and his lieutenants will divulge and debate the tactics later. An enormous amount of staff work has been done, but in this sutiation some of the President's lieutenants may disaffect, and some of the opposition may join him. The balance of forces is so narrow that this session of Congress may resemble guerilla warfare rather than a contest between two well-disciplined forces.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: A new session of Congress-an exclusive club-is underway. And for Democrats and Republicans alike, a few words from Rudyard Kipling: "The club exists to club men who otherwise would remain unclubable, to their everlasting detriment. It softens the precocious, gives countenance to the weak and comfort to the solitary; it educates the overlearned and silences the argumentative - the club exists to club men who otherwise would remain unclubable."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday, Jan 8, 1954

This is the news:

The Atomic Energy Commission made known tonight, that a new series of tests of atomic weapons will soon take place off the Marshal Islands, in the Pacific. The men and materials involved in the tests, will start moving to the Pacific area this month. There's no mention of exploding a hydrogen bomb. But those who are inclined to believe that such a test will be made, point to the fact that no observers, other than Americans, will be permitted to watch the atomic operations.

On Monday, Secretary of State Dulles and Russian Ambassador Zarubin will meet in Washington, in the first of a series of preliminary talks on pooling atomic energy for peaceful uses. This conference is the result of President Eisenhower's proposal along this line to the UN some weeks ago. It's hoped that out of these first talks, a time, place and other details can be worked out for a future formal meeting between this country and Russia.

In Berlin, representatives of the Big Four meet again tomorrow, to try to work out a place in which the foreign ministers conference can be held. It's scheduled to begin January 25th. The Russians want all meetings to take place in East Berlin. We think some should be held in the western ~~zone~~ Sector.

The White House says reaction to the President's State of the Union message yesterday is "overwhelmingly favorable." Of 3-hundred and 4 telegrams only four are critical.

Here in New York, former President Truman said he thought the President's message was good. He made a point of noting, however, that it contained "a great many New Deal recommendations." Mr. Truman said he hadn't given much thought yet to the President's suggestion that Communist conspirators be deprived of citizenship. But he does feel that Mr. Eisenhower's proposal to give 18-year-olds the right to vote is wrong. Mr. Truman said a man needs more knowledge than he has at age 18. In an interview for television tonight, Mr. Truman denied ever having used the expression "red herring" in connection with the Communist issue. He said the phrase came from a reporter who interviewed him in the White House. But an unofficial transcript indicates both the former President and the reporter used the expression.

Also in New York today, the Independent longshoremen's union has filed unfair labor practices charges against Governor Dewey and A.F. of L. President George Meany. The Independents are in a jurisdicitional fight with an A.F. of L. affiliated dockworkers union. The issue involves who is to represent the workers in collective bargaining. Governor Dewey had accused the Independents of violence and coercion in a recent bargaining vote.

The CIO says the 1-million 850-thousand unemployed reported by the Commerce Department in December does not tell the full story...that the unemployment situation is growing worse...and that Congress must take action to to "head off a spreading recession." (In Detroit today, 12-thousand auto workers were laid off in Chrysler, Hudson and Studebaker plants.)

The President of Harvard, Dr. Nathaniel Pusey says he agrees with Governor Herter of Massachussetts that there's no place in American education for subversives. But he does not feel that faculty members who refuse to testify on the basis of the Fifth Amendment should automatically be dismissed.

Sometime within the next 24 hours, the neutral Repatriation Commission in Korea is expected to decide that the 22-thousand anti-communist prisoners now being held should be released on January 23rd. This would be in accordance with the armistice agreement.

In England, Lord Geddes, Ambassador to this country after the first world war and BRITAIN'S Civil Defense Commissioner during the Blitz, has died at the age of 74.

And Joseph P. Ryan, former President of the International Longshoremen's Association has been indicted by a Federal Grand Jury on charges of accepting money from a trucking firm in violation of the Taft Hartley law. Ryan is already under indictment on charges of looting the union treasury.

Edward R. Murrow: January 8, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

It is probable that the first great issue before the new session of Congress will be one not mentioned by the President in his State of the Union message. It is the Bricker amendment. This is one of the most far-reaching measures before the country. Unfortunately it also is one of the least understood and most obscure. It is a proposal to amend the Constitution to limit the treaty-making power of the President.

This is a matter that the constitutional experts may consider hallowed to them alone, and a mere layman who lifts up a voice about it may count as something of an upstart. But we happen to be a nation of laymen and the value of the constitution is not that only the experts can understand it, but that it is so intelligible and sturdy as to have stood the test of time.

The constitution gives the treaty-making power to the executive branch of the government, which then must obtain the support of two-thirds of the Senate. This division of powers is basic in the American system of government and it has ~~worked superably~~ worked well throughout American history. Now it is being challenged. The modern world is shrinking and the inter-dependence of nations is becoming more and more evident. Some persons do not relish this. Senator Bricker has said frankly that his amendment would stop the Baruch plan for the international control of atomic energy, and was meant to do so. These who support the amendment are afraid that treaties may be used to over-ride local and state laws. And to prevent it they are ready to go back to a system of government preceding the federal system, to the confederation. For under the Bricker amendment it probably would not have been possible to ratify the peace treaty that ended the Revolutionary war.

The constitution limits the subjects about which Congress is authorized to legislate. It does not limit the subjects about which treaties can be made. So under the constitution a treaty can become the law of the land, even though without the treaty Congress could not have enacted the law. It has been like that from the start, and very few Americans have ever had occasion to think about it. The best known test of this point came in a treaty with Canada dealing with the protection of migrating birds. A federal statute about the birds was declared unconstitutional because Congress did not have express powers to deal with the subject. But the treaty was found constitutional.

Certain kinds of state and local laws could be superceded by a treaty. It is established that existing constitutional rights cannot be abridged by treaty, but a lower court in California nullified a state land law on the ground that it conflicted with the charter of the United Nations. The ruling was later reversed, but it set in motion some of the fears that led to the Bricker Amendment.

If all there were to it was to make sure that a treaty could not override the constitution, nobody would get excited about an amendment saying so. It might be foolish to amend the constitution to say that the constitution should not be amended by treaty. Even if superfluous the amendment would do no harm. But that is not what the Bricker amendment is trying to say. It wants to limit the treaty-making power of the executive. It wants to make sure that action by Congress or the legislatures of all 48 states will be needed, before treaty provisions become the law of the land. This changes the division of powers of the constitution. It could be regarded as a vote of no ~~XXXXXXX~~ confidence in President Eisenhower in his conduct of foreign affairs. And it actually would make the negotiation of treaties almost impossible.

No foreign government would care to negotiate with us if it had to wait for Congressional legislation or state legislation before the agreement could come into effect. Negotiation with the United States already is looked on as difficult by some foreigners, because of the uncertainty that the Senate will support the State Department. But if we now were to make congressional and state legislation, the condition for the acceptance of international agreements, our friends would feel that we had moved to the isolation of a far away island. It is not unfair to some of the advocates of the amendment to say that this is precisely what they want. Old fashioned isolationism may be impossible in the modern world. Modern isolationism is not.

The constitutional authorities of the country are strongly massed against the amendment. Senator Wiley polled the 27 law deans of the country, and 26 opposed any change in the treaty-making power. President Eisenhower said last July: "I am unalterably opposed to any amendment that would change the traditional treaty-making power, or which would hamper the President in his constitutional authority, to conduct foreign affairs. Today probably as never before in our history, it is essential that our country be able effectively to enter into agreement with other nations.

[redacted]. Talks are now going on among Senate leaders, seeking some compromise solution. Senator Knowland has proposed an amendment to the Bricker resolution, and the President has accepted it. This amendment would leave the treaty-making power pretty much as it is, except that the Congress when ratifying a treaty could ask for lesiglation, but it would not be obliged by the Constitution to do so; and the law approving the treaty and agreeing to its terms would have to be paseed only by the Congress and not by the 48 States. Senator Bricker has not accepted this suggested amendment, and there, so far as is known, the matter still stands tonight.

This is a complex but vitally important subject, having to do with how we conduct our affairs, our contractual relations with other countries. It is a case where learned lawyers debate the precise meaning of words and phrases, and differ honestly as to the results that might be expected to flow from the Bricker amendment, were it to be adopted. This country has a habit of thinking and arguing for a long time before amending the Constitution. If that habit persists no one will be entitled to complain of the outcome, whatever it is.

We speak often of the safety of American democracy resting in the Constitution. Thomas Jefferson, a firm believer in constitutional government once said:"I know no safe depository of the ultimate powers of society but the people themselves. And if we think them not enlightened enough to exercise their control with wholesome discretion, the remedy is not to take it from them, but to inform their discretion by education."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, JANUARY 8, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Atomic Energy Commission made known tonight that a new series of tests of atomic weapons will soon take place off the Marshal Islands in the Pacific. The men and materials involved in the tests will start moving to the Pacific area this month. There's no mention of exploding a hydrogen bomb. But those who are inclined to believe that such a test will be made, point to the fact that no observers other than Americans will be permitted to watch the atomic operations.

On Monday, Secretary of State Dulles and Russian Ambassador Zarubin will meet in Washington in the first of a series of preliminary talks on pooling atomic energy for peaceful uses. This conference is the result of President Eisenhower's proposal along this line to the UN some weeks ago. It's hoped that out of these first talks, a time, place and other details can be worked out for a future formal meeting between this country and Russia.

In Berlin, representatives of the Big Four meet again tomorrow to try to work out a place in which the foreign ministers conference can be held. It's scheduled to begin January 25th. The Russians want all meetings to take place in East Berlin. We think some should be held in the western section.

The White House says reaction to the President's State of the Union message yesterday is "overwhelmingly favorable." Of 3-hundred and 4 telegrams only four are critical.

Here in New York, former President Truman said he thought the President's message was good. He made a point of noting, however, that it contained "a great many New Deal recommendations." Mr. Truman said he hadn't given much thought yet to the President's suggestion that Communist conspirators be deprived of citizenship. But he does feel that Mr. Eisenhower's proposal to give 18-year olds the right to vote is wrong. Mr. Truman said a man needs more knowledge than he has at age 18. In an interview for television tonight, Mr. Truman denied ever having used the expression "red herring" in connection with the Communist issue. He said the phrase came from a reporter who interviewed him in the White House. But an unofficial transcript indicates both the former President and the reporter used the expression.

Also in New York today, the Independent Longshoremen's Union has filed unfair labor practice charges against Governor Dewey and AFL President George Meany. The Independents are in a jurisdictional fight with an AFL affiliated dockworkers union. The issue involves who is to represent the workers in collective bargaining. Governor Dewey had accused the Independents of violence and coercion in a recent bargaining vote.

The CIO says the 1-million 850-thousand unemployed reported by the Commerce Department in December does not tell the full story - that the unemployment situation is growing worse - and that Congress must take action to "head off a spreading recession." In Detroit today, 12-thousand auto workers were laid off in Chrysler, Hudson and Studebaker plants.

The President of Harvard, Dr. Nathaniel Pusey says he agrees with Governor Herter of Massachusetts that there's no place in American education for subversives. But he does not feel that faculty members who refuse to testify on the basis of the Fifth Amendment should automatically be dismissed.

Sometime within the next 24 hours, the neutral Repatriation Commission in Korea is expected to decide that the 22-thousand anti-communist prisoners now being held should be released on January 23rd. This would be in accordance with the armistice agreement.

In England, Lord Geddes, Ambassador to this country after the first world war and Britain's Civil Defense Commissioner during the blitz, has died at the age of 74.

And Joseph P. Ryan, former president of the International Longshoremen's Association has been indicted by a Federal Grand Jury on charges of accepting money from a trucking firm in violation of the Taft Hartley law. Ryan is already under indictment on charges of looting the union treasury.

It is probable that the first great issue before the new session of Congress will be one not mentioned by the President in his State of the Union message. It is the Bricker amendment. This is one of the most far-reaching measures before the country. Unfortunately it also is one of the least understood and most obscure. It is a proposal to amend the Constitution to limit the treaty-making power of the President.

This is a matter that the constitutional experts may consider hallowed to them alone, and a mere layman who lifts up a voice about it may count as something of an upstart. But we happen to be a nation of laymen and the value of the constitution is not that only the exports can understand it, but that it is so intelligible and sturdy as to have stood the test of time.

The constitution gives the treaty-making power to the executive branch of the governmen , which then must obtain the support of two thirds of the Senato. This division of powers is basic in the American system of government and it has worked well throughout American history. Now it is being challenged. The modern world is shrinking and the in er-dependence of nations is becoming more and more evident. Some persons do not relish this. Senator Bricker has said frankly that his amendment would stop the Baruch plan for the international control of atomic energy, and was meant to do so. Those who support the amendment are afraid that treaties may be used to over-ride local and state laws. And to prevent it they are ready to go back to a system of government preceding the federal system, to the confederation. For under the Bricker amendment it probably would not have been possible to ratify the peace treaty that ended the Revolutionary war.

The constitution limits the subjects about which Congress is authorized to legislate. It does not limit the subjects about which treaties can be made. So under the constitution a treaty can become the law of the land, even though without the treaty Congress could not have enacted the law. It has been like that from the start, and very few Americans have ever had occasion to think about it. The best known test of this point came in a treaty with Canada dealing with the protection of migrating birds. A federal statute about the birds was declared unconstitutional because Congress did not have express powers to deal with the subject. But the treaty was found constitutional.

Certain kinds of state and local laws could be superceded by a treaty. It is established that existing constitutional rights cannot be abridged by treaty, but a lower court in California nullified a state land law on the ground that it conflicted with the charter of the United Nations. The ruling was later reversed, but it set in motion some of the fears that led to the Bricker Amendment.

If all there were to it, was to make sure that a treaty could not override the constitution, nobody would get excited about an amendment saying so. It might be foolish to amend the constitution to say that the constitution should not be amended by treaty. But if superfluous the amendment would do no harm. But that is not what the Bricker amendment is trying to say. It wants to limit the treaty-making power of the executive. It wants to make sure that action by Congress or the legislatures of all 48 states will be needed, before treaty provisions become the law of the land. This changes the division of powers of the constitution. It could be regarded as a vote of no confidence in President Eisenhower in his conduct of foreign affairs. And it actually would make the negotiation of treaties almost impossible.

No foreign government would care to negotiate with us if it had to wait for Congressional legislation or state legislation before the agreement could come into effect. Negotiation with the United States already is looked on as difficult by some foreigners, because of the uncertainty that the Senate will support the State Department. But if we now were to make congressional and state legislation the condition for the acceptance of international agreements, our friends would feel that we had moved to the isolation of a far away island. It is not unfair to some of the advocates of the amendment to say that this is precisely what they want. Old fashioned isolationism may be impossible in the modern world. Modern isolationism is not.

The constitutional authorities of the country are strongly massed against the amendment. Senator Wiley polled the 27 law deans of the country, and 26 opposed any change in the treaty-making power. President Eisenhower said last July: "I am unalterably opposed to any amendment that would change the traditional treaty-making power, or which would hamper the President in his constitutional authority to conduct foreign affairs. Today probably as never before in our history it is essential that our country be able effectively to enter into agreement with other nations. Talks are now going on among Senate leaders, seeking some compromise solution. Senator Knowland has proposed an amendment to the Bricker resolution, and the President has accepted it. This amendment would leave the treaty-making power pretty much as it is, except that the Congress when ratifying a treaty could ask for legislation, but it would not be obliged by the Constitution to do so; and the law approving the treaty and agreeing to its terms would have to be passed only by the Congress and not by the 48 states. Senator Bricker has not accepted this suggested amendment, and there, so far as is known, the matter still stands tonight.

This is a complex but vitally important subject, having to do with how we conduct our affairs, our contractual relations with other countries. It is a case where learned lawyers debate the precise meaning of words and phrases, and differ honestly as to the results that might be expected to flow from the Bricker amendment, were it to be adopted. This country has a habit of thinking and arguing for a long time before amending the Constitution. If that habit persists no one will be entitled to complain of the outcome, whatever it is.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We speak often of the safety of American democracy resting in the Constitution. Thomas Jefferson, a firm believer in constitutional government once said: "I know no safe depository of the ultimate powers of society but the people themselves. And if we think them not enlightened enough to exercise their control with wholesome discretion, the remedy is not to take it from them, but to inform their discretion by education."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday January 11, 1954

This is the news:

The President today told Congress there is [redacted] no need NOW for drastic legislative innovations in the labor-management field. He said such legislation is not "desireable or required." But he suggested 14 changes the Congress should make in the Taft-Hartley law. Among other things he wants: Congress to require unions to hold secret votes on strikes, the vote to be conducted by the government. He would give the states more jurisdiction in labor disputes. Employers as well AS [redacted] workers would submit non-communist affidavits. The President wants a thorough study of union welfare pension funds. Chairman Smith of the Senate Labor Committee calls these and the other proposed changes in the law [redacted] "a wonderfully worked out program." But Democratic Senator Murray of Montana says the recommendations are apparently designed to correct lesser controversies. He says: "They don't go to the meat of the problem. And John L. Lewis SAYS OF [redacted] the President's message "a few piddling amendments won't make a slave law palatable to free-born citizen.s"

Mr. Eisenhower also sent Congress his proposals for a change in the farm program: to replace the present rigid price supports with a flexible system. [I'd like to discuss the farm message in a few minutes.]

The President has asked the Senate to ratify the security treaty, Secretary of State Dulles negotiated with the South Korean government. He said its designed to "deter aggression, by giving evidence of our common determination, to meet the common danger."

Today the Chinese Communists proposed that we resume the [redacted] talks about a Korean peace conference. Kenneth Young, our far eastern expert now in Korea, says the message has been relayed to Washington for an answer.

India today formally called for a meeting of the United Nations General Assembly, to consider the Korean question. The Indians say they do not intend to delay the freeing of war prisoners, who have refused to go home. Madame Pandit, the United Nations assembly president, is polling all U.N. members. If 31 of the 60 agree, the Assembly will meet early in February.

The French in Indo China claim they have inflicted [redacted] one thousand casualties on Communist guerrillas in Laos. And an attache of the Laos delegation said in Bangkok today, that about 35 per cent of the Communist forces which invaded Laos were Chinese.

British Foreign Secretary Eden said in a radio talk tonight, that the West can never abandon its demands for free all-German elections before Germany is reunited. He said he hopes the Russians will agree to such elections at the foreign ministers conference later this month.

And in Paris, General Greunther, supreme allied commander, said today that Russia has "no answer", at present, to allied long-range planes that carry atomic bombs.

In Washington, Secretary of State Dulles and Russian Ambassador Zarubin met for a half hour.. in a preliminary talk to decide how best the two countries could confer on the President's plan for an international pool of atomic enegry for peace.

And General Jimmy Doolittle, writing in "Planes" magazine, predicts that we'll probably have atomic-powered airplanes within 25 years. Doolittle also says its "entirely probable" that within 50 years we will have built a platform suspended outside the gravitational pull of the earth for scientific purposes. And he says we 'll try to send missiles to the moon.

The Supreme Court, by a split four to four vote, today permitted Serge Rubenstein to remain free on bail while he fights an order to deport him as a draft dodger.

Senator Mc Carthy's investigating committee said today that it was not "book burning", when it removed Communist books from our overseas libraries. The committee said it found more than 30-thousand copies of books by "Communists and "those who have aided the Communists."

Here in New York today the regional National Labor Relations Board decided not to certify any dock workers union until it holds a hearing on charges that a recent collective bargaining election was held "in an atmospehere of fear, violence and intimidation."

And the C.I.O. auto workers union says it paid a 5-thousand dollar reward to Donald Ritchie of Windsor, Ontario, a missing witness in the shooting of C.I.O. President Reuther six years ago. Wayne County Prosecutor Gerald O'brien says Ritchie's "confession" can be used against him. The police are investigating his escape from two policemen.

[redacted].

The Weather Bureau in Washington warns of a second storm that will bring new sleet....freezing rain and snow to the eastern seabord tonight--from New England to the Carolinas. The Bureau says the storm is now moving northeastward along the coast, following up today's storm that dumped AS MUCH AS 15 inches of snow in the northeastern states. [redacted] In many citiewa schools were closed... some plants shut down...highway speed limits were cut to 35 miles an hour... and in New York city trash collections were halted as every available garbage truck was put to work behind snow plows.

Edward R. Murrow: January 11, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

On the two important subjects of labor and farm legislation, the Administration's program is now in. Both subjects have been studied by the experts for nearly a year. In neither area is there any proposal for violent or sudden change. The Administration appears committed to a program of gradualness; for the farmer the President is aiming at only minor changes. His objective is to guarantee plenty of food at reasonable prices, and at less cost to the tax payer. The principal change proposed has to do with the government's price guarantees for farm products. The government now supports these prices at a fixed level set by Congress. The President proposes that the Secretary of Agriculture be given authority to raise or lower these support levels. Under this so-called flexible system, the price guaranteed to the farmer would be high when the crop was normal, or poor. The support price would be lower in times of surpluses, in order to encourage people to buy; and in order to discourage the farmers from over-production. This means, as I understand it, that the price support would vary in direct relation to the amount of corn, wheat or other commodity available. The idea here is to let the market price influence planting and production instead of a blanket 90 percent parity guarantee for all products, regardless of how big the surplus may be.

The President hopes that this system will provide both price and income protection for the farmers, and that it will help guide production or planting, and reduce the need for rigid acreage allotments.

In an effort to avoid any immediate price reduction the President proposes a "freeze" on two-and-a-half billion dollars-worth of surplus agricultural products now held by the government. These stocks cannot be destroyed, they cannot be dumped on the domestic or foreign markets. So the suggestion is that they be used for disaster relief, for the school lunch program, aid to other countries, and as an emergency national stockpile.

The President did not suggest any new method for supporting prices of such perishable commodities as eggs, poultry, dairy products, fruits and vegetables. The President is going to ask for additional money - about one-and-three-quarter ~~millions~~ Billions - to carry out price support commitments for the '53 and '54 crop. He proposed no changes in the present tobacco and sugar programs. So far as wool is concerned, he would allow domestically produced wool to seek its level in the market against imported wool. But if at the end of the year the price of domestic wool had averaged less than 90 percent of parity, the government would pay the wool grower directly out of customs duties collected on imported wool.

Mr. Eisenhower also said he would ask for enough money for a foreign sales program. He wants to send trade missions to Europe, Asia and South America, to see what can be done about selling American products there.

Senator Aiken, Chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, thinks the proposal is excellent, provides a basis for working out the soundest farm program we ever had. The Chairman of the House Agriculture Committee is non-committal.

What the President has done - in addition to the proposal to lift two-and-a-half billion dollars-worth of products out of the market - is to say that we should adopt a flexible system of supporting farm prices. Under the present system, the major farm crops are supported at 90 percent of parity. Parity means that if over an average period of years a farmer could buy a shirt for a bushel of wheat, he should now be able to buy at least 90 percent of a shirt for a bushel of wheat. This 90 percent is fixed by law. The President's proposal is that this percentage be flexible, and that the exact figure should be determined by the Secretary of Agriculture. The idea apparently is high price guarantees for agricultural products that are in short supply, and a lowering of the price guarantee where there is or may be a surplus. For example, if we had in prospect a super-abundance of corn the price support gurantee would be lowered, and this would cause farmers who might otherwise plant more corn to go in for cotton or soy beans, or some other commodity on which the price support was higher, and of which we did not have a surplus.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson said today he is hopeful that most if not all of the President's program will be approved by Congress. He feels that most farmers are beginning to understand that the present parity program is "just impossible." That something has got to be done. But. This is an election year, when politicians are reluctant to tamper with a current law which requires rigid high price supports on basic crops.

We have been talking of the farmer and some of his immediate problems. Cicero once observed:"Of all occupations from which gain is secured, there is none better than agriculture, nothing more productive, nothing sweeter, nothing more worthy of a free man." This is something the farm lobby would like to impress on Congress. They might also turn to Daniel Webster when he said:"The farmers are the founders of human civilization. When tillage begins, other arts follow."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, JANUARY 11, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President today told Congress there is no need now for drastic legislative innovations in the labor-management field. He said such legislations is not "desireable or required." But he suggested 14 changes the Congress should make in the Taft-Hartley law. Among other things he wants: Congress to require unions to hold secret votes on strikes, the vote to be conducted by the government. He would give the states more jurisdiction in labor disputes. Employers as well as workers would submit non-Communist affidavits. The President wants a thorough study of union welfare pension funds. Chairman Smith of the Senate Labor Committee calls these and the other proposed changes in the law "a wonderfully worked out program." But Democratic Senator Murray of Montana says the recommendations are apparently designed to correct lesser controversies. He says: "They don't go to the meat of the problem." And John L. Lewis says of the President's message, "a few piddling amendments won't make a slave law palatable to free-born citizens." Mr. Eisenhower also sent Congress his proposals for a change in the farm program: to replace the present rigid price supports with a flexible system. I'd like to discuss the farm message in a few minutes.

The President has asked the Senate to ratify the security treaty Secretary of State Dulles negotiated with the South Korean government. He said its designed to "deter aggression by giving evidence of our common determination to meet the common danger."

Today the Chinese Communists proposed that we resume the talks about a Korean peace conference. Kenneth Young, our far eastern expert now in Korea, says the message has been relayed to Washington for an answer.

India today formally called for a meeting of the United Nations General Assembly to consider the Korean question. The Indians say they do not intend to delay the freeing of war prisoners who have refused to go home. Madame Pandit, the United Nations assembly president, is polling all UN members. If 31 of the 60 agree, the Assembly will meet early in February.

The French in Indo China claim they have inflicted one thousand casualties on Communist guerrillas in Laos. And an attache of the Laos delegation said in Bangkok today that about 35 percent of the Communist forces which invaded Laos were Chinese.

British Foreign Secretary Eden said in a radio talk tonight that the West can never abandon its demands for free all-German elections before Germany is re-united. He said he hopes the Russians will agree to such elections at the foreign ministers conference later this month.

And in Paris, General Gruenther, supreme allied commander, said today that Russia has "no answer" at present to allied long-range planes that carry atomic bombs.

In Washington, Secretary of State Dulles and Russian Ambassador Zarubin met for a half hour - in a preliminary talk to decide how best the two countries could confer on the President's plan for an international pool of atomic energy for peace.

And General Jimmy Doolittle, writing in "Planes" magazine, preducts that we'll probably have atomic-powered airplanes within 25 years. Doolittle also says its "entirely probable" that within 50 years we will have built a platform suspended outside the gravitational pull of the earth for scientific purposes. And he says we'll try to send missiles to the moon.

The Supreme Court, by a split four to four vote, today permitted Serge Rubenstein to remain free on bail while he fights an order to deport him as a draft dodger.

Senator McCarthy's investigating committee said today that it was not "book burning" ehen it removed Communist books from our overseas libraries. The committee said it found more than 30-thousand copies of books by "Communists and those who have aided the Communists."

Here in New York today the regional National Labor Relations Board decided not to certify any dock workers union until it holds a hearing on charges that a recent collective bargaining election was held "in an atmosphere of fear, violence and intimidation."

And the CIO auto workers union says it paid a 5-thousand dollar reward to Donald Ritchie of Windsor, Ontario, a missing witness in the shooting of CIO President Reuther six years ago. Wayne County Prosecutor Gerald O'Brien says Ritchie's "confession" can be used against him. The police are investigating his escape from two policemen.

The Weather Bureau in Washington warns of a second story that will bring new sleet - freezing rain and snow to the eastern seaboard tonight - from New England to the Carolinas. The Bureau says the story is now moving northeastward along the coast following up today's storm that dumped as much as 15 inches of snow in the northeastern states. In many cities, schools were closed - some plants shut down - highway speed limits were cut to 35 miles an hour - and in New York City trash collections were halted as every available garbage truck was put to work behind snow plows.

On the two important subjects of labor and farm legislation, the Administration's program is now in. Both subjects have been studied by the experts for nearly a year. In neither area is there any proposal for violent or sudden change. The Administration appears committed to a program of gradualness; for the farmer the President is aiming at only minor changes. His objective is to guarantee plenty of food at reasonable prices, and at less cost to the tax payer. The principal change proposed has to do with the government's price guarantees for farm products. The government now supports these prices at a fixed level set by Congress. The President proposes that the Secretary of Agriculture be given authority to raise or lower these support levels. Under this so-called flexible system, the price guaranteed to the farmer would be high when the crop was normal, or poor. The support price would be lower in times of surpluses, in order to encourage people to buy; and in order to discourage the farmers from over-production. This means, as I understand it, that the price support would vary in direct relation to the amount of corn, wheat or other commodity available. The idea here is to let the market price influence planting and production instead of a blanket 90 percent parity guarantee for all products, regardless of how big the surplus may be.

The President hopes that this system will provide both price and income protection for the farmers, and that it will help guide production or planting, and reduce the need for rigid acreage allotments.

In an effort to avoid any immediate price reduction the President proposes a "freeze" on two-and-a-half billion dollars-worth of surplus agricultural products now held by the government. These stocks cannot be destroyed, they cannot be dumped on the domestic or foreign markets. So the suggestion is that they be used for disaster relief, for the school lunch program, aid to other countries, and as an emergency national stockpile.

The President did not suggest any new method for supporting prices of such perishable commodities as eggs, poultry, dairy products, fruits and vegetables. The President is going to ask for additional money - about one-and-three-quarter billions - to carry out price support commitments for the '53 and '55 crop. He proposed no changes in the present tobacco and sugar programs. So far as wool is concerned, he would allow domestically produced wool to seek its level in the market against imported wool. But if at the end of the year the price of domestic wool had averaged less than 90 percent of parity, the government would pay the wool grower directly out of customs duties collected on imported wool.

Mr. Eisenhower also said he would ask for enough money for a foreign sales program. He wants to send trade missions to Europe, Asia and South America, to see what can be done about selling American products there.

Senator Aiken, Chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, thinks the proposal is excellent, provides a basis for working out the soundest farm program we ever had. The Chairman of the House Agriculture Committee is non-committal.

What the President has done - in addition to the proposal to lift two-and-a-half billion dollars worth of products out of the market - is to say that we should adopt a flexible system of supporting farm prices. Under the present system, the major farm crops are supported at 90 percent of parity. Parity means that if over an average period of years a farmer could buy a shirt for a bushel of wheat, he should now be able to buy at least 90 percent of a short for a bushel of wheat. This 90 percent is fixed by law. The President's proposal is that this percentage be flexible, and that the exact figure should be determined by the Secretary of Agriculture. The idea apparently is high price guarantees for agricultural products that are in short supply, and a lowering of the price guarantee where there is or may be a surplus. For example, if we had in prospect a super-abundance of corn the price support guarantee would be lowered, and this would cause farmers who might otherwise plant more corn to go in for cotton or soy beans, or some other commodity on which the price support was higher, and of which we did not have a surplus.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson said today he is hopeful that most if not all of the President's program will be approved by Congress. He feels that most farmers are beginning to understand that the present parity program is "just impossible." That something has got to be done. But this is an election year, when politicians are reluctant to tamper with a current law which requires rigid high price supports on basic crops.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We have been talking of the farmer and some of his immediate problems. Cicero once observed: "Of all occupations from which gain is secured, there is none better than agriculture, nothing more productive, nothing sweeter, nothing more worthy of a free man." This is something the farm lobby would like to impress on Congress. They might also turn to Daniel Webster when he said: "The farmers are the founders of human civilization. When tillage begins, other arts follow." Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday January 12, 1954

This is the news:

Republican Senator Ives of New York said today that the President's plan for a government-conducted votes on strikes "won't work." Ives, a key member of the Senate Labor committee, says the plan is " a direct swat at union leaders"...it cannot be done by a law.. and the cost of holding such votes would be very high. White House Secretary Hagerty was unable to tell reporters today whether the President wants these strike votes before OR after a strike has started. The C.I.O. calls the plan a union-busting idea. And A.F. of L. President George Meany said such polls would mean more government interference in labor-management relations rather than less. The Associated Press quotes a well-informed Administration source as saying the strike vote idea was advanced by Commerce Secretary Weeks AT the suggestion of management groups.

The President's farm program has also run into OBJECTIONS from some Republican senators. At a closed-door conference of all Republican Senators Young of North Dakota.. Mc Carthy and Thye of Wisconsin and Jenner of Indiana are understood to have expressed serious doubt about the president's proposal for "flexible" price supports. Senator Young is said to have told his colleagues that most farmers want to continue the present high level supports.

Defense Secretary Wilson said today that our defenses are being strengthened by "giving the right weapon to the right man and having him in the right place at the right time."

In the House, Republican Representative Wolverton of New Jersey today challenged the American Medical Association to offer a constructive idea of its own for low-cost, pre-paid medical care. Wolverton said: "Whenever legislation is proposed that would prove helpful to the average citizen, too frequently the charge is made that it is socialized medicine. I fail to find any solution offered by the A,M.A." Wolverton added: "We have a right to expect that criticism should be constructive and helpful."

Republican Senators today announced committee assignments for their colleagues. They voted to put Senator McCarthy on the rules committee.. a new assignment that will increase his powers in the Senate. The rules committee, among other things, decides on the alottment of funds for Senate investigations.

In Korea a few hours from now, American and Communist aides will meet to try to revive the preliminary peace talks that were cancelled a month ago. At that time, American Ambassador Dean walked out because the enemy accused us of "perfidy." There are no indications that the Communists will withdraw their charge. [redacted]

In Indo-China French infantrymen and parachute troops are continuing their jungle attack against seven Vitminh battalions in Central Laos.

And in Paris, for the first time in 27 years, the National Assembly has chosen a socialist as its speaker. He is Andre Le Troquer.. elected when the Communists threw their support to him to defeat a strong supporter of the European army plan.

Robert Schuman, the former French foreign minister, told reporters in Paris today, that the French people fear the possibility of American withdrawal from Europe more than they fear a possible German-American alliance. He predicts the French will eventually ratify the European army plan because, he says, "there is no other solution to the problem of German re-armament."

In Rome tonight, 45-year-old Amintore Fanfani..the youngest man ever called to the premiership..is trying to form a new government. He has served in past cabinets as minister of labor..agriculture and Interior. He accepted the mandate after former Premier Pella refused to try to form a new government.

In Berlin, representatives of the three western powers and Russia STILL have [redacted] not been able to agree on where in Berlin the foreign ministers should meet later this month. The four men have now spent a total of 26 hours debating this..with no agreement in sight. American diplomats say this is a genuine threat to the meeting scheduled for January 25, two weeks from yesterday.

The Moscow radio today told its people that our ECONOMY [redacted] is dropping into "the abyss of a crisis" because of military spending. And in Washington, the Advertising Council debated whether to "sell" the country a prosperity campaign to offset "gloomy forecasts" of a recession. William McKeehan, an advertising agency executive, said : "gloom and doom have had a better press than the positive factors in our eceonomy." If the Council approves his suggestion the advertising industry would ARRANGE [redacted]

FOR several million dollars in advertising space and time to tell us that we have an "unprecedented opportunity" to keep and increase prosperity.

Here in New York, retired Rear Admiral Blandy died today after he suffered a stroke over the week-end. He was 63.. commanded the first post-war atomic tests at Bikini.

And in the northeast the worst snowstorm in five years is apparently over.. with the weatherman predicting colder temperatures.

Edward R. Murrow: January 12, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

One can have a good deal of sympathy for the men who have to decide the debated issue of giving military aid to Pakistan. It isn't that the arguments weigh so nearly even that it is hard to choose between them. The trouble is that the arguments aren't on the same level or of the same substance. It is like trying to decide which is stronger - a ton of steel or a hundred thousand volts of electricity. If military strength were the whole story in the power rivalry between the free world and the Soviet bloc, it would be quite easy to justify a grant of arms to Pakistan. One objective of the proposal is to create a cordon of defense for the Middle East, based on Turkey, stretching to Iraq and later Iran, and anchoring at the other end in Pakistan. The Middle East now is a vacuum so far as power is concerned.# The hopes of establishing a Middle East command, including Egypt along with Turkey, have been frustrated by the failure to settle the future of Suez. Any vacuum in a time of a great power rivalry is a danger spot. Some military experts, seeing this, want even more than a grant of arms to Pakistan. They want active military co-operation with that country, and the use of Pakistani air bases for American strategic aircraft, though that is not the policy of the Administration.

Pakistan is a country of seventy-six million people, and the third largest free country in the world. If successfully developed, it could become leader of the Moslem world, and wield tremendous influence in the now neutral Arab states. The outlook, in terms of power, certainly is appealing.

But it isn't a foregone conclusion that a grant of arms will strengthen Pakistan, and the West with it. Pakistan is geographically separated from the Soviet Union by Afghanistan. It happens that Pakistan and Afghanistan have acute differences, over disputed border territory occupied by some five million tribesmen. If Pakistan suddenly should become militarily stronger, Afghanistan will feel weakened, and may seek to strengthen itself. So far, Afghanistan has stubbornly resisted Soviet influence, and in doing so, has made Pakistan that much more safe from Soviet invasion. But if Afghanistan should seek aid from the Soviet Union, Pakistan might find an untrustworthy Afghanistan, as well as a menacing Soviet Union, on its border.

It is important to realize that in a great power rivalry, the only power isn't military. It also is spiritual, political and economic. And that complicates this decision about Pakistan. For the effect on India of the proposal to give arms to Pakistan is immediate. India is against it, partly because it wants to keep the power conflict away from southern Asia, partly because it has conflicts with Pakistan and arming that country will make it harder to deal with.

When Prime Minister Nehru speaks out against American policies, many in this country write him off as a "neutralist." But India in the United Nations voted to brand communist China an aggressor in Korea, and Nehru has said India would not be neutral in the face of aggression. It was an Indian resolution that helped produce the armistice in Korea, and an Indian resolution about atomic negotiations that gave President Eisenhower the opening to propose the international pool of atomic energy for peaceful uses. That is, India is active in its own way and not on the sidelines.

India with its 350,000,000 population is the largest democracy in the world, and Nehru's government has put down communist violence vigorously. The differences between Nehru and Americans are not ideological. They are differences chiefly over the issues of the cold war. Judged by American standards Nehru leans over backwards to be tolerant of the Kremlin, and leans the other way to be critical of the United States. And this makes it easy for Americans not to be impressed by his objections to the proposal to arm Pakistan.

But one of the considerations that must weigh in the choice of a policy in Asia is the almost incalculable importance of India succeeding as a democracy. Perhaps the greatest test in Asia - and indeed the world - may be whether India as a democracy can overcome poverty more successfully than does China under communism. If India succeeds while remaining a democracy the lesson to all Asia will be plain. It will show there can be economic salvation without resorting to the torments of totalitarian dictatorship. It is that consideration which has prompted such aid as the United States has already given India under Point Four. There may have to be much more of this aid if India's success is to be assured. But even if it is given it will not buy India's acceptance of American diplomatic leadership.

These are some of the elements in the Pakistan issue. One must weigh whether the strength of a defense cordon anchored in Pakistan will give strength enough to justify the risk of losing Afghanistan as a buffer state. One must weigh the effect on India and the enormous value of a free India associated with, if not allied with the free world.

This reporter is not attempting to do the weighing. It is enough to show the difficulty of reaching a wise decision. What makes it all the harder is the certainty that if the wrong choice is made it will not be easy to un-make, and that the consequences will be fateful.

The problem of whether [redacted] to give military aid to Pakistan is one not easily resolved. And those faced with this decision are undoubtedly aware of what Plutarch meant when he said:"It is circumstance and proper measure that give an action its character and make it either good or bad." For in the long run, it's much as George Herbert once remarked:"Our own actions are our security - not others' judgements."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Republican Senator Ives of New York said today that the President's plan for a government-conducted vote on strikes "won't work." Ives, a key member of the Senate Labor committee, says the plan is "a direct swat at union leaders" - it cannot be done by a law and the cost of holding such votes would be very high. White House Secretary Hagerty was unable to tell reporters today whether the President wants these strike votes before or after a strike has started. The CIO calls the plan a union-busting idea. And AFL President, George Meany, said such polls would mean more government interference in labor-management relations rather than less. The Associated Press quotes a well-informed Administration source as saying the strike vote idea was advanced by Commerce Secretary Weeks at the suggestion of management groups.

The President's farm program has also run into objections from some Republican senators. At a closed-door conference of all Republican Senators Young of North Dakota McCarthy and Thye of Wisconsin and Jenner of Indiana are understood to have expressed serious doubt about the President's proposal for "flexible" price supports. Senator Young is said to have told his colleagues that most farmers want to continue the present high level supports.

Defense Secretary Wilson said today that our defenses are being strengthened by "giving the right weapon to the right man and having him in the right place at the right time."

In the House, Republican Representative Wolverton of New Jersey today challenged the American Medical Association to offer a constructive idea of its own for low-cost, pre-paid medical care. Wolverton said: "Whenever legislation is proposed that would prove helpful to the average citizen, too frequently the charge is made that it is socialized medicine. I fail to find any solution offered by the AMA." Wolverton added: "We have a right to expect that criticism should be constructive and helpful."

Republican Senators today announced committee assignments for their colleagues. They voted to put Senator McCarthy on the rules committee - a new assignment that will increase his powers in the Senate. The rules committee, among other things, decides on the alottment of funds for Senate investigations.

In Korea a few hours from now, American and Communist aides will meet to try to revive the preliminary peace talks that were cancelled a month ago. At that time, American Ambassador Dean walked out because the enemy accused us of "perfidy." There are no indications that the Communists will withdraw their charge.

In Indo-China French infantrymen and parachute troops are continuing their jungle attack against seven Vietminh batallions in Central Laos.

And in Paris, for the first time in 27 years, the National Assembly has chosen a socialist as its speaker. He is Andre Le Troquer, wlected when the Communists threw their support to him to defeat a strong supporter of the European army plan.

Robert Schuman, the former French foreign minister, told reporters in Paris today, that the French people fear the possibility of American withdrawal from Europe more than they fear a possible German-American alliance. He predicts the French will eventually ratify the European army plan because, he says, "There is no other solution to the problem of German re-armament."

In Rome tonight, 45-year-old Amintore Fanfani - the youngest man ever called to the premiership - is trying to form a new government. He has served in past cabinets as minister of labor, agriculture and interior. He accepted the mandate after former Premier Pella refused to try to form a new government.

In Berlin, representatives of the three western powers and Russia still have not been able to agree on where in Berlin the foreign ministers should meet later this month. The four men have now spent a total of 26 hours debating this - with no agreement in sight. American diplomats say this is a genuine threat to the meeting scheduled for January 25, two weeks from yesterday.

The Moscow radio today told its people that our economy is dropping into "the abyss of a crisis" because of military spending. And in Washington, the Advertising Council debated whether to "sell" the country a prosperity campaign to offset "gloomy forecasts" of a recession. William McKeehan, an advertising agency executive, said "gloom and doom have had a better press than the positive factors in our economy." If the Council approves his suggestion the advertising industry would arrange for several million dollars in advertising space and time to tell us that we have an "unprecedented opportunity" to keep and increase prosperity.

Here in New York, retired Rear Admiral Blandy died today after he suffered a stroke over the weekend. He was 63 - commanded the first post-war atomic tests at Bikini.

And in the northeast the worst snowstorm in five years is apparently over - with the weatherman predicting colder temperatures.

One can have a good deal of sympathy for the men who have to decide the debated issue of giving military aid to Pakistan. It isn't that the arguments weigh so nearly even that it is hard to choose between them. The trouble is that the arguments aren't on the same level or of the same substance. It is like trying to decide which is stronger - a ton of steel or a hundred thousand volts of electricity. If military strength were the whole story in the power rivalry between the free world and the Soviet bloc, it would be quite easy to justify a grant of arms to Pakistan. One objective of the proposal is to create a cordon of defense for the Middle East, based on Turkey, stretching to Iraq and later Iran, and anchoring at the other end in Pakistan. The Middle East now is a vacuum so far as power is concerned. The hopes of establishing a Middle East command, including Egypt along with Turkey, have been frustrated by the failure to settle the future of Suez. Any vacuum in a time of a great power rivalry is a danger spot. Some military experts, seeing this, want even more than a grant of arms to Pakistan. They want active military cooperation with that country, and the use of Pakistani air bases for American strategic aircraft, though that is not the policy of the Administration.

Pakistan is a country of seventy-six million people, and the third largest free country in the world. If successfully developed it could become leader of the Moslem world and wield tremendous influence in the now neutral Arab states. The outlook, in terms of power, certainly is appealing.

But it isn't a foregone conclusion that a grant of arms will strengthen Pakistan, and the West with it. Pakistan is geographically separated from the Soviet Union by Afghanistan. It happens that Pakistan and Afghanistan have acute differences over disputed border territory occupied by some five million tribesmen. If Pakistan suddenly should become militarily stronger, Afghanistan will feel weakened, and may seek to strengthen itself. So far, Afghanistan has stubbornly resisted Soviet influence, and in doing so have made Pakistan that much more safe from Soviet invasion. But if Afghanistan should seek aid from the Soviet Union, Pakistan might find an untrustworthy Afghanistan as well as a menacing Soviet Union on its border.

It is important to realize that in a great power rivalry the only power isn't military. It also is spiritual, political and economic. And that complicates this decision about Pakistan. For the effect on India of the proposal to give arms to Pakistan is immediate. India is against it, partly because it wants to keep the power conflict away from southern Asia, partly because it has conflicts with Pakistan and arming that country will make it harder to deal with.

When Prime Minister Nehru speaks out against American policies, many in this country write him off as a "neutralist." But India in the United Nations voted to brand communist China an aggressor in Korea, and Nehru has said India would not be neutral in the face of aggression. It was an Indian resolution that helped produce the armistice in Korea, and an Indian resolution about atomic negotiations that gave President Eisenhower the opening to propose the international pool of atomic energy for leaceful uses. That is, India is active in its own way and not on the sidelines.

India with its 350,000,000 population is the largest democracy in the world, and Nehru's government has put down communist violence vigorously. The differences between Nehru and Americans are not ideological. They are differences chiefly over the issues of the cold war. Judged by American standards Nehru leans over backwards to be tolerant of the Kremlin, and leans the other way to be critical of the United States. And this makes it easy for Americans not to be impressed by his objections to the proposal to arm Pakistan.

But one of the considerations that must weigh in the choice of a policy in Asia is the almost incalculable importance of India succeeding as a democracy. Perhaps the greatest test in Asia - and indeed the world - may be whether India as a democracy can overcome poverty more successfully than does China under Communism. If India succeeds while remaining a democracy the lesson to all Asia will be plain. It will show there can be economic salvation without resorting to the torments of totalitarian dictatorship. It is that consideration which has prompted such aid as the United States has already given India under Point Four. There may have to be much more of this aid if India's success is to be assured. But even if it is given it will not buy India's acceptance of American diplomatic leadership.

These are some of the elements in the Pakistan issue. One must weigh whether the strength of a defense cordon anchored in Pakistan will give strength enough to justify the risk of losing Afghanistan as a buffer state. One must weigh the effect on India and the enormous value of a free India associated with, if not allied with the free world.

This reporter is not attempting to do the weighing. It is enough to show the difficulty of reaching a wise decision. What makes it all the harder is the certainty that if the wrong choice is made it will not be easy to un-make, and that the consequences will be fateful.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The problem of whether to give military aid to Pakistan is one not easily resolved. And those faced with this decision are undoubtedly aware of what Plutarch meant when he said: "It is circumstance and proper measure that give an action its character and make it either good or bad." For in the long run, it's much as George Herbert once remarked: "Our own actions are our security - not others' judgments."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday January 13, 1954

This is the news:

The President says he believes his legislative program is for the overall good of the nation. He told reporters at the White House today, that he believes in everything he proposed to Congress.. he didn't make his suggestions just to look good. And he's going to fight for his program. Mr. Eisenhower refused to label anything a "must".. and he refused to say what parts of the program he considers more important than others.

The President says he wants Congress to decide, whether his suggested government-conducted strike votes, should be made before a strike starts, or after its underway. And he says that despite opposition from some Republicans, he believes his program for flexible FARM price supports, is right. He feels that anyone who has given the farm problem the long and close study the Administration has given it, would agree, that the present program is not workable, and will not help farmers.

Mr. Eisenhower says our NEW defense plan for swift retaliation against aggressors, is based on the proven value of surprise element in warfare. He endorses Secretary of State Dulles statement that we'll meet aggression "with a great capacity to retaliate instantly, by means and at places, of our own chossing." I'd like to discuss this in a few minutes.

The President discussed a number of subjects at his news conference. He said--in comment on the proposed Bricker ~~amendment~~ AMENDMENT to the Constiution--that he would go along with the idea of having Congress nullify any treaty or international agreement that is contrary to the Constiution. But he says he'll never agree to go back to the system in effect before the Constiution was adopted whereby each state had the right to repudiate a treaty.

Mr. Eisenhower is encouraged that preliminary talks with the Russians have been started on his plan for an international pool of atomic energy for peaceful uses. But he is not yet ready to say the Russians are acting in good faith.

He also told reporters: he doesn't think he's smart politically... he thinks a woman could handle the duties of President but she wouldn't want TO if she were smart..and his political advisers don't want him to talk about whether he'll run for a second term.

The President said that in Korea the Communists are doing a surprising amount of economic rebuilding..almost as if North Korea were an adjunct to Communist China.

And later Secretary Dulles told a Senate committee that Red China is "virtually incorporating North Korea as a Chinese province". Mr. Dulles says this will make it more difficult [redacted] peacefully TO unify all of Korea. But he's certain this will come to pass "in the long run" just as he feels that some day all Germany will be unified.

Britain's Sir Gladywn Jebb suggested in Baltimore tonight that it can be argued "with some force" that had Communist China been a member of the United Nations in 1950 there might never have been a Korean war.

In Korea today the Communists made it known they just want to discuss a date for resuming the stalled peace conference Repatriation [redacted] talks. We want to discuss the "conditions" for such a meeting. There's no indication the enemy intends to retract his "perfidy" charges against the United States.

Air Secretary Talbott said in Washington today that he believes there is an immediate and urgent need for a SEPARATE [redacted] air academy to help overcome a shortage of young air force officers.

And the Navy announced that 50 ships now in active service will be put into mothballs.. as a result of a cut in military spending for the next fiscal year. The decision was announced as Navy Secretary Robertson said our ship construction program is lagging while the Russians point towards the development of "a modern, highseas fleet that will make it a first-class power."

The Army's March draft call asks for 18-thousand men.. the same as in the February call.

The House Ways and Means committee has agreed to ease the income taxes of the single heads of households: Such as widows, separated or divorced persons or single persons who support a dependent. They would be given the benefit married couples now have; to split their incomes for tax purposes.

From West Germany today comes word that some twelve hundred correspondents and photographers from western nations have registered to cover the Berlin foreign ministers conference...scheduled to be held a week from Monday. But so far representatives of the four powers have not been able to agree on just where in Berlin the meetings will be held.

In Austria today 27 Alpine villagers were found crushed or smothered to death under avalanche masses in the hamlet of Blons. Hopes have been abandoned for 35 others missing in the town. Forty four persons were rescued in Blons today as American and Swiss air forces sent doctors, medical supplies and food to the avalanche area.

Here in New York the Port Authority charged that Radio and Television star Arthur Godfrey "recklessly" buzzed the control tower at the neighboring Teterboro, New Jersey, airport last Thursday. Godfrey used the airport to take off in his private plane for Florida. An official complaint to the Civil Aeronautics Authority says his plane missed the tower by less than 20 feet. In Miami, Godfrey told reporters he's not mad at anybody.. and anyone who thinks he deliberately buzzed the tower is "nuts." He says his plane was caught in a 40-mile cross wind.

Edward R. Murrow: January 13, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

Last night's speech by Secretary of State Dulles must, I think, be regarded as a prelude to the Four Power Conference scheduled to open in Berlin on January 25. Mr. Dulles began by recognizing that many of the policies of the Truman administration were good - aid to Greece and Turkey, the Marshall Plan, the decision to go into Korea. But his contention was that these were all emergency acts imposed upon us by our enemies. Mr. Dulles then proceeded to expound a policy which he thinks will serve our long-time interests. We want for ourselves and for others a maximum deterrent at bearable cost. This is a "long haul" proposition, and we must not bankrupt ourselves by immediate and urgent military expenditures that we cannot afford. We cannot permanently commit American land forces to Asia to a degree that gives us no strategic reserves. We cannot permanently support the economies of foreign countries. We cannot be prepared to fight on the ground all over the world. Mr. Dulles said the way to deter aggression is for the free community to be "willing and able to respond vigorously at places and with means of its own choosing. The basic decision by this Administration is to rely primarily upon a great capacity to retaliate instantly by means and at places of our choosing.

This language means that we are not committed to meet future ~~Russian~~ Communist aggression on the ground at the place where it occurs. It implies, although it doesn't state, that there won't be any more little wars. Our counter-blow in the event of further aggression may not be aimed at the area where the aggression occurs. Already we have said that open Communist Chinese aggression in Indo-China would have "grave consequences which might not be confined to Indo-China". We have also said that if the Communists start the war again in Korea, our response would not necessarily be confined to Korea."

Clearly our reliance is upon new and destructive airborne weapons, which we threaten to use, not against those who spearhead another attack but against those who plan and order it.

Mr. Dulles drew no lines upon a map; but in blunt language what he was saying was that in case of renewed aggression we reserve the right to start another world war. He did not point out, when he spoke of our great capacity to retaliate instantly by means and at places of our choosing, that the Russian capacity to retaliate is also considerable; and that our industry and civilian population are so situated as to make the Russian job of working us over with super-bombs rather easier than would be our task in applying the same weapons to the Soviet Union.

In this reporter's opinion the speech by Mr. Dulles, and the support given to it today by President Eisenhower represents a fundamental and publicized change in American grand strategy. We are not saying that American boys will die in defense of Hanoi or Bangkok or Teheran. What we are saying is that we will respond to future aggression on ground and with weapons of our own choosing. The military implication is clear. What our policy is going to be at the Berlin meeting is considerably less clear. We are told by spokesmen of the Administration that we have "regained the initiative." Certainly we have done so in the realm of rhetoric. Certainly, too, the present Administration is planning for the long haul, a wearing, grinding process which may strain our military and economic establishments for decades. But it is clear that the Russians, at Berlin, hope to gain much and lose little. On the subject of German unity both sides appear to be inflexible. The Russians contend that the Western Powers at Berlin will be split. They say there will be America and the West German clique of German militarists, and then there will be Britain and France, both of them alarmed at American belligerence and eager for a compromise with the Soviet Union. The Russian objective must be to prevent the creation of a European Army, to do what they can to isolate the United States from Europe, and to persuade the French that the Russian threat is not sufficiently great to warrant France embracing her old enemy, Germany.

The Communists know how to turn even a stalemate to their advantage. For the moment, on the surface, they have turned a rather benevolent countenance toward the West. They have patience, are skilled in the use of delaying tactics, and the new Russian regime requires time to consolidate its domestic position. Already considerable sections of the European press are speculating about which side will have to shoulder the blame for the failure of the Berlin Conference. This makes it all the more important that we should demonstrate that we have concrete, constructive and workable proposals to put forward at Berlin, for this is going to be a contest which cannot be won by big bombs, or the threat of using them.

When the Berlin meetings begin, all sides concerned will have been well briefed on what to expect from the other participants. And the threat of force will probably be of minor concern. There's an old French proverb which says:"Many a man threatens while he quakes for fear." And a check of history will show that John Ray was right when he concluded:"There are more threatened than struck."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 13, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President says he believes his legislative program is for the overall good of the nation. He told reporters at the White House today that he believes in everything he proposed to Congress - he didn't make his suggestions just to look good. And he's going to fight for his program. Mr. Eisenhower refused to label anything a "must" and he refused to say what parts of the program he considers more important than others.

The President says he wants Congress to decide whether his suggested government-conducted strike votes should be made before a strike starts or after its underway. And he says that despite opposition from some Republicans he believes his program for flexible farm price supports is right. He feels that anyone who has given the farm problem the long and close study the Administration has given it would agree that the present program is not workable and will not help farmers.

Mr. Eisenhower says our new defense plan for swift retaliation against aggressors is based on the proven value of surprise element in warfare. He endorses Secretary of State Dulles statement that we'll meet aggression "with a great capacity to retaliate instantly by means and at places of our own choosing." I'd like to discuss this in a few minutes. The President discussed a number of subjects at his news conference. He said - in comment on the proposed Bricker amendment to the Constitution that he would go along with the idea of having Congress nullify any treaty or international agreement that is contrary to the Constitution. But he says he'll never agree to go back to the system in effect before the Constitution was adopted whereby each state had the right to repudiate a treaty.

Mr. Eisenhower is encouraged that preliminary talks with the Russians have been started on his plan for an international pool of atomic energy for peaceful uses. But he is not yet ready to say the Russians are acting in good faith.

He also told reporters: he doesn't think he's smart politically - he thinks a woman could handle the duties of President but she wouldn't want to if she were smart - and his political advisers don't want him to talk about whether he'll run for a second term.

The President said that in Korea the Communists are doing a surprising amount of economic rebuilding - almost as if North Korea were an adjunct to Communist China.

And later Secretary Dulles told a Senate committee that Red China is "virtually incorporating North Korea as a Chinese province." Mr. Dulles says this will make it more difficult peacefully to unify all of Korea. But he's certain this will come to pass "in the long run" just as he feels that some day all Germany will be unified.

Britain's Sir Gladwyn Jebb suggested in Baltimore tonight that it can be argued "with some force" that had Communist China been a member of the United Nations in 1950 there might never have been a Korean war.

In Korea today the Communists made it known they just want to discuss a date for resuming the stalled peace conference repatriation talks. We want to discuss the "conditions" for such a meeting. There's no indication the enemy intends to retract his "perfidy" charges against the United States.

Air Secretary Talbott said in Washington today that he believes there is an immediate and urgent need for a separate air academy to help overcome a shortage of young air force officers.

And the Navy announced that 50 ships now in active service will be put into mothballs as a result of a cut in military spending for the next fiscal year. The decision was announced as Navy Secretary Robertson said our ship construction program is lagging while the Russians point towards the development of "a modern, highseas fleet that will make it a firstclass power."

The Army's March draft call asks for 18thousand men - the same as in the February call.

The House Ways and Means committee has agreed to ease the income taxes of the single heads of households such as widows, separated or divorced persons or single persons who support a dependent. They would be given the benefit married couples now have; to split their incomes for tax purposes.

From West Germany today comes word that some twelve hundred correspondents and photographers from western nations have registered to cover the Berlin foreign ministers conference scheduled to be held a week from Monday. But so far representatives of the four powers have not been able toagree on just where in Berlin the meetings will be held.

In Austria today 27 Alpine vill gers were found crushed or smothered to death under avalanche masses in the hamlet of blons. Hopes have been abandoned for 35 others missing in the town. Forty four persons were rescued in Blons today as American and Swiss air forces sent doctors, medical supplies and food to the avalanche area.

Here in New York the Port Authority charged that Radio and Television star Arthur Godfrey "recklessly" buzzed the control tower at the neighboring Teterboro, New Jersey, airport last Thursday. Godfrey used the airport to take off in his private plane for Florida. An official complaint to the Civil Aeronautics Authority says his plane missed the tower by less than 20 feet. In Miami, Godfrey told reporters he's not mad at anybody and anyone who thinks he deliberately buzzed the tower is "nuts." He says his plane was caught in a 40-mile cross wind.

Last night's speech by Secretary of State Dulles must, I think, be regarded as a prelude to the Four Power Conference scheduled to open in Berlin on January 25. Mr. Dulles began by recognizing that many of the policies of the Truman administration were good - aid to Greece and Turkey, the Marshall Plan, the decision to go into Korea. But his contention was that these were all emergency acts imposed upon us by our enemies. Mr. Dulles then proceeded to expojnd a policy which he thinks will serve our longtime interests. We want for ourselves and for others a maximum deterrent at bearable cost. This is a "long haul" proposition, and we must not bankrupt ourselves by immediate and urgent military expenditures that we cannot afford. We cannot permanently commit American land forces to Asia to a degree that gives us no strategic reserves. We cannot permanently support the economies of foreign countries. We cannot be prepared to fight on the ground all over the world. Mr. Dulles said the way to deter aggression is for the free community to be "willing and able to respond vigorously at places and with means of its own choosing. The basic decision by this Administration is to rely primarily upon a great capacity to retaliate instantly by means and at places of our choosing.

This language means that we are not committed to meet future Communist aggression on the ground at the place where it occurs. It implies, although it doesn't state, that there won't be any more little wars. Our counter-blow in the event of further aggression may not be aimed at the area where the aggression occurs. Already we have said that open Communist Chinese aggression in Indo-China would have "grave consequences which might not be confined to Indo-China." We have also said that if the Communists start the war again in Korea, "our response would not necessarily be confined to Korea."

Clearly our reliance is upon new and destructive airborne weapons, which we threaten to use, not against those who spearhead another attack but against those who plan and order it.

Mr. Dulles drew no lines upon a map; but in blunt language what he was saying was that in case of renewed aggression we reserve the right to start another world war. He did not point out, when he spoke of our great capacity to retaliate instantly by means and places of our choosing, that the Russian capacity to retaliate is also considerable; and that our industry and civilian population are so situated as to make the Russian job of working us over with super-bombs rather easier than would be our task in applying the same weapons to the Soviet Union.

In this reporter's opinion the speech by Mr. Dulles, and the support given to it today by President Eisenhower represents fundamental and publicized change in American grand strategy. We are not saying that American boys will die in defense of Hanoi or Bangkok or Teheran. What we are saying is that we will respond to future aggression on ground and with weapons of our own choosing. The military implication is clear. What our policy is going to be at the Berlin meeting is considerably less clear. We are told by spokesmen of the Administration that we have "regained the initiative." Certainly we have done so in the realm of rhetoric. Certainly, too, the present Administration is planning for the long haul, a wearing, grinding process which may strain our military and economic establishments for decades. But it is clear that the Russians, at Berlin, hope to gain much and lose little. On the subject of German unity both sides appear to be inflexible. The Russians contend that the Western Powers at Berlin will be split. They say there will be America and the West German clique of German militarists, and then there will be Britain and France, both of them alarmed at American belligerence and eager for a compromise with the Soviet Union. The Russian objective must be to prevent the creation of a European Army, to do what they can to isolate the United States from Europe, and to persuade the French that the Russian threat is not sufficiently great to warrant France embracing her old enemy, Germany.

The Communists know how to turn even a stalemate to their advantage. For the moment, on the surface, they have turned a rather benevolent countenance toward the West. They have patience, are skilled in the use of delaying tactics, and the new Russian regime requires time to consolidate its domestic position. Already considerable sections of the European press are speculating about which side will have to shoulder the blame for the failure of the Berlin Conference. This makes it all the more important that we should demonstrate that we have concrete, constructive and workable proposals to put forward at Berlin, for this is going to be a contest which cannot be won by big bombs, or the threat of using them.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today. but first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: When the Berlin meetings begin, all sides concerned will have been well briefed on what to expect from the other participants. And the threat of force will probably be of minor concern. There's an old French proverb which says: "Many a man threatens while he quakes for fear." And a check of history will show that John Ray was right when he concluded: "There are more threatened than struck."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Thursday, Jan 14, 1954

This is the news:

The President today urged Congress to expand and liberalize the social security laws. Here's what he recommends: there are now nearly 70-million people covered by the law. Mr. Eisenhower wants to add another ten million: (farm workers, domestic workers, doctors and dentists, lawyers, accountants, self-employed professional people and others). And he wants to increase the benefits of the law. At present, retired persons get payments as low as 25-dollars a month... as high as 85-dollars a month. The average payment is $50. Administration sources say the President wants this raised by from five to $13.50 a month.. so that the smallest monthly payment would be 30-dollars..the largest $108.50.

At present both employers and their employes pay the government a two per cent social security tax, on a maximum of 36-hundred dollars a year. The President wants to raise the top income, on which payments are made, to 42-hundred dollars a year. So, the person who now makes at least 36-hundred a year...and pays a social security tax of $72... would in the future pay another $12 a year tax.

Mr. Eisenhower also wants to help retired workers by liberalizing the law on what they can earn before becoming ineligible for monthly benefits. At present the law says if you are retired, and make more than $75 a month... that's 900-dollars a year... then you disqualify yourself from benefits. The President wants to set the figure at $1000 That means you could make as much as 200-dolllars a month for five months and still be eligible for benefit payments.

In his message the President said our older persons should be encouraged to make a contribution to the productive needs of the nation. He's convinced most of them are happier and better off when they do such work.

And of his general attitude towards social security the President said: "The human problems of individual citizens are a (PROPER) and important concern of our government." He said every individual is concerned about economic security for his old age and for his family in case of his death. Mr. Eisenhower says its the proper aim of all levels of government to "reduce both the fear and incidence of (DESTITUTION) to the minimum."

A.F. of L. President Meany says the President's proposals are "on the whole progressive and forward looking and will substantially enhance the (WELFARE) and security of the American people."

The House Ways and Means Committee today approved a cut in personal income taxes on income from dividends. This would affect some four million [redacted] persons who now receive an income from dividends.

Under the committee plan taxpayers would not have to pay any tax on the first $50 they receive in dividends. And they would [redacted] be allowed to deduct from their tax bills five per cent of their total dividend income. This would mean an initial loss of revenue to the government of 240-million dollars in the first year.

In Korea today the Indians announced that they will turn back to the Allies and the Communists the prisoners they captured during the war. This will be done [redacted] next Wednesday..three days before the deadline for [redacted] setting the prisoners free. General Thimaya, the Indian chairman of the neutral nation commission, says that if either side frees any of its prisoners this will be a violation of the armistice agreement. He wants the prisoners held, by the side that captured them, until a decision on their future is made at a peace conference..or both sides agree what to do next.

General Ridgeway, our army chief of staff, told Senators in Washington today that the Indian decision could result in "serious consequences".. he's concerned about the Communist reaction..indicates he fears the enemy may use this as an excuse to break up the armistice.

Allied and Communist liason officers met today to try to agree on how to get a meeting started to discuss a peace conference. Kenneth Young of the State Department says these meetings might continue For a week. The enemy wanted to resume the conference on Saturday..refused to discuss "conditions" for such a meeting and turned down our suggestion that these liason meetings be secret.

In Washington, Arthur Dean, our chief delegate at the peace negotiations--before they were broken off---was accused of "Seemingly spreading the type of propaganda designed to bring about the appeasement of Red China." Republican Senator Welker of Idaho said Dean.. a former law (PARTNER) of Secretary of State Dulles.. is one of a group "chanting the siren song of collaboration with the rulers of red China." And Dean issued a statement saying: this attack will hinder his work in Korea.. He says: he is against the appeasement of the Soviet Union,

Red China, North Korea or any other Communist movement or government. He says he opposes recognition of Red China or admitting it to the United Nations. [redacted]

A committee of four businessmen and a general today recommended that the army needs a thorough over-haul of its supply and training system. [redacted]

Commerce Secretary Weeks says "it has been and still is" the government's policy to permit trade in non-strategic goods with Russia and her satellites in Europe. But no trade with Red China or North Korea is permitted.

In San Fransisco, [redacted] Marilyn Monroe became the bride of [redacted] Joe Di Maggio.

Edward R. Murrow: January 14, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

In Berlin the four Commandants - American, British, French and Russian - argued for forty hours. They were trying to decide where their respective Foreign Ministers should meet to start the big argument. They failed to reach agreement, and referred the matter back to their own governments. The Russians stuck to their demand that half of the meetings be held in the Communist-controlled sector of Berlin. The final Russian proposal was that the first two meetings be split - one in the East and one in the West - and that the Foreign Ministers themselves would then decide where further sessions should be held. This would open a prospect of endless argument between the four Ministers about the location of the hall in which the session should occur, without their ever getting down to the substance of the conference.

The West is now confronted with the possibility that the Russians want to evade the Foreign Ministers' Conference altogether, or at least postpone it. Western officials in Berlin are saying tonight that only a miracle can bring the Foreign Ministers together as scheduled on January 25. But spokesmen for our State Department say they are still confident the meeting will open on time. They believe these procedural details will be worked out.

On the face of it this is a rather ridiculous argument from which neither side emerges with much credit or statesmanship. It might be asked "What difference does it make where the Foreign Ministers meet, so long as they meet?" But the Russian tactics so far present the Western Powers with an interesting problem. They must try to decide whether this kind of delay and confusion is all that Moscow has in mind. If it is it might be best to postpone it till a more suitable time and place can be found. After all, it was the Russians who suggested Berlin, and they may well have done so as a tactical move designed to contribute to confusion. In theory the West could agree to the Russian demands that half the meetings be held in the Communist sector. There might even be a psychological advantage in doing so, since it would demonstrate that the Western Powers are willing and eager to talk under almost any conditions. But if the West gave in on this point, the Russians might then demand, on the basis of their past record, that all the meetings be held in the Russian sector, under a Russian chairman, and with a Russian secretariat handling the minutes and the papers. Thus they would be able to turn the whole conference upside down, and construct a record prejudicial to the Western case.

It remains possible that a neutral location could be agreed upon as a substitute for Berlin, but such a development seems unlikely. Even if that were to happen, the question would remain whether Russia really wants a conference at this time. Dick Hottelet cables me from Germany that the suspicion is growing amongst allied representatives there that the Russians have nothing new to say, and that even if these preliminary technical obstacles were removed others would immediately take their place. For example, the Moscow newspaper Pravda today declared that Russia would not even entertain the suggestion that free elections should be held in Germany - that is the keystone of the entire Western position. But since free elections is an appealing argument to world opinion, and since the Communists would lose any such free election, they may well decide to sidestep the entire issue. They can do this by repeated and sustained arguments on procedural questions, while at the same time avoiding any talk about the real issues. Another example of this strategy came yesterday, when the East German Parliament appealed to the West German Parliament to join in a request that representatives of both bodies be admitted to the Four Power conference. This kind of question could give the Russians opportunity for interminable delay, and even a chance to win a minor victory; for if the West agreed to such a proposal, they would be lumping Adenauer's freely elected West German Government, and the satellite East German Government together, thereby undermining most of what has been done in West Germany in the course of the last eight years.

If the Berlin Conference ever does get underway it will start with no agreed agenda, and with about as little hope for fruitful results, as any postwar conference with the Russians. And that adds up to very little hope indeed.

It would seem that well in advance of the start of any Foreign Ministers Conference, the climate of agreement is not exactly favorable - even as to where the meetings should be held. Somehow, these lines from Shakespeare's Julius Caesar come to mind:"What you have said I will consider; what you have to say I will with patience hear, and find a time both meet to hear and answer such high things."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, JANUARY 14, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President today urged Congress to expand and liberalize the social security laws. Here's what he recommends: there are now nearly 70-million people covered by the law. Mr. Eisenhower wants to add another ten million: farm workers, domestic workers, doctors and dentists, lawyers, accountants, self-employed professional people and others. And he wants to increase thebenefits of the law. At present retired persons get payments as low as 25-dollars a month - as high as 85-dollars a month. The average payment is $50. Administration sources say the President wants this raised by from five to $13.50 a month - so that the smallest monthly payment would be 30 dollars - the largest $108.50.

At present both employers and their employees pay the government a two percent social security tax on a maximum of 36-hundred dollars a year. The President wants to raise the top income, on which payments are made, to 42-hundred dollars a year. So, the person who now makes at least 26-hundred a year and pays a social security tax of $72 - would in the future pay another $12 a year tax.

Mr. Eisenhower also wants to help retired workers by liberalizing the law on what they can earn before becoming ineligible for monthly benefits. At present the law says if you are retired, and make more than $74 a month - that's 900-dollars a year then you disqualify yourself from benefits. The President wants to set the figure at $1000. That means you could make as much as 200-dollars a month for five months and still be eligible for benefit payments.

In his message the President said our older persons should be encouraged to make a contribution to the productive needs of the nation. He's convinced most of them are happier and better off when they do such work.

And of his general attitude towards social security the President said: "The human problems of individual citizens are a proper and important concern of our government." He said every individual is concerned about economic security for his old age and for his family in case of his death. Mr. Eisenhower says its the proper aim of all levels of government to "reduce both the fear and incidence of destitution to the minimum."

AFL President Meany says the President's proposals are "on the whole progressive and forward looking and will substantially enhance the welfare and security of the American people."

The House Ways and Means Committee today approved a cut in personal income taxes on income from dividends. This would affect some four million persons who now receive an income from dividends.

Under the committee plan taxpayers would not have to pay any tax on the first $50 they receive in dividends. And they would be allowed to deduct from their tax bills five percent of their total dividend income. This would mean an initial loss of revenue to the government of 240-million dollars in the first year.

In Korea today the Indians announced that they will turn back to the Allies and the Communists the prisoners they captured during the war. This will be done next Wednesday - three days before the deadline for setting the prisoners free. General Thimaya, the Indian chairman of the neutral nation commission, says that if either side frees any of its prisoners this will be a violation of the armistice agreement. He wants the prisoners held, by the side that captured them, until a decision on their future is made at a peace conference or both sides agree what to do next.

General Ridgeway, our army chief of staff, told Senators in Washington today that the Indian decision could result in "serious consequences" - he's concerned about the Communist reaction indicates he fears the enemy may use this as an excuse to break up the armistice.

Allied and Communist liason officers met today to try to agree on how to get a meeting started to discuss a peace conference. Kenneth Young of the State Department says these meetings might continue for a week. The enemy wanted to resume the conference on Saturday - refused to discuss "conditions" for such a meeting and turned down our suggestion that these liason meetings be secret.

In Washington, Arthur Dean, our chief delegate at the peace negotiations - before they were broken off - was accused of "seemingly spreading the type of propaganda designed to bring about the appeasement of Red China." Republican Senator Welker of Idaho said Dean - a former law partner of Secretary of State Dulles - is one of a group "chanting the siren song of collaboration with the rulers of Red China." And Dean issued a statement saying: this attack will hinder his work in Korea. He says: he is against the appeasement of the Soviet Union, Red China, North Korea or any other Communist movement or government. He says he opposes recognition of Red China or admitting it to the United Nations.

A committee of four businessmen and a general today recommended that the army needs a thorough over-haul of its supply and training system.

Commerce Secretary Weeks says "it has been and still is" the government's policy to permit trade in non-strategic goods with Russia and her satellites in Europe. But no trade with Red China or North Korea is permitted.

In San Francisco, Marilyn Monroe became the bride of Joe Di Maggio.

In Berlin the four Commandants - American, British, French and Russian - argued for forty hours. They were trying to decide where their respective Foreign Ministers should meet to start the big argument. They failed to reach agreement, and referred the matter back to their own governments. The Russians stuck to their demand that half of the meetings be held in the Communist-controlled sector of Berlin. The final Russian proposal was that the first two meetings be split - one in the East and one in the West - and that the Foreign Ministers themselves would then decide where further sessions should be held. This would open a prospect of endless argument between the four Ministers about the location of the hall in which the session should occur, without their ever getting down to the substance of the conference.

The West is now confronted with the possibility that the Russians want to evade the Foreign Ministers' Conference altogether, or at least postpone it. Western officials in Berlin are saying tonight that only a miracle can bring the Foreign Ministers together as scheduled on January 25. But spokesmen for our State Department say they are still confident the meeting will open on time. They believe these procedural details will be worked out.

On the face of it this is a rather ridiculous argument from which neither side emerges with much credit or statesmanship. It might be asked "What difference does it make where the Foreign Ministers meet, so long as they meet?" But the Russian tactics so far present the Western Powers with an interesting problem. They must try to decide whether this kind of delay and confusion is all that Moscow has in mind. If it is, it might be best to postpone it till a more suitable time and place can be found. After all, it was the Russians who suggested Berlin, and they may well have done so as a tactical move designed to contribute to confusion. In theory the West could agree to the Russian demands that half the meetings be held in the Communist sector. There might even be a psychological advantage in doing so, since it would demonstrate that the Western Powers are willing and eager to talk under almost any conditions. But if the West gave in on this point, the Russians might then demand, on the basis of their past record, that all the meetings be held in the Russian sector, under a Russian chairman, and with a Russian secretariat handling the minutes and the papers. Thus they would be able to turn the whole conference upside down, and construct a record prejudicial to the Western case.

It remains possible that a neutral location could be agreed upon as a substitute for Berlin, but such a development seems unlikely. Even if that were to happen, the question would remain whether Russia really wants a conference at this time. Dick Hottelet cables me from Germany that the suspicion is growing amongst allied representatives there that the Russians have nothing new to say, and that even if these preliminary technical obstacles were removed others would immediately take their place. For example, the Moscow newspaper Pravda today declared that Russia would not even entertain the suggestion that free elections should be held in Germany - that is the keystone of the entire Western position. But since free elections is an appealing argument to world opinion, and since the Communists would lose any such free election, they may well decide to sidestep the entire issue. They can do this by repeated and sustained arguments on procedural questions, while at the same time avoiding any talk about the real issues. Another example of this strategy came yesterday, when the East German Parliament appealed to the West German Parliament to join in a request that representatives of both bodies be admitted to the Four Power conference. This kind of question could give the Russians opportunity for interminable delay, and even a chance to win a minor victory; for if the West agreed to such a proposal they would be lumping Adenauer's freely elected West German Government and the satellite East German Government together, thereby undermining most of what has been done in West Germany in the course of the last eight years.

If the Berlin Conference ever does get underway it will start with no agreed agenda, and with about as little hope for fruitful results as any postwar conference with the Russians. And that adds up to very little hope indeed.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that well in advance of the start of any Foreign Ministers Conference, the climate of agreement is not exactly favorable - even as to where the meetings should be held. Somehow, these lines from Shakespeare's Julius Caesar come to mind: "What you have said I will consider; what you have to say I will with patience hear, and find a time both meet to hear and answer such high things."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday January 15, 1954

THis is the news:

The Chinese Communist radio says we will imperil the Korean truce if we take back 22-thousand Communist prisoners now held by the neutral Indians. And the Chinese say, if we actually free these men..(as we insist we will.) that will "destroy the truce." Radio Peiping says, its all an American plot to return the prisoners to the men who captured them. But the Indians--who made the decision--insist they will go through with their [redacted]. A spokesman said today: "This is not our plan. It is our decision." And he pointed out that when the prisoners are transfered next Wednesday, they will have yet another opportunity to change their minds..and return home.

In Washington the State Department insists the men will be freed.. and officials say they expect the Communists to do everything possible to create trouble [redacted] next week.

Here in New York, [redacted] the United Nations [redacted], that we cannot reply in [redacted] time to India's request for a special session of the General Assembly.

The Indians had set January 22 for the deadline..the day the Korean prisoners were to be released. We have also objected to the ruling by Assembly President Madame Pandit that nations that fail to reply by the deadline WILL be counted as approving the special session.

The State Department said today that the meeting of Big Four Representatives in Germany will be resumed in a day or two. The Department says the western allies expect these preliminary talks to be resumed with a discussion on where the Foreign Ministers will meet. There was no OFFICIAL indication whether we'll agree to the Russian demand that half the meetings be held in their sector of Berlin.

The air force said tonight we are going to send two "squadrons" of guided missiles..pilotless bombers..to Germany this year. The announcement says they'll be used for defense by the North Atlantic forces. This is part of our recently announced policy to be ready to retaliate instantly "and with great capacity" against any aggressor. We are not told how many pilotless bombers constitute a "squadron." Normally, a fighter squadron consists of 25 planes. But there is no indication of how many of these pilotless bombers will be sent. Unlike regular airplanes they are good for one flight..and do not return for further use. These pilotless bombers.. B-61 Matadors, are capable of carrying atomic explosives.

A House Committee today unanimously approved a bill creating A seperate Air Force academy. IT APPROVED Twnety six million dollars [redacted] to start work on it at an existing air base. It would then be moved to a permanent site. Estimates of the final cost range from 125 to 500 million dollars.

~~Chairman Hendrickson of a Senate committee investigating juvenile delinquency today asked for another 175-thousand dollars to continue investigating what he calls "a losing battle."~~

The McCarthy committee today heard Harvard Professor Wendell Furry acknowledge that he and five other Communists worked at a top secret radar project during World War Two. Furry refused to name any of his associates. He said:"I am not seeking to protect the guilty from prosecution..I wish merely to secure the innocent from persecution." Another member of the Harvard staff.. reasearch assistant Leon J. Kamin said he had been a Communist. He too, refused to name others. He said: "I do not think my duty to my country requires me to become a political informer." Senator McCarthy said he would recommend contempt citations against both men. Neither claimed the protection of the Fifth Amendment.

A non-partisan commission of 18 persons today recommended that Senators and Representatives raise their salaries from 15-thousand to $27,500 a year. The commission also recommends: that the Vice President and Speaker who now make $30,000 be raised to $40-thousand, plus Expenses. The justices of the supreme court would get an increase of $14,500 a year.. And the commission would have Congress provide an official mansion for the vice president.

The American Federation of Labor today told a House committee that "organized medicine" is destroying health insurance plans by charging fees "as high as the traffic will bear."

And Commerce Secretary Weeks says he will not permit the export of surplus butter to Russia, at prices lower than those paid by American housewives.

Edward R. Murrow: January 15, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

The question of what it takes to make a healthy climate in a nation was answered last night by the new Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in his first public address since his appointment. The climate is healthy, said Mr. Warren, "when men are free to explore all avenues of thought, no matter what prejudices may be aroused." He was speaking at a meeting of Columbia College alumni. The theme of Columbia's two-hundredth anniversary this year is: "Man's right to knowledge and the free use thereof" and this served also as the theme for the Justice's ~~address~~ speech.

Anything a Chief Justice has to say about civil liberties is bound to be interesting. What Justice Warren said had interest for some special reasons. It not only told what a healthy climate is in a nation, it also gave a prediction of what will be the climate in the Supreme Court, insofar as he will affect it as Chief Justice. # An outstanding issue before the country is the scope of freedom to be enjoyed by teachers. The Chief Justice spoke about this as a former Governor. The proposal of a loyalty oath for teachers in the University of California had found him at odds with the Board of Regents when it insisted on the oath. It was imposed over his objections, though later found invalid by the state Supreme Court. Inasmuch as the appointment of Mr. Warren awaits confirmation in the Senate, and questions about academic freedom may be raised there, the speech can count as a well-timed and careful presentation of his philosophy of freedom, especially freedom in the colleges and universities.

It was a speech in defense of dissent. "Dissenters" he said, "can let off steam". The greatest figures in American history always have recognized that the freedom to explore all avenues of thought is inherent in our system, he said. "The founding fathers themselves were not orthodox" he pointed out, "and recognized both the right and the value of dissent in their generation."

In view of the approaching confirmation proceedings, it is significant that Justice Warren presented his own views as being in the tradition of the court. "Free investigation and faithful experiment" is a phrase he culled from a Columbia law lecture by Chancellor Kent in 1794. And these, he said, were the ideals of the greatest justices of the court, Marshall, Holmes, Brandeis, Cardozo, Hughes and Stone. They were, he said, the guiding principles, too, of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and other great Presidents - and in the list he included President Eisenhower. "These men" he said, "did not merely mouth these principles, they believed them, they acted in accordance with them, they breathed them into our institutions.

In their endeavor to make freedom secure and permanent throughout the land, they all recognized that our universities and colleges must be the places where the false and the evil can be segregated from the good by the processes of free discussion and free inquiry. They recognized that the more turbulent the times the more essential the freedom of inquiry. We are living in such times."

Justice Warren said that as governor he had come to understand the manifold problems of the schools, financial and educational. "Everyone should understand these problems" he declared, and came up with an unusual picture of what he would like to see. "I am sure it would be appropriate" he said, "for the citizens of every community to gather in school buildings, city halls and courthouses, as you are gathered here, for serious and even prayerful discussion of the subject of this bi-centennial celebration - 'man's right to knowledge and the free use thereof.'"

Justice Warren did not rely only on the founding fathers to make his case for the civil liberties. He leaned heavily on the last two of his Republican predecessors, Chief Justices Hughes and Stone. In a proper judicial fashion he cited opinions they had handed down. "They realized" he said, "that orderly change was as important as stability... And they were not always on the popular side. That is often the case" he remarked, "where judges and public officials protect freedom of speech, of the press and of assembly." Perhaps the most timely citation was from the opinion of Chief Justice Hughes in DeJonge versus Oregon. Mr. Hughes had said: "The greater the importance of safeguarding the community from incitement to the overthrow of our institutions by force and violence, the more imperative the need to preserve inviolate the constitutional rights of free speech, free press and free assembly..."

Many of the newspaper headlines on the speech were pegged on Mr. Warren's assertion that we have a monopoly of freedom and that liberty, not communism, is the most contagious force in the world." No people of any race" he said -(and one may well pray that he is right about this) "will long remain slaves. Our power" he went on, "is in our diversity. Our power is in our freedom of thought and of research."

A Justice of the Supreme Court does not discuss in public any case on which he is likely to pass, and Justice Warren did not prejudice that principle. What he did was to recognize and affirm the broad liberal traditions of the American system and the court and identify himself with them. It must count as a sign of the times that in doing so he was making news.

In discussing Freedom, Edith Nourse Rogers once said:"If we define freedom we limit it. And if we limit it, we destroy it." George Truett earlier recognized this same problem but remarked:"There is a vast difference between toleration and liberty. Toleration is a concession; liberty is a right;toleration is a matter of expediency; liberty is a matter of principle."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Chinese Communist radio says we will imperil the Korean truce if we take back 22-thousand Communist prisoners now held by the neutral Indians. And the Chinese say if we actually free these men as we insist we will, that will "destroy the truce." Radio Peiping says its all an American plot to return the prisoners to the men who captured them. But the Indians who made the decision insist they will go through with their proposal. A spokesman said today: "This is not our plan. It is our decision." And he pointed out that when the prisoners are transferred next Wednesday they will have yet another opportunity to change their minds and return home.

In Washington the State Department insists the men will be freed and officials say they expect the Communists to do everything possible to create trouble next week.

Here in New York, we have informed the United Nations that we cannot reply in time to India's request for a special session of the General Assembly. The Indians had set January 22 for the deadline the day the Korean prisoners were to be released. We have also objected to the ruling by Assembly President Madame Pandit that nations that fail to reply by the deadline will be counted as approving the special session.

The State Department said today that the meeting of Big Four Representatives in Germany will be resumed in a day or two. The Department says the western allies expect these preliminary talks to be resumed with a discussion on where the Foreign Ministers will meet. There was no official indication whether we'll agree to the Russian demand that half the meetings be held in their sector of Berlin.

The air force said tonight we are going to send two "squadrons" of guided missiles, pilotless bombers to Germany this year. The announcement says they'll be used for defense by the North Atlantic forces. This is part of our recently announced policy to be ready to retaliate instantly "and with great capacity" against any aggressor. We are not told how many pilotless bombers constitute a "squadron." Normally, a fighter squadron consists of 25 planes. But there is no indication of how many of these pilotless bombers will be sent. Unlike regular airplanes they are good for one flight and do not return for further use. These pilotless bombers B-61 Matadors, are capable of carrying atomic explosives.

A House Committee today unanimously approved a bill creating a separate Air Force academy. It approved twenty six million dollars to start work on it at an existing air base. It would then be moved to a permanent site. Estimates of the final cost range from 125 to 500 million dollars.

The McCarthy committee today heard Harvard Professor Wendell Furry acknowlege that he and five other Communists worked at a top secret radar project during World War Two. Furry refused to name any of his associates. He said: "I am not seeking to protect the guilty from prosecution - I wish merely to secure the innocent from persecution." Another member of the Harvard staff - research assistant Leon J. Kamin said he had been a Communist. He too, refused to name others. He said: "I do not think my duty to my country requires me to become a political informer." Senator McCarthy said he would recommend contempt citations against both men. Neither claimed the protection of the Fifth Amendment.

A non-partisan commission of 18 persons today recommended that Senators and Representatives raise their salaries from 15-thousand to $27,500 a year. The commission also recommends: that the Vice President and Speaker who now make $30,000 be raised to $40-thousand plus expenses. The justices of the supreme court would get an increzse of $14,500 a year. And the commission would have Congress provide an official mansion for the vice president.

The American Federation of Labor today told a House committee that "organized medicine" is destroying health insurance plans by charging fees "as high as the traffic will bear."

And Commerce Secretary Weeks says he will not permit the export of surplus butter to Russia, at prices lower than those paid by American housewives.

The question of what it takes to make a healthy climate in a nation was answered last night by the new Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in his first public address since his appointment. The climate is healthy, said Mr. Warren, "when men are free to explore all avenues of thought, no matter what prejudices may be aroused." He was speaking at a meeting of Columbia College alumni. The theme of Columbia's two-hundredth anniversary this year is: "Man's right to knowledge and the free use thereof" and this served also as the theme for the Justice's speech.

Anything a Chief Justice has to say about civil liberties is bound to be interesting. What Justice Warren said had interest for some special reasons. It not only told what a h althy climate is in a nation, it also gave a prediction of what will be the climate in the Supreme Court, insofar as he will affect it as Chief Justice. An outstanding issue before the country is the scope of freedom to be enjoyed by teachers. The Chief Justice spoke about this, as a former Governor. The proposal of a loyalty oath for teachers in the University of California had found him at odds with the Board of Regents when it insisted on the oath. It was imposed over his objections, though later found invalid by the state Supreme Court. Inasmuch as the appointment of Mr. Warren awaits confirmation in the Senate, and questions about academic freedom may be riased there, the speech can count as a well-timed and careful presentation of his philosophy of freedom, especially freedom in the colleges and universities.

It was a speech in defense of dissent. "Dissenters" he said, "can let off steam." The greatest figures in American history always have recognized that the freedom to explore all avenues of thought is inherent in our system, he said. "The founding fathers themselves were not orthodox" he pointed out, "and recognized both the right and the value of dissent in their generation."

In view of the approaching confirmation proceedings, it is significant that Justice Warren presented his own views as being in the tradition of the court. "Free investigation and faithful experiment" is a phrase he culled from a Columbia law lecture by Chancellor Kent in 1794. And these, he said, were the ideals of the greatest justices of the court, Marshall, Holmes, Brandeis, Cardozo, Hughes and Stone. They were, he said, the guiding principles, too, of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and other great Presidents - and in the list he included President Eisenhower. "These men" he said, "did not merely mouth these principles, they believed them, they acted in accordance with them, they breathed them into our institutions. In their endeavor to make freedom secure and permanent throughout the land, they all recognized that our universities and colleges must be the places, where the false and the evil can be segregated from the good by the processes of free discussion and free inquiry. They recognized that the more turbulent the times the more essential the freedom of inquiry. We are living in such times."

Justice Warren said that as governor he had come to understand the manifold problems of the schools, financial and educational. "Everyone should understand these problems" he declared, and came up with an unusual picture of what he would like to see. "I am sure it would be appropriate" he said, "for the citizens of every community to gather in school buildings, city halls and courthouses, as you are gathered here, for serious and even prayerful discussion of the subject of this bi-centennial celebration - 'man's right to knowledge and the free use thereof.'"

Justice Warren did not rely only on the founding fathers to make his case for the civil liberties. He leaned heavily on the last two of his Republican predecessors, Chief Justices Hughes and Stone. In a proper judicial fashion he cited opinions they had handed down. "They realized" he said, "that orderly change was as important as stability. And they were not always on the popular side. That is often the case, he remarked, "where judges and public officials protect freedom of speech, of the press and of assembly." Perhaps the most timely citation was from the opinion of Chief Justice Hughes in DeJonge versus Oregon. Mr. Hughes had said: "The greater the importance of safeguarding the community from incitement to the overthrow of our institutions by force and violence, the more imperative the need to preserve inviolate the constitutional rights of free speech, free press and free assembly."

Many of the newspaper headlines on the speech were pegged on Mr. Warren's assertion that we have a monopoly of freedom and that liberty, not communism, is the most contagious force in the world." No people of any race he said and one may well pray that he is right about this, "will long remain slaves. Our power, he said, is in our diversity. Our power is in our freedom of thought and of research."

A Justice of the Supreme Court does not discuss in public any case on which he is likely to pass, and Justice Warren did not prejudice that principle. What he did was to recognize and affirm the broad liberal traditions of the American system and the court and identify himself with them. It must count as a sign of the times that in doing so he was making news.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: In discussing freedom, Edith Nourse Rogers once said: "If we define freedom we limit it. And if we limit it, we destroy it." George Truett earlier recognized this same problem but remarked: "There is a vast difference between toleration and liberty. Toleration is a concession; liberty is a right; toleration is a matter of expediency; liberty is a matter of principle."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday, January 18, 1954

This is the news:

The President today recommended to Congress that the government give limited support to private health insurance plans. He rejects the "regimentation" of medicine. But he feels that to protect American families against the "catastrophe" of prolonged major illnesses the federal government should put up 25-million dollars to re-insure private health plans.. to permit them to expand their benefits to members. The President also called for more federal aid to localities that build hospitals for the chronically ill, the disabled and rehabiliatation centers. And he wants more emphasis on helping the states rehabilitate the disabled. ~~The President relayed to Congress a number of facts on the nations health. Among them: 250-thousand persons become disabled every year; only 60-thousand return to productive lives. Fifty years ago the average life [redacted] was 49 years..now its 68 years. He says that in 1900 there were 676 deaths from infectious diseases for every 100 thousand persons in the nation..now there are only 66 deaths per one hundred thousand. In 1916 10 per cent of new babies died before they were a year old..now that's down to less than three per cent.....~~

The President SAID that 224-thousand persons died of cancer last year and unless this death rate is lowered we may expect some 25-million Americans to die of cancer. He also told Congress that 10-million Americans will sometime in their lives be hospitalized for mental illnesses.

The American Medical Association has no comment yet on the President's recommendations.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson told a Senate committee today that (IT) must wonder at what point the 140-million Americans who do not live on farms will rise up and demand outright elimination of all direct aid to agriculture. Benson (defended) the President's request for flexible and generally lower price supports on basic crops. He said the present progam has piled up huge surpluses and the government losses are likely to be "substantial and they might be staggering." He said the Administration will ask Congress to appropriate up to one billion dollars, for a three year period, to finance the shipment of our surplus farm commodities to our allies..as a form of foreign aid.

Bernard M. Shanley, special counsel to the president, said in a speech at Seton Hall today:"The President has a killing responsibility.

"He is aroused at all hours of the night and bothered at all hours of the the day with crisis after crisis from Korea, east Germany and the Middle East. His main complaint is that we don't give him enough time to think, as he puts it." Accordingly, Shanley said a half hour is now set aside in the morning, and again in the afternoon, to give Mr. Eisenhower the time he requires.

The President today sent Congress his plan to take away citizenship from persons convicted of advocating the oveerthrow of the government by force. Attorney General Brownell asked for drastic new penalities for persons convicted of harboring Communist fugitives or other federal offenders.

Secretary of State Dulles told a Senate committee he's not completely satisfied with the help other United Nations gave us in the Korean war. But, he said, with or without allies, we would have had to oppose Communist aggression in any event. And had we "gone it alone" in Korea Mr Dulles says it would have cost us many, many times as much in American lives and money. Mr. Dulles says the reason why the United Nations has not lived up to the high hopes held for the U.N. in 1945 are two: over-optomism and Soviet wrecking maunvers.

In Korea today the Chinese Communists failed to reply to India's decision to turn back disputed war prisoners to the side that captured them. This new transportation of prisoners begins tomorrow. We still insist we'll set free the 22-thousand Chinese and North Koreans who'll be turned over to us.

In Yugoslavia, Mee' Lohvan ~~Milovan~~ Djilas, who used to be regarded as Marshal Tito's logical successor, has been (STRIPPED) ~~stripped~~ of all party authority... ~~and~~ and will probably lose his job as president of the new parliament. Djilas admitted today that he had become too pro-western in his thinking.. that had this continued he might have become the head of an opposition party against Tito.

In Berlin, where ~~with~~ the Big Four powers agreed to open the foreign ministers meeting in the western sector and then move to the Soviet-controled sector, the Russians tonight started putting up propaganda posters against west German rearmament.

In Washington, the Supreme Court ruled today that the New York and Ohio courts were wrong when they banned two controversial movies... La Ronde.. because it was immoral.. and "M".. because it was supposed to be harmful. All nine justices agreed, with two Justices Black and Douglas making (IT) clear they believe the court should state flatly that movie censorship violates free speech and free press.

Edward R. Murrow: January 18, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

When five retired diplomats, men of considerable distinction and long service, agree upon a letter and send it to a newspaper - that is news. The letter appeared in yesterdays New York Times. It was signed by five men, and their credentials are impressive. Joseph C. Grew had 41 years in our foreign service, Ambassador to Switzerland, Turkey and Japan, onetime Under Secretary of State. Norman Armor, 33 years in the State Department, among other posts was Ambassador to Chile, Argentina and Spain; also an Assistant Secretary of State. Robert Woods Bliss, 33 years in the Department of State, onetime Chairman of the Board of Examiners for the Diplomatic Service, Minister to Sweden, Ambassador to Argentina. G. Howland Shaw, 27 years in the Department, Chief of the Division of Near Eastern Affairs, expert on personnel problems, member of the State Department's Policy Commission. William Phillips, 39 years in the Department of State, Assistant Secretary, Under Secretary, Ambassador to Belgium, Italy and Minister to Canada. Those were the five men who signed this letter. They are all now retired, and so far as we can discover no charges of disloyalty or subversion, responsible or otherwise, have been brought against them.

This is a summary of their letter. It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of our Foreign Service. Foreign governments and peoples have a right to look with confidence to our official representatives abroad, for the most authentic interpretation of American values, and the American point of view. Our President and Secretary of State must rely upon these same men, for accurate information concerning persons and events abroad. Their job is more difficult now, because the events to be reported on have become more complex and more difficult of analysys; more difficult too, because the emotional climate here at home has made "objective reporting unusually difficult." Our Foreign Service has been subjected to a series of attacks - with rare exceptions the justifications for these attacks has been so flimsy, as to have no standing in a court of law - producing no reasonable presumption of guilt. These attacks have had sinister results. An official abroad who makes an honest report and evaluation - a recommendation which he believes to be in the interests of the United States - may later on, find his loyalty and integrity questioned, be driven out of the service, and discredited for ever as a private citizen. This state of affairs is producing reports which are "either ambiguous or so cautious as to be deceiving." The letter states: "In this connection the history of Nazi and Fascist foreign services before the Second War, is pertinent."

The official records show that the Germans and Italians made repeated mistakes, some of them fatal, because [redacted] their representatives abroad reported to Rome and Berlin only what they thought would be pleasing, and in conformity with the prejudices of their superiors at home.

The five men who signed this letter agree that candidates for our foreign service should be carefully investigated before they are appointed - that their work should be under the exacting scrutiny of their professional superiors. But this is not what happens under the current procedure. The results of investigations are not evaluated by persons experienced in the foreign service, or even acquainted at first hand with conditions abroad. Undue importance is given to casual association with persons holding views not currently in fashion, or subscription to a periodical labelled as "liberal" - an easy path has been opened to even the anonymous informer. Again, the letter states: "It is relevant to inquire whether we are not laying the foundations of a foreign service competent to serve a totalitarian government rather than the government of the United States, as we have heretofore known it." That is a serious question raised by five men who have spent most of their lives at small pay in the service of their country. No one of them was forced out. They all retired from the foreign service at periods ranging from 1933 to '47.

These are not irresponsible men, fulminating or complaining because they lost their jobs. They are a pretty fair cross-section of what might be called our elder statesmen in the field of foreign affairs. And it is clear from their language, even though it still shows signs of their diplomatic training and names no names, that they are a deeply disturbed group of men. Their letter says: "Fear is playing an important part in American life at the present time. As a result, the self-confidence, the confidence in others, the sense of fair play, and the instinct to protect the rights of the non-conformist are - temporarily it is to be hoped - in abeyance."

As I read this letter, the five men who signed it are saying that political intimidation and the security and investigative processes of the State Department itself, combine to cause our representatives abroad to write their reports with a combination of timidity and ambiguity. They are saying that as a nation our leaders cannot act wisely unless they are informed fully and that present practises produce fear in our foreign service, and reports that are either distorted or diluted. The men who signed this letter are only five of the many who have served long and honorably in our foreign service. But it will be interesting to see if five men of equal stature and experience can be found to contend their conclusions. This reporter's limited experience with foreign service officers now on post leads him to believe that this letter in no wise overstates the case.

The five men who signed that letter I referred to a moment ago, collectively can point to a record of nearly two hundred years service in the State Department. It seemed to me ~~they~~ the five men who signed that were trying to underline James Russell Lowell's observation that:"One thorn of experience, can be worth a whole wilderness of warning." But perhaps it's as Frederick Lewis Allen once said:"It takes longer to hard boil a man, than an egg."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, JANUARY 18, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President today recommended to Congress that the government give limited support to private health insurance plans. He rejects the "regimentation" of medicine. But he feels that to protect American families against the "catastrophe of pro.onged major illnesses the federal government should put up 25-million dollars to re-insure private health plans to permit them to expand their benfits to members. The President also called for more federal aid to localities that build hospitals for the chronically ill, the disabled and rehabilitation centers. And he wants more emphasis on helping the states rehabilitate the disabled. The President said that 224-thousand persons died of cancer last year and unless this death rate is lowered we may expect some 25-million Americans to die of cancer. He also told Congress that 10-million Americans will sometime in their lives be hospitalized for mental illnesses. The American Medical Association has no comment yet on the President's recommendations.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson told a Senate committee today that it must wonder at what point the 140-million Americans who do not live on farms will rise up and demand outright elimination of all direct aid to agriculture. Benson defended the President's request for flexible and generally lower price supports on basic crops. He said the present program has piled up huge surpluses and the government losses are likely to be "substantial and they might be staggering." He said the Administration will ask Congress to appropriate up to one billion dollars, for a three year period, to finance the shipment of our surplus farm commodities to our allies as a form of foreign aid.

Bernard M. Shanley, special counsel to the president, said in a speech at Seton Hall today: "The President has a killing responsibility. "He is aroused at all hours of the night and bothered at all hours of the day with crisis after crisis from Korea, east Germany and the Middle East. His main complaint is that we don't give him enough time to think, as he puts it." Accordingly, Shanley said a half hour is now set aside in the morning, and again in the afternoon, to give Mr. Eisenhower the time he requires.

The President today sent Congress his plan to take away citizenship from persons convicted of advocating the overthrow of the government by force. Attorney General Brownell asked for drastic new penalties for persons convicted of harboring Communist fugitives or other federal offenders.

Secretary of State Dulles told a Senate committee he's not completely satisfied with the help other United Nations gave us in the Korean war. But, he said, with or without allies, we would have had to oppose Communist aggression in any event. And had we "gone it alone" in Korea, Mr. Dulles says it would have cost us many, many times as much in American lives and money. Mr. Dulles says the reason why the United Nations has not lived up to the high hopes held for the U.N. in 1945 are two: over-optimism and Soviet wrecking manuevers.

In Korea today the Chinese Communists failed to reply to India's decision to turn back disputed war prisoners to the side that captured them. This new transportation of prisoners begins tomorrow. We still insist we'll set free the 22-thousand Chinese and North Koreans who'll be turned over to us.

In Yugoslavia, Milovan Djilas, who used to be regarded as Marshal Tito's logical successor, has been stripped of all party authority and will probably lose his job as president of the new parliament. Djilas admitted today that he had become too pro-western in his thinking - that had this continued, he might have become t e head of an opposition party against Tito.

In Berlin, where the Big Four powers agreed to open the foreign ministers meeting in the western sector and then move to the Soviet-controlled sector, the Russians tonight started putting up propaganda posters against west German rearmament.

In Washington, the Supreme Court ruled today that the New York and Ohio Courts were wrong when they banned two controversial movies: "La Ronde" because it was immoral and "M" because it was supposed to be harmful. All nine justices agreed, with two Justices,Black and Douglas, making it clear they believe the court should state flatly that movie censorship violates free speech and free press.

When five retired diplomats, men of considerable distinction and long service, agree upon a letter and send it to a newspaper - that is news. The letter appeared in yesterday's New York Times. It was signed by five men, and their credentials are impressive. Joseph C. Grew had 41 years in our foreign service, Ambassador to Switzerland, Turkey and Japan, onetime Undersecretary of State. Norman Armor, 33 years in the State Department, among other posts, was Ambassador to Chil, Argentina and Spain; also an Assistant Secretary of State. Robert Woods Bliss, 33 years in the Department of State, onetime Chairman of the Board of Examiners for the Diplomatic Service, Minister to Sweden, Ambassador to Argentina. G.Howlland Shaw, 27 years in the Department, Chief of the Division of Near Eastern Affairs, expert on personnel problems, member of the State Department's Policy Commission. William Phillips, 39 years in the Department of State, Assistant Secretary, Under Secretary, Ambassador to Belgium, Italy and Minister to Canada. Those were the five men who signed this letter. They are all now retired, and so far as we can discover no charges of disloyalty or subversion, responsible or otherwise, have been brought against them.

This is a summary of their letter: It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of our Foreign Service. Foreign governments and peoples have a right to look with confidence to our official representatives abroad for the most authentic interpretation of American values and the American point of view. Our President and Secretary of State must rely upon these same men for accurate information concerning persons and events abroad. Their job is more difficult now, because the events to be reported on have become more complex and more difficult of analysis; more difficult too, because the emotional climate here at home has made "objective reporting unusually difficult." Our Foreign Service has been subjected to a series of attacks - with rare exceptions the justification for these attacks has been so flimsy as to have no standing in a court of law - producing no reasonable presumption of guilt. These attacks have had sinister results. An official abroad who makes an honest report and evaluation - a recommendation which he believes to be in the interests of the United States may later on find his loyalty and integrity questioned, be driven out of the service, and discredited forever as a private citizen. This state of affairs is producing reports which are "either ambiguous or so cautious as to be deceiving." The letter states: "In this connection the history of Nazi and Fascist foreign services before the Second War is pertinent."

The official records show that the Germans and Italians made repeated mistakes, some of them fatal, because their representatives abroad reported to Rome and Berlin only what they thought would be pleasing, and in conformity with the prejudices of their superiors at home.

The five men who signed this letter agree that candidates for our foreign service should be carefully investigated before they are appointed - that their work should be under the exacting scrutiny of their professional superiors. But this is not what happens under the current procedure. The results of investigations are not evaluated by persons experienced in the foreign service, or even acquainted at first hand with conditions abroad. Undue importance is given to casual association with persons holding views not currently in fashion, or subscription to a periodical labelled as "liberal" - an easy path has been opened to even the anonymous informer. Again, the letter states: "It is relevant to inquire whether we are not laying the foundations of a foreign service competent to serve a totalitarian government rather than the government of the United States, as we have heretofore known it." That is a serious question raised by five men who have spent most of their lives at small pay in the service of their country. No one of them was forced out. They all retired from the foreign service at periods ranging from 1933 to '47.

These are not irresponsible men, fulminating or complaining because they lost their jobs. They are a pretty fair cross-section of what might be called our elder statesmen in the field of foreign affairs. And it is clear from their language, eve though it still shows signs of their diplomatic training and names no names, that they are a deeply disturbed group of men. Their letter says: "Fear is playing an important part in American life at the present time. As a result, the self-confidence, the confidence in others, the sense of fair play, and the instinct to protect the rights of the non-conformist are - temporarily it is to be hoped - in abeyance."

As I read this letter, the five men who signed it are saying that political intimidation and the security and investigative processes of the State Department itself, combine to cause our representatives abroad to write their reports with a combination of timidity and ambiguity. They are saying that as a nation our leaders cannot act wisely unless they are informed fully and that present practices produce fear in our foreign service, and reports that are either distorted or diluted. The men who signed this letter are only five of the many who have served long and honorably in our foreign service. But it will be interesting to see if five men of equal stature and experience can be found to contend their conclusions. This reporter's limited experience with foreign service officers now on post leads him to believe that this letter in no wise overstates the case.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The five men who signed that letter I referred to a moment ago, collectively can point to a record of nearly two hundred years service in the State Department. It seemed to me they were trying to underline James Russell Lowell's observation that "One thorn of experience can be worth a whole wilderness of warning." But perhaps it's as Frederick Lewis Allen once said: "It takes longer to hard boil a man than an egg."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday Jan. 19, 1954

This is the news:

The Indians have started to release anti-Communist prisoners in Korea. About an hour ago the first men were released. And a few minutes ago they started arriving in allied territory to the south. They came out of their compound orderly and singing. Then they formed ranks for the mile and a half march to the southern limit of the neutral zone. The release of these men came after a night in which the Communists bitterly protested their release, and then made a last minute effort.. through loudspeaker broadcasts.. to convince their former troops to come home..to march north. General Hull, the allied far East commander, says these men and the rest of the 22-thousand to be released, will be set free as civilians at midnight Friday.

As India started returning the Chinese and North Korean prisoners to the allied command, an Indian diplomat suggested that it's up to the United States to decide whether there will be further violence in Korea. Krishna Menon, who presented to the United Nations the formula that led to the armistice, said in London: "Its up to the United States to avoid friction which could lead to violence." And he repeated the Indian view, that we will be violating the armistice if we release the anti-Communist prisoners.

In Washington today the Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved the mutual defense treaty with South Korea. But it voted to limit our pledge of armed assistance to South Korea, to cases "of external armed attack" on the land we consider to be under South Korean control. This is a warning that we will not support any South Korean attacks.

Secretary of State Dulles met again today with Soviet Ambassador Zarubin to discuss the President's proposal for a ~~pool~~ Pool of atomic energy for peaceful uses. [redacted] Later, Mr. Dulles announced he'll continue the discussions in Berlin, with Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov. The Secretary also said that if the Russians use the Berlin meeting to pursue their past policy of trying to divide the allies, the meetings will be futile and a waste of time. But--he said--if the Russians come to Berlin in a constructive mood..and want to negotiate on Germany and Austria.. then we will be "responsive" and the Berlin conference could have "a large historical signifiaance."

In the Soviet Union today the controlled press is telling the Russian people that America's policy of strength, ultimately leads to war.. and colossal destruction. Soviet newspapers are saying that the only way to solve international controversies is through negotiation "based on a sober calculation of the rights and interests of big and small countries."

[redacted]

The Senate Interior Committee voted today to approve statehood for Hawaii...and for Alaska.

Republican Senator Mundt of South Dakota today told Secretary of Agriculture Benson that we should try to barter and exchange "before we talk about giving-away" part of our food surpluses. [redacted]

Benson said there is no intention of giving away one billion dollars worth of government food surpluses. He said: "A good part of it should be sold."

The government reported today that 467-thousand workers filed initial unemployment benefit claims during the second week of January.. the largest weekly figure since August of 1945 (when World War Two ended.) [redacted]

The Justice Department today ended a four year anti-trust civil suit against the A and P food chain. The government gave up its effort to break up the chain. And A. and P. agreed to dissolve a subsidiary that buys fresh fruits and vegetables. [redacted] The subsidiary was accused of buying for A and P at the same time it was selling to competitors. [redacted]

The Senate Commerce Committee today approved the nomination of Robert E. Lee to be a member of t he Federal Communications Commission.

Chairman Wolverton of a House committee investigating public health said today he hopes the American Medical Association will come forward with "a constructive program for helping average Americans meet heavy medical expenses." Dr. Edward J. McCormick, president of the A.M.A., says he is not sure private health insurance organizations need a government re-insurance program..as proposed by Mr. Eisenhower. Wolverton says Dr. McCormick's statement indicates "a total failure to recognize the serious problem that exists for the average citizen."

Edward R. Murrow: January 19, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

The issue of prisoners in the Korean war has been the hardest to handle amicably that has confronted the United Nations command. The Geneva Convention about prisoners of war does not specifically establish the right of prisoners to refuse repatriation at the end of a war. It doesn't forbid it, but it doesn't authorize it. At the time the convention was written it apparently did not occur to the negotiators that recruits might be forced into an army, and made to fight for a regime that they detested. The negotiators did everything they thought of to assure the rights of prisoners, but this was in 1925, before the development of the ideological struggles of the present time. The spirit of the convention was to assure to prisoners every humane right. The United Nations have appealed to that spirit in insisting that prisoners must have the option to refuse to return to their country.

The Communists made a great play of the fact that the Geneva convention did not provide for this. Their strategy was understandable. For some fifty thousand prisoners in U.N. camps were on record as refusing to return to their countries - Communist China and North Korea. A large number stated they would resist repatriation by violence. This was sensational. It was like a plebiscite held among the tyrannized Chinese and North Koreans, and it was one of the worst black eyes the Communist regimes could receive. So it was explicable that the Communists should seize upon anything and everything to try to get their prisoners back.

But the Communist case about the Geneva convention had been riddled by the Soviet Union itself. For in at least two armistice agreements on the Eastern Front the Soviet Government offered precisely what the United States proposed - the right of prisoners not to return to their former countries.

When the armistice was drawn up, the Communists were told that the United Nations would insist on a fixed date when prisoners refusing repatriation would have to be set free. They not only were told so, they knew that the General Assembly in December 1952 had voted overwhelmingly for this principle. Even so, they tried to slip in a provision which would postpone the release of unrepatriated prisoners until after a political conference had passed on the question. As it turned out a political conference was not held, so this provision did not become operative. General Thimayya, Indian chairman of the Neutral Repatriation Commission, now states that the prisoners should not be set free without agreement on both sides. But he also finds that his commission has no right to continue in custody of the men. The Indian argument is, that unforeseen circumstances have changed things. Explanations to prisoners have not been carried through as planned. And there has been no meeting of a political conference. But the United Nations thinks the armistice terms perfectly clear. They say in paragraph eleven: "The Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission shall declare the relief from prisoner-of-war status, to civilian status, of any prisoners of war, who have not exercised their right to be repatriated, and for whom no other disposition has been agreed to by the political conference, within one hundred and twenty days, after the Neutral Repatriation Commission has assumed custody." That is, the U.N. thinks General Thimayya's commission should do the releasing, since no other disposition has been made by the political commission. But since the commission isn't doing it, the United Nations is, on Friday, when 120 days are up.

The Communists can now be expected to shout to high heaven, and are sure to be quoting General Thimayya that the U.N. has violated the armistice agreement. They have threatened "grave consequences." But it may be doubted that they mean the war in Korea will be resumed. They know that in that event the United Nations will carry the war beyond the Korean border.

They have been authoritatively warned that this will happen. The Communists may think that Asian opinion would agree with General Thimayya sufficiently, to blame such a war on the United Nations. But the fact cannot be hidden that if Communist China invites war, it would be over the right to get back fourteen thousand Chinese, who have proclaimed that they refuse to go back to live under communism. That would be a poor reason to fight a war, and would be so regarded anywhere, Asia included.

Two other considerations come to mind that make resumption of the Korean war appear unlikely. One is that Communist China wants admission to the United Nations and wants wider recognition in the West. If it invites war with the United Nations the prospect for both vanishes. The other reason is that the Big Four Berlin conference probably would automatically fail, and the whole world would see that the fault was China's. Whatever is to be expected from the Berlin conference, one thing is sure, both Moscow and Peiping count on making any failure appear to be the fault of the Western Powers.

So the United Nations seems likely to come through the trials over the liberation of anti-communist prisoners without catastrophe. The one legitimate gripe the Communists had, was when the Korean Republic released twenty-seven thousand North Korean prisoners without authority. If the Communists did not act in retaliation against that, it would be illogical to retaliate against a great liberation that fulfils the terms of the armistice.

The Korean prisoner exchange is further evidence that the problems of peace are often no less involved than the problems of war. But in all negotiation, Dale Carnegie was right when he said:"When dealing with people let us remember we are not dealing with creatures of logic. We are dealing with creatures of emotion, creatures bustling with prejudices and motivated by pride and vanity."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Indians have started to release anti-Communist prisoners in Korea. About an hour ago the first men were released and a few minutes ago they started arriving in allied territory to the south. They came out of their compound orderly and singing. Then they formed ranks for the mile and a half march to the southern limit of the neutral zone. The release of these men came after a night in which the Communists bitterly protested their release and then made a last minute effort through loudspeaker broadcasts to convince their former troops to come home to march north. General Hull, the allied Far East commander, says these men and the rest of the 22-thousand to be released, will be set free as civilians at midnight Friday.

An India started returning the Chinese and North Korean prisoners to the allied command an Indian diplomat suggested that it's up to the United States to decide whether there will be further violence in Korea. Krishna Menon, who presented to the United Nations the formula that led to the armistice, said in London: "Its up to the United States to avoid friction which could lead to violence." And he repeated the Indian view that we will be violating the armistice if we release the anti-Communist prisoners.

In Washington today the Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved the mutual defense treaty with South Korea. But it voted to limit our pledge of armed assistance to South Korea to cases "of external armed attack" on the land we consider to be under South Korean control. This is a warning that we will not support any South Korean attacks.

Secretary of State Dulles met again today with Soviet Ambassador Zarubin to discuss the President's proposal for a pool of atomic energy for peaceful uses. Later, Mr. Dulles announced he'll continue the discussions in Berlin with Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov. The Secretary also said that if the Russians use the Berlin meeting to pursue their past policy of trying to divide the allies the meeting will be futile and a waste of time. But, he said, if the Russians come to Berlin in a constructive mood and want to negotiate on Germany and Austria then we will be "responsive" and the Berlin conference could have "a large historical significance."

In the Soviet Union today the controlled press is telling the Russian people that America's policy of strength ultimately leads to war and colossal destruction. Soviet newspapers are saying that the only way to solve international controversies is through negotiation "based on a sober calculation of the rights and interests of big and small countries."

The Senate Interior Committee voted today to approve statehood for Hawaii and for Alaska.

Republican Senator Mundt of South Dakota today told Secretary of Agriculture Benson that we should try to barter and exchange "before we talk about giving away" part of our food surpluses. Benson said there is no intention of giving away one billion dollars worth of government food surpluses. He said: "A good part of it should be sold."

The government reported today that 467-thousand workers filed initial unemployment benefit claims during the second week of January - the largest weekly figure since August of 1945 when World War Two ended.

The Justice Department today ended a four year anti-trust civil suit against the A and P food chain. The government gave up its effort to break up the chain. And A and P agreed to dissolve a subsidiary that buys fresh fruits and vegetables. The subsidiary was accused of buying for A and P at the same time it was selling to competitors.

The Senate Commerce Committee today approved the nomination of Robert E. Lee to be a member of the Federal Communications Commission.

Chairman Wolverton of a House committee investigating public health said today he hopes the American Medical Association will come forward with "a constructive program for helping average Americans meet heavy medical expenses." Dr. Edward J. McCormick, president of the AMA says he is not sure private health insurance organizations need a government re-insurance program as proposed by Mr. Eisenhower. Wolverton says Dr. McCormick's statement indicates "a total failure to recognize the serious problem that exists for the average citizen."

The issue of prisoners in the Korean war has been the hardest to handle amicably that has confronted the United Nations command. The Geneva Convention about prisoners of war does not specifically establish the right of prisoners to refuse repatriation at the end of a war. It doesn't forbid it, but it doesn't authorize it. At the time the convention was written it apparently did not occur to the negotiators that recruits might be forced into an army, and made to fight for a regime that they detested. The negotiators did everything they thought of to assure the rights of prisoners, but this was in 1925, before the development of the ideological struggles of the present time. The spirit of the convention was to assure to prisoners every humane right. The United Nations have appealed to that spirit in insisting that prisoners must have the option to refuse to return to their country.

The Communists made a great play of the fact that the Geneva convention did not provide for this. Their strategy was understandable. For some fifty thousand prisoners in U.N. camps were on record as refusing to return to their countries - Communist China and North Korea. A large number stated they would resist repatriation by violence. This was sensational. It was like a plebiscite held among the tyrannized Chinese and North Koreans, and it was one of the worst black eyes the Communist regimes could receive. So it was explicable that the Communists should seize upon anything and everything to try to get their prisoners back. But the Communist case about the Geneva convention had been riddled by the Soviet Union itself. For in at least two armistice agreements on the Eastern Front the Soviet Government offered precisely what the United States proposed - the right of prisoners not to return to their former countries.

When the armistice was drawn up, the Communists were told that the United Nations would insist on a fixed date when prisoners refusing repatriation would have to be set free. They not only were told so, they knew that the General Assembly in December 1952 had voted overshelmingly for this principle. Even so, they tried to slip in a provision which would postpone the release of unrepatriated prisoners until after a political conference had passed on the question. As it turned out a political conference was not held, so this provision did not become operative. General Thimaya, Indian chairman of the Neutral Repatriation Commission now states that the prisoners should not be set free without agreement on both sides. But he also finds that his commission has no right to continue in custody of the men. The Indian argument is that unforeseen circumstances have changed things. Explanations to prisoners have not been carried through as planned. And there has been no meeting of a political conference. But the United Nations thinks the armistice terms perfectly clear. They say in paragraph eleven: "The Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission shall declare the relief from prisoner-of-war status, to civilian status, of any prisoners of war who have not exercised their right to be repatriated, and for whom no other disposition has been agreed to by the political conference, within one hundred and twenty days after the Neutral Repatriation Commission has assumed custody." That is, the UN thinks General Thimayya's commission should do the releasing, since no other disposition has been made by the political commission. But since the commission isn't doing it, the United Nations is, on Friday, when 120 days are up.

The Communist can now be expected to shout to high heaven, and are sure to be quoting General Thimayya that the U.N. has violated the armistice agreement. They have threatened "grave consequences." But it may be doubted that they mean the war in Korea will be resumed. They know that in that event the United Nations will carry the war beyond the Korean border. They have been authoritatively warned that this will happen. The Communists may think that Asian opinion would agree with General Thimayya sufficiently, to blame such a war on the United Nations. But the fact cannot be hidden that if Communist China invites war, it would be over the right to get back fourteen thousand Chinese, who have proclaimed that they refuse to go back to live under communism. That would be a poor reason to fight a war, and would be so regarded anywhere, Asia included.

Two other considerations come to mind that make resumption of the Korean war appear unlikely. One is that Communist China wants admission to the United Nations and wants wider recognition in the West. If it invites war with the United Nations the prospect for both vanishes. The other reason is that the Big Four Berlin conference probably would automatically fail, and the whole world would see that the fault was China's. Whatever is to be expected from the Berlin conference, one thing is sure, both Moscow and Peiping count on making any failure appear to be the fault of the Western Powers.

So the United Nations seems likely to come through the trials over the liberation of anti-communist prisoners without catastrophe. The one legitimate gripe the Communists had, was when the Korean Republic released twenty-seven thousand North Korean prisoners without authority. If the Communists did not act in retaliation against that, it would be illogical to retaliate against a great liberation that fulfils the terms of the armistice.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The Korean prisoner exchange is further evidence that the problems of peace are often no less involved than the problems of war. But in all negotiation, Dale Carnegie was right when he said: "When dealing with people let us remember we are not dealing with creatures of logic. We are dealing with creatures of emotion, creatures bustling with prejudices and motivated by pride and vanity."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday, January 20, 1954

This is the news:

The last of the anti-Communist prisoners of war held by the Indians in Korea have now been turned over to the allies. We now hold almost 22-thousand Chinese and North Koreans who refused to return to their Communist commanders. The return of these men was completed without a major incident. And Secretary of State Dulles--in Washington--says this has added "a new principle of humanity to the hard rules of war." He said: "We have stood fast for the right (refering to the return of the men who did not want to go home) and it has prevailed." Mr. Dulles also said recognition is due Indian General Thimaya, and the Swedish and Swiss members of the neutral repatriation team for their patience and courage in a difficult task.

The Communists are still complaining. A North Korean broadcast says the return of the prisoners to the allied zone "destroyed " the armistice. The North Korean radio says our troops surrounded the anti-Communist prisoner camp and took the men by force. This is not true.

The Chinese Communist radio again calls the release of the prisoners illegal...and talks of "mass kidnapping" by "American directed agents." Radio Peiping says: "The American side will pay dearly for its criminal acts." We intend to free all of these 22-thousand men. And the Indians made it clear today that shortly after midnight on Friday, they will give up their control of some 320 prisoners captured by the Communists..including 21 Americans. The Communists refuse to take these men back. But the Indians say they will not hold any of them in custody after midnight Friday

In New Delhi, Madame Pandit, the president of the United Nations General Assembly, says there is still a need for an Assembly meeting. She says Korea still has a number of problems that must be settled.

In Indo-China today, French union forces, without oppostition, captured the Mekong river port that enemy forces captured recently. This means that a big part of the gash the guerrillas had cut across the waist of Laos has now been sealed.

~~And in North Africa today, the French rushed troops and police reinforcements to the border separating French and Spanish Morocco... This followed a French warning to Spain not to try to the split French Morocco from the realm of the Sultan of Rabat.~~

In Paris, Foreign Minister Bidault told reporters that the French delegation "will not engage in bargaining" at the Berlin foreign ministers conference. Bidault says: "bargaining is not a good policy.. and nothing will be changed in the positions adopted by the French government."

A spokesman for the British foreign office says Great Britain has not been invited to join the scheduled American-Russian talks on the President's proposal for an international pool of atomic energy for peaceful purposes. Secretary of State Dulles intends to discuss this at Berlin with Soviet Foreign Minister [redacted] Molotov.

The Dutch parliament today completed ratification of the European army treaty. The West German parliament has also approved..but is waiting for a Supreme court test on its legality. The Belgian lower house has approved the treaty but the French, Italian and Luxembourg parliaments have not yet started action on the treaty.

Mr. Eisenhower said today that the action of the Dutch parliament is a move toward "permanent peace and prosperity."

The President today celebrated his first year in the White House. And he received a gift from his cabinet: a [redacted] crystal cup [redacted]

3A

depicting the highlights of his career,

The Senate tonight voted to let the United States join Canada in building the disputed St. Lawrence Seaway.. an issue that has been discussed for more than 20 years. The seaway would be a 27-foot-deep waterway in the St. Lawrence River from the Atlantic to the Great Lakes. The bill now goes to the House.

de~~picting the highlights of his career.~~

~~Democratic Senator George suggested today that the Republicans.. who cannot agree on differences over the Bricker amendment to the Constitution, should let the Senate take a vote to decide the issue. But Republican Senate Leader Knowland says he has not given up hopes of a compromise.~~

Republican Representative Clardy of Michigan said today that Louis J. Russell was fired as chief investigator for the House un-American activities committee after he borrowed $300 from Movie Actor Edward G. Robinson. Clardy says Robinson, a former witness before the committee, is not accused of doing anything wrong. He said the chief complaint against Russell is that he used "atrociously bad judgement."

Former Brigadier General Telford Taylor says Senator McCarthy would be "destroyed" by an investigation of McCarthy's charges that a spy ring existed until recently in the signal corps at Fort Monmouth. In a Newsweek interview, McCarthy says the committee will call Taylor to tell what he knows "about Communist infiltration and espionage at Fort Monmouth."

The House Veterans Committee was told today that the purpose of the D.A.V.--the Disabled American Veterans--is to help veterans get the government benefits due them, and not to provide direct relief for the men. D.A.V. officials protested that they were RECENTLY given a "black eye" by a New York state committee that, in effect, called them part of a "charity racket." They say the New York committee refused them a "decent opportunity to refute misinformation." State Senator Tompkins of New York says this is not true.

In Canada, Donald Ritchie, the key figure in the Walter Reuther shooting case, said today he has no knowledge of the attempted assassination of Reuther. Detroit officials says this statement is no surprise.."after all Ritchie is a defendent in the case."

~~The Soft Coal miners welfare fund said today it would not longer pay relief benefits to some 35 thousand disabled miners and their dependents. The fund officials says this is the responsibility of federal and state agencies. The decision will not effect pensions now being paid to coal miners.~~ recommended that Arthur Godfrey's license to fly be suspended [redacted] because of a lack of medical clearance [redacted]. But Godfrey submitted a medical okay, and apparently this will be cleared up. But the C.A.A. also called Godfrey a reckless flyer and recommended that he be kept on the ground for a while . The C.A.A... (which enforces aviation policy). asked the Civil Aeronautics Board. (which sets aviation policy.) to suspend Godfrey's license as long as necessary. [redacted] It wants him punished for t[redacted] HIS [redacted] from the Teterboro, New Jersey airport two weeks ago. The C.A.A. says [redacted] Godfrey was careless.. created a collission hazard. Godfrey [redacted]m blames a cross-wind for his near miss of the control tower.

Here in New York, the Civil Aeronautics Administration TODAY [redacted]

THREE [redacted] former [redacted]ll's hall of fame [redacted] died January 11th... Bill Dickey, the fo mer Yankee catch[redacted] Terry [redacted] the former Giant first b[redacted]man.

The case of Mehlovan Jaylash might serve to illustrate how a picture of a pretty woman can distort the news. Jaylash was Vice President of Yugoslavia, a brilliant writer, widely regarded as Marshal Tito's ~~MAX~~ successor. The other day he was flung out of office. Many of the news stories led with the fact that Jaylash had criticized the wives of high officials in Belgrade for snubbing the young and pretty wife of a General. And there was the picture of the wife to prove it. Jaylash did criticize the wives, but that wasn't the reason he was fired. What actually happened was that Jaylash had written a long series of articles in the official newspaper, in which he advocated less Communist Party discipline, more and broader individual rights for Yugoslav citizens. The dominant theme of these articles was the defense of the individual against the Party and State machines. His writings were strongly influenced by the writings of Thomas Jefferson.

This was the first purge in the inner circle of the Yugoslav high command. It reflected the conflict between the protestations about democratic socialism and the continuing bureaucracy, suppression, and the tight control of the Communist Party. Many times in the past Jaylash has been the front man for Marshal Tito, but this time it appears he got too far out in front. The removal of Jaylash must be regarded as a setback for those forces in Yugoslavia who were trying to liberalize and humanize the machinery of government. He was the principal theoritician or "egghead" of the Party, and even though he is now out of office the argument about his policies and proposals will continue.

There is an argument of a different kind going on in Czechoslovakia. Alexander Kendrick tells me that the State Surveying and Cartographical Institute of Prague published what was called "A Small Political Atlas of the World"; a weekly magazine in Prague reviewed this publication, contending that neither the drawing nor the printing of many of the maps was exact - lines of latitude and longtitude have a drunken appearance, and sway hither and yon. The sea appears to have engulfed the land in many places. Montenegro is entirely missing. The frontiers between Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil are incorrect. Togoland doesn't appear anywhere, neither does Israel. A large chunk of land around Calcutta appears to have fallen into the Bay of Bengal. The map-making institute has struck back at the magazine by charging it with "destructive criticism". The magazine forthwith dug up two more errors, including the fact that Greece is shown as a part of Turkey. The government institute for the making of maps then brought up its big guns, and charged the magazine with "being influenced by reactionary elements, and being an admirer of bourgeois, objectivist cartography." No doubt the world's geographers are awaiting the next move in this ideological struggle, which clearly transcends all boundary lines. The Communists contend that they have a map or blueprint of the future, but they are unable accurately to map the present.

Here at home we are reading more books, or at least we're buying more of them. Publishers' Weekly says that last year twelve thousand and fifty new books and new editions were published. We bought more religious books during the past year than books in any other field. The best seller list of non-fiction contained seven out of ten titles having to do with religious subjects. The revised standard version of the Holy Bible led the list with a sale of over one million copies last year. The best seller on the fiction list was also a religious book, "The Robe".

The sale of fiction was up six percent, compared to 1952. We bought more mysteries and science fiction, but we bought even more Westerns. Books about business sold twenty-two percent more than in 1952, and that was the biggest increase in the non-fiction field. The sale of books having to do with education and music went down. Books on education dropped eighteen percent.

I am sure there is some moral, some lesson to be learned from these figures, but I don't know what it is.

We were talking of books. Herman Melville who wrote Moby Dick and was quite expert on whales once remarked:"Such and so magnifying is the virtue of a large and liberal theme. We expand to its bulk. To produce a mighty book you must choose a mighty theme. No great and enduring volume can ever be written on the flea, though many there may be who have tried.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The last of the anti-Communist prisoners of war held by the Indians in Korea have now been turned over to the allies. We now hold almost 22-thousand Chinese and North Koreans who refused to return to their Communist commanders. The return of these men was completed without a major incident. And Secretary of State Dulles in Washington says this has added "a new principle of humanity to the hard rules of war." He said: "We have stood fast for the right (referring to the return of the men who did not want to go home) and it has prevailed." Mr. Dulles also said recognition is due Indian General Thimaya and the Swedish and Swiss members of the neutral repatriation team for their patience and courage in a difficult task.

The Communists are still complaining. A North Korean broadcast says the return of the prisoners to the allied zone "destroyed" the armistice. The North Korean radio says our troops surrounded the anti-Communist prisoner camp and took the men by force. This is not true.

The Chinese Communist radio again calls the release of the prisoners illegal and talks of "mass kidnapping" by "American directed agents." Radio Peiping says: "The American side will pay dearly for its criminal acts." We intend to free all of these 22-thousand men. And the Indians made it clear today that shortly after midnight on Friday they will give up their control of some 320 prisoners captured by the Communists - including 21 Americans. The Communists refuse to take these men back. But the Indians say they will not hold any of them in custody after midnight Friday.

In New Delhi, Madame Pandit, the president of the United Nations General Assembly, says there is still a need for an Assembly meeting. She says Korea still has a number of problems that must be settled.

In Indo-China today, French union forces, without opposition, captured the Mekong river port that enemy forces captured recently. This means that a big part of the gash the guerrillas had cut across the waist of Laos has not been sealed.

In Paris, Foreign Minister Bidault told reporters that the French delegation "will not engage in bargaining" at the Berlin foreign ministers conference. Bidault says: "bargaining is not a good policy and nothing will be changed in the positions adopted by the French government."

A spokesman for the British foreign office says Great Britain has not been invited to join the scheduled American-Russian talks on the President's proposal for an international pool of atomic energy for peaceful purposes. Secretary of State Dulles intends to discuss this at Berlin with Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov.

The Dutch parliament today completed ratification of the European army treaty. The West German parliament has also approved but is waiting for a Supreme court test on its legality. The Belgian lower house has approved the treaty but the French, Italian and Luxembourg parliament has also approved but is waiting for a Supreme court test on its legality. The Belgian lower house has approved the treaty but the French, Italian and Luxembourg parliaments have not yet started action on the treaty.

Mr. Eisenhower said today that the action of the Dutch parliament is a move toward "permanent peace and prosperity."

The President today celebrated his first year in the White House. And he received a gift from his cabinet: a crystal cup depicting the highlights of his career.

The Senate tonight voted to let the United States join Canada in building the disputed St. Lawrence Seaway - an issue that has been discussed for more than 20 years. The seaway would be a 27-foot-deep waterway in the St. Lawrence River from the Atlantic to the Great Lakes. The bill now goes to the House.

Republican Representative Clardy of Michigan said today that Louis J. Russell was fired as chief investigator for the House un-American activities committee after he borrowed $300 from movie actor Edward G. Robinson. Clardy says Robinson, a former witness before the committee, is not accused of doing anything wrong. He said the chief complaint against Russell is that he used "atrociously bad judgment."

Former Brigadier General Telford Taylor says Senator McCarthy would be "destroyed" by an investigation of McCarthy's charges that a spy ring existed until recently in the signal corps at Fort Monmouth. In a Newsweek interview, McCarthy says the committee will call Taylor to tell what he knows "about Communist infiltratio and espionage at Fort Monmouth."

The House Veterans Committee was told today that the purpose of the DAV, the Disabled American Veterans, is to help veterans get the government benefits due them, and not to provide direct relief for the men. DAV officials protested that they were recently given a "black eye" by a New York state committee that, in effect, called them part of a "charity racket." They say the New York committee refused them a "decent opportunity to refute misinformation." State Senator Tompkins of New York says this is not true.

In Canada, Donald Ritchie, the key figure in the Walter Reuther shooting case, said today he has no knowledge of the attempted assassination of Reuther. Detroit officials says this statement is no surprise "after all, Ritchie is a defendent in the case."

Here in New York, the Civil Aeronautics Administration today recommended that Arthur Godfrey's license to fly be suspended because of a lack of medical clearance. But Godfrey submitted a medical okay and apparently this will be cleared up. But the CAA also called Godfrey a reckless flyer and recommended that he be kept on the ground for a while. The CAA which enforces aviation policy asked the Civil Aeronautics Board which sets aviation policy to suspend Godfrey's license as long as necessary. It wants him punished for his takeoff from the Teterboro, New Jersey, airport two weeks ago. The CAA says Godfrey was careless - created a collision hazard. Godfrey blames a cross-wind for his near miss of the control tower.

The case of Mehlovan Jaylash might serve to illustrate how a picture of a pretty woman can distory the news: Jaylash was Vice President of Yugoslavia, a brilliant writer, widely regarded as Marshal Tito's successor. The other day he was flung out of office. Many of the news stories led with the fact that Jaylash had criticized the wives of high officials in Belgrade for snubbing the young and pretty wife of a General. And there was the picture of the wife to prove it. Jaylash did criticize the wives, but that wasn't the reason he was fired. What actually happened was that Jaylash had written a long series of articles in the official newspaper, in which he advocated less Communist Party discipline, more and broader individual rights for Yugoslav citizens. The dominant theme of these articles was the defense of the individual against the Party and State machines. His writings were strongly influenced by the writings of Thomas Jefferson.

This was the first purge in the inner circle of the Yugoslav high command. It reflected the conflict between the protestations about democratic socialism and the continuing bureaucracy, suppression, and the tight control of the Communist Party. Many times in the past Jaylash has been the front man for Marshal Tito, but this time it appears he got too far out in front. The removal of Jaylash must be regarded as a setback for those forces in Yugoslavia who were trying to liberalize and humanize the machinery of government. He was the principal theoritician or "egghead" of the Party, and even though he is now out of office the argument about his policies and proposals will continue.

There is an argument of a different kind going on in Czechoslovakia. Alex Kendrick tells me that the State Surveying and Cartographical Institute of Prague published what was called "A Small Political Atlas of the World" a weekly magazine in Prague reviewed this publication, contending that neither the drawing nor the printing of many of the maps was exact - lines of latitude and longitude have a drunken appearance, and sway hither and yon. The sea appears to have engulfed the land in many places. Montenegro is entirely missing. The frontiers between Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil are incorrect. Togoland doesn't appear anywhere, neither does Israel. A large chunk of land around Calcutta appears to have fallen into the Bay of Bengal. The map-making institute has struck back at the magazine by charging it with "destructive criticism." The magazine forthwith dug up two more errors, including the fact that Greece is shown as a part of Turkey. The government institute for the making of maps then brought up its big guns, and charged the magazine with "being influenced by reactionary elements, and being an admirer of bourgeois, objectivist cartography." No doubt the world's geographers are awaiting the next move in this ideological struggle, which clearly transcends all boundary lines. The Communists contend that they have a map or blueprint of the future, but they are unable accurately to map the present.

Here at home we are reading more books, or at least we're buying more of them. Publishers' Weekly says that last year twelve thousand and fifty new books and new editions were published. We bought more religious books during the past year than books in any other field. The best seller list of non-fiction contained seven out of ten titles having to do with religious subjects. The revised standard version of the Holy Bible led the list with a sale of over one million copies last year. The best seller on the fiction list was also a religious book, "The Robe."

The sale of fiction was up six percent, compared to 1952. We bought more mysteries and science fiction, but we bought even more Westerns. Books about business sold twenty-two percent more than in 1952, and that was the biggest increase in the non-fiction field. The sale of books having to do with education and music went down. Books on education dropped eighteen percent.

I am sure there is some moral, some lesson to be learned from these figures, but I don't know what it is.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We were talking of books. Herman Melville who wrote Moby Dick and was quite expert on whales once remarked: "Such and so magnifying is the virtue of a large and liberal theme. We expand to its bulk. To produce a mighty book you must choose a mighty theme. No great and enduring volume can ever be written on the flea, though many there may be who have tried.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Thursday, January 21, 1954

This is the news:

The President today sent Congress a 65 and a half billion dollar budget. It calls for a reduction of five and a quarter billion from present spending. But Mr. Eisenhower says that at the end of fiscal 1955 we will be about three billion more in the red. Neither the President or his top fiscal aides will make a statement on when the budget might be balanced. But the President made it clear he prefers no further tax reductions at this time. He says this is not justified. What Mr. Eisenhower proposes in the matter of taxes is to change the tax structure in a way that would save individuals and corporations more than a billion dollars. He wants a bigger deduction for medical expenses.. a new deduction for child care expenses of working widows and widowers. He would make a new allowance for dependents who earn more than 600 dollars a year. And he favors cutting the tax on income from dividends.

For corporations, the President proposes: a more liberal allowance for depreciation... lower taxes on foreign income... easier taxes on research and development expenses.. tax cuts on retained earnings.

For farmers Mr. Eisenhower wants a tax cut amounting to as much as 25 per cent of a farmer's gross income for soil conservation expenses.

And for all individual income tax payers the President suggests that the deadline for payments be April 15..instead of the present March 15... And he wants no reduction of present excise taxes on such items as : cigarets, automobiles, whiskey and beer.

The major cut in Mr. Eisenhower's budget will come from national security items. In this field...the military, foreign aid, atomic energy, and the stockpiling of goods... the President proposes to spend 37 and a half billions.. about four billion less than the estimated spending for the current year. This will be possible because of the Administration's shift of plans to a full exploitation of airpower and modern weapons.. away from the stress on foot soldiers. The President wants to cut the armed forces manpower by almost nine per cent. The biggest reduction will be in army manpower... dropping three of our present 20 divisions. To offset this decrease in manpower we will devote 22 per cent of the defense department's funds next year to procuring airplanes. ~~The President says we now have about 33 thousand planes in the air force and naval and marine air branches. He wants to increase this to [illegible] 40 thousand in three years..with more than half of the new planes to be jet [illegible].~~

In three categories Mr Eisenhower proposes record expenditures: for continental defense.. atomic energy and military aid. There are no figures on what we'll spend to protect this continent but the President says it will be a greater outlay than ever before. For atomic energy he wants almost two and a half billion dollars. That would be an increase of 225 million over last year. Mr. Eisenhower says the construction on our atomic energy plants is now complete. Hereafter we'll concentrate on operations..continued research and the development and expansion of new weapon types. He would give private industry a greater share in developing atomic power. ~~And the President asked Congress to act, at this session, to give him permission to give some of our secrets on the tactical use of atomic weapons to our allies in Western Europe. He calls this essential, says the current allied strategy demands it.~~

On the matter of aid to our allies the budget-~~makers~~ makers had difficulties. The President proposes that we spend another five point four billions for military and economic help to our allies. This is only 100-million dollars under present spending. Most of it...four and a quarter billion.. would be for military aid. In the past four years the Congress has approved a total of 18-billions for military aid. About half of that already has been spent. The five point four billions the President proposes to spend on aid to our allies in the next fiscal year would not all be new money; some it has been appropriated in the past.

From year to year the Budget Bureau aware of the difficulties most of us have in juggling millions and billions breaks down the budget into two dollars: the dollar that comes in and the dollar that the government spends. Here's the breakdown. Each dollar the government gets consists of 43 cents from individual income taxes....37 cents from corporation taxes...16 cents from excise taxes and four cents from borrowing. And each dollar the government spends goes this way: 68 cents for major national security programs such as the armed forces, foreign aid, atomic energy and stockpiling. ~~twenty~~ Twenty two cents are for charges fixed by law. This includes: interest, grants to states, veterans pensions (four out of every ten Americans are now war veterans or the dependents of veterans) The remaining ten cents in the outgoing dollar pays for the other functions of government.

In a few minutes I'd like to add a few words to the government's lengthy budget story.

As the President's budget was made public today: Democrats on the House Ways and Means committee failed to push through a proposal to increase the personal income tax exemption from 600 to 700 dollars a year. By a straight party vote the committee Republicans defeated this move that would have cost the government two and a half billion dollars a year.

The House approved the (ESTABLISHMENT) of an Air Force (ACADEMY), and sent the bill to the Senate.

And military sources say in line with the reduction of army manpower two former national Guard outfits now serving in Korea..the 40th from California and the 45th from Oklahoma..will be withdrawn and de-activated in the spring.

In Korea today, 28 Marines of the Third Marine Division.. are dead or missing. Their small landing craft (collided) with a troopship loaded with Chinese war prisoners in Inchon harbor. Twenty two men were rescued in this second worst naval disaster of the Korean war.

More than 14-thousand anti-Communist Chinese prisoners are now on their way to Formosa aboard 15 American ships. And more than 7-thousand North Koreans, formerly prisoners, are being processed by South Korea.

The Indians plan a last appeal to the Communists to take back the 21 Americans and 328 other prisoners now held in a pro-Communist camp. If the Communists TURN IT DOWN, the Indians...at one minute after 10 a.m. EASTERN TIME tomorrow... will withdraw their troops. The men will be free to go where they want to go..north to the enemy or south to our lines. Those prisoners who stay in their present camps will create a problem; because they are in the neutral zone and neither allied or Communist troops are permitted to go after them.

In Indo-China today French Union forces in their first big-scale offensive of the 7-year war consolidated a beachhead 250 miles northeast of Saigon and started pushing inland.

In this country, the world's first atom powered vessel.. the submarine Nautilus.. was launched at Groton, Connecticut. [The atomic machinery will be installed at a later date.] Mrs. Eisenhower christened the submarine after the chief of naval operations, Admiral Carney, said the occasion opens new vistas of America's sea power. He said: "Nautilus is a symbol of man's dreaming.. his bright dreams, certainly; and if man is not wise, nightmares, too." ~~And Atomic Energy Commission Chairman Strauss said the "Nautilus symbolizes both the "atomic thunderbolts~~

[redacted]

Attorney General Brownell said in Washington today he's studying a number of complaints against recent coffee price increases. The attorney general refused to estimate how many of the 22-hundred [redacted]ed federal employes discharged under the security program were disloyal.

The State Department says an investigation has produced no evidence to support a charge by Senator McCarthy that a department employe shook down a foreign government for 150-thousand dollars.

J. Parnell Thomas, once chairman of the House unAmerican activities committee, announced that he will seek to return to the House. Thomas, a New Jersey republican who went to jail for payroll padding, will campaign on a pledge to continue the fight against Communism and Fascism.

Secretary of State Dulles left for the Berlin foreign ministers meeting today. As authoritative sources there reported the arrival of a 12 man Communist Chinese delegation in East Berlin.

Edward R. Murrow: January 21, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

This reporter pretends to no considerable knowledge of budgets, particularly one that runs to some forty thousand words. But it appears that there are others who are not yet quite sure what it all means. Speaker of the House Joe Martin calls the Budget Message, "A masterpiece of statesmanship"; while Representative Cannon, Democrat from Missouri, thinks it's as "fony as a wooden nutmeg". In general, Congressional reaction appears to be favorable. Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas, minority leader in the House, hopes the defense appropriations haven't been cut too deeply. Says he'd rather be alive, with an empty pocket book, than dead with a full one. Senator Saltonstall of Massachusetts thinks the armed forces get all the money they can use efficiently.

The first thing to be noted about this budget is that it doesn't balance; we will end up the next fiscal year about three billion dollars in the red. No one is talking about when the budget can actually be balanced. It might be called an optimistic budget, since it's based on the assumption that business conditions, personal and corporate profits, will remain at the present high level. It is also based on the assumption that there will be "fairly stable conditions, internally and externally" during the next fiscal year.

Unless the Congress decides otherwise, there will be minor changes in the tax laws, but no substantial change in the tax rates, either for corporations or individuals.

This Budget reflects what has come to be called "the new look" in our Defense Establishment. Our reliance is placed more and more on the big planes and the big bombs. More money for atomic energy; less money, by almost thirty percent, for the Army; less money for the Navy - they suffer a cut of seven percent; but more money for the Air Force. Better than two out of every three dollars will be spent for national security.

The President renewed his request for an increase in the legal limit on the National Debt. There is likely to be strong opposition to that in Congress. If efforts are made to cut the Budget, they are likely to be aimed at the Foreign Aid Program. Representative Taber of New York, Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, says he will try to trim the Budget enough to bring it into balance. This is not likely to happen, because it's a budget that has very considerable appeal to both Republicans and Democrats, even in an election year.

Will Rogers was a cynic about ~~many~~ certain things. And one of these was the budget. He once concluded:"You have a budget like you have a limit in a poker game. You are not supposed to go beyond it till at least an hour after the game has started." So there could be no mistake on where he stood, Rogers also put it another way:"The budget,he said, is a mythical bean bag. Congress votes mythical beans into it and then tries to reach in and pull the real ones out."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NEWS

THURSDAY, JANUARY 21, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President today sent Congress a 65 and a half billion dollar budget. It calls for a reduction of five and a quarter billion from present spending. But Mr. Eisenhower says that at the end of fiscal 1955 we will be about three billion more in the red. Neither the President or his top fiscal aides will make a statement on when the budget might be balanced. But the President made it clear he prefers no further tax reductions at this time. He says this is not justified. What Mr. Eisenhower proposes in the matter of taxes is to change the tax structure in a way that would save individuals and corporations more than a billion dollars. He wants a bigger deduction for medical expenses - a new deduction for child care expenses of working widows and widowers. He would make a new allowance for dependents who earn more than 600 dollars a year. And he favors cutting the tax on income from dividends.

For corporations, the President proposes: a more liberal allowance for depreciation, lower taxes on foreign income, easier taxes on research and development expenses, tax cuts on retained earnings.

For farmers, Mr. Eisenhower wants a tax cut amounting to as much as 25 percent of a farmer's gross income for soil conservation expenses. And for all individual income tax payers, the President suggests that the deadline for payments be April 15 instead of the present March 15. And he wants no reduction of present excise taxes on such items as: cigarrets, automobiles, whiskey and beer.

The major cut in Mr. Eisenhower's budget will come from national security items. In this field, the military, foreign aid, atomic energy, and the stockpiling of goods, the President proposes to spend 37 and a half billions - about four billion less than the estimated spending for the current year. This will be possible because of the Administration's shift of plans to a full exploitation of airpower and modern weapons away from the stress on foot soldiers. The President wants to cut the armed forces manpower by almost nine percent. The biggest reduction will be in army manpower; dropping three of our present 20 divisions. To offset this decrease in manpower we will devote 22 percent of the defense department's funds next year to procuring airplanes. In three categories Mr. Eisenhower proposes record expenditures: for continental defense, atomic energy and military aid. There are no figures on what we'll spend to protect this continent, but the President says it will be a greater outlay than ever before. For atomic energy he wants almost two and a half billion dollars. That would be an increase of 225 million over last year. Mr. Eisenhower says the construction on our atomic energy plants is now complete. Hereafter we'll concentrate on operations, continued research and the development and expansion of new weapon types. He would give private industry a greater share in developing atomic power.

On the matter of aid to our allies the budget makers had difficulties. The President proposes that we spend another five point four billions for military and economic help to our allies. This is only 100-million dollars under present spending. Most of it, four and a quarter billion, would be for military aid. In the past four years the Congress has approved a total of 18-billions for military aid. About half of that already has been spent. The five point four billions the President proposes to spend on aid to our allies in the next fiscal year would not all be new money; some it has been appropriated in the past.

From year to year the Budget Bureau aware of the difficulties most of us have in juggling millions and billions breaks down the budget into two dollars; the dollar that comes in and the dollar that the government spends. Here's the breakdown. Each dollar the government gets consists of 43 cents from individual income taxes - 37 cents from corporation taxes, 16 cents from excise taxes and four cents from borrowing. And each dollar the government spends goes this way: 68 cents for major national security programs such as the armed forces, foreign aid, atomic energy and stockpiling. Twenty two cents are for charges fixed by law. This includes: grants to states, interest, veterans pensions (four out of every ten Americans are now war veterans or the dependents of veterans. The remaining ten cents in the outgoing dollar pays for the other functions of government. In a few minutes I'd like to add a few words to the government's lengthy budget story.

As the President's budget was made public today: Democrats on the House Ways and Means committee failed to push through a proposal to increase the personal income tax exemption from 600 to 700 dollars a year. By a straight party vote the committee Republicans defeated this move that would have cost the government two and a half billion dollars a year. The House approved the establishment of an Air Force Academy, and sent the bill to the Senate.

And Military sources say in line with the reduction of army manpower two former national Guard outfits now serving in Korea - the 40th from California and the 45th from Oklahoma will be withdrawn and de-activated in the spring.

In Korea today, 28 marines of the Third Marine Division are dead or missing. Their small landing craft collided with a troopship loaded with Chinese war prisoners in Inchon harbor. Twenty two men were rescued in this second worst naval disaster of the Korean war.

More than 14-thousand anti-Communist Chinese prisoners are now on their way to Formosa aboard 15 American ships. And more than 7-thousand North Koreans, formerly prisoners, are being processed by South Korea. The Indians plan a last appeal to the communists to take back the 21 Americans and 328 other prisoners now held in a pro-Communist camp. If the Communists turn it down, the Indians at one minute after 10 a.m. Eastern Time tomorrow, will withdraw their troops. The men will be free to go where they want to go - north to the enemy or south to our lines. Those prisoners who stay in their present camps will create a problem; because they are in the neutral zone and neither allied or Communist troops are permitted to go after them.

In Indo-China today French Union forces in their first big-scale offensive of the 7-year war consolidated a beachhead 250 miles northeast of Saigon and started pushing inland.

In this country, the world's first atom powered vessel, the submarine Nautilus, was launched at Groton, Connecticut. The atomic machinery will be installed at a later date. Mrs. Eisenhower christened the submarine after the chief of naval operations, Admiral Carney, said the occasion opens new vistas of America's sea power. He said: "Nautilus is a symbol of man's dreaming; his bright dreams, certainly; and if man is not wise, nightmares, too."

Attorney General Brownell said in Washington today he's studying a number of complaints against recent coffee price increases. The attorney general refused to estimate how many of the 22-hundred federal employees, discharged under the security program were disloyal.

The State Department says an investigation has produced no evidence to support a charge by Senator McCarthy that a department employee shook down a foreign government for 150-thousand dollars.

J. Parnell Thomas, once chairman of the House unAmerican activities committee, announced that he will seek to return to the House. Thomas, a New Jersey republican who went to jail for payroll padding, will campaign on a pledge to continue the fight against Communism and Fascism.

Secretary of State Dulles left for the Berlin foreign ministers meeting today as authoritative sources there reported the arrival of a 12-man Communist Chinese delegation in East Berlin.

This reporter pretends to no considerable knowledge of budgets, particularly one that runs to some forty thousand words. But it appears that there are others who are not yet quite sure what it all means. Speaker of the House Joe Martin calls the Budget Message, "A masterpiece of statesmanship;" while Representative Cannon, Democrat from Missouri, thinks it's as "phoney as a wooden nutmeg." In general, Congressional reaction appears to be favorable. Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas, minority leader in the House, hopes the defense appropriations haven't been cut too deeply. Says he'd rather be alive with an empty pocket book, than dead with a full one. Senator Saltonstall of Massachusetts thinks the armed forces get all the money they can use efficiently. The first thing to be noted about this budget is that it doesn't balance; we will end up the next fiscal year about three billion dollars in the red. No one is talking about when the budget can actually be balanced. It might be called an optimistic budget, since it's based on the assumption that business conditions, personal and corporate profits will remain at the present high level. It is also based on the assumption that there will be fairly stable conditions, internally and externally during the next fiscal year.

Unless the Congress decides otherwise, there will be minor changes in the tax laws, but no substantial change in the tax rates, either for corporations or individuals.

This Budget reflects what has come to be called "the new look" in our Defense Establishment. Our reliance is placed more and more on the big planes and the big bombs. More money for atomic energy; less money, by almost thirty percent, for the Army; less money for the Navy - they suffer a cut of seven percent; but more money for the Air Force. Better than two out of every three dollars will be spent for national security.

The President renewed his request for an increase in the legal limit on the National Debt. There is likely to be strong opposition to that in Congress. If efforts are made to cut the Budget, they are likely to be aimed at the Foreign Aid program. Representative Taber of New York, Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, says he will try to trim the Budget enough to bring it into balance. This is not likely to happen, because it's a budget that has very considerable appeal to both Republicans and Democrats, even in an election year.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Will Rogers was a cynic about certain things. And one of these was the budget. He once concluded: "You have a budget like you have a limit in a poker game. You are not supposed to go beyond it till at least an hour after the game has started." So there could be no mistake on where he stood, Rogers also put it another way: "The budget, he said, is a mythical bean bag. Congress votes mythical beans into it and then tries to reach in and pull the real ones out."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday Jan. 22, 1954

This is the news:

The United Nations Command today freed 22-thousand Chinese and North Koreans who refused to return to Communism. They are on their way to Formosa or under control of South Korean forces. As for the 21 Americans and other allied troops who refuse to return to our side, they are now almost alone in the neutral zone. The Indians have withdrawn..but left 20 guards behind. No one seems to know what happens next to these men. They have food. But when it runs out, either the Communists must bring in more, or the men will be forced to leave. At the moment the Communists claim they do not want to take these prisoners back.

In Indo-China today, the French are regrouping on their new beachhead . And dispatches from Saigon say there may be more landings along the coast northeast of Siagon.

The American, British and French foreign ministers arrived in Berlin today, for Monday's opening of the Big Four foreign ministers conference. I should like to review the prospects of success in a few minutes.

In Washington today the House Ways and Means Committee approved plans to save taxpayers some 540-million dollars next year. For one thing, the committee decided to permit all taxpayers to deduct all medical and dental expenses above three per cent of gross income.. (instead of the present five per cent) And businessmen and farmers will be permitted faster "tax write-offs" on the cost of business buildings, machinery and equipment. The Committee also agreed to let businessmen, (WHO HAVE SUSTAINED SERIOUS LOSSES) [redacted] TO recover taxes paid in two previous years. At present a claim can be made for only one year's taxes.

The government says the cost of living went down a fraction in December.. the second month its fallen. Commissioner of Labor Statistics, Ewan Clague, says this is a minor movement and is evidence of "continued stability" in the economy.

Labor Secretary Mitchell said today that he is re-surveying unemployment in Detroit and other Michigan citiess.. to determine whether recent lay-offs in the auto industry permit the cities to be classified as distressed areas. C.I.O. President Reuther had protested that the Labor Department was using old figures. Areas having six per cent or more of unemployment are entitled to preference in government contracts and special assisstance in getting new defense plants.

~~Defense Secretary Wilson said today he'll resists any moves~~ by ~~Congress to reduce the President&s 37 and a half billion dollar military budget. He says the Administration's program to emphasize air and atomic defenses "puts first things first."~~

Chairman Wiley of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said today that the Bricker amendment.. to limit the President's treaty-making powers.. "is one of the most dangerous acts of our generation." He said: "The nation has grown under the Constiution and I do not want to see it torn to shreds." And Senator Bricker, Ohio Republican, told his colleagues the President must have been misinformed and therefore circulated "erroneous charges" about the Bricker amendment at a recent news conference. Bricker said he hopes the President is not making a personal fight over the amendment. Majority Leader Knowland said.."no..the President still has an open mind on a compromise."

The Senate Rules Committee today approved 850-thousand dollars for Senate investigations: The Jenner committee would get an additional 170-thousand... a little less than Senator Hendrickson's committee would get for continuing its investigation of juvenile delinquency. The committee did not [redacted] act[redacted] on Senator McCarthy's request for 200-thousand dollars.

A Senate subcommittee today approved a [redacted] proposed constitutional amendment to [redacted] lower the voting age from 21 to 18. But in the full committee some members will argue that the states should be left free to fix their own voting qualifications.

The United States Public Health Service, and the Veterans Administration, have started an investigation to try to determine "if there are any serious effect on health from the use of tobacco" among otherwise healthy people. Questionnaires are being sent to 300-thousand veterans of World War [redacted] One. An analysis of the answers will probably not be available for four or five years.

Papers filed in Cincinnati today show that the late Senator Taft left an estate valued at 446-thousand dollars. Most of it.. 344-thousand-- was in stocks and bonds. The Senator left real estate valued at 67-thousand dollars.. and the rest in cash and personal property.

Washington, D.C. today had six inches of snow and the weather, HAN says a severe storm is moving slowly up the eastern seaboard dropping moderate to heavy snow from Southwestern Virginia to southern New Jersey.

Edward R. Murrow: January 22, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

Soviet policy has at its command a system of what might be called hot-and-cold water plumbing. When the Kremlin wants water warm, or when it wants water cold, it has two faucets and can use either one. There is nothing mysterious about it. The faucets can be operated by the same person. Last night in Moscow, Peter N. Pospelov, secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, turned on warm water. It was at the commemoration of the thirtieth anniversary of Lenin's death. He spoke feelingly, on the theme of "peaceful co-existence." He quoted from Lenin's several statements about the possibility of communism and capitalism working side by side.

Three years ago, on the very same occasion, the very same Mr. Pospelov launched a new "hate-America" phase in Soviet policy, with a speech that quoted the same Lenin's denunciations of America.

January 1951 was seven months after the invasion of the Korean Republic, and it was prior to the massive build-up of Western power and the consolidation of Western defense policy. It was a time when the Kremlin wanted cold water poured on talks of peace and co-existence. Now the West is strong. It is ready to grow still stronger by incorporating German military power in its defense system. Now the Kremlin's objective is to keep Germany from joining the West and to do so it must, first of all, disarm Western fears. Now cold water is not helpful. Now the same Mr. Pospelov opens the other faucet. That he should do so the week before the Four Power Conference begins in Berlin only shows how good can be the timing if the hot-and-cold water plumbing is working.

The Berlin conference is to take up the question of unifying Germany and making peace with that country, and also the completion of a treaty with Austria. What it will produce in these two respects can only be conjectured. The outlook is not rosy. But some observers do not think that Soviet policy is focused on Germany or Austria. They see it focused on France. The Soviet Government of itself cannot prevent the inclusion of Germany in the Western defense system. France can; and what is said and done at Berlin will ultimately be measured in Paris. That is where it will count.

Foreign Minister Bidault at the Four Power conference will have the authorization of the Laniel cabinet not to try to buy peace in Indo-China by sacrificing the European Army. This is an important decision for the French cabinet to make, for it clears the way for the Western Powers to confront the Soviet Union with a united front on the German question. They will insist that Germany can only be united after free elections, which is the key issue so far as the West is concerned. But not all the Laniel cabinet places the European army ahead of a promise of peace in Indo-China, and the Kremlin knows quite well how the forces line up in the French Assembly. It knows, for instance, that three of the top appointments in the Foreign Affairs Committee made in Paris this week went to opponents of the European Army. The final vote on the treaty may go one way or the other, depending on what happens in Berlin.

Monsieur Bidault told the Laniel cabinet that he expected a protracted conference in Berlin with Mr. Molotov, the Soviet Foreign Minister, not showing his hand till the last minute, perhaps in the third week. He said he was not optimistic.

This view is shared by the London Times. It says the conference "threatens to be the most difficult, exasperating and shapeless of all the conferences the Western Powers have had with Russia since the war". "The Russians" it predicts "will take in the whole world straight away. The Western Powers, more businesslike and prosaic, are determined to review Germany first and would consider a Five Power meeting (that is with Communist China included) only if the Korean political conference could have been held with some progress." The Times advises that the West take the initiative from the start. The three powers, it writes, must be ready with two different plans, one for peace based on German unity, one for peace based on the continued division of Germany. That would not make the proposals for unity insincere, it would be like a general having prepared positions to fall back on. "It is right" it says, "to set the targets high, but often results can be achieved in the end by plain and honest recognition of what is possible."

There are many - and they are not only in France - who fervently believe that this time the Kremlin really wants good relations with the West. They read deep meaning into changes taking place inside the Soviet Union. They would like to have it turn out that the death of Stalin really ushered in a long era of peaceful co-existence. The Soviet Union of course can convince all skeptics by agreeing to free elections in Germany, or at least writing an Austrian treaty. But to say that is to presume that the Soviet Union cares about convincing skeptics more than anything else. To judge from its own pronouncements, what it cares about more than anything else is to prevent Germany re-arming on the side of the West. But it cannot pay for that by granting free elections without undermining its hold over the satellites. That is why Western observers foresee a long and frustrating conference, with the Soviet Union starting by talking about the world situation, and making minor concessions only at the end.

It would seem that the best way to approach a political conference is to hope for the best and anticipate the worst. But when the meetings in Berlin begin, those taking part could do worse than recall something Don Marquis once said:"When chickens quit quarrelling over their food they often find that there is enough for all of them. I wonder if it might not be the same way with the human race."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The United Nations Command today freed 22-thousand Chinese and North Koreans who refused to return to Communism. They are on their way to Formosa or under control of South Korean forces. As for the 21 Americans and other allied troops who refuse to return to our side, they are now almost alone in the neutral zone. The Indians have withdrawn, but left 20 guards behind. No one seems to know what happens next to these men. They have food. But when it runs out either the Communists must bring in more or the men will be forced to leave. At the moment the Communists claim they do not want to take these prisoners back.

In Indo-China today the French are regrouping on their new beachhead. And dispatches from Saigon say there may be more landings along the coast northeast of Saigon.

The American, British and French foreign ministers arrived in Berlin today for Monday's opening of the Big Four foreign ministers conference. I should like to review the prospects of success in a few minutes.

In Washington today the House Ways and Means Committee approved plans to save taxpayers some 540-million dollars next year. For one thing, the committee decided to permit all taxpayers to deduct all medical and dental expenses above three percent of gross income instead of the present five percent. And businessmen and farmers will be permitted faster "tax write-offs" on the cost of business buildings, machinery and equipment. The Committee also agreed to let businessmen, who have sustained serious losses to recover taxes paid in two pervious years. At present a claim can be made for only one year's taxes.

The government says the cost of living went down a fraction in December - the second month its fallen. Commissioner of Labor Statistics, Ewan Clague, says this is a minor movement and is evidence of "continued stability" in the economy.

Labor Secretary Mitchell said today that he is re-surveying unemployment in Detroit and other Michigan cities to determine whether recent layoffs in the auto industry permit the cities to be classified as distressed areas. CIO President Reuther had protested that the Labor Department was using old figures. Areas having six percent or more of unemployment are entitled to preference in government contracts and special assistance in getting new defense plants.

Chairman Wiley of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said today that the Bricker amendment to limit the President's treaty-making powers "is one of the most dangerous acts of our generation." He said: "The nation has grown under the Constitution and I do not want to see it torn to shreds." And Senator Bricker, Ohio Republican, told his colleagues the President must have been misinformed and therefore circulated "erroneous charges" about the Bricker amendment at a recent news conference. Bricker said he hopes the President is not making a personal fight over the amendment. Majority Leader Knowland said "no, the President still has an open mind on a compromise."

The Senate Rules Committee today approved 850-thousand dollars for Senate investigations: The Jenner committee would get an additional 170-thousand - a little less than Senator Hendrickson's committee would get for continuing its investigation of juvenile delinquency. The committee did not act on Senator McCarthy's request for 200-thousand dollars.

A Senate subcommittee today approved a proposed constitutional amendment to lower thevoting age from 21 to 18. But in the full committee some members will argue that the states should be left free to fix their own voting qualifications.

The United States Public Health Service and the Veterans Administration have started an investigation to try to determine "if there are any serious effect on health from the use of tobacco" among otherwise healthy people. Questionnaires are being sent to 300-thousand veterans of World War One. An analysis of the answers will probably not be available for four or five years.

Papers filed in Cincinnati today show that the late Senator Taft left an estate valued at 446-thousand dollars. Most of it, 344-thousand was in stocks and bonds. The Senator left real estate valued at 67-thousand dollars and the rest in cash and personal property.

Washington, D.C. today had six inches of snow and the weatherman says a severe storm is moving slowly up the eastern seaborad, dropping moderate to heavy snow from Southwestern Virginia to southern New Jersey.

Soviet policy has at its command a system of what might be called hot-and-cold water plumbing. When the Kremlin wants water warm, or when it wants water cold, it has two faucets and can use either one. There is nothing mysterious about it. The faucets can be operated by the same person. Last night in Moscow, Peter N. Pospelov, secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, turned on warm water. It was at the commemoration of the thirtieth anniversary of Lenin's death. He spoke feelingly, on the theme of "p aceful co-existence." He quoted from Lenin's several statements about the possibility of communism and capitalism working side by side.

Three years ago, on the very same occasion, the very same Mr. Pospelov launched a new "hate-America" phase in Soviet policy, with a speech that quoted the same Lenin's denunciations of America.

January 1951 was seven months after the invasion of the Korean Republic, and it was prior to the massive build-up of Western power and the consolidation of Western defense policy. It was a time when the Kremlin wanted cold water poured on talks of peace and co-existence. Now the West is strong. It is ready to grow still stronger by incorporating German military power in its defense system. Now the Kremlin's objective is to keep Germany from joining the West and to do so it must, first of all, disarm Western fears. Now cold water is not helpful. Now the same Mr. Pospelov opens the other faucet. That he should do so the week before the Four Power Conference begins in Berlin only shows how good can be the timing if the hot-and-cold water plumbing is working.

The Berlin conference is to take up the question of unifying Germany and making peace with that country, and also the completion of a treaty with Austria.

What it will produce in these two respects can only be conjectured. The outlook is not rosy. But some observers do not think that Russian policy is focused on Germany or Austria. They see it focused on France. The Soviet Government of itself cannot prevent the inclusion of Germany in the Western defense system. France can: and what is said and done at Berlin will ultimately be measured in Paris. That is where it will count.

Foreign Minister Bidault at the Four Power conference will have the authorization of the Laniel cabinet not to try to buy peace in Indo-China by sacrificing the European Army. This is an important decision for the French cabinet to make, for it clears the way for the Western Powers to confront the Soviet Union with a united front on the German question. They will insist that Germany can only be united after free elections, which is the key issue so far as the West is concerned. But not all the Laniel cabinet places the European army ahead of a promise of peace in Indo-China, and the Kremlin knows quite well how the forces line up in the French Assembly. It knows, for instance, that three of the top appointments in the Foreign Affairs Committee made in Paris this week went to opponents of the European Army. The final vote on the treaty may go one way or the other, depending on what happens in Berlin.

Monsieur Bidault told the Laniel cabinet that he expected a protracted conference in Berlin with Mr. Molotov, the Soviet Foreign Minister, not showing his hand till the last minute, perhaps in the third week. He said he was not optimistic.

This view is shared by the London Times. It says the conference "threatens to be the most difficult, exasperating and shapeless of all the conferences the Western Powers have had with Russia since the war." "The Russians" it predicts, "will take in the whole world straight away. The Western Powers, more businesslike and prosaic, are determined to review Germany first and would consider a Five Power meeting (that is with Communist China included) only if the Korean political conference could have been held with some progress." The Times advises that the West take the initiative from the start. The three powers, it writes, must be ready with two different plans, one for peace based on German unity, one for peace based on the continued division of Germany. That would not make the proposals for unity insincere, it would be like a general having prepared positions to fall back on. "It is right" it says, "to set the targets high, but often results can be achieved in the end by plain and honest recognition of what is possible."

There are many - and they are not only in France - who fervently believe that this time the Kremlin really wants good relations with the West. They read deep meaning into changes taking place inside the Soviet Union. They would like to have it turn out that the death of Stalin really ushered in a long era of peaceful co-existence. The Soviet Union of course can convince all skeptics by agreeing to free elections in Germany, or at least writing an Austrian treaty. But to say that is to presume that the Soviet Union cares about convincing skeptics more than anything else. To judge from its own pronouncements, what it cares about more than anything else is to prevent Germany re-arming on the side of the West. But it cannot pay for that by granting free elections without undermining its hold over the satellite That is why Western observers foresee a long and frustrating conference, with the Soviet Union starting by talking about the world situation, and making minor concessions only at the end.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that the best way to approach a political conference is to hope for the best and anticipate the worst. But when the meetings in Berlin begin, those taking part could do worse than recall something Don Marquis once said: "When chickens quit quarrelling over their food, they often find that there is enough for all of them. I wonder if it might not be the same way with the human race."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday, January 25, 1954

68

This is the news:

The Foreign Ministers Conference opened in the American Zone of Berlin today. The three western powers, said they hoped agreement could be reached with Russia, on an Austrian Treaty, and unification of Germany. But Russia's Foreign Minister Molotov, brushed these two issues aside. And (RAISED THE QUESTION OF GIVING) Communist China (A FUTURE) representation at conference.

(I'd like to discuss the first day's developments in a few minutes.)

In Washington, the Defense Department tonight told the Army, that the 21 Americans who had chosen Communism in preference to being repatriated as Korean war prisoners be given dishonorable discharges. This ends all pay, allowances and veterans benefits. If any of the 21 men change their minds, their cases will be reviewed.

Attorneys appointed to represent Corporal Edward Dickenson, who changed his mind and came home, and now faces a possible court martial, say Dickenson is a "sick man". They add that the Corporal is "shocked" by charges that he dealt unlawfully with the enemy. The Defense Departmen promised to re-study the case. But noted it had to move fast...before Dickenson was discharged, and out of military jurisdiction.

The second group of former Communists who refused to be returned from Korea arrived on Formosa today, bringing the two day total to nearly ten thousand. The Chinese Nationalist President Chaing Kai-Shek, in a message to President Eisenhower, said their "liberation marks a significant victory over international communism. It augurs well, he said, for the future of freedom."

The President, late today, made it known that he is "unalterably opposed" to the proposed Bricker amendment which would limit treaty-making powers and in some instances permit individual states to repudiate treaties. The President, in a letter to Republican Floor Leader, Senator Knowland said:"The proposal in its present form would be notice to our friends as well as our enemies abroad that our country intends to withdraw from its leadership in world affairs. It would make it impossible for us to deal effectively for our own mutual defense and common interests." Senator Knowland said he was hopeful that some sort of compromise could be worked out with Bricker and his supporters. (The Senate begins debate on the amendment tomorrow.)

Congress has received the President's Housing Message. And essentially it calls for more and better low-cost housing projects, but with as little federal aid as possible. The President, in his message, suggested that 35-thousand new units be constructed, in each of the next four years. (That's 15-thousand units a year more than now contemplated.) But, Mr. Eisenhower said: "While the federal government must provide leadership, programs must be avoided that would make our citizens increasingly dependent upon the government, to supply their housing needs." The President acknowledged that "housing deficiencies continue to be serious"...that "the national interest demands the elimination of slum conditions"...but until new programs are fully tested, we should continue new construction at a "reasonable level." Among the new recommendations are lower mortgage rates, lower down payments, and nearly a hundred million dollars in assistance from federal funds, for low-cost housing.

The Senate Labor Committee began hearings today on the President's suggestions for amending the Taft-Hartley Law. The first to testify was Secretary of Labor James Mitchell. He discussed at length Mr. Eisenhower's proposal that secret strike votes be taken under government supervision. Mitchell argued that the vote be held before a strike is called. He said he was presenting the "view of the Administration." But several Republican members of the Committee contended that the President really meant that a vote be taken AFTER a strike is called. The hearings continue tomorrow.

The July walkout of Democrats from Senator Mc Carthy's Investigating subcommittee has apparently come to an end. Senator McClellan - a Democrat from Arkansas - who led the walkout, says a "truce" has been negotiated. Henceforth, Mc Carthy will not have sole hiring and firing powers with regard to committee personnel...Democrats will be allowed their own committee counsel...and will be given a more equitable voice on which hearings in the future are to be public or closed.

The Senate today approved the President's nomination of Robert E. Lee as a member of the Federal Communications Commission. The vote was 58 to 25. Mr. Lee, a former FBI agent, faced opposition from those who contended that he lackod suffucient background for the job and was being pushed because he was a close friend of Senator Mc Carthy's.

Novelist Ernest Hemingway and his wife arrived by car at Entebbe, in Central East Africa after two plane crashes over the weekend. Mrs. Hemingway has two broken ribs. But otherwise the couple are apparently in pretty good shape.

Senator Gillettee of Iowa has called for a full-scale investigation of rising coffee prices, which the industry says is the result of tight supply caused by drought and frost in Brazil.

And here in New York, Robert Young has formally asked for membership on the Board of Directors of the New York Central Railroad - in the first move to gain control of the line.

Edward R. Murrow: January 25, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

The Foreign Ministers of the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France sat around a table in Berlin for almost four hours today. Secretary of State Dulles was the chairman. The French, British and Russian spokesmen led with their high cards, their maximum demands. (Mr. Dulles will speak tomorrow.) Mr. Bidault, speaking for France, said the conference should attempt to deal only with the unification of Germany, and the Austrian peace treaty. He said: "Our defense efforts cannot be the object of negotiation". And he said: "The German and the Austrian peace treaties are not for barter against concessions in Asia." And Bidault warned the Russians that "an error in history would be repeated if Germany were allowed to play off the East against the West, increasing its own power by concessions from the two camps."

Anthony Eden, speaking for Britain, said that if the Russians felt they are threatened with aggression from the West, Britain is prepared to search for further, fresh guarantees to reassure the Russians that they aren't going to be attacked. He proposed free all-German elections, to form an all-German assembly, which in turn would create an all-German government. Mr. Molotov presented the Russian view, and it became apparent that the Foreign Ministers of the West and Mr. Molotov are as far apart as ever. Molotov wants to start arguing about whether there should be a meeting of Foreign Ministers that would include Communist China. He would proceed from that to discuss the German question and the Austrian Treaty. He referred to West Germany as being run by Hitlerite Generals. Very little that Mr. Molotov said was new # - our military bases abroad are designed to menace the Soviet Union, but are doomed to inevitable failure. The United States is to blame for Communist China not being admitted to the United Nations, and not receiving its lawful rights. The United States is responsible for "gross violations of the Korean armistice agreement." Our economic boycott of the Soviet sphere has damaged international trade. And we are backing German militarists who are already planning aggression and revenge.

Mr. Molotov offered no concessions; neither did Mr. Bidault or Mr. Eden. In the first day of argument both sides held to their previously announced positions. There is no reason to expect that Mr. Dulles will do otherwise when he answers Mr. Molotov tomorrow.

Today's French and British statements were pleasing to the American delegation, because they stuck to the line previously agreed upon. Basically the argument appears to have been about the order in which subjects shall be argued about. The Russians want to start arguing about a Foreign Ministers' meeting that would include Red China. The Western Powers want to start by discussing Germany and Austria. The Russian tactics are obvious. The Western Powers are pretty well agreed on what they want in Germany and Austria; but they are not in complete agreement about their relations with Communist China. Therefore the Russians want to start talking about the area where there is the least agreement amongst the Western Allies. So today's session not only brought forth the old familiar charges and counter-charges; it also served to illustrate that the two sides want different things, and in different order.

It is clear from the partial text available, that much of what Mr. Molotov was saying today was aimed, not at the men around the table, but at French public opinion, and to a certain extent to British as well. This appears to be a case of a conference waiting for a mistake to happen. The area of disagreement is so broad, the possibility of compromise so narrow, that both sides must of necessity, watch and wait with vigilance for the other to make a mistake, which can be capitalized for propaganda purposes.

This conference was difficult to arrange. It meets without an agreed agenda, and in an atmosphere where neither side professes any real hope of accomplishment. Even as it begins, the problem confronts both sides as to how they can effectively blame the other side for the failure of the conference. Wars are easier to start than to stop. And the same thing is true of conferences of this kind, undertaken without preparation, and without agreement as to the area to be discussed. In this case, we are asking the Russians to do something that is contrary to their whole doctrine and dogma; and they are asking us to do something which we cannot do, unless we are prepared to destroy the very basis of our foreign policy so far as Europe is concerned.

This conference will test the unity of the Western Powers. It will be an exhibition in the area of psychological warfare. But unless a major miracle occurs, it will not resolve any of the basic questions which now divide the world into two camps, each preparing to destroy the other. But talking is more agreeable than fighting, and it is not historically true that we have never won a conference.

The meetings which are taking place in Berlin could, under certain circumstances, considerably relieve world tensions. And perhaps, if those taking part, reflected on what R.L. Sharpe once said, some progress could be made. Sharpe said:"Each is given a bag of tools, a shapeless mass, a book of rules. And each must make, ere life has flown, a stumbling block or a stepping stone."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, JANUARY 25, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Foreign Ministers Conference opened in the American Zone of Berlin today. The three western powers said they hoped agreement could be reached with Russia on an Austrian Treaty and unification of Germany. But Russia's Foreign Minister Molotov brushed these two issues aside. And raised the question of giving Communist China representation at a future conference. I'd like to discuss the first day's developments in a few minutes.

In Washington, the Defense Department tonight told the Army that the 21 Americans who had chosen Communism in preference to being repatriated as Korean war prisoners be given dishonorable discharges. This ends all pay, allowances and veterans benefits. If any of the 21 men change their minds, their cases will be reviewed.

Attorneys appointed to represent Corporal Edward Dickenson who changed his mind and came home and now faces a possible court martial, say Dickenson is a "sick man." They add that the Corporal is "shocked" by charges that he dealt unlawfully with the enemy. The Defense Department promised to re-study the case. But noted it had to move fast before Dickenson was discharged and out of military jurisdiction.

The second group of former Communists who refused to be returned from Korea arrived on Formosa today, bringing the two day total to nearly ten thousand. The Chinese Nationalist President Chiang Kai-Shek, in a message to President Eisenhower, said their "liberation marks a significant victory over international Communism. It augurs well, he said, for the future of freedom."

The President, late today, made it known that he is "unalterable opposed" to the proposed Bricker amendment which would limit treaty-making powers and in some instances permit individual states to repudiate treaties. The President, in a letter to Republican Floor Leader, Senator Knowland said: "The proposal in its present form would be notice to our friends as well as our enemies abroad that our country intends to withdraw from its leadership in world affairs. It would make it impossible for us to deal effectively for our own mutual defense and common interests." Senator Knowland said he was hopeful that some sort of compromise could be worked out with Bricker and his supporters. The Senate begins debate on the amendment tomorrow.

Congress has received the President's Housing Message. And essentially it calls for more and better low-cost housing projects but with as little federal aid as possible. The President, in his message, suggested that 35-thousand new units be constructed in each of the next four years. That's 15-thousand units a year more than now contemplated. But, Mr. Eisenhower said: "While the federal government must provide leadership, programs must be avoided that would make our citizens increasingly dependent upon the government to supply their housing needs." The President acknowledged that "housing deficiencies continue to be serious" that "the national interest demands the elimination of slum conditions" but until new programs are fully tested, we should continue new construction at a "reasonable level." Among the new recommendations are lower mortgage rates, lower down payments and nearly a hundred million dollars in assistance from federal funds for low-cost housing.

The Senate Labor Committee began hearings today on the President's suggestions for amending the Taft-Hartley Law. The first to testify was Secretary of Labor James Mitchell. He discussed at length Mr. Eisenhower's proposal that sec et strike votes be taken under government supervision. Mitchell argued that the vote be held before a strike is called. He said he was presenting the "view of the Administration." But several Republican members of the Committee contended that the President really meant that a vote be taken AFTER a strike is called. The hearings continue tomorrow.

The July walkout of Democrats from Senator McCarthy's Investigating subcommittee has apparently come to an end. Senator McClellan - a Democrat from Arkansas - who led the walkout, says a "truce" has been negotiated. Henceforth, McCarthy will not have sole hiring and firing powers with regard to committee personnel - Democrats will be allowed their own committee counsel - and will be given a more equitable voice on which hearings in the future are to be public or closed.

The Senate today approved the President's nomination of Robert E. Lee as a member of the Federal Communications Commission. The vote was 58 to 25. Mr. Lee, a former FBI agent, faced opposition from those who contended that he lacked sufficient background for the job and was being pushed because he was a close friend of Senator McCarthy's.

Novelist Ernest Hemingway and his wife arrived by car at Entebbe, in Central East Africa after two plane crashes over the weekend. Mrs. Hemingway has two broken ribs. But otherwise the couple are apparently in pretty good shape.

Senator Gillette of Iowa has called for a full-scale investigation of rising coffee prices which the industry says is the result of tight supply caused by drought and frost in Brazil.

And here in New York, Robert Young has formally asked for membership on the Board of Directors of the New York Central Railroad - in the first move to gain control of the line.

The Foreign Ministers of the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France sat around a table in Berlin for almost four hours today. Secretary of State Dulles was the chairman. The French, British and Russian spokesmen led with their high cards, their maximum demands. Mr. Dulles will speak tomorrow. Mr. Bidault, speaking for France, said the conference should attempt to deal only with the unification of Germany, and the Austrian peace treaty. He said: "Our defense efforts cannot be the object of negotiation." And he said: "The German and the Austrian peace treaties are not for barter against concessions in Asia." And Bidault warned the Russians that "an error in history would be repeated if Germany were allowed to play off the East against the West, increasing its own power by concessions from the two camps."

Anthony Eden, speaking for Britain, said that if the Russians felt they are threatened with aggression from the West, Britain is prepared to search for further, fresh guarantees to reassure the Russians that they aren't going to be attacked. He proposed free all-German elections, to form an all-German assembly, which in turn could create an all-German government. Mr. Molotov presented the Russian view, and it became apparent that the Foreign Ministers of the West and Mr. Molotov are as far apart as ever. Molotov wants to start arguing about whether there should be a meeting of Foreign Ministers that would include Communist China. He would proceed from that to discuss the German question and the Austrian Treaty. He referred to West Germany as being run by Hitlerite Generals. Very little that Mr. Molotov said was new - our military bases abroad are designed to menace the Soviet Union, but are doomed to inevitable failure. The United States is to blame for Communist China not being admitted to the United Nations, and not receiving its lawful rights. The United States is responsible for "gross violations of the Korean armistice agreement." Our economic boycott of the Soviet sphere has damaged international trade. And we are backing German militarists who are already planning aggression and revenge.

Mr. Molotov offered no concessions; neither did Mr. Bidault or Mr. Eden. In the first day of argument both sides held to their previously announced positions. There is no reason to expect that Mr. Dulles will do otherwise when he answers Mr. Molotov tomorrow.

Today's French and British statements were pleasing to the American delegatio because they stuck to the line previously agreed upon. Basically the argument appears to have been about the order in which subjects shall be argued about. The Russians want to start arguing about a Foreign Ministers' meeting that would include Red China. The Western Powers want to start by discussing Germany and Austria. The Russian tactics are obvious. The Western Powers Powers are pretty well agreed on what they want in Germany and Austria; but they are not in complete agreement about their relations with Communist China. Therefore the Russians want to start talking about the area where there is the least agreement amongst the Western Allies. So today's session not only brought forth the old familiar charges and counter-charges; it also served to illustrate that the two sides want different things, and in different order.

It is clear from the partial text available that much of what Mr. Molotov was saying today was aimed, not at the men around the table but at French public opinion, and to a certain extent to British as well. This appears to be a case of a conference waiting for a mistake to heppen. The area of disagreement is so broad, the possibility of compromise so narrow, that both sides must of necessity watch and wait with vigilance for the other to make a mistake which can be capitalized for propaganda purposes.

This conference was difficult to arrange. It meets without an agreed agenda, and in an atmosphere where neither side professes any real hope of accomplishment. Even as it begins, the problem confronts both sides as to how they can effectively blame the other side for the failure of the conference. Wars are easier to start than to stop. And the same thing is true of conferences of this kind, undertaken without preparation, and without agreement as to the area to be discussed. In this case, we are asking the Russians to do something that is contrary to their whole doctrine and dogma; and they are asking us to do something which we cannot do, unless we are prepared to destroy the very basis of our foreign policy so far as Europe is concerned.

This conference will test the unity of the Western Powers. It will be an exhibition in the area of psychological warfare. But unless a major miracle occurs, it will not resolve any of the basic questions which now divide the world into two camps, each preparing to destroy the other. But talking is more agreeable than fighting, and it is not historically true that we have never won a conference.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The meetings which are taking place in Berlin could, under certain circumstances, considerably relieve world tensions. And perhaps, if those taking part, reflected on what R.L. Sharpe once said, some progress could be made. Sharpe said: "Each is given a big of tools, a shapeless mass, a book of rules. And each must make, ere life has flown, a stumbling block or a stepping stone."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday, Jan. 26, 1954

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles today told Molotov of the Soviet Union that Communist China is a "convicted aggressor." Mr. Dulles rejected the Soviet suggestion for world peace discussions with Red China in attendance. But..at the Berlin foreign ministers conference..the western powers accepted Molotov's agenda for the meeting.. which I'd like to discuss in a few minutes.

In Korea, the Communists have called on American ambassador Dean "to prove that your side has sincerity" and resume the preliminary peace talks on February first or some other date.

And the Communists today agreed to accept custody of the 21 Americans and other allied prisoners who refuse to return home. Both the Chinese and North Korean radios say they will permit Communist Red Cross workers to take custody of the men tomorrow. The broadcasts insist that the enemy still believes the fate of the war prisoners should be settled at a peace conference.

The announcement was made after the 21 Americans held a news conference and asked to be allowed to live under Communist rule as "free men." Sixteen of the men said their chief objection to returning home is "mcCarthyism." In general they said they thought they could not work for peace in the United States because they fear persecution.

Defense Secretary Wilson said in Washington today that these men are a disgrace to the Army and the United States. He feels that DIS honorable discharge from the army "is the least that should happen to them." Wilson says he assumes full responsibility for the decision. [redacted]. He also told reporters that court martial proceedings against Corporal Dickenson, who changed his mind about staying with the Communists, will 80 ahead as scheduled. [redacted]

The Senate today voted to ratify the mutual security treaty with South Korea. This does not require us to help the South Koreans in any aggressive move they may take to try to unify their country.

Senator Bricker said today "there is no room for compromise" in his proposed amendment to the Constitution, unless the compromise contains the key clause of his amendment. This is the clause the President contends would permit individual states to nullify treaties. Yesterday the President said he's "unalterably opposed" to the proposal. Today Majority Leader Knowland said efforts are still being made to work out a compromise.

Labor Secretary Mitchell told a Senate committee today that the Administration wants workers to approve strikes by ballot before strikes are started. In his second day of testimony, Mitchell said he does not believe that a similar poll..of stockholders.. is necessary. Democratic Senator Douglas of Illinois had suggested that as a matter of "reciprocal fairness" if strikers were to be polled then stockholders should be polled to see if they approve of management's last offer to unions that might strike. [redacted] a [redacted] of the livelihood of [redacted] s[redacted]ders.

Democratic Representative Robert L. Condon of California told a Senate committee today that he was kept away from secret atomic tests last May because of "anonymous" charges that he and his wife were Communists. Condon denied that he or his wife had ever been communists or communist sympathizers. He said the sources of the charges against him have not been made known to him.

Three Democratic senators today ended a six-months boycott of Senator McCarthy's investigating committee. They quit last July when the Republican members gave McCarthy sole control of the committee. Now, Democratic Senator McClellan of Arkansas, says "the proper democratic processes" have been restored to the committee.

Attorney General Brownell says anti-trust charges have been filed against the nation's four largest pencil manufacturers. They're accused of a price-fixing conspiracy. The companies are: Eberhard Faber... Eagle Pencil...Joseph Dixon Crucible and the American Lead Pencil Company of New Jersey.

In London today Prime Minister Churchill was asked by a Laborite for "enlightenment" on reports that he will soon retire. Sir Winston told the House of Commons: "It's a delusion."

In Madrid today, ten thousand students ALMOST seized the Madrid radio. They fought unsuccessfully with police to broadcast complaints against the strongarm tactics used yesterday to break up students demonstrations for the return of Gibraltar to Spain. [Studio technicians cut the station off the air after the students entered the building.]

Edward R. Murrow: January 26, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

The Western powers at the Berlin Conference sprung a genuine surprise, when they accepted the Soviet proposal for an agenda. In doing so they avoided a repetition of the Palais Rose conference in Paris in 1951, when the Deputy Foreign Ministers devoted seventy-four meetings to a futile debate, over the adoption of an agenda. One might say that the Western Foreign Ministers jumped over the Palais Rose with the fabulous agility shown by the cow that jumped over the moon.

This feat has accomplished two things. It has nullified the favorite Soviet strategy of killing time, with prolonged debate over procedural details, so as to pour out a flow of Soviet propaganda. And it has demonstrated that the West really wants to transact business at Berlin. The first achievement is valuable because it shuts off a stream of useless and confusing talk. The second is of impressive importance. For the West makes it clear that it really wants results at Berlin. Mr. Dulles said in so many words that the West does not like the Soviet agenda, but that it wouldn't contend for a better one, because it chose to waste no time in getting down to effective action. The West granted the Soviet Union a tactical advantage, but it has bought with it a considerable amount of good will.

It is well to point out that the Western move does cost something. The conference now goes to work on Point One of the Soviet agenda, which is to discuss the reduction in world tensions by calling a Five Power Conference including Communist China. This is a distasteful way for Secretary Dulles in particular, to begin a conference over Germany and Austria. Tomorrow Mr. Molotov will take the podium to hold forth about Communist China. For at the close of today's session he moved formally the calling of such a conference for some time in May or June. And while the Five Power proposal has already been rejected in advance, there is a certain advantage to the Soviet Union in advocating it. But this advantage is outweighed by the gain to the West in showing it is willing to concede this much, if it saves time in getting to work on a German and Austrian solution.

It seemed today that Mr. Molotov recognized that Mr. Dulles was scoring. He spoke immediately afterward and appeared to be trying to get out of a corner. Mr. Dulles had effectively contrasted the constructive speeches made yesterday by Monsieur Bidault and Mr. Eden, with the abusive and regressive speech of Mr. Molotov. Today Mr. Molotov was not abusive, and wanted to sound persuasive. He argued about Germany, urging return to the principles of the Potsdam agreement. He argued about the Communist revolution in China. He defended Communist China from the charge of aggression in Korea. He complained about Mr. Dulles, contrasting his speech unfavorably with those of the French and British Ministers. He insisted that he wanted agreement as much as they did.

Mr. Dulles told off Mr. Molotov for reviving false charges and incriminations yesterday, whereas the Western Ministers reflected new ideas and new vision. He called the Soviet policy a reversion to a sterile and dangerous past. The French, he pointed out, were resolved not to repeat the past. In the interest of permanent peace France, he said, is striving to forge strong lines of common interest and purpose to unite Germany with her neighbors. He cited the coal and steel community and the proposed defense community. "Such creative thinking" he declared, "marks freedom at its best." He referred to Mr. Molotov's fears that the defense community would be dominated by German militarism. "That is precisely what the European Defense Community is designed to prevent" he said. "It is a program that acceptably precludes any German national army and any German General Staff." And he pointed out that that is what the Germans themselves want. "It seems incredible" said Mr. Dulles, "that Soviet leaders should now be devoting themselves to reviving Franco-German hostility, and to obstructing a unification that would realize the vision of wise European statesmen who for generations have been preaching unity as the indispensable foundation for lasting peace.

It was on the subject of Communist China that Mr. Dulles was most forceful, and his attack on that country was perhaps the strongest that has been yet heard at an international gathering. He rejected Red China's claim to be one of the five great powers. He read its record: its flagrant aggression in Korea and its promotion of aggression against Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. "All nations that are neighbors of the Chinese Communist regime" he said, "feel menaced by its scarcely concealed aggressive purposes. I would like to state here plainly" he declared with emphasis, "that the United States will not agree to join in a five-power conference with the Chinese Communist aggressors for the purpose of dealing generally with the peace of the world. It is one thing to recognize evil as a fact", he said. "It is another to take evil to one's breast and call it good."

He concluded by dismissing the right of the great powers to rule the world and determine the destinies of other nations. The charter of the United Nations and the principles of justice and fair dealing confer no such mandate, he said.

This was Mr. Dulles first major speech, as Secretary of State at a major ministerial conference. It was not a long speech - twenty-seven minutes - and it was effective. It is true that debating points and strategic maneuvers in themselves, are not results, but in a conference that may produce few results, they help the world to judge who it is that wants results.

It remains to be seen what results - if any - will be achieved at the Berlin meetings. But if progress is to be made, those taking part would do well to follow the advice of Victor Hugo and Tryon Edwards:"Strong and bitter words indicate a weak cause...most controversies would soon be ended if those engaged in them would first accurately define their terms and then adhere to their definitions."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Sec etary of State Dulles today told Molotov of the Soviet Union that Communist China is a "convicted aggressor." Mr. Dulles rejected the Soviet suggestion for world peace discussions with Red China in attendance. But, at the Berlin foreign ministers conference the western powers accepted Molotov's agenda for the meeting which I'd like to discuss in a few minutes.

In Korea, the Communists have called on American ambassador Dean "to prove that your side has sincerity" and resume the preliminary peace talks on February first or some other date.

And the Communists today agreed to accept custody of the 21 Americans and other allied prisoners who refuse to return home. Both the Chinese and North Korean radios say they will permit Communist Red Cross workers to take custody of the men tomorrow. The broadcasts insist that the enemy still believes the fate of the war prisoners should be settled at a peace conference.

The announcement was made after the 21 Americans held a news conference and asked to be allowed to live under Communist rule as "free men." Sixteen of the men said their chief objection to returning home is "McCarthyism." In general they said they thought they could not work for peace in the United States because they fear persecution.

Defense Secretary Wilson said in Washington today that these men are a disgrace to the Army and the United States. He feels that dishonorable discharge from the army is the least that should happen to them." Wilson says he assumes full responsibility for the decision. He also told reporters that court martial proceedings against Corporal Dickenson, who changed his mind about staying with the Communists, will go ahead as scheduled.

The Senate today voted to ratify the mutual security treaty with South Korea. This does not require us to help the South Koreans in any aggressive move they may take to try to unify their country.

Senator Bricker said today "there is no room for compromise" in his proposed amendment to the Constitution unless the compromise contains the key clause of his amendment. This is the clause the President contends would permit individual states to nullify treaties. Yesterday the President said he's "unalterably opposed" to the proposal. Today Majority Leader Knowland said efforts are still being made to work out a compromise.

Labor Secretary Mitchell told a Senate committee today that the Administrati wants workers to approve strikes are started. In his second day of testimony, Mitchell said he does not believe that a similar poll of stockholders is necessary. Democratic Senator Douglas of Illinois had suggested that as a matter of "reciprocal fairness" if strikers were to be polled then stockholders should be polled to see if they approve of management's last offer to unions that might strike.

Democratic Representative Robert L. Condon of California told a Senate committee today that he was kept away from secret atomic tests last May because of "anonymous" charges that he and his wife were Communists. Condon denied that he or his wife had ever been communists or communist sympathizers. He said the sources of the charges against him have not been made known to him.

Three Democratic Senators today ended a six-months boycott of Senator McCarthy's investigating committee. They quit last July when the Republican members gave McCarthy sole control of the committee. Now, Democratic Senator McClellan of Arkansas, says "the proper democratic processes" have been resotred to the committee.

Attorney General Brownell says anti-trust charges have been filed against the nation's four largest pencil manufacturers. They're accused of a price-fixing conspiracy. The companies are: Eberhard Faber, Eagle Pencil, Joseph Dixon Crucible and the American Lead Pencil Company of New Jersey.

In London today Prime Minister Churchill was asked by a Laborite for "enlightenment" on reports that he will soon retire. Sir Winston told the House of Commons: "It's a delusion."

In Madrid today, ten thousand students almost seized the Madrid radio. They fought unsuccessfully with police to broadcast complaints against the strongarm tactics used yesterday to break up students demonstrations for the return of Gibralter to Spain. Studio technicians cut the station off the air after the students entered the building.

The Western powers at the Berlin Conference sprung a genuine surprise, when they accepted the Soviet proposal for an agenda. In doing so they avoided a repetition of the Palais Rose conference in Paris in 1951, when the Deputy Foreign Ministers devoted seventy-four meetings to a futile debate, over the adoption of an agenda. One might say that the Western Foreign Ministers jumped over the Palais Rose with the fabulous agility shown by the cow that jumped over the moon. This feat has accomplished two things: It has nullified the favorite Soviet strategy of killing time, with prolonged debate over procedural details, so as to pour out a flow of Soviet propaganda. And it has demonstrated that the West really wants to transact business at Berlin. The first achievement is valuable because it shuts off a stream of useless and confusing talk. The second is of impressive importance. For the West makes it clear that it really wants results at Berlin. Mr. Dulles said in so many words that the West does not like the Soviet agenda, but that it wouldn't contend for a better one, because it chose to waste no time in getting down to effective action. The West granted the Soviet Union a tactical advantage, but it has bought with it a considerable amount of good will. It is well to point out that the Western move does cost something. The conference now goes to work on Point One of the Soviet agenda, which is to discuss the reduction in world tensions by calling a Five Power Conference including Communist China. This is a distasteful way for Secretary Dulles in particular, to begin a conference over Germany and Austria. Tomorrow Mr. Molotov will take the podium to hold forth about Communist China. For at the close of today's session he moved formally the calling of such a conference for some time in May or June. And while the Five Power proposal has already been rejected in advance, there is a certain advantage to the Soviet Union in advocating it. But this advantage is outweighed by the gain to the West in showing it is willint to concede this much, if it saves time in getting to work on a German and Austrian solution.

It seemed today that Mr. Molotov recognized that Mr. Dulles was scoring. He spoke immediately after ward and appeared to be trying to get out of a corner. Mr. Dulles had effectively contrasted the constructive speeches made yesterday by Monsieur Bidault and Mr. Eden, with the abusive and regressive speech of Mr. Molotov. Today Mr. Molotov was not abusive, and wanted to sound persuasive. He argued about Germany, urging return to the principles of the Potsdam agreement. He arguod about the Communist revolution in China. He defended Communist China from the charge of aggression in Korea. He complained about Mr. Dulles, contrasting his speech unfavorably with those of the French and British Ministers. He insisted that he wanted agreement as much as they did.

Mr. Dulles told off Mr. Molotov for reviving false charges and incriminations yesterday, whereas the Western Ministers reflected new ideas and new vision. He called the Soviet policy a reversion to a sterile and dangerous past. The French, he pointed out, were resolved not to repeat the past. In the interest of permanent peace, France, he said, is striving to forge strong lines of common interest and purpose to unite Germany with her neighbors. He cited the coal and steel community and the proposed defense community. "Such creative thinking" he declared, "marks freedom at its best." He referred to Mr. Molotov's fears that the defense community would be dominated by German militarism. "That is precisely what the European Defense Community is designed to prevent" he said. "It is a program that acceptably precludes any German national army and any German General Staff." And he pointed out that this is what the Germans themselves want. "It seems incredible" said Mr. Dulles, "that Soviet leaders should now be devoting themselves to reviving Franco-German hostility, and to obstructing a unification that would realize the vision of wise European statesmen who for generations have been preaching unity as the indispensable foundation for lasting peace.

It was on the subject of Communist China that Mr. Dulles was most forceful, and his attack on that country was perhaps the strongest that has been yet heard at an international gathering. He rejected Red China's claim to be one of the five great powers. He read its record: its flagrant aggression in Korea and its promotion of aggression against Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. "All nations that are neighbors of the Chinese Communist regime" he said, "feel menaced by its scarcely concealed aggressive purposes. I would like to state here plainly" he declared with emphasis, "that the United States will not agree to join in a five-power conference with the Chinese Communist aggressors for the purpose of dealing generally with the peace of the world. It is one thing to recognize evil as a fact," he said. "It is another to take evil to one's breast and call it good."

He concluded by dismissing the right of the great powers to rule the world and determine the destinies of other nations. The charter of the United Nations and the principles of justice and fair dealing confer no such mandate, he said.

This was Mr. Dulles first major speech as Secretary of State at a major ministerial conference. It was not a long speech - twenty-seven minutes - and it was effective. It is true that debating points and strategic maneuvers in themselves are not results, but in a conference that may produce few results, they help the world to judge who it is that wants results.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It remains to be seen what results - if any - will be achieved at the Berlin meetings. But if progress is to be made, those taking part would do well to follow the advice of Victor Hugo and Tryon Edwards: "Strong and bitter words indicate a weak cause - most controversies would soon be ended if those engaged in them would first accurately define their terms and then adhere to their definitions."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday. Jan. 27, 1954

This is the news:

The President said today that his Administration is liberal in its human relations, and conservative in financial matters. When a reporter suggested that some politicians are calling the President's program "new dealish", Mr Eisenhower told him:" When it comes down to dealing with the relationships between the human in this country, and his government, the people in this Administration believe in being what I think would normally be called Liberal....and "said the President"...when we deal with economic affairs of this country, we believe in being conservative." The President suggested that the reporters take a look at his new budget. He said this is proof of what his Administration is trying to do, and the Direction in which its going. He said the former Democratic administration HAD BEEN going further into debt. He is trying to reduce the debt.

The President, at this news conference, touched on a number of news matters that were developing in various parts of the world. He spoke his complete support of Secretary of State Dulles' statements at the Berlin foreign ministers meeting. And today Mr. Dulles flatly rejected the

Molotov suggestion for a Big Five meeting..to include Communist China.. and to discuss disarmament and world trade. [redacted]

Mr. Dulles said we refuse to "fritter away our time" on Communist China. Any issue involving the Chinese can be settled through normal diplomatic channels. The purpose of the Berlin meeting is to try to agree on the unification of Germany and independence for Austria. And Mr. Dulles said he was ready to proceed. He added: when this is done "then, and only then, can we stand before the public as capable of assuming other and heavier tasks." [redacted] Then Mr. Molotov, for 80-minutes, repeated his demand for a Big Five meeting.. refuzed to accept the western "no".. and said he's quite sure the Berlin conference will agree on the question of a Big Five meeting. Allied diplomats are described as "baffled" over how and when, to get to the German and Austrian questions. A Soviet spokesman told reporters:"There is no reason to think the Berlin conference is a blind alley."

At the White House, the President made known his interest in climbing coffee prices, and said the Federal Trade Commission would investigate. Later, the Commission announced such an investigation is underway...to find out whether the high prices are due to speculation or monopoly or the laws of supply and demand. The National Coffee Association here in New York says it welcomes the investigation and feels it will "acquaint the American public with the facts."

The President made it clear at his newsconference that he never made a campaign promise to maintain farm prices at a rigid support level beyond the end of this year..when the present law expires. He says there's been no change in his position. He eventually wants flexible price supports. And Secretary of Agriculture Benson told Negro farmers in Alabama that the government's price support program is helpful "primarily to the larger, more mechanized and more efficient farms." He said 70 per cent of the nation's Negro farmers are still tenants.

Mr. Eisenhower told reporters that his associates in Congress have told him they are still hopeful of a compromise on the Bricker amendment to change the constiutution and limit the treaty-making powers of the President. A short time later Democratic Senator George of Georgia proposed a substitute for the Bricker amendment..jumping the gun on Administration leaders who planned to introduce their own substitute.

The George proposal eliminates the heart of the Bricker proposal, which Mr. Eisenhower had called unacceptable. It would make treaties and presidential agreements invalid, if they conflicted with the Constitution. But it would not affect the present division of state and national powers. There is no indication when the Republicans will offer their own substitute to the Bricker proposal. Today Chairman Wiley of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee told his colleagues that a public opinion poll shows that 72 per cent of the people never heard of the Bricker amendment.

The President was asked today for comment on Democratic Representative Condon's testimony before the atomic energy committee. Mr. Eisenhower said the Californian has every right to defend himself against charges which led to his being barred from atomic weapon tests. And Condon today testified that he once belonged to two organizations that later were certified as Communist fronts. He identified these groups as the National Lawyers Guild and the League for Peace and Democracy. He said he had done various things in the political field which would be "stupid" today and said again he never held any Communist views.

Mr. Eisnhower was asked what he thought about the action by a Veterans of Foreign Wars Post [redacted] Norwalk, Connecticut. This post has made up a list of local residents whose records and activities is considers Communistic. This list has been sent to the F.B.I. Mr. Eisenhower [redacted] was asked if he thinks this is a threat to individual freedom. He said he doesn't believe its possible to stop the V.F.W. activities. But there are laws of libel and [redacted] slander, and those who compile such lists must take the responsibility. [redacted] A spokesman for the V.F.W. says all of its one million 200-thousand members have been urged to turn over to the F.B.I. the names of any citizens they think might be Communists [redacted]

The A.D.A. -- Americans for Democratic Action in Norwalk bought a newspaper ad to call the action of the Veterans post "un-American." But Senator Mc Carthy says its an excellent idea. And [redacted] Representative Velde says his House committee on un-American activities welcomes cooperation of patriotic organizations.

The Senate today approved or cleared for floor action nearly a half million dollars in funds for investigating Communism. The Senate has approved 228-thousand for the Jenner committee. And the rules committee has recommended 216-thousand for the McCarthy committee. Senator Jenner says there is some duplication between the two committees, but "its healthy work we all are doing."

At his news conference today the President said he would look into a reporters suggestion that the federal government find some way to give "honorable discharges" to its employes..so that they would not be under suspicion as security risks.

And the President said he hopes that those Korean veterans who may have changed their minds about staying with the Communists, or were forced to make confessions of germ warfare, would be handled with sympathy and understanding. The President said Defense Secretary Wilson will personally see to it, that justice is done in the case of Corporal Dickenson, one of the men who changed his mind and decided to return from a Communist prison camp. [Dickenson now faces a court martial.]

Representatives of the 16 nations that fought the enemy in Korea, met in Washington today to discuss Communist demands to resume the preliminary peace talks. There was no announcement of any decision being reached.

And in Korea--about now--the 21 Americans who prefer to stay with the Communists are due to leave their stockade in the neutral zone and go north with the enemy.

In Indo-China, the Communist-led guerrillas have again seized the initiative in the central part of the country and are attacking on a 187-mile front. They've captured two French outposts and may be trying again to cut Indo-China in two.

In Madrid, three Spanish students were reported wounded in a third day of street fighting. What started as a demonstration to have Britain return Gibraltar to Spain is now a protest against the way police injured students in Monday's demonstration.

In London, the British admiralty says "minor malicious damage" has been discovered on the aircraft carrier "Ocean"..the 14th such incident aboard a British warship in eight months. A naval source calls it "part of a petty crime wave".. he sees no indication of organized sabotage.

Italy's Premier-designate Fanfani apparently lost his chance of forming a new government when both the center and right wing parties decided to oppose him.

And the Vatican says Pope Pius is suffering from fatigue produced by overwork abd must rest to regain his strength.

SÉLAL BYAR'

The President of Turkey...Celal Bayar...arrived in Washington today and called for continuing friendship with the United States "as we march side by side" toward world peace.

And House Speaker Martin today called for a cut in all excise and sales taxes except on liquor and tobacco. He wants all such taxes brought down to a maximum of ten per cent. This would mean a 50 per cent cut in the present tax on such things as furs, jewelery, and movie admissions. It would mean a five per cent cut in local telephone taxes, domestic telegrams and personal transportation. It would mean a 15 per cent cut for the present tax on long distance telephone calls.

The Senate Interior Committee has approved statehood for Hawaii.

Republican Senator Cooper of Kentucky says he is opposed to the President's plan for government-sponsored strike votes. [This just about kills any chance of the plan being approved by the Labor Committee.]

C.I.O. President Reuther says the President's proposals to change the Taft-Hartley law reflect what he called "a deep-seated anti-labor prejudice."

The Labor Department says factories laid off workers in December at twice the post-world war two average for the month of December. But the level of factory employment is now second only to what it was in 1952.

Secretary Hobby today named James W. Foristel to be associate general counsel of the Health, Education and Welfare Department. He has been a legal adviser to the American Medical Association.

William D. Huskey, a state department security agent, resigned today and said it was impossible to work under Scott McLeod, the department's chief of security. Huskey has guarded many foreign dignitaries on their visits to this country.

In Albany a Democratic state leader revealed that before he was deported Lucky Luciano was visited in prison by Frank Costello, Willy Moretti and several other underworld figures. The visits were supposed to have been made "so that Luciano might render assistance in the war effort.". Luciano was deported in 1946.

Too much hard news to permit of any personal comment or analysis tonight...Mark Twain said...News is history in its first and best form, its vivid and fascinating form..and history is the pale and tranquil reflection of it.....And this from Francis quarles...Let the greatest part of the news you hear be the least part of what you believe...lest the greater part of what you believe,be the least part of what is true.....

good night and good luck...

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President said today that his Administration is liberal in its human relations and conservative in financial matters. When a reporter suggested that some politicians are calling the President's program "new dealish" Mr. Eisenhower told him: "When it comes down to dealing with the relationships between the human in this country and his government, the people in this Administration believe in being what I think would normally be called Liberal and "said the President" when we deal with economic affairs of this country, we believe in being conservative." The President suggested that the reporters take a look at his new budget. He said this is proof of what his Administration is trying to do and the direction in which its going. He said the former Democratic administration had been going further into debt. He is trying to reduce the debt.

The President, at this news conference, touched on a number of news matters that were developing in various parts of the world. He spoke his complete support of Secretary of State Dulles' statements at the Berlin foreign ministers meeting. And today Mr. Dulles flatly rejected the Molotov suggestion for a Big Five meeting to include Communist China and to discuss disarmament and world trade. Mr. Dulles said we refuse to "fritter away our time" on Communist China. Any issue involving the Chinese can be settled through normal diplomatic channels. The purpose of the Berlin meeting is to try to agree on the unification of Germany and independence for Austria. And Mr. Dulles said he was ready to proceed. He added: when this is done "then and only then can we stand before the public as capable of assuming other and heavier tasks." Then Mr. Molotov, for 80 minutes, repeated his demand for a Big Five meeting refused to accept the western "no" and said he's quite sure the Berlin conference will agree on the question of a Big Five meeting. Allied diplomats are described as "baffled" over how and when to get to the German and Austrian questions. A Soviet spokesman told reporters: "There is no reason to think the Berlin conference is a blind alley."

At the White House the President made known his interest in climbing coffee prices and said the Federal Trade Commission would investigate. Later, the Commission announced such an investigation is underway to find out whether the high prices are due to speculation or monopoly or the laws of supply and demand. The National Coffee Association here in New York says it welcomes the investigation and feels it will "acquaint the American public with the facts."

The President made it clear at his news conference that he never made a campaign promise to maintain farm prices at a rigid support level beyond the end of this year when the present law expires. He says there's been no change in his position. He eventually wants flexible price supports. And Secretary of Agriculture Benson told Negro farmers in Alabama that the government's price support program is helpful "primarily to the larger, more mechanized and more efficient farms." He said 70 percent of the nation's Negro farmers are still tenants.

Mr. Eisenhower told reporters that his associates in Congress have told him they are still hopeful of a compromise on the Bricker amendment to change the constitution and limit the treaty-making powers of the President. A short time later Democratic Senator George of Georgia proposed a substitute for the Bricker amendment jumping the gun on Administration leaders who planned to introduce their own substitute. The George proposal eliminates the heart of the Bricker proposal which Mr. Eisenhower had called unacceptable. It would make treaties and presidential agreements invalid if they conflicted with the Constitution. But it would not affect the present division of state and national powers. There is no indication when the Republicans will offer their own substitute to the Bricker proposal.

The President was asked today for comment on Democratic Representative Condon's testimony before the atomic energy committee. Mr. Eisenhower said the Californian has every right to defend himself against charges which led to his being barred from atomic weapon tests. And Condon today testified that he once belonged to two organizations that later were certified as Communist fronts. He identified these groups as the National Lawyers Guild and the League for Peace and Democracy. He said he had done various things in the political field which would be "stupid" today and said again he never held any Communist views.

Mr. Eisenhower was asked what he thought about the action by a Veterans of Foreign Wars Post in Norwalk, Connecticut. This post has made up a list of local residents whose records and activities is considers Communistic. This list has been sent to the FBI. Mr. Eisenhower was asked if he thinks this is a threat to individual freedom. He said he doesn't believe its possible to stop the VFW activities. But there are laws of libel and slander and those who compile such lists must take the responsibility. A spokesman for the VFW says all of its one million 200-thousand members have been urged to turn over to the FBI the names of any citizens they think might be Communists. The Americans for Democratic Action in Norwalk bought a newspaper ad to call the action of the Veterans post "un-American." But Senator McCarthy says its an excellent idea. And Representative Velde says his House committee on un-American activities welcomes cooperation of patriotic organizations.

The Senate todayapproved or cleared for floor action nearly a half million dollars in funds for investigating Communism. The Senate has approved 228-thousand for the Jenner committee. And the rules committee has recommended 216-thousand for the McCarthy committee. Senator Jenner says there is some duplication between the two committees but "its healthy work we all aredoing."

At his news conference today the President said he would look into a reporter's suggestion that the federal government find some way to give "honorable discharges" to its employees - so that they would not be under suspicion as security risks. And the President said he hopes that those Korean veterans who may have changed their minds about staying with the Communists or were forced to make confessions of germ warfare, would be handled with sumpathy and understanding. The President said Defense Secretary Wilson will personally see to it that justice is done in the case of Corporal Dickenson, one of the men who changed his mind and decided to return from a Communist prison camp. Dickenson now faces a court martial.

Representatives of the 16 nations that fought the enemy in Korea met in Washington today to discuss Communist demands to resume the preliminary peace talks. There was no announcement of any decision being reached.

And in Korea about now, the 21 Americans who prefer to stay with the Communists are due to leave their stockade in the neutral zone and go north with the enemy.

In Indo-China, the Communist-led guerrillas have again seized the initiative in the central part of the country and are attacking on a 187-mile front. They've captured two French outposts and may be trying again to cut Indo-China in two.

In Madrid, three Spanish students were reported wounded in a third day of street fighting. What started as a demonstration to have Britain return Gibraltar to Spain is now a protest against the way police injured students in Monday's demonstration.

In London, the British admiralty says "minor malicious damage" has been discovered on the aircraft carrier "Ocean" - the 14th such incident aboard a British warship in eight months. A naval source calls it "part of a petty crime wave" - he sees no indication of organized sabotage.

Italy's Premier-designate Fanfani apparently lost his chance of forming a new government when both the center and right wing parties decide to oppose him.

And the Vatican says Pope Pius is suffering from fatigue produced by overwork and must rest to regain his strength.

The President of Turkey Celal Bayar arrived in Washington today and called for continuing friendship with the United States "as we march side by side" toward world peace.

And House Speaker Martin today called for a cut in all excise and sales taxes except on liquor and tobacco. He wants all such taxes brought down to a maximum of ten percent. This would mean a 50 percent cut in the present tax on such things as furs, jewelry, and movie admissions. It would mean a five percent cut in all local telephone taxes, domestic telegrams and personal transportation. It would mean a 15 percent cut for the present tax on long distance telephone calls.

The Senate Interior Committee has approved statehood for Hawaii.

Republican Senator Cooper of Kentucky says he is opposed to the President's plan for government-sponsored strike votes. This just about kills any chance of the plan being approved by the Labor Committee.

CIO President Reuther says th President's proposals to change the Taft-Hartley law reflect what he called "a deep-seated anti-labor prejudice."

The Labor Department says factories laid off workers in December at twice the post-world war two average for the month of December. But the level of factory employment is now second only to what it was in 1952.

Secretary Hobby today named James W. Foristel to be associate general counsel of the Health, Education and Welfare Department. He has been a legal adviser to the American Medical Association.

William D. Huskey, a state department security agent, resigned today and said it was impossible to work under Scott McLeod, the department's chief of security. Huskey has guarded many foreign dignitaries on their visits to this country.

In Albany a Democratic state leader revealed that before he was deported, Lucky Luciano was visited in prison by Frank Costello, Willy Moretti and several other underworld figures. The visits were supposed to have been made "so that Luciano might render assistance in the war effort." Luciano was deported in 1946.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Too much hard news to permit of any personal comment or analysis tonight. Mark Twain said: "News is history in its first and best form, its vivid and fascinating form and history is the pale and tranquil reflection if it." And this from Francis Quarles "Let the greatest part of the news you hear be the least part of what you believe lest the greater part of what you believe, be the least part of what is true.

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - Jan 28, 1954

This is the news:

The President says the nation is "marvelously prosperous"..employment is high...prices are steady, and wages and profits are generally satisfactory. In his economic message to the Congress Mr. Eisenhower said, the "current economic re-adjustment seems likely to be brief, and self-correcting." But--he said--"the situation must not be reviewed with complacency." The President pledges that, if and when a depression does occur in this country he will take all-out action: cut taxes..liberalize credit.. start a large-scale public works program. He says the Government will be ready to deal with any contingencies that arise. And he asked Congress for immediate action..for bold steps to strengthen the economy... along the lines suggested in his recent messages on old age insurance, housing, and the like. The President did not ask for an increase in the 75 cents an hour minimum wage. He said the time is not ripe."

Tonight, the President called on all Republicans to unite behind his legislative program, as a bulwark against "the threats of our time." In an eight and a half minute film, to be shown at Lincoln Day dinners across the country, Mr. Eisenhower said the party must stand or fall on his program. He said only with its approval could the party attract new and willing workers.

In Berlin today, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov called for a world conference this year with both United Nations and other countries..such as Communist China..in attendance. He would have this conference discuss the arms race and atomic control. [I should like to review today's Berlin session in a few minutes.]

The United States today rejected the Indian proposal for a United Nations meeting on Korea. It appears that the February ninth meeting will not come off.

And the United Nations command in Korea today told us something about the 21 Americans who today returned to North Korea and their Communist captors. The U.N. says that nine of these men had been stool-pigeons for their Communist guards at North Korean prison camps. Four of them expected to be punished for this if they returned to this country. The U.N. says five of the men attended school in China while they were prisoners; seven others have been selected for a similar "education." Of the 21 Americans five are considered weak and not sincere believers in Communism. The U.N. says these men are staying with the enemy either because they were promised such educations..or they fell in love with Chinese women..or because of their hopes to get something for nothing. We are also told that only two of the 21 attended college in this country. Ten had an average two years in high school. The rest had a lesser education. None had any record of political activity before joining the army. All but one ..a draftee..were regular army men.

In the Senate today, Republican Senator Bricker of Ohio attacked, in detail, the President's "unalterable opposition" to the ~~British~~ Bricker proposal for a constitutional amendment to ~~weaken~~ limit the President's treaty-making powers. Bricker said:"Although the President's motives are, as always, sincere, his advisers have sold him a bad bill of goods." Bricker said "utterly no foundation" to the President's charge that the amendment would restrict the conduct of foreign affairs. Bricker said the President's complaint that its passage would indicate to other countries our intent to withdraw from world leadership is "purely an emotional argument." The Senator said the President made an "untrue" statement when he said the amendment would make it impossible to deal with friendly nations for mutual defense. And Bricker said the President was "100 per cent wrong" in saying his proposal would impair our hopes and plans for peace..and our plans to share atomic energy with others for peaceful purposes. Senator Bricker complained of Secretary of State Dulles' "unbending" opposition and refusal to compromise. And he said it would be improper for President Eisenhower to use patronage and other types of pressure in an effort to defeat his proposal. When Bricker was through, Senator Wiley, who supports the President's position, asked his colleagues to "take a look" at those who attack the President with what he called "so much emotion and so little logic."

In Chicago, Adlai Stevenson called the Bricker amendment "dangerous, radical and unnecessary" and said he hopes the President will stand firm against it.

The American Medical Association said today that a distorted picture of the nation's health needs has been drawn to influence public support for a government-controlled medical care program. The A.M.A. urges continued reliance on voluntary health insurance for those who can afford it and direct help from local and state governments for the poor.

The visiting President Bayar of Turkey said in Washington today that his government will stand firm with the western democracies. He attacked those countries who are "wavering with an appeasing attitude" and said "there is no room for manuvering on the side lines." He mentioned no nation by name.

[redacted]

The President of Syria said in Damascus today that opposition elements have attacked government troops. The army has been ordered to take control in troubled parts of the country.

Edward R. Murrow: January 28, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

Most of the words spoken in Berlin today, at the Foreign Ministers' Conference, were familiar. Mr. Molotov wants a world conference this year, to discuss the general reduction of armaments. He says the conference should be "within the framework of the United Nations," but that non-U.N. members should also be present, (by which of course he means Communist China.) He wants this conference to deal also with the matter of atomic weapons. This is a familiar proposal. The West has rejected it in the past, contending that any control of atomic weapons depends upon adequate international inspection, which the Russians won't agree to. And the West has said also that any across-the-board cut in arms would leave the Russians with an advantage in terms of manpower.

Today, after three-and-a-half days of conversation, Mr. Molotov has yet to deal with the substance of any single item on the agenda. He remains determined, somehow some way, to smuggle Red China into an international conference. And he wants that conference to decide what to do with the world.

Today, Secretary of State Dulles demanded again that the conference start talking about Germany. He said: "Who is this Chou-En-Lai (the Chinese Communist leader) whose addition to our circle would make possible the solution of all our problems?" Mr. Dulles pointed out that the Chinese regime had come to power by war, mass liquidation and starvation. He declined to believe that the four Foreign Ministers, plus Chou-En-Lai, could solve the political, military and economic problems with which the U.N. has been grappling for nine years.

Molotov has apparently decided that if he can't gain ground at least he can gain time. Today he proposed the creation of a committee to "define existing differences on the issue of a Five Power Conference." He wants the Foreign Ministers meanwhile to start talking about measures to "reduce international tensions." The Western Foreign Ministers refused to agree to the committee.

As things stand tonight, the conference is still discussing the first item on the agenda. It is possible that the Russians are preparing to deadlock the conference before it ever gets to the subjects of Germany and Austria. At some point the Western representatives will have to try to choke off these Soviet excursions that lead everywhere except to the immediate issues. Then Moscow will howl that the West is ganging up and frustrating all moves to achieve peace, disarmament, atomic controls and economic prosperity. The problem that confronts the West is somehow to keep the conference going, and keep as much of world opinion as possible behind Western policy. The Russian tactics would seem to be obvious. They are executing a powerful pincers movement in Europe and in Asia. The one in Europe is diplomatic, the one in Asia is military. The ultimate objective is to nip off France from the Western alliance. In Indo-China the Communist offensive assumes more and more threatening proportions. This offensive was launched to coincide with the opening of the Berlin meeting. In Berlin, the first Foreign Minister to be invited to dinner by Molotov was Bidault of France. These two events are clearly linked - an effort to bring great military pressure to bear on the French people, who are weary of the cold war in Europe and the hot war in Asia, and who are fearful of German re-armament. They are eager, at almost any price to end the eight-year-old war in Indo-China. This is the global application of the technique of the carrot and the stick, designed to cause, not the donkey but the French to move. It consists of friendly gestures and words in Berlin, combined with a strong Communist thrust in Indo-China. The aim is not to persuade anyone around the table in Berlin; it is rather to capture public and parliamentary positions in Paris. Molotov is offering, at least by implication, peace in Indo-China and a Germany that will not threaten the French.

Bidault has engaged in many arguments with Molotov. He is not likely to be either bribed or frightened. So far he has stuck staunchly to the Western line at Berlin. But in the postwar years, at almost every major international conference, the French Foreign Minister has been caught with his Cabinet down, or had his chair pulled from under him by being overruled by the French Parliament.

David Schoenbrun cables me from Paris tonight that every word said or implied in Berlin will have an immediate impact in Paris, where it can be said without exaggeration the real outcome of the Berlin Conference may well be decided.

What we are witnessing at ~~the Foreign Ministers Conference~~ in Berlin is an effort to juggle hemispheres on the basis of power politics. The French scientist and philosopher Pascal once remarked: "Justice without power is inefficient; power without justice is tyranny. Justice and power must therefore be brought together so that whatever is just may be powerful and whatever is powerful is just.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, JANUARY 28, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President says the nation is "marvelously prosperous" - employment is high - prices are steady and wages and profits are generally satisfactory. In his economic message to the Congress Mr. Eisenhower said the "current economic re-adjustment seems likely to be brief and self-correcting." But, he said, "the situation must not be reviewed with complacency." The President pledges that if and when a depression does occur in this country he will take all-out action: cut taxes, liberalize credit, start a large-scale public works program. He says the Government will be ready to deal with any contingencies that arise. And he asked Congress for immediate action for bold steps to strengthen the economy along the lines suggested in his recent messages on old age insurance, housing and the like. The President did not ask for an increase in the 75 cents an hour minimum wage. He said the time is not ripe."

Tonight, the President called on all Republicans to unite behind his legislative program as a bulwark against "the threats of our time." In an eight and a half minute film to be shown at Lincoln Day dinners across the country, Mr. Eisenhower said the party must stand or fall on his program. He said only with its approval could the party attract new and willint workers.

In Berlin today, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov called for a world conference this year with both United Nations and other countries such as Communist China in attendance. He would have this conference discuss the arms race and atomic control. I should like to review today's Berlin session in a few minutes.

The United States today rejected the Indian proposal for a United Nations meeting on Korea. It appears that the February ninth meeting will not come off.

And the United Nations command in Korea today told us something about the 21 Americans who today returned to North Korea and their Communist captors. The U.N. says that nine of these men had been stool-pigeons for their Communist guards at North Korean prison camps. Four of them expected to be punished for this if they returned to this country. The U.N. says five of the men attended school in China while they were prisoners; seven others have been selected for a similar "education." Of the 21 Americans five are considered weak and not sincere believers in Communism. The U.N. says these men are staying with the enemy either because they were promised such educations or they fell in love with Chinese women or because of their hopes to get something for nothing. We are also told that only two of the 21 attended college in this country. Ten had an average two years in high school. The rest had a lesser education. None had any record of political activity before joining the army. All but one, a draftee, were regular army men.

In the Senate today, Republican Senator Bricker of Ohio attacked, in detail, the President's "unalterable opposition" to the Bricker proposal for a constitutional amendment to limit the President's treaty-making powers. Bricker said: "Although the President's motives are, as always, sincere, his advisers have sold him a bad bill of goods." Bricker said "utterly no foundation" to the President's charge that the amendment would restrict the conduct of foreign affairs. Bricker said the President's complaint that its passage would indicate to other countries our intent to withdraw from world leadership is "purely an emotional argument." The Senator said the President made an "untrue" statement when he said the amendment would make it impossible to deal with friendly nations for mutual defense. And Bricker said the President was "100 percent wrong" in saying his proposal would impair our hopes and plans for peace and our plans to share atomic energy with others for peaceful purposes. Senator Bricker complained of Secretary of State Dulles' "unbending" opposition and refusal to compromise. And he said it would be improper for President Eisenhower to use patronage and other types of pressure in an effort to defeat his proposal. When Bricker was through, Senator Wiley, who supports the President's position, asked his colleagues to "take a look" at those who attack the President wit what he called "so much emotion and so little logic."

In Chicago, Adlai Stevenson called the Bricker amendment "dangerous, radical and unnecessary" and said he hopes the President will stand firm against it.

The American Medical Association said today that a distorted picture of the nation's health needs has been drawn to influence public support for a government-controlled medical care program. The AMA urges continued reliance on voluntary health insurance for those who can afford it and direct help from local and state governments for the poor.

The visiting President Bayar of Turkey said in Washington today that his government will stand firm with the western democracies. He attacked those countries who are "wavering with an appeasing attitude" and said "there is no room for manuverin on the side lines." He mentioned no nation by name.

The President of Syria said in Damascus today that opposition elements have attacked government troops. The army has been ordered to take control in troubled parts of the country.

Most of the words spoken in Berlin today, at the Foreign Ministers' Conference, were familiar. Mr. Molotov wants a world conference this year, to discuss the general reduction of armaments. He says the conference should be "within the framework of the United Nations," but that non-U.N. members should also be present, by which of course, he means Communist China. He wants this conference to deal also with the matter of atomic weapons. This is a familiar proposal. The West has rejected it in the past, contending that any control of atomic weapons depends upon adequate international inspection, which the Russians won't agree to. And the West has said also that any across-the-board cut in arms would leave the Russians with an advantage in terms of manpower.

Today, after three-and-a-half days of conversation, Mr. Molotov has yet to deal with the substance of any single item on the agenda. He remains determined, somehow some way, to smuggle Red China into an international conference. And he wants that conference to decide what to do with the world.

Today, Secretary of State Dulles demanded again that the conference start talking about Germany. He said: "Who is this Chou-En-Lai the Chinese Communist leader whose addition to our circle would make possible the solution of all our problems?" Mr. Dulles pointed out that the Chinese regime had come to power by war, mass liquidation and starvation. He declined to believe that the four Foreign Ministers, plus Chou-En-Lai, could solve the political, military and economic problems with which the U.N. has been grappling for nine years.

Molotov has apparently decided that if he can't gain ground at least he can gain time. Today he proposed the creation of a committee to "define existing differences on the issue of a Five Power Conference." He wants the Foreign Ministers meanwhile to start talking about measures to "reduce international tansions." The Western Foreign Ministers refused to agree to the committee.

As things stand tonight, the conference is still discussing the first item on the agenda. It is possible that the Russians are preparing to deadlock the conference before it ever gets to the subjects of Germany and Austria. At some point the Western representatives will have to try to choke off these Soviet excursions that lead everywhere except to the immediate issues. Then Moscow will howl that the West is ganging up and frustrating all moves to achieve peace, disarmament, atomic controls and economic prosperity. The problem that confronts the West is somehow to keep the conference going, and keep as much of world opinion as possible behind Western policy. The Russian tactics would seem to be obvious. They are executing a powerful pincers movement in Europe and in Asia. The one in Europe is diplomatic, the one in Asia is military. The ultimate objective is to nip off France from the Western alliance. In Indo-China the Communist offensive assumes more and more threatening proportions. This offensive was launched to coincide with the opening of the Berlin meeting. In Berlin, the first Foreign Minister to be invited to dinner by Molotov was Bidault of France. These two events are clearly linked - an effort to bring great military pressure to bear on the French people, who are weary of the cold war in Europe and the hot war in Asia, and who are fearful of German re-armament. They are eager, at almost any price to end the eight-year-old war in Indo-China. This is the global application of the technique of the carrot and the stick, designed to cause, not the konkey but the French to move. It consists of friendly gestures and words in Berlin, combined with a Strong Communist thrust in Indo-China. The aim is not to persuade anyone around the table in Berlin; it is rather to capture publicand parliamentary positions in Paris. Molotov is offering, at least by implication, peace in Indo-China and a Germany that will not threaten the French.

Bidault has engaged in many arguments with Molotov. He is not likely to be either bribed or frightened. So far he has stuck staunchly to the Western line at Berlin. But in the postwar years, at almost every major international conference, the French Foreign Minister has been caught with his Cabinet down, or had his chair pulled from under him by being over-ruled by the French Parliament.

David Schoenbrun cables me from Paris tonight that every word said or implied in Berlin will have an immediate impact in Paris, where it can be said without exaggeration the real outcome of the Berlin Conference may well be decided.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: What we are witnessing in Berlin is an effort to juggle hemispheres on the basis of power politics. The French scientist and philosopher Pascal once remarked: "Justice without power is inefficinnt; power without justice is tyranny. Justice and power must therefore be brought together so that whatever is just may be powerful and whatever is powerful is just.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday, Jan. 29, 1954

This is the news:

The Western foreign ministers today introduced at the Berlin conference, a plan to unify Germany. And the western ministers warned Russia that failure to settle the problem of Germany "may bring future conflict and ultimate disaster for us all." British Foreign Secretary Eden presented the plan for: free all-German elections.. a meeting of a national assembly.. and then steps to draft and approve a Constitution and a peace treaty. This, and the formation of an All-German government, would be accomplished under various safeguards. Howard K. Smith cables from Berlin that when Eden introduced the western plan Molotov protested that he was "infringing the right of the chair" by bringing up a new topic. The conference chairman today HAPPENED TO BE Secretary of State Dulles. He said he didn't mind a bit. So Molotov found himself on the German question.. and not quite sure how he got there. Earlier, all four ministers agreed to postpone until a secret session next week further consideration of the Russian proposal for a world disarmament conference.

And Mr. Dulles and Molotov agreed to meet tomorrow to discuss the President's atomic energy plan.

In Washington day-long efforts to draft a substitute for the controversial Bricker amendment to the Constitution bogged down tonight. Senate Majority Leader Knowland who earlier in the day spoke of "substantial progress" now says he doubts that any agreement can be reached before Monday.

The government reports that unemployment climbed by 509-thousand from December to January. There are now two and a third million persons unemployed in this country.. the highest number in three years.

C.I.O. President Reuther, accused by Republican National Chairman Hall of being "the ringleader of depression talk" said today: "artificial optomism will not assure a realistic economic policy."

And John L. Lewis of the coal miners "respectfully" turned down an invitation to testify at Senate hearings on Taft-Hartley law changes. Lewis says the President's proposed changes are "calculated falsely to soothe, rather than genuinely to cure" the evils Lewis sees in the law.

Undersecretary of the Army Slezak told a Senate committee today that a 200-million dollar army tank contract was awarded to a General Motors subsidiary because this was "sound business judgement." Senator Kefauver had charged that it is "a dangerous policy to concentrate defense contracts in a single producer."

Another Senate committee heard New York banker Chester Dewey testify thay that coffee prices are going up because the producing countries are keeping coffee [redacted] off the market. [redacted] Dewey said:"I've never seen any public recognition of the real cause of the rise. We taught the Latin Americans how to raise prices and they are very apt pupils."

Federal Judge Charles McLaughlin today threw out the government's case against [redacted] former Assistant Attorney General Herbert A. Bergson. He had been charged with violating the federal conflict-of-interest law...This limits the kind of law-practise a former government attorney can engage in within two years of his leaving office. Judge McLaughlin said Attorney General Brownell made too broad an interpretation of the law in the government's case against Bergson.

Arthur Godfrey told the Civil Aeronautics Board that he disregarded Tower [redacted] instructions in the interest of safety when he took-off from Teterboro airport recently. Godfrey had been charged with careless flying. He denied this today, saying that HE WAS TRYING to avoid a collision, [redacted].

Republican Senator Bridges of New Hampshire said today that in 1944 a Senate committee forced the Roosevelt Administration to cancel an order to destroy army files on Communists. And Republican Senator Jenner says it has been "completely verified" that Admiral King told Admiral Nimitz--the same year.. that "the White House" has ordered the destruction of certain naval files on communism.

In Rome today, Communist Leader Togliatti accused Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce of being "one of those persons who bring misfortune to everything in which they meddle." Premier Fanfani answered quickly: "I protest this offense against the representative of a foreign state. And as a Man I must lament that one has not even remembered the most basic rules of chivalry."

Marshal Tito today was [redacted] re-elected president of Yugoslavia.. unanimously. He says Yugoslavia is willing to trade on both sides of the Iron Curtain. He denies any intention of returning to the Soviet side.

Edward R. Murrow: January 29, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

Three weeks and a day have passed since President Eisenhower delivered his State of the Union message. Since then he has sent eight special messages to Congress. One was accompanying the draft of the treaty with the Republic of Korea, which was ratified. One introduced the budget. The others dealt in detail with legislative proposals outlined in the State of the Union message. They covered labor, agriculture, social security, health, housing and economic problems.

The White House has shown an orderliness in its relations with Congress in this present session, that all must find commendable. It has also been thorough in the preparation of its legislative program. The use of study commissions to think through special problems, in advance of submission to Congress, has resulted in a high standard of analysis. Congress must have welcomed receiving in a pre-digested form much of the material it must master. And the study on the whole has been expert rather than partisan.

The program in itself shows forethought and gives the appearance of balance. The budget in particular was impressive as a technical job. We in this country still do not have rigorous party discipline in support of an administration's budget, as they have in England. In London, the government stands or falls on the acceptance of the budget in its entirety, and that is the heart of the parliamentary system. But the Eisenhower budget this year would be one a government could stand by in that way. It was written to be passed "as is", and not in anticipation of log-rolling and deals.

Mention of England brings to mind an analogy of what can happen in a modern democracy, when a Conservative Government replaces a Liberal one. The Churchill victory did not bring about a hurried rejection of all that the Labor Government had done. Mr. Churchill undertook a limited amount of de-nationalizing, and whittled down a little the cost of the Bevan health program. But the public liked most of the social fabric as the Labor government had left it, and Mr. Churchill did not proceed to tear it up. President Eisenhower is mapping out a similar course. He realizes the popular approval of social security, and recommends that it be strengthened and extended. He does not go as far as the Truman administration on health, but shows a sense of federal responsibility for increased medical care. He foresees an end of federal housing, but asks continuance of a substantial program.

There will be trouble over the labor proposals, particularly over government supervision of strike votes. There will be trouble over flexible price supports for farmers. The legislative program is by no means assured smooth sailing. But its character, and the thinking that has gone into its preparation, show the Eisenhower Administration to be on an even keel. It seems to know what it can fight for, and hope to win. Such a middle-of-the-road program no doubt does meet the widest range of approval to be had at this time.

The fact that it took a year for the President and his advisers to produce results of this distinction, is due in part to his unfamiliarity with politics. Leadership was bound to mean something different to a General than to a President. General Eisenhower had been used to staff work of a high order. It took time to get a flow of staff work of the same kind for him as president.

But undoubtedly the chief change is not in the staff work. Surely the greatest change in recent American politics has been something that happened inside President Eisenhower. After the death of Senator Taft he was left without an authoritative field commander. There was no second Senator Taft. And his Administration might have sunk into confusion and chaos. We don't know how it came about, but the President took over the field command himself. He became his own Senator Taft. He supervised the program, and he undertook to fight it through Congress. In so doing he no longer was a kind of chairman of the board, he was a political leader.

It is as such that he has held the center of the stage these three weeks. His sponsorship of the sea-way canal, already has helped produce a senate majority for a project that had been boxed in in every previous session. And ~~IN~~ his open, unyielding opposition to the Bricker amendment appears to have done, what a month ago seemed impossible, prevented the passage of that measure in a romp. Those are two personal achievements on specific issues. It also is noteworthy that Mr. Eisenhower has felt more at home in his NEWS conferences, better able to handle critical questions, more sure of his own grasp of the facts. He has not forfeited his cherished role of being "president of all the people." But he has come to see that he cannot serve all the people effectively if he loses command of his own party.

Of course it remains to be seen how much of the Eisenhower program is left when Congress is finished with it. He will lose Republican votes, and have to replace them with Democratic votes. But it is obvious that a lot more of the program will be accepted because of the President's present dynamic leadership, than if he had gone on trying to placate ahh his opponents.

Even before he took over the field command his standing with the public was high. His record in the last three weeks has added to his prestige. And it is at least possible that it will have made success progressively more attainable for him.

We were speaking of President Eisenhowers messages to Congress.."eres one President Wilson sent up in 1919..."The only way to keep men from agitating against grievance ~~xx~~ is to remove the grievances.#.an unwillingness even to discuss these matters, produces only dissatisfaction and gives comfort to the extreme elements in our country, which endeavour to stir up disturbances in order to provoke governments to embark upon a course of retaliation and repressions.#.The seed of revolution is repression...

good night and good luck...

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Western foreign ministers today introduced at the Berlin conference a plan to unify Germany. And the western ministers warned Russia that failure to settle the problem of Germany "may bring future conflict and ultimate disaster for us all." British Foreign Secretary Eden presented the plan for: free all-German elections, a meeting of a national assembly, and then steps to draft and approve a Constitution and a peace treaty. This, and the formation of an All-German government would be accomplished under various safeguards. Howard K. Smith cables from Berlin that when Eden introduced the western plan Molotov protested that he was "infringing the right of the chair" by bringing up a new topic. The conference chairman today happened to be Secretary of State Dulles. He said he didn't mind a bit. So Molotov found himself on the German question, and not quite sure how he got there. Earlier, all four ministers agreed to postpone until a secret session next week further consideration of the Russian proposal for a world disarmament conference.

And Mr. Dulles and Molotov agreed to meet tomorrow to discuss the President' atomic energy plan.

In Washington daylong efforts to draft a substitute for the controversial Bricker amendment to the Constitution bogged down tonight. Senate Majority Leader Knowland who earlier in the day spoke of "substantial progress" now says he doubts that any agreement can be reached before Monday.

The government reports that unemployment climbed by 509-thousand from December to January. There are now two and a third million persons unemployed in this country - the highest number in three years.

CIO President Reuther, accused by Republican National Chairman Hall of being "the ringleader of depression talk" said today: "artificial optimism will not assure a realistic economic policy."

And John L. Lewis of the coal miners "respectfully" turned down an invitation to testify at Senate hearings on Taft-Hartley law changes. Lewis says the President's proposed changes are "calculated falsely to soothe rather than the genuinely to cure" the evils Lewis sees in the law.

Undersecretary of the Army Slezak told a Senate committee today that a 200-million dollar army tank contract was awarded to a General Motors subsidiary because this was "sound business judgment." Senator Kefauver had charged that it is "a dangerous policy to concentrate defense contracts in a single producer."

Another Senate committee heard New York banker Chester Dewey testify that coffee prices are going up because the producing countries are keeping coffee off the market. Dewey said: "I've never seen any public recognition of the real cause of the rise. We taught the Latin Americans how to raise prices and they are very apt pupils."

Federal Judge Charles McLaughlin today threw out the government's case against former Assistant Attorney General Herbert A. Bergson. He had been charged with violating the federal conflict-of-interest law. This limits the kind of law practice a former government attorney can engage in within two years of his leaving office. Judge McLaughlin said Attorney General Brownell made too broad an interpretation of the law in the government's case against Bergson.

Arthur Godfrey told the Civil Aeronautics Board that he disregarded tower instructions in the interest of safety when he took off from Teterboro airport recently. Godfrey had been charged with careless flying. He denied this today, saying that he was trying to avoid a collision.

Republican Senator Bridges of New Hampshire said today that in 1944 a Senate committee forced the Roosevelt Administration to cancel an order to destroy army files on Communists. And Republican Senator Jenner says it has been "completely verified" that Admiral King told Admiral Nimitz the same year that "the White House" has ordered the destruction of certain naval files on Communism.

In Rome today, Communist Leader Togliatti accused Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce of being "one of those persons who bring misfortune to everything in which they meddle." Premier Fanfani answered quickly: "I protest this offense against the representative of a foreign state. And as a man I must lament that one has not even remembered the most basic rules of chivalry."

Marshal Tito today was re-elected president of Yugoslavia unanimously. He says Yugoslavia is willing to trade on both sides of the Iron Curtain. He denies any intention of returning to the Soviet side.

Three weeks and a day have passed since President Eisenhower delivered his State of the Union message. Since then he has sent eight special messages to Congre: One was accompanying the draft of the treaty with the Republic of Korea, which was ratified. One introduced the budget. The others dealt in detail with legislative proposals outlined in the State of the Union message. They covered labor, agricultur social security, health, housing and economic problems.

The White House has shown an orderliness in its relations with Congress in this present session, that all must find commendable. It has also been thorough in the preparation of its legislative program. The use of study commissions to think through special problems, in advance of submission to Congress, has resulted in a high standard of analysis. Congress must have welcomed receiving a pre-digested form much of the material it must master. And the study on the whole has been expert rather than partisan.

The program in itself shows forethought and gives the appearance of balance. The budget in particular was impressive as a technical job. We in this country still do not have rigorous party discipline in support of an administration's budget, as they have in England. In London, the government stands or falls on the acceptance of the budget in its entirety, and that is the heart of the parliamentary system. But the Eisenhower budget this year would be one a government could stand by in that way. It was written to be passed "as is", and not in anticipation of log-rolling and deals.

Mention of England brings to mind an analogy of what can happen in a modern democracy, when a Conservative Government replaces a Liberal one. The Churchill victory did not bring about a hurried rejection of all that the Labor Government had done. Mr. Churchill undertook a limited amount of de-nationalizing and whittled down a little the cost of the Bevan health program. But the public liked most of the social fabric as the Labor government had left it, and Mr. Churchill did not proceed to tear it up. President Eisenhower is mapping out a similar course. He realizes the popular approval of social security, and recommends that it be strengthened and extended. He does not go as far as the Truman administration on health, but shows a sense of federal responsibility for increased medical care. He foresees an end of federal housing but asks continuance of a substantial program.

There will be trouble over the labor proposals, particularly over government supervision of strike votes. There will be trouble over flexible price supports for farmers. The legislative program is by no means assured smooth sailing. But its character, and the thinking that has gone into its preparation, show the Eisenhower Administration to be on an even keel. It seems to know what it can fight for, and hope to win. Such a middle-of-the-road program no doubt does meet the widest range of approval to be had at this time.

The fact that it took a year for the President and his advisers to produce results of this distinction, is due in part to his unfamiliarity with politics. Leadership was bound to mean something different to a General than to a President. General Eisenhower had been used to staff work of a high order. It took time to get a flow of staff work of the same kind for him as president.

But undoubtedly the chief change is not in the staff work. Surely the greatest change in recent American politics has been something that happened inside President Eisenhower. After the death of Senator Taft he was left without an authoritative field commander. There was no second Senator Taft. And his Administration might have sunk into confusion and chaos. We don't know how it came about, but the President took over the field command himself. He became his own Senator Taft. He supervised the program, and he undertook to fight it through Congress. In so doing he no longer was a kind of chairman of the board, he was a political leader.

It is as such that he has held the center of the stage these three weeks. His sponsorship of the seaway canal, already has helped produce a senate majority for a project that had been boxed in, in every previous session. And his open, unyielding opposition to the Bricker amendment appears to have done, what a month ago seemed impossible, prevented the passage of that measure in a romp. Those are two personal achievements on specific issues. It also is noteworthy that Mr. Eisenhower has felt more at home in his news conferences, better able to handle critical questions, more sure of his own grasp of the facts. He has not forfeited his cherished role of being "president of all the people." But he has come to see that he cannot serve all the people effectively if he loses command of his own party.

Of course it remains to be seen how much of the Eisenhower program is left when Congress is finished with it. He will lose Republican votes, and have to replace them with Democratic votes. But it is obvious that a lot more of the program will be accepted because of the President's present dynamic leadership, than if he had gone on trying to placate all his opponents. Even before he took over the field command his standing with the public was high. His record in the last three weeks has added to his prestige. And it is at least possible that it will have made success progressively more attainable for him.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We were speaking of President Eisenhower's messages to Congress. Here's one President Wilson sent up in 1919: "The only way to keep men from agitating against grievance is to remove the grievances; an unwillingness even to discuss these matters produces only dissatisfaction and gives comfort to the extreme elements in our country which endeavor to stir up disturbances in order to provoke governments to embark upon a course of retaliation and repressions. The seed of revolution is repression.

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - February 1, 1954

This is the news:

The Russians today revealed their plan for unifying Germany, and writing a peace treaty that would keep the Germans out of the western defense alliance. In a few minutes I'd like to review the proposals Molotov made at today's Big Four foreign ministers meeting in Berlin.

In Washington, after another day of conferences at the White House and on Capital Hill, there is still no agreement on a compromise to replace the proposed Bricker amendment to the constitution. Senate Majority Leader Knowland says he believes that if some "basic legal questions" can be clarified the President will support a compromise. [redacted]. The basic issue now seems to be centering on restricting the President's right to make executive agreements with other nations. Knowland is hopeful. But Democratic Senator George says "it hardly looks like" an agreement will be reached. In the Senate itself, in a fifth day of debate on the Bricker amendment, Republican Senator Dirksen of Illinois said such a proposal would have prevented "Yalta and all the evil consequences that flow therefrom." He said all United Nations covenants are going to have "a definite effect on domestic affairs." Then

Chairman Wiley of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee charged that Bricker's supporters are using "deceptive arguments" to "disguise their REAL objectives." Wiley said: "It is clear now that the question is not the Bricker amdnement.. the question is whether we are going to crawl back into our shells."

An administration spokesman told a Congressional economic committee today that the Administration is proceeding on the assumption that unemployment has been stabilized at a level between two and two-and-a-half million persons. Rowland Hughes, the deputy budget director, said this is the basis for drawing up the new budget. The Administration also believes that the price level will be stable for the next 18 months. (Last Friday the Census Bureau said there were now two million 360-thousand unemployed in the nation.)

And today the Federal Reserve Board reports that industrial production dropped about one and a half per cent in December. Its preliminary estimates indicate "a slight further decline" in January.

George Meany, the president of the American Federation of Labor, today called on the Administration for a new round of wage increases. And he wants AN immediate START ON construction of big public works projects to avoid "trouble" in the economy. Meany told reporters in Miami Beach, where the AF of L executive council is meeting, that: "All the signs indicate we're going down hill. All the resources in the world won't help us if we don't use them." ~~A.F. of L. figures show that one out of every five persons have lost their jobs since the middle of 1953.~~

Democrats on the Senate Labor Committee said today they will fight on the Senate floor against the President's nomination of Albert C. Beeson to be a member of the National Labor Relations Board. The committee has approved the nomination by a seven to six vote but the Democrats, among other things, say they did not have "adequate opportunity" to question Beeson.

The Supreme Court ruled today that it is an unfair labor practise for a union to force an employer to put any sort of pressure on union members who refuse to live up to union rules. The court also held that when an employer grants pay increases and other benefits to union members, he must give these same advantages to other workers.

The State Department said today it has no plans for making an issue of the air battle off Korea in which a Communist Mig was shot down while attacking one of our reconnaissance planes. The air force says the battle occurred ten days ago. None of our planes WAS lost.

In Tokyo today A SPOKESMAN FOR the Soviet diplomatic mission charged that American intelligence agents have seized a missing Russian diplomat--Yuri Rastovorov. The former second secretary of the unrecognized Soviet mission has been missing since January 24 the day before he was to have returned home. No trace of him has been found. American military and diplomatic officials have no comment on the case. But the Associated Press quotes a reliable American source in Tokyo as saying that the Russian sought asylum WITH us.. was granted it.. and now, almost certainly, is out of Japan.

In Indo-China the French report that Communist-led Vietminh forces are pressing south for a new invasion of LAOS. A spokesman says there has been heavy fighting 75 miles north of the Laotian royal capital. The French have abandoned one village and are being reinforced by air. I

In Rome today President Einaudi started a new search for a new premier. And the Communists stepped up their attacks on Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce with posters accusing her of meddling in Italian affairs. Police were busy tearing down the posters which said, under an unflatering picture of the Ambassador, "we are not an American colony."

Well-informed Vatican sources say Pope Pius is suffering from an inflamation of the stomach and will be put on a liquid diet for several days.

Here in New York, the city today welcomed Turkish President Bayar who rode up Broadway in an open car in below-freezing weather.

And Notre Dame officials today announced the selection of 25-year-old Terry Brennan to replace the RESIGNED Frank Leahy as head football coach. Brennan was formerly a backfield star for Notre Dame and has been an assistant under Leahy since last September. ~~[illegible] Brennan becomes one of the youngest football coaches appointed to a major college team.~~

Edward R. Murrow: February 1, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

Today in the eastern sector of Berlin the Foreign Ministers held their longest meeting so far. In the course of it Mr. Molotov dropped the other shoe, set up a road block, exploded a bomb - you can supply your own adjectives. What he did was to disregard all issues having to do with free elections, German unity, and all the other ~~issues~~ matters that must precede a peace treaty with Germany. Mr. Molotov leapt boldly forward to the same position he occupied two years ago. He wants a peace conference called within six months. He wants Germans of both the East and West to participate. He wants the united Germany to be banned from participating in any block or military alliance. He wants this united Germany - although he said ~~XXXXXX~~ nowhere how it is to be united - to have armed forces capable only of maintaining internal order, defense of frontiers and anti-aircraft defense. Mr. Molotov wants this united Germany to renounce for ever the German territories occupied by Russia and Poland at the end of the war. Germany would be permitted to produce war materials, but only enough to supply her domestic defense forces. Mr. Molotov also called for the withdrawal of the armies of occupation not later than one year after the treaty takes effect.

For Britain, Anthony Eden tried again to explain that Russia's fears of a European Army are unwarranted. He said there will be no national armies, and the individual countries will not have the power or the means to engage in war on their own. This is a revolutionary conception, and Eden argued that if Germany or any other member nation wanted to engage in a war on its own it would not be in a position to do so.

The West has already rejected Mr. Molotov's two-year-old suggestion and will undoubtedly do so again. What Mr. Molotov did today was to say that the United States, Britain and France are following Hitler's policies - that they are together with West Germany preparing to make war against the Soviet Union.

In Berlin, the Western representatives have insisted that they wanted to talk about a German settlement. Today Mr. Molotov talked about it, and said in substance that he would settle for a neutralized, largely disarmed and impotent Germany. It was the longest speech of the session so far. But it may well have served to shorten the duration of the Berlin conference. Further talk about German unification would now appear to be useless. Tonight a spokesman for the Western powers said he saw no hope for agreement on the terms outlined by Molotov. A French spokesman said three-quarters of the speech was aimed at French public opinion. Molotov is continuing to try to play on French opposition to the European Army, and the element in France that looks to the Soviet Union. And he added, "The French Delegation is not at all optimistic." Mr. Molotov was playing on French fears and French memories. He recalled the damage the Germans had done to Russia, and to France, and contended that both countries required assurances that the Germans wouldn't run mad again.

Two things should be noted about Mr. Molotov's effort of today. He has apparently, at least for the time being, abandoned all hope of wooing West German public opinion. On the other hand, he made an unusually direct and frank appeal to the French to abandon the Western alliance and join Russia against Germany. It is necessary to say again that the significance of the Berlin Conference will not appear in Berlin, but in the trend of French public and parliamentary opinion during the next weeks and months. It would be unwise to underestimate the effectiveness of the weapons employed by Molotov in Berlin today. He has more than hinted that he can provide France with security, both in Asia and in Europe, if only the French will give up the idea of participating in the European Defense Community. The French desperately want peace in Asia and security in Europe. Many wholly non-Communist Frenchmen fear the Germans more than the Russians, because the Russians haven't invaded France twice in the last forty years.

If there is any comfort to be drawn from today's developments in Berlin, it is that the Russians have behaved in the way that our representatives thought they would. (Our delegation cannot have been surprised by Mr. Molotov's speech.) And so the problem remains: which side can successfully pin the blame on the other for the failure of the conference. // Specifically, which side can persuade French opinion that the other was responsible for the failure.

It would seem that the Foreign Ministers Conference in Berlin has now resolved itself into the question of who's doing what to whom. Meantime the basic issues remain unchanged. La Rochefoucauld once remarked: "We have scarcely any faults which are not more excusable than the means we adopt to conceal them." Cicero put it another way when he said: "Men ought to be most annoyed by the sufferings which come from their own faults." (Apparently this isn't always so.)

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Russians today revealed their plan for unifying Germany and writing a peace treaty that would keep the Germans out of the western defense alliance. In a few minutes I'd like to review the proposals Molotov made at today's Big Four foreign ministers meeting in Berlin.

In Washington, after another day of conferences at the White House and on Capitol Hill, there is still no agreement on a compromise to replace the proposed Bricker amendment to the Constitution. Senate Majority Leader Knowland says he believes that if some "basic legal questions" can be clarified the President will support a compromise. The basic issue now seems to be centering on restricting the President's right to make executive agreements with other nations. Knowland is hopeful. But Democratic Senator George says "it hardly looks like" an agreement will be reached. In the Senate itself, in a fifth day of debate on the Bricker amendment, Republican Senator Dirksen of Illinois said such a proposal would have prevented "Yalta and all the evil consequences that flow therefrom." He said all United Nations covenants are going to have "a definite effect on domestic affairs." Then Chairman Wiley of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee charged that Bricker's supporters are using "deceptive arguments" to "disguise their real objectives." Wiley said: "It is clear now that the question is not the Bricker amendment - the auestion is whether we are going to crawl back into our shells."

An administration spokesman told a Congressional economic committee today that the Administration is proceeding on the assumption that unemployment has been stabilized at a level between two and two-and-a-half million persons. Rowland Hughes, the deputy budget director, said this is the basis for drawing up the new budget. The Administration also believes that the price level will be stable for the next 18 months. Last Friday the Census Bureau said there were now two million 360-thousand unemployed in the nation.

And today the Federal Reserve Board reports that industrial production dropped about one and a half percent in December. Its preliminary estimates indicate "a slight further decline" in January.

George Meany, the president of the American Federation of Labor, today called on the Administration for a new round of wage increases. And he wants an immediate start on construction of big public works projects to avoid "trouble" in the economy. Meany told reporters in Miami Beach, where the AFL executive council is meeting that: "All the signs indicate we're going downhill. All the resources in the world won't help us if we don't use them."

Democrats on the Senate Labor Committee said today they will fight on the Senate floor against the President's nomination of Albert C. Beeson to be a member of the National Labor Relations Board. The committee has approved the nomination by a seven to six vote but the Democrats, among other things, say they did not have "adequate opportunity" to question Beeson.

The Supreme Court ruled today that it is an unfair labor practice for a union to force an employer to put any sort of pressure on union members who refuse to live up to union rules. The court also held that when an employer grants pay increases and other benefits to union members, he must give these same advantages to other workers.

The State Department said today it has no plans for making an issue of the air battle off Korea in which a Communist Mig was shot down while attacking one of our reconnaissance planes. The air force says the battle occured ten days ago. None of our planes was lost.

In Tokyo today a spokesman for the Soviet diplomatic mission charged that American intelligence agents have seized a missing Russian diplomat, Yuri Rastovorov. The former second secretary of the unrecognized Soviet mission has been missing since January 24 the day before he was to have returned home. No trace of him has been found. American military and diplomatic officials have no comment on the case. But the Associated Press quotes a reliable American source in Tokyo as saying that the Russian sought asylum with us, was granted it, and now, almost certainly, is out of Japan

In Indo-China the French report that Communist-led Vietminh forces are pressing south for a new invasion of Laos. A spokesman says there has been heavy fighting 75 miles north of the Laotian royal capital. The French have abandoned one village and are being reinforced by air.

In Rome today President Einaudi started a new search for a new premier. And the Communists stepped up their attacks on Ambassaodr Clare Boothe Luce with posters accusing her of meddling in Italian affairs. Police were busy tearing down the posters which said, under an unflattering picture of the Ambassador, "we are not an American colony."

Well-informed Vatican sources say Pope Pius is suffering from an inflamatior of the stomach and will be put on a liquid diet for several days.

Here in New York, the city today welcomed Turkish President Bayar who rode up Broadway in an open car in below-freezing weather.

And Notre Dame officials today announced the selection of 25-year-old Terry Brennan to replace the resigned Frank Leahy as head football coach. Brennan was formerly a backfield star for Notre Dame and has been an assistant under Leahy since last September.

Today in the eastern sector of Berlin the Foreign Ministers held their longest meeting so far. In the course of it, Mr. Molotov dropped the other shoe, set up a road block, exploded a bomb - you can supply your own adjectives. What he did was to disregard all issues having to do with free elections, German unity, and all the other matters that must precede a peace treaty with Germany. Mr.Molotov leapt boldly forward to the same position he occupied two years ago. He wants a peace conference called within six months. He wants Germans of both the East and West to participate. He wants the united Germany to be banned from participating in any block or military alliance. He wants this united Germany - although he said nowhere how it is to be united - to have armed forces capable only of maintaining internal order, defense of frontiers and anti-aircraft defense. Mr. Molotov wants this united Germany to renounce for ever the German territories occupied by Russia and Poland at the end of the war. Germany would be permitted to produce war materials, but only enough to supply her domestic defense forces. Mr. Molotov also called for the withdrawal of the armies of occupation not later than one year after the treaty takes effect.

For Britain, Anthony Eden tried again to explain that Russia's fears of a European Army are unwarranted. He said there will be no national armies, and the individual countries will not have the power or the means to engage in war on their own. This is a revolutionary conception, and Eden argued that if Germany or any other member nation wanted to engage in a war on its own it would not be in a position to do so.

The West has already rejected Mr. Molotov's two-year-old suggestion and will undoubtedly do so again. What Mr. Molotov did today was to say that the United States, Britain and France are following Hitler's policies - that they are together with West Germany preparing to make war against the Soviet Union.

In Berlin, the Western representatives have insisted that they wanted to talk about a German settlement. Today Mr. Molotov talked about it, and said in substance that he would settle for a neutralized, largely disarmed and impotent Germany. It was the longest speech of the session so far. But it may well have served to shorten the duration of the Berlin conference. Further talk about German unification would now appear to be useless. Tonight a spokesman for the Western powers said he saw no hope for agreement on the terms outlined by Molotov. A French spokesman said three-quarters of the speech was aimed at French public opinion. Molotov is continuing to try to play on French opposition to the European Army, and the element in France that looks to the Soviet Union. And he added, "The French Delegation is not at all optimistic." Mr. Molotov was playing on French fears and French memories. He recalled the damage the Germans had done to Russia, and to France, and contended that both countries required assurances that the Germans wouldn't run mad again.

Two things should be noted about Mr. Molotov's effort of today. He has apparently, at least for the time being, abandoned all hope of wooing West German public opinion. On the other hand, he made an unusually direct and frank appeal to the French to abandon the Western alliance and join Russia against Germany. It is necessary to say again that the significance of the Berlin Conference will not appear in Berlin, but in the trend of French public and parliamentary opinion during the next weeks and months. It would be unwise to underestimate the effectiveness of the weapons employed by Molotov in Berlin today. He has more than hinted that he can provide France with security, both in Asia and in Europe, if only the French will give up the idea of participating in the European Defense Community. The French desperately want peace in Asia and security in Europe. Many wholly non-Communist Frenchmen fear the Germans more than the Russians, because the Russians haven't invaded France twice in the last forty years.

If there is any comfort to be drawn from today's developments in Berlin, it is that the Russians have behaved in the way that our representatives thought they would. Our delegation cannot have been surprised by Mr. Molotov's speech. And so the problem remains: which side can successfully pin the blame on the other for the failure of the conference. Specifically, which side can persuade French opinion that the other was responsible for the failure.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that the Foreign Ministers Conference in Berlin has now resolved itself into the question of who's doing what to whom. Meantime the basic issues remain unchanged. La Rochefoucauld once remarked: "We have scarcely any faults which are not more excusable than the means we adopt to conceal them." Cicero put it another way when he said: "Men ought to be most annoyed by the sufferings which come from their own faults." (Apparently this isn't always so."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday, Feb. 2, 1954

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles today called on Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov to end his "foolish chatter" about western plans to "remilitarize" Germany. Mr. Dulles, at the foreign ministers conference in Berlin, recalled that it was Molotov who, at the start of World War Two, praised Hitlerite Germany as a "peace-loving country." Mr. Dulles asked if perhaps Molotov could be wrong again on western objectives. And the Secretary, supported by French Foreign Minister Bidault, emphasized the determination of the West not to give up its defensive system as long as the Soviet Union retains "one man" domination over a military bloc of 800-million people. And Bidault told Molotov France would never enter an alliance with Russia that excludes the United States and Great Britain.

In Washington today the President officially confirmed the fact that we had carried out "the first, full-scale hydrogen explosion in history" at Eniwetok island in 1952. The President called this a necessary first step on our hydrogen weapon program.

And Defense Secretary Wilson says we are ready to use tactical-type atomic weapons in any future wars as small as the Korean battle as well as in a global war. As he put it:"I think it would be hard to determine any reason why you shouldn't use one gun one hundred times more powerful than other guns." [redacted]

Democratic Senator George said today that there IS no longer any hopes of AN AGREEMENT on a bipartisan compromise on the Bricker plan to amend the constiution. George says it now must be fought out on the Senate floor and he feels his proposal , despite a lack of White House approval, will win "a surprisingly large vote." And the Republicans started to introduce "piecemeal" legislation of their own: to invalidate a treaty or international agreement that conflicts with the Constitution AND to require a record roll call vote on the Senate ratification of all treaties.

Treasury Secretary Humphrey today told the Congressional economic committee that the Administration's tax program is designed to bring about another year of prosperity.. a little below last year's boom levels. Humphrey said the basic aim is: "more jobs, better jobs and higher and better standards of living. Democrats suggested that bigger tax cuts for consumers would be more help for prosperity than tax relief for industry.

The State Department says an intensive investigation fails to prove Senator McCarthy's charge that State Department employes, in the former Administration, once engaged in a 150-thousand-dollar "shakedown" of a friendly foreign nation. The Department says its possible that a bribe may have been solicited by "other American citizens." McCarthy told the Senate [redacted] his committee has evidence that its [redacted] information is "correct."

And today the Senate by a vote of 85 to one, (Fulbright of Arkansas.) approved another 214-thousand dollars for McCarthy's committee. In the debate, Democratic Senator Ellendar of Louisiana read a letter from Army Secretary Stevens saying "the army has found no current espionage or other subversive activitity" at Fort Monmouth, where the McCarthy committee recently held hearings. Senator McCarthy replied that he had uncovered "very, very current espionage" at Fort Monmouth. ~~He said one witness refused to say whether he had rel[redacted]ormation in telephone calls to "[redacted]." McCarthy told his colleagues~~

[redacted]"

Albert C. Beeson, nominated by the President to be a member of the National Labor Relations Board, told Senators today he had made an "honest mistake" in denying that he ever said he planned to return to his old job after a one-year term on the board. [redacted] He explained MAT he made the denial under confused circumstances, without any attempt to mislead. The Republican majority on the Labor committee has approved the nomination on a party-line vote.

2

Joseph Mehl, head of the Federal Commodity Exchange Authority, told Senators today that federal supervision [redacted] could stop unwarranted increases in coffee prices. But Gustavo Lobo, the head of the New York Coffee exchange, says this is "an impossibility" and would alienate South American countries that produce coffee.

A.F. of L. President Meany says the financing charges [redacted] that are paid to bankers on houses are more responsible for keeping construction costs high than are the costs of labor.

In Indo-China the Communist-led guerrillas have moved 23 miles closer to the capital of Laos despite attacks by French fighters and bombers. Rebel forces have also made new gains in six other sectors.

And in Rome, former Premier De Gasperi told reporters: "We are only at the beginning of a government crisis." President Einaudi is trying to form Italy's fourth government in six months.

Edward R. Murrow: February 2, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

It is a sign of health, to be able to talk frankly about the decline of business. We have the example of the President and his economic advisers in the much-praised economic report submitted to Congress on Friday. They could examine the recession without nervousness, even though it is not scientifically possible to say when it will end. Certain things have to happen, to have it end. But if they don't happen the government has the means to stimulate business, and says it's determined to use them.

So it is not being unduly pessimistic to mention the rise of unemployment, which officially was 2,360,000 for January, and unofficially was considerably more; and that car loadings of manufactured goods were down 14 percent the third week in January as against a year ago; and that factory output is seven percent below the peak of last year.

The rise in unemployment naturally has attracted the greatest attention, partly because the official figure does not tell the whole story. In January 275,000 workers were laid off, but were not counted as unemployed, because they were under orders to return to work after a given period. But if in February these men were back at work and another 275,000 were laid off, they too would not be included in the official figures, though they are literally if not technically unemployed.

There is another omission from the figure of unemployed. Last June the civilian labor force was well over 64 million, of whom about a million-and-a-half were unemployed. Since then the official number of the unemployed has gone up some eight hundred thousand. But the number of jobs has gone down nearly three million four hundred thousand. In other words, over two-and-a-half million persons withdrew from the labor force. To what extent these are unemployed persons, is hard to say. At least some women, whose husbands or kinfolk were in the armed services, and now are expected home, have decided to quit working. Others whose jobs have been discontinued, aren't looking for other work. Strictly speaking, an unemployed person is someone seeking a job, who hasn't found it. A person who withdraws from the labor force, presumably does so out of choice, and it is quite proper not to count him or her as unemployed.

But the effect on the earning power of the nation is just the same, whether the non-employment was voluntary or enforced. Actually the spendable income of the country goes down more, when persons withdraw from the labor force, than from their being unemployed, because most of the unemployed have insurance benefits to spend. Persons who simply stop earning wages spend that much less, or they spend their savings.

The experts agree that the decline in business can stop quite soon, and be replaced by an upturn. But for that to happen, inventories have to come down still more than they have so far. It is wrong to generalize about inventories. But a glaring case is washing machines. Stocks on January first rose to 520,000, which was more than double that of the year before. But shipments of washing machines were 200,000, which was one third less than a year ago.

The latest figures for inventories show an over-all decline, but it is slight in comparison with sales. If there is to be an upturn in business, the inventories that are too high, will have to come down considerably more, and it may take price reductions to bring that result. One of the unforeseeable factors is whether certain business men will keep inventories too high, by postponing price reductions too long. U.S. Steel and Bethlehem are granting indirect price cuts, by paying freight charges for customers. Dupont has taken a lead by slashing prices on all three of its synthetic fibers. Other ways are being used to stimulate consumption. But for the present the trend has not been reversed, the decline continues.

Both the A.F.L. and the C.I.O. are telling the Administration that the time is here to launch a public works program. It is interesting that the President's Council of Economic Advisers was instructed early last year, to study measures to cope with a depression; this when even a recession was not in sight. (So says the report submitted to Congress.) The President in that report, listed the means available for the government to maintain stability. They are credit controls by the Federal Reserve system, debt management policies by the Treasury, the authority of the President to change the terms of mortgages carrying federal insurance, changes in taxation, and public works. All save changes in mortgage terms, and public works, are now being used.

The economists themselves consider the "promptness and vigor" shown last summer in combatting a credit stringency, something with no close parallel in our central bank history. One of the telling passages in the economic report said this: "The success with which ~~XXX~~ flexible monetary and debt management policy were used in 1953, should inspire confidence among all citizens, in the capacity and readiness of government to respond promptly to economic circumstances." The promise implied in this report, is to expand public works spending just as soon as necessary. And whatever depressing effect there may be from acknowledging the recession, can be tempered by the knowledge, that the President and his advisers are alert and committed to take any action necessary to deal with it.

Nineteen years ago Will Rogers remarked:"We can talk all the politics we want, but business rises above politics in this country. There is not a country in the world that can change our outlook as quick as we can. Just a dollar in our pocket makes a different man out of us. The minute any of that dough commences reaching us, we think its a pretty good place."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles today called on Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov to end his "foolish chatter" about western plans to "remilitarize" Germany. Mr. Dulles, at the foreign ministers conference in Berlin, recalled that it was Molotov who, at the start of World War Two, praised Hitlerite Germany as a "peace-loving country." Mr. Dulles asked if perhaps Molotov could be wrong again on western objectives. And the Secretary, supported by French Foreign Minister Bidault emphasized the determination of the West not to give up its defensive system as long as the Soviet Union retains "one man" domination over a military bloc of 800-million people. And Bidault told Molotov France would never enter an alliance with Russia that excludes the United States and Great Britain.

In Washington today the President officially confirmed the fact that we had carried out "the first, full scale hudrogen explosion in history" at Eniwetok Island in 1952. The President called this a necessary first step on our hydrogen weapon program.

And Defense Secretary Wilson says we are ready to use tactical-type atomic weapons in any future wars as small as the Korean battle as well as in a global war. As he put it: "I think it would be hard to determine any reason why you shouldn't use one gun one hundred times more powerful than other guns."

Democratic Senator George said today that there is no longer any hopes of an agreement on a bipartisan compromise on the Bricker plan to amend the constitution. George says it now must be fought out on the Senate floor and he feels his proposal, despite a lack of White House approval, will win "a surprisingly large vote." And the Republicans started to in roduce "piecemeal" legislation of their onw: to invalidate a treaty or international agreement that conflicts with the Constitution and to require a record roll call vote on the Senate ratification of all treaties.

Treasury Secretary Humphrey today told the Congressional economic committee that the Administration's tax program is designed to bring about another year of prosperity - a little below last year's boom levels. Humphrey said the basis aim is: "more jobs, better jobs and higher and better standards of living. Democrats suggested that bigger tax cuts for consumers would be more help for prosperity than tax relief for industry.

The State Department says an intensive investigation fails to prove Senator McCarthy's charge that State Department employees, in the former Administration once engaged in a 150-thousand dollar "shakedown" of a friendly foreign nation. The Department says its possible that a bribe may have been solicited by "other American citizens." McCarthy told the Senate his committee has evidence that its information is "correct."

And today the Senate by a vote of 85 to one (Fulbright of Arkansas) approved another 214-thousand dollars for McCarthy's committee. In the debate Democratic Senator Ellendar of Louisiana read a letter from Army Secretary Stevens saying "the army has found no current espionage or other subversive activity" at Fort Monmouth where the McCarthy committee recently held hearings. Senator McCarthy replied that he had uncovered "very, very current espionage" at Fort Monmouth.

Albert C. Beeson, nominated by the President to be a member of the National Labor Relations Board, told Senators today he had made an "honest mistake" in denying that he ever said he planned to return to his old job after a one-year term on the board. He explained that he made the denial under confused circumstances, without any attempt to mislead. The Republican majority on the Labor committee has approved the nomination on a party-line vote.

Joseph Mehl, head of the Federal Commodity Exchange Authority, told Senators today that federal supervision could stop unwarranted increases in coffee prices. But Gustavo Lobo, the head of the New York Coffee exchange says this is "an impossibility" and would alienate South American countries that produce coffee.

AFL President Meany says the financing charges that are paid to bankers on houses are more responsible for keeping construction costs high than are the costs of labor.

In Indo-China the Communist-led guerrillas have moved 23 miles closer to the capital of Laos despite attacks by French fighters and bombers. Rebel forces have also made new gains in six other sectors.

And in Rome, former Premier DeGasperi told reporters: "We are only at the beginning of a government crisis." President Einaudi is trying to form Italy's fourth government in six months.

It is a sign of health, to be able to talk frankly about the decline of business. We have the example of the President and his economic advisers in the much-praised economic report submitted to Congress on Friday. They could examine the recession without nervousness, even though it is not scientifically possible to say when it will end. Certain things have to happen, to have it end. But if they don't happen the government has the means to stimulate business, and says it's determined to use them.

So it is not being unduly pessimistic to mention the rise of unemployment, which officially was 2,360,000 for January, and unofficially was considerably more; and that car loadings of manufactured goods were down 14 percent the third week in January as against a year ago; and that factory output is seven percent below the peak of last year.

The rise in unemployment naturally has attracted the greatest attention, partly because the official figure does not tell the whole story. In January 275,000 workers were laid off, but were not counted as unemployed, because they were under orders to return to work after a given period. But if in February these men were back at work and another 275,000 were laid off, they too would not be included in the official figures, though they are literally if not technically unemployed.

But the effect on the earning power of the nation is just the same, whether the non-employment was voluntary or enforced. Actually the spendable income of the country goes down more when persons withdraw from the labor force, than from their being unemployed, because most of the unemployed have insurance benefits to spend. Persons who simply stop earning wages spend that much less, or they spend their savings. The experts agree that the decline in business can stop quite soon, and be replaced by an upturn. But for that to happen, inventories have to come down still more than they have so far. It is wrong to generalize about inventories. But a glaring case is washing machines. Stocks on January first rose to 520,000 which was more than double that of the year before. But shipments of washing machines were 200,000 which was one third less than a year ago.

The latest figures for inventories show an overall decline, but it is slight in comparison with sales. If there is to be an upturn in business, the inventories that are too high, will have to come down considerably more, and it may take price reductions to bring that result. One of the unforseeable factors is whether certain businessmen will keep inventories too high, by postponing price reductions too long. U.S. Steel and Bethlehem are granting indirect price cuts, by paying freight charges for customers. DuPont has taken a lead by slashing prices on all three of its synthetic fibers. Other ways are being used to stimulate consumption. But for the present the trend has not been reversed, the decline continues.

Both the AFL and the CIO are telling the Administration that the time is here to launch a public works program. It is interesting that the President's Council of Economic Advisers was instructed early last year to study measures to cope with a depression; this when even a recession was not in sight. So says the report submitted to Congress. The President in that report, listed the means available for the government to maintain stability. They are credit controls by the Federal Reserve system, debt management policies by the Treasury, the authority of the President to change the terms of mortgages carrying federal insurance, changes in taxation, and public works. All save changes in mortgage terms, and public works, are now being used.

The economists themselves consider the "promptness and vigor" shown last summer in combatting a credit stringency, something with no close parallel in our central bank history. One of the telling passages in the economic report said this: "The success with which flexible monetary and debt management policy were used in 1953, should insprie confidence among all citizens, in the capacity and readiness of government to respond promptly to economic circumstances." The promise implied in this report is to expand public works spending just as soon as necessary. And whatever depressing effect there may be from acknowledging the recession, can be tempered by the knowledge that the President and his advisers are alert and committed to take any action necessary to deal with it.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Nineteen years ago Will Rogers remarked: "We can talk all the politics we want, but business rises above politics in this country. There is not a country in the world that can change our outlook as quick as we can. Just a dollar in our pocket makes a different man out of us. The minute any of that dough commences reaching us, we think it's a pretty good place."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday, Feb. 3, 1954

This is the news:

The President today called for "a steady, unshakeable attitude of public confidence" while our economy is in transition from war to peace. In a letter to C.I.O. President Reuther who proposed a national conference on unemployment, Mr. Eisenhower said he has a deep conviction that we can emerge from this transitional period "without seriously interfering with our national growth or the steady improvement of living standards." ~~He said he believes the most important thing the federal government can do is "foster the overall health and vitality of [redacted]"~~ Earlier, at a new conference, the President said he has no objection to calling the economic situation a "recession." He said this is a free country.. you can use any word you want to. He supposes we are receeding from somthing because not everything is at the peak today. He said we must remember that the prosperity of the country lies in the prosperity of the masses and not that of a few corporations.

The Commerce Department reports that the PUBLIC [redacted] had a record income in 1953.. despite a dip in personal income at the end of the year. And today Federal Reserve Board Chairman Martin said [redacted] what he called "the present mild decline" CAN BE TURNED into a serious recession "simply by worrying too much about it." Martin told a congressional committee that he thinks the best spur to prosperity is to reduce business taxes .. to help business replace obsolete plants, give it new incentives to invest in new facilities and develop new facilities. Two Democratic Senators.. Fulbright and Douglas..argued that the best thing to do is increase the purchasing power of the consumer, by cutting taxes.

At his news conference today, the President urged Americans to take a calm approach towards atomic age problems. He's against hysterical fear. He's spent some time in wars and he [redacted] doesn't think big and bombastic talk makes other people afraid. [redacted]

Mr. Eisenhower also said he has several groups working on a breakdown of the 22-hundred persons (seperated) [redacted] from the government as "security risks." But he doesn't know if the breakdown will be made public.

And the President said he will not compromise on one single word when it comes to changing [redacted] the traditional balance of power among the three branches of government. However, in regard to questions on the Bricker amdnement, the President said he recognized an honest fear that the treaty-making power could be used to supersede the Constiution.. he's willing to have the Constiution changed to take care of that fear.

The Senate and House today passed and sent to the President a compromise bill to create 30 new federal judgeships and give some older judges a chance to retire on full pay.

The President's Advisory Commission on Information reported today that the government's Information Agency can hardly gets its job done because of attacks by congressional investigators. The commission reports that such criticism "largely offset, if it did not destroy" our propaganda efforts last year. Senator McCarthy, whose committee has (investigated) the information agency, said: "The program is due for further attention."

The Senate Agriculture Committee has voted unanimously to put coffee under the same market controls which now apply to corn, wheat, cotton and many other commodities.

Irving W. Swanson, assistant secretary for Senate Republicans, testified in a Washington courtroom today that his wife held a fictional job in the office of Republican Representative Bramblett of California. Bramblett is charged with payroll padding. Swanson said his wife turned over to the congressman every penny of her salary.

~~A.F. of L. President Meany says the Federation will concentrate its political efforts this year in those Congressional districts that were won and lost by a five per cent margin two years ago. He said: "Our efforts will be non-partisan."~~

In Berlin, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov proposed a plebiscite for all Germans. They could vote for the Allies' European army plan and the West German peace contract or for a peace treaty. French Foreign Minister Bidault said this would be forcing something on the German people. ~~Secretary of State Dulles~~ A British spokesman says the Molotov plan is a ridiculous side show designed to hide his refusal to let the Germans chose their own leaders in a free election.

In Tokyo, an American officer says the Russian diplomat who recently bolted the Soviet mission in Japan is now telling top Soviet espionage secrets to American agents on Okinawa.

And in India, at least 315 Hindus were crushed to death when ~~[illegible]~~ 3-million frenzied pilgrims stampeded into holy waters to wash away their sins.

5/

In the course of a day, a newsman every so often finds himself with an interesting story. And my colleague in Washington - Dan Schorr - has one tonite.

RETURN CUE:

"And that's the story, Ed."

The proper way to make coffee is in a five-pound lard pail, over an open fire, at least twenty miles from the nearest highway or railroad; you let it boil over three times, then hit it with a dash of cold water to settle the grounds - and you have coffee. / That's about all this reporter knows first-hand about coffee, but it seems the price is too high. The President thinks so - most of the Congress seems to think so, for the Senate Agriculture Committee has voted to put the coffee exchange under federal regulations. The Supreme Court maintains a judicial silence on the subject. / The borough president of Brooklyn urges citizens to observe "coffeeless Wednesdays." Representative Carnahan of Missouri recommends sassafrass tea as a substitute. Enjoy the "switch that satisfies." And if you've never tasted sassafrass tea you've missed something. Or, as Mr. Lincoln said: "If this is coffee, please bring me some tea; and if this is tea, please bring me some coffee."

The high prices may be due to hoarding, too much dealing in futures, the drought and frost in Brazil, or the fact that the world is drinking more coffee. Investigators more skilled than this reporter are trying to find out. But it all goes to prove that it isn't yet one world, and we don't all drink from the same cup. Tonight, near the bottom of the second cup, there arrived a despatch from my learned coffee-drinking Colleague and, connoisseur, Alex Kendrick in Vienna, the place where the coffee bean was first given refuge in the West; where more coffee is brewed in more different ways, more of it consumed per capita than anywhere else. Mark Twain wrote: "Vienna coffee, that unapproachable luxury, that sumptious coffee house coffee, compared with which all other European coffee and all American hotel coffee is mere fluid poverty."

Kendrick's despatch, filed from a coffee house, states unequivocally that the Viennese have decided that our protests against high coffee prices are unwarranted. The retail price of coffee in Vienna is two dollars a pound, and the Viennese consider themselves lucky, for their neighbors the Germans were paying six dollars a pound until recently, when a tax cut brought it down to four. Communist Hungary has just reduced the price of coffee to eighteen dollars a pound. The people of Czechoslovakia would be happy to pay any price for coffee, but there isn't any to be had except the acorn variety. The standard price for coffee in Europe is about forty cents for a regular sized cup, and this goes all the way from the North Cape to the Golden Horn, except in Communist countries, where it's more.

Kendrick quotes the descendant of the man who opened the first coffee house in the Western world, and who himself of course still runs a coffee house in Vienna, as saying: "It isn't what coffee costs, or why. It's what it tastes like that matters." He said: "Look at England, where coffee is cheaper than almost anywhere else, but you can't get a good cup of coffee there." This same authority contends that the Americans aren't much better. They have no respect for the coffee bean. They are too wasteful. They don't stretch the coffee bean far enough, or rather they don't squeeze it hard enough." He gets sixty cups of coffee from a pound, and each one tastes like coffee and not like carrot juice.

An Austrian economist, also in the coffee house, said the Americans were always concerned with investigations instead of economics. He said: "Here the Americans are complaining about the high price of coffee, which is caused by the fact that there isn't as much coffee available as before. Yet look at the high price of butter and other farm products, which isn't caused by scarcity but by surplus." An Austrian importer at the next table thought the Americans should realize that the more they have to pay for imports the less they will have to hand out as economic assistance. At this point everyone agreed that it would be a good idea to have another cup of coffee.

For the man of the household who, having complained about his wife's coffee, is told to try making it himself - we offer this observation by George Bernard Shaw:"It is unwise to do unto others as you would that they do unto you. Their tastes may not be the same." And for the housewife, a last word - a Dutch proverb - she can utter at breakfast time:"Coffee has two virtues - it's wet and it's warm."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Wednesday, Feb. 3, 1954
7:45-8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... In the course of a day a newsman, every so often, finds himself with an interesting story. And my colleague in Washington, Dan Schorr, has one tonite.

SCHORR: On January 15th, the United States Information Agency sent American libraries overseas a new, revised list of banned authors, a list meant to clear off the shelves, in the words of the original order, "works of avowed Communists, persons convicted of crimes involving a threat to the security of the U.S., or persons who publicly refuse to answer questions of Congressional committees regarding their connections with the Communist movement." The new list included such names as Earl Browder, atom spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg and names of many who refused to testify before Congressional committees about possible Communist connections on grounds of self-incrimination. And there was one other name: Adrian S. Fisher, chief of the Legal Division of the State Department under Dean Acheson. Fisher, a one-time Princeton football star, secretary of two Supreme Court Justices, Brandeis and Frankfurter, is now in private practice in Washington. He appeared before the Senate Internal Security subcommittee in December '52, not to testify about himself but to represent the State Department. On orders of Secretary Acheson, Fisher refused to furnish names of those who evaluated Americans for United Nations employment.

Well, last Friday, two weeks after that list went out, a cable went to overseas libraries saying simply: "Strike name of Adrian S. Fisher". But how had Fisher's name gotten on that list? Theodore Streiber (?), Director of the Information Agency, gave us this explanation (and I quote): "Mr. Fisher's name was placed on the list in error, and as soon as the error was discovered, it was quickly removed. Names for these lists are furnished by congressional committees and checked by our own security office. We are gravely concerned over this error, and it has resulted in a tightening of our procedure. We don't want it to happen again."

Fisher made this comment: "It certainly was an error, a bad one. If those who put my name on the list had used even a little care, they would have discovered that I am not and never have been a Communist, a fellow traveler, or even an author."

And that's the story, Ed.

-30-

Ediphone trans./ES

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President today called for "a steady, unshakeable attitude of public confidence" while our economy is in transition from war to peace. In a letter to CIO President Reuther who proposed a national conference on unemployment. Mr. Eisenhower said he has a deep conviction that we can emerge from this transitional period "without seriously interferring with our national growth or the steady improvement of living standards." Earlier, at a newsconference, the President said he has no objection to calling the economic situation a "recession." He said this is a free country you can use any word you want to. He supposes we are receeding from something because not everything is at the peak today. He said we must remember that the prosperity of the country lies in the prosperity of the masses and not that of a few corporations.

The Commerce Department reports that the public had a record income in 1953 despite a dip in personal income at the end of the year. And today Federal Reserve Board Chairman Martin said what he called "the present mild decline" can be turned into a serious recession "simply by worrying too much about it." Martin told a congressional committee that he thinks the best spur to prosperity is to reduce business taxes to help business replace obsolete plants, give it new incentives to invest in new facilities and develop new facilities. Two Democratic Senators, Fulbright and Douglas, argued that the best thing to do is increase the purchasing power of the consumer, by cutting taxes.

At his news conference today, the President urged Americans to take a calm approach towards atomic age problems. He's against hysterical fear. He's spent some time in wars and he doesn't think big and bombastic talk makes other people afraid.

Mr. Eisenhower also said he has several groups working on a breakdown of the 22-hundred persons separated from the government as "security risks." But he doesn't know if the breakdown will be made public.

And the President said he will not compromise on one single word when it comes to changing the traditional balance of power among the three branches of government. However, in regard to questions on the Br cker amendment, the President said he recognized an honest fear that the treaty-making power could be used to supersede the Constitution - he's willing to have the Constitution changed to take care of that fear.

The Senate and House today passed and sent to the President a compromise bill to create 30 new federal judgships and give some older judges a chance to retire on full pay.

The President's Advisory Commission on Information reported today that the government's Information Agency can hardly gets its job done because of attacks by congressional investigators. The commission reports that such criticism "largely offset, if it did not destroy" our propaganda efforts last year. Senator McCarthy, whose committee has investigated the information agency, said: "The program is due for further attention."

The Senate Agriculture Committee has voted unanimously to put coffee under the same market controls which now apply to corn, wheat, cotton and many other commodities.

Irving W. Swanson, assistant secretary for Senate Republicans, testified in a Washington courtroom today that his wife held a fictional job in the office of Republican Representative Bramblett of California. Bramblett is charged with payroll padding. Swanson said his wife turned over to the congressman every penny of her salary.

In Berlin, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov proposed a plebiscite for all Germans. They could vote for the allies' European army plan and the West German peace contract or for a peace treaty. French Foreign Minister Bidault said this would be forcing something on the German people. A British spokesman says the is a ridiculous side show designed to hide his refusal to let the Germans chose their own leaders in a free election.

In Tokyo, an American officer says the Russian diplomat who recently bolted the Soviet mission in Japan is now telling top Soviet espionage secrets to American agents on Okinawa.

And in India, at least 315 Hindus were crushed to death when 3-million frenzied pilgrims stampeded into holy waters to wash away their sins.

In the course of a day, a newsman every so often finds himself with an interesting story. And my colleague in Washington, Dan Schorr, has one tonight.

SCHORR: On January 15th, the United States Information Agency sent American libraries overseas a new, revised list of banned authoris, a list meant to clear off the shelves, in the words of the original order, "words of avowed Communists, persons convicted of crimes involving a threat to the security of the U.S., or persons who publicly refuse to answer questions of Congressional committees regarding their connections with the Communist movement." The new list included such names as Earl Browder, atom spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg and names of many who refused to testify before Congressional committees about possible Communist connections on grounds of self-incriminaation. And there was one other name: Adrian S. Fisher, chief of the Legal Division of the State Department under Dean Acheson. Fisher, a one-time Princeton football star, secretary of two Supreme Court Justices, Brandeis and Frankfurter, is now in private practice in Washington. He appeared before the Senate Internal Security subcommittee in December '52, not to testify about himself but to represent the State Department. On orders of Secretary Acheson, Fisher refused to furnish names of those who evaluated Americans for United Nations employment.

Well, last Friday, two weeks after that list went out, a cable went to overseas libraries saying simply: "Strike name of Adrian S. Fisher." But how had Fisher's name gotten on that list? Theodore Streiber, Director of the Information Agency, gave us this explanation (and I quote:) "Mr. Fisher's name was placed on the list in error, and as soon as the error was discovered, it was quickly removed. Names for these lists are furnished by congressional committees and checked by our own security office. We are gravely concerned over this error, and it has resulted in a tightening of our procedure. We don't want it to happen again."

Fisher made this comment: "It certainly was an error, a bad one. If those who put my name on the list had used even a little care, they would have discovered that I am not and never have been a Communist, a fellow traveler, or even an author." And that's the story, Ed!

MURROW: The proper way to make coffee is in a five-pound lard pail, over an open fire, at least twenty miles from the nearest highway or railroad; you let it boil over three times, then hit it with a dash of cold water to settle the grounds - and you have coffee. That's about all this reporter knows firsthand about coffee, but it seems the price is too high. The President thinks so - most of the Congress seems to think so, for the Senate Agriculture Committee has voted to put the coffee exchange under federal regulations. The Supreme Court maintains a judicial silence on the subject. The borough president of Brooklyn urges citizens to observe "coffeeless Wednesday." Representative Carnahan of Missouri recommends sassafrass tea as a substitute. Enjoy the "switch that satisfies." And if you've never tasted sassafrass tea you've missed something. Or, as Mr. Lincoln said: "If this is coffee, please bring me some tea; and if this is tea, please bring me some coffee.

The high prices may be due to hoarding, too much dealing in futures, the drought and frost in Brazil, or the fact that the world is drinking more coffee. Investigators more skilled than this reporter are trying to find out. But it all goes to prove that it isn't yet one world, and we don't all drink from the same cup. Tonight, near the bottom of the second cup, there arrived a despatch from my learned coffee-drinking colleague and connoisseur, Alex Kendrick in Vienna, the place where the coffee bean was first given refuge in the West; where more coffee is brewed in more different ways, more of it consumed per capita than anywhere else. Mark Twain wrote: "Vienna coffee, that unapproachable luxury, that sumptuous coffee house coffee, compared with which all other European coffee and all American hotel coffee is mere fluid poverty."

Kenrick's despatch, filed from a coffee house, states unequivocally that the Viennese have decided that our protests against high coffee prices are unwarranted. The retail price of coffee in Vienna is two dollars a pound, and the Viennese consider themselves lucky, for their neighbors the Germans were paying six dollars a pound until recently, when a tax cut brought it down to four. Communist Hungary has just reduced the price of coffee to eighteen dollars a pound. The people of Czechoslovakia would be happy to pay any price for coffee, but there isn't any to be had except the acorn variety. The standard price for coffee in Europe is about forty cents for a regular sized cup, and this goes all the way from the North Cape to the Golden Horn, except in Communist countries, where it's more.

Kendrick quotes the descendant of the man who opened the first coffee house in the Western world, and who himself of course still runs a coffee house in Vienna, as saying: "It isn't what coffee costs, or why. It's what it tastes like that matters." He said: "Look at England, where coffee is cheaper than almost anywhere else, but you can't get a good cup of coffee there." This same authority contends that the Americans aren't much better. They have no respect for the coffee bean. They are too wasteful. They don't stretch the coffee bean far enough, or rather they don't squeeze it hard enough." He gets sixty cups of coffee from a pound, and each one tastes like coffee and not like carrot juice.

An Austrian economist, also in the coffee house, said the Americans were always concerned with investigations instead of economics. He said: "Here the Americans are complaining about the high price of coffee, which is caused by the fact that there isn't as much coffee available as before. Yet look at the high price of butter and other farm products, which isn't caused by scarcity but by surplus." An Austrian importer at the next table thought the Americans should realize that the more they have to pay for imports the less they will have to hand out as economic assistance. At this point everyone agreed that it would be a good idea to have another cup of coffee.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: For the man of the household who, having complained about his wife's coffee, is told to try making it himself - we offer this observation by George Bernard Shaw: "It is unwise to do unto others asyou would that they do unto you. Their tastes may not be the same." And for the housewife, a last word - a Dutch proverb - she can utter at breakfast time: "Coffee has two virtues - it's wet and it's warm."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday, Feb. 4, 1954

This is the news:

The Russians today rejected the western plan for the unification of Germany. And Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov offered his own 5-point plan to solve the German question. But Secretary of State Dulles said the Soviet plan, calling for the withdrawal of all foreign troops before an election, would expose all of western Europe to Russian armed forces. [I'd like to review the Berlin developments in a few minutes.]

The State Department says John Vasta, a 26-year-old navy veteran of Hillside, New Jersey, is coming home from a Czech prison camp -- and the protection of the American embassy in Prague. Six years ago the Czechs sentenced Vasta to ten years in prison on trumped up espionage charges. Two years ago, with five others, Vasta escaped from his prison.. digging a tunnel under 39 foot thick walls. Then for 21 months he hid out someplace in Czechoslovakia. And last October he presented himself at our embassy in Prague. American officials negotiated with the Czechs and today he was permitted to leave the country and start the trip home. The Prague radio says Vasta's sentence has been commuted to expulsion..

The State Department has no explanation of how or where Vasta hid himself in Czechoslovakia for 21 months. And so far he has not made his story public.

The Russians today offered to place contracts for more than a billion dollars worth of goods with British industries..for delivery from 1955 to 1957. The Russians want such things as: tankers, small cargo ships, electric power stations and railroad equipment. American officials see this as a major move to persuade the British to relax their strict controls on strategic shipments to the Soviet bloc.

In Tokyo today, informed American sources told reporters that the Russian diplomat who recently asked for [redacted] political asylum with us, was actually the chief Soviet spy in Japan.. a protege of [redacted] Secret Police Chief Beria. These sources say the Russians decision to come over to our side "is a great victory that may be decisive in Japan. It is the intelligence equivalent of a Midway or a Normandy in world war two.

The French in Indo China have set up a new defense arc north of the capital of [redacted]..to try to head-off a three-pronged attack on the CITY [redacted] by Communist-led forces. The enemy troops have seized four forts on the approaches to the city. The French are reinforcing it with men and supplies by airlift.

In Washington the Army says it will soon send to Western Europe another battery of atomic cannons. We already have one battery.. six guns..standing by to support North Atlantic forces.

The President today sent to the Senate the names of 272 nominees for postmasterships in 40 states. WHITE HOUSE News Secretary Hagerty says all were recommended by Republicans in Congress and approved by the Republican national committee. Where Democrats represent congressional districts in which the news postmasters were named, the local Republican organizations approved the nominees.

And the House Post[redacted] Office Committee today agreed to raise the cost of mailing first class letters from three to four cents... on out of town mail. But Republican Representative Gross of Iowa says he doubts that the plan will ever get through the house. He says: "This is just another tax and the House won't vote new taxes."

The Republican National Finance Committee decided at a Washington meeting to approve a record-breaking budget of three million 800-thousand dollars for this year's campaign to control Congress. This is almost double the budget for the 1950 congressional elections. Much of the increase is said to be due to the high cost of television programs.

Four Latin American nations today emphatically condemned what they called "the boycott campaign against coffee which is being carried out in the Unted States." Representatives of BRazil, Colombia, el Salvador and Mexico want the matter brought before the Inter-American Conference in Venezuela.

The National Milk Producers Federation urges the government to start cut-rate butter sales to get rid of millions of pounds of surplus butter now owned by the federal government. A spokesman for the Federation..which represents dairy farmers.. says such sales might wipe out the surplus in less than a year. And Democratic Senator Gillette of Iowa suggests a stamp plan to help dispose of the butter to needy Americans.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson told a Congressional ECONOMIC committee today, that the long dip in farm income "is largely behind us." Benson disagrees with the "pessimistic view" that a 17 per cent drop in farm prices over the past three years, is a signal of "a general depression." He says the latest price report shows a widespread improvement... averaging four per cent, from the middle of November to the middle of January.

Senate Majority Leader Knowland indicated today that he expects no Senate vote for ten days or more, on the many plans to amend the constiututution to limit the President's treaty-making powers. And Attorney General Brownell says he and Secretary of State Dulles agree that "we cannot change the delicate balance of power between the three branches of government."

Edward R. Murrow: February 4, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

So far everything that has happened at the Berlin Foreign Ministers' conference has been completely predictable. Today Mr. Molotov submitted his plan for creating an all-German government. Again he wanted to create the government before the vote had been taken. He asked for the formation of a provisional government by the parliaments of east and west Germany. This is an effort to put the East German Government on a par with the freely elected West German Government. Then Mr. Molotov would have this provisional government prepare for the holding of a national election. He proposed the withdrawal of all occupation troops, except housekeeping or maintenance units, before the elections are held. That would mean the Russians would pull back to the Oder-Niesse Line, about fifty miles from Berlin, while the allies would have to come back west of the Rhine about three hundred miles from Berlin. The Western Powers will have no part of this proposal, and they made that clear today.

The essence of this argument, which isn't really an argument but a restatement of views, is that the Russians want to create a government and then hold an election; while the Western Powers have the oldfashioned view that there should be an election which would in turn create a government. Both sides are arguing as though the other wasn't there. Molotov is clearly engaged in a delaying action - is not at all reluctant to advance proposals which have been refused before, and which he knows will be refused again. So far neither side has said anything that might conceivably lead to a compromise on the question of Germany. The arguments have been barren and totally without surprise.

However, there has been a significant and important change in Communist tactics in Europe, even though it has not been expressed in Berlin. This change, and it is official, is summed up in the phrase: "The Common Front". This is designed to replace those two successful pre-war tactics known as "The United Front", and "The Popular Front". This new plan, which has already been made public in Vienna, calls for a Communist alliance with the Socialist parties of Western Europe, Latin America and the Far East. This so-called "common front" calls for an end of the over-zealous attempts to set up peace councils and outright Communist Party organizations wherever possible. The Communists say the new plan is for "unity of action of the working classes." The Communists admit that they have made mistakes in their past relations with the Socialists. They confess that they have adhered too closely to their old slogans and demands. Now they say officially that they're going to pay primary attention to organizing what they call "the joint fight of the working class." They say that they have launched too many actions too quickly; have demanded too much of the Party organizations abroad. This means that in place of outright communist front organizations the Communists will now concentrate on broad non-Party activity, where they can associate themselves with Socialists and other Left Wing parties. The Austrian Communist Party - and it will be followed by the other Communist parties of Western Europe - says it will intensify its efforts to establish "companionable relationship with our Socialist comrades". — Will try to proceed from joint discussion to joint wording of demands of the working classes."

Demands and action are to be decided and implemented only in agreement with the Socialists. How successful this new tactic, this so-called Common Front will be, remains to be seen. In the past the West European Socialists have been vigorous and militant in their opposition to communism. But there now exists a precarious political balance, both in France and in Italy, where the parties of the center are shopping about for support both from the Right and from the Left. This new policy of the Common Front, of the Communists, reflects a desire on the part of the Communists to get back into government coalitions. The positions they held in the post-war governments of both France and Italy, and also of Poland and Czechoslovakia, with results that can be seen on the map.

This new device of the so-called "Common Front" may or may not work; but it is inexpensive; it is capable of contributing to the confusion in both France and Italy; and it is a development of considerably more importance than anything that has happened so far in Berlin.

There are no set rules when it comes to dealing in international diplomacy. But there are certain basics which seem to have stood up through much of history. Franklin offered one sound argument when he said:"If you wish to persuade, speak of interest, not of reason." Thomas Wilson was equally right when he concluded:"There is a danger in being persuaded before one understands."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Russians today rejected the western plan for the unification of Germany. And Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov offered his own 5-point plan to solve the German question. But Secretary of State Dulles said the Soviet plan, calling for the withdrawal of all foreign troops before an election, would expose all of Western Europe to Russian armed forces. I'd like to review the Berlin developments in a few minutes.

The State Department says John Masta, a 26-year-old navy veteran of Hillside, New Jersey, is coming home from a Czech prison camp and the protection of the American embassy in Prague. Six years ago the Czechs sentenced Vasta to ten years in prison on trumped up espionage charges. Two years ago, with five others, Vasta escaped from his prison digging a tunnel under 39 foot thick walls. Then for 21 months he hid out someplace in Czechoslovakia. And last October he presented himself at our embassy in Prague. American officials negotiated with the Czechs and today he was permitted to leave the country and start the trip home. The Prague radio says Vasta's sentence has been commuted to expulsion. The State Department has no explanation of how or where Vasta hid himself in Czechoslovakia for 21 months. And so far he has not made his story public.

The Russians today offered to plade contracts for more than a billion dollars worth of goods with British industries for delivery from 1955 to 1957. The Russians want such things as: tankers, small cargo ships, electric power stations and railroad equipment. American officials see this as a major move to persuade the British to relax their strict controls on strategic shipments to the soviet bloc.

In Tokyo today, informed American sources told reporters that the Russian diplomat who recently asked for political asylum with us, was actually the chief Soviet spy in Japan - a protege of the late Secret Police Chief Beria. These sources say the Russian's decision to come over to our side "is a great victory that may be decisive in Japan. It is the intelligence equivalent of a Battle of Midway or a Normandy invasion in World War II.

The French is Indo-China have set up a new defense are north of the capital of Laos to try to head off a three-pronged attack on the city by Communist-led forces. The enemy troops have seized four forts on the approaches to the city. The French are reinforcing it with men and supplies by airlift.

In Washington the Army says it will soon send to Western Europe another battery of atomic cannons. We already have one battery, six guns, standing by to support North Atlantic forces.

The President today sent to the Senate the names of 272 nominees for postmasterships in 40 states. White House News Secretary Hagerty says all were recommended by Republicans in Congress and approved by the Republican national committee. Where Democrats represent congressional districts in which the news postmasters were named, the local Republican organizations approved the nominees.

And the House Post Office Committee today agreed to raise the cost of mailing first class letters from three to four cents on out of town mail. But Republican Representative Gross of Iowa says he doubts that the plan will ever get through the house. He says: "This is just another tax and the House won't vote new taxes."

The Republican National Finance Committee decided at a Washington meeting to approve a record-breaking budget of three million 800-thousand dollars for this year's campaign to control Congress. This is almost double the budget for the 1950 congressional elections. Much of the increase is said to be due to the high cost of television programs.

Four Latin merican nations today emphatically condemned what they called "the boycott campaign against coffee which is being carried out in the United States." Representatives of Brazil, Colombia, el Salvador and Mexico want the matter brought before the Inter-American Conference in Venezuela.

The National Milk Producers Federation urges the government to start cut-rate butter sales to get rid of millions of pounds of surplus butter now owned by the federal government. A spokesman for the Federation which represents dairy farmers, says such sales might wipe out the surplus in less than a year. And Democratic Senator Gillette of Iowa suggests a stamp plan to help dispose of the butter to needy Americans.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson told a Congressional Economic committee today that the long dip in farm income "is largely behind us." Benson disagrees with the "pessimistic view" that a 17 percent drop in farm prices over the past three years is a signal of "a general depression." He says the latest price report shows a widespread improvement averaging four percent from the middle of November to the middle of January.

Senate Majority Leader Knowland indicated today that he expects no Senate vote for ten days or more on the many plans to amend the constitution to limit the President's treaty-making powers. And Attorney General Brownell says he and Secretary of State Dulles agree that "we cannot change the delicate balance of power between the three branches of government."

So far everything that has happened at the Berlin Foreign Ministers' conference has been completely predictable. Today Mr. Molotov submitted his plan for creating an all-German government. Again he wanted to create the government before the vote had been taken. He asked for the formation of a provisional government by the parliaments of east and west Germany. This is an effort to put the East German Government on a par with the freely elected West German Government. Then Mr. Molotov would have this provisional government prepare for the holding of a national election. He proposed the withdrawal of all occupation troops, except housekeeping or maintenance units, before the elections are held. That would mean the Russians would pull back to the Oder-Niesse Line, about fifty miles from Berlin, while the allies would have to come back west of the Rhine about three hundred miles from Berlin. The Western Powers will have no part of this proposal, and they made that clear today.

The essence of this argument, which isn't really an argument but a restatement of views, is that the Russians want to create a government and then hold an election; while the Western Powers have the old fashioned view that there should be an election which would in turn create a government. Both sides are arguing as though the other wasn't there. Molotov is clearly engaged in a delaying action - is not at all reluctant to advance proposals which have been refused before, and which he knows will be refused again. So far neither side has said anything that might conceivably lead to a compromise on the question of Germany. The arguments have been barren and totally without surprise.

However, there has been a significant and important change in Communist tactics in Europe, even though it has not been expressed in Berlin. This change, and it is official, is summed up in the phrase: " The Common Front." This is designed to replace those successful pre-war tactics known as "The United Front", and "The Popular Front." This new plan, which has already been made public in Vienna, calls for a Communist alliance with the Socialist parties of Western Europe, Latin America and the Far East. This so-called "common front" calls for an end of the over-zealous attempts to set up peace councils and outright Communist Party organizations wherever possible. The Communists say the new plan is for "unity of action of the working classes." The Communists admit that they have made mistakes in their past relations with the Socialists. They confess that they have adhered too closely to their old slogans and demands. Now they say officially that they're going to pay primary attention to organizing what they call "the joint fight of the working class." They say that they have launched too many actions too quickly; have demanded too much of the Party organizations abroad. This means that in place of outright communist front organizations the Communists will now concentrate on broad non-Party activity, where they can associate themselves with Socialists and other Left Wing parties. The Austrian Communist Party - and it will be followed by the other Communist parties of Western Europe - says it will intensify its efforts to establish "companionable relationship with our Socialist comrades." Will try to proceed from "joint discussion to joint wording of demands of the working classes."

Demands and action are to be decided and implemented only in agreement with the Socialists. How successful this new tactic, this so-called Common Front will be, remains to be seen. In the past the West European Socialists have been vigorous and militant in their opposition to communism. But there now exists a precarious political balance, both in France and in Italy, where the parties of the center are shopping about for support both from the Right and from the Left. This new policy of the Common Front, of the Communists, reflects a desire on the part of the Communists to get back into government coalitions. The positions they held in the post-war governments of both France and Italy, and also of Poland and Czechoslovakia, with results that can be seen on the map.

This new device of the so-called "Common Front" may or may not work; but it is inexpensive; it is capable of contributing to the confusion in both France and Italy; and it is a development of considerably more importance than anything that has happened so far in Berlin.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: There are no set rules when it comes to dealing in international diplomacy. But there are certain basics which seem to have stood up through much of history. Franklin offered one sound argument when he said: "If you wish to persuade, speak of interest, not of reason." Thomas Wilson was equally right when he concluded: "There is a danger in being persuaded before one understands."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday, Feb 5, 1954

This is the news:

The western foreign ministers today told Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov his plan to unify Germany is totally unacceptable. And Secretary of State Dulles accused the Russians of trying to elbow their way to the Rhine. He warned Molotov: "it is late, but not too late" for him to come forward with a workable plan for Germany. The ministers agreed to meet in secret on Monday to decide what to do next on the German problem.

There are reliable reports from West Berlin tonight that the Soviet attitude at the foreign ministers conference has set off a new wave of unrest in the Russian zone.

In Washington today, Foreign Aid Director Stassen said that [redacted] Russia's offer to buy more than a billion dollars worth of industrial equipment from Great Britain is a sign of "economic difficulty." Some Washington experts believe its merely a psychological warfare weapon. But Stassen says the Russians made their offer at a time when they are shipping large quantities of gold, platinum and oil to the west to buy consumer and other goods. He says: "It does not appear that a country would ship out its most valuable possessions without being in economic difficulty." Stassen says we will not object to Britain shipping non-strategic items to Russia. We expect the British to continue to "screen" contracts..to block the exporting of strategic items.

Vatican sources report that the condition of Pope Pius now showed "a slight trend toward improvement." Earlier, the Pope's personal physician said in a communique:"The Pope's general state, weakened by excessive , prolonged mental and physical work, has been further weakened, because of the gastric disturbance, and is disturbed by the difficulty of feeding."

In Washington two senators,, Republican Bricker, and Democrat George..told their colleagues that unless there is a greater guard on the President's power to make international agreements, the nation, someday, might come close to dictatorship. George said:"We've got the possibility of one-man rule in these United States. You may say that's visionary, but it isn't." And Senator Bricker said if nothing is done to prevent a President from entering into agreements that over-ride domestic law, "you are on the verge of dictatorship when you get a President who wants to rule the country singlehandedly." (I should like to discuss the status of the Bricker amendment in a few minutes.)

A Congressional economic committee today heard Robert C. Goodwin, employment security director, testify that its entirely possible that we may have a fairly rapid expansion of business in the second half of this year. Goodwin says unemployment is expected to average two million 600-thousand in the first six months of the year and then drop to about two millions. Ewan Clague of the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that there was a drop of 380-thousand in factory employment from December to January. This was the largest reduction for the season since January of 1949. But [redacted]--says Clague..the total number of workers in manufacturing in January was more than 16-million...the highest for any January since the end of World War Two.

Republican Chairman Hall told party leaders today that "left wingers" are "recklessly spreading "gloom and doom" across the land" in an effort to ride a depression back into political power. He specifically named: C.I.O. President Reuther, Senators Douglas and Morse and Adlai Stevenson. Reuther and the Senators said they are merely presenting facts.

And the same Republican leaders tonight heard Vice President Nixon declare that the country will swing to the "far left" unless a united Republican party carries out the President's program for "peace and prosperity."

[redacted]

The Democratic National Committee says it is sending what it calls "truth kits" to party workers and editors in the cities where Senator McCarthy is going to speak on his present tour. The Democrats say McCarthy "has been considerably more careless with the truth" while speaking away from Washington than when he is in Washington.

The House postoffice committee today voted to increase the cost of air mail stamps from six to seven cents and to raise mailing costs of Some newspapers and magazines by 30 per cent.

The House Ways and Means Committee today voted to give a better tax break to American firms doing business abroad.

Edward R. Murrow: February 5, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

The Senate today continued to debate proposals to amend the Constitution in regard to the treaty-making power. But the final vote on whatever is left of the Bricker amendment will not be taken before February 16th. Majority Leader Knowland wants to use the "Lincoln lull" - the time when Republican Congressmen go home for Lincoln Day observances - for members to hear from their constituents about the issue.

The original Bricker amendment already is dead. The Ohio Senator himself joined in killing it by producing an amended amendment. The new version leaves out the celebrated "which" clause. That is the provision which gave state legislatures a virtual veto over certain treaties. It is the "which" clause that first drew attention to the far-reaching nature of the change Senator Bricker was proposing.

He has killed his original amendment but he has retreated only part way. His followers say that the new draft is much the same as the George amendment. It is to be recalled that Senator Bricker said he would accept the George amendment if it were strengthened a little. This is his way of strengthening it.

It is worth going into particulars of these two amendments to see what they contain and why President Eisenhower is against them both.

Senator George's amendment leaves the treaty-making power untouched. It would let a treaty become the law of the land as the constitution now proscribes. But it does not give this status to executive agreements. A clause in the George amendment says that executive agreements become the law of the land only by an act of Congress. That takes away power from the President and confers it on Congress. Mr. Eisenhower, according to Attorney General Brownell, is against anything that affects the present balance of power between the three branches of government. This amendment certainly would do that. It would not be a drastic change. Congress already has the power to nullify an executive agreement by passing an act. It has the same power to nullify a treaty, and did so, for example, when it passed the Chinese Exclusion Act. What the George amendment does is to prevent an executive agreement becoming domestic law without an act of Congress, Congress would not be allowed, as at present, to give its assent by silence.

Now let us see what Senator Bricker has done to strengthen the George amendment. He proposes that in addition to executive agreements no treaty shall become the law of the land without further legislation, unless the Senate in ratifying the treaty explicitly states that it becomes the law of the land without legislation, and says so by a two-thirds majority. Senator George wants to leave the treaty-making power intact, but would limit the power of making executive agreements. Senator Bricker would not let either a treaty, or an executive agreement, become domestic law without it being so stipulated by a two-thirds vote of the Senate. And that takes still more power from the President, and transfers it to the Senate.

For those who like constitutional abstractions this is a rewarding field. For example, there is the argument that the constitution says that a treaty when ratified becomes the "supreme" law of the land. Doesn't that make it supreme over the constitution and therefore worth changing? The answer to that is, that when the drafters of the constitution wrote "supreme" they meant simply supreme over the states. They were interested in putting all three, Constitution, treaties, and acts of Congress, above state statutes and constitutions. They talked a great deal about that. They never talked about anything whatever, being supreme over the constitution.

If that is what the drafters meant, why didn't they say so? The answer to that is, they didn't say everything they meant. For example, they didn't say in so many words, that the Supreme Court could rule an act of Congress unconstitutional. The Supreme Court has never ruled a treaty unconstitutional. But that is because in the 165 years of the Constitution, no treaty has been challenged on that ground. Were such a challenge to be made, constitutionalists agree that if the treaty were found to violate the constitution, it would be nullified.

It is no final argument to say that something that hasn't happened never will happen. It also is not impossible, that where an iota of doubt about the constitution exists, someone, sometime, may exploit that doubt, and try something dangerous, and get away with it. But on this theme Senator George is quoted as saying: "If two-thirds of the Senate is wrong about a treaty, you may be sure that the country as a whole will be dead wrong. And you cannot ~~XXXXXX~~ erect constitutional safeguards against human folly. I'd be in favor of it, if you could, but you can't."

These are questions in the high altitude where the oxygen is thin. The down-in-the-valley fact is, that a great many senators endorsed the Bricker amendment a long time ago, without knowing what they were doing. Now all of them know, and all but the outright isolationists want to save face. A straight-out defeat of a constitutional amendment under President Eisenhower's unyielding leadership, may well be the cleanest way to treat so basic an issue. But some senators on both sides of the House still hope they can escape acute embarrassment by voting for something that saves the constitutional division of powers and their faces at the same time.

Much has been written about the Constitution. It's a document that's not always easy to define. And many scholars have tried their hand at it. But perhaps Henry Clay came closest when he wrote:"The Constitution of the United States was made not merely for the generation that then existed, but for posterity - unlimited,undefined, endless, perpetual posterity."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The western foreign ministers today told Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov his plan to unify Germany is totally unacceptable. And Secretary of State Dulles accused the Russians of trying to "elbow their way to the Rhine." He warned Molotov: "it is late, but not too late" for him to come forward with a workable plan for Germany. The ministers agreed to meet in secret on Monday to decide what to do next on the German problem.

There are reliable reports from West Berlin tonight that the Soviet attitude at the foreign ministers conference has set off a new wave of unrest in the Russian zone.

In Washington today, Foreign Aid Director Stassen said that Russia's offer to buy more than a billion dollars worth of industrial equipment from Great Britain is a sign of "economic difficulty." Some Washington experts believe its merely a psychological warfare weapon. But Stassen says the Russians made their offer at a time when they are shipping large quantities of gold, platinum and oil to the west to buy consumer and other goods. He says: "It does not appear that a country would ship out its most valuable possessions without being in economic difficulty." Stassen says we will not object to Britain shipping non-strategic items to ussia. We expect the British to continue to "screen" contracts - to block the exporting of strategic items.

Vatican sources report that the condition of Pope Pius now shows "a slight trend toward improvement." Earlier, the Pope's personal physician said in a communique: "The Pope's general state, weakened by excessive, prolonged mental and physical work, has been further weakened because of the gastric disturbance and is disturbed by the difficulty of feeding.

In Washington two senators, Republican Bricker and Democrat George told their colleagues that unless there is a greater guard on the President's power to make international agreements the nation, someday might come close to dictatorship. George said: "We've got the possibility of one man rule in these United States. You may say that's visionary but it isn't." And Senator Bricker said if nothing is done to prevent a President from entering into agreements that over-ride domestic law, "you are on the verge of dictatorship when you get a President who wants to rule the country singlehandedly." I should like to discuss the status of the Bricker amendment in a few minutes.

A Congressional economic committee today heard Robert C. Goodwin, employment security director, testify that its entirely possible, that we may have a fairly rapid expansion of business in the second half of this year. Goodwin says unemployment is expected to average two million 600-thousand in the first six months of the year and then drop to about two millions. Ewan Clague of the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that there was a drop of 380-thousand in factory employment from December to January. This was the largest reduction for the season since January of 1949. But, says Clague the total number of workers in manufacturing in January was more than 16-million - the highest for any January since the end of World War Two.

Republican Chairman Hall told party leaders today that "left wingers" are "recklessly spreading gloom and doom across the land" in an effort to ride a depression back into political power. He specifically named: CIO President Reuther, Senators Douglas and Morse and Adlai Stevenson. Reuther and the Senators said they are merely presenting facts.

An. the same Republican leaders tonight heard Vice President Nixon declare that the country will swing to the "far left" unless a united Republican party carries out the President's program for "peace and prosperity."

The Democratic National Committee says it is sending what it calls "truth kits" to party workers and editors in the cities where Senator McCarthy is going to speak on his present tour. The Democrats say McCarthy "has been considerably more careless with the truth" while speaking away from Washington than when he is in Washington.

he House postoffice committee today voted to increase the cost of air mail stamps from six to seven cents and to raise mailing costs of some newspapers and magazines by 30 percent.

The House Ways and Means Committee today voted to give a bette. tax break to merican firms doing business abroad.

The Senate today continued to amend the Constitution in regard to the treaty-making power. But the final vote on whatever is left of the Bricker amendment will not be taken before February 16th Majority Leader Knowland wants to use the "Lincoln lull" - the time when Republican Congressmen go home for Lincoln Day observances - for members to hear from their constituents about the issue.

The original Bricker amendment already is dead. The Ohio Senator himself joined in killing it by producing an amended amendment. The new version leaves out the celebrated "which" clause. That is the provision which gave state legislatures a virtual veto over certain treaties. It is the "which" clause that first drew attention to the far-reaching nature of the change Senator Bricker was proposing.

He has killed his orighal amendment but he has retreated only part way. His followers say that the new draft is much the same as the George amendment. It is to be recalled that Senator Bricker said he would accept the George amendment if it were strengthened a little. This is his way of strengthening it.

It is worth going into particulars of these two amendments to see what they contain and why President Eisenhower is against them both.

Senator George's amendment leaves the treaty-making power untouched. It would let a treaty become the law of the land as the Constitution now proscribes. But it does not give this status to executive agreements. A clause in the George amendment says that executive agreements become the law of the land only by an act of Congress. Mr. Eisenhower, according to Attorney General Brownell, is against anything that affects the present balance of power between the three branches of government. This amendment certainly would do that. It would not be a drastic change. Congress already has the power to nullify a treaty, and did so, for example, when it passed the Chinese Exclusion Act. What the George amendment does is to prevent an executive agreement becoming domestic law without an act of Congress, Congress would not be allowed, as at present, to give its assent by silence.

Now let us see what Senator Bricker has done to strengthen the George amendment. He proposes that in addition to executive agreements no treaty shall become the law of the land without further legislation, unless the Senate in ratifying the treaty explicitly states that it becomes the law of the land without legislation, and says so by a two-thirds majority. Senator George wants to leave the treaty-making power intact but would limit the power of making executive agreements. Senator Bricker would not let either a treaty or an executive agreements. Senator Bricker would not let either a treaty or an executive agreement become domestic law without it being so stipulated by a two-thirds vote of the Senate. And that takes still more power from the President and transfers it to the Senate.

For those who like constitutional abstractions this is a rewarding field. For example, there is the argument that the constitutio says that a treaty when ratified becomes the "supreme" law of the land. Doesn't that make it supreme over the constitution and therefore worth changing? The answer to that is that when the drafters of the constitution wrote "supreme" they meant simply supreme over the states, They were interested in putting all three, Constitution, treaties and acts of Congress above state statutes and constitutions. They talked a great deal about that. They never talked about anything whatever being supreme over the Constitution.

If that is what the drafters meant, why didn't they say so? The answer to that is they didn't say everything they meant. For example, they didn't say in so many words that the Supreme Court could rule an act of Congress unconstitutional. The Supreme Court has never ruled a treaty unconstitutional. But that is because in the 165 years of the Constitution no treaty has been challenged on that ground. Were such a challenge to be made, constitutionalists agree that if the treaty were found to violate the constitution it would be nullified.

It is no final argument to say that something that hasn't happened never will happen. It also is not impossible that where an iota of doubt about the constitution exists someone, sometime, may exploit that doubt and try something dangerous and get away with it. But on this theme Senator George is quoted as saying: "If two-thirds of the Senate is wrong about a treaty, you may be sure that the country as a whole will be dead wrong. And you cannot erect constitutional safeguards against human folly. I'd be in favor of it if you could, but you can't."

There are questions in the high altitude where the oxygen is thin. The down-in-the-valley fact is that a great many senators endorsed the Bricker amendment a long time ago without knowing what they were doing. Now all of them know and all but the outright isolationists want to save face. A straight-out defeat of a constitutional amendment under President Eisenhower's unyielding leadership may well be the cleanest way to treat so basic an issue. But some senators on both sides of the House still hope they can escape acute embarrassment by voting for something that saves the constitutional division of powers and their faces at the same time.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Much has been written about the Constitution. It's a document that's not always easy to define. And many scholars have tried their hand at it. But perhaps Henry Clay came closest when he wrote: "The Constitution of the United States was made not merely for the generation that then existed, but for posterity - unlimited, undefined, endless, perpetual posterity."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday Feb 8, 1954

This is the news:

The French command in Indo-China says a battle for the capital of Laos is "imminent." The French are now strictly censoring all dispatches from the area. But word has come that Communist-led troops are attacking the outlying defenses of the capital..only ~~a few days [illegible] from the city.~~ Fighting -

In Washington the United Press says "informed sources" report that Admiral Radford, the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, is urging that serious consideration be given to sending an American military training mission to Indo-China..perhaps as many as 200 non-fighting men. Radford is said to be considering sending either retired General Van Fleet or General John O'Daniel, our army commander in the Pacific, to head the proposed military mission.

And on the Senate floor, Senator Mansfield of Montana told his colleagues "the swiftly developing crisis" in Indo-China cannot be allowed "to drift any longer." He said we are all entitled to know whether "if the situation warrants it, American combat troops will be sent to Indo-China." I'd like to discuss the situation in Indo-China in a few minutes.

In Korea, the Communist radio accuses us of "blatant violations" of the armistice. And in Washington, the State Department flatly denies a published report, that Special Ambassador Dean is being removed from his job as negotiator for a Korean peace. We're told that Dean is prepared to return to Panmunjom when the enemy meets conditions "which he has laid down" for resuming the conversations. Dean has demanded that the Communists retract their charge of "perfidy".

The Big Four foreign ministers met in secret in Berlin today, and a communique says they have laid aside the question of German unification. They've agreed to move on to a discussion of independence for Austria, not later than Friday.

German and western sources in Berlin say the Communist secret police have now quelled the simmering unrest in the Soviet zone.

Italian President Einaudi has selected former Interior Minister Mario Scelba to try to form a new government. It was Scelba, whose riot police stopped Communist demonstrations in 1948.

The Vatican reports that Pope Pius is recovering slowly, and is now able to move about his bedroom. This was the third report in three days of improvement in the Pope's condition. We're told that he now is eating with less difficulty.

In Washington, Two Democrats--Representative Rayburn of Texas and Senator Symington of Missouri-- have challenged Republican attacks on their party. Rayburn told the House that the President should halt what Rayburn called " mean , untrue and dastardly charges" against Democrats by administration officials. Symington said if these "viscious and untruthful attacks continue , the resulting national disunity can only play directly into the hands of a possible enemy." Both men made reference to a speech by President Assistant Sherman Adams in which he accused "political sadists" of trying to foist a "fear deal" on the country.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson said today that the dairy industry should make the most of high coffee prices by promoting more milk drinking. The government now has 350-million dollars tied up in dried milk. Senator Frear of Delaware said housewives can combat the price increase by using milk and coffee substitutes. And Leon Isreal, vice president of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange told Congressmen he sees no prospect for a break in coffee prices while the demand remains "normal." The president of the exchange, Gustavo Lobo, Junior, said prices will go even higher if the consumers keep drinking as much coffee as they're drinking now.

Former Representative Hartley told a Senate committee today that the President has been "misled and ill-advised" in his proposed changes in the Taft-Hartley law. Hartley says many of the proposals are too friendly to labor.

The Justice Department says a federal grand jury in Washington has accused former Democratic Representative Casey of Massachusetts and Aristotle Onassis, and seven others, of conspiring to defraud the government. Onassis is a Greek-Argentine shipping magnate. The men are accused, in effect, of buying surplus ships after World War Two by falsely claiming that their companies were owned by American citizens.. because the law permitted the sale only to Americans. Onassis says the charges are "unfounded ....viscious rumours."

~~Interior Secretary McKay says the Bureau of Land Management will issue leases, on a competitive basis, for the development of mineral resources in submerged lands lying outside the so-called Tidelands. Operation of these lands will be supervised by the Geological survey.~~

In Indo-China Communist spearheads are somewhere ~~in~~ between fifteen and thirty miles from the capital of Laos. French Defense Minister Rene Pleven is flying out to take "whatever action is necessary to save the situation." He is expected to ask for more American fighter-bombers. David Schoenbrun ~~XXXXXXX~~ cables from Paris that there are Intelligence reports there that the Chinese are constructing a new Jet fighter base in ~~XXXXXXX~~ Kwangsi Province, not far from the Indo-Chinese border; and that the first Russian-built MIG 15's are beginning to arrive.

The French in Berlin are doing everything they can to get talks started on peace in Indo-China. Today a high French official told Schoenbrun that "it is important that Western policy demonstrate to the people of France that America understands and sympathizes with their suffering, and will not stand in the way of peace in Indo-China. This official contended that "Mr. Dulles must not appear to be forcing France to fight on in Indo-China, particularly after the Americans had agreed to talk with the Chinese Communists, when the armistice was agreed in Korea."

Some idea of Communist tactics in Berlin can be gained from the calendar of events during the first few days. On the first day of the conference, thirty-three British business men left London for Moscow at the invitation of the Soviet Government. And on the same day the Communists launched their new winter offensive in Indo-China. On the second day of the Berlin conference, Russian purchasing agents in Australia bought up fifty percent of all the wool offered at open auction. # On the third day of the conference Russian cotton began arriving in Liverpool, and the tempo of the Communist attacks in Indo-China was stepped up. On the fourth day, the Communist offensive in Laos really began to move. On the fifth day, two new divisions were identified in Indo-China; Moscow proposed to double its trade with France; and the British announced they were opening trade negotiations with Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary. # On the sixth day of the Berlin conference, the Russians signed a trade pact with Belgium, totalling only sixty million dollars, but they called it "only a first step." During the second week of the meetings, the Russians offered a billion dollar trade deal to the British. West European industrialists are being offered, at least on paper, vast markets in the east; while the offensives in Indo-China increase the French appetite for peace.

There are also interesting developments in some of the satellite countries. In Hungary, the Secret Police has been discontinued as a separate unit. There have been practically no arrests recently for political reasons. The courts have handed down a number of seven penalties against professional informers. Deportations of the politically unreliable to remote places in the country have practically stopped. There are more consumer goods in the shops; night clubs and dance halls are re-opening in Budapest; and there has been a significant change in the Hungarian Radio. For five years the Hungarian Radio was devoted to internal propaganda, denunciations of the West, and Russian language lessons. Alex Kendrick cables that Radio Budapest has turned into an "entertainment station." It used to denounce American jazz; but now one-third of its programs are devoted to what used to be called this "decadent bourgeois music". The Russian language lessons have been dropped from the schedule. Hungarian listeners are now getting news, including widespread foreign coverage; and they're getting it faster than from the Voice of America or Radio Free Europe. Men like Eisenhower and Dulles are now referred to as just Eisenhower and Dulles, instead of "Capitalistic warmongering beasts."

In another quick switch, the Hungarian press and radio are saying that nothing must be put in the way of those peasants who wish to desert the collective farms. The Hungarian Communist boss, Rakosi has given up his bodyguard, and now travels in a single car instead of a cavalcade. The press and radio have stopped trying to deify him.

Hungarian women are now being told that it's quite all right for them to go to beauty parlors, because it is not unMarxian to be attractive.

These changes are officially referred to as "the new economic policy", and in many ways they appear to parallel Lenin's N.E.P. in 1924. That was a passing phase, followed by violent repression, and these changes in Hungary may be only temporary. There has also been some easing of the tight controls in Poland and Czechoslovakia, but nothing comparable to what has happened in Hungary. Some observers believe this is in the nature of an experiment, to see how much freedom Russian satellites can stand; others believe it's an accident, resulting from Stalin's death, and his successors' pre-occupation with internal affairs; while still others regard it as a deliberate propaganda effort, to convince the West that the Russians are determined to ease the tensions everywhere. Kendrick concludes that, whatever the reasons, the Hungarians are certainly enjoying this Indian Summer of Communism. And the fact that they are doing so, should be reported in the same objective way, as we previously reported how hard they were having it.

The new economic policy being pursued in Hungary by the Communists is not easy to interpert. And no one can predict the results. But Winston Churchill...wise in years...once remarked:"How little can we foresee the consequences, either of wise or unwise action, of virtue or of malice. Without this measureless, and perpetual uncertainty, the drama of human life would be destroyed."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The French command in Indo-China says a battle for the capital of Laos is "imminent." The French are now stric ly censoring all dispatches from the area. But word has come that Communist-led troops are attacking the outlying defenses of the capital.

In Washington the United Press says "informed sources" report that Admiral Radford, the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, is urging that serious consideration be given to sending an American military training mission to Indo-China perhaps as many as 200 non-fighting men. Radford is said to be considering sending either retired General Van Fleet, or General John O'Daniel, our army commander in the Pacific, to head the proposed military mission.

And on the Senate floor, Senator Mansfield of Montana told his colleagues "the swiftly developing crisis" in Indo-China cannot be allowed "to drift any longer." He said we are all entitled to know whether "if the situation warrants it, American combat troops will be sent to Indo-China." I'd like to discuss the situation in Indo-China in a few minutes.

In Korea, the Communist radio accuses us of "blatant violations" of the armistice. And in Washington the State Department flatly denies a published report that Special Ambassador Dean is being removed from his job of negotiator for a Korean peace. We're told that Dean is prepared to return to Panmunjom when the enemy meets conditions "which he has laid down" for resuming the conversations. Dean has demanded that the Communists retract their charge of "perfidy."

The Big Four foreign ministers met in secret in Berlin today and a communique says they have laid aside the question of German unification. They've agreed to move on to a discussion of independence for Austria not later than Friday.

German and western sources in Berlin say the Communist secret police have now quelled the simmering unrest in the Soviet zone.

Italian President Einaudi has selected former Interior Minister Mario Scelba to try to form a new government. It was Scelba whose riot police stopped Communist demonstrations in 1948.

The Vatican reports that Pope Pius is recovering slowly and is now able to move about his bedroom. This was the third report in three days of improvement in the Pope's condition. We're told that he now is eating with less difficulty.

In Washington, two Democrats, Representative Rayburn of Texas and Senator Symington of Missouri, have challenged Republican attacks on their party. Rayburn told the House that the President should halt what Rayburn called "mean, untrue and dastardly charges" against Democrats by administration officials. Symington sad if these "viscious and untruthful attacks continue, the resulting national disunity can only play directly into the hands of a possible enemy." Both men made reference to a speech by Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams in which he accused "political sadists" of trying to foist a "fear deal" on the country

Secretary of Agriculture Benson said today that the dairy industry should make the most of high coffee prices by promoting more milk drinking. The government now has 350-million dollars tied up in dried milk. Senator Frear of Delaware said housewives can combat the price increase by using milk and coffee substitutes. And Leon Israel, vice president of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange told Congressmen he sees no prospect for a break in coffee prices while the demand remains "normal." The President of the exchange, Gustavo Lobi, Junion, said prices will go even higher if the consumers keep drinking as much coffee as they're drinking now.

Former Representative Hartley told a Senate committee today that the President has been "misled and ill-advised" in his proposed changes in the Taft-Hartley law. Hartley says many of the proposals are too friendly to labor.

The Justice Department says a federal grand jury in Washington has accused former Democratic Representative Casey of Massachusetts and Aristotle

Onassis, and seven others, of conspiring to defraid the government. Onassis is a Greek-Argentine shipping magnate. The men are accused, in effect, of buying surplus ships after World War Two by falsely claiming that their companies were owned by American citizens because the law permitted the sale only to Americans. Onassis says the charges are "unfounded viscious rumors."

In Indo-China Communist spearheads are somewhere between fifteen and thirty miles from the capital of Laos. French Defense Minister Rene Pleven is flying out to take "whatever action is necessary to save the situation." He is expected to ask for more American fighter-bombers. David Schoenbrun cables from Paris that there are Intelligence reports there that the Chinese are constructing a new Jet fighter base in Kwangsi Province, not far from the Indo-Chinese border; and that the first Russian-built MIG 15's are beginning to arrive.

The French in Berlin are doing everything they can to get talks started on peace in Indo-China. Today a high French official told Schoenbrun that "it is important that Western policy demonstrate to the people of France that America understands and sympathizes with their suffering, and will not stand in the way of peace in Indo-China. This official contended that "Mr. Dulles must not appear to be forcing France to fight on in Indo-China, particularly after the Americans had agreed to talk with the Chinese Communists, when the armistice was agreed in Korea."

Some idea of Communist tactics in Berlin can be gained from the calendar of events during the first few days. On the first day of the conference, thirty-three British business men left London for Moscow at the invitation of the Soviet Government. And on the same day the Communists launched their new winter offensive in Indo-China. On the second day of the Berlin conference, Russian purchasing agents in Australia bought up fifty percent of all the wool offered at open auction. On the third day of the conference Russian cotton began arriving in Liverpool, and the tempo of the Communist attacks in Indo-China was stepped up. On the fourth day, the Communist offensive in Laos really began to move. On the fifth day, two new divisions were identified in Indo-China; Moscow proposed to double its trade with France; and the British announced they were opening trade negotiations with Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary. On the sixth day of the Berlin conference, the Russians signed a trade pact with Belgium, totalling only sixty million dollars, but they called it "only a first step." During the second week of the meetings, the Russians offered a billion dollar trade deal to the British. West European industrialists are being offered, at least on paper, vast markets in the east; while the offensives in Indo-China increase the French appetite for peace.

There are also interesting developments in some of the satellite countries. In Hungary, the Secret Police has been discontinued as a separate unit. There have been practically no arrests recently for political reasons. The courts have handed down a number of severe penalties against professional informers. Deportations of the politically unreliable to remote places in the country have practically stopped. There are more consumer goods in the shops; night clubs and dance halls are re-opening in Budapest; and there has been a significant change in the Hungarian Radio. For five years the Hungarian Radio was devoted to internal propsganda, denunciations of the West, and Russian language lessons. Alex Kendrick cables that Radio Budapest has turned into an "entertainment station." It used to denounce American jazz; but now one-third of its programs are devoted to what used to be called "this decadent bourgeois music." The Russian language lessons have been dropped from the schedule. Hungarian listeners are now getting news, including widespread foreign coverage; and they're getting it faster than from the Voice of America or Radio Free Europe. Men like Eisenhower and Dulles are now referred to as just Eisenhower and Dulles, instead of "Capitalistic warmongering beasts."

In another quick switch, the Hungarian press and radio are saying that nothing must be put in the way of those peasants who wish to desert the collective farms. The Hungarian Communist boss, Rakosi, has given up his bodyguard, and now travels in a single car instead of a cavalcade. The press and radio have stopped trying to deify him. Hungarian women are now being told that it's quite all right for them to go to beauty parlors, because it is not unMarxian to be attractive.

These changes are officially referred to as "the new economic policy," and in many ways they appear to parallel Lenin's NEP in 1924. That was a passing phase followed by violent repression, and these changes in Hungary may be only temporary. There has also been some easing of the tight controls in Poland and Czechoslovakia, but nothing comparable to what has happened in Hungary. Some observers believe this is in the nature of an experiment to see how much freedom Russian satellites can stand; others believe it's an accident resulting from Stalin's death and his successors' pre-occupation with internal affairs; while still others regard it as a deliberate propaganda effort to convince the West that the Russians are determined to ease the tensions everywhere. Kendrick concludes that, whatever the reasons, the Hungarians are certainly enjoying this Indian Summer of Communism. And the fact that they are doing so should be reported in the same objective way as we previously reported how hard they were having it.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The new economic policy being pursued in Hungary by the Communists is not easy to interpret. And no one can predict the results. But Winston Churchill, wise in years, once remarked: "How little can we foresee the consequences either of wise or unwise action, of virtue or of malice. Without this measureless and perpetual uncertainty, the drama of human life would be destroyed."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday Feb. 9, 1954

This is the news:

Defense Secretary Wilson says the War in Indo-China is "going fully as well as we and the French expected" at this stage. He says the French and loyal natives will probably win a military victory unless the Chinese Communists intervene. And Wilson feels such a victory rather than a negotiated peace "would perhaps be possible and probable." The Secretary said again that we are not sending combat troops to Indo-China. But we are sending technicians as a temporary training force. As late dispatches from Indo China reported enemy spearheads within six to (twelve) miles of the capital of Laos, Democratic Representative Stennis told his colleagues: "We are riding hard on a road that will lead to intervention." [I'd like to discuss the complexities of the Indo-China situation in a few minutes.]

The Russians today permitted correspondents to cable reports, (attributed) to well-informed sources, that the Red army has tested atomic artillery. Chairman Cole of the joint congressional atomic enery committee says he's not surprised. He adds that this should serve as a warning to us to "keep ahead" in developing atomic arms.

At Berlin, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov, ignoring western plans for unifying all Germany, again attacked the European Defense Community plan, and said he would offer his own plan tomorrow "for European security." The lack of accomplishment at today's secret session has led many western observers to predict that the current Berlin conference will result in no concrete achievemtn on Germany or independence for Austria.

In Korea, the United Nations command has formally charged the enemy with violating the armistice by secretly moving combat planes into nine North Korean air bases.

And our Air Force says its going to establish five new air bases and put eight others back into operation in this Country, beginning July first.

Senate Democratic Leader Johnson said today that "irresponsible statements by high administration officials" may lead to Democratic retaliation and less co-operation on the President's legislative program. And when reporters asked White House News Secretary Hagerty about other Democratic [redacted]m protests against attacks made on their party, Hagerty said: I don't think they are attacks." He said White House Assistant Adams, who called the Democrats "political sadists" " was just giving people the facts."

The President today sent the Senate a list of 124 foreign service promotions. Such promotions had been held-up for a year for reasons of economy and to permit a full F.B.I. field investigation of all persons named for "sensitive positions."

The Immigration Service today warned Congress that up to 100 former Communists are sneaking across the Mexican border every day.

The House has approved a bill providing 682-million dollars to finance the (GOVERNMENT'S) farm price support program for the next two months. And Secretary of Agriculture Benson said in Oklahoma that "the resentment of 140-million non-farm consumers is mounting against the expensive, wasteful and ineffective program of rigid price supports."

Chairman Beall of a Senate Banking Committee said the group may supbena lists of large coffee traders and speculators unless brokers and Coffee Exchange officials supply these lists voluntarily.

A Federal Grand jury in Washington has found Republican Representative Bramblett of California guilty of falsifying his office payroll in a sceheme to collect kick-backs.

Bramblett is serving his fourth term in the House.

The A. F. of L. today accused the administration of changing the "political complexion" of the National Labor Relations Board to produce a reversal of a policy favoring employers.

And Vatican City officials report that Pope Pius "had a tranquil night and rested well." Again he was able to take some food and leave his bed for a short while.

Edward R. Murrow: February 9, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

Defence Secretary Wilson's ~~Senator Knowland's~~ announcement, that no American ground forces are to be sent to Indo-China simply reaffirms a decision of long standing, adopted while the Korean war was still going on. The decision ~~which~~ was not to be involved with combat personnel, in further wars on the mainland of Asia. Unless a new decision is made, the most to be expected from us in Indo-China is more weapons and equipment, with some technicians to service aircraft ~~transport planes.~~

There can be no question that such a policy finds wide approval in this country, all the more so, that the Korean war now is ended. People would be horrified to have an American war in Indo-China take its place. Since Americans are so relieved to be out of Korea, a good many have sympathy with the desire of the French for an armistice in Indo-China. But They don't see that peace in Indo-China would be quite different from the peace we expect in Korea.

In Indo-China the peace would necessarily be one of political compromise. The Communist portion of the Indo-Chinese population has not lost the war, and so it would have to be given a share in the governments of the Associated States. These Communists have had their training and weapons from the Chinese Communists - now to be reinforced by Russian-made MIGS. Once inside the governments of the Associated States they must be expected to function on behalf of Communism, rather than Indo-China, regardless of the fact that Indo-China is now assured its genuine independence by France. / And even if the Communists should be accorded only a minority role in the governments, they would not be up to form, if they did not "capture these governments from within," as in Czechoslovakia. In Korea the peace will not resemble this in any way. There will be no compromise that would force Communist collaborators on Dr. Rhee.

It should not be asking too much of this country to realize that a peace of compromise in Indo-China, if it instals Communists in the governments there, will almost inevitably lead to the loss of Indo-China, to the non-Communist world. And if Indo-China is lost, all south-east Asia will be lost in time, and with it, all hope of the survival of Western power and ideas on the Asian mainland. Indo-China actually is far more important in resources and geographical position than Korea. Compromise in Indo-China could be a defeat for this country of immeasurable magnitude. It could round out sensationally the defeat suffered through the Communist conquest of China.

If this happens, it will not be due to ideological confusion in the Eisenhower Administration, but to its miscalculation of the needs and nature of modern power. This is not said to hint that the United States should send infantry to Indo-China. Surely that is not the only way to avert a disastrous compromise there. It is said to point out a trend in American foreign policy. This trend was high-lighted by a speech of Secretary Dulles on January 11th, and then whittled down by Defense Secretary Wilson last week. But it was first set in motion by the financial policy of the Eisenhower Administration. This obviously counted on the danger of Communist expansion, and certainly of world war, being somewhat diminished, at present. That must be the case, for it slowed down the projected growth of the country's defenses.

This trend is being called the "New Look" in American policy. There are two features to the new look. One is the ratio of forces in the defense setup, with increased reliance on atomic weapons. The other is the decision to resist aggression by striking back at a place of our choosing, and not necessarily at the place of aggression. This is interpreted to mean, that we ~~should~~ MAY bomb the industrial installations of the Soviet Union, if the Kremlin launches a fresh aggression. It was Mr. Dulles's way of saying that the day of small wars was over, and if the Kremlin started a small war, atomic action against the Russian heartland ~~would~~ could result.

Secretary Wilson has since toned down this warning. Our retaliatory power, he said last week, would be used only to protect our freedom, and then only in the event of "a very substantial overt act of aggression." It may be remarked that Secretary Wilson took away some of the deterrent value of what Secretary Dulles said. For he gave notice that we would react only against a major aggression. It happens that the Soviet Union's favorite weapon is the minor aggression. It is infiltration followed up by bloodless seizure of control, as in Czechoslovakia. Or it is the use of nationals as in Korea, and as the Chinese Communists are using them in Indo-China.

The new look probably makes us appear to others as weaker, not stronger against Soviet expansion. Either we are weaker, or Communist objectives have become less sinister. The Berlin conference so far has shown no sign whatever that the Kremlin is abandoning its objectives. All it has done is to produce a most engaging reversal in manners. The Kremlin is busily playing on the French hopes for peace in Indo-China. It is quite possible that the Berlin conference will end in no more than a resumption of the Panmunjom talks, at some other place, with an agenda enlarged to include Indo-China.

Mr. Dulles and Mr. Eden both are reported by Paris to be reconciled to France negotiating a peace in Indo-China. Perhaps it is the price for keeping France snugly within the Western front at Berlin. They may be bargaining away power and prestige in Asia to keep power and prestige in Europe, as though these are not ultimately the same, at any rate for the United States.

Just in terms of power, in this world of power, the West finds itself unable to win the war in Indo-China, or to end it without tragic compromise. It is a war in which the newly equipped native troops should by now be fighting with the energy shown by the Korean Republic troops. But they are not fighting well, nor can they be expected to, with the air filled with whispers of the French making a compromise peace.

Admittedly it does not save the situation to state it. But before it can be saved it has to be stated. At the moment, for all our wishing it were not so, we do not muster the strength to be sure of saving it to our satisfaction.

It would seem that the Berlin meetings are not making much headway...nor are future prospects particularly hopeful in ~~a atmosphere. Pliny~~ Pliny the Younger once had some appropriate advice to give:"Be as ready to pardon the moral errors of mankind as if you were every day guilty of some yourself; at the same time, be as cautious of committing a fault as if you never forgave one."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Defense Secretary Wilson says the War in Indo-China is "going fully as well as we and the French expected" at this stage. He says the French and loyal natives will probably win a military victory unless the Chinese Communists intervene And Wilson feels such a victory rather than a negotiated peace "would perhaps be possible and probable." The Secretary said again that we are not sending combat troops to Indo-China. But we are sending technicians as a temporary training force. As late dispatches from Indo China reported enemy spearheads within six to twelve miles of the capital of Laos, Democratic Representative Stennis told his colleagues: "We are riding hard on a road that will lead to intervention." I'd like to discuss the complexities of the Indo-China situation in a few minutes.

The Russiand today permitted correspondents to cable reports, attributed to well-informed sources, that the Red army has tested atomic artillery. Chairman Cole of the joint congressional atomic energy committee says he's not surprised. He adds that this should serve as a warning to us to "keep ahead" in developing atomic arms.

At Berlin, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov, ignoring western plans for unifying all Germany again attacked the European Defense Community plan and said he would offer hiw own plan tomorrow "for European security." The lack of accomplishment at today's secret session has led many western observers to predict that the current Berlin conference will result in no concrete achievements on Germany or independence for Austria.

In Korea, the United Nations command has formally charged the enemy with violating the armistice by secretly moving combat planes into nine North Korean air bases.

And our Air Force says it's going to establish five new air bases and put eight others back into operation in this country beginning July first.

Senate Democratic Leader Johnson said today that "irresponsible statements by high administration officials" may lead to Democratic retaliation and less co-operation on the President's legislative program. And when reporters asked White House News Secretary Hagerty about other Democratic protests against attacks made on their party, Hagerty said: I don't think they are attacks." He said White House Assistant Adams, who called the Democrats "political sadists" was just giving people the facts."

The President today sent the Senate a list of 124 foreign service promotions. Such promotions had been held-up for a year for reasons of economy and to permit a full FBI field investigation of all persons named for "sensitive positions."

The Immigration Service today warned Congress that up to 100 former Communists are sneaking across the Mexican border everyday.

The House has approved a bill providing 682-million dollars to finance the Government's farm price support program for the next two months. And Secretary of Agriculture Benson said in Oklahoma that "the resentment of 140-million non-farm consumers is mounting against the expensive, wasteful and ineffective program of rigid price supports."

Chairman Beall of a Senate Banking Committee said the group may subpoena lists of large coffee traders and speculators unless brokers and Coffee Exchange officials supply these lists voluntarily.

A Federal Grand Jury in Washington has found Republican Representative Bramblett of California guilty of flasifying his office payroll in a scheme to collect kick-backs. Bramblett is serving his fourth term in the House.

The AFL today accused the administration of changing the "political complexion" of the National Labor Relations Board to produce a reversal of a policy favoring employers.

And Vatican City officials report that Pope Pius "had a tranquil night and rested well." Again he was able to take some food and leave his bed for a short while.

Defense Secretary Wilson's announcement that no American ground forces are to be sent to Indo-China simply reaffirms a decision of long standing, adopted while the Korean war was still going on. The decision was not to be involved with combat personnel, in further wars on the mainland of Asia. Unless a new decision is made, the most to be expected from us in Indo-China is more weapons and equipment, with some technicians to service aircraft.

There can be no question that such a policy finds wide approval in this country, all the more so, that the Korean war now is ended. People would be horrified to have an American war in Indo-China take its place. Since Americans are so relieved to be out of Korea, a good many have sympathy with the desire of the French for an armistice in Indo-China. But they don't see, that peace in Indo-China would be quite different from the peace we expect in Korea.

In Indo-China the peace would necessarily be one of political compromise. The Communist portion of the Indo-Chinese population has not lost the war, and so it would have to be given a share in the governments of the Associated States. These Communists have had their training and weapons from the Chinese Communists - now to be reinforced by Russian-made MIGS. Once inside the governments of the Associates States they must be expected to function on behalf of Communism, rather than Indo-China, regardless of the fact that Indo-China is now assured its genuine independence by France. And even if the Communists should be accorded only a minority role in the governments, they would not be up to form, if they did not "capture these governments from within," as in Czechoslovakia. In Korea the peace will not resemble this in any way. There will be no compromise that would force Communist collaborators on Dr. Rhee.

It should not be asking too much of this country to realize that a peace of compromise in Indo-China, if it installs Communists in the governments there, will almost inevitably lead to the loss of Indo-China, to the non-Communist world. And if Indo-China is lost, all south-east Asia will be lost in time, and with it, all hope of the survival of Western power and ideas on the Asian mainland. Indo-China actually is far more important in resources and geographical position than Korea. Compromise in Indo-China could be a defeat for this country of immeasurable magnitude. It could round out sensationally the defeat suffered through the Communist conquest of China.

If this happens, it will not be due to ideological confusion in the Eisenhower Administration, but to its miscalculation of the needs and nature of modern power. This is not said to hint that the United States should send infantry to Indo-China. Surely that is not the only way to avert a disastrous compromise there. It is said to point out a trend in American foreign policy. This trend was high-lighted by a speech of Secretary Dulles on January 11th, and then whittled down by Defense Secretary Wilson last week. But it was first set in motion by the financial policy of the Eisenhower Administration. This obviously counted on the danger of Communist expansion, and certainly of world war, being somewhat diminished at present. That must be the case, for it slowed down the projected growth of the country's defenses.

This trend is being called the "New Look" in American policy. There are two features to the new look. One is the ratio of forces in the defense setup, with increased reliance on atomic weapons. The other is the decision to resist aggression by striking back at a place of our choosing and not necessarily at the place of aggression. This is interpreted to mean that we may bomb the industrial installations of the Soviet Union if the Kremlin launches a fresh aggression. It was Mr. Dulles's way of saying that the day of small wars was over, and if the Kremlin started a small war, atomic action against the Russian heartland could result.

Secretary Wilson has since toned down this warning. Our retaliatory power, he said last week, would be used only to protect our freedom, and then only in the event of "a very substantial overt act of aggression." It may be remarked that Secretary Wilson took away some of the deterrent value of what Secretary Dulles said. For he gave notice that we would react only against a major aggression. It happens that the Soviet Union's favorite weapon is the minor aggression. It is infiltration followed up by bloodless seizure of control, as in Czechoslovakia. Or it is the use of nationals as in Korea, and as the Chinese Communists are using them in Indo-China.

The new look probably makes us appear to others as weaker, not stronger against Soviet expansion. Either we are weaker, or Communist objectives have become less sinister. The Berlin conference so far has shown no sign whatever that the Kremlin is abandoning its objectives. All it has done is to produce a most engaging reversal in manners. The Kremlin is busily playing on the French hopes for peace in Indo-China. It is quite possible that the Berlin conference will end in no more than a resumption of the Panmunjom talks, at some otherplace, with an agenda enlarged to include Indo-China.

Mr. Dulles and Mr. Eden both are reported by Paris to be reconciled to France negotiating a peace in Indo-China. Perhaps it is the price for keeping France snugly within the Western front at Berlin. They may be bargaining away power and prestige in Asia to keep power and prestige in Europe, as though these are not ultimately the same, at any rate for the United States.

Just in terms of power, in this world of power, the West finds itself unable to win the war in Indo-China, or to end it without tragic compromise. It is a war in which the newly equipped native troops should by now be fighting with the energy shown by the Korean Republic troops. But they are not fighting wwll, nor can they be expected to, with the air filled with whispers of the French making a compromise peace.

Admittedly it does not save the situation to state it. But before it can be saved it has to be stated. At the moment, for all our wishing it were not so, we do not muster the strength to be sure of saving it to our satisfaction.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that the Berlin meetings are not making much headway nor are future prospects particularly hopeful. Pliny the Younger once had some appropriate advice to give: "Be as ready to pardon the moral errors of mankind as if you were every day guilty of some yourself; at the same time, be as cautious of committing a fault as if you never forgave one."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday Feb. 10 1954

This is the news:

The Russians today proposed an all-Europe security pact, with 32 nations... but not the United States..participating. Great Britain and France promptly turned it down, recognizing, with the United States, the effort to wreck the western alliance. [I'd like to discuss the Soviet plan in a few minutes.]

The President said today that he is doing everything possible to keep us from getting involved in the Indo-Chinese war.. or any other war. As Vietminh forces inched closer to the capital of Laos, Mr. Eisenhower told reporters in Washington: every step we are taking to help the French is calculated to keep us from getting in too deep. He cannot conceive of a greater tragedy than American involvement in an all-out war in Indo-China or elsewhere. Democratic Senator George calls this a very wise statement. But Democratic Senator Gillette of Iowa thinks that we are making moves in Indo-China that could be considered war-like by others. The French disclosed today that 105 American air force technicians and (mechanics) arrived in Indo-China a week ago.

Most of the time at the President's newsconference today was devoted to questions on the Democratic complaint that Republican orators are labelling the whole Democratic party communist...sadistic..or treasonous. Reporters sought the President views. And he told them: such talk is untrue, politically unwise and very foolish. He said the times are too serious for extreme political partisanship. He knows of no way to stop such talk except from members of the executive department.. and from Republican Chairman Hall. He would not comment on Hall's recent estimate of Senator Mc Carthy as an asset to the party. But the President did acknowledge that he needs Democratic support to push through his legislative program. Democratic Senate Leader Johnson called the President's remarks "the attitude of a gentleman and an American." But Democratic Senator Monroney says the President failed to meet the issue. And tonight, Republican Senator Jenner charged that while our men were fighting in Korea a victory "was being thrown away by men high in the (past) Administration who were friends, allies or appeasers of the Soviet destroyers."

The President was ALSO asked if he agrees with some Republicans who have charged that certain Democrats are trying to frighten the country into a depression. Mr. Eisenhower said it would be possible to mislead and frighten the country to a certain extent into a great recession but not a depression.

The President announced that he is recommending an increase of 225-million dollars in federal aid to the states for highway construction... if Congress approves his request to keep the two cents a gallon gasoline tax and not drop it by half a cent on April first.

Defense Mobilizer Fleming today offered special tax benefits to encourage plant expansion in 22 industries..including aircraft, cement and lumber. This additional production capacity is needed to meet our mobilization requirements in case of war.

The Department of Agriculture reported today that it is now donating government-owned surplus food to about 200-thousand needy persons in 11 states. Most of the food is going to rural families who suffered from the drought and crop failures.. and to coal miners who have been out of work for a long time.

And Secretary of Commerce Weeks says the government has decided not to sell its big stocks of farm surpluses to Russia or her satellities. But he indicates that private traders may sell "non-strategic" farm products to the Russians when the products are bought on the open market.

The Senate today passed a bill (to) put coffee trading under supervision of the Department of Agriculture's Commodity Exchange Authority. And our ambassador to Brazil, James S. Kemper, reports that even in Brazil, the world's largest coffee producer, prices have increased sharply and coffee-drinkers are "suffering as much as we are."

Democrats in Congress reported today that State Department officials have told them that although they listed 534 departures from the department as "security cases", only 11 were dismissed for ("Loyalty) reasons." And seven of these cases were started under the Truman administration. The Democrats say Undersecretary of State Smith and Security Chief McLeod told a House committee in secret that among those persons listed as "security risks" were many who had been transferred to another federal agency, or resigned before they were labelled "risks."

McLeod said in South Dakota today that the question of security is "red hot and should be". He said he doesn't think the Public (is concerned) with any breakdown of the 22-hundred security risks the Administration has said it has fired.

Here in New York today, a 25-year-old dishwasher named Harold Weinberg has confessed that he killed the poet Maxwell Bodenheim, and his third wife.

And the Board of Directors of the New York Central Railroad, turned down a demand by Robert R. Young that he be named chairman of the board. The Board decided that "it would be inimical to the best interest of the company" to grant Young's request

In Italy, Mario Scelba has succeeded in forming his country's fourth government in six months. But the experts doubt that he will be able to get a vote of confidence.

And the Vatican reports that Pope Pius continues to show improvement. (Every precaution) is being taken to safeguard against a relapse.

In Korea, South Korean President Rhee told a reporter today: he is determined to re-open the war against the Chinese Communists, who now occupy North Korea. He said: "I am not bluffing. I can't bluff now."

Edward R. Murrow: February 10, 1954. 7.55 p.m.

Today in Berlin, Russian Foreign Minister Molotov made his most determined effort, so far, to wreck the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. His proposal came as a surprise. In essence it is a plan to freeze the United States out of Europe. Mr. Molotov proposed a fifty-year treaty for all the nations of Europe, "regardless of their social system." Any attack against one nation in Europe, would be regarded as an attack against the entire treaty bloc. This plan was spelled out in very considerable detail. Both east and west Germany could participate in it. There would be no use of force, or the threat of force. All treaty memebers would consult among themselves, when there is danger of an armed attack in Europe. There would be periodical conferences. The United States and Communist China would be invited to sit in, but only as observers.

Under Mr. Molotov's plan he would get equality for east and west Germany; he would get representation for Red China; he would scuttle the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance; and he would re-state commitments already existing, under the terms of the United Nations Charter. His primary purpose, of course, is to get the United States out of Europe. He claims that his plan would assure the neutralization of Germany, and the creation of conditions favorable to the settlement of the German problem in the interests of consolidating peace in Europe. Molotov also proposed the simultaneous withdrawal of occupation troops from east and west Germany, within six months. But the Four Powers would retain the right to move their forces back into Germany if the "security of either part of Germany is threatened," whatever that may mean.

Russia desires to dominate Europe, desires that America should get out; wants to persuade the French that a way can be found to prevent Germany from re-arming; and wants to create the impression in Europe that safety and security can be achieved without American participation. Today Mr. Molotov wrapped the whole thing up in one package and put it on the table in Berlin.

Secretary of State Dulles said the proposal would leave West Germany, and consequently much of Western Europe exposed to any threat of external aggression." He refused to take offense because the United States would be ruled out of this proposal. He said it was a matter for the Europeans to decide; but he reminded Molotov that the American people have a very deep and legitimate interest in Europe. He said: "Now for a third time in this century we have sent forces back to Europe, and again the reason was that there were many in Europe who were afraid and who asked us to do so." He said: "The division of Europe is between those who have been absorbed into the Communist bloc, and the others who do not want to be absorbed." He said: "The fear in free Europe is a fear which cannot be allayed by new words and new promises; because the fear was inspired by a country which was already bound by the United Nations Charter not to use force against the territorial integrity or independence of any state." And Mr. Dulles added: "Whether that fear will be allayed by any repetition of that pledge is not for me to decide." In this answer he struck a shrewd blow by saying, in effect, "All right, it's up to the Europeans - let them decide." He was confident what their decision would be. Dulles didn't ask for time to think over Molotov's proposals. He had his feet braced and answered immediately.

Howard Smith cables me from Berlin that one observer described the thing this way: "Dulles really arrived loaded for duck. It was almost impolite. Molotov barely let the bird leave his hand when there was a loud bang, and it came fluttering down.

Many Europeans will be measuring Molotov's proposal against their memories of what happened in Czechoslovakia. The Communists took that country by infiltration from within. The Red Army didn't move, although it was poised. And there is nothing in Molotov's proposal to insure that the same thing wouldn't happen in Germany, Italy or France. # The Communists want room to maneuver in those countries, and in order to do that they must break the ties with this country. This was Molotov's effort to do so. # His proposals in no way throw the conference out of stride. Tomorrow's discussions will be on the Far East. On Friday the talk will be about Austria. And then next week the conference will return to Molotov's proposal. But so far as the Western Powers are concerned, it is already a dead duck.

The long range implications of Mr. Molotov's proposal may well have been set forth more than a hundred years ago when the Marquis de Custine observed: "Russia sees Europe as a prey which dissensions will sooner or later deliver up to her; she foments anarchy in the hope of profiting by a corrpution she promotes because it is favorable to her views."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

7:45 - 8:00 PM EST
WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1954

This is the news:

The Russians today proposed an all-Europe security pact with 32 nations but not the United States participating. Great Britain and France promptly turned it down recognizing, with the United States, the effort to wreck the western alliance. I'd like to discuss the Soviet plan in a few minutes.

The President said today that he is doing everything possible to keep us from getting involved in the Indo-Chinese war or any other war. As Vietmin forces inched closer to the capital of Laos, Mr. Eisenhower told reporters in Washington: every step we are taking to help the French is calculated to keep us from getting in too deep. He cannot conceive of a greater tragedy than American involvement in an all-out war in Indo-China or elsewhere. Democratic Senator George calls this a very wise statement. But Democratic Senator Gillette of Iowa thinks that we are making moves in Indo-China that could be considered war-like by others. The French disclosed today that 105 American air force technicians and mechanics arrived in Indo-China a week ago.

Most of the time at the President's news conference today was devoted to questions on the Democratic complaint that Republican orators are labelling the whole Democratic party communist, sadistic, or treasonous. Reporters sought the President's views. And he told them: such talk is untrue, politically unwise and very foolish. He said the times are too serious for extreme political partisanship. He knows of no way to stop such talk except frommembers of the executive department and from Republican Chairman Hall. He would not comment on Hall's recent estimate of Senator McCarthy as an asset to the party. But the President did acknowledge that he needs Democratic support to push through his legislative program. Democratic Senate Leader Johnson called the President's remarks "the attitude of a gentleman and an American." But Democratic Senator Monroney says the President failed to meet the issue. And tonight, Republican Senator Jenner charged that while our men were fighting in Korea a victory "was being thrown away by men high in the past Administration who were friends, allies or appeasers of the Soviet destroyers."

The President was also asked if he agrees with some Republicans who have charged that certain Democrats are trying to frighten the country into a depression. Mr. Eisenhower said it would be possible t mislead and frighten the country to a certain extent into a great recession but not a depression.

The President announced that he is recommending an increase of 225-million dollars in federal aid to the states for highway construction if Congress approves his request to keep the two cents a gallon gasoline tax and not drop it by half a cent on April first.

Defense Mobilizer Fleming today offered special tax benefits to encourage plant expansion in 22 industries, including aircraft, cement and lumber. This additional production capacity is needed to meet our mobilization requirements in case of war.

The Department of Agriculture reported today that it is now donating government-owned surplus food to about 200-thousand needy persons in 11 states. Most of the food is going to rural families who suffered from the drought and crop failures and to coal miners who have been out of work for a long time.

And Secretary of Commerce Weeks says the government has decided not to sell its big stocks of farm surpluses to Russia or her satellities. But he indicates that private traders may sell "non-strategic" farm products to the Russians when the products are bought on the open market.

The Senate today passed a bill to put coffee trading under supervision of the Department of Agriculture's Commodity Exchange Authority. And our ambassador to Brazil, James S. Kemper, reports that even in Brazil, the world's largest coffee producer, prices have increased sharply and coffee-drinkers are "suffering as much as we are."

Democrats in Congress reported today that State Department officials have told them that although they listed 534 departures from the department as "security cases" only 11 were dismissed for "loyalty reasons." And seven of these cases were started under the Truman administration. The Democrats say Undersecretary of State Smith and Security Chief McLeod told a House committee in secret that among those persons listed as "security risks" were many who had been transferred to another federal agency, or resigned before they were labelled "risks."

McLeod said in South Dakota today that the question of security is "red hot and should be." He said he doesn't think the public is concerned with any breakdown of the 22-hundred security risks the Administration has said it has fired.

Here in New York today, a 25-year-old dishwasher named Harold Weinberg has confessed that he killed the poet Maxwell Bodenheim and his third wife.

And the Board of Directors of the New York Central Railroad turned down a demand by Robert R. Young that he be named chairman of the board. The Board decided that "it would be inimical to the best interest of the company" to grant Young's request.

In Italy, Mario Shelda has succeeded in forming his country's fourth government in six months. But the experts doubt that he will be able to get a vote of confidence.

And the Vatican reports that Pope Pius continues to show improvement. Every precaution is being taken to safeguard against a relapse.

In Korea, South Korean President Rhee told a reporter today: he is determined to re-open the war against the Chinese Communists who now occupy North Korea. He said: "I am not bluffing. I can't bluff now."

Today in Berlin, Russian Foreign Minister Molotov made his most determined effort so far to wreck the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. His proposal came as a surprise. In essence it is a plan to freeze the United States out of Europe. Mr. Mobtov proposed a fifty-year treaty for all the nations of Europe," regardless of their social system." Any attack against one nation in Europe would be regarded as an attack against the entire treaty bloc. This plan was spelled out in very considerable detail. Both east and west Germany could participate in it. There would be no use of force, or the threat of force. All treaty members would consult among themselves when there is danger of an armed attack in Europe. There would be periodical conferences. The United States and Communist China would be invited to sit in, but only as observers.

Under Mr. Molotov's plan he would get equality for east and west Germany; he would get representation for Red China; he would scuttle the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance; and he would re-state commitments already existing under the terms of the United Nations Charter. His primary purpose, of course, is to get the United States out of Europe. He claims that his plan would assure the neutralization of Germany, and the creation of conditions favorable to the settlement of the German problem in the interests of consolidating peace in Europe. Molotov also proposed the simultaneous withdrawal of occupation troops from east and west Germany, within six months. But the Four Powers would retain the right to move their forces back into Germany if the "security of either part of Germany is threatened," whatever that may mean.

Russia desires to dominate Europe, desires that America should get out; wants to persuade the French that a way can be found to prevent Germany from rearming; and wants to create the impression in Europe that safety and security can be achieved without American participation. Today Mr. Molotov wrapped the whole thing up in one package and put it on the table in Berlin.

Secretary of State Dulles said the proposal would "leave West Germany, and consequently much of Western Europe exposed to any threat of external aggression." He refused to take offense because the United States would be ruled out of this proposal. He said it was a matter for the Europeans to decide; but he reminded Molotov that the American people have a very deep and legitimate interest in Europe. He said: "Now for a third time in this century we have sent forces back to Europe, and again the reason was that there were many in Europe who were afraid and who asked us to do so." He said: "The division of Europe is between those who have been absorbed into the Communist bloc, and the others who do not want to be absorbed." He said: "The fear in free Europe is a fear which cannot be allayed by new words and new promises; because the fear was inspired by a country which was already bound by the United Nations Charter not to use force against the territorial integrity or independence of any state." And Mr. Dulles added: "Whether that fear will be allayed by any repetition of that pledge is not for me to decide." In this answer he struck a shrewd blow by saying, in effect, "All right, it's up to the Europeans - let them decide." He was confident what their decision would be. Dulles didn't ask for time to think over Molotov's proposals. He had his feet braced and answered immediately.

Howard Smith cables me from Berlin that one observer described the thing this way: "Dulles really arrived loaded for duck. It was almost impolite. Molotov barely let the bird leave his hand when there was a loud bang, and it came fluttering down.

Many Europeans will be measuring Molotov's proposal against their memories of what happened in Czechoslovakia. The Communists took that country by infiltration from within. The Red Army didn't move, although it was poised. And there is nothing in Molotov's proposal to insure that the same thing wouldn't happen in Germany, Italy or France. The Communists want room to maneuver in those countries, and in order to do that, they must break the ties with this country. This was Molotov's effort to do so. His proposals in no way throw the conference out of stride. Tomorrow's discussions will be on the Far East. On Friday the talk will be about Austria. And then next week the conference will return to Molotov's proposal. But so far as the Western Powers are concerned, it is already a dead duck.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The long range implications of Mr. Molotov's proposal may well have been set forth more than a hundred years ago when the Marquis de Custine observed: "Russia sees Europe as a prey which dissensions will sooner or later deliver up to her; she foments anarchy in the hope of profiting by a corruption she promotes because it is favorable to her views." - Good Nite and Good Luck!

Thursday, Feb. 11, 1954

This is the news:

French warplanes are attacking an estimated 10-thousand Vietminh troops in Laos. But in the past 24 hours the French have reported only one small clash with an advance rebel force.. about ten miles north of the capital. An American reporter in IndoChina reports that there are about one thousand Americans in that country: between 100 and 150 army men and officers in an advisory group...200 air force technicians....a little over 200 embassy people.. 100 Americans in the Foreign Operations Office and others in consulates and diplomatic posts, plus a handful of businessmen.

There were reports today that South Korean President Rhee has offered to send one or two of his divisions to Indo-China. But General Hull, our far eastern commander, had no comment. The French embassy in Washington knows nothing about it.. The French probably would reject such an offer because of fear of causing more active participation by the Chinese Communists.

Retired General Chenault, who is now head of the Foremosan civil air transport, says the Chinese Communists have built up the "capability to operate quite an air force" in South China. He says they HAVE Russian-built jets... Russian weapons and equipment and Russian-supplied fuel.

The President today asked a group of state governors to go to Korea so that they can make a report on the situation when they get home. Governor Thornton of Colorado said he'll lead a delegation abroad about the first of April.

In Korea today, the Neutral nation armistice commission has refused to investigate our charge that the Communists are smuggling warplanes into North Korea--in violation of the truce.

The Foreign Ministers meeting in Berlin spent four hours today..in a secret session. One western source reports "a shade of progress was made." Another said this was the first "evidence of the two sides looking for common ground."

In Washington today, and in Lincoln Day speeches through the country, Senate Republicans had their say on the President's advice to members of the executive family to try to avoid extreme partisanship in these times. Senator Carlson of Kansas, a close friend of the President's, said he doesn't think the Democrats "should be crying foul" because of the political attacks being made by Republicans. He says its a matter of record that the previous Administrations made an effort "to shield Communists" and the Republicans are pointing that out. Senator Ferguson of Michigan says he's puzzled by the Democratic complaints against Republican tactics. He said: "I think the question should always be what are the facts and I know no way of having an armistice on telling the truth." But (independent) Senator Morse of Oregon says if the people are told the facts about what he calls the "maladministration" of the Eisenhower administration "all the name-calling of the last few days won't make a dent on the voters." And New York's Governor Dewey.. through a secretary... says the Democrats are trying to blackmail the President into silencing Republican attacks by "threatening to sabotage" his program in Congress. Senator McCarthy says "the price is too high" for him to stop his attacks on what he calls "Democratic treason."

And today Army Secretary Stevens said he has "no recollection" of ever having said that there was an Army order in the mid-40's to destroy all files on Communist army officers. Senator McCarthy had so charged. The Senator last night admitted he made a mistake when he accused ~~[illegible]~~ our former high commissioner in Germany--John J. McCloy..of ordering the destruction of files on people "involved in the Communist conspiracy" in Germany. But Mc Carthy says McCloy did order an end to discrimination against Communist party members seeking commissions. There is no comment from McCloy.

The State Department said today that before its security Chief McCleod started a Republican stumping tour he got conflicting advice as to whether this would violate the Hatch "no politics" act. A Civil Service Commissioner said the act does apply to him; the State Department legal officer said it did not.

The Senate-House economic committee today heard Louis H. Bean, now a private economic consultant, warn that a switch from rigid high government farm price supports to a sliding scale, would fall short of solving the problem of farm surpluses.

Senate and House members today agreed on a new bill liberalizing pensions for all Senators and Representatives. The bill also calls for increased pensions for the 43-hundred congressional employes.

A Federal judge here in New York threw out a contempt of CONGRESS case against Gambler Frank Ericson..at the request of the government. United States Attorney Lumbard said the government's case was wrecked by recent court decisions involving the fifth amendment. Ericson had refused to answer questions when he testified before the Kefauver committee. In 20 other similar cases, growing out of the same hearings, only one defendent was convicted..and he won a reversal of the decision on appeal. Attorney Lumbard says the courts have generally found that "the very nature of the Kefauver committee hearings was to create a setting adverse to the witness." (Attorney General Brownell is now asking Congress to change the law.)

Harry Weinberg, the 25-year-old dishwasher who has confessed killing Mr and Mrs. Maxwell Bodenheim shouted in court today that they were communists and he should get a medal instead of the electric chair.

Edward R. Murrow: February 11, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

Yesterday's proposal by Mr. Molotov, in which he suggested an all-European Mutual Defense Treaty which would exclude the United States, found its mark in France. The prospect of security, of no renewed threat from Germany, has powerful appeal for the French. Their hopes and their history combine to tell them that a neutralized Germany will not again invade French soil. Molotov presented the French with an alternative to the European Army. He gave added ammunition to the neutralists in France, and to that very considerable element in the French population which opposes the re-arming of Germany under any conditions. There appears to be no disposition in France to accept the Molotov proposal as is. The fact that it is heavily weighted against the United States is recognized. But the proposal has obviously been a very considerable contribution to the confusion that already existed in French political affairs.

David Schoenbrun cables me from Paris that it is the view of those Frenchmen who support the European Army that Molotov has finally made the key proposal of German neutralization and European peace that Western diplomats have been expecting and dreading during the whole year since Stalin died.

The French would also like peace in Indo-China. Yesterday the French Foreign Office announced that the British, the French and ourselves had agreed to take all "appropriate steps to bring about peace in Indo-China." The key word here is "appropriate". The present French Government does not think it would be appropriate for France to seek direct peace negotiations with the Communist rebel leader, Ho-Chi-Minh. The French feel that the most appropriate measure would be to try to put pressure on Communist China to stop sending supplies and equipment to Ho-Chi-Minh. If that were to happen the Communists in Indo-China would soon wither on the vine, just as the Communist forces in Greece collapsed when Yugoslavia stopped supplying them.

The French are apparently willing to grant generous terms to the Communist partisans, and to undertake no reprisals against those who have followed Ho-Chi-Minh.

The three states of Indo-China have been promised their independence. The French have made that promise formally and officially, but the Vietnam troops do not appear to be fighting very vigorously in defense of that promised independence. This may be due to many reasons - inadequate training, the difficulties of the terrain, shortage of competent officers, and many other reasons. But the will to fight is always diminished when compromises or peace settlements are in prospect. And the French are eager for a solution. Whatever that solution may be, we will be a part of it. It is appropriate and it might be effective to apply pressure to the Chinese Communists to get them to stop supplying Ho-Chi-Minh's forces in Indo-China. But the Chinese must be expected to exact a price for any such action. So if this line is to be pursued, the question arises what concessions can or should be made to the Chinese Communists, in order to persuade them to choke off their supplies to the rebels in Indo-China. It is precisely here that the problem of any settlement in Indo-China impinges upon American foreign policy. It is one purpose of Russian policy to gain recognition and equal status in the U.N. and elsewhere for Communist China. Would we be prepared to recognize Communist China, and admit her to the United Nations as part of a deal to end the war in Indo-China? Would we consider the neutralization of Formosa, and the abandonment of Chiang-Kai-Shek as part of the price of peace in Indo-China? The British and French would probably both agree to such concessions, but there is no reason to think that we would. At the same time there is no reason to think that Communist China will throw the Communists of Indo-China into the pit of defeat just to be helpful to the West, and in order to stop the fighting there. There is no reason to expect

Mao to desert Ho, unless the Chinese get something out of it.

In spite of Secretary Wilson's optimism about a military decision in Indo-China, most observers agree that there can be no military resolution to the Indo-Chinese fighting unless China does abandon Ho-Chi-Minh, or the United States decides to commit substantial forces in that theater. The President has said that is one thing we are not going to do. The decision not to fight in Indo-China has been taken. The question of whether to make a deal, and if so of what kind, in order to stop the fighting there, still pends.

Throughout much of history the French have had to live through long periods of tension and fear. So it is little wonder that they are sensitive to anything involving their security. It may be, as Rebecca West once said, that "fear, like pain, looks and sounds worse than it feels." But the French know what Tacitus meant when he said:"Even the bravest are frightened by sudden terrors."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

French warplanes are attacking an estimated 10-thousand Vietminh troops in Laos. But in the past 24 hours the French have reported only one small clash with an advance rebel force about ten miles north of the capital. An American reporter in Indo-China reports that there are about one thousand Americans in that country; between 100 to 150 army men and officers in an advisory group, 200 air force technicians, a little over 200 embassy people, 100 Americans in the Foreign Operations Office and others in consulates and diplomatic posts, plus a handful of businessmen.

There were reports today that South Korean President Rhee has offered to send one or two of his divisions to Indo-China. But General Hull, our far eastern commander, had no comment. The French embassy in Washington knows nothing about it. The French probably would reject such an offer because of fear of causing more active participation by the Chinese Communists.

Retired General Chenault, who is not head of the Formosan civil air transport, says the Chinese Communists have built up the "capability to operate quite an air force" in South China. He says they have Russian-built jets, Russian weapons and equipment and Russian-supplied fuel.

The President today asked a group of state governors to go to Korea so that they can make a report on the situation when they get home. Governor Thornton of Colorado said he'll lead a delegation abroad about the first of April.

In Korea today, the Neutral nation armistice commission has refused to investigate our charge that the Communists are smuggling warplanes into North Korea in violation of the truce.

The Foreign Ministers meeting in Berlin spent four hours today in a secret session. One western source reports "a shade of progress was made." Another said this was the first "evidence of the two sides looking for common ground."

In Washington today, and in Lincoln Day speeches through the country, Senate Republicans had their say on the President's advice to members of the executive family to try to avoid extreme partisanship in these times. Senator Carlson of Kansas, a close friend of the President's said he doesn't think the Democrats "should be crying foul" because of the political attacks being made by Republicans. He says its a matter of record that the previous Administrations made an effort "to shield Communists" and the Repulbicans are pointing that out. Senator Ferguson of Michigan says he's puzzled by the Democratic complainst against Republican tactics. He said: "I think the question should always be what are the facts and I know no way of having an armistice on telling the truth." But independent Senator Morse of Oregon says if the people are told the facts about what he calls the "maladministration" of the Eisenhower administration "all the name-calling of the last few days won't make a dent on the voters." And New York's Governor Dewey, through a secretary, says the Democrats are trying to blackmail the President into silencing Republican attacks by "threatening to sabotage" his program in Congress. Senator McCarthy says "the price is too high" for him to stop his attacks on what he calls "Democratic treason."

And today Army Secretary Stevens said he has "no recollection" of ever havin said that there was an Army order in the mid-40's to destroy all files on Communist army officers. Senator McCarthy had so charged. The Senator last night admitted he made a mistake when he accused our former high commissioner in Germany, John J. McCloy, or ordering the destruction of files on people "involved in the Communist conspiracy" in Germany. But McCarthy says McCloy did order an end to discrimination against Communist party members seeking commissions. There is no comment from McCloy.

The State Department said today that before its security Chief McCleod started a Republican stumping tour he got conflicting advice as to whether this would violate the Hatch "no politics" act. A Civil Service Commissioner said the act does apply to him; the State Department legal officer said it did not.

The Senate-House economic committee today heard Louis H. Bean, now a private economic consultant, warn that a switch from rigid high government farm price supports to a sliding scale, would fall short of solving the problem of farm surpluses.

Senate and House members today agreed on a new bill liberalizing pensions for all Senators and Representatives. The bill also calls for increased pensions for the 43-hundred congressional employees.

A Federal judge here in New York threw out a contempt of Congress case against Gambler Frank Ericson at the request of the government. United States Attorney Lumbard said the government's case was wrecked by recent court decisions involving the fifth amendment. Ericson had refused to answer questions when he testified before the Kefauver committee. In 20 other similar cases, growing out of the same hearings, only one defendent was convicted and he won a reversal of the decision on appeal. Attorney Lumbard says the courts have generally found that "the very nature of the Kefauver committee hearings was to create a setting adverse to the witness." Attorney General Brownell is now asking Congress to change the law.

Harry Weinberg, the 25-year-old dishwasher who has confessed killing Mr. & Mrs. Maxwell Bodenheim shouted in court today that they were Communists and he should get a medal instead of the electric chair.

Yesterday's proposal by Mr. Molotov, in which he suggested an ill-European Mutual Defense Treaty which would exclude the United States, found its mark in France. The prospect of security, of no renewed threat from Germany, has powerful appeal for the French. Their hopes and their history combine to tell them that a neutralized Germany will not again invade French soil. Molotov presented the French with an alternative to the European Army. He gave added ammunition to the neutralists in France, and to that very considerable element in the French population which opposes the re-arming of Germany under any conditions. There appears to be no disposition in France to accept the Molotov proposal as is. The fact that it is heavily weighted against the United States is recognized. But the proposal has obviously been a very considerable contribution to the confusion that already existed in French political affairs.

David Schoenbrun cables me from Paris that it is the view of those Frenchmen who support the European Army that Molotov has finally made the key proposal of German neutralization and European peace that Western diplomats have been expecting and dreading during the whole year since Stalin died.

The French would also like peace in Indo-China. Yesterday the French Foreign Office announced that the British, the French and ourselves had agreed to take all "appropriate steps to bring about peace in Indo-China." The key word here is "appropriate." The present French Government does not think it would be appropriate for France to seek direct peace negotiations with the Communist rebel leader, H-Chi-Minh. The French feel that the most appropriate measure would be to try to put pressure on Communist China to stop sending supplies and equipment to Ho-Chi-Minh. If that were to happen the Communists in Indo-China would soon wither on the vine, just as the Communist forces in Greece collapsed when Yugoslavia stopped supplying them.

The French are apparently willing to grant generous terms to the Communist partisans, and to undertake no reprisals against those who have followed Ho-Chi-Minh.

The three states of Indo-China have been promised their independence. The French have made that promise formally and officially, but the Vietnam troops do not appear to be fighting very vigorously in defense of that promised independence. This may be due to many reasons - inadequate training, the difficulties of the terrain, shortage of competent officers, and many other reasons. But the will to fight is always diminished when compromises or peace settlements are in prospect. And the French are eager for a solution. Whatever that solution may be, we will be a part of it. It is appropriate and it might be effective to apply pressure to the Chinese Communists to get them to stop supplying Ho-Chi-Minh's forces in Indo-China. But the Chinese must be expected to exact a price for any such action.

So if this line is to be pursued, the question arises what concessions can or should be made to the Chinese Communists, in order to persuade them to choke off their supplies to the rebels in Indo-China. It is precisely here that the problem of any settlement in Indo-China impinges upon American foreign policy. It is one purpose of Russian policy to gain recognition and wqual status in the U.N. and elsewhere for Communist China. Would we be prepared to recognize Communist China, and admit her to the United Nations aspart of a deal to end the war in Indo-China? Would we consider the neutralization of Formosa, and the abandonment of Chinag-Kai-Shek as part of the price of peace in Indo-China? The British and French would probably both agree to such concessions, but there is no reason to think that we would. At the same time there is no reason to think that Communist China will throw the Communists of Indo-China into the pit of defeat just to be helpful to the West, and in order to stop the fighting there. There is no reason to expect Mao to desert Ho, unless the Chinese get something out of it.

In spite of Secretary Wilson's optimism about a military decision in Indo-China, most observers agree that there can be no military resolution to the Indo-Chinese fighting unless China does abandon Ho-Chi-Minh, or the United States decides to commit substantial forces in that theater. The President has said that is one thing we are not going to do. The decision not to fight in Indo-China has been taken. The question of whether to make a deal, and if so of what kind, in order to stop the fighting there, still pends.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Throughout much of history the French have had to live through long periods of tension and fear. So it is little wonder that they are sensitive to to anything involving their security. It may be, as Rebecca West once said, that "fear, like pain, looks and sounds worse than it feels." But the French know what Tacitus meant when he said: "Even the bravest are frightened by sudden terrors."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday Feb. 12

This is the news:

Russia's Foreign Minister Molotov made known at the Big Four Meeting in Berlin today, that so far as his country is concerned, there can be no settlement of the Austrian problem, until agreement is reached on Germany. Mr. Molotov suggested in effect, that occupation forces be kept in Austria as long as Germany remains divided. He also held out little hope that Russia would ease any of Austria's economic obligations to the Soviet Union. In addition, Russia's Foreign Minister said he felt that ~~that~~ the Trieste issue should be decided, at the same time that an Austrian peace treaty is discussed. He is opposed to any use of this port city as a military base. Shortly after Mr. Molotov stated his position, Secretary of State Dulles said his first reaction to the speech was, that it gave him a "cold chill." Mr. Dulles said that the Foreign Ministers could not remain in Berlin indefinitely. And a Committee is already being organized to work out a tentative date for adjournment.

This morning, before the formal meeting began, the Foreign Ministers met secretly, to try and work out some of the problems in the Far East. There was no official statement on the outcome of the talks. But it was pretty generally agreed that no progress was made.

The Air Force confirmed reports today that we are engaged in a "limited" airlift between ~~Tokyo~~ bases in Japan and Indo-China. The operation is underway to service American technicians assigned to that country.

In Indo-China, Communist troops held off their attacks on the Loatian capital of Luang Prabang. Vietminh guerrillas were reported to be on the outskirts of the city. But French reconnaissance units failed to make contact.

South Korea's Foreign Minister says his governmwnt is prepared to send an army division to Indo-China to help the French. But the French say they will refuse the offer - even if it's formally made.

The Communist threat to Indo-China will be studied next week by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in secret session. Among those testifying will be Under-Secretary of State Walter Bedell Smith and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Admiral Radford.

In a Lincoln Day speech in New York tonite, Defense Secretary Wilson will say that there's no reason to think that the ending of the Korean war will bring on a depression. Mr. Wilson said he had "no patience with people who seem to think that blood spilling and jobs are synonomous."

President Eisenhower sent a message to (A) Lincoln Day gathering, in which he praised the enthusiasm of the Republican National Committee. "So long as this enthusiasm endures," the President said, "the party of Abraham Lincoln is certain to take a vital part in the affairs of our nation."

Earlier in the day, Mr. Eisenhower laid a wreath at the foot of the statue of Abraham Lincoln, at the Lincoln Memorial, and then flew to Georgia for a week-end of quail-hunting. [redacted]

Senate Republican Leader Knowland today sided with President Eisenhower in advocating more temperate language in the Republican criticism of Democrats. Knowland told a news conference that in politics, you can't draw lines on the basis of patriotism. "Personally," he said, "I have never gone in for blanket indictment of the Democratic Party as an organization." Knowland said, however, that Republicans would be derelict in their duty if they did not criticize "certain acts" of the prior administration. He declined comment on a speech made last night by Republican Senator Jenner, in which the Indiana senator said troops sent to Korea under the Truman Administration were "supposed" to be defeated. Democratic Senator Sparkman of Alabama says that Jenner's charge constitutes a "terrible indictment" of General MacArthur.

→

Howard H. Gordon resigned today as administrator of the Commodity Stabilization Service, (the price support agency operated by the Department of Agriculture.) He also resigned from the presidency of the Commodity Credit Corporation. ~~A North Carolinian~~, Gordon was generally regarded by his Republican critics as a Democrat, and in revising the present farm program he advocated a "go slow" policy. [redacted]

Democratic Representative Rabaut of Michigan told the House today that President Eisenhower should fire Republican National Chairman Leonard Hall. Hall, he said, has disregarded Mr. Eisenhower's advice against extreme partisanship. And Democratic Senator Lehman of New York said he will try to have the Hatch Act amended... [redacted] in order to keep Scott McLeod, the State Department security officer, from political activity. McLeod has been attacking the Democratic Party in a series of Lincoln Day speeches. Senator Lehman says McLeod's action [redacted] is as shocking as if J. Edgar Hoover were to go on a political speaking tour.

Edward R. Murrow: February 12, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

R.W. Scott McLeod, the security chief of the State Department, ~~is currently making Republican speaches in the West.~~ He is quoted as saying that those who clamor for a breakdown of the figure of the 2,200 removed by the Eisenhower Administration as security risks are playing a "numbers game". This is quite a useful description of what has been going on in the matter of the security risks in government. It would be hard to recall a case where numbers have been so irresponsibly played around with in national affairs.

But it wasn't the clamor for a breakdown of the figures that started the numbers game. It began when Republican spokesmen deliberately, or carelessly, gave the impression that most of the 2,200 security risks were subversives. This kept alive the belief that the Republicans had found the government teeming with Communists and fellow-travelers and were effectively rooting them out.

If the number of subversives had been, say, half of the 2,200, the exaggeration could perhaps have been passed over. But the truth is so different that it can't be passed over. The White House has had to ask for a breakdown of the figures and is reported to be planning to publish it as the best way to end an inexcusable misrepresentation. It hasn't done so yet. But now some sensational figures have been published. They are described as leaks from testimony before a sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee by Mr. McLeod and Under-Secretary Smith. Of 534 persons dropped from the State Department as security risks only 11 were loyalty cases. And of these eleven, the investigation of seven began under the Democratic administration. And not one of the eleven was found to be active in subversion.

Mr. McLeod has been quoted as saying that these figures are inaccurate, though without giving an idea of how inaccurate. Actually he himself, in a recent interview, mentioned 300 as a possible total of security cases in the State Department. # Theodore Streibert, head of the U.S. Information Agency, told a sub-committee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee - and this is not a leak - that 31 persons had been removed from the Voice of America for security reasons. An unidentified Congressman speaking about the testimony before the House sub-committee said: "They didn't claim to have found a single proven Communist or subversive. And in the entire Voice of America operation, which had been a prime target of Communist-hunters, they have failed to find a single case of actual disloyalty or Communism."

Washington now hears that of nearly 30,000 Justice Department employees, eight have been released as security risks; and of these, one had past connections with the Communist Party. # Secretary Humphrey has said that he knows of no case in the Treasury Department of anyone separated for loyalty causes. So there have been four new loyalty cases in the State Department, one in Justice, none in the Treasury, or a total of five, in three large departments. If the ratio holds throughout the government, the total might be 25, that is 25 out of 2,200. That would leave about 2,000 who were considered poor security risks because of habits, associations or unreliability. Some of these resigned before being listed as risks. Some moved to government jobs not rated as sensitive, the rest were separated. But they are not to be regarded as having been punished, after a trial and conviction. Mr. McLeod told one of his Western audiences it was not his duty to prove or prosecute. "Our job" he said, "is to bring to light, to point out the security risks."

Mr. McLeod said in one of his speeches that "people aren't interested in finding whether security risks were drunks, dope-fiends, sex perverts - or Communists. They are only interested in getting them out of the government." That might be true, if the issue of Communism in government had not become so formidable. But since it has, a great many people want to know what lies behind certain high-level statements. Thus Governor

Dewey spoke of 1,456 security risks "being planted in the government under Democratic administrations" and did so in a way that implied that all were spies and traitors. Bernard Shanley, a special counsel of Mr. Eisenhower, said that "1,456 subversives had been kicked out of the government." Senator McCarthy said that "practically all of the 1,456 were removed because of Communist connections and activities, or perversion." The chairman of the Republican Finance Committee, Carlton Ketchum, said that President Eisenhower and his team "had gotten rid of nearly 1,500 Communists, fellow-travelers and their ilk." (These men were speaking before the total figure of 1,456 was raised to 2,200.)

It may be getting Scott McCleod out of perspective to quote his speeches. But even if there were no numbers game, he would be important. He holds a key post in the State Department, and Republicans have rejoiced that he has used it to induce so many Democrats to quit and make way for Republicans. Now he is out delivering Republican speeches. A member of the Civil Service Commission says this is contrary to the Hatch Act. But the Commission has no power to stop him, and the legal adviser of the State Department has ruled he is not violating the Act.

On the highest level of governmental purity the man responsible for the personnel of so non-partisan a staff as that of the State Department, would rejoice to be above party. Not so Mr. McLeod. He does not beat around the bush. "I don't know how you're going to be in government" he said, "and not be in politics." Such a statement, made in the context of the security investigations, may throw light on the reported demoralization of the State Department.

Flying to Berlin tonight - Report from there next week

Abraham Linclon wpoke these words a long time ago. They still hold true--

"If we have patience, if we restrain ourselves, if we allow ourselves not to run off in a passion, I still have confidence that the Almighty, the Maker of the Universe, will, through the instrumentality of this great and intelligent people, bring us through this as he has through all the other difficulties of our country."

Goodnight and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Russia's Foreign Minister Molotov made known at the Big Four Meeting in Berlin today that so far as his country is concerned, there can be no settlement of the Austrian problem until agreement is reached on Germany. Mr. Molotov suggested in effect that occupation forces be kept in Austria as long as Germany remains divided. He also held out little hope that Russia would ease any of Austria's economic obligations to the Soviet Union. In addition, Russia's Foreign Minister said he felt that the Trieste issue should be decided at the same time that an Austrian peace treaty is discussed. He is opposed to any use of this port city as a military base. Shortly after Mr. Molotov stated his position, Secretary of State Dulles said his first reaction to the speech was that it gave him a "cold chill." Mr. Dulles said that the Foreign Ministers could not remain in Berlin indefinitely. And a Committee is already being organized to work out a tentative date for adjournment.

This morning, before the formal meeting began, the Foreign Ministers met secretly to try and work out some of the problems in the Far East. There was no official statement on the outcome of the talks. But it was pretty generally agreed that no progress was made.

The Air Force confirmed reports today that we are engaged in a "limited" airlift between bases in Japan and Indo-China. The operation is underway to service American technicians assigned to that country.

In Indo-China, Communist troops held off their attacks on the Laotian capital of Luang Prabang. Vietminh guerrillas were reported to be on the outskirts of the city. But French reconnaissance units failed to make contact.

South Korea's Foreign Minister says his government is prepared to send an army division to Indo-China to help the French. But the French say they will refuse the offer - even if it's formally made.

The Communist threat to Indo-China will be studied next week by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in secret session. Among those testifying will be Under-Secretary of State Walter Bedell Smith and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Admiral Radford.

In a Lincoln Day speech in New York tonight, Defense Secretary Wilson will say that there's no reason to think that the ending of the Korean war will bring on a depression. Mr. Wilson said he had "no patience with people who seem to think that blood spilling and jobs are synonomous."

President Eisenhower sent a message to a Lincoln Day gathering, in which he praised the enthusiasm of the Republican National Committee. "So long as this enthusiasm endures," the President said, "the party of Abraham Lincoln is certain to take a vital part in the affairs of our nation."

Earlier in the day, Mr. Eisenhower laid a wreath at the foot of the statue of Abraham Lincoln, at the Lincoln Memorial, and then flew to Georgia for a weekend of quail-hunting.

Senate Republican Leader Knowland today sided with President Eisenhower in advocating more temperate language in the Republican criticims of Democrats. Knowland told a news conference that in politics, you can't draw lines on the basis of patriotism. "Personally," he said, "I have never gone in for blanket indictment of the Democratic Party as an organization." Knowland said, however, that Republicans would be derelict in their duty if they did not criticize "certain acts" of the prior administration. He declined comment on a speech made last night by Republican Senator Jenner, in which the Indiana Senator said troops sent to Korea under the Truman Administration were "supposed" to be defeated. Democratic Senator Sparkman of Alabama says that Jenner's charge constitutes a "terrible indictment" of General MacArthur.

Howard H. Gordon resigned today as administrator of the Commodity Stabilization Service, the price support agency operated by the Department of Agriculture. He also resigned from the presidency of the Commodity Credit Corporation. Gordon was generally regarded by his Republican critics as a Democrat and in revising the present farm program he advocated a "go slow" policy.

Democratic Representative Rabaut of Michigan told the House today that President Eisenhower should fire Republican National Chairman Leonard Hall. Hall, he said, has disregarded Mr. Eisenhower's advice against extreme partisanship. And Democratic Senator Lehman of New York said he will try to have the Hatch Act amended in order to keep Scott McLeod, the State Department security officer, from political activity. McLeod has been attacking the Democratic Party in a series of Lincoln Day speeches. Senator Lehman says McLeod's action is as shocking as if J. Edgar Hoover were to go on a political speaking tour.

R.W. Scott McLeod, the security chief of the State Department is quoted as saying that those who clamor for a breakdown of the figure of the 2,200 removed by the Eisenhower Administration as security risks are playing a "numbers game." This is quite a useful description of what has been going on in the matter of the security risks in government. It would be hard to recall a case where numbers have been so irresponsibly played around with in national affairs. But it wasn't the clamor for a breakdown of the figures that started the numbers game. It began when Republican spokesmen deliberately, or carelessly, gave the impression that most of the 2,200 security risks were subversives. This kept alive the belief that the Republicans had found the government teeming with Communists and fellow-travelers and were effectively rooting them out. If the number of subversives had been, say, half of the 2,200, the exaggeration could perhaps have been passed over. But the truth is so different that it can't be passed over. The White House has had to ask for a breakdown of the figures and is reported to be planning to publish it as the best way to end an inexcusable misrepresentation. It hasn't done os yet. But now some sensational figures have been published. They are described as leaks from testimony before a sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee by Mr. McLeod and Under-Secretary Smith. Of 534 persons dropped from the State Department as security risks only 11 were loyalty cases. And of these eleven, the investigation of seven began under the Democratic administration. And not one of the eleven was found to be active in subversion.

Mr. McLeod has been quoted as saying that these figures are inaccurate, though without giving an idea of how inaccurate. Actually he himself, in a recent interview, mentioned 300 as a possible total of security cases in the State Department. Theodore Streibert, head of the U.S. Information Agency, told a sub-committee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee - and this is not a leak - that 31 persons had been removed from the Voice of America for security reasons. An unidentified Congressman speaking about the testimony before the House sub-committee said: "They didn't claim to have found a single proven Communist or subversive. And in the entire Voice of America operation, which had been a prime target of Communist-hunters, they have failed to find a single case of actual disloyalty or Communism." Washington now hears that of nearly 30,000 Justice Department employees, eight have been released as security risks; and of these, one had past connections with the Communist Party. Secretary Humphrey has said that he knows of no case in the Treasury Department of anyone separated for loyalty causes. So there have been four new loyalty cases in the State Department, one in Justice, none in the Treasury, or a total of five in three large departments. If the ratio holds throughout the government, the total might be 25, that is 25 out of 2,200. That would leave about 2,000 who were considered poor security risks because of habits, associations or unreliability. Some of these resigned before being listed as risks. Some moved to government jobs not rated as sensitive, the rest were separated. But they are not to be regarded as having been punished after a trial and conviction. Mr. McLeod told one of his Western audiences it was not his duty to prove or prosecute. "Our job" he said, "is to bring to light, to point out the security risks." Mr. McLeod said in one of his speeches that "people aren't interested in finding whether security risks were drunks, dope-fiends, sex perverts - or Communists. They are only interested in getting them out of the government." That might be true if the issue of Communism in government had not become so formidable. But since it has, a great many people want to know what lies behind certain high level statements. Thus Governor Dewey spoke of 1,456 security risks "being planted in the government under Democratic administrations" and did so in a way that implied that all were spies and traitors. Bernard Shanley, a special counsel of Mr. Eisenhower, said that "1,456 subversives had been kicked out of the government." Senator McCarthy said that "practically all of the 1,456 were removed because of Communist connections and activities, or perversion." The chairman of the Republican Finance Committee, Carlton Ketchum, said that President Eisenhower and his team "had gotten rid of nearly 1,500 Communists, fellow-travelers and their ilk." These men were speaking before the total figure of 1,456 was raised to 2,200.

It may be getting Scott McCleod out of perspective to quote his speeches. But even if there were no numbers game, he would be important. He holds a key post in the State Department, and Republicans have rejoiced that he has used it it to induce so many Democrats to quit and make way for Republicans. Now he is out delivering Republican speeches. A member of the Civil Service Commission says this is contrary to the Hatch Act. But the Commission has no power to stop him, and the legal adviser of the State Department has ruled he is not violating the Act.

On the highest level of governmental purity the man responsible for the personnel of so non-partisan a staff as that of the State Department would rejoice to be above party. Not so Mr. McLeod. He does not beat around the bush. "I don't know how you're going to be in government" he said, "and not be in politics." Such a statement, made in the context of the security investigations, may throw light on the reported demoralization of the State Department.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Abraham Lincoln spoke these words a long time ago. They still hold true: "If we have patience, if we restrain ourselves, if we allow ourselves not to run off in a passion, I still have confidence that the Almighty, the Maker of the Universe, will, through the instrumentality of this great and intelligent people, bring us through this as he has through all the other difficulties of our country."

Good Night and Good Luck!

CC

Monday Feb. 15, 1954

Good evening:

Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov wants to "modify" his proposal for a European Security system. He told the western foreign ministers at Berlin today that his plan is an alternative for the allies' European Defense Community which, he said, is aimed at the rebirth of German militarism. But even with the so-called "modifications" the Molotov plan calls for an end to the European army... the neutralization of Germany and the return home of American troops. French Foreign Minister Bidault and British Foreign Secretary Eden charged that the Russian plan is aimed at outlawing the North Atlantic Treaty organization. Both said they would never agree to this. In a fewminutes we'll hear a direct report from Berlin by Ed Murrow.

In Washington today, Republican Senator Bricker said it may be possible for him to agree with Democratic Senator George on the wording for a new constiutional amendment--on the President's treaty-making powers. Bricker says he and George are "in substantial agreement" on the need to curb the scope of treaties and other pacts.

4

15

Secretary of Agriculture Benson told reporters today that some employes of his department are working against the Administration's farm policies. He said these employes are seeking to undermine him and the President. As a result--said the Secretary--the department will make a careful study of the entire situation to achieve "maximum efficiency and loyalty." ~~Coincident with this statement, the Department of Agriculture today announced the resignation of T. Roy Reid as director of personnel. Reid is a Democrat who has been an employe of the department since 1935.~~

And today, Secretary Benson announced a cut of about eight cents a pound in federal price supports for butter. In a move to reduce the cost of butter to housewives , increase sales and head-off an increase in the already heavy surplus of dairy products, the Department said the new order goes into effect April first. Some dairy state congressmen and milk producers immediately protested the action. Democratic Senator Humphrey of Minnesota said the cut will cost dairy farmers 600 million dollars a year. And the National Milk Producers Federation announces it will ask Congress to limit the cut to nearly three cents a pound. One Republican Representative...Withrow of Wisconsin..says the

18

Department's action "could have serious political repercussions for Republicans in dairy states."

Revenue Commissioner T. Coleman Andrews has told a House committee that he has plans to relieve about 35 million taxpayers from the burden of making out tax returns. But they would not be relieved from paying taxes. The plan calls for a system under which no returns would be required from persons whose entire income is subject to payroll withholding taxes. Employers would file a single report covering both income and social security taxes. The government would then figure ~~[illegible]~~ out the tax and send the taxpayer a bill or a refund. Andrews also ~~plans~~ wants to double the number of revenue agents. [redacted]

The Treasury Department has informed Congress that of 130 persons dismissed in 1953 as "security risks" in that department only four were found to be "disloyal persons." An official for the department which has 77-thousand employes says that a man doesn't have to be disloyal to be classified as a security risk. He might be given "a dangerous rating" if he were [redacted]ged "a rugged individual" with a mother behind the iron curtain. And in a seperate report on the 8-thousand employes of the Customs Service we're told that six persons were dismissed last year as security risks.

Democratic Senator Symington said today that if it is true--that the Russians have [redacted] swept-wing, turbo-prop bombers in squadron service in Northern Russia, then the Soviet atomic potential may be greater than ours. Symington said if the reports on the Russian planes are true:"We may now be looking down the barrell of a possible inter-continental attack". He says we do not at present have a"single modern long-range bomber wing in action."

Democratic Senator Johnston of South Carolina said today that Senate Judicary committee members who have asked for an F.B.I. report on Chief Justice Warren "thought all people..big and little..shoudl be treated alike." Mr. Warren was nominated by the President on January eleventh.

And today Mr. Eisenhower nominated Charles A. Lindbergh to be a brigadier general in the air force reserve. Lindbergh resigned a reserve commission as a colonel in 1941 saying he was "greatly disturbed" over implications by the late President Roosevelt concerning his loyalty to the country.

16

[redacted]

After Pearl Harbor he frequently was a consultant to the air force..in a civilian capacity. The President also nominated Brigadier General Wallace H. Graham to be a major general in the air force reserve. Graham had been former President Truman's personal physician.

Wayne Richards, the national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said today his organization is "not engaged in a witch hunt, has no vigilante committees and is not trying to hurt anybody."

And Democratic Senator Hennings of Missouri chided other Democrats who have been complaining about recent Republican attacks on the party. Hennings said Democrats should cool off and not whine over the Republican attacks. He asked:"Aren't the principles and ideals of our militant party invulnerable against name-calling and political invective?"

In Indo-China, the French say they have stopped a strong two-pronged enemy attack about eight miles north of the capital of Laos.

And now for a recorded report ~~from~~ on the foreign ministers conference, here is Edward R. Murrow:

(return cue: Good night and good luck)

This is CC. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the day's news. But first, Bob Dixon.

Senator Gillette of Iowa told his colleagues today that it isn't always easy to define terms. For example: the State Department says a treaty is something that has to be submitted to the Senate for ratification. This reminds me, he said, when I was a boy on the farm and the hired hand told me how to tell male pigeons from females. You put corn in front of them. If he picks it up, he's a he. And if she picks it up, she's a she."

This is CC saying goodnite.

Mademoiselle

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Monday, February 15, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

COLLINGWOOD: ... And now for a recorded report on the Foreign Ministers' conference in Berlin, here is Edward R. Murrow.

MURROW: This is Berlin. This reporter has flown in and out of too many capitals to try to arrive in Berlin, spend a few hours and then do a definitive piece on the foreign ministers conference. So I'm flanked tonight by two of my colleagues, two of the ablest correspondents reporting this conference, Howard K. Smith, our European chief, and Richard C. Hottelet and we're going to talk for a few minutes, in general, about what has happened here in Berlin in the last three weeks. Howard, what is the most significant thing that has happened at this conference so far?

SMITH: Well, it's very hard to pick out any single thing, Ed, but I think one ofthe most impressive factors has been the failure of Mr. Molotov to get off the ground propaganda-wise, because he hasn't attempted to negotiate here, he has attempted to make propaganda, and apparently, it's had very little effect. Thetheory, I think, that Western observers entertain is that the world has become rather sophisticated and educated regarding Soviet propaganda and many of his old tricks just don't catch on any more.

MURROW: Now both of you gentlemen seem to feel that not very much of substance has happened in this conference so far, is that right, Dick?

HOTTELET: I'd certainly go along with that as fas as the agenda is concerned, The problems which beset the East and the West, but I think that to add to what Howard said aboutthe most important outcome of the conference, I think the solidarity that was shown by the three Western Foreign Ministers came not only as a surprise, but as a (sic) with a prospect of endurance. These three people flew together wing-to-wing, the way a set of aerial acrobats flew, zigging and zagging at the same time, each for his own reasons, each in terms of his own country's interests and they met Molotov together headon.

MURROW: Well, then what you're saying, both of you, is that neither side has comeforward with a new proposal, that neither side has advanced anything that is not really traditional and part of their previous policy, is that right?

SMITH: Well, that's ... that's almost right. These plans that Molotov has issued are not really bases for negotiation, and outside of those almost nothing that has happened that wasn't predictable, except possibly on the Austrian question where the Western powers agreed to the Soviet versions of all the yet unagreed articles in the Austrian draft treaty. That came as a surprise, I think, to Molotov and to the rest us; but there once again Molotov threw in a few new conditions to prevent a treaty from being signed at present.

MURROW: Well, why has so little progress been made? Is it a fact that there is no room for maneuver on either side? That neither side is prepared to make a compromise of any substance?

SMITH: I think that is thecase. You know the statesmen really weren't in favor of holding this conference. Public opinion rather forced it on them... and calleg the conference that America blundered into, dragging Russia behind her - and I think essentially that is true.

HOTTELET: Well, I think the facts of the world power today just don't leave any room for compromise. Actually, when the Four Powers met here in Berlin, there was so little room to maneuver in the German question, that each new ... that it was merely trying to find out whether the other side would capitulate. We can't retreat from our demand for free elections in Germany without destroying our position in Central Europe, and the Russians can't agree to our demand for free elections without destroying theirs. We are chin-to-chin. And Mr. Molotov came along, stuck his chin out just as far as we did ours, and why should he not, he ... I think in the almost demonstrative tone of his proposals, which he must have known would be totally unacceptable to us, I think he was trying to showthe rest that Russia does not feel weak, that the changes inside the Soviet Union - since the death of Stalin, the preoccupations with agriculture, the uncertainty perhaps of Moscow's relations with China - are not impelling Russia to cut its losses in Central Europe and pull back, it is merely encouraging Russia to stand its ground here, not give up a foot of territory, not compromise on a single issue.

MURROW: Well, the general tone of the discussion today was rather more restrained than it had been inthe past: They've agreed to adjourn on Thursday. Does this mean that they're sort of letting down to make a gentle landing without disappointing anyone too much?

SMITH: I have the impression that's the case, Ed. But altogether this has been a fairly good humored conference as foreign ministers' conferences have gone. In past ones, American Secretaries of State have become extremely angry with Russian tactics; but nowMr. Dulles has been present at almost all ofthose conferences, apparently knew what to expect, and he has not lost his head or become impatient at any point; and Molotov on the other hand has been a little less difficult, I think personality-wise than he has in past conferences.

MURROW: Well, then are we to conclude that while nothing concrete or constructive is to come out of this conference?

HOTTELET: I would say that nothing constructive in the sense of a settlement ofthe outstanding problems will come out of it, but one perhaps slightly positive overtone has been the affability, the politeness with which the conference has unfolded. Molotov - although he is not willingto give up any ground - seems also not willing to try to turn on any more heat in Europe. He wants for the time being, I think - the Kremlin does - to keep things as they are. I think they've got a lot of problems to settle inside and building up their shell and consolidating behind it, which seemed to be what they have in mind.

MURROW: Well, thank you very much, Howard K. Smith and Richard C. Hottelet. I've been sitting here in Berlin talking with these two colleagues of mine who've covered this entire conference from the beginning. This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin. Good night and good luck.

COLLINGWOOD: This is Charles Collingwood. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to today's news. But, first, Bob Dixon.

ANNOUNCER: ... (C O M M E R C I A L) ...

(30)

Ed. trans. P. O.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (WITH CHARLES COLLINGWOOD)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening:

Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov wants to "modify" his proposal for a European Security System. He told the western foreign ministers at Berlin today that his plan is an alternative for the allies' European Defense Community which he said is aimed at the rebirth of German militarism. But even with the so-called "modifications" the Molotov plan calls for an end to the European army - the neutralization of Germany and the return home of American troops. French Foreign Minister Bidault and British Foreign Secretary Eden charged that the Russian plan is aimed at outlawing the North Atlantic Treaty organization. Both said they would never agree to this. In a few minutes we'll hear a direct report from Berlin by Ed Murrow.

In Washington today, Republican Senator Bricker said it may be possible for him to agree with Democratic Senator George on the wording for a new constitutional amendment - on the President's treaty-making powers. Bricker says he and George are "in substantial agreement" on the need to curb the scope of treaties and other pacts.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson told reporters today that some employees of his department are working against the Administration's farm policies. He said these employees are seeking to undermine him and the President. As a result, said the Secretary, the department will make a careful study of the entire situation to achieve "maximum efficiency and loyalty."

And today, Secretary Benson announced a cut of about eight cents a pound in federal price supports for butter. In a move to reduce the cost of butter to housewives, increase sales and head off an increase in the already heavy surplus of dairy products, the Department said the new order goes into effect April first. Some dairy state congressmen and milk producers immediately protested the action. Democratic Senator Humphrey of Minnesota said the cut will cost dairy farmers 600 million dollars a year. And the National Milk Producers Federation announces it will ask Congress to limit the cut to nearly three cents a pound. One Republican Representative, Withdrow of Wisconsin, says the Department's action "could have serious political repercussions for Republicans in dairy states."

Revenue Commissioner T. Coleman Andrews has told a House committee that he has plans to relieve about 35 million taxpayers from the burden of making out tax returns. But they would not be relieved from paying taxes. The plan calls for a system under which no returns would be required from persons whose entire income is subject to payroll withholding taxes. Employers would file a single report covering both income and social security taxes. The government would then figure out the tax and send the taxpayer a bill or a refund. Andrews also wants to double the number of revenue agents.

The Treasury Department has informed Congress that of 130 persons dismissed in 1953 as "security risks" in that department only four were found to be "disloyal persons." An official for the department which has 77-thousand employees says that a man doesn't have to be disloyal to be classified as a security risk. He might be given "a dangerous rating" if he were "a rugged individual" with a mother behind the iron curtain. And in a seperate report on the 8-thousand employees of the Customs Service we're told that six persons were dismissed last year as security risks.

Democratic Senator Symington said today that if it is true - that the Russians have swept-wing, turbo-prop bombers in squadron service in Northern Russia, then the Soviet atomic potential may be greater than ours. Symington said if the reports on the Russian planes are true: "We may now be looking down the barrel of a possible inter-continental attack." He says we do not at present have a "single modern long-range bomber wing in action."

Democratic Senator Johnston of South Carolina said today that Senate Judiciary committee members who have asked for an FBI report on Chief Justice Warren "thought all people, big and little, should be treated alike." Mr. Warren was nominated by the President on January eleventh.

And today Mr. Eisenhower nominated Charles A. Lindbergh to be a brigadier general in the air force reserve. Lindbergh resigned a reserve commission as a colonel in 1941 saying he was "greatly disturbed" over implications by the late President Roosevelt concerning his loyalty to the country. After Pearl Harbor he frequently was a consultant to the air force in a civilian capacity. The President also nominated Brigadier General Wallace H. Graham to be a major general in the air force reserve. Graham had been former President Truman's personal physician.

Wayne Richards, the national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said today his organization is "not engaged in a witch hunt, has no vigilante committees and is not trying to hurt anybody."

And Democratic Senator Hennings of Missouri chided other Democrats who have been complaining about recent Republican attacks on the party. Hennings said Democrats should cool off and not whine over the Republican attacks. He asked: "Aren't the principles and ideals of our militant party invulnerable against name-calling and political invective?"

In Indo-China, the French say they have stopped a strong two-pronged enemy attack about eight miles north of the capital of Laos.

And now for a recorded report on the foreign ministers conference, here is Edward R. Murrow:

MURROW: This is Berlin. This reporter has flown in and out of too many capitals to try to arrive in Berlin, spend a few hours and then do a definitive piece on the foreign ministers conference. So I'm flanked tonight by two of my colleagues, two of the ablest correspondents reporting this conference, Howard K. Smith, our European chief, and Richard C. Hottelet and we're going to talk for a few minutes, in general, about what has happened here in Berlin in the last three weeks. Howard, what is the most significant thing that has happened at this conference so far?

SMITH: Well, it's very hard to pick out any single thing, Ed, but I think one of the most impressive factors has been the failure of Mr. Molotov to get off the ground propaganda-wise, because he hasn't attempted to negotiate here, he has attempted to make propaganda, and apparently, it's had very little effect. The theory, I think, that Western observers entertain is that the world has become rather sophisticated and educated regarding Soviet propaganda and many of his old tricks just don't catch on any more.

MURROW: Now both of you gentlemen seem to feel that not very much of substance has happened in this conference so far, is that right, Dick?

HOTTELET: I'd certainly go along with that as far as the agenda is concerned, the problems which beset the East and the West, but I think that to add to what Howard said about the most important outcome of the conference, I think the solidarity that was shown by the three Western Foreign Ministers came not only as a surprise, but as a (sic) with a prospect of endurance. These three people flew together wing-to-wing, the way a set of aerial acrobats flew, zigging and zagging at the same time, each for his own reasons, each in terms of his own country's interests and they met Molotov together headon.

MURROW: Well, then what you're saying, both of you, is that neither side has come forward with a new proposal, that neither side has advanced anything that is not really traditional and part of their previous policy, is that right?

SMITH: Well, that's - that's almost right. These plans that Molotov has issued are not really bases for negotiation, and outside of those almost nothing that has happened that wasn't predictable, except possibly on the Austrian question where the Western powers agreed to the Soviet versions of all the yet unagreed articles in the Austrian draft treaty. That came as a surprise, I think, to Molotov and to the rest of us; but there once again Molotov threw in a few new conditions to prevent a treaty from being signed at present.

MURROW: Well, why has so little progress been made? Is it a fact that there is no room for maneuver on either side? That neither side is prepared to make a compromise of any substance?

SMITH: I think that is the case. You know the statesmen really weren't in favor of holding this conference. Public opinion rather forced it on them and called the conference that America blundered into, dragging Russia behind her - and I think essentially that is true.

HOTTELET: Well, I think the facts of the world power today just don't leave any room for compromise. Actually, when the Four Powers met here in Berlin, there was so little room to maneuver in the German question, that each new - that it was merely trying to find out whether the other side would capitulate. We can't retreat from our demand for free elections in Germany without destroying our position in Central Europe, and the Russians can't agree to our demand for free elections without destroying theirs. We are chin-to-chin. And Mr. Molotov came along, stuck his chin out just as far as we did ours, and why should he not, he - I think in the almost demonstrative tone of his proposals, which he must have known would be totally unacceptable to us, I think he was trying to show the rest that Russia does not feel weak, that the changes inside the Soviet Union - since the death of Stalin, the preoccupations with agriculture, the uncertainty perhaps of Moscow's relations with China - are not impelling Russia to cut its losses in Central Europe and pull back, it is merely encouraging Russia to stand its ground here, not give up a foot of territory, not compromise on a single issue.

MURROW: Well, the general tone of the discussion today was rather more restrained than it had been in the past: They've agreed to adjourn on Thursday. Does this mean that they're sort of letting down to make a gentle landing without disappointing anyone too much?

SMITH: I have the impression that's the case, Ed. But altogether this has been a fairly good humored conference as foreign ministers' conferences have gone. In past ones, American Secretaries of State have become extremely angry with Russian tactics; but now Mr. Dulles has been present at almost all of those conferences, apparently knew what to expect, and he has not lost his head or becomeimpatient at any point; and Molotov on the other hand has been a little less difficult, I think personality-wise than he has in past conferences.

MURROW: Well, then are we to conclude that while nothing concrete or constructive is to come out of this conference?

HOTTELET: I would say that nothing constructive in the sense of a settlement of the outstanding problems will come out of it, but one perhaps slightly positive overtone has been the affability, the politeness with which the conference has unfolded. Molotov - although he is not willing to give up any ground - seems also not willing to try to turn on any more heat in Europe. He wants for the time being, I think - the Kremlin does - to keep things as they are. I think they've got a lot of problems to settle inside and building up their shell and consolidating behind it, which seemed to be what they have in mind.

MURROW: Well, thank you very much, Howard K. Smith and Richard C. Hottelet. I've been sitting here in Berlin talking with these two colleagues of mine who've covered this entire conference from the beginning. This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin. Good night and good luck.

COLLINGWOOD: This is Charles Collingwood. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to today's news. But, first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

COLLINGWOOD: Senator Gillett of Iowa told his colleagues today that it isn't always easy to define terms. For example: the State Department says a treaty is something that has to be submitted to the Senate for ratification. This reminds me, he said, when I was a boy on the farm and the hired hand told me how to tell male pigeons from females. You put corn in front of them. If he picks it up, he's a he. And if she picks it up, she's a she."

This is Charles Collingwood saying goodnight!

Tuesday, Feb. 16, 1954

Good evening:

The government reports that a recheck on unemployment figures in the nation shows an increase of 728-thousand more than was reported in January. Commerce Secretary Weeks says the new figure arrived at by a different method for January unemployment is three million and 87-thousand. When the Commerce Department issued its January figures at the end of January some Democrats and labor leaders claimed the department's statisical methods did not cover all of the unemployed. So tonight we have the new figure.. three million 87-thousand persons unemployed last month.

A federal reserve board economist--Winfield Reifler..told the joint congressional economic committee that there are indications that the current economic dip is "sharper" than that foreseen in the President's economic report to Congress. Riefler said the Federal Reserve Board's production index has dropped about ten per cent since last July.

The Senate today voted to approve a change in the Bricker amendment that would require a record roll call vote on all treaties. The vote was 72 to 16. The issue was not considered controversial.

The Senate's Foreign Relations Committee today heard secret testimony on the situation in Indo-China and America's committments. Both Admiral Radford, the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and Undersecretary of State Bedell Smith gave the Senators positive assurance that the Congress will be consulted in advance of any new moves. Radford is said to have re-assured the Senators that our involvement in Indo-China will stop short of sending ground troops or pilots to help the French. And Smith told the Senators the recent news reports from Indo-China have magnified "out of all ~~proportion~~ proportion" the true events. He said enemy military gains have been largely "real estate victories." He said the Communist plan was to scare the French delegates to the Big Four foreign ministers conference in Berlin.

Today in Indo-China as the French attacked in the northwest, the enemy's Viet Minh radio accused the United States of what it called "shameful intervention"... through our technicians. The radio says: "This unmasks American imperialists."

In India today rioting crowds... reportedly "whipped into an anti-American frenzy by Communists" stormed the United States information service library in Calcutta. We're told that three persons were killed, more than 100 hospitalized, in what's described as India's worst disorders since the country won its independence.

And in Italy, a Communist-called one day strike resulted in violence in Rome where more than 500 persons were arrested for failing to obey police orders. The strikers were demonstrating for higher pay/. and against Premier Scelba's new week-old government.

At Berlin today, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov again refused to agree to an Austrian peace treaty..to free Austria from Soviet troops. Molotov offered to discuss in 1955 the possibility of withdrawing the Red Army from Austria . The western powers accused him of transforming the drafted treaty into a "tragic fraud." In a few minutes we'll hear a direct report from Berlin.

In Newport , Rhode Island, Admiral Carney, the navy's top officer, told the naval war college that we must be ready for another war whether it is to be fought with atomic bombs or with bamboo spears. Admiral Carney said no one can forecast the blueprint for an "ultimate showdown of the nations now in ideological conflict." And he added: "Confronted with great uncertainty, I see no alternative but to hedge our strategic bets, ready to rush into the future, but also prepared to meet, and rely on, the methods of the recent past."

General Ridgeway, the army chief of staff, said in Florida today that a new type of guided missile, with supersonic speed and a 50-mile range is being issued to army units for tactical use. He also told of a new rapid-firing rocket with the reach of heavy artillery and an explosive force of "hundreds of rounds" of artillery shells.

In Washington , a military court of inquiry today opened a hearing to determine whether to propose a court martial for Marine Colonel Frank W. Schwable. Colonel Schwable, while a prisoner of the enemy in Korea, was forced to confess participating in germ warfare. Hesaid the confession was extracted through "extreme torment." The court of inquiry must decide whether the Schwable's conduct warrants a court martial or if the case should be laid aside.

The House Ways and Means committee today agreed to give taxpayers an additional month to figure out their income tax returns--next year. The committee accepted, without opposition, a suggestion by the President, that the tax paying date be moved back from March 15th to April 15th. Beginning next year - from the government under the President's employe security program. The Democrats say there is "confusion and misunderstanding surrounding the Administration's claim that it has seperated more than 22-hundred security risks from the federal government."

The Democratic members of the Senate Civil Service Commission today called on Republican Chairman Carlson for an investigation of dismissals

Postmaster General Summerfield today asked a House committee to approve a complete revision of postoffice department salary scales that would boost the payroll by 80-million dollars a year

Republican Senator Aiken of Vermont says that retail butter prices must drop about 20 cents a pound.. "or to about 60 cents"... in order to end the accumulation of the big butter stocks now in government hands. Yesterday Secretary of Agriculture Benson said the government's price support level on butter would be lowered on April first...which would mean a drop of about eight cents a pound for consumers.

The A.F. of L. Teamsters union today endorsed a trucking industry plan to cut transportation costs. This would be done by ferrying thousands of loaded truck-trailers by ship..along the Atlantic coast.

Now for a recorded report on the situation at the Foreign Ministers Conference here is Edward R. Murrow:

(ends: good night and good luck.)

This is C.C. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the day's news. But first.. Bob Dixon.

FOOTNOTE

It is the job of military leaders to look at the worst and prepare for every eventuality. Today Admiral Robert Carney, Chief of Naval Operations, made a catalogue of the kind of wars our defenses might have to cope with... "Big wars, he said, little wars, general wars, localized wars, Marquis of Queensbury wars and savage ruthless wars, atomic wars, and, perhaps, non-atomic wars."... A big list, a big job.

THIS IS C.C. SAYING GOODNIGHT

CBS RADIO DIVISION

CHARLES COLLINGWOOD

Tuesday, February 16, 1954
7:45-8:00 p.m.

COLLINGWOOD: ..... Now, for a recorded report on the situation at the Foreign Ministers' Conference here is Edward R. Murrow.

MURROW: This is Berlin! When this report is heard I shall be on my way to Paris and my colleague, Richard C. Hottelet, has agreed to sit in and report to you on the Berlin Conference.

HOTTELET: Forty-eight hours from now the four Foreign Ministers will be on their way home. For all practical purposes the Berlin Conference is already as good as finished. Today's debate on Austria showed for the umpteenth time that positions have not changed and there is no reason to think differently about Germany and European security. (?-interference) A fairly new problem for which the Ministers have time and patience is the drafting of a communique. From their behavior so far it appears that they will join in a polite smile and express some satisfaction that, while they could not agree, they did at least not crack each other's skull. They will say that the conference clarified the issues, which it did, and that their countries will keep in touch, which they may. Perhaps they may suggest that the conference be held with Communist China to examine the specific Far Eastern questions, or, that the four high commissioners in Germany discuss easier interzonal transport, but, nothing the Ministers say is likely to change the nature of their encounter here in Berlin. Most of the thinking and planning is already being devoted to the aftermath of their conference.

This is expecially true in Germany, which has stood behind the western Ministers as a silent partner. Here, hopes of reunification have now been dashed and the people have no choice but to reconcile themselves to remaining half slave and half free for some indefinite time. Thousands in the Soviet Zone, who have been waiting for the conference to improve their position, are expected to pack their bags and seek a better life in Western Germany. In Berlin, the trade unions have ordered a silent procession on Thursday to protest Russia's refusal to negotiate, but the barren end of the Berlin Conference has political consequences for all of Germany far beyond personal tragedy and disappointment. It is these effects which Chancellor Adenauer is discussing in Bonn tonight with the leaders of the Federal Parliament and it is this aftermath which Secretary of State Dulles will talk over with Chancellor Adenauer on Thursday night when he stops at Bonn airport for an hour on his way back to Washington. Well-informed Germans say that it is not enough for the Foreign Ministers to tip their hats and depart. They declare that the situation after the conference is essentially no less dangerous than before, Germany's position no less difficult. Something must be done, they say, to keep alive the initiative which the Western Ministers showed at the conference and prevent a sag in morale that could undo the solidarity they showed in Berlin. And these quarters are pretty specific. They say that some step forward must now be taken toward the political and military integration of western Europe. They are still entirely for a European defense community, but the effectuation of that depends on France and if France does not act they propose that Germany, Britain, and the United States take action on their own. This would mean the end of EDC as it is now planned, but, say these responsible German sources, the idea of political and military unity cannot be abandoned because one program failed. They suggest an alternative, - a coalition of national armies, a coalition with a common general staff under the supervision and control of an international body like the European Council of Ministers. In their view such a scheme would embody all the safeguards of EDC against a revival of German militarism and could at the same time remove some French and British objections to EDC.

Large sections of French opinion have opposed EDC because they wanted to preserve a national army for France and Britain has stayed out of the European Defense Community for the same reason. A coalition of national armies might attract them both and, these Germans go on, if Britain joins France will get the added security it has been demanding. In any case, Britain and the United States can then help Germany start with the reestablishment of a defense force and the prospects of going ahead without France might well persuade the French to approve the coalition themselves.

Germany has not yet made any such proposals officially, but there is no doubt that such ideas are being thought through in official circles. They may not work; they may be abandoned, but they show that Germany today badly wants to know what next and it is looking westward for an answer.

MURROW: Thatwas Richard C. Hottelet reporting from Berlin.

This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin.

Goodnight and good luck!

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (WITH CHARLES COLLINGWOOD)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening:

The government reports that a recheck on umemployment figures in the nation shows an increase of 728-thousand more than was reported in January. Commerce Secretary Weeks says the new figure arrived at by a different method for January unemployment is three million and 87-thousand. When the Commerce Department issued its January figures at the end of January some Democrats and labor leaders claimed the department's statistical methods did not cover all of the unemployed. So tonight we have the new figure: three million 87-thousand persons unemployed last month.

A federal reserve board economist, Winfield Reifler, told the joint congressional economic committee that there are indications that the current economic dip is "sharper" than that foreseen in the President's economic report to Congress. Riefler said the Federal Reserve Board's production index has dropped about ten percent since last July.

The Senate today voted to approve a change in the Bricker amendment that would require a record roll call vote on all treaties. The vote was 72 to 16. The issue was not considered controversial.

The Senate's Foreign Relations Committee today heard secret testimony on the situation in Indo-China and America's committments. Both Admiral Radford, the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and Undersecretary of State Bedell Smith gave the Senators positive assurance that the Congress will be consulted in advance of any new moves. Radford is said to have re-assured the Senators that our involvement in Indo-China will stop short of sending ground troops or pilots to help the French. And Smith told the Senators the recent news reports from Indo-China have magnified "out of all proportion" the true events. He said enemy military gains have been largely "real estate victories." He said the Communist plan was to scare the French delegates to the Big Four foreign ministers conference in Berlin.

Today in Indo-China as the French attacked in the northwest, the enemy's Viet Minh radio accused the United States of what it called "shameful intervention" through our technicians. The radio says: "This unmasks American imperialists."

In India today rioting crowds reportedly "whipped into an anti-American frenzy by Communists" stormed the United States information service library in Calcutta. We're told that three persons were killed, more than 100 hospitalized, in what's described as India's worst disorders since the country won its independence.

And in Italy, a Communist-called one day strike resulted in violence in Rome where more than 500 persons were arrested for failing to obey police orders. The strikers were demonstrating for higher pay and against Premier Scelba's new week-old government.

At Berlin today, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov again refused to agree to an Austrian peace treaty to free Austria from Soviet troops. Molotov offered to discuss in 1955 the possibility of withdrawing the Red Army from Austria. The western powers accused him of transforming the drafted treaty into a "tragic fraud." In a few minutes we'll hear a direct report from Berlin.

In Newport, Rhode Island, Admiral Carney, the navy's top officer, told the naval war college that we must be ready for another war whether it is to be fought with atomic bombs or with bamboo spears. Admiral Carney said no one can forecast the blueprint for an "ultimate showdown of the nations now in ideological conflict." And he added: "Confronted with great uncertainty, I see no alternative but to hedge our strategic bets, ready to rush into the future, but also prepared to meet, and rely on the methods of the recent past."

General Ridgeway, the army chief of staff, said in Florida today that a new type of guided missile, with supersonic speed and a 50-mile range is being issued to army units for tactical use. He also told of a new rapid-firing rocket with the reach of heavy artillery and an explosive force of "hundreds of rounds" of artillery shells.

In Washington, a military court of inquiry today opened a hearing to determine whether to propose a court martial for Marine Colonel Frank W. Schwable. Colonel Schwable, while a prisoner of the enemy in Korea, was forced to confess participating in germ warfare. He said the confession was extracted through "extreme torment." The court of inquiry must decide whether Schwable's conduct warrants a court martial or if the case should be laid aside.

The House Ways and Means committee today agreed to give taxpayers an additional month to figure out their income tax returns next year. The committee accepted, without opposition, a suggestion by the President, that the tax paying date be moved back from March 15th to April 15th, beginning next year.

The Democratic members of the Senate Civil Service Commission today called on Republican Chairman Carlson for an investigation of dismissals from the government under the President's employee security program. The Democrats say there is "confusion and misunderstanding surrounding the Administration's claim that it has separated more than 22-hundred security risks from the federal government."

Postmaster General Summerfield today asked a House committee to approve a complete revision of postoffice department salary scales that would boost the payroll by 80-million dollars a year.

Republican Senator Aiken of Vermont says that retail butter prices must drop about 20 cents a pound "or to about 60 cents" in order to end the accumulation of the big butter stocks now in government hands. Yesterday Secretary of Agriculture Benson said the government's price support level on butter would be lowered on April first, which would mean a drop of about eight cents a pound for consumers.

The AFL Teamsters Union today endorsed a trucking industry plan to cut transportation costs. This would be done by ferrying thousands of loaded truck-trailers by ship along the Atlantic coast.

Now for a recorded report on the situation at the Foreign Ministers Conference here is Edward R. Murrow:

MURROW: This is Berlin! When this report is heard I shall be on my way to Paris and my colleague, Richard C. Hottelet, has agreed to sit in and report to you on the Berlin Conference.

HOTTELET: Forty-eight hours from now the four Foreing Ministers will be on their way home. For all practical purposes the Berlin Conference is already as good as finished. Today's debate on Austria showed for the umpteenth time that positions have not changed and there is not any reason to think differently about Germany and European security. A fairly new problem for which the Ministers have time and patience is the drafting of a communique. From their behavior so far it appears that they will join in a polite smile and express some satisfaction that, while they could not agree, they did at least not crack each other's skull. They will say that the conference clarified the issues, which it did, and that their countries will keep in touch, which they may. Perhaps they may suggest that the conference be held with Communist China to examine the specific Far Eastern questions, or, that the four high commissioners in Germany discuss easier interzonal transport, but, nothing the Ministers say is likely to change the nature of their encounter here in Berlin. Most of the thinking and planning is already being devoted to the aftermath of their conference.

This is especially true in Germany, which has stood behind the western Ministers as a silent partner. Here, hopes of reunification have now been dashed and the people have no choice but to reconcile themselves to remaining half slave and half free for some indefinite time. Thousands in the Soviet Zone, who have been waiting for the conference to improve their position, are expected to pack their bags and seek a better life in Western Germany. In Berlin, the trade unions have ordered a silent procession on Thursday to protest Russia's refusal to negotiate, but the barren end of the Berlin Conference has political consequences for all of Germany far beyond personal tragedy and disappointment. It is these effects which Chancellor Adenauer is discussing in Bonn tonight with the leaders of the Federal Parliament and it is this aftermath which Secretary of State Dulles will talk over with Chancellor Adenauer on Thursday night when he stops at Bonn airport for an hour on his way back to Washington. Well-informed Germans say that it is not enough for the Foreign Ministers to tip their hats and depart. They declare that the situation after the conference is essentially no less dangerous than before, Germany's position no less difficult. Something must be done, they say, to keep alive the initiative which the Western Ministers showed at the conference and prevent a sag in morale that could undo the solidarity they showed in Berlin. And these quarters are pretty specific. They say that some step forward must now be taken toward the political and military integration of western Europe. They are still entirely for a European defense community, but the effectuation of that depends on France and if France does not act they propose that Germany, Britain, and the United States take action on their own. This would mean the end of EDC as it is now planned, but, say these responsible German sources, the idea of political and military unity cannot be abandoned because one program failed. They suggest an alternative, a coalition of national armies, a coalition with a common general staff under the supervision and control of an international body like the European Council of Ministers. In their view such a scheme would embody all the safeguards of EDC against a revival of German militarism and could at the same time remove some French and British objections to EDC. Large sections of French opinion have opposed EDC because they wanted to preserve a national army for France and Britain has stayed out of the European Defense Community for the same reason. A coalition of national armies might attract them both and, these Germans go on, if Britain joins France will get the added security it has been demanding. In any case, Britain and the United States can then help Germany start with the reestablishment of a defense force and the prospects of going ahead without France might well persuade the French to approve the coalition themselves.

Germany has not yet made any such proposals officially, but there is no doubt that such ideas are being thought through in official circles. They may not work; they may be abandoned, but they show that Germany today badly wants to know what next and it is looking westward for an answer.

MURROW: That was Richard C. Hottelet reporting from Berlin. This is Ed Murrow recording from Berlin. Goodnight and good luck!

COLLINGWOOD: This is Charles Collingwood. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the days news. But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It is the job of military leaders to look at the worst and prepare for every eventuality. Today Admiral Robert Carney, Chief of Naval Operations, made a catalogue of the kind of wars our defenses might have to cope with: "Big wars, he said, little wars, general wars, localized wars, Marquis of Queensbury wars and savage ruthless wars, atomic wars, and, perhsps, non-atomic wars." A big list, a big job.

This is Charles Collingwood saying goodnight.

Wednesday February 17, 1954

Good evening:

The President said today that what happens in the month of March will indicate the immediate ECONOMIC future for the nation [redacted]. Mr. Eisenhower told reporters: normally unemployment drops in March. If it does not DROP ~~next~~ month, he will take that as a warning of real economic trouble. And if there is to be trouble one of the first things that must be considered is a tax cut..to spur consumer buying. Again the President said if it appears likely that we are in for economic DIFFICULTIES [redacted] he will not hesitate to use every weapon available to the government to head off a depression.

The United States Chamber of Commerce told a Congressional committee today that business this year may not be as buoyant as in 1953 "but it will be good by any standards established before 1950." And the Committee for Economic Development feels no strong government action is now required. But the nation's two top labor leaders..Walter Reuther and George Meany.. called for prompt action to increase employment and halt "the recession."

The President today asked Congress to change the atomic energy act so that he can give our allies information on how to use nuclear weapons. The President also wants to be able to co-operate with other nations on the peaceful uses of atomic energy. And he wants to be able to encourage [redacted] industry to take a more significant role in developing atomic power. Again the President INDICATED [redacted] we have hydrogen weapons "that DWARF [redacted] in destructive power all atomic weapons."

And Chairman Cole of the Congressional atomic energy committee said in a Chicago speech that the hydrogen weapon [redacted] test [redacted] in 1952 "completely obliterated the test island in the Eniwetok atoll...tore a cavity in the ocean floor a full mile in diameter and 175 feet deep ~~in depth~~ at its lowest point." (This would be a hole big enough for 140 buildings the size of the Capitol in Washington)

The President today told a White-House sponsored [redacted] conference on highway safety that sufficient public opinion must be mobilized to solve the problem of increasing traffic deaths. He pointed out that in the past 50 years automobiles have killed more AMERICANS [redacted] than have been killed in all of our wars.

The president today named Admiral Jerauld Wright to be supreme commander of allied forces in the Atlantic.. as well as commander in chief of our Atlantic fleet. He'll replace Admiral McCormick, who becomes president of the naval war college at Newport, Rhode Island.

The WHITE House HAS requested and received the resignation of Clarence Manion as chairman of the congressional commission on Inter-governmental relations. Manion, former dean of the law school at Notre Dame, said he was "fired" because he supported the Bricker amendment.

Today, the Senate by a one vote margin approved part of a Republican substitute for the Bricker amendment.. after being told it was "acceptable" to the White House. The new PROVISION would change the Constitution to provide that no treaty shall become the supreme law of the land unless "made in pursuance of this constitution." The vote was 44 to 43.

In Berlin, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov proposed that the Big Four agree on the strength and armament of all police in divided Germany. He also wants the creation of all-German committees to promote better relations between East and West Germany. Secretary of State Dulles, calling this "a feeble substtitute" for the western proposal to unify Germany by free elections, agreed to consider Molotov's plan. So did the French and British foreign ministers.

Italy's Communist-inspired violence against the new government of Premier Scelba spread to Sicily today. Four persons were killed.

And the Communists have now called for a nation-wide "demonstration of mourning and protests" tomorrow.. when Scelba goes before the Senate for confirmation as premier.

Calcutta's riots went into a second day with Communist leaders again defying police rules against any meetings by more than four persons.

In Indo-China, Vietminh rebels fled without a fight as French forces made new offensive sorties in the northwest.

And in Korea, General Taylor warned the South Koreans that we will "deal appropriately" with the South Koreans if --AS THREATENED-- they try to harm the Indian troops now in the country. [redacted].

The army announced in Washington that it will present Bronze Star medals to six soldiers who refused to give information to their Communist captors in Korea despite the fact that they were tortured. [redacted]

And Marine Colonel Frank Schwable, who was forced to confess to germ warfare, told a Court of Inquiry today that he HOPED [redacted] to stay alive to be able to tell about Communist methods from his own experience..as he put it "To expose one of the greatest hoaxes any nation ever attempted to foist on the world." The court also heard Major General Clayton C. Jerome describe Schwable as one of the bravest, most intelligent and conscientious officers he had ever known.

The House Ways and Means Committee has voted a broad tax cut for retired persons. They would be exempt from taxes on the first twelve hundred dollars of their annual retirement income. This would be in addition to other exemption and deduction now allowed.

And the Civil Service Commission says it is now anaylizing the cases of 22-hundred federal employes let out as security risks. Chairman Young says this is being done "to make available to the National Security Council as much information" as can be assembled about the loyalty program.

Edward R. Murrow is now on his way home from Berlin. He stopped in Paris today and recorded this report for you:

(good night and good luck)

This is CC. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news. // But first, Bob Dixon.

FOOTNOTE

People outside Washington sometimes have the uneasy impression that they don't know what Congress is talking about. Its reassuring to know that Congressmen share the same feeling. Today during a debate over timberland rights, Congressman Burdick of North Dakota rose and said: "I've come to the conclusion that neither side knows what you're doing. Neither side knows what you want to do. And neither side knows you don't know."

THIS IS CHARLES COLLINGWOOD SAYING GOODNIGHT

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Wednesday, Feb. 17, 1954
7:45-8:00 P.M.

MURROW: THIS IS PARIS:

In Berlin, correspondents and officials on both sides of the Iron Curtain kept saying repeatedly that the results of the Berlin conference would be seen in Paris. I'm in Paris tonite, and sitting opposite me is probably the best American correspondent in Paris, at least that's my view, my colleague David Schoenbrun.

David, what has been the impact of the Berlin conference on France so far?

SCHOENBRUN: I'd say very bad, Ed - not that anybody expected a success in Berlin, but the stake in the Berlin conference from the beginning, as viewed from this capital, has been some indication as to whether or not France was going to be able to go ahead with its plans for European unity and its plans in Indochina. And on both those questions, European unity and Indochina, the Berlin conference has not helped the plans of the French Government.

MURROW: Well, Mr. Bidault will be coming back probably tomorrow or the next day. What will he be coming back to?

SCHOENBRUN: A very tough situation. The most important, the most immediate one, perhaps, is that of European unity ... perhaps not the most important; I think, as a matter of fact, that Indochina is most important ... but the immediate one is European unity, the question of whether or not France shall reconcile its differences with Germany in an armed community of Europe, the one thing that Mr. Molotov has been attacking consistently in Berlin. And there/ I think, Ed, that Mr. Molotov has had a certain success.

MURROW: You would think, then, that the chances of the French ratifying the European Defense Community had been decreased by the conference in Berlin?

SCHOENBRUN: Yes, I think so, altho I'd like to add very quickly that I do not believe that the chances of EDC are by any means dead. I think there's still a chance of getting it thru, but I don't think that Berlin has helped it, mainly because, I think, of the mistakes that Mr. Bidault made at the conference table in Berlin. And now, this is not just my opinion that I'm quoting, but I'm quoting sources in the French Parliament to whom I speak daily. And that is, the day that Mr. Bidault of France, Mr. Dulles of our own country and Mr. Eden told Mr. Molotov that if Germany were to be united some day, it would be free to decide whether it wants to be a member of the Western camp or not, which was tantamount to telling the people of France that if they let Germany have an army in the Western camp, under Western controls, that army may some day secede from the West and go its own course; and Mr. Bidault is going to have to do a lot of explaining back in this city of Paris as to just what that meant.

MURROW: He's going to have to do some explaining about Indochina, too, isn't he?

SCHOENBRUN: I think that's probably the toughest explaining that he's going to have to face up to. Mr. Bidault is going to have to explain to the people of France just why he has not insisted upon immediate conference with the other powers to bring peace in Indochina. Mostly, the stories coming back here to Paris have been rather giving the impression that a Big Five conference will be held in Korea. Well, Ed Murrow, you and I had a meeting today with a very important member of the French Government, and I was very impressed, as I'm sure you were, with what he said. He said the United States after two years of war in Korea called it quits and sued for peace; and he'd like to know why France, after eight years of fighting in Indochina, cannot do the same. A lot of French people are going to be asking the same question of the French Foreign Minister.

MURROW: Well, are the French going to pull out of Indochina?

SCHOENBRUN: If by pulling out you mean suddenly collapsing and saying good-bye - no, I don't think so. If you mean are the French going to do everything to end the war in Indochina and get out by stages or by agreement, somehow or other, yes. Ed, we Americans had better face the facts. That war in Indochina cannot and will not last much longer. The French people are not going to continue to accept an eight-year-old war, with terrible losses and terrible costs, whereas we Americans, strong and powerful as we are, were not able to continue fighting in Korea. And when the President of the United States tells the people of America, as he did just a few days ago, Ed, that it would be a tragedy for us Americans to get involved in Indochina, the reaction here is: it's a tragedy for France to stay involved in that war in Indochina.

MURROW: Well, we're paying something like seventy per cent of the cost of that war, tho, David.

SCHOENBRUN: Yes, and as the gentlemen whom we interviewed today reminded us, they are paying one hundred per cent of the cost of blood. Now, how do you balance off accounts, Ed? It's a very unhealthy relationship at best for this great and sovereign nation to be selling its soldiers to the United States. This is a very harsh statement. It's not one that I, myself, have made up, but there are hundreds of quotes in the French press, which you've read just today, in which they point out that France's best export, her best dollar-earner is blood in Indochina. It just can't continue. The French people are demanding an end to the war, the French Parliament is demanding an end to the war, and it won't do any good for Mr. Bidault to explain that Mr. Dulles doesn't like the idea. France is going to have to decide itself what to do in that war in Indochina.

MURROW: Well, our Secretary of Defense said the other day that the war was going rather well in Indochina and that the Communist advances were not very considerable. I take it that a different view is held here in Paris, isn't it?

SCHOENBRUN: Well, they're utterly astonished, and they'd like to know just where Mr. Wilson and, in fact, Mr. Bedell Smith are getting their information from, because all the information that's coming here into France is that the war is going very badly. That doesn't mean that it's grave to the extent that the French are likely to be overrun or likely to be defeated in battle.

Nothing of the kind! But it does mean that there is no hope whatsoever of military victory in Indochina. To put it bluntly, Ed, from top intelligence sources whom I see often here in Paris, anything we can do to step up aid to France and to beat the Communists back will be immediately countered by Chinese aid to the Communists. ....? go into it.

MURROW: David, can we go back for a minute to the European army? How long are the French going to delay before reaching a decision on this?

SCHOENBRUN: Ed, the Prime Minister of France has told me, and he has said this to other people whom I know, that he is going to demand a debate, a final debate, on the European army as soon as possible after Berlin. Now, that means the debate will first take place in the Foreign Affairs Committee of the French Parliament. They've got to get it out of committee. I would say on a guess, Ed, that some time in the month of March there's going to be a final vote in this country on the European army.

MURROW: And your feeling is that the Berlin conference has not increased the chances of ratification?

SCHOENBRUN: That is correct, altho I still believe that there is a good chance that it will be ratified.

MURROW: And your target date would be some time in ...

SCHOENBRUN: I'd say before the 1st of April.

MURROW: Well now, what happens if they do not ratify, David?

SCHOENBRUN: You tell me. Mr. Dulles is talking about an agonizing reappraisal. Ed, what reappraisal of American foreign policy is possible?

MURROW: Well, I think it is possible that both the British and the Americans might go for a national German army - and then the French would be considerably discomfited, wouldn't they?

SCHOENBRUN: They would, indeed. I don't know what would happen. I think you'd get such a split in this country that you'd never be able to put it together again; and as for a German national army, I've heard the President of the United States say many times when he was a general that he will never consent to a German national army, and I've heard Chancellor Adenauer say the same thing. I just don't know where it leaves us.

MURROW: Nor do I.

Thank you very much, David Schoenbrun.

I've been sitting here in Paris, talking with my old friend and colleague David Schoenbrun. This is Ed Murrow recording from Paris.

Good Night and Good Luck!

-30-

Ediphone trans./E. Scheiner

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (WITH CHARLES COLLINGWOOD)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening:

The President said today that what happens in the month of March will indicate the immediate economic future for the nation. Mr. Eisenhower told reporters: normally unemployment drops in March. If it does not drop next month he will take that as a warning of real economic trouble. And if there is to be trouble one of the first things that must be considered is a tax cut - to spur consumer buying. Again the President said if it appears likely that we are in for economic difficulties he will not hesitate to use every weapon available to the government to head off a depression.

The United States Chamber of Commerce told a Congressional committee today that business this year may not be as buoyant as in 1953 "but it will be good by any standards established before 1950." And the Committee for Economic Development feels no strong government action is now required. But the nation's two top labor leaders, Walter Reuther and George Meany, called for prompt action to increase employment and halt "the recession."

The President today asked Congress to change the atomic energy act so that he can give our allies information on how to use nuclear weapons. The President also wants to be able to cooperate with other nations on the peaceful uses of atomic energy. And he wants to be able to encourage industry to take a more significant role in developing atomic power. Again the President indicated we have hydrogen weapons "that dwarf in destructive power all atomic weapons."

And Chairman Cole of the Congressional atomic energy committee said in a Chicago speech that the dydrogen weapon test in 1952 "completely obliterated the test island in the Eniwetok atoll - tore a cavity in the ocean floor a full mile in diameter and 175 feet deep at its lowest point." This would be a hole big enough for 140 buildings the size of the Capitol in Washington.

The President today told a White-House sponsored conference on highway safety that sufficient public opinion must be mobilized to solve the problem of increasing traffic deaths. He pointed out that in the past 50 years automobiles have killed more Americans than have been killed in all of our wars.

The President today named Admiral Jerauld Wright to be supreme commander of allied forces in the Atlantic as well as commander in chief of our Atlantic fleet. He'll replace Admiral McCormick who becomes president of the naval war college at Newport, Rhode Island.

The White House was requested and received the resignation of Clarence Manion as chairman of the congressional commission on Inter-governmental relations. Manion, former dean of the law school at Notre Dame, said he was "fired" because he supported the Bricker amendment.

Today, the Senate by a one vote margin approved part of a Republican substitute for the Bricker amendment after being told it was "acceptable" to the White House. The new provision would change the Constitution to provide that no treaty shall become the supreme law of the land unless "made in pursuance of this constitution." The vote was 44 to 43.

In Berlin, Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov proposed that the Big Four agree on the strength and armament of all police in divided Germany. He also wants the creation of all-German committees to promote better relations between East and West Germany. Secretary of State Dulles, calling this "a feeble substitute" for the western proposal to unify Germany by free elections, agreed to consider Molotov's plan. So did the French and British foreign ministers.

Italy's Communist-inspired violence against the new government of Premier Scelba spread to Sicily today. Four persons were killed. And the Communists have now called for a nation-wide "demonstration of mourning and protests" tomorrow when Scelba goes before the Senate for confirmation as premier.

Calcutta's riots went into a second day with Communist leaders again defying police rules against any meetings by more than four persons.

In Indo-China, Vietminh rebels fled without a fight as French forces made new offensive sorties in the northwest.

And in Korea, General Taylor warned the South Koreans that we will "deal appropriately" with the South Koreans if as threatened, they try to harm the Indian troops now in the country.

The army announced in Washington that it will present Bronze Star medals to six soldiers who refused to give information to their Communist captors in Korea despite the fact that they were tortured.

And Marine Colonel Frank Schwable, who was forced to confess to germ warfare, told a Court of Inquiry today that he hoped to stay alive to be able to tell about Communist methods from his won experience as he put it "to expose one of the greatest hoaxes any nation ever attempted to foist on the world." The court also heard Major General Clayton C. Jerome describe Schwable as one of the bravest, most intelligent and conscientious officers he had ever known.

The House Ways and Means Committee has voted a broad tax cut for retired persons. They would be exempt from taxes on the first twelve hundred dollars of their annual retirement income. This would be in addition to other exemption and deduction now allowed.

Edward R. Murrow is now on his way home from Berlin. He stopped in Paris today and recorded this report for you:

MURROW: This is Paris! In Berlin, correspondents and officials on both sides of the Iron Curtain kept saying repeatedly that the results of the Berlin conference would be seen in Paris. I'm in Paris tonight, and sitting opposite me is probably the best American correspondent in Paris, at least that's my view, my colleague, David Schoenbrun. David, what has been the impact of the Berlin conference on France so far?

SCHOENBRUN: I'd say very bad, Ed - not that anybody expected a success in Berlin, but the stake in the Berlin conference from the beginning, as viewed from this capital, has been some indication as to whether or not France was going to be able to go ahead with its plans for European unity and its plans in Indochina. And on both these questions, European and Indochina, the Berlin conference has not helped the plans of the French Government.

MURROW: Well, Mr. Bidault will be coming back probably tomorrow or the next day. What will he be coming back to?

SCHEONBRUN: A very tough situation. The most important, the most immediate one, perhaps, is that of European unity - perhaps not the most important; I think, as a matter of fact, that Indochina is most important - but the immediate one is European unity, the question of whether or not France shall reconcile its differences with Germany in an armed community of Europe, the one thing that Mr. Molotov has been attacking consistently in Berlin. And there, I think, Ed, that Mr. Molotov has had a certain success.

MURROW: You would think, then, that the chances of the French ratifying the European Defense Community had been decreased by the conference in Berlin?

SCHOENBRUN: Yes, I think so, although I'd like to add very quickly that I do not believe that the chances of EDC are by any means dead. I think there's still a chance of getting it through, but I don't think that Berlin has helped it, mainly because, I think, of the mistakes that Mr. Bidault made at the conference table in Berlin. And now, this is not just my opinion that I'm quoting, but I'm quoting sources in the French Parliament to whom I speak daily. And that is, the day that Mr. Bidault of France, Mr. Dulles of our own country and Mr. Eden told Mr. Molotov that if Germany were to be united some day, it would be free to decide whether it wants to be a member of the Western camp or not, which was tantamount to telling the people of France that if they let Germany have an army in the Western camp, under Western controls, that army may some day secede from the West and go its own course; and Mr. Bidault is going to have to do a lot of explaining back in this city of Paris as to just what that meant.

MURROW: He's going to have to do some explaining about Indochina, too, isn't he?

SCHOENBRUN: I think that's probably the toughest explaining that he's going to have to face up to. Mr. Bidault is going to have to explain to the people of France just why he has not insisted upon immediate conference with the other powers to bring peace in Indochina. Mostly, the stories coming back here to Paris have been rather giving the impression that a Big Five conference will be held in Korea. Well, Ed Murrow, you and I had a meeting today with a very important member of the French Government, and I was very impressed, as I'm sure you were, with what he said. He said the United States after two years of war in Korea called it quits and sued for peace; and he'd like to know why France, after eight years of fighting in IndoChina, cannot do the same. A lot of French people are going to be asking the same question of the French Foreign Minister.

MURROW: Well, are the French going to pull out of Indochina?

SCHOENBRUN: If by pulling out you mean suddenly collapsing and saying goodbye - no, I don't think so. If you mean are the French going to do everything to end the war in Indo China and get out by stages or by agreement, somehow or other, yes. Ed, we Americans had better face the facts. That war in IndoChina cannot and will not last much longer. The French people are not going to continue to accept an eight-year-old war, with terrible losses and terrible costs, whereas we Americans, strong and powerful as we are, were not able to continue fighting in Korea. And when the President of the United States tells the people of America, as he did just a few days ago, Ed, that it would be a tragedy for us Americans to get involved in IndoChina, the reaction here it: it's a tragedy for France to stay involved in that war in Indo-China.

MURROW: Well, we're paying something like seventy percent of the cost of that war, though, David.

SCHOENBRUN: Yes, and as the gentleman whom we interviewed today reminded us, they are paying one hundred percent of the cost of blood. Now, how do you balance off accounts, Ed? It's a very unhealthy relationship at best for this great and sovereign nation to be selling its soldiers to the United States. This is a very harsh statement. It's not one that I, myself, have made up, but there are hundreds of quotes in the French press, which you've read just today, in which they point out that France's best export, her best dollar-earner is blood in IndoChina. It just can't continue. The French people are demanding an end to the war, the French Parliament is demanding an end to the war, and it won't do any good for Mr. Bidault to explain that Mr. Dulles doesn't like the idea. France is going to have to decide itself what to do in that war in IndoChina.

MURROW: Well, our Secretary of Defense said the other day that the war was going rather well in IndoChina and that the Communist advances were not very considerable. I take it that a different view is held here in Paris, isn't it?

SCHOENBRUN: Well, they're utterly astonished, and they'd like to know just where Mr. Wilson and, in fact, Mr. Bedell Smith are getting their information from because all the information that's coming here into France is that the war is going very badly. That doesn't mean that it's grave to the extent that the French are likely to be overrun or likely to be defeated in battle. Nothing of the kind! But it does mean that there is no hope whatsoever of military victory in IndoChina. To put it bluntly, Ed, from top intelligence sources whom I see often here in Paris, anything we can do to step up aid to France and to beat the Communists back will be immediately countered by Chinese aid to the Communists.

MURROW: David, can we go back for a minute to the European army? How long are the French going to delay before reaching a decision on this?

SCHOENBRUN: Ed, the Prime Minister of France has told me, and he has said this to other people whom I know, that he is going to demand a debate, a final debate, on the European army as soon as possible after Berlin. Now, that means the debate will first take place in the Foreign Affairs Committee of the French Parliament. They've got to get it out of committee. I would say on a guess, Ed, that sme time in the month of March there's going to be a final vote in this country on the European army.

MURROW: And your feeling is that the Berlin conference has not increased the chances of ratification?

SCHOENBRUN: That is correct, although I still believe that there is a good chance that it will be ratified.

MURROW: And your target date would be some time in ...

SCHOENBRUN: I'd say before the 1st of April.

MURROW: Well now, what happens if they do not ratify, David?

SCHOENBRUN: You tell me. Mr. Dulles is talking about an agonizing reappraisal. Ed, what reappraisal of American foreign policy is possible?

MURROW: Well, I think it is possible that both the British and the Americans might go for a national German army - and then the French would be considerably discomfited, wouldn't they?

SCHOENBRUN: They would, indeed. I don't know what would happen. I think you'd get such a split in this country that you'd never be able to put it together again; and as for a German national army, I've heard the President of the United States say many times when he was a general that he will never consent to a German national army, and I've heard Chancellor Adenauer say the same thing. I just don't know where it leaves us.

MURROW: Nor do I. Thank you very much, David Schoenbrun. I've been sitting here in Paris, talking with my old friend and colleague, David Schoenbrun. This is Ed Murrow recording from Paris.

Good Night and Good Luck!

COLLINGWOOD: This is Charles Collingwood. I'll be back in a moment with a footnote to the news. But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

COLLINGWOOD: People outside Washington sometimes have the uneasy impression that they don't know what Congress is talking about. Its reassuring to know that Congressmen share the same feeling. Today during a debate over timberland rights, Congressman Burdick of North Dakota rose and said: "I've come to the conclusion that neither side knows what you're doing. Neither side knows what you want to do. And neither side knows you don't know."

This is Charles Collingwood saying goodnight.

Thursday Feb. 18. 1954

This is the news:

The Big Four foreign ministers concluded their Berlin meeting today with an agreement to meet again at a Korean peace conference on April 26th. The meeting will be held in Geneva, attended by the Chinese Communists and other nations that had armed forces in the war. And Secretary of State Dulles says that at this meeting there might be a chance for peace in Indo-China if the Chinese Communists "want it." I'd like to discuss the Berlin conference in a few minutes.

The British today announced a record peacetime defense budget. It calls for the spending of four and a half billion dollars (compared with our 37 and a half billion dollar defense budget.) And the British will adopt the American "new look" militarily...by cutting down on their army manpower, and stepping up their atomic strength. [The British are now producing atomic weapons.]

In Rome today, Premier Scelba pledged Parliament that he will "enforce democracy" even as Communist members shouted: "Shame ..faker and liar" at him. Scelba said the recent Communist-led demonstrations "will not happen again."

In South Korea, the army's provost marshal said again that he will block the departure of neutral Indian troops unless India meets South Korea's conditions. This statement was made after a warning by General Taylor that we will permit no interference with the Indians.

In Indo-China French forces killed or captured 113 enemy troops in the Red river Delta.

In Washington, the Defense Department says we have held discussions with the French on the possibility of sending Lieut. General O'Daniel to Indo-China if we enlarge our training mission there. A French embassy spokesman says no formal offer has been made to the French to help them train troops in Indo-China.

The Senate today approved the President's nomination of Albert C. Beeson to be a member of the National Labor relations board. The vote was close 45 to 42.. with three southern Democrats voting with the Republican majority: Byrd of Virginia, Holland of Florida and Eastland of Mississippi. The Democrats contended that Beeson had made "false and misleading statements" to the Labor committee; Republicans called him "eminently qualified and above reproach."

Economist Edwin C. Nourse told a congressional committee that this year's "economic adjustment" is "much more fundamental than mere inventory trimming." And in Detroit, the C.I.O. auto workers demanded that General Motors end what it called "a short work week or share the work schedules" in G.M. Plants. The union wants a [redacted] 40-hour work week for regular employes...which would mean a layoff for newer employes.

And the prosecution's case against four men accused of trying to assassinate C.I.O. President Reuther in 1948 collapsed in Canada when a judge dismissed extradition proceedings against two of the four men.

In Florida, the A.F. of L. Teamsters union decided not to go along with a proposed C.I.O.-A.F. of L. "no raiding" agreement..until the teamsters get back more than 50-thousand men they claim should have been organized in their union rather than in other unions.

Senator Mc Carthy today demanded that Army Secretary Stevens take immediate action to undo what he called "the disgraceful coddling of Communists" at Camp Kilmer, New Jersey. He called for action against the commandant, Major General Ralph Zwicker. The general, who testified in secret, told reporters McCarthy had offered a "colored and slanted version" of his secret testimony.

[redacted]

Army Secretary Stevens says any reserve officer who refuses to answer proper questions on loyalty data will forefiet his commission and be [redacted] discharged.

The Army today ordered a court martial trial for Corporal Dickenson, the former prisoner in Korea who changed his mind about staying with the enemy and decided to come home. Dickenson will be charged with informing on his fellow prisoners and collaborating with the enemy in Korea.

Republican Representative Mason of Illinois today resigned from the President's commission on Inter-Governmental Relations in protests against yesterday's White House dismissal of Chairman Clarence Manion.

The House Ways and Means Committee has voted to continue the present 27 and a half per cent tax [redacted] depletion allowances on oil and gas production.

PAUL PHILLIPS [redacted], a Negro civic leader in Grand Rapids, Michigan, has turned down an offer to be a special assistant to Secretary Oveta Culp Hobby. One reason for this, he said, is because he doesn't know how to explain racial segregation in Washington to his 7-year-old son.

IN Palm Springs today, the President played golf with Ben Hogan. On at least one hole.. the 9th.. the President and Hogan each had a par 4.

Edward R. Murrow: February 18, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

The Berlin Conference of the Foreign Ministers ended today,-very quietly. It cannot, I think, be classed as either a failure or a success. But if anything of significance occurred it was during the secret sessions. So far as available evidence is concerned, the situation remains as it was. There is to be a meeting in Geneva on April 26th, which will be attended by the Russians, the Chinese Communists and the other nations that had troops in Korea. This conference will discuss not only Korea but the possibility of peace in Indo-China. This means that we will be talking with the Chinese Communists, but we will not recognize them diplomatically. This means that the French Foreign Minister Bidault can take a little something home with him, although he will be severely criticized for not insisting that Indo-China be put at the head of the list for the Geneva Conference.

Nothing is changed in Germany, or in Austria. We don't know whether Dulles and Molotov made any progress in their secret discussions on the President's plan for a peaceful pool of atomic energy.

As if to underline the fact that nothing has changed, about a hundred thousand East Berliners came pouring out into the Unter Den Linden late this afternoon, demanding unification of Germany and denouncing Mr. Dulles and the Western Powers. About fifteen thousand West Berliners met voluntarily to demonstrate ~~their~~ For freedom. And as if to re-emphasize the fact that nothing has changed, Mr. Dulles reiterated previous statements that Berlin is regarded as the "first frontier," and that any attack against the city will be treated as an attack against the United States, Britain and France. Mr. Dulles hoped that when "the Russians decide that freedom is not so greatly to be feared" it may be possible to unify Germany and achieve the independence of Austria. Our Secretary of State felt that much has been learned during the Conference, and "it makes it less likely that any of us should by inadvertence and miscalculation do what would risk another war."

This must be regarded as hopeful language. Mr. Dulles contended that the failure to reach agreement with the Russians on Germany or Austria was "due to a fundamental difference between the great powers, which could not be reconciled by mere diplomatic or negotiating skills." It would appear likely that this "fundamental difference" has to do with military rather than with political considerations. Between the lines of every speech made in Berlin were considerations of grand strategy. Neither side was willing to yield strategic advantage to the other side by agreeing on either Germany or Austria. The Western Powers wanted the European Defence Community, and the inclusion of Germany in that system. The Russians were determined to retain their advance bases in Austria and East Germany. They will not give up their buffer, which they regard as necessary for the defense of Soviet territory. The Russians would not agree to leave Austria, for the simple reason that their troops there hold a bridgehead covering Czechoslovakia and Hungary against Western attack. Those same forces are in an excellent jumping off position from which to threaten the Po River Valley in Italy.

It was the general opinion in Berlin that Mr. Molotov was operating with more personal freedom and initiative than he had in previous conferences. But he, as was the case with the Western representatives, was bound by considerations of grand strategy. In a world in which the military power on both sides is increasing, no diplomat can give up a powerful position, and none came even close to doing so in Berlin. It would seem that both sides leave Berlin convinced of the correctness and the workability of their own policies; and both sides are free to pursue those policies. The Russians can continue to develop East Germany and the other satellites as forward military positions. And they can continue to watch for signs of internal contradictions in the Western Alliance, and to stimulate and encourage confusion where it may appear. We remain free to pursue our policy of creating a European Army. The French Government is going to press for an immediate decision as to whether the French will join. Our officials in Paris are "professionally optimistic." But what the French do on this subject is anybody's guess. They are determined above everything else to stop the war in Indo-China. The Russians might be able to bring that about. We could conceivably do it, if we were prepared to bargain with Communist China. Whatever happens, it is the opinion of many experienced observers in France that her decision on the European Army will be the most fateful that that country has taken in a century.

If Mr. Dulles is right in saying that the two sides now understand each other's position to the point where neither will stumble or fall into war, as a result of ignorance or misapprehension, then that fact alone must loom big on the credit side of the Berlin Conference. But the military position remains unchanged, the balance of power unaltered; and it is unlikely that either side registered any considerable gains in the field of psychological warfare. So the four men decided that the position in Europe being frozen, they would go to Geneva in late April to talk about Korea and Indo-China where the situation is rather more fluid.

To this reporter the gentle collapse of the Berlin Conference provides no grounds for joy or consternation. It merely recognized the existence of two presently irreconcilable power positions in Europe. Still, there will be another meeting at the end of April. It may accomplish little or nothing; but as most soldiers will tell you, talking is better than fighting.

WORD FOR THE DAY: February 18, 1954.

Shakespeare once wrote: "A peace is of the nature of a conquest, for then both parties nobly are subdued, and neither party loses." In Berlin neither party was subdued, and neither party lost. No one can read the future, diplomatically or militarily. Even Confucius couldn't do that, but he did counsel that "Want of patience in small matters confounds great plans."

Goodnight and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS (WITH CHARLES COLLINGWOOD)
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Big Four foreign ministers concluded their Berlin meeting today with an agreement to meet again at a Korean peace conference on April 26th. The meeting will be held in Geneva, attended by the Chinese Communists and other nations that had armed forces in the war. And Secretary of State Dulles says that at this meeting there might be a chance for peace in Indo-China if the Chinese Communists "want it." I'd like to discuss the Berlin conference in a few minutes.

The British today announced a record peacetime defense budget. It calls for the spending of four and a half billion dollars (compared with our 37 and a half billion dollar defense budget.) And the British will adopt the American "new look" militarily by cutting down on their army manpower and stepping up their atomic strength. The British are now producing atomic weapons.

In Rome today, Premier Scelba pledged Parliament that he will "enforce democracy" even as Communist members shouted: "Shame, faker and liar" at him. Scelba said the recent Communist-led demonstrations "will not happen again."

In South Korea, the army's provost marshal said again that he will block the departure of neutral Indian troops unless India meets South Korea's conditions. This statement was made after a warning by General Taylor that we will permit no interference with the Indians.

In Indo-China French forces killed or captured 113 enemy troops in the Red River Delta.

In Washington, the Defense Department says we have held discussions with the French on the possibility of sending Lieutenant General O'Daniel to Indo-China if we enlarge our training mission there. A French embassy spokesman says no formal offer has been made to the French to help them train troops in Indo-China.

The Senate today approved the President's nomination of Albert C. Beeson to be a member of the National Labor Relations Board. The vote was close: 45 to 42, with three southern Democrats voting with the Republican majority: Byrd of Virginia, Holland of Florida and Eastland of Mississippi. The Democrats contended that Beeson had made "flase and misleading statements" to the Labor Committee; Republicans called him "eminently qualified and above reproach."

Economist Edwin C. Nourse told a congressional committee that this year's "economic adjustment" is "much more fundamental than mere inventory trimming." And in Detroit, the CIO auto workers demanded that General Motors end what it called "a short work week or share the work schedules" in G.M. Plants. The union wants a 40-hour work week for regular employees which would mean a layoff for newer employees

And the prosecution's case against four men accused of trying to assassinate CIO President Reuther in 1948 collapsed in Canada when a judge dismissed extradition proceedings against two of the four men.

In Florida, the AFL Teamsters Union decided not to go along with a proposed CIO-AFL "no raiding" agreement until the teamsters get back more than 50-thousand men they claim should have been organized in their union rather than in other unions.

Senator McCarthy today demanded that Army Secretary Stevens take immediate action to undo what he called "the disgraceful coddling of Communists" at Camp Kilmer, New Jersey. He called for action against the commandant, Major General Ralph Sqicker. The general, who testified in sec et, told reporters McCarthy had offered a "colored and slanted version" of his secret testimony.

Army Secretary Stevens says any reserve officer who refuses to answer proper questions on loyalty data will forefeit his commission and be discharged.

The Army today ordered a court martial trial for Corporal Dickenson, the former prisoner in Korea who changed his mind about staying with the enemy and decided to come home. Dickenson will be charged with informing on his fellow prisoners and collaborating with the enemy in Korea.

Paul Phillips, a Negro civic leader in Grand Rapids, Michigan has turned down an offer to be a special assistant to Secretary Oveta Culp Hobby. One reason for this, he said, is because he doesn't know how to explain racial segregation in Washington to his 7-year-old son.

In Palm Springs today, the President played golf with Ben Hogan. On at least one hole - the 9th - the President and Hogan each had a par 4.

The Berlin Conference of the Foreign Ministers ended today, very quietly. It cannot, I think, be classed as either a failure or a success. But if anything of significance occurred it was during the secret sessions. So far as available evidence is concernre, the situation remains as it was. There is to be a meeting in Geneva on April 26th, which will be attended by the Russians, the Chinese Communists and the other nations that had troops in Korea. This conference will discuss not only Korea but the possibility of peace in Indo-China. This means that we will be talking with the Chinese Communists, but we will not recognize them diplomatically. This means that the French Foreign Minister Bidault can take a little something home with him, although he will be severely criticized for not insisting that Indo-China be put at the head of the list for the Geneva Conference.

Nothing is changed in Germany, or in Austria. We don't know whether Dulles and Molotov made any progress in their secret discussions on the President's plan for a peaceful pool of atomic energy.

As if to underline the fact that nothing has changed, about a hundred thousand East Berliners came pouring out into the Unter Den Linden late this afternoon, demanding unification of Germany and denouncing Mr. Dulles and the Western Powers. About fifteen thousand West Berliners met voluntarily to demonstrate for freedom. And as if to re-emphasize the fact that nothing has changed, Mr. Dulles reiterated previous statements that Berlin is regarded as the "first frontier," and that any attack against the city will be treated as an attack against the United States, Britain and France. Mr. Dulles hoped that when "the Russians decide that freedom is not so greatly to be feared" it may be possible to unify Germany and achieve the independence of Austria. Our Secretary of State felt that much has been learned during the Conference, and "it makes it less likely that any of us should by inadvertence and miscalculation do what would risk another war."

This must be regarded as hopeful language. Mr. Dulles contended that the failure to reach agreement with the Russians on Germany or Austria was "due to a fundamental difference between the great powers, which could not be reconciled by mere diplomatic or negotiating skills." It would appear likely that this "fundamental difference" has to do with military rather than with political considerations. Betwe the lines of every speech made in Berlin were considerations of grand strategy. Neither side was willing to yield strategic advantage to the other side by agreeing on either Germany or Austria. The Western Powers wanted the European Defense Community, and the inclusion of Germany in that system. The Russians were determined to retain their advance bases in Austria and East Germany. They will not give up their buffer, which they regard as necessary for the defense of Soviet territory. The Russians would not agree to leave Austria, for the simple reason that their troops there hold a bridgehead covering Czechoslovakia and Hungary against Western attack. Those same forces are in an excellent jumping off position from which to threaten the Po River Valley in Italy. It was the general opinion in Berlin that Mr. Molotov was operating with more personal freedom and intitiative than he had in previous conferences. But he, as was the case with the Western representatives, was bound by considerations of grand strategy. In a world in which the military power on both sides is increasing, no diplomat can give up a powerful position, and none came even close to doing so in Berlin. It would seem that both sides leave Berlin convinced of the correctness and the workability of their own policies; and both sides are free to pursue those policies. The Russians can continue to develop East Germany and the other satellites as forward military positions. And they can continue to watch for signs of internal contradictions in the Western Alliance, and to stimulate and encourage confusion where it may appear. We remain free to pursue our policy of creating a European Army. The French Government is going to press for an immediate decision as to whether the French will join. Our officials in Paris are "professionally optimistic." But what the French do on this subject is anybody's guess. They are determined above everything else to stop the war in Indo-Chian. The Russians might be able to bring that about. We could conceivably do it, if we were prepared to bargain with Communist China. Whatever happens, it is the opinion of many experienced observers in France that her decision on the European Army will be the most fateful that that country has taken in a century. If Mr. Dulles is right in saying that the two sides now understand each other's position to the point where neither will stumble or fall into war, as a result of ignorance or misapprehension, then that fact alone must loom big on the credit side of the Berlin Conference. But the military position remains unchanged, the balance of power unaltered; and it is unlikely that either side registered any considerable gains in the field of psychological warfare. So the four men decided that the position in Europe being frozen, they would go to Geneva in late April to talk about Korea and Indo-China where the situation is rather more fluid.

To this reporter the gentle collapse of the Berlin Conference provided no grounds for joy or consternation. It merely recognized the existence of two presentl irreconcilable power positions in Europe. Still, there will be another meeting at the end of April. It may accomplish little or nothing; but as most soldiers will tell you, talking is better than fighting.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Shakespeare once wrote: "A peace is of the nature of a conquest, for then both parties nobly are subdued, and neither party loses." In Berlin neither party was subdued, and neither party lost. No one can read the future, diplomatically or militarily. Even Confucius couldn't do that, but he did counsel that "want of patience in small matters confounds great plans."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday Feb 19 1954

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles returned to Washington today from the Berlin conference, and told reporters: Russia has not changed her desire for world conquest. They are not willing to "let go their grip anywhere." They would like to extend it if they could. Mr. Dulles believes, that while no progress was made on uniting Germany or liberating Austria, the prospects for European unity were increased. BY [redacted] "the Berlin disclosure of the Russian purpose." The Secretary also said that the forthcoming Geneva conference, on Korea and Indo-China, is "precisely what we have always sought." [redacted]

Before Mr. Dulles' plane arrived, the 17 nations who fought in Korea voted to accept the Berlin agreement to meet in Geneva. And they agreed to abandon the [redacted] talks at Panmunjom. But this decision came after the South Koreans.. through their government in Seoul, and their ambassador in Washington.. made known their view, that the western ministers were guilty of "appeasement", for agreeing to meet with the Communist Chinese at Geneva. The same reaction was reported from the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa. And the West German government attacked the Russians for [redacted] "preventing the restoration of freedom" in the Soviet zone of Germany. And in Vienna, 20-thousand Austrians demonstrated against the Russian refusal to grant independence to their country.

In Indo China, French General Navarre, the top commander, told reporters: the present enemy offensive in Laos has been blocked... he believes the current campaign will end in a [redacted] stalemate [redacted] this year, and he doesn't foresee a decisive FRENCH victory next year. General Navarre says it would be "unthinkable" for Americans to train native troops. But French Defense Minister Pleven, who is now in Indo-China, told reporters that "extensive" aid from the United States is "indispensable" for the French, in their fight against the Vietminh.

In Washington today the Senate Judiciary Committee made public ten charges it has received [redacted] in opposition to Earl Warren's nomination to be chief justice of the United States. These charges ranged from "following the Marxist line" to appointing and promoting dishonest judges in California. The committee counsel acknowledged that none of the charges have been evaluated..none of the names or addresses of the persons making the charges have been checked. [redacted]

Chairman Langer said its the public's business to put the charges on record. But Vice President Nixon issued a statement calling them "completely fantastic and patently false". He urged the committee to investigate those who made the charges. And California's Senator Knowland SAID these [redacted] "untrue" charges "constitute the most shocking event I have observed in my eight years in the Senate." He said if procedures of this kind continue, the "dignity and responsibility of the Senate will suffer."

In Albany, New York, today, Senator Mc Carthy heard former Daily Worker reporter Jean Arsenault identify six General Electric employes as [redacted] one-time Communists. All six men refused to say whether this is true. And the Army today rejected McCarthy's demand that he be given, within 24 hours, the names of all persons involved in the promotion and HONORABLE discharge of [redacted] a former major whom MCCARTHY [redacted] called "a Communist party leader."

[redacted] a committee." Deputy Attorney General [redacted] says one of Warren's critics is a fugitive from justice, and is "completely unreliable." Chairman Langer insists "it is the public's business" to make the charges public.

In Albany today, Jean Arsenault told Senator McCarthy that six General Electric employes are Communists. All six men refused to say whether this is true

Bernard M. Shanley, special counsel to the President, said today he made "an unfortunate mistake" when he charged in a speech that all federal employes dropped under the Eisenhower Administration were "subversives." Shanley said he knows that was not true.. "it was done inadvertently."

Democratic Senator George today proposed that the present $600 personal income tax exemption be increased to $800 this year and one thousand dollars next year. This would cost the government four and a half billions in 1954 and 10 billions next year. Senator George says: "If we are courageous enough to take this step before the economy falls flat on its face we can be of some service to the country." [redacted]

5

[redacted]

Republican Senator Bricker today accused Secretary of State Dulles of doing a "legal somersault" in opposing the Bricker treaty-limiting amendment now.....whereas he voiced no objections to it last year.

And Colorado's Governor Thornton says Clarence Manion was fired as chairman of the President's commission on Inter-governmental relations because Manion did not have time for the job. Manion says he was dismissed because he supported the Bricker amendment.

IN Karachi, Turkey and Pakistan announced that they have agreed to seek closer political and economic collaboration.

Edward R. Murrow: February 19, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

The Foreign Ministers at Berlin agreed on only two subjects. One was to hold the conference in Geneva on peace in Korea and Indo-China. The other was to conduct private talks on disarmament as called for by a United Nations resolution last November. This second agreement has attracted little attention. In the communique it read almost as though the Ministers put it in to show that they had agreed on at least two things instead of one.

To agree to talk about disarmament represents next to nothing in terms of achievement. The mention of disarmament has by now come to mean little more than propaganda. The governments so use it. One can say this without being cynical. We live in an epoch of an unprecedented rivalry for power, and the time has not come when the leading nations are willing to dismantle that power. They do not even agree on how to go about it safely when the time for disarmament does come. It is true that armaments are not the only expression for power, but they are the heart of it. Actual disarmament can only come when the great nations are ready to settle the basic issues that produce the power rivalry. The Berlin Conference itself is proof that the great nations are not ready to change the present balance of power. If neither side is ready to give in on Germany and Austria, neither is going to do it in terms of armaments.

But the fact that disarmament is now only a propaganda theme should not obscure what is at stake. Most large nations are staggering under the weight of costly arms. The destructiveness of modern weapons has become fantastically great. Safety from annihilation or damage in war is at the lowest point in history. So it pays politically to talk about disarmament even though the time for actually disarming may be far away. It pays the West to keep repeating that it wants complete disarmament under strictest controls just as soon as it becomes feasible. Obviously the Kremlin thinks it pays to talk about percentage-wise arms reduction, and outlawing atomic weapons, and a world conference on disarmament. This propaganda battle is part of the fight for the minds of men. The West has the constructive case in being committed to genuine disarmament under foolproof controls. The Kremlin's case is really counter-propaganda, an effort to befuddle the thinking on the West's case.

Only once has the Soviet Union proposed true disarmament; that was in the League of Nations, back in 1925. That was when Russia was weak and impoverished by world war and civil war and the other nations had most of the strength. But now the Soviet Union is mighty,and obsessed with dreams of becoming still more mighty. Our proposals for complete disarmament would put an end to those dreams. So we must expect the Soviet Union to go on with its counter-propaganda.

It needs to be asked now and then whether we are being as effective in our disarmament propaganda as the Russians. In Berlin it was Mr. Molotov who raised the disarmament issue most forcibly. Monsieur Bidault of France did include a mention of it in his opening speech. But Mr. Molotov made much more of the theme. He said that disarmament was one of the subjects that had to be discussed if tensions were to be reduced, and he called for a World Disarmament Conference.

This was a familiar Soviet gambit. It is precisely the one Mr. Vishinsky used at the last meeting of the United Nations Assembly. And the answer today is the same one given at the U.N. - that there is no point in holding a world conference until the existing machinery has been fully used to prepare for it. And it is in the work of preparation that the Soviet Union has been particularly unyielding.

As it turned out, the agreement in Berlin was to do precisely what the Assembly recommended - to hold secret talks among the powers particularly concerned. For that was the way the final version of the Assembly resolution read after adoption of an amended Indian amendment. It also is what President Eisenhower quoted in his atom-pool speech to the United Nations in December, and said that the United States was ready to hold such talks immediately.

So the agreement on disarmament in Berlin was not reached under Soviet pressure. But it is not good propaganda to have to explain that though we agreed to do something on a point the Russians raised, it is the Russians who moved in our direction, not we who moved in the Russian direction.

Actually we have been far too quiet in our recent disarmament and peace propaganda. We still want disarmament as soon as it can safely be had, and ~~we~~ many of us still believe it is the only complete security against World War Three. But we have let the Russians do what they do so well - steal our own best words. They now even say it is they who want effective international inspection of arms reduction.

When President Eisenhower made his atomic-pool speech, he did not repeat the warm endorsement of disarmament which had brought his speech of last April world-wide acclaim. It is not good propaganda to have to explain that ~~XXXXXX~~ in spite of our silence we are the ones who want real disarmament. President Eisenhower could have proved it in his December speech. Mr. Dulles could have spoken out before Mr. Molotov did in Berlin.

We may be tired of hearing about disarmament ourselves, knowing it is still far away. But the world that notes what Molotov and Vishinsky have to say about it should welcome all we can say with even greater interest.

WORD FOR THE DAY February 19, 1954.

There is nothing new in the search for disarmament and real peace. In 400 B.C. Isocrates wrote: "We stand in need of some durable plan which will for ever put an end to our hostilities, and unite us by the lasting ties of mutual affection and fidelity." But the present position in the world was probably best summed up by Arnold Brecht, when he said: "Peace is today at best a balancing of fears."

Goodnight and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Secretary of State Dulles returned to Washington today from the Berlin conference and told reporters: Russia has not changed her desire for world conquest. They are not willing to "let go their grip anywhere." They would like to extend it if they could. Mr. Dulles believes that while no progress was made on uniting Germany or liberating Austria, the prospects for European unity were increased, by "the Berlin disclosure of the Russian purpose." The Secretary also said that the forthcoming Geneva conference on Korea and Indo-China is "precisely what we have always sought."

Before Mr. Dulles' plane arrived, the 17 nations who fought in Korea voted to accept the Berlin agreement to meet in Geneva. And they agreed to abandon the talks at Panmunjom. But this decision came after the South Koreans, through their government in Seoul and their ambassador in Washington made known their view that the western ministers were guilty of "appeasement" for agreeing to meet with the Communist Chinese at Geneva. The same reaction was reported from the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa. And the West German government attacked the Russians for "preventing the restoration of freedom" in the Soviet zone of Germany. And in Vienna, 20-thousand Austrians demonstrated against the Russian refusal to grant independence to their country.

In Indo China, French General Navarre, the top commander, told reporters: the present enemy offensive in Laos has been blocked - he believes the current campaign will end in a stalemate this year and he doesn't foresee a decisive French victory next year. General Navarre says it would be "unthinkable" for Americans to train native troops. But French Defense Minister Pleven, who is now in Indo-China, told reporters that "extensive" aid from the United States is "indispensable" for the French in their fight against the Vietminh.

In Washington today the Senate Judiciary Committee made public ten charges it has received in opposition to Earl Warren's nomination to be chief justice of the United States. These charges ranged from "following the Marxist line" to appointing and promoting dishonest judges in California. The committee counsel acknowledged that none of the charges have been evaluated - none of the names or addresses of the persons making the charges have been checked. Chairman Langer said its the public's business to put the charges on record. But Vice President Nixon issued a statement calling them "completely fantastic and patently false." He urged the committee to investigate those who made the charges. And California's Senator Knowland said these "untrue" charges "constitute the most shocking event I have observed in my eight years in the Senate." He said if procedures of this kind continue the "dignity and responsibility of the Senate will suffer."

In Albany, New York, today Senator McCarthy heard former Daily Worker reporter Jean Arsenault identify six General Electric employees as one-time Communists. All six men refused to say whether this is true. And the Army today rejected McCarthy's demand that he be given, within 24 hours, the names of all persons involved in the promotion and honorable discharge of a former major whom McCarthy called "a Communist party leader."

Bernard M. Shanley, special counsel to the President, said today he made "an unfortunate mistake" when he charged in a speech that all federal employees dropped under the Eisenhower Administration were "subversives." Shanley said he knows that was not true - "it was done inadvertently."

Democratic Senator George today proposed that the present $600 personal income tax exemption be increased to $800 this year and one thousand dollars next year. This would cost the government four and a half billions in 1954 and 10 billions next year. Senator George says: "If we are courageous enough to take this step before the economy falls flat on its face we can be of some service to the country."

Republican Senator Bricker today accused Secretary of State Dulles of doing a "legal somersault" in opposing the Bricker treaty-limiting amendment now - whereas he voiced no objections to it last year.

And Colorado's Governor Thornton says Clarence Manion was fired as chairman of the President's commission on Inter-governmental relations because Manion did not have time for the job. Manion says he was dismissed because he supported the Bricker amendment.

In Karachi, Turkey and Pakistan announced that they have agreed to seek closer political and economic collaboration.

The Foreign Ministers at Berlin agreed on only two subjects. One was to hold the conference in Geneva on peace in Korea and Indo-China. The other was to conduct private talks on disarmament as called for by a United Nations resolution last November. This second agreement has attracted little attention. In the communique it read almost as though the Ministers put it in to show that they had agreed on at least two things instead of one.

To agree to talk about disarmament represents next to nothing in terms of achievement. The mention of disarmament has by now come to mean little more than propaganda. The governments so use it. One can say this without being cynical. We live in an epoch of an unprecendented rivalry for power, and the time has not come when the leading nations are willing to dismantle that power. They do not even agree on how to go about it safely when the time for disarmament does come. It is true that armaments are not the only expression for power, but they are the heart of it. Actual disarmament can only come when the great nations are ready to settle the basic issues that produce the power rivalry. The BErlin Conference itself is proof that the great nations are not ready to change the present balance of power. If neither side is ready to give in on Germany and Austria, neither is going to do it in terms of armaments.

But the fact that disarmament is now only a propaganda theme should not obscure what is at stake. Most large nations are staggering under the weight of costly arms. The destructiveness of modern weapons has become fantastically great. Safety from annihilation or damage in war is at the lowest point in history. So it pays politically to talk about disarmament even though the time for actually disarming may be far away. It pays the West to keep repeating that it wants complete disarmament under strictest controls just as soon as it becomes feasible. Obviously the Kremlin thinks it pays to talk about percentage-wise arms reduction, and outlawing atomic weapons, and a world conference on disarmament. This propaganda battle is part of the fight for the minds of men. The West has the constructive case in being committed to genuine disarmament under foolproof controls. The Kremlin's case is really counter-propaganda, an effort to befuddle the thinking on the West's case.

Only once has the Soviet Union proposed true disarmament; that was in the League of Nations, back in 1925. That was when Russia was weak and impoverished by world war and civil war and the other nations had most of the strength. But now the Soviet Union is mighty, and obsessed with dreams of becoming still more mighty. Our proposals for complete disarmament would put an end to those dreams. So we must expect the Soviet Union to go on with its counter-propaganda.

It needs to be asked now and then whether we are being as effective in our disarmament propaganda as the Russians. In Berlin it was Mr. Molotov who raised the disarmament issue most forcible. Monsieur Bidault of France did include a mention of it in his opening speech. But Mr. Molotov made much more of the theme. He said that disarmament was one of the subjects that had to be discussed if tensions were to be reduced, and he called for a World Disarmament Conference.

This was a familiar Soviet gambit. It is precisely the one Mr. Vishinsky used at the last meeting of the United Nations Assembly. And the answer today is the same one given at the U.N. - that there is no point in holding a world conference until the existing machinery has been fully used to prepare for it. And it is in the work of preparation that the Soviet Union has been particularly unyielding.

As it turned out, the agreement in Berlin was to do precisely what the Assembly recommended - to hold secret talks among the powers particularly concerned. For that was the way the final version of the Assembly resolution read after adoption of an amended Indian amendment. It also is what President Eisenhower quoted in his atom-pool speech to the United Nations in December, and said that the United States was ready to hold such talks immediately.

So the agreement on disarmament in Berlin was not reached under soviet pressure. But it is not good propaganda to have to explain that though we agreed to do something on a point the Russians raised, it is the Russians who moved in our direction, not we who moved in the Russian direction.

Actually we have been far too quiet in our recent disarmament and peace propaganda. We still want disarmament as soon as it can safely be had, and many of us still believe it is the only complete security against World War Three. But we have let the Russians do what they do so well - steal our own best words. They now even say it is they who want effective international inspection of arms reduction.

When President Eisenhower made his atomic-pobl speech, he did not repeat the warm endorsement of disarmament which had brought his speech of last April world-wide acclaim. It is not good propaganda to have to explain that in spite of our silence we are the ones who want real disarmament. President Eisenhower could have proved it in his December speech. Mr. Dulles could have spoken out before Mr. Molotov did in Berlin. We may be tired of hearing about disarmament ourselves, knowing it is still far away. But the world that notes what Molotov and Vishinsky have to say about it should welcome all we can say with even greater interest.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: There is nothing new in the search for disarmament and real peace. In 400 B.C. Socrates wrote: "We stand in need of some durable plan which will for ever put an end to our hostilities, and unite us by the lasting ties of mutual affection and fidelity." But the present position in the world was probably best summed up by Arnold Brecht, when he said: "Peace is today at best a balancing of fears."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday, Feb. 22, 1954

This is the news:

India's Prime Minister Nehru today called for a cease-fire in Indo-China. But Nehru made it clear, [redacted]" that his country would bear no responsibility for such a move in what he called "the endless war." #I should like to discuss the Nehru proposal in a few minutes.

Secretary of State Dulles today told 15 key members of Congress that at the forthcoming Geneva conference on Asian questions, the United States will not recognize the Chinese Communists. He said Russia has formally agreed to this condition for the meeting.

Tonight, Senate Republican Leader Knowland--who was among those who heard the Secretary's secret report--said in New York that he has "[redacted] "substanial misgivings" about meeting with the Chinese Communists. He hopes the Geneva conference will not turn out to be "a Far Eastern Munich." (HE) says the American people will want to know what price is expected to be paid for a Far Eastern settlement. And he feels that we should have avoided an agreement to sit-in on a discussion of the war in Indo-China. #If the French insisted on such a discussion, Senator Knowland would have the French talk "on their own responsibility."

Knowland also said today that it would be "a logical step" for us to give military aid to Pakistan. His comment came after Pakistan's Prime Minister Mohammed Ali, announced that his country is asking for military help, to achieve more defensive strength, and more economic stability.

Prime Minister Nehru told his Parliament that such help from America to Pakistan "instead of adding to the security of the region it adds to the tensions of the region, and it adds to fears." Nehru said his country doesn't want to enter into the cold war "and we do not want others to do so, either."

In Washington tonight, Former President Hoover said, he sees no signs of another depression "anywhere on the landscape at this time." Mr. Hoover, in the speech to the American Good Government Society, said he was credited with constructing the depression of 1931 to 1941... even had it named after him.. although he disclaims the "overdone honor." He said the "present trouble" comes from a mixture of surplus production, and dehydrated optomism. He added: "You can have high confidence, that this is only a passing dip.. a slump... readjustment... or a recession...not a great depression."

Senator Mc Carthy said today his committee is investigating what he called "another phase of THE army's handling of Communists"...not connected with the Peress case that has embroiled him in an argument with Army Secretary Stevens. Mc Carthy charges that Major Peress was honorably discharged from the army although the senator called him a Communist. Last week at Camp Kilmer, New Jersey, Brigadier General Zwicker, the camp commandant, explained that any actions he took on Peress were caused by orders from above. Later the General charged that McCarthy had abused him. Then Army Secretary Stevens ordered army officers not to answer supbenas from Mc Carthy. He said the Senator had been abusive to army witnesses.. was undermining morale and giving officers humiliating treatment. TODAY the committee released the transcript of the hearing. It shows that McCarthy told General Zwicker he was not fit to wear the uniform.. was hemming and hawing on questions a five-year-old could answer. And when Zwicker said McCarthy was impuging his honesty the Senator said: "Either your honesty or your intelligence." Today, in Philadelphia, where HE was awarded a gold medal by the local chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution, McCarthy read much of the transcript on Zwicker and said that his questioning had been too temperate. If he were to do it over he'd use "much stronger language." And he called Army Secretary Stevens "one of the finest dupes I've ever met"... called him a loyal American who has been much abused "by hangovers from the last Administration."

Secretary Stevens, at Valley Forge, acepted a gold medal from Freedom Foundation on behalf of the armed forces. He said in part: "I intend to support the loyal men and women of our army." Stevens was to testify before McCarthy tomorrow.. that's been postponed pending another investigation.

The White House today declined to say whether Secretary Stevens has the President's personal support in the controversey with Senator McCarthy.

A government-appointed committee of polio experts reported tonight that in last summer's first wide use of Gamma Globulin to combat polio "beneficial effects were not demonstrated." # ~~The National Foundation [illegible] that [illegible] would NOT rule out the possibility [illegible] of G.G. in epidemic a[illegible]~~

In London today, the British government announced that atom bombs "are now being delivered" to a rapidly expanding Royal air force. And the Air Ministry says recent rocket tests in Australia "foreshadow the most important developments in air defense since the invention of radar."

Here in New York, more than 10-thousand persons rioted in a shopping rush for holiday bargains. At least a dozen persons were injured or fainted in an effort to get marked-down items at Hearns Department store. The store's president said this was the biggest volume sales day in its history.

Edward R. Murrow: February 22, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

India's Prime Minister Nehru, in a far-ranging speech, has issued an "earnest and humble plea" for a cease fire in Indo-China. / He told India's Parliament it would seem a tremendous pity that this terrible war should continue, when a serious effort to settle it is scheduled to take place between the Big Four and Communist China. / Mr. Nehru said: "It is desirable, I think, to have some kind of cease fire, without any party giving up its position." And then he went on to say, that it is not India's desire to interfere, or shoulder any responsibility in this connection. He described the war in Indo-China as an endless war; "nowadays, once even a little war starts, it just goes on and on."

Mr. Nehru clearly believes that the great powers have misguided ideas of what is security. Speaking of American military aid to Pakistan, he said that some people behind this proposal might think it would develop military security in the region. # But Mr. Nehru is absolutely certain, that instead of adding to the security of the region, it adds to the tensions. It adds to feelings of insecurity in Asia; and it adds to the fears. And he said: "A soldier's idea of security, and a politician's or statesman's are not the same. When a soldier's voice comes first in peacetime, then it is likely that peace will be converted into war." Mr. Nehru sees the possible presence of American military personnel in Pakistan as "a reversal of history." He said: "One of the symbols of our independence has been the withdrawal of foreign armed forces. Whatever the motive may be, the return of foreign armed forces from any European or American country would mean turning the clock back for us."

There are many difficulties in the way of Mr. Nehru's proposal for a cease fire in Indo-China. There is no fixed front there, as there was in Korea. The French, desperate as they are to end the fighting, do not welcome Indian intervention. Mr. Nehru made it clear that his country doesn't seek to mediate or supervise a cease fire; but on the basis of past performance it can be assumed that if anyone wished to act upon his suggestion, the Indians would probably be willing to undertake the role of mediator.

The Indian proposal is made in the shadow of the Geneva Conference, scheduled to be held a couple of months from now, which will deal with the possibility of peace in Korea and in Indo-China. And it is unlikely that any of the powers involved will act immediately upon the Indian suggestion.

Today, both the Russian and Chinese Communist radios were busy expressing the hope that the Geneva Conference would produce peace in Indo-China. Radio Moscow said "there can be no doubt that this conference can help to relax international tension, and to eliminate the difficulties blocking the establishment of peace in Indo-China." # This is a continuation of the Communist theme at the Berlin Conference - holding out to the French the prospect of peace, an end of the war in Asia, if they will refuse to ratify the European Army plan. # French Foreign Minister Bidault, back in Paris, continues to press for early ratification of the European Defense Community; but when the treaty comes out of Committee and is finally debated in the French Parliament, the government will have to satisfy Parliament on three conditions laid down in the debate of last November. The first was that there must be prior agreement with Germany on the Saar - guaranteeing French economic interests and the international political status of the Saar; which means that Germany would have to renounce sovereignty over the area. The second condition was that there must be a new American declaration of support for the European Army, consisting primarily of a statement of our intention to keep American forces on the Continent of Europe. The third condition was, renewed assurance from the British that their forces would remain on the Continent in close association with the European Army.

David Schoenbrun cables me from Paris tonight that he is assured that the second and third conditions - that is the renewed pledges from the United States and Britain - have been virtually guaranteed, but that they will not be announced until the eve of the big ratification debate. That would leave only the big point of a Franco-German agreement on the Saar. And there is virtually no chance of that being reached before the Geneva Conference.

The excuse of the Saar, the prospect of peace in Indo-China, may well cause the French to postpone serious debate on the European Army plan. And if that postponement carries through to the Summer, it is the widespread belief of supporters and opponents of the European Army in France that the European Army plan will be dead so far as France is concerned. If that should happen the stage will be set for what Mr. Dulles has called "the agonizing re-appraisal of our European policy." It will indeed be agonizing for us, and for our Allies, in fact for everybody except the Russians.

Mark Twain once said of George Washington: "What he accomplished was only of minor value. His major value to us, the world and future ages and peoples lies in his permanent and sky-reaching conspiciousness as an influence." One of the foremost creeds of Washington was this: "Labor to keep alive in your heart that little spark of celestial fire--conscience."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Just twenty five years ago - on another Washington's Birthday - Will Rogers remarked: "In Washington's day there was no income tax, no cover charge, no disarmament conferences, no luncheon clubs, no stop lights, no static, no headwinds, no ticket speculators, no golf pants and no Scotch jokes. My Lord, living in those times, who wouldn't be great."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

India's Prime Minister Nehru today called for a cease fire in Indo-China. But Nehru made it clear, "that his country would bear no responsibility for such a move in what he called "the endless war." I should like to discuss the Nehru proposal in a few minutes.

Secretary of State Dulles today told 15 key members of Congress that at the forthcoming Geneva conference on Asian questions, the United States will not recognize the Chinese Communists. He said Russia has formally agreed to this condition for the meeting.

Tonight, Senate Republican Leader Knowland who was among those who heard the Secretary's secret report said in New York he has "substanial misgivings" about meeting with the Chinese Communists. He hopes the Geneva conference will not turn out to be "a Far Eastern Munich." He says the American people will want to know what price is expected to be paid for a Far Eastern settlement. And he feels that we should have avoided an agreement to sit in on a discussion of the war in Indo-China. If the French insisted on such a discussion, Senator Knowland would have the French talk "on their own responsibility." Knowland also said today that it would be "a logical step" for us to give military aid to Pakistan. His comment came after Pakistan's Prime Minister Mohammed Ali announced that his country is asking for military help to achieve more defensive strength and more economic stability.

Prime Minister Nehru told his Parliament that such help from America to Pakistan "instead of adding to the security of the region it adds to the tensions of the region, and it adds to fears." Nehru said his country doesn't want to enter into the cold war "and we do not want others to do so, either."

In Washington tonight, Former President Hoover said he sees no signs of another depression "anywhere on the landscape at this time." Mr. Hoover, in the speech to the American Good Government Society, said he was credited with constructing the depression of 1931 to 1941 even had it named after him although he disclaims the "overdone honor." He said the "present trouble" comes from a mixture of surplus production and dehydrated optimism. He added: "You can have high confidence that this is only a passing dip, a slump, readjustment or a recession - not a great depression."

Senator McCarthy said today his committee is investigating what he called "another phase of the army's handling of Communists" not connected with the Peress case that has embroiled him in an argument with Army Secretary Stevens. McCarthy charges that Major Peress was honorably discharged from the army although the senator called him a Communist. Last week at Camp Kilmer, New Jersey, Brigadier General Zwicker, the camp commandant, explained that any actions he took on Peress were caused by orders from above. Later the General charged that McCarthy had abused him. Then Army Secretary Stevens ordered army officers not to answer subpoenas from McCarthy. He said the Senator had been abusive to army witnesses - was undermining morale and giving officers humiliating treatment. Today the committee released the transcript of the hearing. It shows that McCarthy told General Swicker he was not fit to wear the uniform was hemming and hawing on questions a five-year-old could answer. And when Zwicker said McCarthy was impuging his honesty the Senator said: "Either your honesty or your intelligence." Today, in Philadelphia, where he was awarded a gold medal by the local chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution, McCarthy read much of the transcript on Zwicker and said that his questioning had been too temperate. If he were to do it over he'd use "much stronger language." And he called Army Secretary Stevens "one of the finest dupes I've ever met" called him a loyal American who has been much abused "by hangovers from the last Administration."

Secretary Stevens, at Valley Forge, accepted a gold medal from Freedom Foundation on behalf of the armed forces. He said in part: "I intend to support the loyal men and women of our army." Stevens was to testify before McCarthy tomorrow - that's been postponed pending another investigation.

The White House today declined to say whether Secretary Stevens has the President's personal support in the controversey with Senator McCarthy.

A government-appointed committee of polio experts reported tonight that in last summer's first wide use of Gamma Globulin to combat polio "beneficial effects were not demonstrated."

In London today, the British government announced that atom bombs "are now being delivered" to a rapidly expanding Royal Air Force. And the Air Ministry says recent rocket tests in Australia "foreshadow the most important developments in air defense since the invention of radar."

Here in New York, more thab 10-thousand persons rioted in a shopping rush for holiday bargains. At least a dozen persons were injured or fainted in an effort to get marked down items at Hearns Department store. The store's president said this was the biggest volume sales day in its history.

India's Prime Minister Nehru, in a far-ranging speech, has issued an "earnest and humble plea" for a cease fire in Indo-China. He told India's Parliament it would seem a tremendous pity that this terrible war should continue when a serious effort to settle it is scheduled to take place between the Big Four and Communist China. Mr. Nehru said: "It is desirable, I think, to have some kind of cease fire without any party giving up its position." And then he went on to say that it is not India's desire to interfere, or shoulder any responsibility in this connection. He described the war in Indo-China as an endless war; "nowadays, once even a little war starts it just goes on and on."

Mr. Nehru clearly believes that the great powers have misguided ideas of what is security. Speaking of American military aid to Pakistan he said that some people behind this proposal might think it would develop military security in the region. But Mr. Nehru is absolutely certain that instead of adding to the security of the region, it adds to the tensions. It adds to feelings of insecurity in Asia; and it adds to the fears. And he said: "A soldier's idea of security, and and a politician's or statesman's are not the same. When a soldier's voice comes first in peacetime, then it is likely that peace will be converted into war." Mr. Nehru sees the possible presence of American military personnel in Pakistan as "a reversal of history." He said: "One of the symbols of our independence has been the withdrawal of foreign armed forces. Whatever the motive may be, the return of foreign armed forces from any European or American country would mean turning the clock back for us."

There are many difficulties in the way of Mr. Nehru's proposal for a cease fire in Indo-China. There is no fixed front there, as there was in Korea. The French, desperate as they are to end the fighting, do not welcome Indian intervention. Mr. Nehru made it clear that his country doesn't seek to mediate or supervise a cease fire; but on the basis of past performance it can be assumed that if anyone wished to act upon his suggestion, the Indians would probably be willing to undertake the role of mediator.

The Indian proposal is made in the shadow of the Geneva Conference, scheduled to be held a couple of months from now, which will deal with the possibility of peace in Korea and in Indo-China. And it is unlikely that any of the powers involved will act immediately upon the Indian suggestion.

Today, both the Russian and Chinese Communist radios were busy expressing the hope that the Geneva Conference would produce peace in Inod-China. Radio Moscow said "there can be no doubt that this conference can help to relax international tension, and to eliminate the difficulties blocking the establishment of peace in Indo-China." This is a continuation of the Communist theme at the Berlin Conference - holding out to the French the prospect of peace, an end of the war in Asia, if they will refuse to ratify the European Army plan. French Foreign Minister Bidault, back in Paris, continues to press for early ratification of the European Defense Community; but when the treaty comes out of Committee and is finally debated in the French Parliament, the government will have to satisfy Parliament on three conditions laid down in the debate of last November. The first was, that there must be prior agreement with Germany on the Saar - guaranteeing French economic interests and the international political status of the Saar; which means that Germany would have to renounce sovereignty over the area. The second condition was that there must be a new American declaration of support for the European Army, consisting primarily of a statement of our intention to keep American forces on the Continent of Europe. The third condition was, renewed assurance from the British that their forces would remain on the Continent in close association with the European Army.

David Schoenbrun cables me from Paris tonight that he is assured that the second and third conditions - that is the renewed pledges from the United States and Britain - have been virtually guaranteed, but that they will not be announced until the eve of the big ratification debate. That would leave only the big point of a Franco-German agreement on the Saar. And there is virtually no chance of that being reached before the Geneva Conference.

The excuse of the Saar, the prospect of peace in Indo-China, may well cause the French to postpone serious debate on the European Army plan. And if that postponement carries through to the Summer, it is the widespread belief of supporters and opponents of the European Army in France that the European Army plan will be dead so far as France is concerned. If that should happen the stage will be set for what Mr. Dulles has called "the agonizing re-appraisal of our European policy." It will indeed be agonizing for us, and for our Allies, in fact for everybody except the Russians.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Mark Twain once said of George Washington: "What he accomplished was only of minor value. His major value to us, the world and future ages and peoples lies in his permanent and sky-reaching conspiciousness as an influence." One of the foremost creeds of Washington was this: "Labor to keep alive in your heart that little spark of celestial fire - conscience." - Good Nite and Good Luck!

Tuesday Feb. 23, 1954

This is the news:

Senator McCarthy charged today that the army now employs a woman in its code room who was, and still may be, an active Communist party member. The woman, Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, says she never was a member of the party. The Army says as a result of its own investigation, before the McCarthy hearing, Mrs. Moss was shifted to an unclassified job early in February. The army says she never had access to secret codes, or uncoded secrets. After hearing a former F.B.I. undercover agent identify Mrs. Moss as having been a member of a Communist group early in 1944, Senator McCarthy said both the army and the Civil Service Commission have had this information for months. The Senator also took occasion to tell an army representative in the hearing room that he was very much disturbed by calls Army Secretary Stevens has made on other committee members, in reference to recent testimony by Brigadier General Zwicker.. which I'd like to discuss in a few minutes.

The House un-American Activities Committee today heard Mrs. Victoria Stone of New York refuse to answer more than 60 questions on the ground that it might tend to incriminate her. When committee members said they had testimony linking her to a Soviet spy ring, Mrs. Stone said:

"I have definitely denied it time and time again and I refuse to answer again." She said she is not and never has been a Communist.

State Department officials have told the House Appropriations Committee that 590 employes were released as security risks last year. Eleven of these persons were fired on grounds of questionable loyalty.. the rest either resigned... were let out for economy reasons, retired or left when their work was completed. Of the total group, 291 got jobs with other government agencies.

Secretary of State Dulles today repeated his assurance that "the United States will in no case recognize Communist China." Yesterday he told Congressional leaders the Geneva conference on Asian questions will not result in (CHINA'S) recognition. Today he told the same thing to the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Assistant Secretary of State Robertson has told a House committee that since 1949 the Chinese Communists have killed about 15 million of their own people in what he called "just about the bloodiest pattern the Communists have followed in any country in the world." He said the deaths were due to murder and starvation.

Robertson warns that for the foreseeable future we must anticipate "emergencies, crises and problems of the greatest importance and magnitude in Asia.

The French in Indo-China announce that the Communists have suddenly withdrawn from the advanced positions they held near the capital of Laos. There is no indication whether the enemy will launch new attacks elsewhere.

In Berlin today, West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer pledged "a tireless fight" to liberate 18 million Germans in the Soviet zone. He said the recent Big Four foreign ministers conference was "successful because it exposed Moscow's policy..to keep things as they are until the Russians can dominate all Europe." He said the western foreign ministers acted so well in Germany's interest "that no Germans could have done it better."

~~Prime Minister Churchill told his Parliament today that he has always favored organizing the United Nations on the basis of smaller regional groups.~~

The Vatican says Pope Pius's recovery has slowed down. ~~He is~~

And He [redacted] he still needs a "notable period of assiduous care."

In Washington, Republican Senator Jenner of Indiana, speaking in support of the Bricker amdnement to limit the President's treaty-making powers, told his colleagues: the United Nations charter contains the seeds of power to deprive our states of a Republican form of government, [redacted] He charged that A GROUP he identified only as "a secret revolutionary political corps", is trying to undermine the constiution. He called this group "a fourth branch of the government."

The Justice Department says a federal grand jury has indicted 18 persons and seven corporations ..most of them on charges of CONSPIRING to violate a false statements law. This was in connection with the purchase of surplus government tankers. Among the individuals indicted, are former Representative Casey of Massachusetts, and JULIUS C. Holmes, former minister to Great Britain, who is now a special assistant to Secretary of State Dulles on matters concerning Trieste. Holmes says he is innocent of any wrong doing.

Out in Palm Springs, two men who drove up to the ranch where the President is vacationing and asked to see him, were arrested by Secret Service agents and described as drunken vagrants. They had an unloaded rifle and some shells in the back of their old car.

Edward R. Murrow: February 23, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

When the transcript of a sensational attack by Senator McCarthy on a witness is published it is natural to expect it to supply the reason for the attack. Senator McCarthy last night read passages from the transcript of his examination of General Ralph Zwicker, commandant of Fort Killmer. That was in a speech accepting a gold medal from the Sons of the American Revolution. Now the whole transcript of the General's examination has been published. It fails to answer the question that needs clarification if the public is to judge whether Senator McCarthy was justified in denouncing the General.

The Senator at the hearing was trying to show that General Zwicker should have delayed the honorable discharge of Major Irving Peress, a dental officer, which he had been ordered to give. The Senator thought he should have done it because of evidence about Peress heard by his sub-committee. This evidence had been heard after the General had received orders to give the honorable discharge. The Senator passionately denied General Zwicker's fitness for command on the ground that he did not postpone the action.

What needs to be made clear, if possible, is why the General did not act. He said it was because the evidence ~~of~~ the McCarthy sub-committee on Peress was about matters already known to those who ordered the honorable discharge.

Senator McCarthy at the hearing presented the General with this analogy. Suppose a major was about to be honorably discharged, and someone brought him evidence the day before that he had committed a fifty-dollar theft. Would the General delay the honorable discharge? The General said he would, so as to check the facts. Then why not do it if the allegation was membership in a Communist conspiracy?, Senator McCarthy asked.

The way the question was put made it sound as though the General did not think that membership in a Communist conspiracy was as bad as a fifty-dollar theft. But the General patiently explained that he did not postpone the discharge on his own initiative because he knew of no evidence before the McCarthy committee which had not been known to those who ordered the discharge. That is, without new evidence, he couldn't interfere. He had not heard of any new evidence. And even the statement of an under-cover agent that Major Peress had been the liaison between his communist cell and the American Labor Party was not, he said, substantially new.

Surely the issue insofar as General Zwicker is concerned is whether the McCarthy sub-committee had produced evidence the Army had not known, so that the General would be justified in postponing the discharge. The transcript does not show that Senator McCarthy tried to establish that the evidence it had produced was of this kind. New or not, he used it as a basis to attack the fitness of General Zwicker for command.

Last night Senator McCarthy told his audience that he had been too temperate in the attack, and if he had it to do over again he would be even more vigorous. But last night he did not attempt to show that the General had been given the new facts he needs for action. All he did was to strengthen his attack. It is a familiar stratagem to strengthen an accusation without strengthening the evidence. In present-day America, charges are easily mistaken for evidence, something Senator McCarthy well knows.

People who have read only of the abuse heaped on General Zwicker may not realize what Army Secretary Stevens last week wrote Senator McCarthy about the Peress case. He told the Senator new procedures had been ordered so that another Peress case would not occur. He also told the Senator that he did not believe a man should be given a commission who refused to answer properly-asked questions about his loyalty. That is what Dr. Peress had done in pleading the Fifth Amendment at the McCarthy hearing. It can't happen again, Mr. Stevens assured the Senator.

But he also told him that what had been done could not well be undone. "The separation of an officer under circumstances such as this" he wrote, "is a final action, and there is no means of which I am aware by which the action could be successfully reversed." He said the only new fact available to the Army on which charges could be based was the refusal to answer questions before the committee. A previous case based on a similar charge, he told the Senator, had failed in courts-martial.

All this General Zwicker knew before he testified. And so did Senator McCarthy. So what the Senator was trying to do was to maneuver the General into criticizing his orders and those who issued them. The General did say that he thought Communists should not receive commissions or honorable discharges. But he was under Presidential orders not to testify on security matters, and when pressed to violate the order he refused. When he refused he was abused.

There may not be any permanent harm in this abuse, but more is at stake than a scolding by Senator McCarthy. What is at issue is whether a Senator is to delve into departmental matters, goad subordinates into criticism of their superiors, taint them with insinuations of communist sympathies, and impugn their judgment and integrity, to the demoralization of the department.

This is not the way Senate investigations are supposed - or entitled - to function. They do have a proper and important role in our system of government. This is not the role.

It would seem that these words, written by Bishop Henry Codman Potter, are still quite appropriate:"The truth for us to remember at all times, and especially in these times, is the truth that the hope of the nation is not in its forms of government, not in the wisdom or equity of its executives, nor in the justice or purity of its administration, so much as in the evaluation and redemption of individual character among its people."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Senator McCarthy charged today that the army now employs a woman in its code room who was and still may be an active Communist party member. The woman, Mrs. Annie Lee Moss says she never was a member of the party. The Army says as a result of its own investigation, before the McCarthy hearing, Mrs. Moss was shifted to an unclassified job early in February. The army says she never had access to secret codes or uncoded secrets. After hearing a former FBI undercover agent identify Mrs. Moss as having been a member of a Communist group early in 1944, Senator McCarthy said both the army and the Civil Service Commission have had this information for months. The Senator also took occasion to tell an army representative in the hearing room that he was very much disturbed by calls Army Secretary Stevens has made on other committee members in reference to recent testimony by Brigadier General Swicker which I'd like to discuss in a few minutes.

The House un-American Activities Committee today heard Mrs. Victoria Stone of New York refuse to answer more than 60 questions on the ground that it might tend to incriminate her. When committee members said they had testimony linking her to a Soviet spy ring, Mrs. Stone said: "I have definitely denied it time and time again and I refuse to answer again." She said she is not and never has been a Communist.

State Department officials have told the House Appropriations Committee that 590 employees were released as security risks last year. Eleven of these persons were fired on grounds of questionable loyalty - the rest either resigned - were let out for economy reasons, retired or left when their work was completed. Of the total group, 291 got jobs with other government agencies.

Secretary of State Dulles today repeated his assurance that "the United States will in no case recognize Communist China." Yesterday he told Congressional leaders the Geneva conference on Asian questions will not result in China's recognition. Today he told the same thing to the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Assistant Secretary of State Robertson has told a House committee, that since 1949 the Chinese Communists have killed about 15 million of their own people in what he called "just about the bloodiest pattern the Communists have followed in any country in the world." He said the deaths were due to murder and starvation.

Robertson warns that for the foreseeable future we must anticipate "emergencie crises and problems of the greatest importance and magnitude" in Asia.

The French in Indo-China announce that the Communists have suddenly withdrawn from the advanced positions they held near the capital of Laos. There is no indication whether the enemy will launch new attacks elsewhere.

In Berlin today, West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer pledged "a tireless fight" to liberate 18 million Germans in the Soviet zone. He said the recent Big Four foreign ministers conference was "successful" because it exposed Moscow's policy to keep things as they are until the Russians can dominate all Europe. He said the western foreign ministers acted so well in Germany's interest "that no Germans could have done it better."

The Vatican says Pope Pius's recovery has slowed down and he still needs a "notable period of assiduous care."

In Washington, Republican Senator Jenner of Indiana, speaking in support of the Bricker amendment to limit the President's treaty-making powers, told his colleagues: the United Nations charter contains the seeds of power to deprive our states of a Republican form of government. He charged that a group he identified only as "a secret revolutionary political corps" is trying to undermine the constitution. He called this group "a fourth branch of the government."

The Justice Department says a federal grand jury has indicted 18 persons and seven corporations most of them on charges of conspiring to violate a false statements law. This was in connection with the purchase of surplus government tankers. Among the individuals indicted are former Representative Casey of Massachusetts and Julius C. Holmes, former minister to Great Britain, who is now a special assistant to Secretary of State Dulles on matters concerning Trieste. Holmes says he is innocent of any wrongdoing.

Out in Palm Springs, two men who drove up to the ranch where the President is vacationing and asked to see him, were arrested by Secret Service agents and described as drunken vagrants." They had an unloaded rifle and some shells in the back of their old car.

When the transcript of a sensational attack by Senator McCarthy on a witness is published it is natural to expect it to supply the reason for the attack. Senator McCarthy last night read passages from the transcript of his examination of General Ralph Zwicker, commandant of Fort Killmer. That was in a speech accepting a gold medal from the Sons of the American Revolution. Now the whole transcript of the General's examination has been published. It fails to answer the question that needs clarification if the public is to judge whether Senator McCarthy was justified in denouncing the General.

The Senator at the hearing was trying to show that General Zwicker should have delayed the honorable discharge of Major Irving Peress, a dental officer, which he had been ordered to give. The Senator thought he should have done it because of evidence about Peress heard by his sub-committee. This evidence had been heard after the General had received orders to give the honorable discharge. The Senator passionately denied General Zwicker's fitness for command on the ground that he did not postpone the action.

What needs to be made clear, if possible, is why the General did not act. He said it was because the evidence of the McCarthy sub-committee on Peress was about matters already known to those who ordered the honorable discharge. Senator McCarthy McCarthy at the hearing presented the General with this analogy. Suppose a major was about to be honorably discharged, and someone brought him evidence the day before that he had committed a fifty-dollar theft. Would the General delay the honorable discharge? The General said he would, so as to check the facts. They why not do it if the allegation was membership in a Communist conspiracy? Senator McCarthy asked. The way the question was put made it sound as though the General did not think that membership in a Communist conspiracy was as bad as a fifty-dollar theft. But the General patiently explained that he did not postpone the discharge on his own initiative because he knew of no evidence before the McCarthy committee which had not been known to those who ordered the discharge. That is, without new evidence, he couldn't interfere. He had not heard of any new evidence. And even the statement of an under-cover agent that Major Peress had been the liaison between his communist cell and the American Labor Party was not, he said, substantially new.

Surely the issue insofar as General Zwicker is concerned is whether the McCarthy sub-committee had produced evidence the Army had not known, so that the General would be justified in postponing the discharge. The transcript does not show that Senator McCarthy tried to establish that the evidence it had produced was of this kind. New or not, he used it as a basis to attack the fitness of General Zwicker for command.

Last night Senator McCarthy told his audience that he had been too temperate in the attack, and if he had it to do over again he would be even more vigorous. But last night he did not attempt to show that the General had been given the new facts he needs for action. All he did was to strengthen his attack. It is a familiar stratagem to strengthen an accusation without strengthening the evidence. In present-day America, charges are easily mistaken for evidence, something Senator McCarthy well knows.

People who have read only of the abuse heaped on General Zwicker may not realize what Army Secretary Stevens last week wrote Senator McCarthy about the Peress case. He told the Senator new procedures had been ordered so that another Peress case would not occur. He also told the Senator that he did not believe a man should be given a commission who refused to answer properly-asked questions about his loyalty. This is what Dr. Peress had done in pleading the Fifth Amendment at the McCarthy hearing. It can't happen again, Mr. Stevens assured the Senator. But he also told him that what had been done could not well be undone. "The separation of an officer under circumstances such as this" he wrote, "is a final action, and there is no means of which I am aware by which the action could be successfully reversed." He said the only new fact available to the Army on which charges could be based was the refusal to answer questions before the committee. A previous case based on a similar charge, he told the Senator, had failed in courts-martial. All this General Zwicker knew before he testified. And so did Senator McCarthy. So what the Senator was trying to do was to maneuver the General into criticizing his orders and those who issued them. The General did say that he thought Communists should not receive commissions or honorable discharges. But he was under Presidential orders not to testify on security matters, and when pressed to violate the order he refused. When he refused he was abused. There may not be any permanent harm in this abuse, but more is at stake than a scolding by Senator McCarthy. What is at issue is whether a Senator is to delve into departmental matters, goad subordinates into criticism of their superiors, taint them with insinuations of communist sympathies, and impugn their judgment and integrity, to the demoralization of the department. This is not the way Senate investigations are supposed - or entitled - to function. They do have a proper and important role in our system of government. This is not the role.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that these words, written by Bishop Henry Codman Potter, are still quite appropriate: "The truth for us to remember at all times, and especially in these times, is the truth that the hope of the nation is not in its forms of government, not in the wisdom or equity of its executives, nor in the justice or purity of its administration, so much as in the evaluation and redemption of individual character among its people."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wed.
Feb. 24, 1954

This is the news:

Senator McCarthy today called-off a hearing scheduled for tomorrow at which Army Secretary Stevens was to be questioned about what [redacted] McCARTHY [redacted] has called "the coddling of Communists." The decision to [redacted] CANCEL [redacted] the hearing came after a two-hour luncheon attended by McCarthy, Stevens and the other Republican members of the Senator's committee. (The Democrats did not attend.) At the end of the secret meeting, Senator Mundt read what he called "a memorandum of understanding." It said that there is complete accord between the army and the committee that Communism and Communists must be rooted out of the armed services. It said that Secretary Stevens has agreed to have the army complete its investigation of recently discharged Major Peress, whom McCarthy has called "a fifth amendment communist." The "understanding" also calls for secretary Stevens to give to McCarthy the names of everyone involved in ~~a~~ the recent promotion and [redacted] HONORABLE discharge of Peress. These persons will be made available ~~to the committee by Secretary Stevens for questioning~~ FOR QUESTIONING BEFORE THE COMMITTEE. The "understanding" also calls for the committee to question Brigadier General Zwicker at some future date, after Democratic committee member Senator Symington returns from a trip to Europe.

There was no reference in the "memorandum of understanding" to McCarthy's recent charge, that Secretary Stevens is a dupe..or to Stevens' recent charges that McCarthy has abused and humiliated army officers. What the understanding means is, that Stevens has now changed his order to army officers not to testify before McCarthy.. changed his mind about a specific order telling General Zwicker not to testify. Before he went into the secret luncheon Secretary Stevens told reporters who asked for comment, to see him tomorrow..[redacted].. "and I'll have plenty of comment." After today's luncheon he said:"I am confident army officers will not be abused by the committee." [redacted] Reporters suggested Stevens had retreated from his previous views on the McCarthy committee. The Secretary said: "I do not consider that I am a person who capitulates or retreats." The White House says [redacted] knew nothing about today's luncheon.

In a few minutes I'd like to discuss the reaction [redacted] in Europe to the recent McCarthy hearings.

The Senate Judiciary committee today approved Earl Warren to be chief justice of the United States. The vote was 12 to 3. And the three Democrats who opposed Warren-- Eastland of Mississippi, Johnston of South Carolina and Kilgore of West Virginia said they either questioned the former governor's judicial experience or wanted a full F.B.I. report on his background. The committee's vote came after Roderick J. Wilson, a California who had made charges against Warren, was arrested as a fugitive from justice.

The President today proposed a salary increase or other benefits for almost all civilian government workers . Mr. Eisenhower wants a three to four per cent salary increase for one million workers. This would run from 50 to 800-dollars a year for the individuals concerned. He also wants voluntary life insurance, hospitalization and medical care programs. The President says this would "improve the efficiency" of career federal workers.

The government today added ~~six~~ more areas to its critical unemployment list.. cities where ~~unemployment~~ at least six per cent of the workers are unemployed. The cities are: Battle Creek, Michigan...

South Bend, Indiana and the Davenport, Rock Island, Moline area of Iowa and Illinois.

Senate Democratic Leader ~~Johnson~~ Lyndon Johnson predicts that Congress will vote to increase personal income tax exemptions. He thinks the present 600-dollar exemptions will be raised to $800. And one high Republican source says he thinks mounting pressures will cause the Administration to go along with some income tax cuts.

~~George Meany, the President of the A.F. of L. today complained to Mr. Eisenhower..in person.. because Secretary of Agriculture Benson is opposing the demands of 15 non-operating railroad unions. Benson has written a Presidential board investigating a union-management dispute. He told the board the farmers as well as the public would be hurt by any increase in railroad operating costs..if this means a freight increase. Meany says its not "cricket" for a cabinet member to take such a stand with an impartial board named by the President. And the railroad unions have written the President saying the Benson action "merits the strictest repirimand if not impeachment."~~

Tonight Secretary of State Dulles makes his radio report to the nation on the recent Berlin conference. It will be heard over many of these stations at 10 p.m. eastern time.

French Foreign Minister Bidault today told his National Assembly's foreign affairs committee that the only solution to the problem of Germany is as association like the proposed European defense community.

And British Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons that the United States and Britain will soon open talks in Paris in an attempt to speed French approval of the re-arming of western Germany. Eden said the Berlin conference was "furstrating and disappointing" but it gave the West one big advantage in that it cleared the air.. exposed Russia's desire to get the withdrawal of the United States from Europe and then swallow all of Germany instead of neutralizing it.

Cut

~~The Communists in East Germany today turned down~~ an allied request for more freedom of travel for persons and goods between the allied zone and Soviet Germany. ~~The~~ Communist Premier ~~Grotewohl~~ GROTEWOHL accused the United States of sending spies and saboteurs into the Soviet zone.

And correspondents ~~in Moscow report that 22-hundred Communist~~ party organization chiefs have been fired in the last year in Soviet Georgia..the homeland of former Premier Stalin and Former Police chief Beria.

b

Vatican City sources says doctors and medical attendants are now on a round-the-clock watch over Pope Pius because of new difficulty in ~~[illegible]~~ feeding him. No change was reported in his condition today.

Yesterday I cabled four of our correspondents in Europe...asking them to summarise reaction,in the countries where they are stationed,to Senator Macarthys recent actions... Their cables are here in front of me...Permit me to quote from those cables....

No one, not even the pollsters can be sure just how a nation makes up its mind ...

No one man..and no one set of ideas, dominate without struggle and collision...

Anyone who believes himself to have a momopoly on wisdom or patriotism might reflect upon these lines...."There is one who is wiser than any of us...and that is everybody...Those words were spoken by Napoleon,who did not hold his own opinion in low regard....

good night and good luck...

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Wednesday, Feb. 24, 1954
7:45-8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... Yesterday I cabled four of our correspondents in Europe, asking them to summarize reaction in the countries where they are stationed to Senator McCarthy's reaent actions. Their cables are here in front of me. Permit me to quote from some of these cables. The first one comes from David Schoenbrun in Paris (quote):

"Senator McCarthy and Marilyn Monroe attack U.S. Army on two fronts, is the headline feature piece from Washington's (sic) Paris influential Le Monde tonite. Their correspondent cabled: The spectacle presented by McCarthy committee is sheer buffoonery. And the correspondent concludes: Despite protests, Senator McCarthy will continue to exercise his talents, for, in fact, a large part of the American Administration, including Secretary Stevens and the unfortunate General Zwicker, themselves approve the general line and objectives of McCarthy, reserving their criticism only for his methods."

Schoenbrun says: "This is the general tenor of French observation about McCarthy, and most French believe this is a serious error on the part of Americans. They don't think a line can be drawn between objectives and methods, particularly when methods, as in the McCarthy case, are so spectacular and destructive that they ~~xxxx~~ obviously achieve objectives far removed from the avowed one. It's a case of burning down the barn to catch a rat, one French editor told me, pointing out that it's ridiculous to say you approve rat-catching, altho you deplore the fact that the barn burned down. You can't separate the two, any more than you can say that you approved Hitler's aims while deploring his uncouth methods. Hitler's aims may have been to eradicate communism in Germany and destroy Soviet Union, but what his methods did in fact accomplish was to eradicate democracy in Germany and destroy France and not Russia."

And Schoenbrun concludes: "French Government officials and Congressmen refuse on-the-record comments, feeling they have no right to express opinions on American domestic politics. But all, without exception, express privately consternation at the loss of American prestige among masses of people here, leading to serious doubts about the authority and constancy of American policy. One French statesman told me: I hope you won't make too much of French criticism of McCarthy, because you will be sure to make him a hero back home if we attack him."

The second cable comes from Smith in London - and he says: "The British happen to be acutely alarmed at Senator McCarthy presently, as their concern for the demoralization of the United States Army, whereon all free Europe depends, coincides with the first close-up experience of one of the Senator's investigations." And Smith says that in a TV program scheduled months ago, a former MP, Aden Crawley, night before last, narrated shots of McCarthy questioning Reed Harris, and the press reacted to what they term "the smear-and-run methods" with disgust, with a disgust that one feels examining creatures on the moist underside of a garden rock for the first time.

The News-Chronicle correspondent in London says: It's one thing to read about a witch-hunt and quite another to see it at close quarters. It's not very pretty but it's very instructive.

Smith's cable continues: "The Senator's assault on the Army alarms a wide range of press. The Conservative Evening News today says: Were this merely a domestic scandal in a friendly country, no comment would be called for. But, clearly, it's a matter of principle which concerns all who want to both maintain freedom and order in the democratic society and to fight communism. And the Conservative Daily Telegraph says: Even the most understanding friends of America abroad find it hard to preserve a sense of balance about activities epitomized in the name of Senator McCarthy. His attacks on America's allies, notably the 'blood trade' business, the smearing of Britain, have produced something worse than irritation. World communism couldn't ask for richer ore than pours into its propaganda machine every time Senator McCarthy makes an utterance."

There's another cable, from Alex Kendrick in Vienna, in which he says: "It must be trite by now to recall that this part of Europe was responsible for Hitler and saw Naziism come to power in the guise of an anti-Communist crusade. Yet, just for that reason people here who have been pushed around for twenty years, first by their own native fascists and then by Hitler and then by the Russians, have come to dislike those who do the pushing, especially when it's to the detriment of democratic processes and government." And Kendrick says: "That sums up the attitude hereabout toward McCarthy. He is not regarded as an international threat, like Hitler proved, but as one of the primary reasons for the serious loss of American prestige in an area where such prestige is important because we are face to face with the Communists and deal with them every day." Kendrick says: "It gets discouraging to have Austrians offer you condolences about the loss of your democratic traditions."

And Kendrick concludes his cable by saying: "Army officers are supposed to be nonpolitical, but the general feeling among headquarters officers here is to blame Eisenhower for not standing up to what McCarthy is trying to do to the Army, which, after all, as one senior officer said (quote), 'It isn't only our Army but it's supposed to be his Army, too'."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today.

-30-

Ediphone trans./E. Scheiner

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Senator McCarthy today called off a hearing scheduled for tomorrow at which Army Secretary Stevens was to be questioned about what McCarthy has called "the coddling of Communists." The decision to cancel the hearing came after a two hour luncheon attended by McCarthy, Stevens and the other Republican members of the Senator's committee. The Democrats did not attend. At the end of the secret meeting, Senator Mundt read what he called "a memorandum of understanding." It said that there is complete accord between the army and the committee that Communism and Communists must be rooted out of the armed services. It said that Secretary Stevens has agreed to have the army complete its investigation of recently discharged Major Peress whom McCarthy has called "a fifth amendment Communist." The "understanding" also calls for secretary Stevens to give to McCarthy the names of everyone involved in the recent promotion and honorable discharge of Peress. These persons will be made available for questioning before the committee. The "understanding" also calls for the committee to question Brigadier General Zwicker at some future date after Democratic committee member Senator Symington returns from a trip to Europe.

There was no reference in the "memorandum of understanding" to McCarthy's recent charge that Secretary Stevens is a dupe or to Stevens recent charges that McCarthy has abused and humiliated army officers. What the understanding means is that Stevens has now changed his order to army officers not to testify before McCarthy - chaged his mind about a specific order telling General Zwicker not to testify. Before he went into the secret luncheon Secretary Stevens told reporters who asked for comment to see him tomorrow "and I'll have plenty of comment." After today's luncheon he said: "I am confident army officers will not be abused by the committee." Reporters suggested Stevens had retreated from his previous views on the McCarthy committee. The Secretary said: "I do not consider that I am a person who capitulates or retreats." The White House says it knew nothing about today's luncheon. In a few minutes I'd like to discuss the reaction in Europe to the recent McCarthy hearings.

The Senate Judiciary committee today approved Earl Warren to be chief justice of the United States. The vote was 12 to 3. And the three Democrats who opposed Warren, Eastland of Mississippi, Johnston of South Carolina and Kilgore of West Virginia said they either questioned the former governor's judicial experience or wanted a full FBI report on his background. The committee's vote came after Roderick J. Wilson, a Californian who had made charges against Warren, was arrested as a fugitive from justice.

The President today proposed a salary increase or other benefits for almost all civilian government workers. Mr. Eisenhower wants a three to four percent salary increase for one million workers. This would run from 50 to 800-dollars a year for the individuals concerned. He also wants voluntary life insurance, hospitalization and medical care programs. The President says this would "improve the efficiency" of career federal workers.

The government today added more areas to its critical unemployment list - cities where at least six percent of the workers are unemployed. The cities are: Battle Creek, Michigan, South Bend, Indiana and the Davenport, Rock Island, Moline area of Iowa and Illinois.

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon Johnson predicts that Congress will vote to increase personal income tax exemptions. He thinks the present 600-dollar exemptions will be raised to $800. And one high Republican source says he thinks mounting pressures will cause the Administration to go with some income tax cuts.

Tonight Secretary of State Dulles makes his radio report to the nation on the recent Berlin conference. It will be heard over many of these stations at 10 p.m. eastern time.

French Foreign Minister Bidault today told his National Assembly's foreign affairs committee that the only solution to the problem of Germany is as association like the proposed European defense community.

And British Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons that the United States and Britain will soon open talks in Paris in an attempt to speed French approval of the re-arming of western Germany. Eden said the Berlin conference was "frustrating and disappointing" but it gave the West one big advantage in that it cleared the air - exposed Russia's desire to get the withdrawal of the United States from Europe and then swallow all of Germany instead of neutralizing it

Vatican City sources says doctors and medical attendants are now on a round-the-clock watch over Pope Pius because of new difficulty in feeding him. No change was reported in his condition today.

Yesterday I cabled four of our correspondents in Europe, asking them to summarize reaction in the countries where they are stationed to Senator McCarthy's recent actions. Their cables are here in front of me. Permit me to quote from some of these cables. The first one comes from David Schoenbrun in Paris (quote.)

"Senator McCarthy and Marilyn Monroe attack U.S. Army on two fronts, is the headline feature piece from Washington's Paris influential"Le Monde" tonight. Their correspondent cabled: The spectacle presented by McCarthy committee is sheer buffoonery. And the correspondent concludes: Despite protests, Senator McCarthy will continue to exercise his talents, for, in fact, a large part of the American Administration, including Secretary Stevens and the unfortunate General Zwicker, themselves approve the general line and objectives of McCarthy, reserving their criticism only for his methods."

Schoenbrun says: "This is the gen ral tenor of French observation about McCarthy, and most French believe this is a serious error on the part of Americans. They don't think a line can be drawn between objectives and methods, particularly when methods, as in the McCarthy case, are so spectacular and destructive that they obviously achieve objectives far removed from the avowed one. It's a case of burning down the barn to catch a rat, one French editor told me, pointing out that it's ridiculous to say you approve rat-catching, although you deplore the fact that the barn burned down. You can't separate the two, any more than you can say that you approved Hitler's aims while deploring his uncouth methods. Hitler's aims may have been to eradicate communism in Germany and destroy Soviet Union, but what his methods did in fact accomplish was to eradicate democracy in Germany and destroy France and not Russia."

And Schoenbrun concludes: "French Government officials and Congressmen refuse on-the-record comments, feeling they have no right to express opinions on American domestic politics. But all, without exception, express privately consternation at the loss of American prestige among masses of people here, leading to serious doubts about the authority and constancy of American policy. One French statesman told me: "I hope you won't make too much of French criticism of McCarthy, because you will be sure to make him a hero back home if we attack him."

The second cable comes from Smith in London and he says: "The British happen to be acutely alarmed at Senator McCarthy presently, as their concern for the demoralization of the United States Army, whereon all free Europe depends, coincides with the first close-up experience of one of the Senator's investigations." / And Smith says that in a TV program scheduled months ago, a former MP, Aden Crawley, night before last, narrated shots of McCarthy questioning Reed Harris, and the press reacted to what they term "the smear-and-run methods" with disgust, with a disguest that one feels examining creatures on the moist underside of a garden rock for the first time. The "News Chronicle" correspondent in London says: "It's one thing to read about a witch-hunt and quite another to see it at close quarters. It's not very pretty but it's very instructive. Smith's cable continues: "The Senator's assault on the Army alarms a wide range of press. The Conservative "Evening News" today says: "Were this merely a domestic scandal in a friendly country, no comment would be called for. But, clearly, it's a matter of principle which concerns all who want to both maintain freedom and order in the democratic society and to fight Communism. And the Conservative "Daily Telegraph" says: "Even the most understanding friends of America abroad find it hard to preserve a sense of balance about activities epitomized in the name of Senator McCarthy. His attacks on America's allies, notably the 'blood trade' business, the smearing of Britain, have produced something worse than irritation. World communism couldn't ask for richer ore than pours into its propaganda machine every time Senator McCarthy makes an utterance."

There's another cable, from Alex Kendrick in Vienna, in which he says: "It must be trite by now to recall that this part of Europe was responsible for Hitler and saw Naziism come to power in the guise of an anti-Communist crusade. Yet, just for that reason people here who have been pushed around for twenty years, first by their own native fascists and then by Hitler and then by the Russians, have come to dislike those who do the pushing, especially when it's to the detriment of democratic processes and government." And Kendrick says: "That sums up the attitude hereabout toward McCarthy. He is not regarded as an international threat, like Hitler proved, but as one of the primary reasons for the serious loss of American prestige in an area where such prestige is important because we are face to face with the Communists and deal with them every day." Kendrick says: "It gets discouraging to have Austrians offer you condolences about the loss of your democratic traditions."

And Kendrick concludes his cable by saying: "Army officers are supposed to be nonpolitical, but the general feeling among headquarters officers here is to blame Eisenhower for not standing up to what McCarthy is trying to do to the Army, which, after all, as one senior officer said: 'It isn't only Our Army, but it's supposed to be his army too'.

MURROW: This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: No one, not even the pollsters can be sure just how a nation makes up its mind. No one man, and no one set of ideas dominate without struggle and collision. Anyone who believes himself to have a monopoly on wisdom or patriotism might reflect upon these lines. "There is one who is wiser than any of us - and that is everybody." Those words were spoken by Napoleon, who did not hold his own opinion in low regard. Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday, Feb 25, 1954

This is the news:

Army Secretary Stevens said TONIGHT: "I will never accede to the abuse of army personnel under any circumstances, including committee hearings." And the White House promptly announced that the President approves and endorses the secretary's statement "100 per cent." Stevens spoke after a full day of conferences at the White House, the Pentagon, and among Republican members of the McCarthy committee. Yesterday the committee issued a "memorandum of understanding" in which the Secretary seemed to have changed his mind on previous orders TO army officers. Today, at the White House, Stevens said: that memorandum has been misinterpereted. He has not receded from the principles on which he stands. He has obligations to all army personnel..including upholding their rights, when they are unable to protect their rights. He will never acceded to the abuse of army personnel. ..will never aceed to their being BROWBEATEN OR HUMILIATED--- or deprived of the advice of counsel. Here he made a specific reference to the case of General Zwicker. (Last week Stevens said McCarthy had abused the general.) In today's statement Stevens said he has been assured by members of the McCarthy committee "that they "will not permit such conditions to develop in the future." Stevens said this is why he entered into yesterday's agreement.

3

Stevens announcement tonight came after almost 24 hours of anger over the general reaction to yesterday's agreement with Senator McCarthy and other Republican members of the McCarthy committee. The decision to make his announcement was reached after these conferences: telephone calls last night to White House News Secretary Hagerty in which newspaper reaction, generally saying Stevens had surrendered to McCarthy, was discussed. Stevens talked this over with other White House staff members. Then this morning his aides described Stevens as "steaming with anger" over the interprettation that he had "capitulated" to Mc Carthy. Stevens stayed in his Pentagon office, conferred all morning and part of the afternoon with his top aides. Army Chief of Staff Ridgeway was in and out. There were phone conversations with "someone" at the White House. Then Stevens denied a published report he would resign if the President didn't publicly support him. And there were more conferences at the White House. Vice President Nixon talked with Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams. Air Force Secretary Talbott was a White House visitor but would tell reporters nothing. News Secretary Hagerty postponed a regular afternoon meeting with reporters. And in the Senate, Mc Carthy and Republican Senators Dirksen, Mundt and Potter tried to work out a statement that might please Secretary Stevens. This was to have been released at 4 p.m. eastern time. But Dirksen told reporters it couldn't be done.. too much disagreement on how to word it. Mc Carthy said the "incident is closed as far as I'm concerned." Then and hour and a half White House conference broke up... one in which Vice President Nixon, Deputy Attorney General Rogers and Deputy Defense Secretary Kyes AND OTHERS participated. These men, and Secretary Stevens, then visited with the President for a half hour. And then Secretary Stevens made his CAREFULLY WORDED announcement: he will never acced to the abuse of army personnel under any circumstances, including committee hearings."

Two Middle Eastern governments have new rulers tonight. In Egypt, General Naguib is out as president and premier. His successor is Colonel Guh-mahl Ab-duhl Nah-suhr....37.. and the real power behind the coup that removed former King Farouk. Nah-suhr has been vice premier.. the main policy-maker of the Naguib regime. He and the ruling Revolutionary Council decided Naguib was trying to seize dictatorial powers. Naguib submitted his resignation three days ago--we're told. It was accepted today. The general was placed under house arrest. And the Colonel took over as leader of Egypt. His spokesmen promise no changes in their policy towards the West.

In Syria, President Adib ~~Shishkely~~ SHISHKELY has resigned.. and been given 24 hours to get out of the country. He was overthrown in an army revolt, and former president Hashim al Atashi is evidently back in office. The army accuses Shishkely of corruption in government, suppressing education, and arresting lawyers and students. They say they want to return Syria to "a republican and democratic government."

In Washington today the Senate rejected Senator Bricker's substitute proposal, to curb the treaty-making powers of the President. The vote was 50 to 42. But then the Senate voted against a move to send the constitutional amendment back to committee for further study.

Treasury Secretary Humphrey says the Administration is "vigorously" opposed to a Democratic plan to cut income taxes by "blanket increases in exemptions." He says this would "throw us back into substantial deficit financing." Democratic Senator George has recommended that the 600-dollar exemption be raised to 800-dollars this year... a thousand dollars next year.

The President today announced that we will grant military aid to Pakistan.. the help strengthen the defenses of the free nations in the Middle East. And the President has written India's Prime Minister Nehru who had warned that his government would consider aid to Pakistan an (UNFRIENDLY) act. Mr. Eisenhower says this does not in any way affect the (FRIENDSHIP) we feel for India. If India ever needs our military aid her request will receive "most sympathetic consideration."

The government today told Communist Poland to close its consulates general in New York, Chicago and Detroit because "they serve no useful purpose" in relations between the two countries.

The House today approved another 275-thousand-dollar appropriation for its Un-American activities committee. Three hundred and sixty-two Representatives approved the appropriation. It was opposed by Democratic Representative Wier of Minnesota.

The Chesepeake and Ohio Railroad announced today that it has sold 800-thousand shares of the New York Central railroad to Clinton Murchison of Dallas and Sid W. Richardson of Fort Worth. The twenty million dollar sale represents a two and a half million dollar profit to the C. and O. Murchison and Richardson are friends of Robert R. Young who is engaged in abattle for control of the New York Central.

Here in New York, a Board of education committee has cleared Nat Holman, the City College basketball coach for 31 seasons, of neglect charges in connection with the basketball scandals of 1950. Seven players on Holman's teams had admitted fixing games.

In October of 1952, when we were preoccupied with the Presidential Election, the Russians held their all-Party Congress in Moscow. There, at great length and in considerable detail they spelled out exactly how they would fracture the Western Alliance, and isolate this country. They proposed to do it, not with war but with trade. They contended that our Allies, being unable to trade with us, being resentful of our economic dominance, would trade where they could, and that this would lead to bickering and perhaps even war between the Western Allies.

Today in London, Sir Winston Churchill, who has not yet been accused of being pro-Communist, told a cheering House of Commons, "The more trade there is through the Iron Curtain, and between Great Britain and Russia and her satellites, the better will be the chances of our living together in increasing comfort. When there is so much prosperity for everyone round the corner and within our reach, it cannot do anything but good to interchange merchandise and services on an increasing scale." And he added, "The more the two great divisions of the world mingle in the healthy and fruitful activities of commerce, the greater the counter-poise to the purely military calculations." Sir Winston wants a "substantial relaxation" in the restrictions against trade with Russia, and his government is going to talk to our government about it. He does not suggest any traffic in military equipment, including certain machine tools; and he does not advocate any relaxation on current restrictions of trade with China until peace has been established in Korea.

Britain is going to trade more and more with the Soviet Union, because she must in order to survive. Other European countries will follow Britain's lead. And in due course Japan will increase her trade with Communist China for the same reasons.

Sir Winston Churchill took a rather benign view of the results of the Berlin Conference. He said: "The military strength of Russia in what is called conventional warfare was so many times greater than that of the NATO powers that she did not feel she had need of any guarantees in any period which could now be foreseen." But he felt that the Berlin Conference had made discussion of all questions less delicate and less dangerous than it was before. He is persuaded that Russia's satellite empire sooner or later will surely dissolve or take new and other forms." The Prime Minister does not rule out the possibility of a high level face-to-face meeting, but he doesn't think the time is ripe for it now. He hopes for fruitful results from the Far Eastern Conference scheduled to be held in Geneva on April 26th. And Sir Winston said: "Patience and perseverance must never be grudged when the peace of the world is at stake. Even if we have to go through a decade of cold war, bickerings and vain parlance, that would be preferable to the catalogue of unspeakable and unimaginable horrors which is the alternative." And then in a passage that brought back memories of his great wartime speeches, the 79-year-old Prime Minister said: "Peace is our aim, and strength is the only way of getting it. We need not be deterred by the thought that we are trying to have it both ways at once; indeed, it is only by having it both ways at once that we shall get a chance of getting anything of it at all."

Sir Winston is prepared to trade with the Russians, argue with them endlessly; but he is too great a student of history not to recognize that both activities must be based upon strength.

Sir Winston Churchill spoke today of the problems of keeping a tired and tense world at peace with Russia. He recommended"perseverence, patience and strength." What Admiral Richard E. Byrd once said of men, also applies to nations:"Few during their lifetime come anywhere near exhausting the resources dwelling within them. There are deep wells of strength that are never used."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Army Secretary Stevens said tonight: "I will never accede to the abuse of army personnel under any circumstances, including committee hearings." And the White House promptly announced that the President approves and endorses the Secretary's statement "100 percent." Stevens spoke after a full day of conferences at the White House the Pentagon and among Republican members of the McCarthy committee. Yesterday the committee issued a "memorandum of understanding" in which the Secretary seemed to have changed his mind on previous orders to army officers. Today at the White House Stevens said: that memorandum has been misinterpreted. He has not receded from the principles on which he stands. He has obligations to all army personnel including upholding their rights when they are unable to protect their rights. He will never acced to the abuse of army personnel - will never accede to their being browbeaten or humiliated or deprived of the advice of counsel. Here he made a specific reference to the case of General Zwicker. Last week Stevens said McCarthy had abused the general. In today's statement Stevens said he has been assured by members of the McCarthy committee "that they will not permit such conditions to develop in the future." Stevens said this is why he entered into yesterday's agreement, with Senator McCarthy and other Republican members of the McCarthy committee. The decision to make his announcement was reached after these conferences: telephone calls last night to White House News Secretary Hagerty in which newspaper reaction generally saying Stevens had surrendered to McCarthy was discussed. Stevens talked this over with other White House staff members. Then this morning his aides described Stevens as "steaming with anger" over the interpreatation that he had "capitulated" to McCarthy. Stevens stayed in his Pentagon office, conferred all morning and part of the afternoon with his top aides. Army Chief of Staff Ridgeway was in and out. There were phone conversations with someone at the White House. Then Stevens denied a published report he would resign if the President didn't publicly support him. And there were more conferences at the White House. Vice President Nixon talked with Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams. Air Force Secretary Talbott was a White House visitor but would tell reporters nothing. News Secretary Hagerty postponed a regular afternoon meeting with reporters. And in the Senate, McCarthy and Republican Senators Dirksen, Mundt and Potter tried to work out a statement that might please Secretary Stevens. This was to have been released at 4 p.m. eastern time. But Dirksen told reporters it couldn't be done - too much disagreement on how to word it. McCarthy said the "incident is closed as far as I'm concerned." Then an hour and a half White House conference broke up - one in which the Vice President Nixon, Deputy Attorney General Rogers and Deputy Defense Secretary Kyes and other participated. These men, and Secretary Stevnes, then visited with the President for a half hour. And then Secretary Stevens made his carefully worded announcement: he will never acceed to the abuse of army personnel under any circumstances, including committee hearings."

Two Middle Eastern governments have new rulers tonight. In Egypt, General Naguib is out as president and premier. His successor is Colonel Guhmahl Abduhl Nahsuhr, 37 and the real power behind the coup that removed former King Farouk. Nahsuhr has been vice premier the main policy maker of the Naguib regime. He and the ruling Revolutionary Council decided Naguib was trying to seize dictatorial powers. Naguib submitted his resignation three days ago we're told. It was accepted today. The general was placed under house arrest. And the Colonel took over as leader of Egypt. His spokesmen promise no changes in their policy towards the West.

In Syria, President Adib Shishkely has resigned and been given 24 hours to get out of the country. He was overthrown in an army revolt, and former president Hashim al Atashi is evidently back in office. The army accuses Shishkely of corruption in government, suppressing education and arresting lawyers and students. They say they want to return Syria to "a republican and democratic government."

In Washington today the Senate rejected Senator Bricker's substitute proposal to curb the treaty-making powers of the President. The vote was 50 to 42. But then the Senate voted against a move to send the constitutional amendment back to committee for further study.

Treasury Secretary Humphrey says the Administration is "vigorously" opposed to a Democratic plan to cut income taxes by "blanket increases in exemptions." He says this would "throw us back into substantial deficit financing." Democratic Senator George has recommended that the 600-dollar exemption be raised to 800-dollars this year - a thousand dollars next year.

The President today announced that we will grant military aid to Pakistan to help strengthen the defenses of the free nations in the Middle East. And the President has written India's Prime Minister Nehru who had warned that his government would consider aid to Pakistan an unfriendly act. Mr. Eisenhower says this does not in any way affect the friendship we feel for India. If India ever needs our military aid her request will receive "most sympathetic consideration."

The government today told Communist Poland to close its consulates general in New York, Chicago and Detroit because "they serve no useful purpose" in relations between the two countries.

The House today approved another 275-thousand dollar for its Un-American activities committee. Three hundred and sixty two Representatives approved the appropriation. It was opposed by Democratic Representative Wier of Minnesota.

The Chesepeake and Ohio Railroad announced today that it has sold 800-thousand shares of the New York Central railroad to Clinton Murchison of Dallas and Sid W. Richardson of Fort Worth. The twenty million dollar sale represents a two and a half million dollar profit to the C and O. Murchison and Richardson are friend of Robert R. Young who is engaged in a battle for control of the New York Central.

Here in New York, a Board of Education committee has cleared Nat Holman, the City College basketball coach for 31 seasons of neglect charges in connection with the basketball scandals of 1950. Seven players on Holman's teams had admitted fixing games.

In October of 1952, when we were preoccupied with the Presidential Election, the Russians held their all-Party Congress in Moscow. There, at great length and in considerable detail, they spelled out exactly how they would fracture the Western Alliance, and isolate this country. They proposed to do it, not with war but with trade. They contended that our Allies, being unable to trade with us, being resentful of our economic dominance, would trade where they could, and that this would lead to bickering and perhaps even war between the Western Allies.

Today in London, Sir Winston Churchill, who has not yet been accused of being pro-Communist, told a cheering House of Commons, "The more trade there is through the Iron Curtain, and between Great Britain and Russia and her satellites, the better will be the chances of our living together in increasing comfort. When there is so much prosperity for everyone round the corner and within our reach, it cannot do anything but good to interchange merchandise and services on an increasing scale." And he added, "The more the two great divisions of the world mingle in the healthy and fruitful activities of commerce, the greater the counterpoise to the purely military calculations." Sir Winston wants a "substantial relaxation" in the restrictions against trade with Russia, and his government is going to talk to our government about it. He does not suggest any traffic in military equipment, including certain machine tools; and he does not advocate any relaxation on current restrictions of trade with China until peace has been established in Korea. Britain is going to trade more and more with the Soviet Union, because she must in order to survive. Other European countries will follow Britain's lead. And in due course Japan will increase her trade with Communist China for the same reasons. Sir Winston Churchill took a rather benign view of the results of the Berlin Conference. He said: "The military strength of Russia in what is called conventional warfare was so many times greater than that of the NATO powers that she did not feel she had need of any guarantees in any period which could now be foreseen." But he felt that the Berlin Conference had made discussion of all questions less delicate and less dangerous than it was before. He is persuaded that "Russia's satellite empire sooner or later will surely dissolve or take new and other forms." The Prime Minister does not rule out the possibility of a high level face-to-face meeting, but he doesn't think the time is ripe for it now. He hopes for fruitful results from the Far Eastern Conference scheduled to be held in Geneva on April 26th. And Sir Winston said: "Patience and perseverance must never be grudged when the peace of the world is at stake. Even if we have to go through a decade of cold war, bickerings and vain parlance, that would be preferable to the catalogue of unspeakable and unimaginable horrors which is the alternative." And then in a passage that brought back memories of his great wartime speeches, the 79-year-old Prime Minister said: "Peace is our aim, and strength is the only way of getting it. We need not be deterred by the thought that we are trying to have it both ways at once; indeed, it is only by having it both ways at once that we shall get a chance of getting anything of it at all."

Sir Winston is prepared to trade with the Russians, argue with them endlessly; but he is too great a student of history not to recongize that both activities must be based upon strength.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Sir Winston Churchill spoke today of the problems of keeping a tired and tense world at peace with Russia. He recommended" perseverence, patience and strength." What Admiral Richard E. Byrd once said of men, also applies to nations: "Few during their lifetime come anywhere near exhausting the resources dwelling within them. There are deep wells of strength that are never used."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Friday
Feb. 26, 1954

This is the news:

The Senate tonight apparently killed, for this year, any efforts to amend the President's constitutional treaty-making powers. The vote came on a proposal by Democratic Senator George, after the Republican leader... Senator Knowland.. had announced that he was switching away from the Administration's view, and would support the George proposal. The final vote was 60 to 31.....not enough to make the two-thirds majority needed for approval of a Constitutional amendment. When the vote was 60 to 30... enough for approval. Democratic Senator Kilgore of West Virginia arrived in the Senate to cast the deciding ballot against it. [redacted]

The final vote showed 32 Republicans and 28 Democrats FOR the George proposal. Against it were: 14 Republicans..16 Democrats and Independent Senator Morse.

This is the news:

The Senate today overrode Republican opposition.. put aside a Constiutional amendment approved by the White House..and voted to accept another proposal offered by Democratic Senator George of Georgia. The vote was 61 to 30. And the Republican Senate Leader..Knowland of California..then announced to his colleagues that "as an individual Senator" he will support the George proposal. This and today's vote almost assure a two-thirds approval on a final vote. The original Bricker proposal would have was concerned with both treaties and international agreements. The George proposal would put new curbs on the President's authority to negotiate executive agreements. They would have to be approved by Congress.

The Joint Congressional Economic Committee said today that what it called "the current recession" makes it necessary to postpone the President's plan for flexible price supports. The committee says this plan might "actually place the farm family in a worse position in the short run." The committee also suggested possible changes in the Administration's tax proposals. And it wants a reservoir of public works projects...in case the economic situation gets worse. The committee also says "the extent of unemployment may not be fully reflected in current government statistics."

And the Labor Department says the number of persons claiming unemployment insurance went up again in mid-February to two million, 179-thousand. This is double what it was a year ago...and the highest since February of 1950. At the same time the Department says THAT for those who are working, pay rates are at a record high. The hourly earnings of factory workers--including overtime--averaged $1.80 an hour in January, the highest on record. And in January the cost of living went up again.. due mainly to sharp increases in the price of coffee and prok. Its now at the second highest level in history. And the National Industrial Conference Board says the purchasing value of the dollar fell more than two per cent in January...to 54 point 7 CENTS....from 56 cents a year ago.

The Senate today passed and sent to the President a bill to liberalize pensions for all members of Congress and their employes. Republican Senator Williams of Delaware said this is equal to a "seven thousand 500 dollar bonus" for all participants.

Robert King, the deputy assistant army secretary, today told a House committee that the army now finds itself the owner of more things than anybody at any time. King says the army has about 30-BIllion dollars WORTH of things on hand.. another 6-billion is on order. It has enough peacetime operating stocks to last more than three years.

Senator McCarthy said today he considers "the unpleasant hassle" with Army Se retary Stevens AT an end.. any further exchange of statements would be "ridiculous." But as an obvious result of the "hassle", Senate Republican leaders decided today to launch an immediate investigation of the methods of all investigating committees. Republican Senator Potter of Michigan says Army Secretary Stevens was "ABSOLUTELY correct" in saying that the McCarthy committee had assured him that army witnesses will not be brow beaten or humiliated. And Democratic Senator Jackson of Washington state.. one of the three Democrats who recently returned to the committee, says the Stevens-McCarthy argument makes it clear why the Democrats pulled out last year. "Now," he says," the majority party, who failed to support us, are watching their chickens come home to roost." I should like to review the Stevens-McCarthy arguments in a few minutes.

5

The United States today formally invited 14 of our Korean allies to meet with the Russians, Communist China and North Korea in Geneva on April 26th.

The French in Indo-China says the invaders of Laos have now abandoned their assault on the capital and have withdrawn 75 miles to the north.

In West Germany, the lower house of Parliament has approved a constitutional change to make military service compulsory for every man over 18. The group also declared specifically that it is legal for West Germany to join the European defense community. The Upper house is expected to take similar action..removing the final legal obstacles to Germany's participation in the E.D.C.

Italy's Premier Scelba today won a vote of confidence from the Italian senate..by five votes. He faces the Chamber of deputies next week.

And Egypt's new military rulers say they removed President Naguib to prevent his assassination by angry army officers who feared he would become a dictator.

Edward R. Murrow: February 26, 1954. 7.45 p.m.

It is not unusual that a hair-line decision should be the difference between peace and war. Senator McCarthy could have had peace with Army Secretary Stevens yesterday afternoon by agreeing to the simple statement that the rights of witnesses before his committee would be protected. # This would have given him peace with honor and, what is more, peace without defeat, for it would have been no defeat to say he would do what decency requires of any committee chairman. # And most of all it would have been peace within the Republican party in an election year. # Had the Senator been willing to accept the one sentence, Secretary Stevens would not have gone to the White House and President Eisenhower would not have endorsed 100 percent Mr. Stevens' assurance that he would never accede to the abuse of army personnel.

It is not unreasonable to suggest that if Senator McCarthy was unwilling to make this assertion he did not much want peace. Nor does it take much imagination to find reasons why. # Senator McCarthy may think he stands to gain from continuing the war with the army, particularly now that President Eisenhower is involved. He may think he stands to gain even if he is fighting on the poor issue of his treatment of General Zwicker. He may gain in the end even if the Republican policy committee revises the rules for Senate investigations. The Senator stays on page one. The whole nation continues to talk about him. It is the formula he best understands.

But the eagerness of Senator McCarthy for the fight is one of the few clear things in this strange case. Senator McCarthy's conduct was not strange. As soon as he could draw breath, after hearing what Secretary Stevens had said, he accused him of falsehood. What Mr. Stevens had said was that he had been given private assurances at Wednesday's lunch that witnesses from now on would receive proper treatment. Incidentally Senator Potter, who was at the lunch, bears out Mr. Stevens. What is strange in the case is Mr. Stevens' own befuddlement. # At Wednesday's lunch he accepted for publication a memorandum of agreement that failed to mention the treatment of witnesses, and consisted wholly of concessions to ~~Mr.~~ Senator McCarthy. # But because of something said privately at the lunch he reported to his Pentagon colleagues that he had won his point and that the concessions were worth it. It is described how he was congratulated and his hand warmly shaken. Not till Mr. Stevens heard A Report that Senator McCarthy had told a reporter that he could not have surrendered more abjectly if he had gotten onto his hands and knees, did it dawn on him that he had been misled by his own ~~XXXXXXXXXX~~ inexperience. He woke up to the fact that he was one of the few persons in Washington - and indeed the world - who didn't think he had surrendered. That meant that the army certainly would think he had. And from then on he worked tooth and nail to save the situation. More was involved than his reputation and his keeping his office. The morale of the army would be badly shaken. Some way had to be found to assure the army that it had not been abandoned to the abuse and pressure of Senator McCarthy. A last minute effort was made to arrive at a harmonious agreement. Senators Dirksen, Mundt and Potter were ready for peace and would have accepted the sentence about fair treatment for witnesses. Senator McCarthy flatly rejected it. So the effort failed, and the President at last came onto the stage to support the statement Secretary Stevens was to make public.

Senator McCarthy is ~~hot-headed~~ impetuous as well as far-seeing. And in leaping headlong into what now was a fight with the White House he snatched at the poorest case to fight on, his treatment of General Zwicker. Even the Chicago Tribune criticized him this morning for the way he treated General Zwicker, and if that is so it can be no exaggeration to say that the whole nation must have been appalled by it. It was the Peress case that was Senator McCarthy's ace of trumps. Even if the dentist did nothing more sensitive than fill the teeth of army personnel, his promotion and honorable discharge caught the army off base. It had been the army's laxity in the Peress case, that had made it hard to keep attention focused on what happened to General Zwicker. Now the Senator himself let it focus there. And it remains to be seen whether his impetuousness has let him in for a fall with his long term ambitions. Judged by his past recoveries from such mistakes, the Senator often knows how to land on his feet, and a little closer to his destination.

It needs no sermonizing by reporters, or anyone else, to remind ourselves that an army that comes under the sway of political or personal pressure is lost to the service of democracy. In Europe the McCarthy episode has brought cries of foreboding.— For the United States Army is the indispensable shield of the remaining democracies there. Demagogues who distract attention from their personal ambitions by the shrillness of their attack on communism have figured tragically in recent European history. Such analogies may seem far-fetched to most Americans. But here is a General with a distinguished record for valor and leadership, who is so shamefully treated that the morale of the United States Army is endangered, and the Senator responsible says only he was too lenient. The Zwicker case would have seemed far-fetched only a short time ago.

There is often a fine line between what we accept as right and what we recognize as wrong. It may be, as Oscar Wilde once said that "morality is simply the attitude we adopt towards people we personally dislike." Whatever the case, Clifton Allen surely was right when he said:"Nothing is more needed in this world than a revival of simple goodness and genuine uprightness."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

FEBRUARY 26, 1954
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Senate tonight apparently killed for this year any efforts to amend the President's constitutional treaty-making powers. The vote came on a proposal by Democratic Senator George after the Republican leader, Senator Knowland, had announced that he was switching away from the Administration's view and would support the George proposal. The final vote was 60 to 31 - not enough to make the two-thirds majority needed for approval of a Constitutional amendment. When the vote was 60 to 30, enough for approval, Democratic Senator Kilgore of West Virginia arrived in the Senate to cast the deciding ballot against it. The final vote showed 32 Republicans and 28 Democrats for the George proposal. Against it were: 14 Republicans, 16 Democrats and Independent Senator Morse.

The Joint Congressional Economic Committee said today that what it called "the current recession" makes it necessary to postpone the President's plan for flexible price supports. The committee says this plan might "actually place the farm family in a worse position in the short run." The committee also suggested possible changes in the Administration's tax proposals. And it wants a reservoir of public works projects in case the economic situation gets worse. The committee also says "the extent of unemployment may not be fully reflected in current government statistics."

And the Labor Department says the number of persons claiming unemployment insurance went up again in mid-February to two million, 179-thousand. This is double what it was a year ago and the highest since February of 1950. At the same time the Department says that for those who are working, pay rates are at a record high. The hourly earnings of factory workers - including overtime - averaged $1.80 an hour in January, the highest on record. And in January the cost of living went up again due mainly to sharp increases in the price of coffee and pork. It's now at the second highest level in history. And the National Industrial Conference Board says the purchasing value of the dollar fell more than two percent in January to 54 point 7 cents from 56 cents a year ago.

The Senate today passed and sent to the President a bill to liberalize pensions for all members of Congress and their employees. Republican Senator Williams of Delaware said this is equal to a "seven thousand 500 dollar bonus" for all participants.

Robert King, the deputy assistant army secretary, today told a House committee that the army now finds itself the owner of more things than anybody at any time. King says the army has about 30-billion dollars worth of things on hand - another 6-billion is on order. It has enough peacetime operating stocks to last more than three years.

Senator McCarthy said today he considers "the unpleasant hassle" with Army Secretary Stevens at an end - any further exchange of statements would be ridiculous. But as an obvious result of the "hassle" Senate Republican leaders decided today to launch an immediate investigation of the methods of all investigating committees. Republican Senator Potter of Michigan says Army Secretary Stevens was "absolutely correct" in saying that the McCarthy committee had assured him that army witnesses will not be brow beaten or humiliated. And Democratic Senator Jackson of Washington State, one of the three Democrats who recently returned to the committee says the Stevens-McCarthy argument makes it clear why the Democrats pulled out last year. "Now," he says," the majority party, who failed to support us, are watching their chickens come home to roost." I should like to review the Stevens-McCarthy arguments in a few minutes.

The United States today formally invited 14 of our Korean allies to meet with the Russians, Communist China and North Korea in Geneva on April 26th.

The French in Indo-China says the invaders of Laos have now abandoned their assault on the capital and have withdrawn 75 miles to the north.

In West Germany, the lower house of Parliament has approved a constitutional change to make military service compulsory for every man over 18. The group also declared specifically that it is legal for West Germany to join the European Defense Community. The Upper House is expected to take similar action removing the final legal obstacles to Germany's participation in the EDC.

Italy's Premier Scelba today won a vote of confidence from the Italian senate by five votes. He faces the Chamber of deputies next week.

And Egypt's new military rulers say they removed President Naguib to prevent his assassination by angry army officers who feared he would become a dictator.

It is not unusual that a hairline decision should be the difference between peace and war. Senator McCarthy could have had peace with Army Secretary Stevens yesterday afternoon by agreeing to the simple statement that the rights of witnesses before his committee would be protected. This would have given him peace with honor and, what is more, peace without defeat, for it would have been no defeat to say he would do what decency requires of any committee chairman. And most of all, it would have been peace within the Republican party in an election year. Had the Senator been willing to accept the one sentence, Secretary Stevens would not have gone to the White House and President Eisenhower would not have endorsed 100 percent Mr. Stevens' assurance that he would never accede to the abuse of army personnel.

It is not unreasonable to suggest that if Senator McCarthy was unwilling to make this assertion he did not much want peace. Nor does it take much imagination to find reasons why. Senator McCarthy may think he stands to gain from continuing the war with the army, particularly now that President Eisenhower is involved. He may think he stands to gain even if he is fighting on the poor issue of his treatment of General Zwicker. He may gain in the end even if the Republican policy committee revises the rules for Senate investigations. The Senator stays on page one. The whole nation continues to talk about him. It is the formula he best understands.

But the eagerness of Senator McCarthy for the fight is one of the few clear things in this strange case. Senator McCarthy's conduct was not strange. As soon as he could draw breath, after hearing what Secretary Stevnes had said, he accused him of falsehood. What Mr. Stevens had said, was that he had been given private assurances at Wednesday's lunch that witnesses from now on would receive proper treatment. Incidentally Senator Potter, who was at the lunch, bears out Mr. Stevens. What is strange in the case is Mr. Stevens' own befuddlement. At Wednesday's lunch he accepted for publication a memorandum of agreement that failed to mention the treatment of witnesses, and consisted wholly of concessions to Senator McCarthy. But, because of something said privately at the lunch he reported to his Pentagon colleagues that he had won his point and that the concessions were worth it. It is described how he was congratulated and his hand warmly shaken. Not till Mr. Stevnes heard a report that Senator McCarthy had told a reporter that he could not have surrendered more abjectly if he had gotten onto his hands and knees, did it dawn on him that he had been misled by his own inexperience. He woke up to the fact that he was one of the few persons in Washington - and indeed the world - who didn't think he had surrendered. That meant that the army certainly would think he had. And from then on he worked tooth and nail to save the situation. More was involved than his reputation and his keeping his office. The morale of the army would be badly shaken. Some way had to be found to assure the army that it had not been abandoned to the abuse and pressure of Senator McCarthy. A last minute effort was made to arrive at a harmonious agreement. Senators Dirksen, Mundt and Potter were ready for peace and would have accepted the sentence about fair treatment for witnesses. Senator McCarthy flatly rejected it. So the effort failed, and the President at last came onto the stage to support the statement Secretary Stevnes was to make public.

Senator McCarthy is impetuous as well as far-seeing. And in leaping headlong into what now was a fight with the White House he snatched at the poorest case to fight on, his treatment of General Zwicker. Even the Chicago Tribune criticized him this morning for the way he treated General Zwicker, and if that is so it can bw no exaggeration to say that the whole nation must have been appalled by it. It was the Peress case that was Senator McCarthy's ace of trumps. Even if the dentist did nothing more sensitive than fill the teeth of army personnel, his promotion and honorable discharge caught the army off base. It had been the army's laxity in the Peress case that had made it hard to keep attention focused on what happened to General Zwicker. Now the Senator himself let it focus there. And it remains to be seen whether his impetuousness has let him in for a fall with his longterm ambitions. Judged by his past recoveries from such mistakes, the Senator often knows how to land on his feet and a little closer to his destination.

It needs no sermonizing by reporters, or anyone else, to remind ourselves that any army that comes under the sway of political or personal pressure is lost to the service of democracy. In Europe the McCarthy episode has brought cries of foreboding. For the United States Army is the indispensable shield of the remaining democracies there. Demagogues who distract attention from their personal ambiitions by the shrillness of their attack on communism have figured tragically in recent European history. Such analogies may seem far-fetched to most Americans. But here is a General with a distinguished record for valor and leadership, who is so shamefully treated that the morale of the United States Army is endangered, and the Senator responsible says only he was too lenient. The Zwicker case would have seemed far-fetched only a short time ago.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. But first, a word from Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: There is often a fine line between what we accept as right and what we recognize as wrong. It may be, as Oscar Wilde once said that "morality is simply the attitude we adopt towards people we personally dislike." Whatever the case, Clifton Allen surely was right when he said: "Nothing is more needed in this world than a revival of simple goodness and genuine uprightness."

Good Night and Good Luck!